

F: Fascicle 7: Conductus a2

FRAUDE CECA DESOLATO

Conductus (G4/133)

*F, f. 263r (7,1)

D
I
T [Frau - de - ca de - so - la - to Frau - de - ca de - so - la - to ce - ca de - so - la - to pri - mo no - stri ge - pri - mo no - stri ge - ne - ris. mor - tis vi - rus ne - ris. mor - tis vi - rus ex pa - la - to re - dun - da - vit po - ste - ris.
ex pa - la - to re - dun - da - vit po - ste - ris.
sed me - ro - re de - sic - ca - to cor - ru - pte - le
sed me - ro - re de - sic - ca - to cor - ru - pte - le

*The opening cauda has varying readings in all surviving sources, see the alternative transcriptions at the end.

ve - te - ris; hau - sit pe - nam
ve - te - ris; hau - sit pe - nam

cum pec - ca -
cum pec - ca -

- to iu - bar no - vi sy - de -
- to iu - bar no - vi sy - de -

| mode 1

- ris.
- ris.

D No - - stre
 T No - - stre

b sor - - ti co - e - qua - tur lux in te - sor - - ti co - e - qua - tur lux in te - various ways to construe this passage, and varying readings in each musical source – see the alternative at the end

b - sta con - di - - ta. dum lu-cer - na
 - sta con - di - - ta. dum lu-cer - na

b fe-cun - da-tur per quam pa-tet se-mi - ta.
 fe-cun - da-tur per quam pa-tet se-mi - ta.

| modes 3 or 6 also possible mode 3 also possible Mu-li - e - ri d d' Mu-li - e - ri

re-for - ma - re-for - ma - re-for - ma -

| mode 1 or 6 also possible for this phrase | mode 1 also possible, 3 preferable for consonance

- tur dra-gma di - u per - di - ta.

- tur dra-gma di - u per - di - ta.

in qua re - gis si - gil - la -

in qua re - gis si - gil - la -

- tur for - ma si si - ma.

- tur for - ma

|TD="hausit" earlier

c'

a

a ce - lo co - gni -

ce - lo co - gni -

e

ce - lo co - gni -

ce - lo co - gni -

e'

f

g

ce - lo co - gni -

ce - lo co - gni -

g'

f'

h

i

Two staves of musical notation in G major, 4/4 time. The first staff has a red box containing the letter 'i' above the first measure. The second staff has red boxes containing 'h' and 'h'' above the first and second measures respectively. Both staves end with the lyric '- ta.' in blue.

Two staves of musical notation. The first staff is labeled 'D' and the second 'T'. Both staves have the lyric 'Pin -' in blue. There are blue brackets above the notes and a red box containing 'h' above the second measure of the top staff.

†TD: F: ut stat: diff readings among sources, see at end

Two staves of musical notation. The top staff has red boxes containing 'b', 'k', and 'k'' above the second, fourth, and sixth measures. The bottom staff has red boxes containing 'h', 'j', and 'j'' above the second, fourth, and sixth measures.

Two staves of musical notation. Both staves have the lyric '- git ar -' in blue. There are blue brackets above the notes and dashed blue lines above the second and fourth measures of the top staff.

Two staves of musical notation. Both staves have the lyric '- cham te - sta-men - ti se-du -' in blue. There are red boxes containing 'a' and 'a'' above the fourth and fifth measures of the top and bottom staves respectively. There are also blue brackets and dashed blue lines above the notes.

Two staves of musical notation. Both staves have the full lyric '- lo pa - ra - cli-tus. et lar - gi - tor or - na - men-ti rem pa-rat in - ge - ni - tus.' in blue. There are red boxes containing 'h' above the eighth measure of both staves. There are blue brackets and dashed blue lines above the notes.

Ver - nat
Ver - nat

in - tus sa - cra - men - ti vir - ga flo - rens ce - li - tus.
in - tus sa - cra - men - ti vir - ga flo - rens ce - li - tus.

lux in ru - bo non mar - cen - ti fit ho - mo di - vi -
lux in ru - bo non mar - cen - ti fit ho - mo di - vi -

- ni -
- ni -

m l n

m p l n o n

First system of musical notation, featuring a treble and bass staff. A red box labeled 'p'' is above the treble staff, and a red box labeled 'n'' is above the bass staff. Blue brackets are placed above several notes in both staves.

Second system of musical notation, featuring a treble and bass staff. A red box labeled 'q' is above the bass staff. Blue brackets are placed above several notes in both staves.

Third system of musical notation, featuring a treble and bass staff. A red box labeled 'q'' is above the bass staff. Blue brackets are placed above several notes in both staves.

Fourth system of musical notation, featuring a treble and bass staff. Blue brackets are placed above several notes in both staves. The text '- tus.]' is written below the treble staff and '- tus.' below the bass staff.

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*opening cauda:

a. W1, f. 127v (118v), IV

Alternative reading 'a' musical notation, featuring a treble and bass staff. The text 'Frau -' is written below the treble staff and '- de' below the bass staff. Blue brackets are placed above several notes in both staves.

b. W2, f. 119r, II

Alternative reading 'b' musical notation, featuring a treble and bass staff. The text 'Frau -' is written below the treble staff and '- de' below the bass staff. Blue brackets are placed above several notes in both staves.

c. Ma, f. 25r, I

D

T

Frau - de

cauda on line 10,3 ("testa") -- even further alternatives are possible for rendering this segment:

a. W1, f. 128r (119r), IV

D

T

tes - ta

b. W2, f. 120r, III

D

T

tes - ta

c. Ma, f. 25v, IV (this reading seems the most straightforward of the four)

D

T

tes - ta

†cauda on line 17,1 ("Pingit" opening Strophe III), from partway through the fourth D phrase to the end – slight differences among the MSS:

a. W1, f. 128v (119v), V

D

T

(Pin) - git

b. W2, f. 121r, III

D

T

(Pin) - git

c. Ma, f. 26v, II

D

T

(Pin) - git

FRAUDE CECA DESOLATO

Conductus (G4/133)

F, f. 263r (7,1)

- | | |
|---|---|
| I Fraude ceca desolato primo nostri generis, mortis virus ex palato redundavit posteris.
 Sed merore desiccato corruptele veteris, hausit penam cum peccato
 iubar novi syderis. | Through a blind deception that left the first of our kind forsaken, a venom seeped from the palate of death into future generations.
 5 But in drying up the sorrow of the ancient corruption, the radiance of the new star
 drained the punishment along with the sin. |
| II Nostre sorti coequatur lux in testa condita, dum lucerna fecundatur, per quam patet semita. Mulieri reformatur
 dragma, diu perdita,
 in qua regis sigillatur
 forma celo cognita. | The light, created in an earthen shell, 10 is made equal to our lot, while the lamp that reveals the path conceives it. A coin, long since lost, is refashioned for a woman, 15 upon which the recognized shape of a king is stamped by heaven. |
| III Pingit archam testamenti sedulo Paraclitus, et largitor ornamenti rem parat ingenitus. Vernat intus sacramenti virga, florens celitus;
 lux in rubo non marcenti
 fit homo divinitus. | The Holy Spirit industriously decorates the Ark of the Covenant, and the unbegotten granter of the 20 embellishment makes the thing ready. The twig of the sacrament thrives from within, blossoming divinely;
 a fire in a bush that is not consumed
 24 becomes a man sent from heaven. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 1, f. 263r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete; the piece is headed by a large, historiated initial “F,” divided into two levels, with a naked Adam and Eve tasting the forbidden fruit within the upper segment, while the serpent appears entwined around a tree or plant between them and faces the figure of Eve at the left. The lower portion depicts the couple’s expulsion from Eden through a tall, rounded portal; Adam is passing through this gate, while Eve has already exited at right. There is a winged, haloed angel (one of the cherubim, according to Genesis, 3:24) at left, wielding a sword and with his hand on Adam’s shoulder, while Adam, in turn, touches Eve’s shoulder as she obscures her chest and crotch with her hands. Capitals head the subsequent stanzas and also begin lines 13 and 21 (prompting the spaces above).

WI, fasc. 9, no. 46, f. 127v (118v): a2; Strophes I-III, complete, each headed with painted initials; an additional one opens line 13, as in F, but not line 21.

Ma, fasc. 3, no. 1, f. 25r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete. In addition to the inclusion of the large decorated initial that starts this first piece in the fascicle (a feature frequently omitted in Ma), supplied capitals also begin lines 9 (opening Strophe II), 13 (as in F, WI), 16, 17 (with a relatively larger initial here starting Strophe III) and 21

(as in F).

W2, fasc. 6, no. 12, f. 119r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete; besides the capitals beginning the subsequent strophes, only line 21 has another majuscule, slightly larger than usual, in the remaining text, analogous to F and W1.

Oxf-Sol,¹ no. 6, (= OxAuct, no. 6), strips α: ext. b-int.b; 2: ext. b-int. b; 7: ext. b; 8: ext. b:² a2; fragmentary, various portions survive of certain lines from strophes I and II, for details see Everist, “A Reconstructed Source,” 99-100;³ Anderson – apparently mistakenly – has this item number in Ox-Sol as a source for the conductus Rex eterne glorie (H21/309), whereas Everist, DIAMM, and RISM do not include Rex eterne among the Oxford fragments. For further discussion, see the remarks on the sources for Rex eterne.

CH-BM II.C.2 (Beromünster, Stiftsbibliothek, II.C.2): no. 4, f. 66v: a1 (T?), staffless neumes; Strophe I, only, with a smaller decorated initial heading line 7; rubric: “Item alius” (i.e., another conductus, continuing from the previous piece’s rubric).⁴

Text only:

Stutt (D-Sl HB I Asc. 95; Stuttgart, Württembergische Landesbibliothek, HB I Asc. 95): no. 109, f. 73r (71r): laid out for music a1 with significant space allotted for melismas, but neumes never entered; text of Strophe I, only;⁵ part of a group of five pieces – Frigescente caritas (L22/-),⁶ O clericorum optime (Q59/-), Fraude ceca desolato (G4/133), Cogito plus solito (Q60/-), Valle tellus (L73/-) – that appear in the same order here as in Fulda C11.⁷

Fulda C11 (D-FUI Hs. C 11; Fulda, Hochschul- und Landesbibliothek, C11): f. 331v;⁸ this paper MS from the later fifteenth-century gives the text of Strophe I only, with a missing initial and with the penultimate syllable of the stanza written repeatedly and spaced horizontally so as to conclude its last word at the right margin of the leaf, as in Stutt, but with no other indication that music was planned for inclusion; part of a group of five pieces – Frigescente caritas (L22/-), O clericorum optime (Q59/-), Fraude ceca desolato (G4/133), Cogito plus solito (Q60/-), Valle tellus (L73/-) – that appear in the same order here as in Stutt.

¹This siglum as used here brings together the related fragments now preserved in Oxford, Bodleian Library, Auct. Q.3.17 (GB-Ob [pr. bk.] Auct. 6 Q.3.17; OxAuct) and CH-MSbk S.231 (Mariastein, Benediktinerkloster, S.231), the latter olim: Solothurn, Zentralbibliothek, S. 231 (Sol). The numbering and sequence of the items in this reconstituted source derives from the more complete combined listing in Everist, “A Reconstructed Source,” 107 (Table 2), cited below.

²These specific locations come from the CPI website; images of these particular items are not provided on DIAMM, and thus are presently unavailable to me.

³Mark E. Everist, “A Reconstructed Source for the Thirteenth-Century Conductus,” Gordon A Anderson (1929-1981): In memoriam von seinen Studenten, Freunden und Kollegen, 2 vols. Musicological Studies, no. 49 (Institute of Medieval Music: Henryville, Pennsylvania, 1984), 1: 97-108, at 99-100.

⁴Images from this source may be consulted at: <http://www.e-codices.unifr.ch/en/list/one/sbb/cant>.

⁵The CPI website incorrectly reports I-III.

⁶This is the Anderson catalog number as given in his personal annotated copy of his catalog. He changed the number from L23a (the reference given on the CPI site), due to his deletion of the earlier entry Carnalitas luxuria (olim L20), due to its reclassification as a motet voice, and shifted the following numbers accordingly.

⁷Images available here: <https://digital.wlb-stuttgart.de/suche/suchergebnis>; search “HB I 95.”

⁸Images from this source may be found at: <https://fuldig.hs-fulda.de/viewer/ppnresolver?id=PPN446275026>.

The opening line of Fraude ceca appears as line 2 of the conductus Hac in die rege nato (I30/150), the poem of which is constructed nearly completely from incipits of other conductus. It is transmitted in the following sources:

F, fasc. 7, no. 73, f. 332r: a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

WI, fasc. 9, no. 89, f. 174v (165v): a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1-4: this figure invokes the deception of Adam and Eve by the serpent, in Genesis, 3, that brought original sin upon mankind through the eating of the forbidden fruit from the tree of knowledge (see also Romans, 5:12-21; 1 Corinthians, 15:22, as well as the description of the historiated initial opening this piece in MS F. 7-8: the “radiance of the new star” is Christ, who is frequently represented as a beam or ray emanating from a star symbolizing the Virgin, or the sun symbolizing God; cf., e.g., the conductus Veri solis presentia (F6/370), lines 5-6. 9-12: of the images encountered in this passage, the lamp is interpreted as the Virgin Mary, the light within it as Christ made mortal, and the earthenware shell as Christ’s humanity. The clay or earthen pot (testa, vas, vasculum) is frequently symbolic of the body or flesh, formed from the clay of the ground (see Genesis, 2:7), as opposed to the soul. Similarly, the image of Christ in human form as an earthen pot created by God the potter is suggested by Isaiah, 45:9-12 and Romans, 9:20-21. For the frequent references to these images within the Parisian conductus repertory, see the notes on the text to the conductus Relegentur ab area – Clausus in testa (C6/304), lines 8-9; notice also the related image of Christ as a type of divine nutmeat within a human nutshell in the text of the conductus Gedeonis area (F15/143), lines 5-7. 11-12: for the imagery of the lamp lighting the path, see Psalm 118:105: “Lucerna pedibus meis verbum tuum, et lumen semitis meis.” (“Your word is a lamp to my feet, and a light to my paths”). 13-16: see Luke, 15:8-9, for the parable of the woman with ten coins who lights a lamp and sweeps her house until she finds the single coin of the ten she lost; the coin is interpreted variously as God incarnate in man and a symbol of salvation that overrides original sin. The text from Luke itself offers the interpretation that the woman’s rejoicing over her recovery is comparable to the joy of God’s angels when a single sinner repents. Similar language in connection with this image appears in the conductus Rex eterne glorie (H21), lines 6-9. 17-20: The refurbished Ark of the (old) Covenant (see Exodus, 25:10-22) is here treated as an allegory of the virgin Mary, often herself described as the Ark of the New Covenant;⁹ both the Holy Spirit and God the Father (the “unbegotten granter”) ready Mary here as the vessel for bearing the Son. 21-22: the shoot or branch (“virga”) is Mary; the flowering of the shoot is a reference to Christ; for both images, see Isaiah, 11:1, and also the verse text of the responsory Stirps Iesse. Virgo dei (O16). 23-24: the burning bush that was not consumed, seen by Moses in Exodus, 3:1-4:17, is another common symbol of the Virgin Mary, symbolizing the retention of her chastity while conceiving and bearing Jesus (the fire within the bush).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: F: no variants. MUSIC: A relatively large number of motives and some entire phrases in both the sine littera and cum littera segments of this piece are recalled throughout the piece; notable examples of such repetition are signaled by boxed letters above the staves. Syllabic/melismatic identity: 1. T of “celo cogni[ta]” (l. 16, closes Strophe II) = 1a. T of second phrase in the following cauda on ⁹ (On Mary as the ark, see the De laudibus of Richard of St. Laurent, book 10, chapter 1, especially p. 132 of the cited edition: Richard of St. Laurent, De laudibus Beatae Mariae Virginis, misattributed to Albertus Magnus and published in B[eat]i Alberti Magni, Ratisboniensis episcopi, ordinis Praedicatorum, opera omnia... . Auguste and Emile Borgnet, ed. (Paris: Louis Vivès, 1898), vol. 36.

"[cog]ni[ta]. Here the cum littera portion that prefaces the cauda initiates a long segment that repeats in the following phrase, this time with its opening gesture sine littera. Opening cauda: Varying ligations and different implied rhythms appear in all extant musical sources; see the alternatives supplied at the end of the transcription. Line 2,1: T:F: the figures over this word are 3 lower (=dcb), rectified from W1, W2, Ma. Line 3,2: the dissonances over the first syllable of “vi[rus]” appear in all extant musical sources; they might invite possible consideration as word painting. Line 10,3: the short cauda on “testa” presents various ways to construe this passage, with varying readings in all musical sources; see the alternatives that appear at the end. Cauda on line 17,1 (opening Strophe III): the central to closing portions of this melisma differ slightly among the sources; see the alternatives given at the end. Closing cauda (over line 24,3): this heavily repetitive melisma contains quite a number of dissonances that are confirmed by all other applicable sources.

HEC EST DIES TRIUMPHALIS
Conductus (H12/152)

F, f. 264v (7,2)

D
I
T

[Hec] est di - es tri - um-pha -
Hec est di - es tri - um-pha -

- lis mun - do gra - ta per - di - to.
- lis mun - do gra - ta per - di - to.

dans so - la - men no - stris ma - lis ho - ste iu - go sub - di - to. hec [hec]
dans so - la - men no - stris ma - lis ho - ste iu - go sub - di - to. hec [hec]

est de - o spe - ci - a - lis tan - to ni - tens me - ri - to. quod pec - ca - ti fit
est de - o spe - ci - a - lis tan - to ni - tens me - ri - to. quod pec - ca - ti fit

fi - na - lis ma - li ma - lo ir - ri - fi - na - lis ma - li ma - lo ir - ri -

- to.
- to.

II
D
T
a
Du - - ce frau - dis de - mo-li - to; ter - ris pax
Du - - ce frau - dis de - mo-li - to; ter - ris pax

in-di - ci - tur; et ex-hau-sto a-co - ni-to sa - lus e-gris red - di-tur.
in-di - ci - tur; et ex-hau-sto a-co - ni-to sa - lus e-gris red - di-tur.

mo - rte mor-tis mor - su tri-to; vi - te spes in-fun - di-tur.
mo - rte mor-tis mor - su tri-to; vi - te spes in-fun - di-tur.

clau - - stro pe - stis in - a - ni - - to; ne - phas
clau - - stro pe - stis in - a - ni - - to; ne - phas

o - mne pel - li -
o - mne pel - li -

- tur.
- tur.

III

D
Cum nos chri-

T Cum nos chri-

c'
-stus fe - -cun-da - re tan - to vel - let fe - de - re.

-stus fe - -cun-da - re tan - to vel - let fe - de - re.

c'
et se mor-ti gra - tis da - re pro re - o-rum sce -

et se mor-ti gra - tis da - re pro re - o-rum sce -

e
-ge - re. pa - scha

d
-ge - re. pa - scha

-le - -re. lu-re de-cet hunc lau-da - re et e - i con-sur -

-le - -re. lu-re de-cet hunc lau-da - re et e - i con-sur -

or: . .
-ge - re. pa - scha

or: . .
-ge - re. pa - scha

no - vum ce - le - bra -

no - vum ce - le - bra -

- re cor - de

- re cor - de

vo - ce o - pe -

vo - ce o - pe -

vo - ce o - pe -

vo - ce o - pe -

| voice exchange for 4 phrases

- re.]

- re.

HEC EST DIES TRIUMPHALIS

Conductus (H12/152)

F, f. 264v (7,2)

- | | |
|--|---|
| I Hec est dies triumphalis, mundo grata perditō, dans solamen nostris malis;
 hoste iugo subdito.
 Hec est deo specialis,
 tanto nitens merito,
 quod peccati fit finalis
 mali malo irritō. | This is a triumphal day, welcome to a lost world,
 granting consolation for our faults, now that the enemy has been subjected to the yoke. 5 It is special to God, shining with great value,
 because an end is made of sin,
 nullifying the evil of the apple. |
| II Duce fraudis demolito, terris pax indicitur;
 et, exhausto aconito,
 salus egris redditur.
 Morte mortis morsu trito, vite spes infunditur.
 Claustro pestis inanito,
 nephas omne pellitur. | By casting down the duke of fraud,
 10 peace is proclaimed across the lands;
 and, with the deadly poison sucked out,
 health is restored to the sick.
 Since death is now curtailed by its own sting, hope is poured over life. 15 With the citadel of pestilence purged, every wrong is banished. |
| III Cum nos Christus fecundare tanto vellet federe, et se morti gratis dare pro reorum scelere, iure decet hunc laudare et ei consurgere, pascha novum celebrare

 corde, voce, opere. | Since Christ wished to make us fruitful through so great a covenant, and to give himself freely to death 20 for the crimes of sinners, by rights it is fitting to praise this man and to rise together for him, to celebrate a new Passover

 24 in heart, in voice, and in action. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 2, f. 264v: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with II-III headed by capitals and Strophe III divided at line 21 by an additional capital (shown by extra space in the text above). This piece and the following one in F are in reverse order in WI.

WI, fasc. 9, no. 50, f. 133r (124r): a2; Strophes I-III, complete; II is signaled by a painted initial, but one beginning III was never executed, although its small guide letter remains. This and the previous piece in WI are in reverse order in F.

Ma, fasc. 3, no. 8, f. 40r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete; initials for each strophe and one for line 21 (dividing the stanza as in F) are all omitted from the spaces provided for them; the final few notes of the closing cauda intrude into the right margin of the last system of the piece.

Text only:

The opening verse of Hec est dies triumphalis is almost certainly recollected (as “hec est dies luminis”) in line 9 of the conductus Hac in die rege nato (I30/150), the poem of which is constructed nearly completely from the incipits of other conductus. It is transmitted in the following sources:

F, fasc. 7, no. 73, f. 332r: a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 89, f. 174v (165v): a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1: the special day is Easter Sunday, as implied by line 23,1. 4: the enemy (death and/or the devil – see lines 9 and 13), is now subjected to the burden of a yoke, as mankind had been earlier. There may conceivably be an invocation here of Galatians, 5:1, or some similar sentiment: “State, et nolite iterum iugo servitutis contineri” (“Stand fast, and be not again confined under the yoke of bondage.”). 8: the downfall of humankind and the inculcation of original sin, as related in Genesis, 3; a pun on the Latin homonyms for “evil” and “apple” (“malum”) appears here; see, e.g., the conductus Verbum pater exhibuit (E5/368), Strophe IV. 9: the devil, commonly known as “the father of lies,” from John, 8:44.¹ 11-12: the image of the eradication of the poison of original sin recalls lines 5-6 of the previous conductus in F-7, Fraude ceca desolato (G4/133). 13: on Death’s sting (sin), and for the frequent conceit of death being overcome by death (i.e., by Jesus’s sacrifice and resurrection), see Hebrews, 2:14-15; Romans, 6:9; 1 Corinthians, 15:26-27, 54-55; and Payne, Motets and Prosulas, p. 27 (note to lines 136-137). 15-16: with Jesus’s resurrection, he has taken on the sins of the world (see line 19-20) and negated the effects of original sin (see line 8), thus restoring mankind to its initial state before the Fall. 23: “pascha” can mean “Easter” as well; in this case, describing Jesus’s resurrection as “new” suggests the connotation of line 23,1 here as Passover. 24: for some similar injunctions, see the refrain (e.g., line 20: “ore, corde, opere”) of the conductus Novus annus hodie (F5/227); and the motet Serena virginum/Manere (A1/232 – vdW 69/M5), line 52 (“vocis, manus, cordis”).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: F: no variants. 16,2: F: syllable placement confirmed by W1, Ma. MUSIC: Line 1,4: TD: F: the harmonic sixths beginning the phrase are attested by all MSS. Cauda on line 8,3 (closing Strophe I): D: F: second phrase (beginning cbag) 2 lower (bagf), corrected from W1, Ma. Cauda on 22,3: TD: F: the figures over the penultimate syllable of this word may show a slight elongation that could suggest rhythmic extension; the T of W1 also implies extension here with LB=aa together with the si=f preceding the cadential g’s of the cauda.

¹John, 8:44: “Vos ex patre diabolo estis: et desideria patris vestri vultis facere. Ille homicida erat ab initio, et in veritate non stetit: quia non est veritas in eo: cum loquitur mendacium, ex propriis loquitur, quia mendax est, et pater ejus” (“You are of your father the devil, and the desires of your father you will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and he stood not in the truth; because truth is not in him. When he speaks a lie, he speaks of his own: for he is a liar, and the father thereof.”).

DEUS CREATOR OMNIUM
Conductus (H11 / 89)

*F, f. 266r (7,3)

The musical score is presented in three systems, each with two vocal staves (D and T) and a basso continuo line. The lyrics are as follows:

System 1:
 D: [De -
 T: De -
 [De] - us cre - a - tor om - ni - um fe - - cit que - cum -

System 2:
 D: - que vo - lu - it. et T: - que vo - lu - it. et
 - que vo - lu - it. et

System 3:
 D: mi - li - a le - tan - ti - um se lau - da - re dis - po - su - it
 T: mi - li - a le - tan - ti - um se lau - da - re dis - po - su - it con -
 con -

System 4:
 D: [con] - sti - tu - ens cur -
 T: [con] - sti - tu - ens cur -

*The twelve pitches of the “x” motive begin the T in the caudae opening each strophe, set to different rhythms; see also the use of notes 6-12 of the “x” motive at “[le]tantium se lau[dare],” lines 3,3-4,2, also marked in the score.

- rum si - bi mul - ti - pli - - cem. et per cer - tos

- rum si - bi mul - ti - pli - - cem. et per cer - tos

di - stri - bu - ens gra - - dus

di - stri - bu - ens gra - - dus

na - - tu - ram sim - pli -

na - - tu - ram sim - pli -

b a

b' a'

- cem.

- cem.

D Io - [Io] - cun - di - or ut fi - e - ret

II x

T Io - [Io] - cun - di - or ut fi - e - ret

ex di-ver-sis con-cor-di-a fa-ctus
ex di-ver-sis con-cor-di-a fa-ctus

ho-mo ni ru-e-ret ad hec fu-it of-fi-ci-a.
ho-mo ni ru-e-ret ad hec fu-it of-fi-ci-a.

quem per-di-
quem per-di-

-tum que-rens hu-ma-ni cor-po-ris cri-
-tum que-rens hu-ma-ni cor-po-ris cri-

-stus as-ump-sit ha-bi-
-stus as-ump-sit ha-bi-

-tum li-cet in fi-ne tem-po-
-tum li-cet in fi-ne tem-po-

First system of musical notation, featuring two staves with bass clefs and a key signature of one flat. The music consists of eighth and sixteenth notes with various phrasing slurs and accents.

Second system of musical notation, continuing the two-staff bass clef arrangement with similar rhythmic patterns and phrasing.

Third system of musical notation, ending with the syllable "- ris." on both staves.

Fourth system of musical notation, labeled "III" on the left. It features two staves with bass clefs and includes red boxes containing "c" and "x" above the notes.

Fifth system of musical notation, including the lyrics "[Cor] - pus se-cun-tur a - qui - le pul - li lan - ben - tes".

Sixth system of musical notation, including the lyrics "san - gui-nem." and "san - gui-nem.".

tri - um - phat ag - men fra - gi - le. cur - rens

tri - um - phat ag - men fra - gi - le. cur - rens

post ma - trem vir - gi - nem.

post ma - trem vir - gi - nem.

nos i - gi - tur re - gnan - ti si - ne ter - mi - no cu - i nos i - gi - tur re - gnan - ti si - ne ter - mi - no cu - i

o - mne ge - nu fle -

o - mne ge - nu fle -

[T = BD I ("flos filius eius" [O16])

-cti - tur; Be - ne - di - ca - mus do -

-cti - tur; Be - ne - di - ca - mus do -

II

Optional; not in F or Ma
WI, f. 132r (123r)

The image shows a musical score for two staves. The top staff is in bass clef and contains a melodic line with several phrases. The bottom staff is also in bass clef and contains a similar melodic line. The lyrics "- mi" and "no." are written below the notes in the first part of the score. A blue dashed line with arrows above it indicates an optional melodic continuation in the top staff, starting from the end of the first part and extending to the end of the second part. A red bracket is visible below the first note of the second part of the top staff.

DEUS CREATOR OMNIUM

Conductus (H11/89)

F, f. 266r (7,3)

- | | |
|--|--|
| I Deus, creator omnium, fecit quecumque voluit, et milia letantium
se laudare disposuit, constituens
currum sibi multiplicem, et per certos distribuens
gradus naturam simplicem. | God, the creator of everything, did whatever he wished,
and arrayed a cheering throng of thousands to praise him, 5 setting up for himself a chariot of many parts, and by determined steps
dividing up his singular nature. |
| II Iocundior ut fieret ex diversis concordia, factus homo, ni rueret,
ad hec fuit officia.
Quem perditum
querens, humani corporis Christus assumpsit habitum, licet in fine temporis. | 10 As an agreement may be rendered more pleasing when it arises out of disparity, and in order that it not collapse,
there was a man created for these duties.
Seeking the lost,
Christ took on the mantle 15 of a human body, though at the end of time. |
| III Corpus secuntur aquile pulli, lanbentes sanguinem;
triumphat agmen fragile,
currens post matrem virginem.
Nos igitur
regnanti sine termino,
cui omne genu flectitur: | 20 The eagle's chicks follow this body, lapping up its blood;
this frail battalion exults, hastening after the virgin mother.
Therefore to the ruler without end to whom every knee is bent: |

BD *Benedicamus domino.Let us bless the Lord!SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 3, f. 266r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with the closing BD segment indicated by a capital similar to the initials that begin Strophes II-III; this and the previous piece in F are in reverse order in WI.

WI: fasc. 9, no. 48, f.131v (122v): a2: Strophes I-III, complete, with BD; no painted initial for Strophe II, though a small guide letter remains, while Strophe III is so accommodated; the closing BD is signaled via an upper-case initial; this and the following piece in WI are in reverse order in F.

Ma: fasc. 3, no. 4, f. 32v: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with BD; initials included for each stanza, with those for I and II additionally decorated; no special indications for the BD conclusion.

Text only:

The opening verse of Deus creator omnium appears as line 19 in the conductus Hac in die rege nato (I30/150), the poem of which is constructed nearly completely from incipits of other conductus. It is transmitted in the following sources:

F, fasc. 7, no. 73, f. 332r: a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 89, f. 174v (165v): a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

Music only:

The T of the Benedicamus domino portion that concludes this conductus is the widespread BD I melody, derived from the melisma “flos filius eius” that occurs within the verse of the Marian responsory Styrps Yesse. Virgo dei genetrix (O16), found in a variety of Parisian organum, conductus, and motet settings, as well as a chant; see the discussion of the BD conclusion below under the observations and variants section.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: This is a difficult poem to construe, and certain details of its references and intent remain opaque. In the earlier portions of the poem especially, the translation and reportage by Anderson (NDRC, 3:xx) is significantly different in many regards from the undertaking presented here. 3-6: cf. Psalm 67:18: “Currus dei decem millibus multiplex, millia laetantium; Dominus in eis in Sina, in sancto” (“The chariot of God is attended by tens of thousands, thousands of them rejoicing: the Lord is among them in Sinai, in the holy place.”). The Glossa ordinaria, as given in PL, 113, col. 943A, indicates that the cheering throngs of Psalm 67 signify the great multitude of the saints, and such an interpretation may apply here as well, since the end of this poem turns to the image of eagle chicks, an allegory that has also been connected with the saints (see the remarks for lines 17-18, 19). For a possible further reference to the passage in Psalm 67, see the conductus Sursum corda elevate (G9/343), lines 16-18. 7-8: besides the power that God has to create variety out of singularity, this passage may also refer to him as both a multiplex entity and as one with a single nature, as in the doctrine of the Trinity. This possibility appears likely given the content of the following stanza (lines 9-16). 9-16: since concord is all the more satisfying when it arises out of diversity, God chose to send his son to heal humankind, rather than accomplish it himself. Also, Christ’s incarnation was deemed necessary so that the covenant between God and mankind should not falter. Anderson’s interpretation (NDRC, 3:xx) that lines 9-12 refer to Adam being created and put in charge of all of God’s recent creation (see Genesis, 1: 27-31) seems less likely to me, given the quick turn in the following verses to Christ’s incarnation; however, Christ and Adam are frequently disposed as allegorical types of each other; see, e.g., the textual notes on the conductus Salvatoris hodie – Novus Adam (C5/315), lines 14-17. 16: possibly meaning that, although Christ was coexistent with God from the beginning, he was not incarnate as man until a later time; cf., e.g., the heretical controversies of Arianism, which claimed that God begat Christ separately from himself, and therefore was not consubstantial with the Father, nor eternally coexistent with him; and that of Adoptionism, which held that Jesus was not the true or direct son of God at his birth, but became his son at some point later in his life, such as at his baptism, resurrection, or ascension (hence Jesus was, so to speak, “adopted” by God, not born from him). Against such heterodox claims, see, for example, the text of the hymn Christe (or Iesu) redemptor omnium, Strophe I: “Christe redemptor omnium / ex patre patris unice / solus ante principium / natus ineffabiliter” (“Christ, redeemer of all, / from the father and uniquely of the father, / only-begotten, ineffably, / before the beginning.”). For additional information on this point, see the remarks on the text of the conductus Sine matre genitus (I27/330), lines 1-2 and the citations of the other conductus given there. 17-18: see Job, 39:30, in reference to a mother eagle and her young: “pulli eius lambent sanguinem et ubicumque cadaver fuerit statim adest” (“her young ones shall suck up blood; and wherever a cadaver shall be, there immediately is she”). A typical interpretation of this passage is that the chicks here are the saints, and the eagle is Christ, rather than its usual allusion to the evangelist John. See, for this, the references given by Anderson (NDRC, 3:xx) to the so-called Veterum varius commentarius, published in Jean-Baptiste Pitra, ed., Spicilegium solesmense, 2 vols. (Paris, F. Didot, 1852-1858). Most apropos here are the remarks in vol. 2 (1855): 479-480. Note especially: “Aquila, Christus: ‘Sicut aquila provocans ad volandum’: ‘Sicut aquila protegit nidum suus, suscepit eos ... ’” (“The eagle is Christ: ‘As the eagle enticing [her young] to fly’: ‘As the eagle protects its brood, it has taken them up ...’” [for both quoted passages, see Deuteronomy, 32:11)].¹ Also: “Pulli aquilae, sancti: ‘Pulli aquilae lingent,’ id est sacramentum passionis Domini” (“The eagle’s chicks are the saints: ‘The eagle’s chicks shall lick [the blood ... cf. Job, 39:30, given previously at lines 17-18],’ that is, the sacrament of the Lord’s passion.”) – both the citations supplied here come from Pitra, ed., Spicilegium solesmense, 2:480. An alternative interpretation (not likely at play here) from the same reference, p. 479, sees the eagle’s chicks as demons, based on Proverbs, 30:17: “Oculum qui subsannat patrem, et qui despicit partum matris suae, effodiant eum corvi de torrentibus, et comedant eum filii aquilae” (“The eye that mocks his father, and that despises the labor of his mother in bearing him, let the ravens from the brooks pick it out, and the young eagles eat it.”). 19: the saints or the faithful who follow after the Virgin Mary; these are likely described as frail here because they have just been compared earlier (lines 17-18) to eagle’s chicks. 23: see Isaiah, 45:23-24: “... quia mihi curvabitur omne genu, et jurabit omnis lingua” (“For every knee shall be bowed to me, and every tongue shall swear”); as well as the mirrored expressions in Romans, 14:11 and Philippians, 2:10.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. 1,3; 15,2: F: the syllable division follows the MS. MUSIC: Syllabic/Melismatic identity: The T of the caudae that open each of the three strophes: on “Deus,” “Iocundior” and “Corpus,” respectively, each begin with the same 12 pitches (d,c,d,f,e,f,d,c,d,a,c,d) set to different rhythms. Moreover, the final 7 pitches (Pf,d,c,d,a,c,d) = the T of “[le]tantium se lau[dare]” (in lines 3,3-4,2); this is possibly coincidental, as it occurs over the span of two separate lines; nevertheless, the process fits with the “veiled” nature of the repeated material in each of the other caudae. Bukofzer (“Interrelations,” 101)² says that the rhythmic variation in the caudae of this piece echoes procedures seen in the conductus Rex eterne glorie (H21/309), the version of A deserto veniens in both W1 and CaJ (J31/1), and Veri vitis germine (H14/372), where recurring melodic passages in caudae appear with different rhythmic profiles; see the remarks on these other pieces for additional information. Opening cauda: TD: F: the dissonance at the start of the second phrase at L4 of the cauda is in all MSS; the graphical extension of the penultimate notes at L9-10 is slightly less apparent in F, but they are confirmed as DLs in both voices in W1 and Ma. Line 2,1-2: T: W1: b-flat sig precedes line 2,1; D: W1: same sig precedes the third syllable of “quecumque”; these are in force for both parts until just before line 3,2. Cauda over line 3,1: T: Ma: a b-flat sig occurs prior to the c before the first b in the cauda (at L15), valid up to its disappearance before line 4,1. Cauda over 6,1: D: F: the second c (at L4) in the first phrase looks like b; c confirmed by W1, Ma. Cauda over 8,1: TD: F: the dissonance starting the fourth phrase in the D (at L6) is in all MSS. Line 11,4: D: F: the rhythm of this short melisma is clarified by the use of 3li,2li in both W1, Ma; T: W1: the notes over the last two syllables of this word are d,e, changing the cadence tone. 13,2: D: F: 3 lower over the first syllable. 15,2: T: W1: the b-flat sig precedes the first syllable; D: Ma: b-flat sig precedes second syllable; T: F, Ma: b-flat sig at L5 of cauda in both sources. 16,2: TD: Ma: DL here and b-flat sigs cease; D: W1: strokes surround the f pitch for this syllable. 16,3: TD: Ma and D: W1: stroke follows notes on the last syllable. Cauda on 16,4 (closing Strophe II): TD: Ma: b-flat sigs at start of first phrase; D: W1: b-flat sig, same place; D: F: 3 lower beginning the second phrase in this voice (at L8), up through the second c in the next phrase (in L13). Cauda on 17,1 (opening Strophe III): TD: F: new system, no sigs start this off; Ma: new c1 clefs, no sigs; T: W1: a b-flat sig opens; T: Ma: DL starting the fifth phrase (at L9), verifies the rhythmic value used in the score. Line 18,2: D: W1: b-flat sig precedes the 2li over this word’s third syllable. 19,2: D: F: g,gf over second syllable 3 lower; verified by W1, Ma; 19,3: TD: Ma: b-flat sigs precede. 20,1: TD: Ma: flat sigs disappear. BD conclusion: This conductus finishes with a Benedicamus domino ending that is intrinsic to the structure of the poem and which also, unusually for a conductus, incorporates the actual melody from the BD I Office versicle, thus presenting a clausula at the end of the conductus (see Bukofzer, “Interrelations,” 76-77). This chant is sung at a variety of liturgical occasions and is ultimately derived from the melisma on “flos filius eius” in the responsory Stirps Yesse. Virgo dei genetrix (O16) for the Assumption of the Virgin (August 15), also used for her Nativity (September 8). All the sources contain the clausula conclusion, which does not survive outside of this piece; W1, moreover, appends a punctus organi formula missing in F and Ma; this is supplied for optional inclusion at the end of the transcription.

¹The complete biblical citation runs: “Sicut aquila provocans ad volandum pullos suos, et super eos volitans, expandit alas suas, et assumpsit eum, atque portavit in humeris suis” (“As an eagle enticing her young to fly, and hovering over them, he spread his wings, and has taken him and carried him on his shoulders.”). The slightly differently worded second passage probably stems from the pre-Vulgate [Vetus Latina] or Septuagint-based version of the text; it is quoted, for instance, by Jerome in his Commentariorum in Isaiam prophetam, book 18, chap. 66, in the text given in PL, 24, col. 662A, as well as by other authorities, such as Ambrose of Milan.

²Manfred F. Bukofzer, “Interrelations Between Conductus and Clausula,” Annales musicologiques, 1 (1953): 65-103.

PUER NOBIS EST NATUS
Conductus (H25/276)

F, f. 266v (7,4)

Soprano (S) and Tenor (T) parts. Lyrics: Pu-

Soprano (S) and Tenor (T) parts. Lyrics: Pu-

Soprano (S) and Tenor (T) parts. Lyrics: [Pu] - er no - bis est na - tus dum de - us hu - ma - na - tus.

Soprano (S) and Tenor (T) parts. Lyrics: non car-nis sed re - a - tus ho - nus est de - di - gna - tus.

Soprano (S) and Tenor (T) parts. Lyrics: qui ge - ni - tus di - vi - ni - tus et pa - tri.

Soprano (S) and Tenor (T) parts. Lyrics: co - e - qua - lis dum na - sci - tur ex - ce - di - tur lex.

par - tus na - tu - ra - lis. nam in - car - na - ri sus - ti - nens

par - tus na - tu - ra - lis. nam in - car - na - ri sus - ti - nens

de vir - gi - ne pro - ce - dit.

de vir - gi - ne pro - ce - dit.

et de - i - ta - tem re - ti - nens

et de - i - ta - tem re - ti - nens

a pa - tre non re - ce -

a pa - tre non re - ce - mode 2; *W1 has a different reading in mode 1; see at end

mode 1

- dit.

- dit.

II

D Quos

T Quos

[Quos] a - dam de - for - ma - vit; nos chri - stus

[Quos] a - dam de - for - ma - vit; nos chri - stus

re - for - ma - - vit. qui ce - - los

re - for - ma - - vit. qui ce - - los

in - cli - na - - vit. et

in - cli - na - - vit. et

te - ne - bras cal - ca - vit. nam pri - sti - ne

te - ne - bras cal - ca - vit. nam pri - sti - ne

ca - li - gi - ne de -

ca - li - gi - ne de -

- mer - sos ve - tu - sta - tis; nos ex - tu - lit.

- mer - sos ve - tu - sta - tis; nos ex - tu - lit.

et re - tu - lit ad lu - cem ve - ri - ta -

et re - tu - lit ad lu - cem ve - ri - ta -

- tis. na - scens mun -

- tis. na - scens mun -

W1, Ma, Heid: different ligations in mid-cauda; see at end*

- do con - su - lu - it. et

- do con - su - lu - it. et ple - bi

ple - bi pe - ri - tu -

pe - ri - tu -

- re. et hu - ma - nam pre - po - su - it

- re. et hu - ma - nam pre - po - su - it

an - ge - li - ce

an - ge - li - ce

[H]

 multiple ways to realize this passage; see at end

[H]

na - tu - re.

na - tu - re.

III

D Qui

T Qui

[Qui] ce - lo de - le - ga -

[Qui] ce - lo de - le - ga -

- tur;

- tur;

in ter - ris con - ver - sa - tur.

in ter - ris con - ver - sa - tur.

cu - i ce - lum fa - mu - la - tur; pre - se - pi re - cli - na - tur.

cu - i ce - lum fa - mu - la - tur; pre - se - pi re - cli - na - tur.

hunc sy - de - ris pre ce - te - ris lux mi - cans pre - si - gna - vit.

hunc sy - de - ris pre ce - te - ris lux mi - cans pre - si - gna - vit.

hic can - ti - cis an - ge - li - cis pa - sto - res ex - ci - ta - vit.

hic can - ti - cis an - ge - li - cis pa - sto - res ex - ci - ta - vit.

i - psi laus in ce - le - sti - bus et glo - ri - a can - ta - tur.

i - psi laus in ce - le - sti - bus et glo - ri - a can - ta - tur.

in ter - ra pax ho - mi - ni - bus de ce - lo nun - ti -

in ter - ra pax ho - mi - ni - bus de ce - lo nun - ti -

|TD: sequential canon at the interval of a second for 8 longs

- a -

- a -

- tur.]

- tur.

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*Cauda at line 12,4 (“[re]ce[dit]”):
W1, f. 152v (143v), V1 – TD: reading in mode 1 of the hocket section (L9-L16)

re[dit]

re[dit]

*Cauda on line 22,1 (“et [plebi periture]”)

a. WI, f. 153r (144r), VI – TD: varied ending of opening phrases; different ligation in D of fast-note passage

Two staves of music, D and T. The D staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The T staff has a tenor clef and a 6/8 time signature. Both staves show a sequence of notes with various ligatures and accidentals. Annotations include a bracketed 'h' in red, a flat 'b' in blue, and 'R si' in red. Blue brackets group notes in the D staff. The word 'et' is written in blue below the T staff.

b. Ma, f. 29r, IV – different ligation in D of fast-note passage

Two staves of music, D and T. The D staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The T staff has a tenor clef and a 6/8 time signature. Both staves show a sequence of notes with various ligatures. Annotations include a bracketed 'h' in red and blue brackets in the D staff. The word 'et' is written in blue below the T staff.

c. Heid, f. 1v, I – similar interpretation as Ma, with possible differentiation of L and B values here; all rest strokes approximately 2 staff spaces high

Two staves of music, D and T. The D staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The T staff has a tenor clef and a 6/8 time signature. Both staves show a sequence of notes with various ligatures and accidentals. Annotations include 'B?' in red, 'L' in red, a bracketed 'h' in red, and blue brackets in the D staff. The word 'et' is written in blue below the T staff.

Cauda on line 24,1 (“[angeli]ce” – closes Strophe II), interior hocket segment

a. F, f. 268v, VI (mid-system), in mode 1 (same as above) b. F, as before, in modes 2 and 3

c. F, as before, prompted by the lack of the first stroke in WI and Heid, in mode 1
 ('not in WI or Heid) Heid: B L
Ma: ||

Two staves of music, D and T. The D staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The T staff has a tenor clef and a 6/8 time signature. Both staves show a sequence of notes with various ligatures and accidentals. Annotations include 'B' in red, 'L' in red, and bracketed 'ce' in blue. The word 'angeli' is written in blue below the T staff.

PUER NOBIS EST NATUS

Conductus (H25/276)

F, f. 267v (7,4)

- | | |
|--|---|
| I Puer nobis est natus. Dum deus humanatus, non carnis sed reatus
 honus est dedignatus.
 Qui, genitus divinitus et patri coequalis, dum nascitur, exceditur
 lex partus naturalis;
 nam, incarnari sustinens,
 de virgine procedit,
 et deitatem retinens
 a patre non recedit. | Unto us a child is born.
 When God became man,
 he did so to condemn the burden of sin,
 not the encumbrance of the flesh.
 5 When one is born who is sired from heaven and co-equal to the Father, the law of natural childbirth is overstepped;
 for, enduring incarnation, 10 he comes forth from a virgin,
 and, retaining godliness,
 recedes not from the Father. |
| II Quos Adam deformavit
 nos, Christus reformavit.
 Qui celos inclinavit.
 et tenebras calcavit;
 nam, pristinae caligine demersos vetustatis, nos extulit, et retulit ad lucem veritatis.
 Nascens, mundo consuluit.
 et plebi periture,
 et humanam preposuit
 angelice nature. | We whom Adam deformed, Christ reformed.
 15 He bent down the heavens and trampled the shadows;
 for he extricated us, mired in the darkness of former ancient times, and brought us back 20 to the light of truth.
 Being born, he provided for the world and the multitude slated to die, and put in charge a person of angelic nature. |
| III Qui celo delegatur
 in terris conversatur.
 Cui celum famulatur;
 presepi reclinator.
 Hunc syderis pre ceteris lux micans presignavit.
 Hic canticis angelicis pastores excitavit.
 Ipsi laus in celestibus et gloria cantatur.
 In terra pax hominibus
 de celo nuntiatur. | 25 He who is dispatched from heaven is turned upon the earth.
 He whom heaven serves is laid in a manger.
 A glittering star of heaven
 30 marked him before all others.
 He roused the shepherds with the songs of angels.
 To him praise and glory
 is sung in the heavens.
 35 Peace on earth to mankind is announced from heaven. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 4, f. 267v: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with capitals heading II-III.¹

¹In the facsimile edition of F – Luther A. Dittmer, ed., Facsimile Reproduction of the Manuscript Firenze, Biblioteca mediceo-laurenziana, Pluteo 29, Publications of Mediaeval Musical Manuscripts, nos. 10-11 (Brooklyn: Institute of Mediaeval Music, 1966-67) – the leaves for this piece are not presented in their proper sequence and are wrongly numbered (266v and 267v are

WI, fasc. 9, no. 69, f. 152r (143r): a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with painted initials for each stanza. At the bottom of f. 153v (144v) is a drawing of a standing humanoid figure, rotated horizontally at 90 degrees to fit within the width of the bottom margin under the writing block. The figure appears to be wearing a loincloth, or briefs, and shoes; it also bears two rather grotesque snarling animal heads atop its shoulders. From its left hand a thick, curving rope leads to what appears to be a bell, with its headstock and clapper visible, placed over the figure's heads.

Ma, fasc. 3, no. 2, f. 27v: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with a decorated opening initial and a capital for II, but without even a guide letter provided for III. On f. 30r, the music and text for line 34,3 (“gloria”) was apparently skipped over initially and is now entered at the right margin in the space under the writing block, in the same hand and ink as the rest of the piece. The music in the final system ends well before the last text syllable, which is placed at the system's right margin.

MÜu 382 (D-MÜu 382; Münster, Universitätsbibliothek, Hs 382),² no. 1, f. *2r (back flyleaf): a2; fragmentary; on this essentially complete leaf are preserved music and text beginning with the last 10L of the final cauda of Strophe II through the end of the piece, and finishing within the first system of f. *2v; a painted initial heads Strophe III.

Heid (D-HEu 2588; Heidelberg, Universitätsbibliothek, Hs 2588), no. 1, f. 1r:³ a2; fragmentary; incompletely preserved are music and text beginning with line 21,1 of Strophe II (“Nascens” – which features a capital initial not seen elsewhere) through the D music for the first 6L or so of the final cauda on 36,3 from Strophe III (“nunciatur”).⁴ The notation of the cum littera portions of this piece shows mensurally distinguished L, DL, and elongated DL single figures, with few if any syllabic B values; the ligatures in the cauda segments, though, reveal the typical shapes of modal notation.

Oxf-Sol,⁵ no. 4 (= OxAuct, no. 4): a2; fragmentary remains of the piece are extant on binding strips α , ext. a), 2 exchanged); the proper sequence, using Dittmer's faulty numbering, should be: 266v, 268r-v, 269r-v. The sequence of leaves as it stands at present in F itself is correct as it stands.

²This source is an extant portion of a larger MS originally possessed by the Dominican library of Soest that originally included *GB-Csss 117, D-MÜsa Mscr. VII, 6115, D-MÜu 382, and D-MÜu 378. For information on these items and their relationships, see Eva Maschke, “Notre Dame Manuscripts and their History: Case Studies on Reception and Reuse,” (Ph.D. dissertation, University of Southampton / Universität Hamburg, 2015), 87-131.

³The numbering of the leaves and their sides is based on the library's current foliation in the images of these fragments that are available online at <http://digi.ub.uni-heidelberg.de/diglit/heidhs2588>. This enumeration does not always indicate the original sequence of the leaves. Other resources (including the CPI website, DIAMM, and Anderson, NDRC) may show different foliations.

⁴The following portions are missing due to trimming or fading of the extant leaf in Heid: 1) after starting on f. 1r with all three parts beginning line 21,1 of Strophe II (“Nascens”), the text of first two syllables of line 23,2 (“[huma]nam”) and the T over the first syllable of the same word is missing. 2) the cauda on “angelice” (24,1) is either illegible or cut away from approximately L9 through L32 (i.e., much of its first half). 3) the beginning of Strophe III is gone, up through approximately the last 10L of the opening cauda; f.1r concludes with L10 of the cauda on “delega[tur]” (25,3). 4) continuing on with the preserved remainder of the cauda of line 25,3 (“delegatur”), f. 1v is missing the last two text syllables of 31,3 (“ange[licis]”), but preserves the T music for the rest of the word and the pitches in the D up through the first two syllables of 32,1 (“pastro[res]”). 5) the music and text of the last syllable of 34,2 (“glori[a]”) through 35,1 (“[In] terra”) does not survive. 6) Absent verbally is all but the first text letter of 36,2 (“c[elo]”) to the end, but the D music is preserved up through the first 6L of the following cauda on “[nunci]a[tur]” (line 36,3), as are the T pitches for the music up through the first syllable of 36, 3 (“nun[ciatur]”).

⁵This siglum as used here brings together the related fragments now preserved in Oxford, Bodleian Library, Auct. Q.3.17 (GB-Ob [pr. bk.] Auct. 6 Q.3.17; OxAuct) and CH-MSbk S.231 (Mariastein, Benediktinerkloster, S.231), the latter olim: Solothurn, Zentralbibliothek, S. 231 (Sol). The numbering and sequence of the items in this reconstituted source derives from the more complete combined ext. a), 7 ext. a), 8, ext. a); along with a portion of a surviving bifolio from this source, given as f. 3r on the CPI website and in the general DIAMM inventories.⁶ The binding strips contain portions of music and text from Strophe II;⁷ the larger leaf contains preserved text and music from the final syllable of line 30,3 from Strophe III (“[presigna]vit”) to the end of the piece.

Text only:

OxRawl (GB-Ob Rawl.poet.C510; Oxford, Bodleian Library, Rawlinson C 510), no. 12, f. 236v (7v): text only; rubric: “De verbo dei humanato” (“On the word of God made human”); originally complete; rubric and lines 1-6 of Strophe I are now lost with missing folio 236 (7), although the complete piece was described before the disappearance (see Anderson, NDRC, 3:223); further information (including variants) on the missing leaf appears in the report on OxRawl in Hans Walther, “poetische Anthologie,” 218-219;⁸ and the edition of Puer nobis est natus in AH, 20:68, no. 44.⁹ Larger capitals open the lines beginning Strophes II and III.

The opening verse of Puer nobis est natus is almost certainly recollected (as “unde puer nobis natus”) in line 16 of the conductus Hac in die rege nato (I30/150), the poem of which is constructed nearly completely from incipits of other conductus. It is transmitted in the following sources:

F, fasc. 7, no. 73, f. 332r: a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 89, f. 174v (165v): a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Stanzaic structure: Since the poem otherwise contains only 8pp and 7p verses, I have decided not to break the 8pp lines that display internal rhyme (4pp+4pp), but rather to call attention to this feature by horizontal spacing. This results in strophes of twelve rather than fourteen lines, as opposed to the differing presentation in Anderson (NDRC, 3:xxx), and hence offers a rather tidy disposition of each stanza into three quatrains: 4(7pp), 2(8pp[= 4pp+4pp]+7pp), and 2(8pp+7pp); rhyming aaaa, b[=b+b]cb[=b+b]c, dede.

General remarks: This conductus offers several nods towards biblical texts that also appear as liturgical items in the Mass, specifically recollections of the Christmas Introit (“Puer natus est nobis ...”) and the Gloria (“Gloria in excelsis deo et in terra pax hominibus ...”); see the remarks for lines 1 and 34-35. These allusions are highlighted in the text, translation, and transcription by presentation in italics. As a result of its citations, this piece shares the stage with approximately twenty-nine other conductus which may be associated in some listing in Mark Everist, “A Reconstructed Source for the Thirteenth-Century Conductus,” Gordon A Anderson (1929-1981): In memoriam von seinen Studenten, Freunden und Kollegen. 2 vols., 1:97-108, Musicological Studies, no. 49 (Institute of Medieval Music: Henryville, Pennsylvania, 1984), at 107 (Table 2).

⁶In the accompanying descriptions of the images when they are viewed at DIAMM, however, the larger leaf is described as “folio front endpaper verso (pag. 4 and 5)” – with the “4” and “5” corresponding to the left and right segments, respectively, of this bifolio – while “f. i v” appears on the identifying text printed upon the image itself.

⁷For details of exactly what portions are transmitted in the various binding strips, see Everist, “A Reconstructed Source,” 99-104.

⁸Hans Walther, “Die poetische Anthologie des cod. Oxford Rawl. C. 510*” Mittellateinisches Jahrbuch, 3 (1966): 218-227.

⁹*Analecta hymnica medii aevi*, vol. 20: Cantiones et Muteti: Lieder und Motetten des Mittelalters, pt. 1: Cantiones Natalitiae, Partheniae, Guido Maria Dreves, ed. (Leipzig: O. R. Reisland, 1895).

fashion with the liturgy. These pieces quote, paraphrase, or refer to elements of ecclesiastical ceremony more directly than is typical for the genre.¹⁰ Textual notes: 1: see Isaiah, 9:6: “Parvulus enim natus est nobis, et filius datus est nobis” (“For a child is born to us, and a son is given to us”), which in its pre-Vulgate rendering (“Puer natus est nobis, et filius datus est nobis”) opens the introit of the third Christmas Mass; see also the analogous biblical/liturgical reference in lines 34-35. 2-4: the significance of these lines likely addresses a common conceit that occurs frequently both in the Parisian conductus and elsewhere in various forms of medieval religious expression: that God’s divinity was not compromised when he assumed human form as Christ (see, for example, the conductus Sol sub nube latuit [I16/334], Strophe I and passim, and Parit preter morem [E12/261], lines 9-16). God’s act of taking on human flesh does not mean that the flesh per se is unworthy of salvation, since God chose it as a vessel for his own sinless incarnation as Christ, but its culpable state as the result of original sin (alluded to in the conductus text especially at the start and conclusion of Strophe II) is what makes it regrettable. This very same point also concludes Strophe I. 10: see Isaiah, 7:14: “... ecce virgo concipiet, et pariet filium ...” (“... behold a virgin shall conceive, and shall bear a son ...”). 13-14: Note the similar expression in the conductus Relegate vetustate (H23/303), lines 5-6. Christ and Adam are frequently portrayed as typological figures in the manner of contemporaneous biblical exegesis, with Christ portrayed as a new Adam who rectifies the sin of the first man; see the remarks on the text for the conductus Salvatoris hodie – Novus Adam (C5/315), lines 14-17, for some biblical citations that attest to this comparison. 15-16: see 2 Samuel, 22:10: “Inclinavit caelos, et descendit: et caligo sub pedibus ejus” (“He bowed the heavens, and came down: and darkness was under his feet.”); and the same expression in Psalm 17:10. 17-18: the darkness of long ago refers to the inculcation of original sin, caused by Adam and Eve and recounted in Genesis, 3; see also the remarks for lines 13-14. 25-28: see Luke, 2:7: “Et peperit filium suum primogenitum, et pannis eum involvit, et reclinavit eum in praesepio: quia non erat eis locus in diversorio” (“And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him up in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no place for them in the inn.”). 29-30: likely a reference to the star that guided the Magi to Christ, as in Matthew, 2:1-12; but see also the prophecy of Balaam in Numbers, 24:17: “... Orietur stella ex Iacob et consurget virga de Israhel” (“... A star shall rise out of Jacob and a scepter shall spring up from Israel.”). Balaam and his prophecy also appear in the conductus Renovantur veterum (J5/305), lines 21-24. 31-34: this recalls the story of the angels who announced Jesus’s birth to the shepherds in Luke, 2:8-14. 34-35: paraphrased from Luke 2:14, which in its liturgical reading (beginning “Gloria in excelsis deo”) supplies the opening text for the Gloria of the Mass: “Gloria in altissimis Deo, et in terra pax hominibus bonae voluntatis” (“Glory to God in the highest; and on earth peace to men of good will.”).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. MUSIC: Line 10,3: the recurring cadential motive seen here, marked above the staff as “a,” also appears in each of the other stanzas, within lines 15,3 and 25,3. Cauda at 12,4: the hocketing segment in mode 2 that follows the voice-exchange portion opening this melisma shows mode 1 in the T of W1, while the second and fourth 2li figures (cd ... bc) in W1’s D are each written as 2si; see the reading from this source at the end of the transcription. Cauda at 22,1: the hocket passage beginning this melisma shows differing ligations among the surviving sources; these are offered as alternative readings at the end of the transcription. Cauda at 24,1: the ambiguities inherent in the notation of the hoquet passage beginning at approximately L29 in this cauda allow for various interpretations of duration and rhythmic mode; several alternatives, along with the reading presented in the main transcription to facilitate comparison, are given among the various possibilities at the end of the transcription. Cauda at 36,3: the sequential passage just after the start of this cauda presents a canon between T and D for 8L at the interval of a second; this is noted in the score above the system.

¹⁰“Liturgical” conductus within the primary Parisian sources (W1, W2, F, Ma) that feature quotations, references, or paraphrases of liturgical texts, as well as those that have been later pressed into service as rubricated liturgical items include: Veni creator spiritus spiritus recreator (E13/361), Pater noster qui es in celis (G2/265) – the Lord’s Prayer, Ave maris stella virgo (D1/34), Ysayas cecinit (C4/188), O vera O pia (F21/248), Puer nobis est natus (H25/267), Pater noster commiserans (H19/266), Ave Maria gratia plena (G7/29) – a frequently encountered liturgical text with several conductus settings, Magnificat anima mea ... qui iudicat (H10/203), Flos de spina procreatur (H29/127), Qui de Sabba veniunt (I20/281), Ego reus confiteor (H20/106), Alma redemptoris mater (I32/13) – one of the four major Marian antiphons sung throughout the year at Compline, Gloria in excelsis deo redemptori meo (H1/145), Sursum corda elevate (G9/343), O crux ave spes unica (H4/230), Ver pacis aperit (J32/366), Veni creator spiritus et in me (J41/360), Gloria sit soli deo (J43/146), Ave tuos benedic (J49,O22/38), Ave maris stella ave singularis (J53/34), Quomodo cantabimus (K25/296), Si vis vera frui luce (K40/329), Beata nobis gaudia reduxit (K44/41), Ave gloriosa virginum (K75/28), Veni sancte spiritus veni (K76/364), Salve sancta parens enixa (J57/316), Salve sancta parens patrie (J58/317), Adiuva nos deus salutaris noster (J4/9), Quis tibi Christe meritas (F33/290).

VERI VITIS GERMINE
Conductus (H14/372)

F. f. 269v (7,5)

D
I
T

[Ve-Ve-

[b]
[a] [Ve]-ri vi-tis ger - mi-ne
[Ve]-ri vi-tis ger - mi-ne

plan - ta-to - - ris ger - mi-nat.
plan - ta-to - - ris ger - mi-nat.

ve - rus or - to lu - mi-ne no-ctem sol ex - ter - mi-nat. dum na-to de vir-gi - ne
ve - rus or - to lu - mi-ne no-ctem sol ex - ter - mi-nat. dum na-to de vir-gi - ne

sum - mi pa - tris nu - mi-ne cri-mi-nis ab ho-mi-ne iu - gum sum - mi pa - tris nu - mi-ne cri-mi-nis ab ho-mi-ne iu - gum

[b']
[a'] [a'] rex e - li - mi -
rex e - li - mi -

Two staves of musical notation in G major. The upper staff contains notes with dynamic markings 'd' and 'd'' above them. The lower staff contains notes with dynamic markings 'c' and 'c'' above them. Blue brackets and dashed lines indicate phrasing and slurs.

Two staves of musical notation. The upper staff ends with the lyric '- nat.' and a red vertical bar line. The lower staff ends with the lyric '- nat.' and a red vertical bar line. Dynamic markings 'f' and 'ff' are present.

Two staves of musical notation. The upper staff is marked 'D' and the lower staff 'T'. Both staves contain the lyrics 'Iu - de - a re - ver - te - re cru - - cis'. Dynamic markings 'f' and 'ff' are present.

Two staves of musical notation. The upper staff contains the lyrics 'ad si - gna - cu - lum. aut iam pa - tens rum -'. The lower staff contains the lyrics 'ad si - gna - cu - lum. aut iam pa - tens rum -'. Dynamic markings 'f' and 'e' are present.

Two staves of musical notation. The upper staff contains the lyrics '- pe - re re - co - lens o - ra - cu - lum. nam quod'. The lower staff contains the lyrics '- pe - re re - co - lens o - ra - cu - lum. nam quod'. Dynamic markings 'f' and 'e' are present.

Two staves of musical notation. The upper staff contains the lyrics 'um - bra lit - te - re ren - nu - it de -'. The lower staff contains the lyrics 'um - bra lit - te - re ren - nu - it de -'. Dynamic markings 'f' and 'b' are present.

-te-ge - re vir-gi-nis sub u - be-re rex

-te-ge - re vir-gi-nis sub u - be-re rex

si - gnat ad o - cu-

si - gnat ad o - cu-

- lum.

- lum.

III

D 0

T 0

sa-lu-bris u - ni-o. mi - ra nu - pte no-vi-tas.

sa-lu-bris u - ni-o. mi - ra nu - pte no-vi-tas.

sa-lu-bris u - ni-o. mi - ra nu - pte no-vi-tas.

ma - tris pu - er - pe - ri - o re - spi - rat in - te - gri - tas. que sit hec con - ce - pti - o

ma - tris pu - er - pe - ri - o re - spi - rat in - te - gri - tas. que sit hec con - ce - pti - o

nul - la fi - at que - sti - o. quod ne - scit

nul - la fi - at que - sti - o. quod ne - scit

di - scre - ti - o re - di - mat fi - de - li -

di - scre - ti - o re - di - mat fi - de - li -

di - scre - ti - o re - di - mat fi - de - li -

di - scre - ti - o re - di - mat fi - de - li -

di - scre - ti - o re - di - mat fi - de - li -

di - scre - ti - o re - di - mat fi - de - li -

di - scre - ti - o re - di - mat fi - de - li -

di - scre - ti - o re - di - mat fi - de - li -

VERI VITIS GERMINE

Conductus (H14/372)

F, f. 269v (7,5)

- | | |
|---|---|
| I Veri vitis germine
plantatoris germinat;
verus, orto lumine,
noctem sol exterminat;
dum, nato de virgine,
summi patris numine,
criminis ab homine
iugum rex eliminat. | The vine of the true planter sprouts forth with a bud;
the true sun, rising from light,
banishes night;
5 while, born of a virgin, from a nod of the highest father,
the king banishes the yoke of sin from mankind. |
| II Iudea, revertere crucis ad signaculum, aut, iam patens, rumpere,
recolens oraculum.
Nam quod umbra littere rennuit detegere, virginis sub ubere
rex signat ad oculum. | Judea, turn back to 10 the sign of the cross, or, already exposed, you will be broken, recalling the prophecy.
For what the shadow of the law refused to disclose, 15 a king, at the breast of a virgin, expresses to the eye. |
| III O salubris unio, mira nupte novitas, matris puerperio
respirat integritas.
Que sit hec conceptio nulla fiat questio.
Quod nescit discretio
redimat fidelitas. | O healing union, wondrous novelty for a bride, chastity breathes on 20 the mother's child.
Let there be no question what this conception means.
Faithfulness compensates for what reason does not understand. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 5, f. 269v: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with capitals for II and III. This and the following work in F are in reverse order in WI.

WI, fasc. 9, no. 52, f. 135r (126r): a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with plain painted initials for the subsequent stanzas. This and the previous work in WI are in reverse order in F.

Ma, fasc. 3, no. 5, f. 35r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete; the initials intended for each stanza were never entered; full-system-high space is left for the initial of II as well as I, while III shows a small space in the T that could accommodate a shorter letter; but Ma also shows a wide, mid-system gap in both voice parts before the cum littera setting of line 16, as if an initial was also planned for that place (despite the fact that the text of line 16,1 – “rex” – appears earlier before the preceding cauda, just as it does in both the other sources with music).

Text only:

OxRawl (GB-Obl C510; Oxford, Bodleian Library, Rawlinson C 510), no. 26, f. 240v (11v): text only of Strophes I-III, complete, with pilcrows heading the lines beginning II and III; rubric: “de partu beate virginis” (“on the blessed virgin giving birth”).

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1-2: Jesus describes himself as the “true vine” and God as its keeper or planter in John, 15:1.¹ On the frequent figure of Christ as a bud or flower, see Isaiah 45:8;² Isaiah, 11:1;³ and cf. also the verse text of the responsory Stirps Iesse. Virgo dei (O16).⁴ 3-4: among the many references or allegories to Christ as the sun or as a light that dispels darkness, see, e.g., Malachi, 4:2;⁵ John 1:5, in reference to the Word;⁶ and the similar expressions in Isaiah, 9:2, and John, 12:46. The phrase “true sun” in reference to either God or Christ occurs in a number of other conductus, such as Rose nodum reserat (I1/313), line 3; Quid tu vides Ieremia (D4/287), line 23; and Veri solis presentia (F6/370), line 1. 7-8: on images of release from the burden of the yoke of sin, see, for example, Isaiah, 9:4;⁷ Jeremiah, 28:2;⁸ and the comparable expressions of Isaiah, 10:27, Jeremiah, 5:5, and 28:4. 12,2: the prophecy (“oraculum”) referred to here may relate to passages such as Jeremiah 31:31–34, where the Lord pledges to make a new covenant distinct from his earlier imposition of Mosaic law; see also Hebrews, 8:8–11, where the text of Jeremiah is recalled. 13-14: for the treatment of the older Mosaic law as a shadow or veil that obscures the new law represented by Christ, see 2 Corinthians, 3:13–16;⁹ and Hebrews, 10:1.¹⁰ 14,1: an alternative spelling of “renuit.” 17: the union is that of God’s divinity

¹John, 15:1: “Ego sum vitis vera, et Pater meus agricola est” (“I am the true vine; and my Father is the husbandman.”).

²Isaiah 45:8: “Rorate, caeli, desuper, et nubes pluant justum; aperiatur terra, et germinet salvatorem, et justitia oriatur simul: ego Dominus creavi eum” (“Drop down dew, O heavens, from above, and let the clouds rain down a just man: let the earth be opened, and bud forth a savior: and let justice spring up at the same time: I the Lord made him.”).

³Isaiah, 11:1: “Et egredietur virga de radice Iesse, et flos de radice eius ascendet” (“And a shoot shall come forth out of the root of Jesse, and a flower shall rise up out of his root.”).

⁴“Virgo dei genetrix virga est, flos filius ejus” (“The branch [of Jesse] is the virgin mother of God, the flower is her son”).

⁵Malachi, 4:2: “Et orietur vobis timentibus nomen meum, sol iustitiae, et sanitas in pinnis eius: et egrediemini, et salietis sicut vituli de armento” (“But for you that fear my name, the sun of justice shall arise, and health [will be] in his wings: and you shall go forth, and shall leap like calves of the herd”).

⁶John 1:5: “Et lux in tenebris lucet, et tenebrae eam non comprehenderunt” (“And the light shines in darkness, and the darkness did not comprehend [or ‘overcome’] it”).

⁷Isaiah, 9:4: “Jugum enim oneris ejus, et virgam humeri ejus, et sceptrum exactoris ejus superasti, sicut in die Madian” (“For the yoke of their burden, and the rod of their shoulder, and the sceptre of their oppressor you have overcome, as in the day of Midian”).

⁸Jeremiah, 28:2: “Haec dicit Dominus exercituum, Deus Israel: contrivi jugum regis Babylonis.” (“Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: I have broken the yoke of the king of Babylon.”).

⁹2 Corinthians, 3:13–16: “et non sicut Moyses ponebat velamen super faciem suam, ut non intenderent filii Israel in faciem ejus, quod evacuatur, sed obtusi sunt sensus eorum. Usque in hodiernum enim diem, idipsum velamen in lectione veteris testamenti manet non revelatum (quoniam in Christo evacuatur), sed usque in hodiernum diem, cum legitur Moyses, velamen positum est super cor eorum. Cum autem conversus fuerit ad Dominum, auferetur velamen” (“And not as Moses [who] put a veil upon his face, that the children of Israel might not steadfastly look on the face of that which is made void. But their senses were made dull. For, until this present day, the selfsame veil, in the reading of the old testament, remains not taken away (because in Christ it is made void). But even until this day, when Moses is read, the veil is upon their heart. But when they shall be converted to the Lord, the veil shall be taken away.”).

¹⁰Hebrews 10:1: “Umbram enim habens lex futurorum bonorum, non ipsam imaginem rerum: per singulos annos, eisdem ipsis hostiis quas offerunt indesinenter, numquam potest accedentes perfectos facere” (“For the law having a shadow of the good things to come, not the image itself of the things; by the selfsame sacrifices which they offer continually every year, can never make perfect those who come to it”).

wedded to mortal humanity by the birth of Jesus. 23-24: for the oft-encountered trope that the circumstances surrounding Christ’s birth (the “wondrous novelty” referred to in line 18) upended natural law in an irrational manner that only faith can hope to comprehend, see the textual notes to the conductus O felix Bituria (E8/232), lines 23-24, for some further examples of this conceit.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. MUSIC: Syllabic-melismatic identity:: 1. A short, 4- or 5-note, scalar formulae, hence very minor: TD of “Veri vitis [germine]” (line 1) = 1a. TD of second phrase of cauda on “[eli]mi[nat]” (line 8, closes Strophe I) = 1b. T of third phrase of cauda on “[eli]mi[nat]” (line 8, closes Strophe I) = 1c. T(D) of “virginis sub [ubere]” (line 15). 2. A type of musical rhyme: T(D) of “signaculum” (line 10) = 2a. T(D) of “oraculum” (line 12) = 2b. T(D) of first phrase of cauda on “ocu[lum]” (line 16, closes Strophe II) = 2c. sim T(D) of “fidelitas” (line 24, closes Strophe III), an even more typical cadence formula. 3. TD of “discreti[o]” (line 23, penultimate line of poem) = 3a. D, then TD of first phrase of following cauda on “[discreti]o.” Supposed modal transmutation/rhythmic variation: Bukofzer (“Interrelationships,” 101)¹¹ raises the possibility that a type of modal transmutation via rhythmic variation may be observed within some of the caudae of Veri vitis germine, such as is seen in Rex eterne glorie (H21/309), Deus creator omnium (H11/89), and the transmission of A deserto veniens (I) as given in W1 (J3/1). He gives no specific examples for Veri vitis germine, but the repeated segments I identify above seem given over more to short formulae and cadential figures. The degree of modal transmutation, therefore, appears to be minimal in this case, since most of the correspondences in the caudae correlate with sine littera segments, which do not communicate verifiable rhythms. Line 2,3: T: F, W1: looks more like e; clarified by Ma. Cauda at line 8,3 (closing Strophe I): T: F: 2li=ef om in antepenultimate phrase; supplied from W1, Ma. Cauda at 16,4 (closing Strophe II): TD: in place of the last phrase, W1 has a conventional punctus organi descent over the penultimate f in the T; it (along with the other punctus organi in this source) is similar to the ones also ending Strophes I and III as presented in F, but with an additional antepenultimate g in the D, bound as a 2li to the penultimate a; Ma, which closes its setting of Strophe II in the same way as F has the same disposition for the other two punctus organi as W1. Cauda at 24,2 (Closing Strophe III): TD: F: the e-flat sigs that appear before the cauda are written 2 lower in the d space on the staff.

¹¹Manfred F. Bukofzer, “Interrelations Between Conductus and Clausula,” Annales musicologiques, 1 (1953): 65-103.

AUCTOR VITE VIRGINE
 Conductus (H13/23)

*F, f. 270v (7,6)

I

[Au - ctor vi - te Au - ctor vi - te
 vir - gi - ne na-tus mo-ri vo - lu - it vir - gi - ne na-tus mo-ri vo - lu - it sub sac-ci ve - la - mi-ne quem pro re - is in - du - it sub sac-ci ve - la - mi-ne quem pro re - is in - du - it

II

Cu - ius
 Cu - ius
 vi - ta le - cti-o no - bis et in-stru - cti-o.
 vi - ta le - cti-o no - bis et in-stru - cti-o.

*Ma has an extended version of the first part of the opening cauda (see the alternative reading at the end)

nos pro vi - te pre - ci - o mun - do mo - ri do - cu - nos pro vi - te pre - ci - o mun - do mo - ri do - cu -

h h' h''
g g' g''

x (x) (x')
- it.
- it.

D III
Ut [Ut] sur - ga -
Ut [Ut] sur - ga -

- mus
- mus

o - [o] - - ri - - tur.
o - [o] - - ri - - tur.

ut vi - va - mus mo - ri-tur. ce -

ut vi - va - mus mo - ri-tur. ce -

ce - li

ce - li

pan - dens a - di - tum.

pan - dens a - di - tum.

con - pen - se - mus i - gi - tur ut quod no-bis cre - di-tur

con - pen - se - mus i - gi - tur ut quod no-bis cre - di-tur per - sol - va-mus de - bi -

per - sol - va-mus de - bi -

l n l

j2 j3 k m k

| phrase pairs increase incrementally in length

 TD: slight differences among sources for the rest of the cauda: see alternative readings at the end

Two staves of music in 8/8 time. The upper staff has notes with red boxes containing 'n', 'l', and 'n'' above them. The lower staff has notes with red boxes containing 'm', 'k', and 'm'' above them. Blue brackets group notes across both staves. The system ends with a blue bracketed section containing a note and a rest.

ALTERNATIVE READINGS

*Opening cauda with first section in extended rhythms: Ma, f. 38v, IV

Two staves of music. The upper staff is labeled 'D' and the lower 'T'. The D staff has a red 'b' above it. Blue brackets group notes. The system ends with a blue bracketed section containing a note and a rest.

Cauda on line 5,1 (opening Strophe II) read in iambic modes 2 and 3: F, f. 261r, I

Two staves of music. The upper staff is labeled 'D' and the lower 'T'. The T staff has a red 'b' above it. Blue brackets group notes. The system ends with a blue bracketed section containing a note and a rest.

Cauda on line 14,2 (closing Strophe III), closing portion, with the D showing slight variants from F (signaled above staff and mistakenly written 3 higher)
 a. W1, f. 135r (126r), IV

Two staves of music. The upper staff is labeled 'D' and the lower 'T'. The D staff has a red 'F: b a (written d.c. 3 too high)' above it. Blue brackets group notes. The system ends with a blue bracketed section containing a note and a rest.

b. Ma, f. 135r (40r), III (end); like F, the first 7L of this portion of the D are transposed 3 too high

Two staves of music. The upper staff is labeled 'D' and the lower 'T'. The D staff has a red 'F: b a (written d.c. 3 too high)' above it. Blue brackets group notes. The system ends with a blue bracketed section containing a note and a rest.

AUCTOR VITE VIRGINE (I)
Conductus (H13/23)

F, f. 270v (7,6)

I	Auctor vite, virgine natus, mori voluit sub sacci velamine quem pro reis induit.		The author of life, born from a virgin, wanted to die beneath the cover of the sackcloth he assumed on behalf of the guilty.
II	Cuius vita lectio nobis et instructio. Nos, pro vite precio, mundo mori docuit.	5	His life is a lesson and a teaching for us. He instructed us, for the price of a life, to die for the world.
III	Ut surgamus oritur; ut vivamus moritur, celi pandens aditum. Compensem igitur ut, quod nobis creditur, persolvamus debitum.	10	He is born so that we may ascend; he dies so that we may live, throwing open the entrance of heaven. Therefore, let us recompense him, so that, because we believe, we may pay the debt in full.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no.6, f. 270v: a2, Strophes I-III, complete, with subsequent strophes indicated by capitals. This and the previous work in F are in reverse order in WI.

WI, fasc. 9, no. 51, f. 134r (125r): a2, Strophes I-III, complete, with painted initials. This and the following work in WI are in reverse order in F.

Ma, fasc. 3, no. 7, f. 38v: a2, Strophes I-III, complete; no initials or guide letters entered for Strophes II-III, but with an ornamented large initial for I. The final system to contain the piece has the last two notes of the T, along with the final text syllable, flush with the right margin of the writing block and thus out of alignment with the closing punctus organi passage in the D, which is not separated from what precedes it.

*Oxf-Sol*¹ no. 15 (= Sol, no. 2), f. Av: a2; fragmentary: a small vertical strip of the right-hand portion of the folio remains, preserving five partial systems (out of the six on the leaf) with music and text (often faded or illegible) for portions of lines 1-2, 3-4, 5, 7, and the end of the final cauda of Strophe II.²

Text only:

¹This siglum as used here brings together the related fragments now preserved in Oxford, Bodleian Library, Auct. Q.3.17 (GB-Ob [pr. bk.] Auct. 6 Q.3.17; OxAuct) and CH-MSBk S.231 (Mariastein, Benediktinerkloster, S.231), the latter olim: Solothurn, Zentralbibliothek, S. 231 (Sol). The numbering and sequence of the items in this reconstituted source derives from the more complete combined listing in Everist, “A Reconstructed Source,” 107 (Table 2).

²Specifically, the remains of the five systems preserve: 1) starting with the second accolade preserved on the leaf: music and text from the second syllable of line 1,1 (“[vi]te”) through the first syllable of 2,1 (“na[tus]”); 2) from the fourth syllable of 3,3 (“[velami]ne”) through the second syllable of 4,4 (“indu[it]”); 3) from L3 to the end of the cauda on line 5,1 (beginning Strophe II); 4) from line 7,1 (“nos [pro vite]”) through the end of the short cauda after 7,4 (“precio”), perhaps not including the final two notational figures of the melisma; 5) from approximately L23 in the D and L25 in the T to the end of the cauda and punctus organi on line 8,3 (“[do]cuit” – closing Strophe II).

The two items given below are not, strictly speaking, actual sources for the above text. They contain different poems that recall short passages from the conductus poem. Images of these items are not presently available to me; the details come from the CPI website (<http://catalogue.conductus.ac.uk/>) via the hand-annotated version of Anderson’s conductus catalog.³

A-Iu 457 (Innsbruck, Universitätsbibliothek, 457), f. 107r: a2, with one part serving as an untexted tenor; a motet-like setting of a two-strophe text with different music than the other sources. Strophe I presents major deviations from the version in the sources given above, including some phrases seen in Strophe II, while Strophe II in A-Iu 457 is essentially new. Incipit: “Auctor vite, virgine / natus absque crimine” (listed as Auctor vite virgine (II) on the CPI website).

D-WÜu M. ch. f. 121 (Würzburg, Universitätsbibliothek, M. ch. f.121), written on the inner front cover; text only of a differently constructed poem (isosyllabic 10pp lines throughout) of four, four-line stanzas whose first strophe shares a few phrases with the Parisian conductus.⁴ Incipit: “Auctor vite nos mori voluit / et pro nobis mortem sustinuit.”

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1-4: God, as Christ, took on human form and sacrificed his life to save sinners; cf. Acts, 3:15: “auctorem vero vitae interfecistis, quem Deus suscitavit a mortuis, cujus nos testes sumus” (“But the author of life you killed, whom God raised from the dead, of which we are witnesses”). 3,2: see Psalm 29:12: “Convertisti planctum meum in gaudium mihi; conscidisti saccum meum, et circumdedisti me laetitia” (“You have turned for me my mourning into joy: you have cut my sackcloth, and have compassed me with gladness.”). The word “saccus”(“sackcloth”) is used here as a metaphor for suffering; in certain theological contexts, which appear to include this conductus text, it more specifically signifies Christ’s human nature.⁵

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 4: F,W1,Ma: no concluding period for Strophe I; added editorially. 8,3: W1,Ma: “voluit” from line 2,3 is repeated for “docuit”; F reading preferred 11,2: F,W1: second syllable of “pandens” aligned under the following T figure (4li=agab), reading clarified by Ma (which gives “patens”) and prior syllable strokes in F. MUSIC: Cauda on line 1,1 (opening Strophe I): Ma casts the rhythms of the first 7L of this melisma into modes 1 and 5 (see the alternative reading given at the end of the transcription). Cauda on 4,1 (closing Strophe I): D: F: preceding e-flat sig in d space on staff; T: F: an erased stroke before last note (f) of third cauda phrase is not restored here. Cauda on line 5,1 (opening Strophe II): a reading with the iambic rhythms of modes 2 and 3 is also possible; see the alternative reading at the end. Cauda on line 13, 4: T: F: an absent repeated note at the end of each phrase supplied from W1,Ma. Cauda on line 14,2 (closing ³Published as: Gordon A. Anderson, “Notre Dame and Related Conductus: A Catalogue Raisoné,” Miscellanea musicologica: Adelaide Studies in Musicology, 6 (1972): 152-229; 7 (1973): 1-81.

⁴For a general description of the entire MS, see http://www.manuscripta-mediaevalia.de/hs/katalogseiten/HSK0083_b107_jpg.htm, from the library’s online manuscript catalog. This reproduces Hans Thurn, Die Handschriften aus benediktinischen Provenienzen: Hälfte 1: Amorbach, Kitzingen, Münsterschwarzach ... (Wiesbaden: Otto Harrassowitz, 1973), pp. 107-108.

⁵For such a definition, drawn from Alain de Lille’s Distinctiones dictionum theologiarum, as given in PL, 210, col. 929B, see Nikolaus Wicki, ed., Philippi Cancellarii Parisiensis: Summa de Bono, 2 vols., Corpus philosophorum medii aevi: Opera philosophica mediae aetatis selecta, no. 2 (Bern: Francke, 1985), 2:835, in the note to line 63: “Saccus, proprie. Dicitur humana Christi natura, quae sacco comparatur propter asperitatem poenae quam assumpsit” (“Sack, specifically, is said to be the human nature of Christ, which is likened to sackcloth due to the harshness of the torment he undertook.”).

Strophe III): TD: F,W1,Ma: beginning at L16 of this melisma, the second member of the following three repetitious phrase pairs increases incrementally in length, from 6L (L18-L23), to 7L (L26-L32), to 8L (L35-L42); TD: F,W1,Ma: beginning at approximately L33 of the final cauda of the piece, some minor variants in detail; see the alternative readings at the end; D: F,Ma: also beginning at L33, both these sources (!) mistakenly write the pitches 3 higher during the next 7L; the correct level is clarified by the minimally divergent D reading of WI (see the following for the differences); D: F: for the first 2li=ab at L36-37 in the cauda, F has ba (written as dc, 3 too high), corrected according to WI, and signaled in the alternative versions given at the end of the transcription. T: F,W1,Ma: the repeated g that concludes the antepenultimate phrase of the piece appears in no source, but seems called for by the motivic consistency of all previous T phrases of this cauda.

IN ROSA VERNAT LILIUM
Conductus (H9/184)

F, f. 271v (7,7)

D
I
T

[In] ro - sa ro - sa

ver - nat li - li-um. flos in flo - re flo - re -
ver - nat li - li-um. flos in flo - re flo - re -

- scit. dum na - ta pa - rit fi - li - um in te - ne - bris
- scit. dum na - ta pa - rit fi - li - um in te - ne - bris

lu - ce - scit lux si - ne te - ne - bris. in car - nis la - te - bris ve - ra di - es di - e - lu - ce - scit lux si - ne te - ne - bris. in car - nis la - te - bris ve - ra di - es di - e -

- scit.
- scit.

- scit.
- scit.

D
 II
 T
 Ex lu - na so - lis e - mi - cat
 Ex lu - na so - lis e - mi - cat

ra - di - us e - lu - - cens. mun - da - nis so - lem in - di - cat
 ra - di - us e - lu - - cens. mun - da - nis so - lem in - di - cat lu - na nun - quam de - cres - - cens.

 lu - na nun - quam de - cres - - cens.

hic sol dum lu - ne iun - gi - tur; neu - ter e - cly - psim pa - ti - tur. sed est
 hic sol dum lu - ne iun - gi - tur; neu - ter e - cly - psim pa - ti - tur. sed est

plus quam ni - tes -
 plus quam ni - tes -

plus quam ni - tes -

- cens.
- cens.

III

D In hy - e - ma - li tem - po - re ver ver - nat ul - tra

T In hy - e - ma - li tem - po - re ver ver - nat ul - tra mo - rem. di - gnum de di - gno cor - po - re ma - ter su - dit o - do -

mo - rem. di - gnum de di - gno cor - po - re ma - ter su - dit o - do -

- rem. O

- rem. O

ve - ris pre - mi - um hy - e - mis te - di - um

ve - ris pre - mi - um hy - e - mis te - di - um

ad ve - rum fu - git flo -

ad ve - rum fu - git flo -

| voice exchange of previous portion of cauda

The first system of music consists of two staves. The upper staff begins with a red box containing the letter 'j' above a note, followed by a blue bracket above two notes, a red box with 'k' above a note, another blue bracket above two notes, a red box with 'f' above a note, a blue bracket above two notes, a red box with 'b' above a note, a blue bracket above two notes, a red box with 'h' above a note, a blue bracket above two notes, and a red box with 'f' above a note. The lower staff begins with a blue bracket above two notes, a red box with 'b' above a note, a blue bracket above two notes, a red box with 'h'' above a note, a blue bracket above two notes, a red box with 'g' above a note, a blue bracket above two notes, a red box with 'i' above a note, a blue bracket above two notes, and a red box with 'i' above a note. A blue dashed line connects the 'j' in the upper staff to the 'g' in the lower staff. The system concludes with a double bar line.

The second system of music consists of two staves. The upper staff begins with a blue bracket above two notes, a red box with 'b' above a note, a blue bracket above two notes, a red box with 'h'' above a note, a blue bracket above two notes, a blue bracket above two notes, a red box with a comma above a note, a blue bracket above two notes, and a blue dashed line above two notes. The lower staff begins with a red box with 'j' above a note, a blue bracket above two notes, a red box with 'k'' above a note, a blue bracket above two notes, a blue bracket above two notes, a red box with a comma above a note, and a blue bracket above two notes. The system concludes with a double bar line. The text '- rem.]' is written in blue below the end of the upper staff, and '- rem.' is written in blue below the end of the lower staff.

IN ROSA VERNAT LILIUM

Conductus (H9/184)

F, f. 271v (7,7)

- | | | | |
|-----|---|----|---|
| I | In rosa vernat lilium.
Flos in flore florescit dum nata parit filium.
In tenebris lucescit lux sine tenebris;
in carnis latebris
vera dies diescit. | 5 | Within a rose a lily blooms.
A flower flourishes within a flower when a daughter bears a son.
In the darkness a light begins to shine without darkness;
within the recesses of the flesh
the true day dawns. |
| II | Ex luna solis emicat radius elucens.
Mundanis solem indicat
luna nunquam decrescens.
Hic sol dum lune iungitur, neuter eclypsim patitur,
sed est plus quam nitescens. | 10 | A glittering sunbeam shines forth from the moon.
The moon, never waning, reveals the sun to the world's inhabitants.
As this sun is joined to moon,
neither suffers eclipse,
but each is all the more dazzling. |
| III | In hyemali tempore ver vernat ultra morem;
dignum de digno corpore
mater sudit odorem. | 15 | In wintertime spring flourishes contrary to custom;
the mother exudes a worthy fragrance from a worthy body. |
| | O veris premium!
Hyemis tedium
ad verum fugit florem. | 20 | O, the reward of spring!
The dreariness of winter
flees before the true flower. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 7, f. 271v: a2, Strophes I-III, complete, with capitals indicating I and III, as well as starting line 19 (as in Oxf-Sol and OxAdd), signaled by the added space above. This and the following piece also succeed each other in Oxf-Sol (OxAuct).

Wl, fasc. 9, no. 44, f. 125r (116r): a2, Strophes I-III, complete, with each headed by painted initials, and possibly with a relatively larger letter “o” for line 19,1.

Ma, fasc. 3, no. 15, f. 52v (with the recto of the leaf mistakenly foliated as “53” following f. 51, but with the correct folio number entered further down the page opposite the second system): a2, Strophes I-III, complete; no initials or guide letters for any of the strophes were entered, and no spatial accommodation provided for the start of Strophe II; no special treatment for line 19,1.

*Oxf-Sol*¹ no. 1 (= OxAuct no. 1), on the leaf given as f. 1r on the CPI website and in the general DIAMM inventories:² a2, fragmentary; the remains begin about 13L through the final cauda of Strophe II (over line 14,5) and include the rest of the piece, although due to the damage at the bottom of the leaf, the D of the closing cauda is mostly faint and nearly illegible in some portions, while the T and the final word of the verbal text are impossible to make out, except for portions of the last two or three musical phrases. Of the extant poem, capitals head Strophe III and line 19, as in F and OxAdd. This and the following piece in OxAuct also succeed each other in F.

¹This siglum as used here brings together the related fragments now preserved in Oxford, Bodleian Library, Auct. Q.3.17 (GB-Ob [pr. bk.] Auct. 6 Q.3.17; OxAuct) and CH-MSbk S.231 (Mariastein, Benediktinerkloster, S.231), the latter formerly Solothurn, Zentralbibliothek, S. 231 (Sol). The numbering and sequence of the items in this reconstituted source derives from the more complete combined listing in Everist, “A Reconstructed Source,” 107 (Table 2).

Text only:

OxAdd. (Oxford, Bodleian Library, MS Add. A.44), no. 89 (with “lxxxvii” written in right margin), f. 130r: Strophes I-III, complete, written successively as if in prose, and with II, III, and line 19 (as in F and Oxf-Sol) opening with capitals; rubric: “Iterum de miris contingentibus in partu virginis.” (“Once again about the amazing things pertaining to the Virgin giving birth”)

The opening line of In rosa vernet lilium also appears as line 17 in the conductus Hac in die rege nato (130/150), the poem of which is constructed nearly completely from incipits of other conductus. It is transmitted in the following sources:

F, fasc. 7, no. 73, f. 332r: a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

Wl, fasc. 9, no. 89, f. 174v (165v): a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Poetic structure and stanzaic division: The rhythmical scheme of Strophe II differs from the identically fashioned I and III, although all have the same line count and sequence of rhymes; 6pp lines occur as the antepenultimate and penultimate lines of these outer stanzas, as opposed to the 8pp couplet in the same place in Strophe II. F, Oxf-Sol, and OxAdd additionally have a capital letter that cuts Strophe III into two portions at the exclamation “O” at line 19,1; Wl may also have a slightly larger “O” here, but Ma shows no such indication, although its “o” is aligned later than the other sources with respect to the music, and is in darker ink, which might conceivably suggest it was a later addition. Textual notes: 1: in this poem, the rose is Mary, the lily Christ; cf. also Song of Solomon, 2:1-2: “Ego flos campi, et lilium convallium” (“I am the flower of the field, and the lily of the valleys”) – often otherwise used as a figure for the Virgin – and Isaiah, 11:1,³ with the root and flower here typically construed as figures of the virgin and Christ, respectively. Cf. also the verse text of the responsory Stirps Jesse. Virgo dei (O16): “Virgo dei genetrix virga est, flos filius ejus” (“The branch [of Jesse] is the virgin mother of God, the flower is her son”). 3: a commonly expressed ironic conundrum: Mary is jointly daughter and mother both to her son and her heavenly father. 4-5: perhaps intended in the sense of John, 1:5: “Et lux in tenebris lucet et tenebrae eam non comprehenderunt” (“And the light shines in the darkness, and the darkness did not comprehend it”); see also the related expressions in 2 Peter, 1:19; Luke, 1:79; and Isaiah, 60:3. 7: see John, 12:46; John, 9:5; John, 8:12, in which Jesus describes himself as the light of the world (“lux mundi”). On God and Christ as “true sun” or “true day” see the conductus Veri vitis germine (H14/372), lines 3-4; Quid tu vides Ieremia (D4/287), lines 23-25; and Ortu regis evanescit – Veris hyemps (G3/256), line 3. 8-9: Jesus is the beam emitted from God, the sun; Mary is the moon; cf., e.g., the conductus Veri solis presentia (F6/370), and Exultemus socii (J17/115), line 4, both of which have a related, but slightly different arrangement, where Mary is represented as the star from which Christ, the sun, sprang. 10-11: Mary (the moon), in bearing Jesus and thus presenting God (the sun) to the world in human form (Christ), retained her virginity, and thus her chastity did not “wane” in a manner comparable to the actual moon. 12-14: the figure of an eclipse presents a common conceit: God’s divinity was not compromised when he assumed human form as Christ (see, for example, the textual notes on the conductus Sol sub nube latuit [I16/334] and Parit preter morem [E12/261], as well as the references included therein). In a similar fashion, Mary’s virginity was not compromised in giving birth. 15-21: as Anderson relates (NDRC, 2:xviii), the winter signifies sin (frigus iniquitatis – “the chill of sinfulness”);⁴ the birth of Christ, then, is likened in the conductus poem to the fragrant flowering of spring; Christ’s birth during winter is therefore both exceptional and fitting. See also Ortu regis evanescit – Veris hyemps (G3/256), lines 15-21 (Strophe III), for an example of this conceit elsewhere in the conductus reperetory. 20-21: see the conductus Veri floris sub figura (C1/369) which addresses throughout the symbol of Christ as the true flower; also cf. Song of Solomon, 2:11, included above in the note on the remarks to lines 15-21.

²In the accompanying descriptions of the images as they are viewed at DIAMM, however, the larger leaf that shows the start of the piece is described as “folio back endpaper verso + stub (pag. 1 & 9)” with “pag. 1” (the right side of the image) corresponding to the item in question here – while “fol. ii v” appears on the identifying text printed as a label at the bottom of the image.

³Isaiah, 11:1: “Et egredietur virga de radice Jesse, et flos de radice ejus ascendet” (“And there shall come forth a rod out of the root of Jesse, and a flower shall rise up out of his root.”).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. 11,3: syllable division as in MS. MUSIC: Opening cauda: the high level of dissonance during the first 10L of this melisma is witnessed by all the musical sources; the clashes here of a against g and b-flat against a also appear elsewhere in the piece (notably at the approach to a number of cadences); see in addition the remarks for the final cauda, which features a prominent b-flat against c. Line 2,4: T: F,W1: 2liP=*aga*P for the second syllable of “[flo]re[scit]”; the adopted 3li=aga comes from Ma. 8,2: T: F,W1: om stroke following “luna” taken from Ma, although this source has no corresponding stroke in the D at this point. Cauda at line 14,5 (closing Strophe II): D: at L21, the e-natural sign placed as ficta here and later on in this cauda are specifically indicated in Oxf-Sol; T: F: at L23 the 3li=agf is written aga in W1, Ma, Oxf-Sol. Line 20,1: D: F: 2 of the 2li=cf on the third syllable of “[hye]mis” looks like e; the adopted f appears in all other sources (W1, Ma, Oxf-Sol). Final cauda: the unusual dissonances seen first at L5 of this cauda, and additionally when these components repeat in voice exchange about halfway through, are found in all other manuscripts and are comparable with the higher incidence of dissonance that occurs sporadically throughout this piece. E-flats are provided for the cauda’s opening T passage in both W1 and Oxf-Sol and have been suggested here above the staff, yet the figure with the e’s in question appears simultaneously with both b-flats and with a pitches in the other parts; the inflection of the e is therefore negotiable. The interlocking repeated motives, later exchanged between voices, have been signaled by letters in the transcription, as well as a few other prominent repeated motives, beginning with the opening cauda.

⁴Here, Anderson quotes from Honorius of Autun’s Expositio in Cantica Canticorum (from the text presented in PL, 172, col. 527D) in reference to Song of Solomon, 2:11: “jam enim hiems transiit; imber abiit, et recessit” (“For winter is now past, the rain is over and gone.”).

IAM VETUS LITTERA

Conductus (H24/167)

F, f. 272v (7,8)*

D
I
T [Iam]
Iam

ve-tus lit - te-ra iam le - gis scri - ni-um. que clau - -sa fe - de-ra ve-tus lit - te-ra iam le - gis scri - ni-um. que clau - -sa fe - de-ra ser - va - -bant gen - ti-

ser - va - -bant gen - ti-

- um; pa - [pa] -
- um; pa - [pa] -

-tent fi - de - li - bus per de - i fi - li - um. et lex se - qua -
-tent fi - de - li - bus per de - i fi - li - um. et lex se - qua -

-ci - bus quid con - fert
-ci - bus quid con - fert

*mode 3 equally likely for the entire opening cauda te - di - te - di -

- um.
- um.

- um.
- um.

[O]
[O]

mi - ra ca - ri - tas et no - va
mi - ra ca - ri - tas et no - va

gra - ti - a ver - bi di - vi - ni - tas
gra - ti - a ver - bi di - vi - ni - tas

fit car-nis so - ci - a Vir - fit car-nis so - ci - a Vir -

or: or:
or: or:

[Vir] - go da - vi - ti - ca
[Vir] - go da - vi - ti - ca

na - tu - ram de - ci - pit ad ver - ba ce - li - ca dum
na - tu - ram de - ci - pit ad ver - ba ce - li - ca dum

na - tu - ram de - ci - pit ad ver - ba ce - li - ca dum
na - tu - ram de - ci - pit ad ver - ba ce - li - ca dum

ver - - bum con - - ci -
ver - - bum con - - ci -

| a reading of the final cauda in mode 3 is also possible up to its last four phrases

The first system consists of two staves of music in a 6/8 time signature. The top staff has notes with red boxes containing 'o', 'p', and 'o'' above them. The bottom staff has notes with red boxes containing 'n', 'n'', and 'q' below them. Blue brackets group notes into phrases. A blue dashed slur is over a group of notes in the bottom staff.

The second system consists of two staves of music. The top staff has notes with red boxes containing 'p'' and 'o'' above them. The bottom staff has notes with red boxes containing 'r' and 'q' below them. Blue brackets group notes into phrases.

The third system consists of two staves of music. The top staff has notes with red boxes containing 'p'' above them. The bottom staff has notes with red boxes containing 'r'' and 's' below them. Blue brackets group notes into phrases. A blue dashed slur is over a group of notes in the top staff.

The fourth system consists of two staves of music. The top staff has notes with red boxes containing 'o'' and 'u' above them. The bottom staff has notes with red boxes containing 's'' and 't'' below them. Blue brackets group notes into phrases. A blue dashed slur is over a group of notes in the bottom staff.

The fifth system consists of two staves of music. The top staff has notes with red boxes containing 'u'', 'u', and 'u'' above them. The bottom staff has notes with red boxes containing 't'', 't', and 't'' below them. Blue brackets group notes into phrases. The system ends with a double bar line and the text '- pit.]' on the right side of the top staff and '- pit.' on the right side of the bottom staff.

IAM VETUS LITTERA

Conductus (H24/167)

F, f. 272v (7,8)

I Iam vetus littera, iam legis scrinium, que clausa federa servabant gentium, patent fidelibus per dei filium et lex sequacibus, quid confert tedium?	Now that the ancient scripture, now that the writings of the law, which once preserved covenants closed off to the Gentiles, 5 lie open to the faithful and the law to the followers through God’s son, what need is there for vexation?
II O mira caritas et nova gratia! Verbi divinitas fit carnis socia.	What wondrous charity 10 and new grace! The divinity of the Word becomes the partner of the flesh.
Virgo davitica naturam decipit ad verba celica dum verbum concipit.	A virgin from the line of David deceives nature 15 when she conceives the Word in accordance with heavenly words.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 8, f. 272v: a2; Strophes I-II, complete; a capital heads Strophe II and another divides it in half at line 13,1, as does WI; this piece and the previous work in this source, In rosa vernat lilium (H9/184), occur in the same order in Oxf-Sol.

WI, fasc. 9, no. 68, f. 151r (142r): a2; Strophes I-II, complete, opening with a filigreed initial; painted capitals head Strophe II and divide it in half at line 13,1, as does F.

Ma, fasc. 3, no. 11, f. 47r: a2; Strophes I-II, essentially complete, although the final cauda has been significantly abridged to its first 32L, with a punctus organi added to effect a conclusion; the final text syllable is located 11L before the closing punctus organi; the opening initial is omitted, and a regular, lower case text syllable (“o”) appears to start the second stanza.

*Cssc 117 (*GB-Cssc 117; *Cambridge, Sidney Sussex College, 117),¹ no. 1, f. 1r: a2; fragmentary, with Tt and T voice extant from lines 15,2 through the first 25L of the final cauda, and with both voices and text continuing afterwards through the end of the piece; the final text syllable is inscribed 14L before the last note of the piece, where it again appears redundantly. As Eva Maschke has shown,² some of the material from the first staff on this leaf has been transferred via mirror-image offset to the bottom staff of f. 2v, which contains the conductus Dei sapientia (J6/86).³ This transfer occurred when these portions of the two leaves were pasted together in the nineteenth century to form a outer parchment wrapper for a cardboard cover that earlier surrounded the host MS, Cambridge, Sidney Sussex College, 117.

¹This source is an extant portion of a larger MS originally possessed by the Dominican library of Soest that originally included *GB-Cssc 117, D-MÜsa Mscr. VII, 6115, D-MÜu 382, and D-MÜu 378. For information, see Eva Maschke, “Notre Dame Manuscripts and their History: Case Studies on Reception and Reuse,” Ph.D. dissertation (University of Southampton / Universität Hamburg, 2015), 87-131.

²Maschke, “Notre Dame Manuscripts,” 104. For images of the pertinent leaves of *Cssc 117 and the description relied upon here, see the appendices at the end of the dissertation, plates 3.1.7, 3.1.7.1, and 3.1.7.2; along with 3.6.1, 3.6.2, 3.7.1, and 3.7.2.

Oxf-Sol,⁴ no.2 (= OxAuct no. 2), opening the piece on the leaf given as f. 1r (= pag. 1) on the CPI website and in the DIAMM inventory,⁵ and continuing on to f. 1v (= pag. 2, starting with line 3,1 – “que [clausa]”) and then on to 2r (= pag.3, starting with line 13,2 – “davitica”): a2; mostly complete, but with the beginning of the piece now almost impossible to construe. Matters are not necessarily improved by consulting reversed images of f. 1r that have been transferred via mirror-image offset to the back binding board that the folio was originally pasted to as a flyleaf.⁶ Remnants of a red opening initial are visible at the bottom right segment of f. 1r (= “pag. 1”), and some of the music can also be made out. It is uncertain, however, just how much is truly missing before the turn to the next folio, since the bottom system has been completely cut away. Correspondingly, on the other side of the folio, the text of lines 10-11 at the bottom left of f. 1v (= “pag. 2”), along with a few of its overlaid notes, is also very difficult to read due to mutilation, while the music and text for lines 12-13,1 is completely missing. This piece and the previous work in this source, In rosa vernat lilium (H9/184), occur in the same order in F.

Text only:

The opening line of Iam vetus littera appears within line 12 (“quem iam vetus littera”) of the conductus Hac in die rege nato (I30/150), the poem of which is constructed nearly completely from incipits of other conductus. It is transmitted in the following sources:

F, fasc. 7, no. 73, f. 332r: a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 89, f. 174v (165v): a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Poetic structure: The strophic division of this piece is somewhat ambiguous, as F has a capital initial for lines 9 and 13, and W1 gives painted ones in these same places; Ma lacks both an opening ³The offset contains the reversed T melody of Iam vetus littera (without D or verbal text) of line 15,3 through the first 25 L of the closing cauda of the piece.

⁴This siglum as used here brings together the related fragments now preserved in Oxford, Bodleian Library, Auct. Q.3.17 (GB-Ob [pr. bk.] Auct. 6 Q.3.17; OxAuct) and CH-MSbk S.231 (Mariastein, Benediktinerkloster, S.231), the latter olim: Solothurn, Zentralbibliothek, S. 231 (Sol). The numbering and sequence of the items in this reconstituted source derives from the more complete combined listing in Everist, “A Reconstructed Source,” 107 (Table 2).

⁵In the accompanying descriptions of the images as they are viewed on DIAMM, however, the larger leaf that contains the start of the piece (f. 1r) is described as “folio back endpaper verso + stub (pag. 1 & 9) – with “pag. 1” (the right half of the larger folio) containing the start of the work in question here – while “fol. ii v” appears on the identifying label printed upon the image itself. Similarly, the continuation (f. 1v) is described as “folio back endpaper recto (pag. 2 & 8)” and as “f. iir” on the image label; and the remainder (f. 2r) is described as “folio front endpaper recto + stub (pag. 6 & 3)” and labeled as “ir.” Folios 1r, 1v, and 2r in the description above thus contain the portions labeled as “pag. 1,” “pag. 2,” and “pag. 3,” respectively, in the images section of this source in DIAMM.

⁶Described in the images of this source in DIAMM as “folio back board offset.” The material on f. 2r (=pag. 6 & 3, f. ir) also has reversed offset images preserved on what is now described as “front board offset.”

illuminated letter to start the piece and omits any capitals during the course of the poem, but may indicate a possible guide letter for line 9,1; Oxf-Sol features an opening illuminated initial and a capital for line 9, but a conceivable additional capital starting line 13 cannot be verified due to loss, whereas *Cssc 117 preserves only the ending portion of the piece. Anderson’s edition (NDRC, 3:xxix) construes the text as four strophes of four lines, prompted by the divisions at lines 9 and 13; this interpretation, though, appears belied somewhat by the lack of a significant break in thought for Strophe I before line 5. In this transcription the text is offered as two eight-line stanzas. Textual notes: 1-7: the ancient writings and laws invoked here refer to the old law of the Mosaic covenant propounded through the Ten Commandments (see Exodus, 20:1-17), a code that was exclusive to Jews. This ancient law is now replaced by a new covenant executed through the birth of Christ, which is now open to all peoples, Jew and Gentile; see, e.g., Romans, 7:4-6.⁷ The topic of the turnover from the Old to the New Law is fairly common among the Parisian conductus repertory; for a list of such works, as well as my article on the topic, see the notes to the text of Legem dedit olim deus (I21/192). Note also the story of Peter’s conversion of the Roman centurion Cornelius, one of the first Gentiles to be christianized, in Acts, 10; this event is also commemorated in the organum a2 Cornelius. Cum orasset (O14), and its associated clausulae, which in Parisian use sets a responsory chant for the feast of Saints Peter and Paul (29 June). 13-14: for the oft-encountered trope that the circumstances surrounding Christ’s birth upended natural law in an irrational manner that only faith can hope to comprehend, see the textual notes to the conductus O felix Bituria (E8/232), lines 23-24. 15-16: this language evokes the opening verse of the gospel of John,⁸ as well as the annunciation to Mary by the angel Gabriel; see especially Luke, 1:38.⁹

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. MUSIC: Rhythmic modes of the caudae: Several of the caudae in Iam vetus littera allow for readings in either rhythmic modes 1 or 3; these include the entire opening segment of the piece, the melisma over “et [nova]” in line 10, and the final cauda up to its last four phrases. In the first two of these instances there is no discernable preference for one mode over the other, since they are completely or nearly entirely regular in their series of ligatures. The relevant portions of the closing cauda that feature different ligations among the sources, or which show divisions within the mode-3 ligature chains, are equally ambiguous as to which of the modes may be preferred. Both F and Ma, for example, show several series of 2li figures which might be rendered either way, while Oxf-Sol and W1 appear to require mode 1, the latter especially so. Given the prominence of the first mode throughout the remainder of the piece, mode-1 readings have been chosen for all of the caudae in this transcription and alternative possibilities are signaled by notices above the staff system. Phrase repetition: Iam vetus littera also features a significant amount of recall throughout its various caudae in terms of repeated, sequential, alternating, and antecedent-consequent phrase pairings; this conceit is even evident in the organal portion that precedes the last cauda in the piece. The most obvious repeated phrases have been signaled in the transcription by letters placed above the staves. There are undoubtedly further examples of motivic recollection that could be signaled throughout this piece; one of the more notable ones is the similar cadence that closes lines 4 and 8, indicated here by the letter “x” above the system. Cauda at line 10,3: D: F: the final 4li figure on “[grati]a” has its second note slightly smudged or possible erased; its reading is clarified by the other extant sources. Line 11,1: D: F: si=c on second syllable of “[ver]bi”; the adopted d is from all other extant sources (W1, Ma, Oxf-Sol). 12,1: D: F: although an e-flat sig immediately precedes “fit carnis,” no flat appears in W1 or Ma, and this portion is either lost or illegible in Oxf-Sol and *Csss 117; the coincident a in the T here at the start of the phrase has prompted the e-natural adopted in the edition. Cauda at line 13,1: TD: F: the b-flat simultaneity with c beginning the closing phrase of the cauda on “Vir[go]” is vouched for by all extant sources. Final cauda (at line 16,2): T: F: at L55 of the cauda, this voice gives 3li=gac; the adopted 2li,si=af is found in all other MSS (*W1, Oxf-Sol, Csss 117); at L58, the om si=a is from *Oxf-Sol, Csss 117; W1 has the slightly different siP’, siP, si, 2li, 2li=bP’, bP, a, ba, gc opening this phrase.

⁷ Romans, 7:4-6: “Itaque fratres mei, et vos mortificati estis legi per corpus Christi: ut sitis alterius, qui ex mortuis resurrexit, ut fructificemus Deo. Cum enim essemus in carne, passiones peccatorum, quae per legem erant, operabantur in membris nostris, ut fructificarent morti. Nunc autem soluti sumus a lege mortis, in qua detinebamur, ita ut serviamus in novitate spiritus, et non in vetustate litterae” (“Therefore, my brethren, you also are become dead to the law, by the body of Christ; that you may belong to another, who is risen again from the dead, that we may bring forth fruit to God. For when we were in the flesh, the passions of sins, which were by the law, did work in our members, to bring forth fruit unto death. But now we are loosed from the law of death, wherein we were detained; so that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter.”).

⁸John, 1:1: “In principio erat Verbum, et Verbum erat apud Deum, et Deus erat Verbum” (“In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.”).

⁹Luke, 1:38: “Dixit autem Maria: ‘Ecce ancilla Domini: fiat mihi secundum verbum tuum.’ Et discessit ab illa angelus” (“And Mary said: ‘Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it done to me according to your word.’ And the angel departed from her.”).

LENE SPIRAT SPIRITUS

Conductus (H16/194)

F, f. 273v (7,9)

I
T

[Le-] Le-

*this passage different in all MSS, see alternatives at end

[Le] - ne spi - rat spi - ri-tus mis - [mis] - sus
[Le] - ne spi - rat spi - ri-tus mis - [mis] - sus

et et di - vi - ni - tus. plu -

di - vi - ni - tus. plu -

- it ros
- it ros

in vir - gi -

in vir - gi -

in vir - gi -

- ne[m].

- ne[m].

Fe -

Fe -

[Fe] - cun - da -

[Fe] - cun - da -

- tur

- tur

vir - go ro-re pre - ter - mis-so ta - men

vir - go ro-re pre - ter - mis-so ta - men mo - re.

mo - re.

[mo] - re. no-bis pa-rit ho -

[mo] - re. no-bis pa-rit ho -

- mi - nem.

- mi - nem.

III Or -

T Or -

[Or] - ta di - es
[Or] - ta di - es

ce - le - bris no - bis
ce - le - bris no - bis

dat
dat

in te - ne - bris lu - cis
in te - ne - bris lu - cis

ple - ni - tu - di -
ple - ni - tu - di -

ple - ni - tu - di -
ple - ni - tu - di -

Musical score for two staves. The top staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The bottom staff has a bass clef and a 6/8 time signature. Both staves feature a melodic line with eighth and sixteenth notes, often beamed together. Blue brackets are placed above the notes in both staves. Red annotations include 'or:' followed by a small melodic fragment and a red 'j' in a box. A blue dashed line with an arrow indicates a melodic shift in the top staff. The piece concludes with a double bar line. The text '- nem.]' is written at the end of the top staff, and '- nem.' is written at the end of the bottom staff.

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*setting of line 2,1-2 and following cauda phrases in all three sources:

a. F, f. 274v, IV

Musical score for source a, showing two staves labeled 'D' (top) and 'T' (bottom). The top staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The bottom staff has a bass clef and a 6/8 time signature. The lyrics are: [mis - sus et]. Blue brackets are placed above the notes. A blue dashed line with an arrow indicates a melodic shift in the top staff.

b. Wl, f. 138v (129v), IV

Musical score for source b, showing two staves labeled 'D' (top) and 'T' (bottom). The top staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The bottom staff has a bass clef and a 6/8 time signature. The lyrics are: [mis - sus et]. Red annotations include 'or:' followed by a small melodic fragment. Blue brackets are placed above the notes. A blue dashed line with an arrow indicates a melodic shift in the top staff.

c. Ma, f. 49v, IV

Musical score for source c, showing two staves labeled 'D' (top) and 'T' (bottom). The top staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The bottom staff has a bass clef and a 6/8 time signature. The lyrics are: [mis - sus et]. Blue brackets are placed above the notes. A blue dashed line with an arrow indicates a melodic shift in the top staff.

LENE SPIRAT SPIRITUS

Conductus (H16/194)

F, f. 273v (7,9)

- | | | |
|-----|---|--|
| I | Lene spirat spiritus, missus et divinitus,
pluit ros in virgine[m]. | Gently breathes the Spirit,
and, sent from heaven above,
3 dew rains down upon a virgin. |
| II | Fecundatur virgo rore, pretermisso tamen more,
nobis parit hominem. | The virgin conceives from the dew,
and, custom being overlooked,
6 bears for us a man. |
| III | Orta dies celebris; nobis dat in tenebris
lucis plenitudinem. | A day of renown has dawned;
it confers on us the fullness
9 of light within the shadows. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 9, f. 273v: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with this manuscript's standard array of a large painted filigreed initial for I and black-ink capitals for subsequent stanzas.

Wl, fasc. 9, no. 55, f. 138v (129v): a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with a large painted initial for Strophe I that looks rather like an "I," a large decorated initial for III (as if it were the start of a work), and a guide letter, but nothing else, for II.

Ma, fasc. 3, no. 13, f. 49v: a2; Strophes I-III, complete; no initials or guide letters whatsoever.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Verse structure: The strophic division proposed here is prompted, as usual, by the capital initials in F for Strophes II and III, supported by indications in the other sources. It is also conceivable that this poem was considered a single nine-line stanza; the poetic structure of II (2[8p]+7pp) contrasts with the 3(7pp) isosyllabism of I and III. Textual notes: 3-4: for the figure of the grace of God coming to mankind in the form of dew, cf. Isaiah, 45:8: "rorate caeli desuper," ("heavens, rain down dew from above") used, among other places, as an introit text for Marian masses during Advent. Dew also frequently figures as an allegory of the virgin birth, as in the story of Gideon's fleece from Judges, 6:36-40; the fleece itself, soaked by the dew without ever lying open to it, is a figure of the Virgin Mary that represents her preserved chastity; see also the conductus Fulget in propatulo (H17/134), lines 9-12, and the opening of Gedeonis area (F15/143). 5: the breaking of the boundaries of custom is a frequent conceit that expresses the astounding event of Mary's bearing of Jesus. For just a few more specimens of this commonly encountered paradox among the Parisian musical repertory, see the motets Stupeat natura / Latus (vdW 232/M14), lines 1-3; Homo quam sit pura / Latus, (vdW 231/M14, a contrafact of the previous piece), lines 13-14; the conductus O felix Bitura (E8/232), lines 24-26; Sonet vox ecclesie sonet (I28/337), line 4; and the opening lines of De nature fracto iure (I18/80); Parit preter morem (E12/261); and Nove geniture (I13/224). 7: Anderson (NDRC, 3:xxiv), suggests this line refers to the feast of the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin; but as the poem refers clearly to the incarnation of Jesus, an association with the Annunciation seems more apropos, whether or not this piece suggests a particular liturgical focus. 8-9: this figure of light within shadow in connection with the birth of Jesus most directly suggests John, 1:5: “Et lux in tenebris lucet et tenebrae eam non comprehenderunt” (“And the light shines in the darkness, and the darkness did not comprehend it”); see also the related expressions in 2 Peter, 1:19; Luke, 1:79; and Isaiah, 60:3.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 3,1: F: pluens; adopted reading from W1, Ma. 3,4: F, W1, Ma: “virgine” appears in all three sources, the editorial emendation adopted here (grammatically appropriate whether with the accusative case or the ablative, which may explain the extant MS readings) proposes the same end-rhyme for all three stanzas, which seems defensible, especially considering the possibility of an omitted abbreviation stroke over the final “e.” On the other hand, Ma offers “plenitudine” for 9,2, which seems to imply identical last-line rhyme for Strophes I and III, thus setting them apart from II in rhyme scheme as well as poetic organization. Nevertheless, despite such congruity in Ma, the adoption of its reading for Strophe III would result in a rather awkward grammatical rendering without a direct object for the verb. MUSIC: Line 2,1-2: the setting of “missus et” and the two cauda phrases immediately following are rendered slightly differently in each of the three sources; see the alternatives given at the end of the transcription. Cauda on line 6,3: T: F: beginning with the second note of the second phrase (at L8), four notes are 3 higher (=d’edc) before the change of folio; corrected via W1, Ma.

ISTA DIES CELEBRARI
Conductus (H30/189)

F, f. 274v (7,10)

I

D [I - sta di - es ce-le-bra - ri pro-me-re - tur et a - ma -

T [I - sta di - es ce-le-bra - ri pro-me-re - tur et a - ma -

- ri fe-sta su - per o - mni - a.

- ri fe-sta su - per o - mni - a.

II

D To - tus mun - dus e-la-bo - ret ut ex-tol - lat et ho - no -

T To - tus mun - dus e-la-bo - ret ut ex-tol - lat et ho - no -

- ret chri-sti na - ta - li - ci - a.

- ret chri-sti na - ta - li - ci - a.

III

D Pu-er nat-us de vir - gi - ne vir-tu - te san - cti flam-mi - nis sa - cri fon-tis

T Pu-er nat-us de vir - gi - ne vir-tu - te san - cti flam-mi - nis sa - cri fon-tis

a - sper - gi - ne pur - ga -

a - sper - gi - ne pur - ga -

- vit cul - pam ho -

- vit cul - pam ho -

W1, Wood 591 supply alternative readings; see at end*

- mi-nis.
- mi-nis.

IV

Me - mo - re - mus et a-me - mus ma - gna-li - a
Me - mo - re - mus et a-me - mus ma - gna-li - a pi - i de - i sum - ma spe - i con - stan - ti - a.

pi - i de - i sum - ma spe - i con - stan - ti - a.

V

Sit in - tror - sum cor se - ve - rum cor sin - ce - rum. cor si - ne
Sit in - tror - sum cor se - ve - rum cor sin - ce - rum. cor si - ne con - ta - gi - o.

con - ta - gi - o.

VI

Ser - mo de - i con - for - me - tur. nec a cor - de se - que -
Ser - mo de - i con - for - me - tur. nec a cor - de se - que -

-stre - tur o-ris at-te-sta - ti-o. [f]

-stre - tur o-ris at-te-sta - ti-o.

[f] [g]

VII

Vo - ce pur - ga - ti pe - cto - ris de sor - de [B'] [g]

Vo - ce pur - ga - ti pe - cto - ris de sor - de fe - di cor - po - ris re - gni ca-ren - tis ter - mi - no.

fe - di cor - po - ris re - gni ca-ren - tis ter - mi - no.

Be - ne-di - ca - mus do -

Be - ne-di - ca - mus do -

W1 ligates this final cauda differently, allowing other conceivable rhythmic interpretations, see the end of the transcription; W1 and Wood 591 have no signatures for the cauda

[F] [E] [F] [E]

Musical score for the first system, showing two staves with vocal lines and lyrics "- mi -" and "- no." The notation includes various rhythmic values and phrasing marks.

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*Cauda on line 10,3 ("ho[minis]"), closing Strophe III

a. WI, f. 169r (160r), III – with the D read strictly in mode 1, T with occasional irregularities (gives same results as in F, Ma – Wood 591 different)

Musical score for alternative reading a, showing two staves with vocal lines and lyrics "[ho -" and "- mi - nis.]. The notation includes various rhythmic values and phrasing marks, with some notes marked with 'b' and 'c'.

b. WI, f. 169r (160r), III – with the T read strictly in mode 1, D in faster values (with irregular reading for end of third D phrase)

Musical score for alternative reading b, showing two staves with vocal lines and lyrics "[ho -" and "- mi - nis.]. The notation includes various rhythmic values and phrasing marks, with some notes marked with 'b' and 'c'.

c. Wood 591, f. 4r, III – with differing, more consonant readings in both parts

| D: opening different in other MSS | D: close different in other MSS | T: a completely different phrase in other MSS | D: close different in other MSS | T: a completely different phrase from other MSS

Musical score for alternative reading c, showing two staves with vocal lines and lyrics "[ho -" and "- mi - nis.]. The notation includes various rhythmic values and phrasing marks, with some notes marked with 'b' and 'c'.

Closing section of final cauda, line 25,2 ("[do]mino"), concluding Strophe VII: WI, f. 169v (160v), V

a. reading in mode 2

Musical score for alternative reading a, showing two staves with vocal lines and lyrics "(do) -" and "(do) -". The notation includes various rhythmic values and phrasing marks, with some notes marked with 'F' and 'E'.

Musical score for the final system, showing two staves with vocal lines and lyrics "[mi -" and "- no.]. The notation includes various rhythmic values and phrasing marks.

b. reading in “upbeat” mode 1

Musical score for Soprano (S) and Tenor (T) parts. The Soprano part is on a treble clef staff with a 2/8 time signature. The Tenor part is on a bass clef staff with a 2/8 time signature. Both parts feature a melodic line with eighth notes and quarter notes. The Soprano part has a red box containing 'F' above the first measure and another red box containing 'F'' above the 11th measure. The Tenor part has a red box containing 'E' above the first measure and another red box containing 'E'' above the 11th measure. Below the Soprano staff, the text '(do) -' is written. Below the Tenor staff, the text '(do) -' is written. Blue brackets are placed above the notes in both parts, and blue dashed lines connect notes across measures.

Musical score for Soprano (S) and Tenor (T) parts. The Soprano part is on a treble clef staff with a 2/8 time signature. The Tenor part is on a bass clef staff with a 2/8 time signature. Both parts feature a melodic line with eighth notes and quarter notes. The Soprano part has a red box containing '[mi -' above the 11th measure and another red box containing '- no.]' above the 12th measure. The Tenor part has a red box containing '- mi -' below the 11th measure and another red box containing '- no.' below the 12th measure. Blue brackets are placed above the notes in both parts, and blue dashed lines connect notes across measures.

ISTA DIES CELEBRARI
Conductus (H30/189)

F, f. 274v (7,10)

I	Ista dies celebrari promeretur et amari festa super omnia.		This feast day deserves to be celebrated and beloved beyond all others.
II	Totus mundus elaboret, ut extollat et honoret Christi natalicia.	5	Let the whole world endeavor to extol and honor Christ's day of birth.
III	Puer, natus de virgine virtute sancti flammis, sacri fontis aspergine purgavit culpam hominis.	10	A child, born of a virgin through the power of the Holy Spirit, has purged the fault of mankind through the sprinkling of a sacred spring.
IV	Memoremus et amemus magnalia pii dei summa spei constantia.		Let us remember and love the mighty works of merciful God, with the utmost steadfastness of hope.
V	Sit introrsum cor severum, cor sincerum, cor sine contagio.	15	Let there be within an austere heart, a sincere heart, a heart without blemish.
VI	Sermo dei conformetur, nec a corde sequestretur oris attestatio.	20	Let the word of God be skillfully fashioned, and let not the testimony of the mouth be separated from the heart.
VII	Voce purgati pectoris de sorde fedi corporis, regni carentis termino		With the voice of a breast cleansed from the filth of a foul body, Let us bless the Lord
BD	Benedicamus domino.	25	of the kingdom that has no end.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 10, f. 274v: a2, Strophes I-VII and BD, complete, with subsequent stanzas and BD indicated by capitals.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 83, f. 168v (159v): a2, Strophes I-VII and BD, complete; the second and fifth stanzas show no special demarcations, beginning with regularly formed letters, and the one for Strophe V appears slightly worn or faded; the others are painted, except for an apparent guide letter opening VII and the capital at the start of the BD at line 25.

Ma, fasc. 3, no. 17, f. 56r: a2, Strophes I-VII and BD, complete; no opening initial or guide letters supplied for Strophes II-III, VI-VII; IV has a large painted and filigreed capital, V an uppercase initial; the text of the closing BD shows no special treatment whatsoever.

Wood 591 (GB-Ob [pr. bk.] Wood 591; OxWood), no. 6, f. 4r:¹ a2, Strophes I-VII and BD, essentially complete despite the trimming of the margins, with no special treatment of the opening letters of Strophe II or the Benedicamus, but with painted initials for all other stanzas, except VII, which begins with a capital. Perhaps because this source first came to light as a set of flyleaves bound into a sixteenth-century printed book, the modern numbering of its folios (as given in DIAMM) is reversed from the original sequence, so Ista dies runs through folios 4r, 3v, and 3r in turn. The trimming of the right margin of f. 4r comes close to cutting off the T ligature over “ho[noret]” at line 5,3, but the entire figure can be construed; similarly, on the final page (f. 3r), the last text syllable of the poem at line 25,2 and any notational figures above it have been trimmed away. Folios 3v and 4r (as well as other leaves in this source) have marginal jottings in English in a hand (or hands) from the late sixteenth century. Folio 3v, for example, contains the names of Edward Ferrers and Richard Lane written several times, along with short phrases such as “so be it,” “amen,” and others. Folio 3r has at the bottom: “on sunday the xxxth of July in the yeare of oure Lord one thousand five hundred foure score and xii the xxxiiiith of quene elisabeth.”²

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1-3: as clarified by line 6, the occasion of the feast is Christmas. 7: cf. Isaiah, 9:6: “Parvulus enim natus est nobis, et filius datus est nobis ...” (“For a child is born to us, and a son is given to us ...”); and Isaiah, 7:14: “... ecce virgo concipiet, et pariet filium...” (“... Behold a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son ...”). 8: cf. Luke, 1:35.³ 9-10: this image has several possible areas of significance: it may refer to baptism, to the blood of Christ shed to redeem mankind (cf. Hebrews, 9:13-14),⁴ or to Christ himself (see Revelation, 21:6).⁵ For images of Christ and the Holy Spirit as water (fons, rivulus, flumen) drawn from the Allegoriae of ¹Pieces are numbered according to the description in RISM. The folio numbering in RISM (as explained further in the description of this source) is not indicative of the original MS order; as it states on the DIAMM site: “f. 1-2v is really f. 2v-1, since these pages are upside down in the source. Moreover, rectos are really versos and vice versa.” The MS preserves 7 conductus, nos. 5-7 belonging to the Notre Dame repertory. Nos. 1-4 are English pieces.

²Despite some difficulty in making out the exact day of the month here – and assuming the writer is not mistaken – 30 July 1592 does correspond to a Sunday at the end of July in the 34th year of the reign of Elizabeth I in the old Julian calendar (which England followed until 1752) and thus gives the most satisfactory result.

³Luke, 1:35: “Et respondens angelus dixit ei: Spiritus Sanctus superveniet in te, et virtus Altissimi obumbrabit tibi. Ideoque et quod nascetur ex te sanctum, vocabitur Filius Dei” (“And the angel answering, said to her: The Holy Spirit shall come upon you, and the power of the most High shall overshadow you. And therefore also the holy one which shall be born of you shall be called the Son of God.”).

⁴Hebrews, 9:13-14: “Si enim sanguis hircorum et taurorum, et cinis vitulae aspersus inquinatos sanctificat ad emundationem carnis: quanto magis sanguis Christi, qui per Spiritum Sanctum semetipsum obtulit immaculatum Deo, emundabit conscientiam nostram ab operibus mortuis, ad serviendum Deo viventi?” (“For if the blood of goats and of oxen, and the ashes of a heifer being sprinkled, may sanctify such as are defiled, to the cleansing of the flesh: how much more shall the blood of Christ, who by the Holy Spirit offered himself unspotted unto God, cleanse our conscience from dead works, to serve the living God?”)

⁵Revelation, 21:6: “Et dixit mihi: Factum est: ego sum alpha et omega, initium et finis. Ego sitienti dabo de fonte aquae vitae, gratis” (“And he said to me: ‘It is done. I am Alpha and Omega; the beginning and the end. To him that thirsts, I will give from the fountain of the water of life, freely.’”).

Rabanus Maurus, see David A. Traill, “Biblical Exegesis,” 334.⁶ 19: possibly a reference to the execution of readings during liturgical celebrations, urging that they be performed with aplomb; cf. 1 Peter, 4:11.⁷

Observations and Variants: TEXT: Reflecting somewhat the form of the music (q.v. below), the poetic schemes of Strophe I=II=VI and III=VII; and although they begin with similar music, the schemes of Strophes IV and V are notably divergent from all other stanzas and from themselves. 15,2: F: introsum; adopted reading from W1, Wood 591; Ma has introssum. MUSIC: Motivic sharing with other works: The opening T phrase presents a case of a musical gesture that appears multiple times throughout the conductus repertory, in both melismatic and syllabic contexts, as follows: a. Tr of opening phrase in opening cauda in Dic Christi veritas (C3/94) – a3 – F-6,3; b. a prominent motive found in various cauda of Ave Maris stella virgo (D1/34) – a3 – F-6,17; c. T in opening motive of penultimate phrase in final cauda of Ave presul gloriose (F20/36) – a3 – F-6,48; d. D of “Ista dies ce[lebrari]” (line 1,1-2) of Ista dies celebrari (H30/189) – a2 – F-7,10; e. T of opening phrase in final cauda of Nobilitas animi (J8/220) – a2 – F-7,50; f. opening phrase of Tr in Omni pene curie (I34/252) – a2 – F-7,99. Musical repetition: There is much larger-scale internal repetition in this piece, marked in this instance by upper-case letters above the respective staves. The T of Strophe I=II, and III=VI, while the opening phrases of IV=V, resulting in AABCC’DB’. Additionally, the two-voice double cursus of the closing cauda furnishes EE’ (with FF’ in the D). This leaves VI (D) as something of a musical stand-alone, despite its structural connections to the poetry of I and II. Occasionally smaller-scale repeated segments may arise in the D as well as the T voice; these also have been signaled above the staves in lower case letters. Cauda on Line 10,1: the different length of the longer rest in this short melisma on “[pur]ga[vit]” is actually distinguished in Ma by a double stroke, the only time this type of indication appears in this piece within this source, although other ternary-long rests are required elsewhere (such as in the closing cauda). Cauda on line 10,3 (closing Strophe III): T: W1: the third and fifth phrases of the passage on “ho[minis]” are ligated as if to be read in rhythmic mode 1; this will not fit with the D material if it is read in a consistent manner. In contrast to all other sources, Wood 591 has different material altogether for these two passages, which happens to improve the harmony; see the alternative renditions given at the end of the transcription. Cauda on line 12: T: F: for the four repeated d’s separated by strokes in the first phrase of this short cauda on “[magna]li[a],” all other sources have only three (=L,B,L), and only W1 also includes intervening strokes. Final cauda (on line 25,2, closing Strophe VII): the Benedicamus conclusion, not based on any other known source, is found in all MSS, and fits the poetry. TD: W1: here the ligation is different from all other sources; each pair of si appears as 2li, while the 3li or 3C figures remain as is. This may not, on the face of it, suggest an alternative rhythmic mode, as the 2li may be read here as LL; nonetheless, different interpretations are conceivable, and two have been supplied at the end of the transcription. Neither W1 nor Wood 591 displays b-flat signatures throughout this cauda.

⁶ David A. Traill, “Biblical Exegesis and Medieval Latin Lyric: Interpretational Problems in Nutante mundi cardine, Relegentur ab area and Vite perditae,” The Journal of Medieval Latin, 17 (2007): 329-341.

⁷ 1 Peter, 4:11: “Si quis loquitur, quasi sermones Dei: si quis ministrat, tamquam ex virtute, quam administrat Deus: ut in omnibus honorificetur Deus per Jesum Christum: cui est gloria et imperium in saecula saeculorum. Amen” (“If any man speak, let him speak, as the words of God. If any man minister, let him do it, as of the power, which God administers: that in all things God may be honored through Jesus Christ: to whom is glory and empire for ever and ever. Amen.”).

CONDIMENTUM NOSTRE SPEI

Conductus (H8/67)

F, f. 276r (7,11)

[Con - di-men-tum] [Con] - di-men-tum

Con - di-men-tum [Con] - di-men-tum

no - stre spe-i ca-ro nu - pta ver - bo de-i. san-ctum pneu - ma spi-

no - stre spe-i ca-ro nu - pta ver - bo de-i. san-ctum pneu - ma spi-

[spi] - rans e - i

[spi] - rans e - i

pa - ter au - ctor tan - te re-i. Hec

pa - ter au - ctor tan - te re-i. Hec

ce - li sol - vit ad -

ce - li sol - vit ad -

- i - tus

- i - tus

per e - vam clau - - sos pri - mi-tus fit mors mor-tis di - vi-ni-tus. ut no-ster vi-vat spi - ri-tus

fru - - ens

*F, Ma: cauda in mode 2; W1, Oxf-Sol: in mode 1; see the alternative reading at the end pa-ce iu - bi - le - - si si si si

- i. - i.

D
 II Non - [Non]-dum ly - a lu - cta ca-ret.

T
 Non - [Non]-dum ly - a lu - cta ca-ret.

b le-vum ia-cob fe - mur a-ret O [O]

a le-vum ia-cob fe - mur a-ret O [O]

d si chri-stus hoc sa-na-ret; nul - lo mo - do clau-di-ca- [c]

e si chri-stus hoc sa-na-ret; nul - lo mo - do clau-di-ca-

d'
 - ret. hic est ce - lo-rum ti - tu - lus at - que ter - ra-rum o - cu-lus.

e
 - ret. hic est ce - lo-rum ti - tu - lus at - que ter - ra-rum o - cu-lus.

b fit an-gu-la - ris cal-cu-lus ut iu-de - o-rum

fit an-gu-la - ris cal-cu-lus ut iu-de - o-rum

g po - pu-lus se gen - ti - li co - pu-la- [h]

f po - pu-lus se gen - ti - li co - pu-lathe labeled portions of the final cauda repeat segments from earlier caudae in Strophe II

ALTERNATIVE READING:

*Cauda ending line 9,3 (closing Strophe I): OxAuct, f. 2v (=Oxf-Sol, no. 3) – version in mode 1 (=WI):

CONDIMENTUM NOSTRE SPEI

Conductus (H8/67)

F, f. 276r (7,11)

- | | |
|--|---|
| I Condimentum nostre spei
caro nupta verbo dei, sanctum pneuma spirans ei,
pater auctor tante rei. Hec celi solvit aditus,
per Evam clausos primitus.
Fit mors mortis divinitus,
ut noster vivat spiritus, fruens pace iubilei. II Nondum Lya lucta caret;
levum Iacob femur aret. O, si Christus hoc sanaret, nullo modo claudicaret!
Hic est celorum titulus atque terrarum oculus.
Fit angularis calculus ut Iudeorum populus se gentili copularet. | The seasoning of our hope is the flesh married to God's Word,
the Holy Spirit inspiring it, and the Father as author of this great event. 5 It unbars heaven's gates, closed since time gone by because of Eve.
Death's own death divinely comes to pass,
so that our spirit may live, enjoying a jubilee's peace. 10 Not yet is Leah free from the wrestling match, and Jacob's left thigh is withered. Oh, if Christ would only heal it, never would he limp again!
He is the pillar of the heavens and the eye of the earth.
He becomes a cornerstone so that the Jewish people might join themselves to the Gentiles. |
|--|---|

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 11, f. 276r: a2; Strophes I-II, complete, with capital letters beginning lines 5 and 12 as well as 10 (Strophe II), reflected in the text above by additional line breaks.

WI, fasc. 9, no. 42, f. 123r (114r): a2; Strophes I-II, complete, with a larger painted initial beginning lines 1 and 14, with a smaller one opening 10 (Strophe II).

Ma, fasc. 3, no. 10, f. 45r: a2; Strophes I-II, complete; opening initial never accomplished, but a filigreed one is supplied for line 10 to signal Strophe II.

Oxf-Sol,¹ no. 3 (= OxAuct no. 3), opening the piece on the leaf given as f. 2r (= pag. 3) on the CPI website and in the DIAMM inventory, and continuing on to f. 2v (= pag. 4), starting with line 5,4 (“aditus”);² further material

¹This siglum as used here brings together the related fragments now preserved in Oxford, Bodleian Library, Auct. Q.3.17 (GB-Ob [pr. bk.] Auct. 6 Q.3.17; OxAuct) and CH-MSbk S.231 (Mariastein, Benediktinerkloster, S.231), the latter olim: Solothurn, Zentralbibliothek, S. 231 (Sol). The numbering and sequence of the items in this reconstituted source derives from the more complete combined listing in Everist, “A Reconstructed Source,” 107 (Table 2).

²In the accompanying descriptions of the images when they are viewed at DIAMM, however, the larger leaf that contains the start of the piece (f.2r) is described as “folio front endpaper recto + stub (pag. 6 & 3)” – with “pag. 3” (the right half of the larger folio) containing the start of the work in question here – while “fol. ir” appears on the identifying label printed upon the image itself. Similarly, the continuation (f. 2v) is described as “folio front endpaper verso (pag. 4 & 5)” and as “fol. i v” on the image label – with “pag. 4” (the left side of the larger folio) containing the residuum of Condimentum. Folios 2r and 2v in the description above thus contain the portions labeled as “pag. 3” and “pag. 4” in the images section of this source in DIAMM.

from f. 2r has been transferred via mirror-image offset to the front binding board³ that it was originally pasted to as a flyleaf: a2; fragmentary; text and music mostly preserved from the beginning of the piece up through the figure immediately following the melisma over line 12,1 (“O [si christus]” of Strophe II), although the remains of the text and music of lines 4-5,3 (at the bottom of the opening leaf) are heavily damaged and very difficult to make out. Within the remains of the verbal text, the final letter/syllable of Strophe I is written overly large, and a large capital opens Strophe II.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1-4: each member of the Trinity surfaces in this opening stanza. 5-6: although the “hec” of line 5,1 might conceivably refer to the Virgin (especially in view of the fact that a contrasting mention of Eve immediately follows) and could be rendered as “she,” it seems more likely that the antecedent is the “great event” (“tante rei”) in line 4. The subsequent reference to Eve in line 6 relates to the inculcation of original sin as described in Genesis, 3. 7: for the frequently encountered conceit of death being overcome by death (i.e., by Jesus’s sacrifice and resurrection), see Hebrews, 2:14-15; Romans, 6:9; 1 Corinthians, 15:26-27, 54-55. 9: see Leviticus, 25:10-17, which describes the fifty-year jubilee cycle and how it is celebrated. For further references to the year of jubilee in the Parisian conductus repertory, see the notes to the text of O crux ave spes unica (H4/230), line 27, and Anni favor iubilei (J25/16), lines 1-2. Additional mention of jubilees appears in the conductus Adest annus iubileus (J56/8), line 1, Sol de sole progrediens (Q03/-), lines 46-47; and Nunc angelorum gloria (L98/-), in the final lines of either Strophe II or IV, depending on the specific version of the text. 10-13: symbolic of the Jews’ refusal to embrace Christ. Leah was a wife of Jacob (see Genesis, 29:5-30:35). She was deceitfully married to him after he had labored for seven years in the fields of her father Laban in an attempt to marry her younger sister Rachel, which Jacob eventually accomplished after another seven years of toil under Laban. Jacob’s first children were with Leah; he then had offspring with Rachel’s as well as Leah’s servants, before Rachel gave birth to her first child, Joseph, Jacob’s favorite (Genesis, 37:3). Leah and Rachel are frequently described in medieval exegesis as figures of Synagogue and Church, or of Jews and Gentiles, respectively (see Anderson, NDRC, 3:xvii, note 4; and my remarks on the text of the conductus Excitatur caritas in Yericho [F30/111], lines 3-6, which rely on Anderson’s source). For the wrestling match invoked in line 10, see Genesis, 32:24-32, where Jacob tussles with an angel (cf. Hosea, 12:4) who wounds a tendon in Jacob’s thigh, withering it and rendering him lame. Nonetheless, Jacob ends up successful in the competition; he thereupon compels his opponent to bless him, which he does, and the angel furthermore changes Jacob’s name to Israel. The biblical citation, though, unlike the conductus, does not specify which of Jacob’s legs was wounded, and the fact that the injury here affects his left thigh (“levum ... femur”) appears significant given the common negative associations of left versus right. The same biblical passage concerning the wrestling match also contains an explanation of a Jewish dietary restriction, mentioned in Genesis, 32:32, which says that, as a result of the struggle with the angel, the children of Israel do not eat the corresponding tendons of other animals, thus making even more clear the association of the poem’s image with the Jews. Based on the references to Isidore of Seville’s Quaestiones in Vetus Testamentum, given in Anderson, NDRC, 3:xvii, note 5,⁴ which elaborates upon this theme, the allusions to the struggle in lines 10-12 of the conductus suggest that Leah, representing the Jews, has not prevailed fully in (or has not completed) the contest with the angel; furthermore, the fact that Jacob/Israel still limps after the match indicates that he still requires acceptance of grace from Christ to be fully mended. 14: The use of the word “titulus” conveys a number of meanings; perhaps in the immediate context of the conductus poem, placed as it is before the image of the cornerstone that appears in line 16, the particular connotation here might suggest a type of pillar or monument such as the one erected by Jacob as the result of the vision of the heavenly ladder he experienced in Genesis, 28:10-22; see especially in this regard Genesis, 28:18 and 28:22, which refer specifically to the erection of the pillar (“titulus”) of stone.⁵ Medieval exegetes saw this stone, along with a similar one erected by Samuel in 1 Kings (1 Samuel), 7:10-13, as a figure for Christ. For supporting statements and additional explanations that likely relate to the image of the “celorum titulus,” see the remarks for line 16, below, and in particular the notes on the text for the conductus Lex honus importabile (I19/197), lines 15-20. 16: for Christ as a cornerstone, see 1 Peter, 2:6, which assembles additional images of stones seen to prefigure Christ and the new covenant: the cornerstone of the foundation (Isaiah, 28:16; 1 Corinthians, 3:11; Ephesians, 2:20), and the stone initially rejected by builders which ends up being the cornerstone (Psalm, 117:22; Matthew, 21:42,44; Mark, 12:10; Luke, 20:17; Acts, 4:11). For further images along these lines in the conductus repertory, cf. lines 5-8 of De monte lapis scinditur (D2/79), which describes the cornerstone of Solomon’s temple, and the treatment of different biblical figures involving stones and rocks in Lex honus importabile (I19/197), lines 15-20.

³Described in the images of this source in DIAMM as “folio front board offset.”

⁴Anderson’s reference to the column number of PL 83 should read “col. 266,” not “206.”

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. MUSIC: Syllabic/Melismatic identity: The first three T notes (c, d, e) over “claudica[ret]” (line 13,3) follow immediately as the opening motives of the first two phrases of the following cauda; they also (with a different rhythmic profile and with identity of the D as well) close the first phrase. This same music then appears again halfway through the closing cauda of the piece on line 18,3, with voice exchange and re-exchange. The identity is indeed very short and possibly coincidental, but it does seem to lead strikingly into the cauda that begins with the same gesture. Structurally, the identical passages appear just before the change to a new rhyme sound within the strophe, and recur at the end of the last strophe when the same prior rhyme returns after an absence of four lines. These and other correspondences are signaled in the transcription. For further information on the music contained in these passages, see the remarks below on the final cauda of the piece. Cauda on line 6,3: T: F, Ma, Oxf-Sol: rest stroke after the first phrase of “clau[sos]” om; from WI. A reading as it stands in the other MSS could be accomplished by leaving out the first rest and doubling the value of the second; this tactic may even be implied by the palpably longer existing rest stroke in Oxf-Sol. Cauda ending line 9,3 (closing Strophe I): this melisma on “[iubi]le[i]” features modal transmutation between the two pairs of sources WI and Oxf-Sol (in mode 1), and F and Ma (in mode 2); the alternative reading appears at the end of the transcription. D: F: b-flat signatures in this voice appear throughout the cauda in WI; Ma omits a sig at the system change starting at L38 of the cauda, after the applicable appearances of b’s in this D passage; Oxf-Sol has a b-natural sign at L27 in the melisma, valid up to the cauda at line 12,1. Final cauda ending line 18,3 (closing Strophe II): the melisma on “[copu]la[ret]” opens with a phrase that immediately exchange its voices; it then extensively recycles cauda material presented earlier within Strophe II: 1) the next 12L exactly recall the shorter cauda on line 12,1 (“O [si christus],” 2) then two phrases follow that replicate the prior cauda on “[claudi]ca[ret]” from line 13,3, along with its varied voice exchange; the spate of recollected material then concludes with 3) an exact repeat of the short cauda on line 17,3 (“populus”), including its final two syllables earlier set cum littera. The last two phrases of the final cauda, along with the concluding punctus organi, are not found elsewhere in the piece. As a result only the first and final phrases of the cauda are not derived from elsewhere in Strophe II; the correspondences have been marked in the score.

⁵Genesis, 28:18: “Surgens ergo Jacob mane, tulit lapidem quem supposuerat capiti suo, et erexit in titulum, fundens oleum desuper.” (“And Jacob, arising in the morning, took the stone, which he had laid under his head, and set it up for a title, pouring oil upon the top of it.”); Genesis 28:22: “... et lapis iste, quem erexi in titulum, vocabitur Domus Dei: cunctorumque quae dederis mihi, decimas offeram tibi.” (“... And this stone, which I have set up for a title, shall be called the house of God: and of all things that you shall give to me, I will offer tithes (i.e., a tenth-part) to you.”).

RELEGATA VETUSTATE
Conductus (H23/303)

F, f. 277r (7,12)*

D
I
T
[Re -
Re -

*T: rhythm for this phrase after Ma, see alternatives at end

a'
a

[Re]-le - ga - ta ve - tu - sta - te ve - tus ho - mo re - no - ve - tur.
[Re]-le - ga - ta ve - tu - sta - te ve - tus ho - mo re - no - ve - tur.

ut in san - cta no - vi - ta -
ut in san - cta no - vi - ta -

TD: W1 and Oxf-Sol have a different rendering of this phrase; see at end

Ma:

- te san - ctum pa - scha
- te san - ctum pa - scha

b

ce - le - bre - tur.
ce - le - bre - tur.

c
c'

*Alternative readings for the opening cauda, or portions within it, are possible; see the end of the transcription et in ma-lis de-for - ma - -tus chri - -sto psal - lat

et in ma-lis de-for - ma - -tus chri - -sto psal - lat

re-for - ma -

re-for - ma -

-tus. ut e - i -dem con-for-me -

-tus. ut e - i -dem con-for-me -

b'

b'''

- tur.

- tur.

Nec [Nec] te cre-das

Nec [Nec] te cre-das

re - no - va - ri. ni - si pri - us ex - pur - ga - ri men - tem ve - lis a fer -

re - no - va - ri. ni - si pri - us ex - pur - ga - ri men - tem ve - lis a fer -

-men - to.

-men - to.

qui - a ve - rus a - gnus sum me - men - to. pro te pas - sus

qui - a ve - rus a - gnus sum me - men - to. pro te pas - sus

in - mo - la -

in - mo - la -

-ri.

-ri.

III
D
T

Ve- re lu-cis
Ve- re lu-cis

ma - tu - ti - no non le - ga - li sed di - vi - no a - gno
ma - tu - ti - no non le - ga - li sed di - vi - no a - gno

de - cet re - sur - ge - f de - cet re - sur - ge -

- re cor - de o - re et o - pe - re sic
- re cor - de o - re et o - pe - re sic

- re cor - de o - re et o - pe - re sic
- re cor - de o - re et o - pe - re sic

BD
D
T

Be - ne - di - ca - mus do - h
Be - ne - di - ca - mus do -

First system of musical notation. The vocal line (top) contains a red box with the letter 'h' under a note. The lute line (bottom) has a red box with the letter 'i' under a note. Blue brackets are placed above the notes in both staves.

Second system of musical notation. The vocal line (top) has a red box with the letter 'i' under a note. The lute line (bottom) has a red box with the letter 'i' under a note. Blue brackets are placed above the notes in both staves.

Third system of musical notation. The vocal line (top) has a red box with the letter 'i' under a note. The lute line (bottom) has a red box with the letter 'j' under a note. Blue brackets are placed above the notes in both staves.

Fourth system of musical notation. The vocal line (top) has a red box with the letter 'j' under a note. The lute line (bottom) has a red box with the letter 'j' under a note. Blue brackets are placed above the notes in both staves.

Fifth system of musical notation. The vocal line (top) includes the lyrics "- mi -" and "- no.]" in blue. The lute line (bottom) includes the lyrics "- mi -" and "- no." in blue. Blue brackets are placed above the notes in both staves.

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*First phrase of opening cauda: Ma, f. 2v (in mode 1) – 3si begin T

Alternative musical notation for the first phrase of the opening cauda. The vocal part (D) is shown with a blue bracket and the label "[Re(legata)]". The lute part (T) is shown with a blue bracket and the label "Re(legata)".

*Opening cauda in mode 3, F, f. 277r

|D: W1, Ma: no stroke

D [Re(legata)]

T Re(legata)

|T: rhythm for this phrase after Ma, see alternatives below

a

a'

*Closing phrases of opening cauda with ligations differing from F and Ma; after W1, f. 150r (141r)

a. in mode 1

b. in mode 3

D [Re(legata)]

T (Re(legata))

c. with faster values in mode 1

[Re(legata)]

(Re(legata))

a

a'

si si

Cauda at line 3,4, different ligations for last phrase, after W1, Oxf-Sol, from W1, f 150r (141r)

|TD: W1, Oxf-Sol: differs here from F, Ma

D [no - vi - ta - te]

T no - vi - ta - te

or:

or:

RELEGATA VETUSTATE

Conductus (H23/303)

F, f. 277r (7,12)

- | | |
|---|---|
| I Relegata vetustate, vetus homo renovetur, ut in sancta novitate sanctum pascha celebretur;
et in malis deformatus Christo psallat, reformatus, ut eidem conformetur. | Now that the Old Law is banished,
let the old self be renewed,
so that, in holy newness, the holy Passover may be celebrated;
5 and one who was deformed through evil things, may now, being reformed, sing to Christ,
in order to conform to him. |
| II Nec te credas renovari nisi prius expurgari mentem velis a fermento.
Quia verus agnus sum memento, pro te passus inmolari. | And do not trust that you are renewed unless you are already willing that your mind 10 be purged of the old leaven.
For remember, I am the true lamb that suffered to be sacrificed for your sake. |
| III Vere lucis matutino, non legali sed divino,
agno decet resurgere;
corde, ore, et opere,
sic Benedicamus domino. | Early in the morning of the true light,
not of the law, but of the divine, 15 it is seemly for the lamb to rise again;
and so, with heart, with mouth, and with labor,
“Let us bless the Lord.” |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 12, f. 277r: a2, Strophes I-III, complete, with capitals heading II and III; the BD conclusion signaled by a relatively larger lower-case “b.”

Wl, fasc. 9, no. 67, f. 150r (141r): a2, Strophes I-III, complete, headed by painted initials; BD conclusion begins with an upper-case “B.”

Ma, fasc. 3, no. 3, f. 30v: a2, Strophes I-III, complete; opening initial never entered, initial for Strophe II is a large, staff-high capital; that of Strophe III is a lower-case “v” with a flourish arising from the left element of this letter; the BD conclusion begins with a noticeably larger capital “B.”

Oxf-Sol,¹ no. 16 (= Sol, no. 3), f. Ir (f. 1r on the CPI website): a2, fragmentary; the opening of the piece is lost, with the extant portions showing occasional worn or illegible patches. The remains begin in both voices with the second phrase (beginning at L5) of the cauda on the penultimate syllable of line 3,4 (“[novi]ta[te]”) and continue onto f. Iv (beginning with the last syllable of line 11,5 – “[memen]to”), before concluding at the end of the final system of the leaf.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

¹This siglum as used here brings together the related fragments now preserved in Oxford, Bodleian Library, Auct. Q.3.17 (GB-Ob [pr. bk.] Auct. 6 Q.3.17; OxAuct) and CH-MSbk S.231 (Mariastein, Benediktinerkloster, S.231), the latter olim: Solothurn, Zentralbibliothek, S. 231 (Sol). The numbering and sequence of the items in this reconstituted source derives from the more complete combined listing in Everist, “A Reconstructed Source,” 107 (Table 2).

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1: the Mosaic Law of the Old Testament has been superceded by the covenant of the New Testament; see 2 Corinthians, 5:17: “Si qua ergo in Christo nova creatura, vetera transierunt: ecce facta sunt omnia nova” (“If then any be in Christ a new creature, the old things are passed away: behold all things are made new.”). For the connotation used here of “vetustas” as signifying the old covenant of Mosaic Law, see the DLMBS section of the page at <https://logeion.uchicago.edu/vetustas>, 3,e. 2: on renewing one’s old self (“vetus homo”) to become a “new man” (“novus homo”) see Romans, 6:6,² and Colossians, 3:9-10;³ cf also Ephesians, 4:24, given in the remarks to line 8. 3: cf. Romans, 7:6.⁴ 4: the old Passover is now celebrated anew as Easter; cf. the remarks for line 10. 5-6: Note the similar juxtaposition of deformation and reformation here in the conductus Puer nobis est natus (H25/276), lines 13-14. Also cf. Colossians, 1:21: “Et vos cum essetis aliquando alienati, et inimici sensu in operibus malis ... ” (“And you, whereas you were some time alienated and enemies in mind in evil works ... ”). 7: cf. Romans, 8:29: “Nam quos praescivit, et praedestinavit conformes fieri imaginis Filii sui ...” (“For those he foreknew, he also predestined to be made conformable to the image of his Son ...”). 8: cf. Ephesians, 4:23-24.⁵ 10: see 1 Corinthians 5:7-8.⁶ 11: Christ speaks directly in this poem; cf. John, 1:29, and John, 1:36.⁷ 12: see again 1 Corinthians, 5:7, given in the remarks for line 10. 13-15: see Luke, 24, which relates the events of the morning of the Resurrection. For Christ as the true light, see John. 1:9: “Erat lux vera, quae illuminat omnem hominem venientem in hunc mundum” (“He [Christ] was the true light, which enlightens every man that comes into this world”). 16: on the collaboraion of heart and mouth, cf. Romans, 10:8, 10:10;⁸ Deuteronomy, 30:14: “Sed iuxta te est sermo valde, in ore tuo, et in corde tuo, ut facias illum” (“But the word is very close to you, in your mouth and in your heart, that you may do it”);

²Romans, 6:6: “Hoc scientes, quia vetus homo noster simul crucifixus est, ut destruat corpus peccati, et ultra non serviamus peccato” (“Knowing this, that our old self is crucified with him, that the body of sin may be destroyed, to the end that we may serve sin no longer.”).

³Colossians, 3:9-10: “Nolite mentiri invicem, expoliantes vos veterem hominem cum actibus suis, et induentes novum eum, qui renovatur in agnitionem secundum imaginem ejus qui creavit illum” (“Lie not one to another: stripping yourselves of the old man with his deeds, and putting on the new, him who is renewed unto knowledge, according to the image of him that created him.”)

⁴Romans, 7:6: “Nunc autem soluti sumus a lege mortis, in qua detinebamur, ita ut serviamus in novitate spiritus, et non in vetustate litterae” (“But now we are loosed from the law of death, wherein we were detained; so that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter.”).

⁵Ephesians, 4:23-24: “Renovamini autem spiritu mentis vestrae, et induite novum hominem, qui secundum Deum creatus est in justitia, et sanctitate veritatis.” (“And be renewed in the spirit of your mind: and put on the new man, who according to God is created in justice and holiness of truth.”).

⁶1 Corinthians 5:7-8: “Expurgate vetus fermentum, ut sitis nova conspersio, sicut estis azymi. Etenim Pascha nostrum immolatus est Christus. Itaque epulemur: non in fermento veteri, neque in fermento malitiae et nequitiae: sed in azymis sinceritatis et veritatis.” (“Purge out the old leaven, that you may be a new paste, as you are unleavened. For Christ our Passover lamb is sacrificed. Therefore let us feast, not with the old leaven, nor with the leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.”).

⁷John, 1:29: “Altera die vidit Joannes Jesum venientem ad se, et ait: Ecce agnus Dei, ecce qui tollit peccatum mundi” (“The next day, John saw Jesus coming to him, and he said: ‘Behold the Lamb of God, behold him who taketh away the sin of the world.’”). John, 1:36: “Et respiciens Jesum ambulans, dicit: Ecce agnus Dei” (“And beholding Jesus walking, he said: ‘Behold the Lamb of God.’”).

⁸Romans, 10:8: “Sed quid dicit Scriptura? Prope est verbum in ore tuo, et in corde tuo: hoc est verbum fidei, quod praedicamus.” (“But what says the scripture? The word is close to you, even in your mouth, and in your heart. This is the word of faith, which we preach.”). Romans, 10:10: “Corde enim creditur ad justitiam: ore autem confessio fit ad salutem.” (“For with the heart we believe in justice; but with the mouth confession is made for salvation.”).

Psalm 18:15;⁹ and Psalm 48:4: “Os meum loquetur sapientiam, et meditatio cordis mei prudentiam.” (“My mouth shall speak wisdom: and the meditation of my heart understanding.”). Note also the comparable expression in the conductus Resurgente domino (H18/306), line 10.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. MUSIC: Accidentals: Although there are a significant number of simultaneously sounding f and b pitches, there are relatively few consistent signals among the sources that call for the softening of this interval through the use of b b. F has no signatures at all until just before the third phrase from the end of the closing BD cauda (preceding L73), at which point it shows a b-flat in both T and D; all the other sources (W1, Ma, Oxf-Sol) show the flat here only in the D. W1 also calls for a b-flat at the beginning of line 4 (“sanctum”) in the D only; this is then canceled by means of a new clef soon after the start of the cauda (within L4) on “[cele]bre[tur]” at the line’s end; it has a further b-flat in the D before line 13,3 (“matutino”), which then disappears before “[resur]ge” in line 15. Ma, which tends otherwise to reflect F, presents a flat in the D before line 15,1 (“agno”) that is gone at line 16, 2 (“ore”). The remains of Oxf-Sol tend to have a similar disposition as W1, with a possible flat first noticeable at the start of line 4 (“sanctum”) in the D; but it also shows an additional flat in the cauda at “[cele]bre[tur]” (line 4,3) in the D exactly where W1 cancels the one it has (in L4); it also agrees with W1 with a b-flat at line 13,3 (“matutino”) in the D. Opening cauda: T: Ma: the first three notes of the first phrase are given as 3si (=3L), while W1 and F present the gesture as si,2li; the D, composed of repeated si d notes, is ambiguous, and Oxf-Sol does not transmit this portion. Mode 3 may serve just as well for realizing the cauda; see the alternative readings given at the end of the transcription; TD: the dissonant b-c dyad at L4 is in all MSS; D: F: the f that ends the penultimate cauda phrase looks like e; reading confirmed by W1, Ma. L27-34: T: the rhythm for the penultimate phrase of the cauda is taken from Ma, which consists entirely of si figures; W1 has both voices in a diminished rhythmic pattern in mode 1 or possibly 3, while F gives the D ligation of Ma, but the T ligation of W1; for attempts to render the W1 version as it stands, see the alternative readings at the end of the transcription. Cauda at line 3,4: TD: W1, Oxf-Sol: the cauda on “[novi]ta[te]” is rendered with notably different ligations in these two sources from those in F and Ma; see the alternative transcription at the end. Final cauda (BD): the Benedicamus conclusion, not based on a known preexisting source, is found in all sources and fits with the poetry.

⁹Psalm 18:15: “Et erunt ut complaceant eloquia oris mei, et meditatio cordis mei in conspectu tuo semper. Domine, adjutor meus, et redemptor meus” (“And the words of my mouth shall be such as may please; and the meditation of my heart always in your sight. O Lord, my helper, and my redeemer.”).

PATER NOSTER COMMISERANS
 Conductus (H19/266)

*F, f. 278v (7,13)

The score consists of six systems of music. Each system has two vocal staves (D and T) and a basso continuo staff. The lyrics are written below the vocal staves. Red boxes with letters (a, a', b, b', c, c', d, d') are placed above the notes to indicate formal reference letters. Blue brackets and arrows highlight specific melodic motifs and their repetitions. The lyrics are: [Pa]- a - a' - c - d - d - [Pa] - ter no - [Pa] - ter no - [no] - ster com - mi - se-rans [no] - ster com - mi - se-rans fi - li - o - rum ex - ces - si-bus; e - os fal - li con - si - de-rans fi - li - o - rum ex - ces - si-bus; e - os fal - li con - si - de-rans in pec-ca - -ti con-tra - cti-bus tu - to-rem si - bi di - in pec-ca - -ti con-tra - cti-bus tu - to-rem si - bi di - -ri - git. qui pro pu-pil - lis tran-si - git. -ri - git. qui pro pu-pil - lis tran-si - git.

*The high degree of small-scale motivic repetition that is apparent throughout this piece is provisionally demonstrated by the formal reference letters placed above the staves in the opening segment of this work. Analysis on this level is not carried out further in this transcription, except on a few occasions that show some notable instances of repetition on a larger scale.

vi - tam mor - te mer - ca - - tur.
vi - tam mor - te mer - ca - - tur.

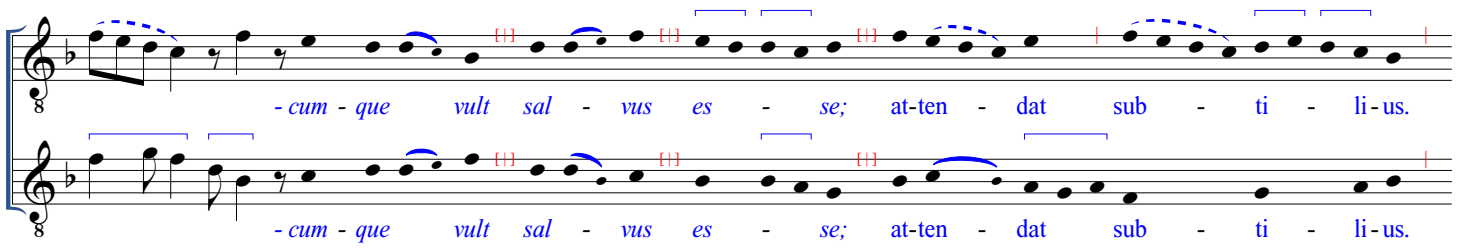

in pe-na cul - pam de - stru - it. sce - lus in ne - ce
in pe-na cul - pam de - stru - it. sce - lus in ne - ce

di - lu - it. vin - - cit
di - lu - it. vin - - cit

cum iu - di - ca -
cum iu - di - ca -

- tur.
- tur.

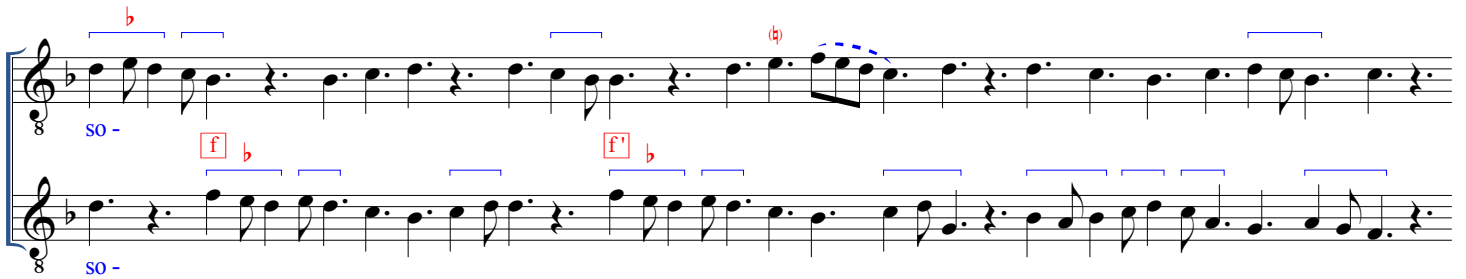

Qui -
Qui -

- cum - que vult sal - vus es - se; at - ten - dat sub - ti - li - us.
 - cum - que vult sal - vus es - se; at - ten - dat sub - ti - li - us.

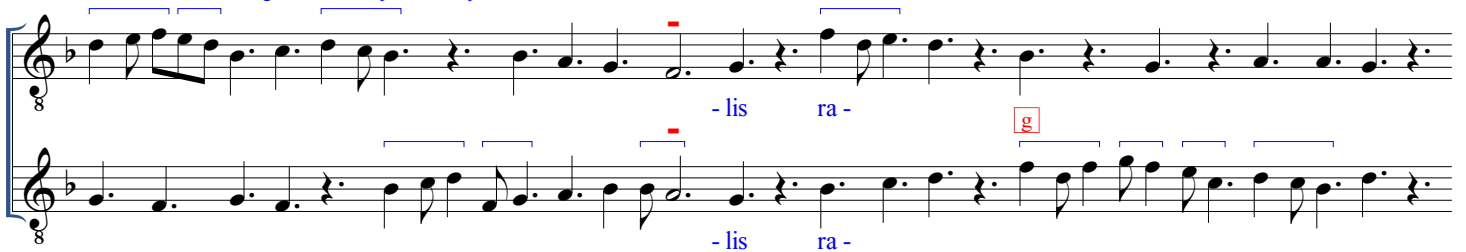

quod ve - lut ne - quit ob - es - se vi - tro
 quod ve - lut ne - quit ob - es - se vi - tro

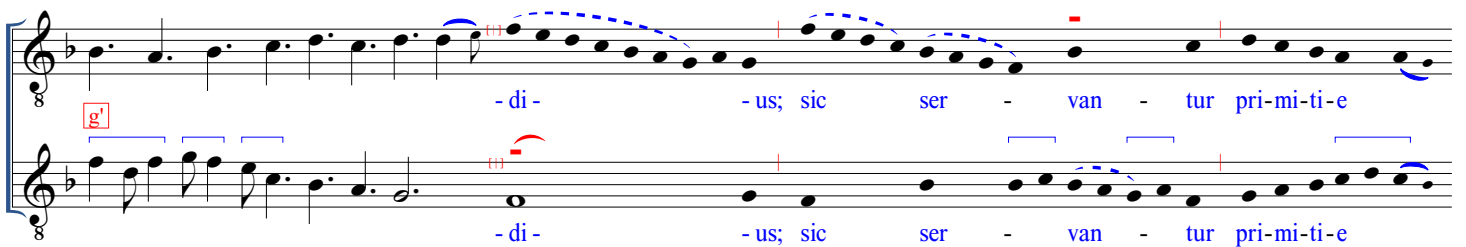

so -
 so -

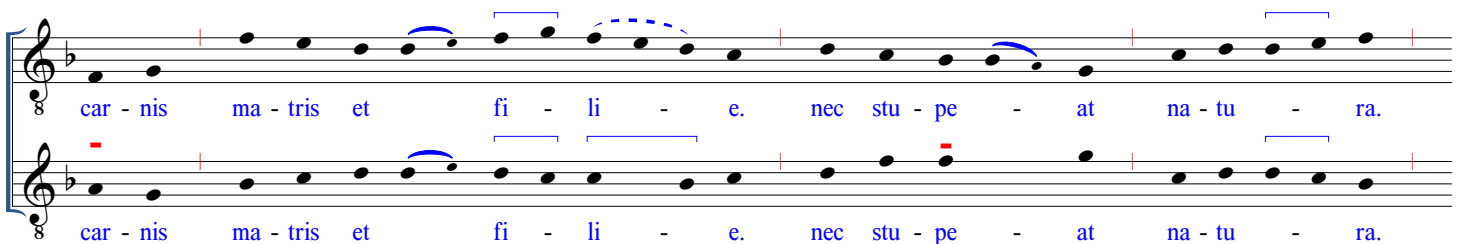

*TD: alternative readings of these two phrases are possible, see at end

- lis ra -
 - lis ra -

- di - us; sic ser - van - tur pri - mi - ti - e
 - di - us; sic ser - van - tur pri - mi - ti - e

car - nis ma - tris et fi - li - e. nec stu - pe - at na - tu - ra.
 car - nis ma - tris et fi - li - e. nec stu - pe - at na - tu - ra.

e - ius e - nim de - stru - e - re. cu - ius fu - it et con - de - re

e - ius e - nim de - stru - e - re. cu - ius fu - it et con - de - re fra -

fra -

i h b h

i (h) b

[fra] - gi - li - ta - tis iu - - ra.
[fra] - gi - li - ta - tis iu - - ra.

Er - j j Er -

[Er] - go cre - do in de - um cu - ius mi - se - ri - cor - di - a con - ci - li - a - vit

[Er] - go cre - do in de - um cu - ius mi - se - ri - cor - di - a con - ci - li - a - vit

re - um in se - ra pe - ni - ten - ti - a. ra - ptus ra - pto - rem

re - um in se - ra pe - ni - ten - ti - a. ra - ptus ra - pto - rem

ra - pu - it. me - tit in mes - se stu - pu - lam. quod si - gnat cum fel ren - nu - it

ra - pu - it. me - tit in mes - se stu - pu - lam. quod si - gnat cum fel ren - nu - it

gu - stans. et tra - dit re - gu - lam

gu - stans. et tra - dit re - gu - lam

ne de - spe - ret in sce - le - ris qua - [qua] - tri - du - a - nus

ne de - spe - ret in sce - le - ris qua - [qua] - tri - du - a - nus

tu - mu - lo. fi - na - lis e - nim o - pe - ris cau - sa ser - va - tur

tu - mu - lo. fi - na - lis e - nim o - pe - ris cau - sa ser - va - tur

The main musical score consists of six systems of two staves each. The lyrics are: cal - cu - [k] [k'] [k''] - lo.] - lo. The score includes various musical notations such as notes, rests, and phrasing slurs. Red boxes highlight specific phonetic notations: [k], [k'], and [k'']. A blue dashed line indicates an extended reading for the final two phrases of "solis".

Ma has an extended reading for these 10L, see at end

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*Cauda on line 14,2, another rhythmic reading for the final two phrases of "solis" as suggested by F, Ma, Oxf-Sol; after F, f. 279r, VI

This block shows an alternative rhythmic reading for the final two phrases of "solis". It consists of two staves, D and T. The lyrics are (so) - [lis] and (so) - - lis. A blue bracket labeled "T: F: long stroke" spans the final two phrases of the top staff.

Final cauda (on line 32,3), beginning at L68, extended reading, Ma, f. 45r, II-III | D: Ma: 4li=djef?

This block shows an alternative reading for the final cauda. It consists of two staves, D and T. The lyrics are (calcu)-(lo) and (calcu)-(lo). A red bracket labeled "si si" is placed above the final two notes of the top staff.

PATER NOSTER COMMISERANS

Conductus (H19/266)

F, f. 278v (7,13)

- | | |
|--|---|
| I Pater noster, commiserans filiorum excessibus, eos falli considerans
 in peccati contractibus, tutorem sibi dirigit,
 qui pro pupillis transigit.
 Vitam morte mercatur,
 in pena culpam destruit,
 scelus in nece diluit,
 vincit cum iudicatur. | Our father, having pity on the excesses of his children, seeing them duped
 by the transactions of sin, 5 arranges for them a defender, who comes to a settlement on behalf of his charges.
 He purchases life with death,
 in suffering he destroys error,
 sin he washes away in bloodshed,
 10 and when he judges, he prevails. |
| II Quicumque vult salvus esse, attendat subtilius quod, velut nequit obesse vitro solis radius, sic servantur primitie
 carnis matris et filie.
 Nec stupeat natura;
 eius enim destruere, cuius fuit et condere
 fragilitatis iura. | Whoever wishes to be saved, let him consider very keenly that, just as a sunbeam can do no injury to glass, 15 in the same way are preserved the first fruits of the mother's and daughter's flesh.
 And let nature not be astonished;
 for he whose laws of frailty it was to establish,
 20 were his to demolish. |
| III Ergo credo in deum, cuius misericordia conciliavit reum
 in sera penitentia.
 Raptus raptorem rapuit;
 metit in messe stupulam.
 Quod signat cum fel rennuit
 gustans, et tradit regulam, ne desperet in sceleris quadriduanus tumulo;
 finalis enim operis
 causa servatur calculo. | Therefore I believe in God, whose mercy reconciled a sinner
 in late repentance.
 25 The plundered has plundered the plunderer;
 he mows down the stubble at harvest time.
 This indicates that, when tasting bitterness,
 he refused it, and offers an example, lest one despair in the 30 four-day tomb of sin;
 for on the occasion of the final enterprise,
 one is protected with a counter stone. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 13, f. 278v: a2, Strophes I-III complete, with II-III indicated by capitals.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 63, f. 145v (136v): a2, Strophes I-III complete, all headed by painted initials, with a slight bit of filigree decoration for that of II; the piece is preceded by the conductus Ave Maria gratia plena (II) (G7/29) showing two ceremonially related texts in succession.

Ma, fasc. 3, no. 9, f. 42r: a2, Strophes I-III complete; no initials or guide letters entered for any of the stanzas.

Oxf-Sol,¹ no. 5 (= OxAuct, no. 5), f. 3r:² a2; fragmentary, various portions of text and music lost or illegible; a large painted initial with some faded filigree opens the piece, a capital heads Strophe II, and the upper corner of an expected capital for III may be visible at the bottom of the so-called “pag. 8” below. The remains of each of the four pages to contain the work are as follows: 1: the first folio to contain the piece, “pag. 5” (=the right half of f. i v according to the DIAMM image description), gives the text and music of the opening of the work through line 3,1 (“eos”), with the remainder of the leaf cut away. This excision originally must have transmitted the material over line 3,2 (“falli”) up through the first 4L of the short cauda on line 5,3 (“di[rigit]”). 2: This is then followed by what is termed “pag. 6” in DIAMM (= the left half of f. ir), which begins with L5 of the cauda on “di[rigit]” and proceeds up through line 13,1 (“quod”) at the end of the fifth system on the folio. Some high-lying portions of the D voice are visible on the following system at the bottom of the leaf, which is otherwise mutilated and appears to have contained the material from lines 13,2 (“velut”) up through the first syllable of line 14,2 (“so[lis]”). In addition, further material from this larger folio has been transferred via mirror-image offset to the front binding board.³ 3: Next, “pag. 8” in DIAMM’s image description (= the right half of f. iir, but which is confusingly marked with the numeral “7” in pencil at its top right corner)⁴ continues the piece, with the music largely visible from the second syllable of 14,2 (“[so]lis”) up through the first syllable of line 22,2 (“mi[sericordia]”). Most of the verbal text, though, of the leaf’s present final system (beginning with line 21,1 [“Ergo”], opening Strophe III) is now obscured, and a further system containing the remainder of line 22,2 through the first two syllables of 25,2 (“rapto[rem]”) appears originally to have concluded this leaf, but is now gone. Finally, 4: Finally, “pag. 9” in the image description (= the left half of f. f. ii v, but which is labeled in pencil with “8” as a page number) transmits the material from the last syllable of line 25,2 (“[rapto]rem”) to the end of the piece, with the last several phrases of the T very faded or illegible and with no apparent remains of the concluding syllable of text. As with f. ir, f. ii v also has transferred material via offset to the back binding board included with this source’s images.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Liturgical citations: the opening of each strophe (lines 1, 11, 21) quotes directly from liturgical items that present basic tenets of Christian dogma: the Lord’s Prayer (see Matthew, 6:9-13; Luke, 11:2-4), and the Athanasian and Nicene Creeds, respectively; these passages are signaled by italics in the text, ¹This siglum as used here brings together the related fragments now preserved in Oxford, Bodleian Library, Auct. Q.3.17 (GB-Ob [pr. bk.] Auct. 6 Q.3.17; OxAuct) and CH-MSbk S.231 (Mariastein, Benediktinerkloster, S.231), the latter olim: Solothurn, Zentralbibliothek, S. 231 (Sol). The numbering and sequence of the items in this reconstituted source derives from the more complete combined listing in Everist, “A Reconstructed Source,” 107 (Table 2).

²Folio 3r is the number of the first leaf of this piece as given on the CPI website; unusually, though, neither CPI nor the DIAMM inventory for this source includes folio numbers for the three further leaves that transmit the rest of the piece. Additionally, the larger leaf that contains the start of Pater noster commiserans is indicated as “front endpaper,” in the DIAMM inventory, while the text description accompanying the image appears as “folio front endpaper verso (pag. 4 and 5),” with “pag. 5,” – the right half of this larger leaf – containing the beginning of the piece in question. Furthermore this same larger folio is identified as “f. i v” in the identifying label included at the bottom of the image itself. For the remaining items reported here, the various page and folio labels from the “Images” section of DIAMM are included to aid consultation of this source.

³Described in the image section of this source in DIAMM as “folio front board offset.”

⁴There is actually no “pag. 7” included among the descriptions in the images section of this source in DIAMM, so the descriptors of “pag. 8” and “pag. 9” given with the images actually correspond to the pencil pagination for pages 7 and 8, respectively.

transcription, and translation. The first and last of these quoted items occur in the liturgy of the Mass, the second is typically used during the service of Prime. 1-4: cf. lines 1-3 of the conductus Deus misertus hominis (B1/92) for the similar figure of God pitying his human creation. 5,1: the defender appointed for God's children is Christ. 9: see the remarks for lines 1-4 of the conductus Salvatoris hodie – Novus Adam (C5/315) for the symbol of the elect being washed in the blood of Christ, the sacrificial lamb. 10: see Psalm 50:6: “Tibi soli peccavi, et malum coram te feci; ut justificeris in sermonibus tuis, et vincas cum judicaris” (“To you only have I sinned, and I have done evil before you: that you may be justified in your words and may conquer when you judge.”). 13-14: a common symbol of the virgin birth is the image of a sunbeam passing through glass: just as glass remains intact when admitting the sun's rays, in the same way Mary's virginity is not compromised by her conception and birthing of Jesus. For a treatment of a wide variety of sources that offer this conceit, see Andrew C. Breeze, “The Blessed Virgin and the Sunbeam through Glass,” Celtica, 23 (1999): 19-29; see also line 12 of the conductus Sine matre genitus (I27/330). 15-16: the oft-cited paradox that Mary is both daughter and mother to a coequal God and Christ; see, for example, the conductus Mater patris et filia (F34/207), a contrafact of Veri solis presentia (F6/370), and Parens patris natique filia (F31/260). 17,2-3: on the common figure of nature's astonishment at the virgin birth of Christ, cf. Philip the Chancellor's motet Homo quam sit pura (231), lines 13-14, the beginning of the motet Stupeat natura (232, possibly his work as well), and the opening lines of the two anonymous conductus De nature fracto iure (I18/80) and Nove geniture (I13/224). 18-20: since it was God who established natural laws, he is likewise able to contravene them; for further echoes of this conceit, see the remarks for the opening stanza (lines 1-13) of the conductus Naturas deus regulis – Hic per mundum (C7/214) and O felix Bituria (E8/232), lines 23-24. 25: Christ (the plundered) has robbed (plundered) death (the plunderer) of his power through his own death; cf. the analogous expressions in 1 Corinthians, 15:26 and 15:54-55. 26: God portrayed as a harvester or thresher, separating wheat from chaff (the elect versus the damned) is a frequent metaphor for the Last Judgment; cf. Matthew, 3:12. Additionally, Luke, 3:17, and Malachi, 4:1 portray the wicked as stubble to be burned; as do the similar expressions in Obadiah, 1:18, Nahum, 1:10, and Isaiah, 47:14. 27-28: cf. Matthew, 27:34: “Et dederunt ei vinum bibere cum felle mistum. Et cum gustasset, noluit bibere” (“And they gave him wine to drink mingled with gall. And when he had tasted, he would not drink.”), along with the similar expressions in Mark, 15:23, and Psalm 68:22. See also the bitter drink of the sponge soaked in vinegar, given to Christ during the Crucifixion, from Matthew, 27:48; Mark, 15:36; John, 19:29-30. As Anderson (NDRC, 2:xxvi, note 3) suggests in a passage drawn from Bede's In Matthei evangelium expositio, book 4 (cited from PL 92, col. 123C), both of these figures may stand here for Christ tasting death's bitterness yet not subjecting himself to it. 29-30: a nod to Christ's raising of Lazarus, who had been dead for four days before he was restored to life; cf. John, 11:1-45, especially verses 17 and 39.⁵ The apparent significance of the figure is that although humanity may suffer a temporary death, they should not lose hope in the promise of resurrection and eternal life, which Jesus has prefigured by his own example. 31-32: a somewhat obscure passage, although since lines 26 and 31 seem to recall the Last Judgment, the figure of the stone (“calculus”) in line 32 appears to connect most closely with Revelation, 2:17, suggesting it is a figure for the eternal life to come after the final reckoning.⁶ Additional connotation for this view comes from the use of the term “calculus” since at least Roman times to signify the stones used to render verdicts in judicial proceedings. White stones signified a vote for innocence; black ones, guilt (hence the term “blackball”).⁷ In contrast, though, Anderson offers a translation and interpretation of this figure in NDRC, 3:xxvi, which is based on Bede’s In Sancti Iohannis evangelio expositio, (cited from PL, 92, col. 781) with reference to John, 11:38-45, even though the key word “calculus” does not appear in the biblical passage. Here the object is seen in a negative sense as the tombstone that covered Lazarus, which is figuratively equated with the old law that was written upon the stone tablets given to Moses on Mount Sinai (“and for the sake of the final work, he was saved from the tomb,” in Anderson’s rendering). This interpretation, somehow, seems less convincing than the association of this passage with the one in Revelation.

⁵John, 11:17: “Venit itaque Jesus: et invenit eum quatuor dies jam in monumento habentem” (“Jesus therefore came, and found that he [Lazarus] had been four days already in the grave.”). John, 11:39: “Ait Jesus: ‘Tollite lapidem.’ Dicit ei Martha, soror ejus qui mortuus fuerat: ‘Domine, jam foetet, quatruiduanus est enim’ ” (“Jesus said: ‘Take away the stone.’ Martha, the sister of him that was dead, said to him: ‘Lord, by this time he stinks, for he is now of four days.’ ”).

⁶Revelation, 2:17: “Vincenti dabo manna absconditum, et dabo illi calculum candidum: et in calculo nomen novum scriptum, quod nemo scit, nisi qui accipit” (“To him that overcomes, I will give the hidden manna, and will give him a white counter [stone], and in the counter [stone], a new name written, which no man knows, but he that receives it.”).

⁷See, for example, the definition given at <https://logeion.uchicago.edu/calculus>, under the “LewisShort” heading, II.D.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 26,4: stipulam, this word’s more usual spelling, is the reading given in WI, Ma, and Oxf-Sol; it is also preferred by Anderson in NDRC, 3:xxvi (although the variant reading of F is not reported in his commentary on p. 216); in either form the word means much the same thing, so the F reading is preserved here. MUSIC: General remarks: Like the pieces that immediately precede it, the setting of Pater noster commiserans is extremely ornate. Its caudae in particular are especially elegant; they are motivically unified in a number of cases, and frequently feature overlapping phrases; the melodic features of a number of the melismas, furthermore, often evoke comparison to similar phrases in the Perotinian quadrupla, as they sometimes feature imitation and canon. The high degree of small-scale motivic repetition that is apparent throughout this piece is provisionally demonstrated by the formal reference letters placed above the staves in the opening segment of this work. Further analysis on this level is not carried out in this transcription, except on a few occasions that show some notable instances of repetition on a larger scale. Throughout the piece there are some appreciably dissonant simultaneities. Usually (but not always) these occur as the penultimate or antepenultimate sonority before a cadence (see for example, the close of the cauda at line 7,3 – “mercatur”). Each of these instances has been checked against the other MS sources for verification, and each time the relevant sources bear out any markedly dissonant readings. Accidentals and musica ficta: the presence of e-flat sigs among the various sources has informed the inclusion of editorial ficta in the transcription. Opening cauda (line 1,1): D: F: the rhythmic reading of the plicated ligature and subsequent conjuncturae that close the final phrase of the cauda has been influenced by Ma, which gives 3li,2li+1C,4si = ded,cb+a,g,g,f,g. Line 9,1: T: F: the 2li=cd of “[sce]lus” is aligned with its first note against the si f in the D, since WI (and possibly Oxf-Sol as well) presents this as a siP; much of the other alignment decisions in the cum littera sections of this piece favor the coordination of the concluding elements of ligatures with their corresponding syllables. 11,3-4: TD: F: the editorially supplied strokes surrounding each word of “salvus esse” appear in all other sources (WI, Ma, Oxf-Sol); D: F, W1: 2 lower for the figure on the first syllable of “[sal]vus”; the adopted reading is supported by Ma, Oxf-Sol. Cauda on line 14,2: D: F: in the sixth phrase of the melisma on “solis” (at L27), WI opens with 3li+2C=def+ed, hence the quicker reading adopted here for the 2li=ed of F in the transcription. All other sources (F, Ma, Oxf-Sol) allow for the possibility of a rhythmic alternative, which I find slightly less preferable to the one adopted here; for this, see the end of the transcription. Line 20,2 (closing Strophe II): Tt: the placement of the second syllable of “iura” earlier on the penultimate T f is conceivable; F puts the syllable midway between the final two pitches of the T phrase, Oxf-Sol gives “iurara” with the second syllable underdotted to show the error, but which is similarly ambiguously paced as in F; both WI and Ma favor coordination of the last syllable with the final g of the strophe, as given here. 21,4: TD: F: the adopted strokes following “deum” appear in all other sources (WI, Ma, Oxf-Sol). 22,2: D: F: the 2 b-flat si pitches topped by a dashed tie in the transcription are closely grouped in F; WI, Ma present a single DL here, while Oxf-Sol does not preserve this portion. 27,1-2: TtTD: W1: music and text for “quod signat” om following a stroke only in the T; Ma gives strokes before and after these two words. 28,1: T: F: the antepenultimate g that occurs before the cadence on “[gu]stans” is not el, but is transcribed with a longer value here to accommodate the multiple notes in the D; a quicker option also appears above the staves. Ma and Oxf-Sol as well as F show elongation of the following penultimate f pitch, while WI gives 2si=ff in place of the penultimate in F. Final cauda (on line 32,3): TD: Ma: for the 10L segment beginning at L68 of this melisma, Ma offers a partially extended reading; see the end of the transcription.

RESURGENTE DOMINO
Conductus (H18/306)

F, f. 280v (7,14)

D I [Re-] - sur -
T Re- [Re] - sur -

- gen - te do - mi - no; e - i con - re - sur - - ga - mus.
- gen - te do - mi - no; e - i con - re - sur - - ga - mus.

qui re - a - tu pri - sti - no de - tru - si a a' qui re - a - tu pri - sti - no de - tru - si fu - e - ra - mus sub in - fer - ni la - te - - bris;

a' fu - e - ra - mus sub in - fer - ni la - te - - bris;

ex - ur - ga - ex - ur - ga - b

- mus
b - mus

te - ne - bris. ter - sa la - be cri - mi - num; fa - te - a - mur

te - ne - bris. ter - sa la - be cri - mi - num; fa - te - a - mur do - mi - num re - sur - ge - re tum vo -

do - mi - num re - sur - ge - re tum vo -

- ce tum o - pe -

- ce tum o - pe -

- re.

- re.

D Mors

T Mors

et cri - stus ac - cin - gun - tur

et cri - stus ac - cin - gun - tur

ad lu - ctam. ag - gre -
ad lu - ctam. ag - gre -

- di - un - tur cer - ta - men. oc - ci - di - tur cri -
- di - un - tur cer - ta - men. oc - ci - di - tur cri -

- stus. mors
- stus. mors

ex - ce - di - tur. et vin - cen - do vin - ci -
ex - ce - di - tur. et vin - cen - do vin - ci -

ex - ce - di - tur. et vin - cen - do vin - ci -
ex - ce - di - tur. et vin - cen - do vin - ci -

- tur.]
- tur.

RESURGENTE DOMINO

Conductus (H18/306)

F, f. 280v (7,14)

- | | |
|---|---|
| I Resurgente domino, ei conresurgamus, qui reatu pristino detrusi fueramur
sub inferni latebris.
Exurgamus tenebris, tersa labe criminum.
Fateamur dominum resurgere,
tum voce, tum opere. | At the rising of the Lord,
let us rise along with him,
we who by that very first offence had been thrust down 5 into the hidden recesses of hell.
Let us arise from the shadows, with the blemish of sin wiped clean.
Let us acknowledge that the Lord is risen,
10 both with voice and with action. |
| II Mors et Christus accinguntur ad luctam; aggrediuntur certamen. Occiditur Christus; mors exceditur,
et vincendo vincitur. | Death and Christ are girded for the contest; they undertake the battle. Christ
perishes; death departs,
15 and by conquering is conquered. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 14, f. 280v: a2, Strophes I-II, complete; a capital heads II.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 60, f. 143v (134v): a2, Strophes I-II, complete, with painted initials for I-II and additional filigree decoration for I. The text entered down the entire left margin of the first folio, perpendicular to the rest of the content on this page, is the second strophe of the previous work in W1, A deserto veniens (J3,I29/1), whose final cauda concludes at the top of the leaf. In the right margin of the following folio, 144r (135r), is the addition of an informal, light-brown ink drawing of a person with their hands clasped together, as if in prayer. In his facsimile edition of W1, Staehelin¹ identifies the figure as a monk, but I am not sure whether the style of clothing might indicate a woman.

Ma, fasc. 3, no. 12, f. 48v: a2, Strophes I-II, complete; neither initials nor guide letters were ever entered for the stanzas.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1-2: the season is evidently Easter. 3-4: the “first offense” is the original sin incurred by Adam and Eve; see Genesis, 3. 10: see Sirach (Ecclesiasticus), 3:9: “In opere, et sermone, et omni patientia, honora patrem tuum” (“Honour thy father, in work and word, and all patience.”). Compare the remarks on the analogous collaboration of voice and heart in the conductus Relegata vetustate (H23/303), line 16. 11-15: for the frequent conceit of death being overcome by death (i.e., by Jesus’s sacrifice and resurrection), see Hebrews, 2:14-15; Romans, 6:9; 1 Corinthians, 15:26-27, 54-55; the commonly noted irony in the final line results from death suffering its own death through the death of Christ. Note also the battle and victory of God over the beast in Revelations, 19:11-21.

¹Martin Staehelin, ed., Die mittelalterliche Musikhandschrift W1: Vollständige Reproduktion des “Notre Dame”-Manuskripts der Herzog August Bibliothek, Wolfenbüttel, Cod. Guelf. 628 Helmst, Wolfenbütteler Mittelalter-Studien, no. 9, (Wiesbaden: Harrasowitz Verlag, 1995), 21, 44.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: Versification: each of the three sources agrees in dividing the text into two respective components of ten and five lines, signaled by initials or spaces for intended initials in the case of Ma; these divisions are rendered here as two different strophes, despite their independence in length and rhythmical structure, yet the poem could well be considered a single stanza. Textual notes: 6,1: F: the alignment of the final syllable of “exurgamus” is with the following d pitches in the T; and this is also possibly intended in Ma; WI suggests placement under the preceding c, as adopted here. 11,3; 14,1: F: both occurrences of this word in these lines is spelled “cristus,” not in the more typical manner beginning $\chi\rho$ (chi-ro); Ma also uses the “cristus” spelling for both appearances, while WI has a variant reading of line 11 that omits the first instance (“mors extinguitur” as it presently stands) and uses the $\chi\rho$ beginning for the second. 12,3: F: the second syllable of “aggređiuntur” appears 4L later, corrected from Ma; WI does not aid in the decision, since it gives the four-syllable variant “aggređitur,” with its last three syllables underlaid to the three notes of the following cum littera segment (= “-điuntur” in F). MUSIC: Syllabic/melismatic identity: 1. TD of cauda on “qui [reatu]” (line 3) = 1a. similar, transposed T of “rea[tu]” (line 3) immediately following; 1b. T(D) of “fuera[mus]” (line 4). A second instance of identity, signaled by the letters “w” and “x” and their variables in the transcription, describes a very common formulaic cadential figure, but here it is uncharacteristically frequent in appearance and is notably concentrated towards the end of this piece, appearing in five of the final six lines of the poem: 2. TD of figure on “[resur]gere” (line 9) = 2a. TD at end of cauda on “[o]pe[re]” (line 10, closing cauda of Strophe I); 2b. TD on “[ad] luctam” (line 12); 2c. TD on “[cer]tamen” (line 13); 2d. TD on “[exce]ditur” (line 14); 2e. TD at end of last phrase of cauda on “cristus” (line 14, penultimate line of poem). 2f. TD on “[vin]citur” (line 15, last line of poem) at the end of the closing cauda. Musical observations: Line 5,3: T: F: the antepenultimate note f (the 2 of the 2li) in the short cauda on “[la]tebris” is placed rather low, so that it looks like an e; the correct pitch verified by WI, Ma. 11,4: D: F: the d prior to the final pitch of the phrase on “accinguntur” is written as if to suggest c; the adopted reading is supplied from WI, Ma. 13,2: TD: F: in the setting of “occiditur” the voice parts are exchanged in comparison to WI and Ma.

REX ETERNE GLORIE MUNDO – Ma version
Conductus (H21/309)

Ma, f. 58r (3,18) (= F, 7,15)*

I [R]ex

T [R]ex

[R]ex e - ter - ne glo - ri - e

[R]ex e - ter - ne glo - ri - e

mun - do na - tus ho -

mun - do na - tus ho -

*WT: modal transmutation, see at end

- di - e nos re - na - sci vo - lu - it quos a - dam

- di - e nos re - na - sci vo - lu - it quos a - dam

con - sti - tu -

con - sti - tu -

WT: modal transmutation, see at end

con - sti - tu -

con - sti - tu -

*For justifications on the choice of Ma as the base source for this transcription, see the commentary. The T voice of the opening cauda presents a rhythmically varied version of the T melisma that begins Strophe II, with phrase 2 and the first part of phrase 4 identical, or nearly so, in both instances.

†W1: modal transmutation, see at end

- it mor -
- it mor -

a' b

|W1: modal transmutation apparently ends

|T: W1: 3li=gag:
partial conversion?

- ti tri - bu - ta - ri -
- ti tri - bu - ta - ri -

b c

|TD: imitation for 7L

|D: W1: 3li+3C: partial modal conversion?

- OS.
- OS.

d b' c

|D: W1: 3li,2li: partial modal conversion?

- OS.
- OS.

d' c'

|T = varied version of opening cauda of Strophe I: phrases 2 and beginning of 4 identical in both

[L]u -
[L]u -

b x

[Lu] - cer - na

[Lu] - cer - na

††WI: modal transmutation, see at end

††modal transmutation here in F also, see at end;
sequential canon between voices for 12L

ac - cen -

ac - cen -

- di - tur

- di - tur

| T: WI: 2li,si=cd,d: partial modal conversion or faster TD rhythms for this portion?

‡WI: modal transmutation, see at end

et do - - mus e - ver -

et do - - mus e - ver -

‡modal transmutation here in F also, see at end

- ti - tur drag - - ma di - u

- ti - tur drag - - ma di - u

- ti - tur drag - - ma di - u

- ti - tur drag - - ma di - u

per - di - ta in - ve - ni -

per - di - ta in - ve - ni -

- tur. et i - - ta ver - bum car - nem in - du -

- tur. et i - - ta ver - bum car - nem in - du -

§W1: modal transmutation, see at end; imitation, sequence, and near canon between voices here

§§WI: modal transmutation ends; F, WI: shortened versions of 1st, 3rd, 5th phrases (from 8L to 4L in length); see end

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*Cauda at line 2,3: modally transmuted reading from WI, f. 148v (139v), V

Cauda at line 4,3: modally transmuted reading from WI, f. 148v (139v), VI

†Cauda at line 5,1: modally transmuted reading (with elements of partial conversion?) from WI, f. 149r (140r), I

††Cauda at line 6,2

a. modally transmuted reading from WI, f. 149r (140r), III

| T: Ma,F: d: preferable reading

b. modally transmuted reading (beginning in second half) from F, f. 281v, VI

| F: transmutation starts

T: F: unexpected TL rest; possible partial conversion? ↓

‡Cauda at line 7,3

a. modally transmuted reading from WI, f. 149r (140r), IV

b. modally transmuted reading (beginning after second half) from F, f. 282r, I

| F: transmutation starts, à la WI

§Cauda at line 10,3 (first portion): modally transmuted reading from WI, f. 149v (140v), I

a. first rendering, with certain strokes rendered as *suspiria

| T: Ma.F: 1 of 3li=d: preferable reading

*Note the inconsistent treatment of the strokes in the T and D here as articulations of different durations (B rests or suspiria). This could suggest the primacy and superiority of the Ma interpretation offered in the main transcription, as its rendering presents the most regular of the offered readings.

b. second rendering, with strokes rendered as TL*

| T: Ma, F: 1 of 3li=d: preferable reading

Musical notation for the first system, showing two staves with rhythmic markings and blue annotations. The top staff has a blue dashed line above it, and the bottom staff has a blue dashed line below it. There are also blue brackets above the notes in both staves.

*Note the inconsistent treatment of the penultimate stroke in the T as a B rest instead of the TL duration used elsewhere. This could suggest the primacy and superiority of the Ma interpretation offered in the main transcription, as its rendering presents the most regular of the offered readings.

§§Cauda at line 10,3 (second portion)

a. shortened versions of 1st, 3rd, 5th phrases (from 8L to 4L in length), from WI, f. 149v (140v), I

Musical notation for the second system, labeled 'a', showing two staves with rhythmic markings and blue annotations. The top staff is labeled 'D' and the bottom staff is labeled 'T'. Both staves have a '8' below the clef and '(indu) -' below the staff. There are blue brackets above the notes in both staves.

Musical notation for the third system, showing two staves with rhythmic markings and blue annotations. The top staff has a blue dashed line above it, and the bottom staff has a blue dashed line below it. There are also blue brackets above the notes in both staves. The top staff ends with '- [it.]' and the bottom staff ends with '- it.'

b. shortened versions of 1st, 3rd, 5th phrases (from 8L to 4L in length), from F, f. 282r, VI

Musical notation for the fourth system, labeled 'b', showing two staves with rhythmic markings and blue annotations. The top staff is labeled 'D' and the bottom staff is labeled 'T'. Both staves have a '8' below the clef and '(indu) -' below the staff. There are blue brackets above the notes in both staves.

| D: F: partial conversion?

Musical notation for the fifth system, showing two staves with rhythmic markings and blue annotations. The top staff has a blue dashed line above it, and the bottom staff has a blue dashed line below it. There are also blue brackets above the notes in both staves. The top staff has 'si si' written above the notes and ends with '- [it.]'. The bottom staff ends with '- it.'

REX ETERNE GLORIE MUNDO

Conductus (H21/309)

Ma f. 58r (3,18) (= F, 7,15)

- | | | | |
|----|---|----|---|
| I | Rex eterne glorie, mundo natus hodie,
nos renasci voluit,
quos Adam constituit
morti tributarios. | 5 | The king of eternal glory, born today to the world, wished us, whom Adam established as susceptible to death, to be reborn. |
| II | Lucerna accenditur et domus evertitur;
dragma, diu perdita,
invenitur, et ita
verbum carnem induit. | 10 | The lamp is lighted and the house scoured;
the coin, long since lost, is found, and so
the word assumes flesh. |

SOURCES:

Ma, fasc. 3, no. 18, f. 58r: a2, Strophes I-II, complete, with no initials or guide letters entered for either stanza; several caudae in this source display extended rhythms (in mode 1 or mode 5) in comparison to F and WI (in mode 6 or mode 1). Due to its greater consistency, Ma serves here as the base source for the transcription in preference to F. For further justifications for this decision, see the observations on the music below.

F, fasc. 7, no. 15, f. 281r: a2, Strophes I-II, complete, with a capital beginning II; several caudae in F feature portions transmuted into faster rhythms (mode 1 or mode 6) when compared to the same passages in Ma; WI tends also to have these same faster passages, along with additional ones not in F.

WI, fasc. 9, no. 65, f. 148v (139v): a2, Strophes I-II, complete, with painted letters in the same blue color beginning I-II (rather than alternating with red); several caudae feature transmutation to quicker rhythms in comparison with the same passages in F and Ma. A partially effaced text entry running up the left margin of the opening folio at a ninety-degree angle to the rest of the content on this page reads: “Officialis curie glasguensis propter s ... es ec ...” (Official of the court of Glasgow, on behalf of ... [?]).¹ Further erased marginalia appear on f. 149v (140v); the one to the left of the final system to contain Rex eterne reads (according to Staehelin, ibid.): “si capias hastam [?]” (“if you should grasp a spear [?]”).

Oxf-Sol,² no. ? (see further on for explanation), offset backboard.³ Rex eterne glorie is transmitted as a mirror-image offset on one of the pieces of parchment folded over from the other side of the backboard, so that it appears both reversed and upside down at the bottom right of the DIAMM image: a2; fragmentary, and much of what survives is either illegible or very difficult to make out. Portions of the opening blue initial “R” and second letter “e” of the first word of text, along with the music of the T voice of the beginning cauda up to just before the cum littera setting of line 1 begins, are visible. A few notes of the third and fourth phrases of the cauda in the D can also be seen. However, this particular part of the source is also overlaid with what looks like upside-down music from another piece that appears to have become imprinted by offset upon and between the surviving T and D staves of Rex eterne. As a result, further segments of the piece on this single surviving system are extremely difficult to construe, assuming they actually are extant. The inclusion of OxAuct in the list of sources for Rex eterne glorie appears on the CPI website, and in Anderson’s edition (NDRC, 3:218). The latter gives its number within the sequence of pieces in OxAuct as no. 6, whereas Everist, (“A Reconstructed Source,” passim), as well as RISM and DIAMM, does not recognize Rex eterne in this source; these publications catalog number 6 of Oxf-Sol as Fraude ceca desolato (G4/133). For additional information on this situation, see the discussion of the sources for Fraude ceca.

¹This transcription of the marginal entry relies on the one given on pp. 21 and 44 of Martin Staehelin ed., Die mittelalterliche Musikhandschrift WI: Vollständige Reproduktion des “Notre Dame”-Manuskripts der Herzog August Bibliothek, Wolfenbüttel, Cod. Guelf. 628 Helmst. Wolfenbütteler Mittelalter-Studien, no. 9. Wiesbaden: Harrasowitz Verlag, 1995. Here the ellipses refer to illegible portions of the last two words.

²This siglum as used here brings together the related fragments now preserved in Oxford, Bodleian Library, Auct. Q.3.17 (GB-Ob [pr. bk.] Auct. 6 Q.3.17 ; OxAuct) and CH-MSBk S.231 (Mariastein, Benediktinerkloster, S.231), the latter olim: Solothurn, Zentralbibliothek, S. 231 (Sol). The numbering and sequence of the items in this reconstituted source derives from the more complete listing in Everist, “A Reconstructed Source,” 107 (Table 2).

³This is how the location is identified in the label printed at the bottom of the relevant image from OxAuct available at DIAMM; the descriptive text that accompanies the DIAMM image reads “Folio back board offset.”

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Note: This conductus should not be confused with the Agnus trope Rex eterne glorie qui das locum venie (uncataloged by either Falck or Anderson), preserved uniquely in GB-Cgc 803/807, Fragm. 32, f. 1v: a2.⁴

Notes on the Text: 1-2: a clear reference to Christmas day. 3: see John, 3:3-5, where the first of these verses relates: “Respondit Jesus, et dixit ei: ‘Amen, amen dico tibi, nisi quis renatus fuerit denuo, non potest videre regnum Dei’” (“Jesus answered, and said to him: ‘Amen, amen I say to you, unless a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God.’”). 4-5: The fall of Adam and Eve (Genesis, 3) that led to original sin (see Romans, 5:12-21; 1 Corinthians, 15:22). 6-9: see Luke, 15:8-10, which relates Jesus’s parable of a woman who originally possessed ten drachma coins; upon losing one, she lighted a lamp and swept her house until she found the lost money. The Gospel text offers the interpretation that her rejoicing over her recovery is comparable to the joy of God’s angels when a single sinner repents. See the invocation of this same parable in the text of the conductus Fraude ceca desolato (G4/133), lines 9-16, where the lamp is interpreted as the Virgin Mary, the light within it as Christ, and (similar to Rex eterne) the coin as God incarnate in man and a symbol of salvation that overrides original sin.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 1,1; 6,1: Ma: the initials “R” and “L” that begin the respective strophes were never executed; they are supplied from F,WI. 5,2; 10,3: Ma: the closing period om at the ends of both strophes, supplied here from F,WI. MUSIC: General remarks: the caudae in this piece are notable not only for their frequency, but for their elegant construction, often featuring extensive dovetailing of phrases, and in some cases prominent use of sequence, imitation, and canon or approximate canon; see, for instance the caudae at lines 6,2 and 10,3. Additionally, the T melodies of the caudae that open each strophe (at lines 1,1 and 6,1) feature significant melodic correspondences, but with different rhythms in some portions; see the discussion of these specific passages below. Bukofzer (“Interrelations,” 101)⁵ notes that the rhythmic ⁴For information on this source and images of its contents, see William J. Summers and Peter M. Lefferts, English Thirteenth-Century Polyphony: A Facsimile Edition, Early English Church Music, no. 57 (London: Stainer and Bell for the British Academy, 2016), p. 14 and plate 8. Note that for this item f. 1r is given in the CPI database, whereas RISM presents it as f. 32v following the shelfmark numbers).

⁵Manfred F. Bukofzer, “Interrelations Between Conductus and Clausula,” Annales musicologiques, 1 (1953): 65-103.

variation observed in the caudae of this piece echoes procedures also seen in the conductus Deus creator omnium (H11/89), the version of A deserto veniens in both WI and CaJ (J31/1), and Veri vitis germine (H14/372); see the remarks on these other pieces for additional information. Note that repetition of a portion of one cauda in another within the same piece also appears in the work that directly follows Rex eterne in F, Gaude virgo virginum (G5/139), although in this case both the melodic and rhythmic profiles are retained, and both voices participate in the recall. Besides the features noted here, there are numerous other instances of phrase repetition and motivic interaction in Rex eterne; some, but certainly not all of these instances have been labeled in the transcription. Modal transmutation: Several of the caudae – specifically the ones at lines 2,3; 4,3; 5,1; 6,2; 7,3; and 10,3 – are transmuted into faster rhythmic values in WI. Certain portions of some of these particular caudae are similarly transmuted in F; see the remarks on the specific passages below. The most extensive of such readings are marked in the transcription and supplied as alternatives at its end. Outside of several rest strokes omitted in Ma (which are vouched for in every relevant case but one by both the extant concordant sources – and for the sole exception, see the remarks on the cauda at line 6,2), the slower, more deliberate rhythms favored by Ma present the most straightforward realizations. I would therefore conjecture they may represent the initial rhythmic conception of the caudae in this piece, which is why Ma is chosen here as the base source for this transcription. This appraisal is supported by several occasions where F and WI present unusual ligations in their transmuted contexts that may perhaps show evidence of partial transmutation (these are signaled above the staff in the transcription from Ma and in the alternative readings from WI and F that follow). For the most telling of these divergences, see the remarks on the final cauda (at line 10,3). Syllabic/Melismatic Identity: 1. The last six notes of the T of “Rex” in the opening cauda (line 1,1) = 1a. similar to the first seven notes of the T in the following cum littera segment “[Rex] eterne glo[rie]”; and 1b. similar to the last six notes of the final T phrase of the cauda on “Lu[cerna]” (line 6,1, opening Strophe II). The correspondence has been marked in the score with “x” and “x’ ” above the staff. See also the remarks on the identities between the two caudae that open Strophes I and II. 2. The T of “volu[it]” (line 3,3) = 2a. the T of the following cauda on “[volu]it”; as well as 2b. two non-consecutive phrases in the T of the preceding cauda on “ho[die]” (line 2,3) at L9-L12 and L17-L20; these are, however, very short, minor correspondences involving the identity of only the three or four pitches f, g, a (g). The instances are marked in the transcription as “y” and “y’.” Opening cauda (at line 1,1): the T part of this melisma is repeated in a varied version in the opening cauda of Strophe II (at line 6,1). The pitches are the same in both instances except for the addition of the second d note in the fourth T phrase in the first cauda, while the rhythms of the second phrase and the first part of the fourth phrase are also identical; the first and third T phrases (three notes each) are essentially transmuted to mode 1 in Strophe II from mode 5 in Strophe I. TD: WI,F: the penultimate pitches (T: c, D: e) of the cauda are repeated as si in both voices, implying an extended cadence and perhaps a longer succeeding rest than the one given in the transcription. Cauda at line 2,3: beginning with L3, the melisma on “hodie” is transmuted into the faster modes 1 and 6 in WI (from modes 5 and 1, respectively, given in Ma and F); see the alternative reading at the end of the transcription. Cauda at line 4,3: the b-flats proposed for the D in this passage on “constituit” appear only in WI. Beginning with L5, the melisma is transmuted into faster rhythms in WI, see the above remarks on modal transmutation and the alternative provided at the end of the transcription. Cauda at line 5,1: TD: Ma: the rests omitted at L20 and L24 in the passage over “morti” are found both in WI and F; the b-flat in the D occurs in WI only. This melisma starts out transmuted into faster modes in WI; see the above remarks on modal transmutation. In this case, the rhythms appear to revert to those in both F and Ma after L12, but the penultimate T phrase (gag) in WI is presented as 3li (marked in the Ma transcription), possibly indicating a partial attempt at conversion at this point, but an effort that is not supported by the simultaneous 3si (d,c,d) in the D in all extant sources. Cauda at 5,2: the fifth and seventh D phrases (from L18-L23 and L26-L31) of this melisma on “tributarios” (g,f,gfed,d and g,f,g,a,g) are ligated as 3li+3C,si and 3li,2li, respectively, in WI (marked in the Ma transcription). This feature may indicate a partial attempt at modal conversion in WI, similar to the results in the cauda at line 5,1. D: Ma: the rest stroke omitted at L25 appears both in WI and F. Cauda at line 6,1 (opens Strophe II): T: the melisma on “Lu[cerna]” is a varied presentation of the initial music of this piece; see the remarks on the opening cauda for details. The omitted rest stroke that closes the second D phrase (at L14) appears both in WI and F. Cauda at line 6,2: Ma: the first omitted rest of “[ac]cen[ditur]” (at L16) appears in both WI and F; the second (just prior to the punctus organi, and thus not rhythmically significant for the interpretation of the overlapping phrases in this cauda) occurs only in WI. WI presents this melisma in faster rhythms throughout; see the above remarks on modal transmutation and the reading supplied at the end of the transcription. Beginning with L15 of the Ma version, F reflects the same level of rhythmic transmutation seen in WI. This change in F happens to coincide with an extensive sequential canonic passage that begins at this point (cf. the similar features in the cauda at line 10,3). As the alternative reading given at the end of the transcription shows, after the sequential fall, the 3li,2li D ligation in F (=fga,ga) prompts an accompanying TL rest in the lower voice. This feature disrupts the musical flow of the T line and makes one wonder if this is an additional example of partial rhythmic conversion on the part of the F scribe. The disruption is avoided (but not completely obviated) in the alternative reading of WI by the use of a 5li D figure at the point in question, rendered SSBBL here, although it may also be interpreted using the LBLBL values of Ma and F. Cauda at line 7,1: the T of the first phrase of “et [domus]” (c,d,d) is ligated 2li,si in WI (marked in the Ma transcription) which may either reflect partial modal conversion or imply a faster (LB,L) reading for WI of the rhythms in both parts for this opening gesture (the si,3li of the D would therefore be rendered B,BBL). Cauda at line 7,3: WI presents this melisma on “evertitur” in faster rhythms throughout, and F partially so; see the above remarks on modal transmutation and the alternatives at the end of the transcription. Beginning with L19 of the Ma version, F is also transmuted to the rhythmic level of WI. The dissonances at the beginning of the second and third D phrases are supported by all extant sources. In Ma, the opening c of the final D phrase of the cauda is somewhat obscured by the verbal text above it. For the final cadence, the T of Ma has an extra c preceding the penultimate d; the D of this source, though, offers g,a as the last two notes; these apparently erroneous readings (compounded by the lack of clear alignment of parts at this point in Ma) have been corrected after F and WI. Cauda at line 9,1: TD: Ma: the rest stroke omitted at L25 in the cauda on “[inve]ni[tur]” appears in both WI and F. Final cauda (at line 10,3): this cauda features an extensive opening section – 42L in length in Ma – of a descending melodic sequence, combined with imitation and near canon between the voices (cf. the similar features in the cauda at line 6,2). This initial segment appears in faster rhythms in WI, but in extended form in both F and Ma; see the above remarks on modal transmutation. In the alternative readings given at the end of the transcription, two different realizations of the passage in WI are provided, allowing for different treatments of the strokes as either rests or breath marks. The second section of the cauda then essentially ends the modal transmutation in WI, but both WI and F now condense the music of only the first, third, and fifth T phrases from 8L to 4L, while preserving the overall melodic contour of the three sequentially descending gestures; the even-numbered phrases are left as they stand. The more balanced phrase structure and consistent treatment of the strokes as TL rests throughout the Ma version prompts me to regard it as the initial conception (see the notes supplied to these alternative readings within the main transcription from Ma). In support of this point, the D phrase in F just prior to the punctus organi that closes the piece retains the same ligation as Ma and is thus not (in contrast to WI) readily accommodated to the shorter phrase length of the T phrase below it (this feature is signaled in the alternative F reading given at the end of the transcription). Such an appearance in F suggests to me that its scribe may have worked from an exemplar similar in appearance to Ma, and was attempting to arrange this passage to conform to a version like that in WI, perhaps based on an aural memory of a faster performance reflecting the type of transmission in that source.

GAUDE VIRGO VIRGINUM

Conductus (G5/139)

F, f. 282v (7,16)

D I
T [Gau -
Gau -

[Gau] - de vir - go vir - gi-num. ex qua lu - men
[Gau] - de vir - go vir - gi-num. ex qua lu - men

lu - mi-num or - tum;
lu - mi-num or - tum;

ter-ris splen - du-it. et di - lu - it nu - bis mor - ta - lis ne - bu - las.
ter-ris splen - du-it. et di - lu - it nu - bis mor - ta - lis ne - bu - las.

et de - sic-ca -
et de - sic-ca -

e'
- vit ma-cu-las ra - - di - ces - que cri - mi - num.
d
- vit ma-cu-las ra - - di - ces - que cri - mi - num.

II
Sal - ve sa - - lus ho - mi - num.
i
b
T
Sal - ve sa - - lus ho - mi - num.

ce - cis lu - cem mun - do du - - cem
b
ce - cis lu - cem mun - do du - - cem

ce - [ce] - lo
b ce - [ce] - lo

k pa - ris do - mi -
i k
pa - ris do - mi -

k' m
l

First system of musical notation, featuring two staves with notes and rests. A red box with 'n' is present on the first staff.

Second system of musical notation, featuring two staves with notes and rests. The lyrics "-i." are written below the staves.

Third system of musical notation, featuring two staves with notes and rests. The lyrics "In e - gy - pto con - sti - tu - ti;" are written below the staves.

Fourth system of musical notation, featuring two staves with notes and rests. The lyrics "te du - cen - te su - mus tu - ti. ut sa - lu - ti" are written below the staves.

Fifth system of musical notation, featuring two staves with notes and rests. The lyrics "re - sti - tu - ti mor - bo sa - ni pri - sti - no; Be - ne - di - ca - mus do -" are written below the staves.

Sixth system of musical notation, featuring two staves with notes and rests.

Seventh system of musical notation, featuring two staves with notes and rests. The lyrics "- mi - no.]" and "- mi - no." are written below the staves.

GAUDE VIRGO VIRGINUM (A)
Conductus (G5/139)

F, f. 282v (7,16)

- | | |
|--|--|
| I Gaude, virgo virginum, ex qua lumen luminum ortum. Terris splenduit et diluit nubis mortalis nebulas et desiccavit maculas
radicesque crimum. | Rejoice, virgin of virgins, from whom the light of lights was born. He shone over the earth and both dissolved
5 the mists of the deadly cloud and dried up the stains and roots of sins. |
| II Salve, salus hominum,
cecis lucem, mundo ducem,
celo paris dominum. | Hail, salvation of mankind,
you give birth to the Lord from heaven,
10 a light to the blind, a leader for the world. |
| III Tu thalamus splendoris etherei;
tu balsamus saporis
nectarei;
tu dulcoris, tu pudoris
flosculus virginei. | You are the chamber of celestial splendor;
you are the balm tree with the flavor of nectar;
15 you are the little flower of virginal sweetness and modesty. |
| IV In Egypto constituti, te ducente sumus tuti,
ut saluti restituti,
morbo sani pristino,
BD Benedicamus domino. | Though consigned to Egypt, with you as our leader we are secure,
so that restored to salvation, 20 cured of our original illness,
“we may bless the Lord.” |

F, fasc. 7, no. 16, f. 282v: a2, Strophes I-IV, complete, with II-IV signaled by large capitals, the BD conclusion by a smaller one. The next piece (Beate virginis [H15/43]) also follows this work in W1.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 53, f. 136v (127v): a2, Strophes I-IV, complete: I and III begin with painted initials, II is signaled by a small capital, IV by a smaller painted initial; the BD is not distinguished by the size of its opening letter. The next piece (Beate virginis [H15/43]) also follows this work in F.

Ma, fasc. 3, no. 6, f. 37r: a2, Strophes I-IV, complete: I begins with an historiated initial (possibly the figure of an angel) sketched in grayish ink, unpainted, II not signaled at all by the size of the opening letter, III has space for an omitted staff-high initial, IV is headed by a system-high filigreed initial opening a new leaf, as though it begins a completely new piece; the BD is undistinguished.

W2, fasc. 6, no. 4, f. 99r: a2, Strophes I-IV, complete: I begins with its regular type of filigreed initial; II is signaled by a small capital; III, IV, and the BD conclusion by slightly larger ones.

Text only:

LoD (GB-Lbl Add. 27630), no. 6, f. 6v: a2 in a different musical setting, not distinguished with a different entry in Anderson’s catalog and not included in Falck’s; only the text of lines 1-4 and 6,3, within a ten-line poem divided into three strophes of 5, 3, and 2 lines each, are concordant in this transmission; rubric: “Item alii versi sexti vel quinti toni” (“other verses of the sixth or fifth tone”). The version in this source is distinguished as Gaude virgo virginum (B) on the CPI website.

The opening line of Gaude virgo virginum appears as line 14 of the conductus Hac in die rege nato (I30/150), the poem of which is constructed nearly completely from incipits of other conductus. It is transmitted in the following sources:

F, fasc. 7, no. 73, f. 332r: a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 89, f. 174v (165v): a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: General remarks: although this poem opens with praise to the Virgin, which returns in Strophes II and III, both I (at the end) and IV (throughout) turn towards glorifying Christ, suggested in the last strophe by the reappearance of the term “leader” (“ducente,” in line 18,2, recalling “ducem,” in line 9,4), before concluding with the BD tag. Versification: the irregular lengths of the strophes, their inconsistent delineation in the manuscripts (see the notes about initials under the reports on “Sources,” above), and the frequent use of interlinear rhyme (indicated in the disposition of the above text by extra spacing within applicable lines) allow a wide range of interpretations of the stanzaic and line divisions in this poem. The presentation given here (prompted by the presence of the initials in F) is therefore only one of a number of ways that the structure of the verse may be interpreted. Textual notes: 2-5: a common image of Christ as the sun, or a great light that here dispels the clouds of sin; for some further instances of this figure in the conductus repertory, see the notes to the text of Veri vitis germine (H14/372), lines 3-4. 11-12: the metaphor of Mary as the bridal chamber that housed Christ; see Psalm 18:6,¹ and the notes to the motet Serena virginum (A1/232 – vdW 69/M5) lines 4-5, as well as the discussion of the conductus Excitatur caritas in Yerico (F30/111), lines 19-20. 13-15: this passage is redolent of imagery from the Song of Songs, cf., for example, 4:10-16; see also Ecclesiasticus (Sirach), 24:20-21;² and the notes to Serena virginum, lines 35-37. 17: a metaphor for the sinful world, comparing it to the land that enslaved the Israelites, see Exodus, 1:7-14; and also cf. Exodus, 6:6.³

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 13,2: “balsamus,” the form required by the rhyming constraints of the stanza, specifies the balsam tree, rather than the balm it exudes (see the entry from the DMLBS presented in <http://logeion.uchicago.edu/balsamus>); therefore it is so rendered here. MUSIC: Syllabic/melismatic identity:

¹Psalm 18:6: “In sole posuit tabernaculum suum; et ipse tamquam sponsus procedens de thalamo suo. Exsultavit ut gigas ad currendam viam” (“He has set his tabernacle in the sun: and he, as a bridegroom coming out of his bride chamber, has rejoiced as a giant to run the course”).

²Ecclesiasticus (Sirach), 24:20-21: “Sicut cinnamomum et balsamum aromatizans odorem dedi; quasi myrrha electa dedi suavitatem odoris: et quasi storax, et galbanus, et unguis, et gutta, et quasi Libanus non incisus vaporavi habitationem meam, et quasi balsamum non mistum odor meus” (“I gave a sweet smell like cinnamon. and aromatical balm: I yielded a sweet odor like the best myrrh: and I perfumed my dwelling as storax, and galbanum, and onyx, and aloes, and as the frankincense not cut, and my odor is as the purest balm.”).

³Exodus, 6:6: “Ideo dic filiis Israel: ‘ego Dominus qui educam vos de ergastulo Aegyptiorum, et eruam de servitute: ac redimam in brachio excelso, et iudiciis magnis.’” (“Therefore say to the children of Israel: ‘I am the Lord who will bring you out from the work prison of the Egyptians, and will deliver you from bondage: and redeem you with a raised arm, and great judgments.’”) proposed by E. Fred Flindell, by way of reference to Gröninger:⁴ 1. T of “Salve,” line 8,1 (beginning Strophe II) = 1a. D of line 8,2 “sa[lus],” immediately following. This is very minor, involving four notes in a voice exchange passage and the presence of a single extra syllable in the T. Opening cauda (on line 1,1): TD: the music (pitches and rhythm) from the fifth phrase of the T to the end of the cauda (L15-L34,) is equivalent to both voices of the opening portion of the final cauda for this piece on “do[mino],” from its second phrase (at L3) up through the cadence immediately before the change to the syllable “-mi-” at L21. Both instances are signaled in the score by the boxed letters “b” and “c” above the staves. Cf. also the conductus immediately prior in F (Rex eterne glorie [H21/309]), where a portion of a cauda is also quoted, but in this case it is rhythmically altered and the repetition is confined to a single voice. Line 21 (BD): the Benedicamus conclusion, not based on any external musical source, appears in all MSS, and fits the poetry; furthermore, the relationship between the D line that opens the BD section and the prior T phrase over line 20 (“morbo sane pristino”), as well as the correspondence between the BD and opening cauda (see the following and prior remarks), serve to connect the BD conclusion to the rest of the poem musically. Closing cauda (on line 21,1): the portion of the cauda on “do[mino],” beginning with L3 of the melisma, recalls exactly the music in both parts of the concluding portion of the opening cauda; see the above remarks.

⁴E. Fred Flindell, “The Achievements of the Notre Dame School,” (Ph.D. diss., University of Pennsylvania, 1959), 303; Eduard Gröninger, Repertoire-Untersuchungen zum mehrstimmigen Notre Dame-Conductus, Kölner Beiträge zur Musikforschung, no. 2 (Regensburg: Gustav Bosse Verlag, 1939), 31.

BEATE VIRGINIS
Conductus: (H15/43)

F, f. 283v (7,17)

[Be-] a - te vir - gi - nis

[Be-] a - te vir - gi - nis

or: ♪ ♫ ♪ ♫ ♪

or: ♪ ♫ ♪ ♫ ♪

|TD: Mode 3 equally likely, here and for all caudae up to the end of Strophe II

[Be] - a - te vir - gi - nis fe - cun - dat

[Be] - a - te vir - gi - nis fe - cun - dat

b

b'

a'

b

vi - sce-ra vis san - cti flam - mi - nis

vi - sce-ra vis san - cti flam - mi - nis

b

b

non car - nis o - pe - ra.

non car - nis o - pe - ra.

y

x

ca - rens o - ri - gi - nis la - be pu - er - pe - ra.

ca - rens o - ri - gi - nis la - be pu - er - pe - ra.

y

x

de - i et ho - mi - nis dat

de - i et ho - mi - nis dat

y

x

no - va fe - no - va fe -

- de - ra.
- de - ra.

Ar - de - re cer - ni - tur ar - den - ti
Ar - de - re cer - ni - tur ar - den - ti

ra - di - o ru - bus. nec u - ri - tur i - gnis in - cen - di - o.
ra - di - o ru - bus. nec u - ri - tur i - gnis in - cen - di - o.

sic nec cor - rum - pi - tur con - ce - pto fi - li - o vir - go. nec
sic nec cor - rum - pi - tur con - ce - pto fi - li - o vir - go. nec

le - di - tur in pu - er - pe - ri -
le - di - tur in pu - er - pe - ri -
| TD: mode 3 also possible for this phrase

|TD: mode 1 most likely here and for the remainder of the caudae in this piece

- o.
si
- o.

III

D
T
Mi - ra-tur ra - ti- - o de - - um
Mi - ra-tur ra - ti- - o de - - um

in ho - mi - - ne. su - sce-pto fi - li - o
in ho - mi - - ne. su - sce-pto fi - li - o

de ma-tre vir - gi - ne.
de ma-tre vir - gi - ne.

non fi - at que - sti - o de tan-to non fi - at que - sti - o de tan-to

no - mi - ne. sit fi - des ra - ti - o vir - tus
no - mi - ne. sit fi - des ra - ti - o vir - tus

pro se - mi - e

pro se - mi - e

g f

f g' f'

f'

- ne.]

- ne.

BEATE VIRGINIS

Conductus (H15/43)

F, f. 283v (7,17)

- | | |
|--|---|
| I Beate virginis fecundat viscera vis sancti flamminis,
non carnis opera.
Carens originis labe, puerpera dei et hominis
dat nova federa. | The power of the Holy Spirit, not the exertions of the flesh, impregnates the womb of the blessed virgin.
5 Lacking the blemish of our ancestor, a new mother presents a new covenant between God and mankind. |
| II Ardere cernitur ardenti radio rubus, nec uritur ignis incendio;
sic nec corrumpitur concepto filio
virgo, nec leditur
in puerperio. | A bush is seen 10 to burn with a fiery glow, but is not consumed by the heat of the flames;
and so the Virgin is neither marred by conceiving 15 her son, nor is she sullied in childbirth. | | III Miratur ratio
deum in homine, suscepto filio
de matre virgine.
Non fiat questio
de tanto nomine;
sit fides, ratio,
virtus pro semine. | Reason is astonished at God within man, as a son is begotten 20 from a virgin mother.
Let there be no debate about so great a designation;
let faith, reason, and virtue support this child. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 17, f. 283v: a2, Strophes I-III, complete, with the subsequent stanzas headed by capitals; the same piece (Gaude virgo virginum [G5/139]) also precedes this work in WI, whereas the conductus Ave Maria gratia plena (II) (G7/29), which follows this piece in F, precedes it in Heid.

WI, fasc. 9, no. 54, f. 137v (128 v): a2, Strophes I-III, complete, with filigreed initials for each stanza (but smaller ones for II-III); the same piece (Gaude virgo virginum [G5/139]) also precedes this work in F.

Ma, fasc. 3, no. 16, f. 54v: a2, Strophes I-III, complete; none of the initials intended to open the strophes was ever entered.

Wood 591 (GB-Ob [pr. bk.] Wood 591; OxWood), no. 5, f. 4v-4r (i.e., foliation reversed):¹ a2, Strophes I-III, with II and III beginning with painted initials, and that of I cut out; mostly complete, except for the removal of the opening initial “B” (apparently with no additional missing music or text) and a corresponding small loss of the music and text on the overleaf. The omissions comprise the final T note and text syllable for line 18 and pitches missing in the D voice over line 18,3 (“[ho]mine”), starting with the b-flat in the descending octave series of conjuncturae from f-f on its second syllable up through the material overlaid to the third.

¹Pieces are identified, numbered, and foliated according to the description in RISM. The folio numbering in RISM is not indicative of the original MS order; as it states on the DIAMM site: “f. 1-2v is really f. 2v-1, since these pages are upside down in the source. Rectos are really versos and vice versa.” The MS preserves seven conductus, nos. 5-7 belonging to the Notre Dame repertory. Nos. 1-4 are English pieces.

Heid (D-HEu 2588; Heidelberg, Universitätsbibliothek, Hs 2588), no. 3,² f. 2r:³ a2; fragmentary; most of the music for the T voice survives from the start of the piece (opening with a filigreed painted initial) through the first syllable of line 2,2 (“[viscera]”), although the verbal text is lost beginning with the last two letters of line 2,1 (“fecund[at]”). Portions of the D (with most of the first three phrases worn away) are preserved from the opening up through the si=b-flat at L5 of the cauda after line 2;⁴ the piece does not continue onto the folio presently designated as 2v. Although the notation in this source is commonly described as mensural, the ligatures in the cauda segments are not obviously mensurally distinguished, since only cum proprietate and cum perfectione ligation appears throughout; rest strokes, though, seem to show distinctions in length. The extant cum littera segments show declamation mostly in L or L+siP values, along with a single possible indication of a 3li cop over the (now mostly missing) third syllable of line 2,1 (“fecund[at]”) in the T. The conductus Ave Maria gratia plena (II) (G7/29), which follows this piece in F, precedes it in Heid.

Text only:

Mo, no. 326 (fasc. 8, no. 24), f. 376v (374v): a3, Strophes I-III, complete, with no indications to signal the beginnings of the stanzas as given above. The text corresponds with the conductus, but serves with different music as the motetus voice of the Latin double motet Benedicta Marie virginis / Beate virginis / Benedicta (VdW 409/410/M32). Anderson claims (NDRC, 3:213) that the motetus setting preceded the conductus chronologically. The regular scheme of the poem, however, in addition to the relative age of the eighth fascicle of Mo against the other central MSS (F, WI, Ma), argues against this conjecture.

Note: All the remaining sources given below present the variant incipit “Marie virginis” and, if supplied, the same or a similar monophonic musical setting that differs from both the Parisian conductus and the Mo motet versions. The opening phrase of this alternative melody is modeled on that of the Marian antiphon Alma redemptoris mater, and several of the sources below treat it as a trope to this or another antiphon proper to the Virgin. Unless the information below indicates otherwise, images of these sources are not yet available to me, and the descriptions furnished here derive either from Anderson, NDRC, 3:213, or the CPI website.

The following sources transmit “Marie virginis” with music:

Graz 756 (A-Gu 756; Graz, Universitätsbibliothek, 756, no. 29, f. 189v: a1, Strophes I-III, complete, each stanza indicated by the same type of red painted capital; incipit “Marie virginis” with rubric “super antiphona

²The piece is numbered according to the sequence given in RISM and DIAMM; number 5 in this source (Procedentem sponsum) is not found in Parisian sources (it occurs in MSS in Engelberg, Erfurt, and other places) and is entered in a hand, ink, and notational dialect different from the other pieces; it is not included in Anderson’s catalog or on the CPI website.

³The numbering of the leaves and their sides is based on the library’s current foliation in the images of these fragments that are available online at <https://digi.ub.uni-heidelberg.de/diglit/heidhs2588/0001>. This enumeration does not always indicate the original sequence of the leaves. Other resources (including the CPI website, DIAMM, and Anderson, NDRC) may show different foliations.

⁴As given in Heid, the mostly missing music on the last portion of the first system to contain Beate virginis, which is prefaced by a red vertical line extending through both staves, actually corresponds to the concluding snippet of the previous piece, Ave Maria gratia plena (II) (G7/29).

speciosa”;⁵ different music from the conductus, given in unheightened neumes that appear to correspond with the alternative setting in the concordant sources below.

CH-SGs 388 (SG 388; St. Gallen, Stiftsbibliothek, Cod. Sang. 388), p. 472: a1;⁶ Strophes I-III, complete, with each stanza signaled by pilcrows and decorated capitals; incipit “Marie virginis,” with a marginal rubric at the left, “Item alii versus” (“other verses”), placed under a now struck-through indication (“versus super Nigra [sum]”), with a heading at the top center of the page that reads “Versus super Alma redemptoris,” and with a similar header at the top right giving “Versus super Alma”; different music from the conductus, given in partially heightened neumes agreeing with the alternative setting of the concordant sources below, with text-only cues for insertion of passages from Alma redemptoris at the end of each respective strophe (“Et stella maris,” “Tu que genuisti,” “Virgo prius”).

Eng 314 (CH-EN 314; Engelberg, Stiftsbibliothek, Cod. 314), f. 83r: a1, Strophes I-III, complete; incipit “Marie virginis,” different music from the conductus, with textual/musical cues for insertion of passages from the preceding Alma redemptoris at the end of each strophe (“Et stella,” “Tu que,” “Virgo”), comparable to CH-SGs 388.

Lbl Add. 22604 (GB-Lbl Add. 22604), f. 17v: a1, Strophes I-III, complete, marked “primus,” “secundus,” “tercius”; incipit “Marie virginis” with rubric “Alma redemptoris mater versus”; different music from the conductus, plus an added continuation, Alle resonet domus ecclesie (possibly intended for use during paschal time), not preserved in the other sources for this song.

A-Iu 457 (Innsbruck, Universitätsbibliothek, 457), f. 105r: a1, Strophes I-III, complete; incipit “Marie virginis,” different music from the conductus; only Strophe I is underlaid to the melody, with Strophes II-III entered below the setting.

D-B Mus. ms. 40580 (Berlin, Staatsbibliothek-Preußischer Kulturbesitz, Ms. mus. 40580), lost since 1945; copy at the Musikwissenschaftliches Seminar der Universität, Erlangen, f. 48v: a1, Strophes I-III, complete; incipit “Marie virginis”; different music from the conductus.

NL- ZUa 6 (Netherlands, Zutphen, Stadsarchief, Ms. 6), fol. 115r:⁷ Strophes I-III, complete, each headed by filigreed initials and prefaced with the rubric “versus”; incipit “Marie virginis,” with a further rubric placed before the Alma redemptoris antiphon that precedes the conductus poem: “In commemoratione Sancte Marie vigiliae antiphona” (“Antiphon in commemoration of the vigil of Holy Mary”); different music from the conductus, with the repeated textual/musical cue of “Sumens” at the end of each strophe for the insertion of the closing phrases from the preceding Alma redemptoris.

NL-Hs 184 C 6 (Netherlands, Haarlem, Stadsbibliotheek, 184 C 6), ca. f. 98v: a1; Strophes I-III, complete, incipit “Marie virginis” with rubric “In sollempnibus festis antiphona finalis” (“final antiphon on solemn feasts”); has textual/musical cues for insertion of passages from the Alma redemptoris at the end of each strophe (“Tu que,” “Virgo,” “Sumens”).⁸

⁵Perhaps referring to one of the several antiphons beginning Speciosa facta es et suavis; see, e.g., the Cantus Index (cantusindex.org), ID nos. 00498, 204721, 206102, and 206209. Images of Graz 756 are available at <https://unipub.uni-graz.at/obvugrscript/content/titleinfo/3856669>

⁶This source does not appear in either NDRC or on the CPI website. For an image of this page, see <https://www.e-codices.unifr.ch/en/csg/0388/472>.

⁷This source does not appear in either Anderson’s conductus edition or on the CPI website. For an image of the pertinent folios and a discussion of this MS, see Ike De Loos, “Liturgy and Chant in the Northern Low Countries,” Tijdschrift Van De Koninklijke Vereniging Voor Nederlandse Muziekgeschiedenis, 53 (2003): 9-47, at 34-35 (<http://www.jstor.org.proxy.wm.edu/stable/25047125>).

The following sources transmit the “Marie virginis” text without a musical setting:

F-Pn lat. 18571, f. 89v: text only, Strophes I-III, complete, with each pair of lines laid out as a single verse and headed with ornate capitals alternately indented as if to suggest organization into 6 couplets; incipit “Marie virginis”; concludes with “Deo gracias.”⁹

F-Boul 107 (Boulogne-sur-Mer, Bibliothèque municipale, 107 (olim 98)), f. 66v: text only, Strophes I-III, complete; incipit “Marie virginis.”

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 3: literally “the power of the holy breeze/wind/gust,” a common idiom for the Holy Spirit; flamen/flammen does not refer to flame; for that, see flamma. 5-6,1: most likely a reference to Mary rather than Christ; the Virgin is also free from original sin, according to the doctrine of her immaculate conception. 9-12: the burning bush that appeared to Moses on Mt. Sinai (see Exodus, 3:2-7; Acts, 7:30-32), a frequent figure associated with the Virgin retaining her chastity upon giving birth to Christ, as the explication in lines 13-16 demonstrates. 17-24: i.e., despite the irrationality attendant upon Christ’s incarnation and birth by a virgin (which is another frequent rhetorical trope; see, e.g., the comments to lines 23-24 of the conductus O felix Bituria [E8/232] for some other instances), the actual certainty of these miracles now allows an earlier opposed faith and reason to join together with virtue (Mary’s maidenly purity retained in the face of giving birth) to support and defend the truth of this astonishing event.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. MUSIC: Accidentals: There are more conflicting indications than usual among the sources in the deployment of b-flat signatures throughout the piece; the presentation here generally follows the indications in F; some further instances are explained below. Opening cauda: T: F, Ma: the strokes absent in these MSS at L11 and L14 are supplied from W1, Wood 591, Heid. The rhythmic reading admits an alternative (supplied above the staves), but the one chosen corresponds to the similar melodic figures repeated in the following cauda after line 1. An alternative argument, though, may be made with equal weight that the final two T phrases of the melisma should correspond with its two opening gestures. In addition, notice in both voices the common cadential figure in thirds that closes this cauda; this also appears frequently thereafter, as in ends of the caudae after lines 1 and 6, and at the close of line 4 (just to signal some of its uses in Strophe I alone); these appearances have not been marked in the score. Cauda after line 1: mode 3 is equally likely for this and each of the other caudae up to the final phrases of Strophe II, after which mode 1 prevails; mode 1 is preferred in this instance due to the melodic correspondences with the opening cauda. Line 2: TD: F: the inclusion of ficta b-flats here is prompted by the similar contour of the T melodies of lines 2 and 4, the latter instance of which prescribes flats in all extant sources but Wood 591, plus the presence of sigs in the T before line 2 in W1, Ma; sigs are om in the T of F, Heid, Wood 591, and none occurs in the D in any MSS. They seem needed here throughout the phrase, though, to avoid cross relations. Cauda after line 4: TD: F: the very beginning of the second phrase in this melisma (L9-L16) is similar to the opening of the cauda after line 6 in both parts; the brief correspondence is indicated in the score with boxed “x” and “y” figures. Cauda at line 16 (closing Strophe II): although ficta b-flats may seem called for here due to several b-f simultaneities, no source provides any and thus none has been offered for the transcription. Cauda at line 24 (closing Strophe III): the choice of b-natural pitches for the first section of the cauda and the contrasting b-flat sigs for its second half is born out by the agreement of the sources; only F, W1 suggest via an earlier active sig that the opening phrases may show flats, but both start the cauda’s third phrase with a new system with no sigs. Similarly all extant sources show the subsequent b-flat sigs in both parts at the same place that F assigns them, the only exception is Wood 591, which has a b-flat sig in the T alone.

⁸This source does not appear in either Anderson’s conductus edition or on the CPI website. For a catalog of this MS, which furnishes the details given above, see http://hlab.dyndns.org/pub/webplek/ike/ike/manuscripts/NL-Hs_184C6_ms.htm.

⁹An image of the applicable folios is available at <https://gallica.bnf.fr/ark:/12148/btv1b10721250c/f95.item.r=latin%2018571>.

AVE MARIA GRATIA PLENA (II)
Conductus (G7/29)

F, f. 284v (7,18)*

*The conflicting indications of signatures in this piece allow much leeway in the choice of accidentals, especially in the opening cauda; see the commentary for more information. As usual, editorial accidentals are intended to apply up through the end of the phrase.

be - ne - di - cta tu
be - ne - di - cta tu

in mu - li - e - ri - bus
in mu - li - e - ri - bus

et be - ne - di - ctus fru - ctus
et be - ne - di - ctus fru - ctus

ven -
ven -

[ven] - tris tu - i.] [ven] - tris tu - i.

n
n'

i'

o
o'

b
i

AVE MARIA GRATIA PLENA (II)¹

Conductus (G7/29)

F, f. 284v (7,18)

Ave Maria, gratia plena, dominus tecum.
Benedicta tu in mulieribus, et benedictus fructus ventris tui.

Hail, Mary, full of grace, the Lord is with you. Blessed are you among women, and blessed is the fruit of your womb.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 18, f. 284v: a2; complete; although a period occurs after the fourth word, none of the text is otherwise distinguished by capitalization or other means of signification; the conductus Beate virginis (H15/43), which precedes this piece in F, follows it in Heid (see this source below).

W1, fasc. 9, no. 62, f. 145r (136r): a2; complete; the extensively filigreed large opening initial, painted in the left margin, is placed slightly low, with the top of the letter level with the top line of the T staff, so that it almost looks as though the piece might begin at start of the second system on the leaf, rather than the first. Uppercase letters occur at “Benedicta” and “Et [benedictus],” the ink of the final three syllables is somewhat smudged, and the piece is preceded in W1 by the conductus Adiuva nos deus (J4/9), thus presenting two prose and possibly ceremonial texts in quick succession; it is also followed by the conductus Pater noster commiserans (H19/266), a textual sibling to the conductus Pater noster qui es in celis (G2/265), which, like Ave Maria, is another ceremonial prose text used as a conductus.

Ma, fasc. 3, no. 19, f. 59v: a2; complete; no opening initial was ever entered, although sufficient space is provided for it; furthermore, the text as it stands opens with a small letter “a,” placed under the first stroke in the T staff and not apparently acting as a guide letter for the illuminator. No further demarcations arise in the text.

W2, fasc. 6, no. 10, f. 114v: a2; complete, with no distinctions within the text; immediately follows the conductus Pater noster qui es in celis (G2/265), showing two closely related liturgical texts in quick succession.

Oxf-Sol,² no. 14 (=Sol, no. 1), f. Ar-Av: a2; fragmentary; the remains of this piece comprise a single vertical strip making up the left recto (f. Ar) and right verso (f. Av) segments of a single leaf, equivalent in width to about one-third of the original folio; the surviving segments are therefore rather disparate, preserving various small, non-contiguous portions of the piece from its opening to its close.³

¹There are four different musical settings of this text catalogued in the CPI database and in Anderson’s conductus catalog; the numbering of this item (II) corresponds to that of the CPI listing; in Anderson’s enumeration it is distinguished as “Ave Maria gratia plena (I)” in the alphabetical listings at the end of his catalog (see p. 57).

²This siglum as used here brings together the related fragments now preserved in Oxford, Bodleian Library, Auct. Q.3.17 (GB-Ob [pr. bk.] Auct. 6 Q.3.17; OxAuct) and CH-MSbk S.231 (Mariastein, Benediktinerkloster, S.231), the latter olim: Solothurn, Zentralbibliothek, S. 231 (Sol). The numbering and sequence of the items in this reconstituted source derives from the more complete combined listing in Everist, “A Reconstructed Source,” 107 (Table 2).

³The following elements of this piece are what remain on the seven partial systems that contain it in Oxf-Sol; the first six are preserved on f. Ar, the last on f. Av: 1) the first 12L of the T (and 11L of the D) of the opening cauda, with the filigree decoration preserved of the opening initial “A”(but curiously no indications of the actual letter, which seems intended to have been added later by the illuminator); 2) the last 14L of the D and final 12L of the T of the opening cauda, along with the figures and second syllable of the first word (“[A]ve”), and missing the following strokes; 3) the last 8L of the cauda prior to word 5 (“dominus”), along with its text, the T and D figures over that word, and their first notational elements over the next syllable (“te[cum]”) with its text; 4) the verbal, T, and

Heid (D-HEu 2588; Heidelberg, Universitätsbibliothek, Hs 2588), no. 2, f. 2v-2r:⁴ a2; the two folios, as presently numbered, are reversed from their original disposition, so the present recto was originally the verso; fragmentary, with a rather large portion of the bottom corner of the leaf missing and several passages very faded, some to near invisibility;⁵ the extant text finishes, unlike all other extant sources of this particular conductus setting, with a possible indication of an “Amen” conclusion, suggested by an uppercase “A,” whose final syllable does not survive. Although the notation in this source is commonly described as mensural, the ligatures in the cauda segments are not obviously mensurally distinguished; only cum proprietate and cum perfectione ligation appears throughout; rest strokes, though, seem to show some distinctions in length. In the extant cum littera segments declamation is in L or L+siP values and when ligatures appear they are also cum-cum in disposition; the conductus Beate virginis (H15/43), which precedes this piece in F, follows it in Heid.

Text only: since this passage is closely related to a biblical verse (see the notes on the text) and is likewise implemented in whole or in part in a number of liturgical items, as well as in conductus and other musical and textual settings, further text sources are widespread, if not innumerable.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: the words of this conductus are closely related to Luke, 1:28: “Et, ingressus angelus ad eam, dixit: ‘Ave gratia plena: Dominus tecum: benedicta tu in mulieribus.’” (“and, coming in to her [Mary], the D material over the final two syllables of word 7 through word 8 (“[bene]dicta tu”), followed by the first 10L from the subsequent cauda in the T, 13L in the D; 5) the first 20L (T and D) of the cauda following word 10 (“mulieribus”); 6) TtTD of word 13 (“fructus”) and the first syllable of 14 (“ven[tris]”), as well as 12L of the subsequent cauda; 7) (on f. Av) the final phrase of the closing cauda of the piece (7L in length), along with the concluding punctus organi in both TD and with no verbal text.

⁴The numbering of the leaves and their sides is based on the library’s current foliation in the images of these fragments that are now available online at <http://digi.ub.uni-heidelberg.de/diglit/heidhs2588>. This enumeration does not always indicate the original sequence of the leaves. Other resources (including the CPI website, DIAMM, and Anderson, NDRC) may show different foliations.

⁵The remains of this piece in Heid are as follows, organized according to the nine systems that carry it (the first five systems are inscribed on f. 2v, the remainder on f. 2r, according to the foliation now used by the Universitätsbibliothek, Heidelberg): 1) following the large red initial “A” that starts about halfway through the first system on f. 2v, the first 20L of the opening cauda appear, with the first 4L of D material heavily effaced, and only L9-11 of the T easily visible due to the same degree of wear; 2) continuation of the opening cauda up through the second syllable of the first word (“[A]ve”), with the final 16L or so before the syllable change increasingly worn as the edge of the page is approached; 3) the music continues from before, up through the setting of “dominus,” but with only the text of “[g]ratia plena” still visible from wear, so that, beginning with the last 5L of the cauda preceding “dominus,” the text and the music in the T is essentially gone; 4) due to a large, irregularly shaped missing portion at the bottom left edge of the leaf, this system preserves 12L in the T (18L in the D) of the cauda preceding “benedicta tu,” while the system concludes with music so increasingly faded that it is not clear what how much may follow the setting of “tu,” since the start of system 5 is lost; 5) thanks to the missing portion of the leaf, the last system on f. 2v presents only the last 4L of the T in the cauda that precedes “in mulieribus,” but offers 12L of the D voice of the melisma; it then continues on with both parts and verbal text, closing with the first 8L of the melisma following “mulieribus”; 6) beginning f. 2r, this system continues where f. 2v left off, including all material up through the first syllable of “ven[tris],” with the D voice rather blurry for the material over “fructus ven-”; 7) picking up from there, with its first 3L or so faded from the T and ca. 8L from the D, this system finishes with the first 8L of the closing cauda; the start of this melisma is prefaced by an uppercase “A” (possibly for “Amen”), as reported in the source description above; 8) this next system then continues from before, with the first 12L of the T very difficult to make out, and finishes in the T with the opening ligature of the last phrase of the cauda before the punctus organi, but with the D concluding with the final figure of its previous phrase; 9) the final portions of the Ave Maria (II) conductus appear in a space allotted for it at the right margin of this system, since the following piece in Heid, Beate virginis (H15/43), is disposed to begin at the system’s left edge; yet it preserves only two D ligatures and part of one T figure carrying over from the prior system, as the conclusion of the piece is lost with the now missing bottom right edge of the leaf.

angel said ‘Hail, full of grace, the Lord is with you; blessed are you among women’”), and to Luke 1:42, on the occasion of Mary meeting her cousin Elizabeth: “et exclamavit voce magna, et dixit: Benedicta tu inter mulieres, et benedictus fructus ventris tui.” (“And she [Elizabeth] cried out with a loud voice, and said: Blessed are you among women, and blessed is the fruit of your womb”). The Ave Maria text also frequently serves, if only in part, for liturgical items of various stripes. It is one of the very few prose texts to appear in the Parisian conductus repertory. All told, these include Pater noster qui es in celis (G2/265), Ave Maria gratia plena (II) (G7/29), Deus pacis et dilectionis (J44/93), and Adiuva nos deus (J4/9); like the work under consideration, all of these have close ties to the texts of liturgical items. For a listing of conductus in the four primary “Parisian” sources (F, W1, W2, Ma) that relate to the liturgy through quotation, reference, paraphrase, or accommodation, see the general remarks in the notes on the text to the conductus Puer nobis est natus (H25/276).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: F, Ma, W2: no period at the close of the text, supplied from W1, Heid (missing from Oxf-Sol). MUSIC: Musical repetition: the various caudae feature a notable amount of repetition in varying degrees; the technique is particularly concentrated in the opening melisma; a number of instances are marked throughout the score, although several instances of sequential repetition, or near-repetition have not been signaled. Accidentals: there are more irreconcilable indications than usual among the sources in the deployment of b-flat and b-natural signatures throughout the piece, especially in the opening cauda (see below), which also presents a rather high level of dissonance; the presentation here generally follows the indications in F with input from the other MSS. Opening cauda: the conflicting situation involving the use of accidentals is particularly vexing at the start of the piece, where, for example, a b-natural sig appears in the T before L9 in every source but Oxf-Sol (it is very difficult to be sure of what appears in Heid at this point, but I just think I can make one out),⁶ but when the same phrase is repeated at L40 in the D (marked in the score as “d’ ”) a small b-flat sig is visible at the start of the second system in F, and the remains of an erased b-flat sig in W2 occur at the start of its own second system, just 12L prior to that flat in F;⁷ W1, Ma, Heid, in conformity, also show a b-flat sig in force for this latter passage (in Oxf-Sol the relevant portion is missing). As a result, although this transcription regards the b-natural sig at L9 in the T as a rather heavily entrenched mistake and favors the liberal deployment of b-flats throughout the opening cauda, there are reasons just as good to allow for the use of b-natural here and elsewhere. Cauda after “tui”: T: no extant MS suggests a flat here to soften the b-f tritone that begins the melisma; note that 2L later this is followed by b-e sonority; note also the b-f simultaneities that appears in the previous cauda on “ven[tris]” at L6 and L19 of the melisma.

⁶Although it is not otherwise reported in the other editions of this piece that I have consulted, a sig quad on b (i.e., a natural sign) is clearly visible at this point in Ma as well, adopting the somewhat unusual shape for the sign that can also be seen right after the setting of “plena” in system II, and before that of “dominus tecum” soon after the start of the third system on this folio (59v); both of these signs in Ma correspond to similar ones also at these same points in W1.

⁷This flat signature is also under reported for F, and could be an afterthought, squeezed in later by the scribe; the evidence thus suggests that at some point the scribe of W2 also thought that a flat sig needed to be included here.

FULGET IN PROPATULO

Conductus (H17/134)

*F, f. 285r (7,19)

Soprano: [Ful - get

Tenor: Ful - [Ful] - get

in pro - pa - tu - lo lux e - ter - ne glo - ri - e.

in pro - pa - tu - lo lux e - ter - ne glo - ri - e.

or - tus est de ri - vu - lo or - tus est de ri - vu - lo

fons mi - se - ri - cor - di - e vim du - cit a sur - cu - lo

fons mi - se - ri - cor - di - e vim du - cit a sur - cu - lo

ra - dix ve - ni - e ra - dix ve - ni - e per quem tem - pus gra - ti - e da - tur se - cu - lo.

per quem tem - pus gra - ti - e da - tur se - cu - lo.

Annotations: mode 3 equally likely, mode 3 also possible, mode 1 also possible, mode 1 also possible, as specified by WI; see alternative * at end, mode 3 also possible, mode 1 equally possible.

Markings: a, b, b', b'', c

*A number of the caudae in this piece, particularly the internal and closing melismas of Strophes I and II are equally at home in mode 3 as in mode 1 (and conceivably mode 6 is not out of the question); some others (or sections of others) seem to suggest one mode in preference to the other. When this occurs the various possibilities have been signaled above the staves of the transcription.

mode 3 also possible

b^{'''} c'

II

D

T

Flo - ret yes - se vir - gu - la ro - re ple - na ce - li - co

Flo - ret yes - se vir - gu - la ro - re ple - na ce - li - co

mode 3 also possible

fu - git e - ve ne - bu - la e - ven - tu non

fu - git e - ve ne - bu - la e - ven - tu non lo - gi - co. dum chri - sti vir - gun - cu - - la non

lo - gi - co. dum chri - sti vir - gun - cu - - la non

in lu - bri - co spem po - nit. sed se -

in lu - bri - co spem po - nit. sed se -

mode 1 also possible

- du - la ser - vit u - ni - co.

- du - la ser - vit u - ni - co.

[TD: all MSS differ in ligation of final phrase; see  at end

Musical score for the first system, featuring two staves with notes and rests. The music is in a 6/8 time signature with a key signature of one flat (B-flat). The first staff begins with a treble clef and a common time signature (C), while the second staff begins with an alto clef and a common time signature (C). The music consists of eighth and sixteenth notes, with some rests.

III

Musical score for the second system, including vocal parts with lyrics. The system is labeled 'III' in red. It features two staves: a soprano staff (Soprano) and a tenor staff (Tenor). The lyrics are: "Ne - sci-us de - fi-ce-re de - fe - ctus in-gre - di-tur. an -". The music is in a 6/8 time signature with a key signature of one flat (B-flat). The lyrics are written in blue text below the notes.

Musical score for the third system, including vocal parts with lyrics. The system features two staves: a soprano staff (Soprano) and a tenor staff (Tenor). The lyrics are: "-ge - li-cum vi - ve - re fa - mem si - tim pa - ti - tur." The music is in a 6/8 time signature with a key signature of one flat (B-flat). The lyrics are written in blue text below the notes.

Musical score for the fourth system, including vocal parts with lyrics. The system features two staves: a soprano staff (Soprano) and a tenor staff (Tenor). The lyrics are: "tem - pta - tur sed te - me - re. mors". The music is in a 6/8 time signature with a key signature of one flat (B-flat). The lyrics are written in blue text below the notes.

Musical score for the fifth system, including vocal parts with lyrics. The system features two staves: a soprano staff (Soprano) and a tenor staff (Tenor). The lyrics are: "in - cur - ri - tur. sed ta - men ex - tin - gui-tur or - to sy - de -". The music is in a 6/8 time signature with a key signature of one flat (B-flat). The lyrics are written in blue text below the notes.

Musical score for the sixth system, including vocal parts with lyrics. The system features two staves: a soprano staff (Soprano) and a tenor staff (Tenor). The lyrics are: "in - cur - ri - tur. sed ta - men ex - tin - gui-tur or - to sy - de -". The music is in a 6/8 time signature with a key signature of one flat (B-flat). The lyrics are written in blue text below the notes. There are red boxes containing the letters 'e', 'd', 'e', and 'f' above certain notes in the soprano staff.

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*Cauda after line 6 ("radix venie"): reading in mode 1 from W1, f. 142r (133r), III-IV

Cauda following line 16 ("servit unico," closing Strophe II): final phrase showing variant readings from F (readings in mode 3 also possible):

a. W1, f. 142v (133v), III b. Ma, f. 53r, II c. Cssc 117 I*, f. 142v (133v), III

†End of final cauda at line 24 ("syde[re]"): added penultimate flourish from W1, f. 143r (134r), I

Beginning at the top of the next leaf after this piece (f. 286v) three successive two-voice continuations follow (F-7,20-22) from the five conductus in fascicle 6 that begin in three parts and conclude in two voices: Hic per mundum from Naturas deus regulis (C7/214, starts at F-6,10), Clausus in testa from Relegentur ab area (C6/304, at F-6,2), and Veritati stat obvia from Transgressus legem domini (C8/349, at F-6,11); the remaining two continuations are found together later on in F-7, at nos. 37-38. Interestingly, the two-voice sections of these three conductus in F occur in the same order as their corresponding three-voice components in Ma, which does not transmit the continuations a2.

FULGET IN PROPATULO

Conductus (H17/134)

F, f. 285r (7,19)

I	Fulget in propatulo lux eterne glorie. Ortus est de rivulo fons misericordie. Vim ducit a surculo radix venie, per quem tempus gratie datur seculo.		The light of eternal glory shines out in the open. A spring of mercy has arisen from a rivulet. 5 The root of pardon draws strength from the branch, through which a time of grace is given to the world.
II	Floret Yesse virgula, rore plena celico. Fugit Eve nebula eventu non logico, dum Christi virguncula non in lubrico spem ponit, sed sedula servit unico.	10	The little rod of Jesse flourishes, filled with heavenly dew. Eve's cloud vanishes from an irrational event, when Christ's diligent little maid places hope not on 15 what is slippery, but serves the one and only.
III	Nescius deficere defectus ingreditur. Angelicum vivere, famem, sitim patitur. Temptatur, sed temere. Mors incurritur, sed tamen extinguitur orto sydere.	20	Not knowing weakness he enters weakened. Living angelically, he endures hunger and thirst. He is tempted, but in vain. Death is incurred, but yet is extinguished by the rising of the star.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 19, f. 285r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with II-III shown by capitals. Beginning at the top of the next leaf after this piece (f. 286v) three successive two-voice continuations follow (F-7,20-22) from the five conductus in fascicle 6 that begin in three parts and conclude in two voices: Hic per mundum from Naturas deus regulis (C7/214, starts at F-6,10), Clausus in testa from Relegentur ab area (C6/304, at F-6,2), and Veritati stat obvia from Transgressus legem domini (C8/349, at F-6,11); the remaining two continuations are found together later on in fasc. 7, at nos. 37-38. Interestingly, the two-voice sections of these three conductus in F occur in the same order as their corresponding three-voice components in Ma, which does not transmit the continuations a2.

Wl, fasc. 9, no. 58, f. 142r (133r): a2; Strophes I-III, complete; painted initials begin each strophe.

Ma, fasc. 3, no. 14, f. 51r:¹ a2; Strophes I-III, complete; the cauda following line 6 (on “venie”) was apparently omitted at first, as it is supplied within the bottom right margin of the leaf in the hand of the main scribe; space was left for initials for each stanza, although only the red-painted, filigreed “N” of Strophe III was ever entered.

¹The following folio in Ma was initially misnumbered, with “53” given in the typical place for folio numbers at the top right recto of the leaf. The correct number, “52,” appears farther down, opposite the second system on the page.

Cssc 117 (Cambridge, Sidney Sussex College, MS 117; GB-Cssc 117*),² no. 2, f. 1r: a2; Strophes I-III, fragmentary; on f. 1r: opening of the piece, in both parts with text, up through the short cauda following line 7 (on “gratie”). On f. 1v: T and Tt only of lines 10,2-13,2 (“plena ... christi”) as the D of this system is cut away, then TD and Tt of lines 13,3 (“virguncula”) through the first 11L of the closing cauda following line 24 (on “syde[re]”). The extant portions show a large painted initial for the start of the piece and a smaller one for Strophe III; the beginning portion of Strophe II is missing with the excised top of the leaf. The presently numbered f. 2r is not contiguous with the original layout of the MS and begins in the midst of the conductus Genitus divinitus (I25/144).

Text only:

Line 1 of Fulget in propatulo appears as line 23,2-4 (in Strophe II) in the text of the conductus Hac in die rege nato (I30/150), the poetry of which is made up nearly entirely from the incipits of other conductus. This piece is preserved in the following sources:

F, fasc. 7, no. 73, f. 332r: a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 82, f. 174v (165v): a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1-8: the opening stanza of the poem is replete with symbols of the incarnation and the virgin birth of Jesus: the light (lux), source (fons), and branch (surculus) refer to Christ; the rivulet (rivulus) and root (radix) are most likely the Virgin Mary (see, e.g., the motets Fons misericordie salve vas mundicie / Pro patribus [VdW 399/M30] and Radix venie / Latus [VdW 229/M14]); alternatively, the latter pair of images (or either one of them) may also refer to God the Father. 9: the second strophe is given over primarily to Marian imagery with the opening evocation of the tree or root of Jesse (Isaiah, 11:1: “Et egredietur virga de radice Jesse, et flos de radice ejus ascendet” [“And there shall come forth a rod out of the root of Jesse, and a flower shall rise up out of his root.”]). 10: cf. Isaiah, 45:8: “rorate, caeli, desuper” (“rain down, dew, from heaven”), used as an Introit text for Marian masses during Advent. Dew is frequently symbolic of Christ and the power of God, such as the dew that collected on Gideon’s fleece, recounted in Judges 6:36-40; the fleece itself in this instance is a figure of the Virgin Mary; see the remarks on the text for the conductus Flos de spina procreatur ... misso rore (H29/127), line 3, and the references it offers. 11-12: Mary’s birthing of Christ cancels the offense committed by Eve from Genesis 3 that brought on original sin; the irrational event is the birth of Christ from a virgin (see Matthew, 1:18-25; Luke, 1:26-38). The comments to lines 23-24 of the conductus O felix Bituria (E8/232) provide some other instances of this rational conundrum in the conductus repertory. 13-16: Eve’s deception by the serpent (Genesis, 3:1-5) is contrasted with Mary’s acceptance of God’s command to bear Jesus (Luke, 1:34-38). 17-18: these two verses and the following line are somewhat difficult to construe. If they are rendered correctly here, a possible meaning is that, although Christ contains God’s full divinity, he is also human and therefore suffers the hunger and thirst he experiences during his wandering in the desert that is

²This source is an extant portion of a larger MS possessed by the Dominican library of Soest that originally included the now disparate *GB-Cssc 117, D-MÜsa Mscr. VII, 6115, D-MÜu 382, and D-MÜu 378. For information, see Eva Maschke, “Notre Dame Manuscripts and their History: Case Studies on Reception and Reuse,” Ph.D. dissertation (University of Southampton / Universität Hamburg, 2015), 87-131.

picked up in lines 19-21. For a similar idea, see the conductus Sol sub nube latuit (I16 /334), lines 40-44. 19-21: references to the biblical account of the temptation of Christ by the devil (see Mark, 1:12-13; Matthew, 4:1-11; Luke; 4:1-13; and cf. Hebrews, 2:18 and 4:15-16), where Jesus journeys into the desert and fasts for forty days and nights before the devil tempts him to no avail. 19: although in both Mark, 1:13 and Matthew, 4:11, Jesus is mentioned as being administered to by angels after his temptation in the desert (which prompts Anderson’s contrasting translation in NDRC, 3:xxv), I think it more likely that this may be a reference to the so-called “angelic life,” typically associated with chastity and asceticism, which would accord with Jesus’s fasting in the desert prior to his temptation; see Jerome, Epistola IX ad Paulam et Eustochium, chap. 5, as given in PL, 30, cols. 130D-131A: “Profecto praeter carnem vivere, non terrena vita est, sed coelestis. Unde in carne angelicam vitam acquirere, majus est meritum, quam habere” (“Indeed, living beyond the flesh is not an earthly life, but heavenly. Therefore it is the greater merit to acquire, rather than to possess an angelic life in the flesh”). Similar sayings often occur in various forms, such as: “In carne praeter carnem vivere, angelicum est” (“to live in the flesh beyond the flesh, that is angelic”), and are attributed variously to Tertullian, Ambrose, and Gregory of Nazianzus. 22-24: for the frequent conceit of death being overcome by death (i.e., by Jesus’s sacrifice and resurrection), see Hebrews, 2:14-15; Romans, 6:9; 1 Corinthians, 15:26-27, 54-55; and Payne, Motets and Prosulas, p. 27 (note to lines 136-137). 24: The risen star is Christ; see the prophecy of Balaam in Numbers, 24:17: “Videbo eum, sed non modo: intuebor illum, sed non prope. Orietur stella ex Jacob, et consurget virga de Israel ...” (“I shall see him, but not now: I shall behold him, but not near. A star shall rise out of Jacob and a scepter [virga] shall spring up from Israel ...”). Balaam and his prophecy also appear in the conductus Renovantur veterum (J5/305), lines 21-24.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 8,2: period omitted. 18,1: deffectus. MUSIC: A number of the caudae in this piece, particularly the internal and closing melismas of Strophes I and II are equally at home in rhythmic mode 3 (or even 6) as in mode 1; some others (or their sections) seem to suggest one mode in preference to the other. When this occurs, the possibilities have been signaled above the staves of the transcription. Opening cauda: D: F: the 4C of the initial figure looks like gfdc; gfed is confirmed by all other MSS; T: F: the 3li=afg of the fifth phrase from L9-L12 is written as 3si in W1, Ma; *Cssc 117 appears as in F; D: F: the e of the final phrase appears as f, due to space constrictions; adopted reading confirmed by all other MSS. Cauda following line 6: D: W1: the final phrase of the melisma on “[veni]e” is given as si,3li,3li,2li,2li, which obviates a bit of the dissonance and suggests that W1 at least is more likely rendered in mode 1; see the alternative rendering of this portion at the end of the transcription; all other MS ligations agree with F. Cauda following line 16 (closing Strophe II): TD: the ligations and some pitches of the final phrase of the melisma are rendered differently among the sources (given also in the alternatives provided at the end) – T: W1: f,g,b,afd’f,g’=3si,3li’2si’; Ma: f,gba,fd’f,g=si,3li,2li,DL,si; *Cssc 117: f,g,b,a,df,g=4si,3li,si – D: W1: fedc,b,cdc,ba, a,g=4C,3li,2li,2si; Ma: opening figure rendered: 5C; *Cssc 117: as in F. Of all the different readings, *Cssc 117 provides the only one that is thoroughly consonant. Final cauda: TD: before the concluding note in both parts, W1 has an added D flourish over an additional penultimate si=f in the T: 2li+4C,2li= cd+cbag,ga; this alternative is given at the end of the transcription.

O QUI FONTEM GRATIE

Conductus (H28/243)

*F, f. 289v (7,23)

I

D
8
[O] qui fon-tem gra - ti - e

T
8
O [O] qui fon-tem gra - ti - e

ca - pti-vus re - ge - ne-ras. ce - los en-de-ly-chy-e fe - de-re con-fe - de-ras.

ca - pti-vus re - ge - ne-ras. ce - los en-de-ly-chy-e fe - de-re con-fe - de-ras.

or - di-na - ta se-ri-e mun - di mo - tus tem - pe-ras. y - les in tem-pe - ri - e

or - di-na - ta se-ri-e mun - di mo - tus tem - pe-ras. y - les in tem-pe - ri - e

ef - fre-na - ta co - hi - bes. et dis - sol - vi pro - hi - bes. ut le-ges quas ad - hi - bes

ef - fre-na - ta co - hi - bes. et dis - sol - vi pro - hi - bes. ut le-ges quas ad - hi - bes

e - le - men - ta te - ne - ant. et con - cor - di co - e - ant dis - po - si - ti - on - e.

e - le - men - ta te - ne - ant. et con - cor - di co - e - ant dis - po - si - ti - on - e.

*[Refrain]

Refr.
8
O [O] sum - ma po-ten-ti - a in-ter dis-si - den - ti - a

8
O [O] sum - ma po-ten-ti - a in-ter dis-si - den - ti - a

*Most of the caudae in this piece may be rendered in mode 3 (and sometimes mode 6) as well as mode 1. The main exceptions are the final two phrases of the melisma ending the refrain and the caudae that close Strophe II and open Strophe III, both in first mode. Mode 1 has been used here by default throughout.

For a number of conceivable ways to perform the refrain in this piece, see the comments given with the refrain cue at the end of Strophe II.

fir - ma fir - mans fe - de - ra. ut su - pe - ra sic in - fe - ra re - fre - nes il -

fir - ma fir - mans fe - de - ra. ut su - pe - ra sic in - fe - ra re - fre - nes il -

-li - ci - ta. di - gna pen - sans me - ri - ta re - tri - bu - ti - o - ne.

-li - ci - ta. di - gna pen - sans me - ri - ta re - tri - bu - ti - o - ne.

D II T
Le - [Le] - gem fe - de - ris im - po - nis su - pe - ris. con - ser - vans su - pe - ra. Ma: ♯ | Ma: ♯ |

Le - [Le] - gem fe - de - ris im - po - nis su - pe - ris. con - ser - vans su - pe - ra. WI: -

ce - lum nu - me - ris mo - ves in - nu - me - ris et ce - li sy - de - ra.

ce - lum nu - me - ris mo - ves in - nu - me - ris et ce - li sy - de - ra.

tu ce-lum cir-cu-lis tu mo-tus re-gu-lis strin-gis er-ra-ti-cos.

tu ne-xus mu-si-cos in-ne-ctis dis-so-nis. ex qui-bus con-so-nis.

to-nis mel-li-so-nis red-dis ar-mo-ni-as. qui pro-pri-is of-fi-ci-is.

si-gnas ge-rar-chy-as O sum-ma.

[Refrain]*

*Given that this refrain cue appears here in F without its opening cauda (which, in contrast, is reinstated in the refrain cue that ends Strophe III, but now without its concluding melisma), one could justify performing this refrain here either with or without its opening caudae, and also with or without its closing melisma after Strophe III. Conceivably, similar flexibility could guide the execution of the other appearances of the refrain in this piece. The other two musical sources (W1, Ma) have no such cues and thus offer no corroboration.

Er- [Er] - go qui tam dis-so-na.

co-gis con-so-na-re que di-vi-ne con-so-na le-gi mo-de-ra-re;.

me - los quod di - vi - ni - tus tu - us spi - rat spi - ri - tus no - bis

me - los quod di - vi - ni - tus tu - us spi - rat spi - ri - tus no - bis mis - sus ce - li - tus; ple - ni - us in - spi - ret. e - nor - mes re - i - ci - at.

mis - sus ce - li - tus; ple - ni - us in - spi - ret. e - nor - mes re - i - ci - at.

con - cor - des ef - fi - ci - at. quos ex - pi - at sic pu - ni - at.

con - cor - des ef - fi - ci - at. quos ex - pi - at sic pu - ni - at.

ut vi - ces quas va - ri - at al - ter - nis sic u - ni - at. ne li - ra

ut vi - ces quas va - ri - at al - ter - nis sic u - ni - at. ne li - ra

*[Refrain]

de - li - ret. O [O] sum - ma.

de - li - ret. O [O] sum - ma.

*For a number of conceivable ways to perform the refrain in this piece, see the comments given with the refrain cue at the end of Strophe II.

O QUI FONTEM GRATIE

Conductus (H28/243)

F, f. 289v (7,23)

- I O qui fontem gratie captivus regeneras, celos endelychye
 federe confederas.
 Ordinata serie
 mundi motus temperas.
 Yles in temperie effrenata cohibes, et dissolvi prohibes, ut leges quas adhibes
 elementa teneant, et concordi coeant dispositione.
- Refr.* O summa potentia,
 inter dissidentia
 firma firmans federa,
 ut supera, sic infera,
 refrenes illicita,
 digna pensans merita
 retributione.
- II Legem federis imponis superis, conservans supera.
 Celum numeris moves innumeris et celi sydera.
 Tu celum circulis, tu motus regulis stringis erraticos.
 Tu nexus musicos innectis dissonis, ex quibus consonis tonis mellisonis reddis armonias, qui propriis officiis signas gerarchyas
- Refr.* O summa [potentia,
 inter dissidentia
 firma firmans federa,
 ut supera, sic infera,
 refrenes illicita,
 digna pensans merita
 retributione.]
- You, the captive, regenerate the font of grace, you bring together the heavens in a pact of actuality.
- 5 You temper the motion of the world through orderly arrangement.
 You restrain what is unbridled with the proper mixture of substance, and prevent it from dissolving, 10 so that the laws that you apply hold the elements in check, and combine them
 in harmonious balance.
- O highest power,
 15 fortifying firm alliances
 among incompatible things,
 so that you curb what is illicit on high just as you do down below, rewarding what is deserving 20 with suitable recompense.
- You impose a law of agreement upon celestial things, maintaining the heavenly bodies.
 You set the heavens in motion 25 and move the stars of the sky with numbers beyond number.
 You constrain the heavens in their circular courses, and tame erratic motions with rules.
- 30 You fasten together musical bonds from discords, out of which you render harmonies with consonant, mellifluous tones, you who 35 through your own workings designate the ordering of things.
- O highest power,
 fortifying firm alliances
 among incompatible things, 40 so that you curb what is illicit down below just as you do on high, rewarding what is deserving
 with suitable recompense.

III Ergo, qui tam dissona cogis consonare, que divine consona legi moderare, melos quod divinitus tuus spirat spiritus, nobis missus celitus, plenius inspiret. Enormes reiciat. Concordes efficiat. quos expiat sic puniat, ut vices quas variat, alternis, sic uniat, ne lira deliret.	45 50 55	Therefore, you who compel what is so dissonant to be consonant, and what is concordant to adjust to divine law, let the melody that your heaven-sent spirit exhales from above breathe more fully upon us. Let it reject irregularities. Let it produce concords. It purifies the ones it so punishes, so that, by turns, it may bring together the changes it alters, lest the lyre go out of tune.
Refr. O summa [potentia inter dissidentia firma firmans federa. ut supera sic infera refrenes illicita. digna pensans merita retributione.]	60	O highest power, fortifying firm alliances among incompatible things, so that you curb what is illicit down below just as you do on high, rewarding what is deserving with suitable recompense.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 23, f. 289v: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with refrain (the first piece with this attribute in F-7, the next one not occurring until Eclipsim patitur [I7/105], at F-7,60); and with the subsequent stanzas, refrain, and refrain cues indicated by capitals. After the initial full presentation of the refrain after Strophe I, the music and text of its first two refrain words follows both Strophes II (here without its introductory melisma) and III (now with the opening but not the closing melisma).

WI, fasc. 9, no. 74, f. 158r (149r): a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with refrain; painted initials supplied for each stanza and refrain, but with no indication of the refrain's recurrence beyond its first appearance after Strophe I.

Ma, fasc. 3, no. 20, f. 60v: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with the refrain signaled in its appearance after Strophe I by a slightly elaborated capital "O," but with no cues supplied for successive stanzas; painted initials are provided for Strophe II (larger) and III (smaller), but none was executed for the opening of the piece, although space is allotted for it and a typical lower-case "o" appears under the first note in the T part; the text shows evidence of having been proofread, with occasional omitted words supplied in the margins.

Text only:

OxRawl (GB-Ob Rawl.poet.C510), no. 25, f. 240r (11r); text only; Strophes I-III, complete, with refrain; the strophes II, III, and the refrain following I are indicated by first letters that are slightly larger and decorated somewhat differently than the capitals that begin the other poetic lines in this poem; a three-word, capitalized opening cue for the refrain appears after Strophe II, but not for III; rubric: "Prosa de muneribus datis et dandis quid conferunt" ("a prosa about gifts that were given, and what they confer in the giving").

Nero C IX (GB-Lbl Cotton MS Nero C IX), f. 226r; text only; Strophes I-III, complete, with refrain; rubric: “Incipit lira extollens virginem gloriosam” (“Here begins the *Lira*¹ extolling the glorious virgin” – a emphasis not apparent in the surviving text); explicit to the poem, with attribution: “Explicit lira magistri Iohannis hovedene” (“Here ends the Lyra of Master John of Hoveden [or Howden]”). Images of this source are not presently available to me; the information here derives from the CPI website and (for the explicit) the description of this part of the MS provided in Edmund Brock, “Practica Chilindri: or The Working of the Cylinder by John of Hoveden: Edited with a Translation,” Essays on Chaucer, second series, issue 9, part 2, no. 3, p. 61 (N. Trübner and Co., 1874).

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Authorship: This text is attributed to John of Hoveden (or Howden) in Nero C IX, as reported above in the discussion of this source. Although there is some contention as to the identity of the individual, John (fl. late 1260s-ca. 1275) is usually described as a Franciscan friar who was a clerk and possibly chaplain to Queen Eleanor of Provence (ca. 1223-1291), wife of King Henry III of England (1207-1272) and mother of King Edward I (1239-1307). O qui fontem gratie is the only known musical setting of a text attributed to this author. General remarks: The title of this poem as given in Nero C IX is Lira (“The Lyre”), which, as the final line of Strophe III confirms, is a metaphor for the workings of the universe that God, as prime mover, creates, sets in motion, and regulates. As a result, the significance of the rubric given to this item in Nero C IX, which describes the poem as one in praise of the Virgin Mary, seems unclear. God’s power over the laws that control natural phenomena, laws that he himself enacted, is a common theme within the Parisian musical repertory and elsewhere, often evoked in the context of Jesus’s birth by Mary; for some examples, see the general remarks on the text of the conductus Naturas deus regulis – Hic per mundum (C7/214), and especially the content of its first stanza. What is especially interesting in the case of O qui fontem gratie is the prominence given to musical content based on the ideas of musica mundana developed by Boethius in his De institutione musica (book 1, chapter 1). These conceits are especially noticeable in Strophe II, beginning with line 30, and they continue throughout the third stanza. In a related matter, the poem makes use of several words borrowed from Greek; see the notes to lines 3, 7, and 36. Textual notes: 1,3-4: the expression “fons gratie” has a wide spectrum of references, even when viewed only within the Parisian conductus repertory. Although it often may be easily construed as a symbol for God, Christ, or the Virgin, there are also less specific contexts for its appearance and significance, as in the conductus Ver pacis aperit (J32/366), line 18 (in Strophe III), associated with the coronation of King Philip Augustus of France (1179 – though possibly written in anticipation of the event in 1176);² in Omnis in lacrimas (K2/253), line 17 (from Strophe II), where it arises in a planctus on the death in 1181 of Henry I, count of Champagne; and in another planctus, Sol eclypsim patitur (K83/331), line 11 (Strophe II), on the death (most probably) of King Fernando III of Castile in 1252. For further associations, see the remarks on the phrase “fons aquae vivae” in the notes to line 2,1 that follow. 2,1: the reference to what is apparently God or Christ portrayed as a captive or prisoner is not immediately clear.

¹Conceivably also with the meaning of “lyric poem,” although John of Hoveden is known to have written other poetic works with evocative, musically oriented titles such as Cythara and Viola; the word lira also appears prominently in the final line of Strophe III.

²For this assertion, see David Traill, ed. Walter of Châtillon: The Shorter Poems; Christmas Hymns, Love Lyrics, and Moral-Satirical Verse, Oxford: Clarendon Press, 2013), lxiii.

The most telling connection seems to be a reference to Ephesians, 4:7-10.³ As Paul indicates, he is quoting from earlier scripture, in this case paraphrasing Psalm 67:19 and changing the address from third person to second.⁴ The particular mention of captivity and captives here is related to what is often referred to as Christ's Harrowing of Hell, a non-scriptural account where, after his crucifixion, Jesus "descended into the lower regions of the earth" (Ephesians, 4:9) and led a number of people "imprisoned" there who were considered righteous to heaven and salvation, including, for example, Adam, Eve, and King Solomon. The Harrowing is typically commemorated in the liturgy of Holy Saturday, which includes the responsory Recessit pastor.⁵ The text of the respond section of this chant reads: "Recessit pastor noster fons aquae vivae ad cuius transitum sol obscuratus est nam et ille captus est qui captivum tenebat primum hominem hodie portas mortis et seras pariter salvator noster dirupit" ("Our shepherd, the font of living water, has departed, at whose passing the sun was obscured. For even he who held the first man captive was made a captive. Today our Savior has equally shattered the doors and bars of death."). In this case, the reference to Christ as the "font of living water" recalls the "font of grace" from line 1,3-4 of O qui fontem, although in this case the one who becomes the captive is a figure for Death or the Devil ("he who held the first man captive"). Somewhat more telling, but also more obscure, is the text of an antiphon for the Irish-born, ninth-century monk and hermit Saint Fintan (Findan, Findanus) of Rheinau, Switzerland (d. 879), whose feast is celebrated on November 15: "Pro redimendis captivis, factus est ipse captivus, exemplo illius qui, ascendens in altum, captivitatem nostram duxit captivam" ("Instead of redeeming the captives, he himself [Fintan] was taken captive, in comparison to the one who, ascending on high, led our captivity captive").⁶ This example, which again implements the words of Paul and the Psalms, is the only clear indication I have been able to find so far that Jesus might acceptably be designated as a captive in a manner similar to that of the text of O qui fontem gratie. Another instance, though, suggests that this same captive metaphor was sometimes regarded as extremely problematic when applied to Christ. The passage from Ephesians and the Psalm is one of the main contenders in a section of a treatise in four books written by Alcuin against the Toledan bishop Elipantus (Elipandus, Elipando, Elipand), accusing him of adopting a heretical stance similar to that of Adoptionism. This heresy held that Jesus was not the true or direct son of God at his birth, but became so at some point later in his life, such as at his baptism, resurrection, or ascension (hence Jesus was, so to speak, "adopted" by God, not born from him).⁷ Elipantus raises the question, again interrogating the text of Psalm 67:19: "Ecce captivus dicitur esse, et quare non dicatur carne adoptivus?" ("Behold, he [Christ] is said to be a captive, and [therefore] why might one not say he is adoptive in the flesh?") This causes Alcuin to rail against him with support from Augustine, Jerome, and Cassiodorus to refute this ³Ephesians, 4:7-10: "Unicuique autem nostrum data est gratia secundum mensuram donationis Christi. Propter quod dicit: 'Ascendens in altum, captivam duxit captivitatem: dedit dona hominibus.' Quod autem ascendit, quid est, nisi quia et descendit primum in inferiores partes terrae? Qui descendit, ipse est et qui ascendit super omnes caelos, ut impleret omnia." ("But to every one of us is given grace, according to the measure of the giving of Christ. Wherefore he says: 'Ascending on high, he led captivity captive; he gave gifts to men.' The fact that he ascended, what does that mean, except that he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth? He that descended is the same also that ascended above all the heavens, that he might fill all things").

⁴Psalms, 67:19: "Ascendisti in altum, cepisti captivitatem, accepisti dona in hominibus; etenim non credentes inhabitare Dominum Deum" ("You have ascended on high, you have led captivity captive; you have received gifts in men; and indeed for those also that do not believe, the dwelling of the Lord God").

⁵See cantusindex.org, no. 007509.

⁶See cantusindex.org, no. 004386. At one point in his early life, Fintan's sister was captured by northern invaders, and he was dispatched with a ransom to attempt her recovery. Unfortunately, he himself was captured, and this is the likely event related by the antiphon text. For a helpful summary of Fintan's vita, see the contribution by J.F. Hogan at Omnium Sanctorum Hiberniae, <http://omniumsanctorumhiberniae.blogspot.com/2015/11/saint-fintan-of-rheinau-november-15.html>.

⁷For more treatments of issues related to Adoptionism and of Christ's consubstantiality with God the Father, see, in addition to O qui fontem gratie (H28/243), line 2, the opening lines of the conductus Sine matre genitus (I27/330), Verbum pater exhibuit (E5/368), and line 16 of Deus creator omnium (H11/89).

interpretation.⁸ For another instance in the conductus repertory that invokes the conceit of “captivity captured,” see Gloria in excelsis deo redemptori (H1/145), line 20. 2,2: note the use of the somewhat unusual verb “regeneras” also in Philip the Chancellor’s conductus O Maria virginiei (E14/239), lines 17-18 (Strophe IVa): “Tu generis proles degeneris, / regeneras genus in posteris” (“You, the offspring of an ignoble generation, regenerate that generation in the future”), where the expression describes the Virgin Mary. 3,2: this word is one of the Hellenisms that pepper this text; more familiarly it is spelled entelechia, from ἐντελέχεια (entelecheia – “entelechy,” “complete reality,” “realized actuality”). 7,1: a further Greek borrowing, also spelled hyle (the case used in the poem is genitive), from ὕλη (hulé – “wood,” “timber,” “matter,” “material”). 30-34: the forming of consonances out of dissonances may be explicable by the idea that most of the perfect intervals that form the traditional symphoniae of Boethian theory (fourths, fifths, and octaves – the unison would not apply here) are made up of concatenations of discordant intervals, such as tones and semitones. 36,2: another Hellenism: more familiarly written hierarchia, or ierarchia (as in OxRawl) from ἱεραρχία (hierarchia – “hierarchy,” “systematic classification”).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 7,1: the form “hyles” is genitive; see the notes on the text to line 7,1. 18,1: unlike Anderson’s edition (NDRC, 3:xxxii-iii) and the one in AH, 21:53, no. 74, I prefer the subjunctive form “refrenes” given here, which appears in all sources but WI (although Nero C IX is presently unavailable to me and not collated by Anderson). I construe it as a result clause governed by the “ut” in line 17,1. 36,2: the MS orthography of F and all other musical sources is retained here; OxRawl gives “ierarchias,” which helps clarify the meaning. 46,1: F: qui (not reported in Anderson, NDRC, 3:226), in opposition to all other available sources, which supply the adopted reading. 46,2: OxRawl has “divina,” which would suffice, but less convincingly (“... force the divine concords to adjust to the law ...”); the adopted reading agrees with all the musical sources and I construe it in the dative case. MUSIC: General remarks: there are a number of closely related smaller musical motives running throughout this piece on the level of the sub-phrase, such as the bcdcbag ... T figure that begins lines 2, 4, and 7, and that lies within line 10; and the bcbag ... pitch series that occurs within the T phrases of lines 3, 5, and 6, and in the D at line 10. Many more motivic units could claim similar import, although there is no larger-scale repetition within the piece outside of the presence of the refrain, nor have these numerous motives been signaled here in the score. Caudae: Most of the caudae in this piece may be rendered in mode 3 (and sometimes mode 6) as well as mode 1. The main exceptions are the final two phrases of the melisma concluding the refrain, and the caudae that close Strophe II and open Strophe III. Mode 1 has been used here by default throughout. Refrain presentation and performance: the refrain cue in F at the end of Strophe II appears without its opening cauda (which, in contrast, is reinstated in the refrain cue that ends Strophe III, but now without its concluding melisma). Full performance of all segments of the refrain at the end of each stanza is, of course, not constrained by these features, but as a result of these discrepancies one could also justify performing the refrain that follows Strophe II either with or without its opening caudae, and also with or without its closing melisma after Strophe III. Conceivably, similar flexibility could guide the execution of the other appearances of the refrain in this piece; one might, for instance, hold off the inclusion of the refrain’s closing cauda until its final appearance after Strophe III. The other two musical sources (WI, Ma) have no such cues for subsequent appearances of the refrain, and thus offer no corroboration for its performance. Text declamation: the numerous occasions where certain cum littera passages are set with 3li figures (or larger) over single syllables, as well as the presence of occasional elongated note shapes, doubled notes ending with a plica, or notes followed by a stroke within a poetic line – evident especially in Ma and F – offer useful guides to suggest when the relative lengthening of certain syllables might be appropriate in performance; any such figures not in F, but sanctioned by Ma or WI have been given above the staff in the transcription and their sources indicated. Opening cauda: D: F: the penultimate note si=fom; from WI, Ma.

⁸See, for example, the edition of Alcuin’s works by Frobenius Forster, ed., Beati Flacci Albini seu Alcuini abbatis, Caroli Magni Regis ac Imperatoris, magistri Opera, 2 vols. ([Regensburg]: J.M. Englerth, 1777), vol. 2, part 1, p. 871 for the relevant portion of Elipando’s text and p. 887 for Alcuin’s response. Alcuin’s text is also available in PL 101, col. 259, A-B, for the segment in question.

Line 10,1-2: D: F: 3si=f,g,f for “ut leges”; corrected after W1, Ma. 12,1-2: D: F: “et [concordi]” 3 higher; from W1, Ma. Cauda opening refrain (at lines 14 and 58): each of the musical sources presents slightly different ligations and pitch patterns, making this cauda somewhat difficult to construe; the rhythms adopted here have been prompted by the readings in W1 and Ma, which have also aided in considering possible omissions; T: F, Ma: final si=g om; taken from W1 – D: F, Ma: final rest stroke om; supplied from W1; an additional stroke follows the succeeding note in F without a corresponding sign in the T. Line 14,1-2 (begins refrain): T: W1: 3si=f,g,b for the cum littera appearance of “O summa.” 18,2 (within refrain): T: for “[illi]cita”: W1: si, 2li=a,gf; Ma: 2li, si=ag,f; the latter especially suggestive of aligning the end syllable of the phrase in the T on the f, as adopted here. 20 (closes refrain): T: F: 2 of the 2li=gf for “[retributi]o[ne]” looks like e, f verified by W1, Ma. Cauda closing refrain (at line 20): D: F: the editorially proposed e-flat above the staff in the second D phrase is implied by a prior e-flat sig seen only in W1, where it opens the D of the cauda. Cauda closing Strophe II (at line 36,2): TD: Ma presents a different rhythmic reading, provided above the staff in the transcription. Refrain closing Strophe II (at line 37): see the above observations about the refrain, including the discussions of its presence in the inventory of sources above. Line 46,3: TD: F: for “[conso]na,” the si=a in both parts looks rather like g; a confirmed by W1, Ma. 55,1-2: D: F: notes for “ut vices” 3 higher; from W1, Ma. 55,4: T: the note over “va[riat]” is 3 lower; from W1, Ma. Refrain closing Strophe III (at line 58): see the above observations about the refrain and also its presentation following Strophe II (at line 37).

GENITUS DIVINITUS

Conductus (I25/144)

F, f. 291r (7,24)

I

[Ge - ni - tus di - vi - ni - tus i - dem quod in - ge - ni - tus

Ge - ni - tus di - vi - ni - tus i - dem quod in - ge - ni - tus

e - di - tus hu - ma - ni - tus hac in val - le ge - mi - tus.

e - di - tus hu - ma - ni - tus hac in val - le ge - mi - tus.

mi - ra pro - lis u - ni - tas ger - mi - nat na - ti - vi - tas.

mi - ra pro - lis u - ni - tas ger - mi - nat na - ti - vi - tas.

mi - ra pro - lis u - ni - tas ger - mi - nat na - ti - vi - tas.

mi - ra pro - lis u - ni - tas ger - mi - nat na - ti - vi - tas.

II

Nec a de - si - de - ri - o de - frau - da - ta so - bri - o

Nec a de - si - de - ri - o de - frau - da - ta so - bri - o re - cre - a - tur ba - si - o vi - li te - cta pal - li - o.

re - cre - a - tur ba - si - o vi - li te - cta pal - li - o.

cum sa - cra con - iun - cti - o quam si - ne di - vor - ti - o

cum sa - cra con - iun - cti - o quam si - ne di - vor - ti - o

ca - sta ge - ne - ra - ti - o pro - dit in con - nu - bi - o.

ca - sta ge - ne - ra - ti - o pro - dit in con - nu - bi - o.

| mode 3; mode 1 also possible; see *alternative at end

III D Ad [Ad] e - py - tha - la - mi - um ex - ci - tat tri - pu - di -

T Ad [Ad] e - py - tha - la - mi - um ex - ci - tat tri - pu - di -

-um sa - lo - mo - nis stu - di - um. mi - ti - ga - tor men - ti -

-um sa - lo - mo - nis stu - di - um. mi - ti - ga - tor men - ti -

-um da - vid fert in me - di-um li - ram et psal - te - ri - um.

pre - mi - a - que ta - li - a tot et tam pro - pi - ti - a.

| mode 3; W/ has mode 1; see  at end

pre - mi - a - que ta - li - a tot et tam pro - pi - ti - a.

pre - mi - a - que ta - li - a tot et tam pro - pi - ti - a.

[IV] Gra - [Gra] - ti - a pro - pri - a dan - tis laus et glo - ri - a.

or: x ?

T Gra - [Gra] - ti - a pro - pri - a dan - tis laus et glo - ri - a.

| mode 3; W/ has mode 1; see  at end

| mode 1 in all extant MSS

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*Cauda closing Strophe II (after line 14,3)

a. reading in mode 1 after F, f. 291v, III

b. reading in mode 1 after WI, f. 167v (158v), II, with different ligations from F

| D: WI: g for b; from F, Cssc 117*

Cauda closing Strophe III (after line 22,4): reading in mode 1 after WI, f. 167v (158v), VI

Cauda closing Strophe [IV] (after line 24,4) with punctus organi: reading in mode 1 after WI, f. 168r (159r), II

| mode 1 in all extant MSS

GENITUS DIVINITUS

Conductus (I25/144)

F, f. 291r (7,24)

- | | |
|--|--|
| I Genitus divinitus,
idem quod ingenitus editus humanitus hac in valle gemitus.
Mira prolis unitas;
germinat nativitas. | Begotten in divine fashion,
the very same one that was unbegotten was brought forth as a human in this vale of sorrow.
5 Wondrous is the oneness of the Son;
his nativity sprouts forth. |
| II Nec, a desiderio defraudata, sobrio recreatur basio,
vili tecta pallio,
cum sacra coniunctio quam sine divortio casta generatio
prodit in connubio. | And unbeguiled by desire, he is created anew from a chaste kiss, 10 and covered in a crude garment, when the sacred union arising from his chaste conception springs forth in a marriage without divorce. |
| III Ad epythalamium, excitat tripudium
Salomonis studium.
Mitigator mentium,
David, fert in medium
liram et psalterium, premiaque talia
tot et tam propitia: | 15 At the sound of the wedding song, Solomon's eagerness provokes a dance.
That appeaser of minds,
David, brings a lyre and 20 psaltery to our midst, and such are the rewards,
so many and so favorable: |
| [IV] Gratia propria,
dantis laus et gloria. | the praise and glory of the giver
24 arises from his own grace. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 24, f. 291r: a2; Strophes I-[IV] complete, with capitals denoting II-[IV]; the punctus organi that concludes the redaction of this piece in W1 is omitted here. From here through F-7,30 (Rex et pater omnium [I17/307]), the works are not as widely transmitted; concordances within the four central sources, when present, occur only in W1.¹

W1, fasc. 9, no. 81, f. 167r (158r): a2; Strophes I-[IV] complete, with painted initials for each textual division (the one for [IV] uses both red and green pigment in opposition to the monochrome red and green colors used for the other initials); this redaction of the piece contains a closing punctus organi not appearing in the remains of any of the other sources; this is included as an alternative reading at the end of the transcription.

¹*Genitus divinitus* (I25/144 – F-7,24) and Dei sapientia (J6/86 – F-7,28) are the only other pieces that show concordances beyond F and W1 (with three additional sources for the first item, and two for the second – although in both cases two of these sources amount to different representations of the same object due to offset imprinting of a folio's contents upon a binding board housed elsewhere); the latter piece, furthermore, is absent from W1, while Renovantur veterum (J5/305 – F-7,25) is unique to F.

CaJ (GB-Cjec QB 1; Cambridge, Jesus College, MS QB 1), Fragment A, no. 12, f. Bv:² a2; a reconstituted leaf made up originally of the strips 15r, 16v, 14v, 35v (left-to right) according to the old foliation of the binding fragments;³ fragmentary; the piece is extant from its opening, with small losses occasioned by two now-missing thin vertical strips, up through the end of line 11,3 (“coniunctio”); Strophe II is signaled by an upper-case “N”; the piece does not continue on the obverse side of the leaf.⁴

Cssc 117 (GB-Cssc 117*; Cambridge, Sidney Sussex College, MS 117*)*,⁵ no. 3, f. 2r-2v: a2; fragmentary; remains of various portions survive, beginning on f. 2r with line 4 (“hac in valle”) up through line 6,2 (“nativitas”), where the entire D and any T notes higher than the g below middle c have been cut away; then following immediately with Tt,T,D (with some patches faded, but a painted red initial for Strophe II visible) up through the first 5L of the cauda on “Ad [epithalamium]” (line 15,1) that begins Strophe III (the top of a painted initial “A” for this segment is also still visible). The Tt on f. 2r is lost for the remainder of Strophe II after the first syllable of “cas[ta]” (line 13,1). With a loss of two systems of prior material, the top accolade of f. 2v begins with Tt and T (with a few of the higher-lying pitches cut off) of all but the first syllable of line 21,1 (“[pre]miaque”) through all but the last two T notes of the following cauda. Remnants of the first letter of “G[ratia]” from line 23,1 (beginning Strophe [IV]), showing a painted initial, close off what is left of this first system. The extant second accolade continues thereupon with Tt,T,D from the second syllable of 23,1 up through the end of the final cauda on line 24,4 (“gloria”); a closing punctus organi was never entered, if intended, as there is some empty space remaining at the end of this final system. All of the material cut away from f. 2v of *Cssc 117, however, is preserved in the offset image of the complete leaf imprinted via offset upon the binding board of D-MÜsa Mscr. VII, 6115 (see below).

D-MÜsa Mscr. VII, 6115 (Münster, Landesarchiv Nordrhein Westfalen Abteilung Westfalen [formerly Staatsarchiv], Mscr VII Nr. 6115), front binding board (interior): a 2; fragmentary; this source is a mirror-image offset from an essentially complete parchment leaf that now survives trimmed down as f. 2v of *Cssc 117, described above; the folio was originally glued to the wooden binding board of this MS to serve as a pastedown; the offset contains an additional two systems of material that is now cut away from the top of the surviving parchment specimen, thereby preserving all material from line 15,2 (“epithalamium” – although the material for the opening two syllables is exceedingly worn and other spots are likewise patchy) through the end of the piece as it stands in *Cssc 117.

Text only: none.

²For a catalog and correctly reconstituted images of this source, including the labeling system used here to refer to the fragments, see William J. Summers and Peter M. Lefferts, English Thirteenth-Century Polyphony: A Facsimile Edition, Early English Church Music, no. 57 (London: Stainer and Bell for the British Academy, 2016), pp. 14-15, plates 11-34.

³The image of this folio as reconstructed in DIAMM is incomplete: the leftmost strip (15r) is omitted and another (13[r]) is in its place. Furthermore, strip 14v is reproduced a second time in DIAMM as part of the image indicated as “Folio 12_14v,” with the number above giving “Page 16 of 47,” while the omitted strip 15[r] can be found in the following image on DIAMM, labeled as “Folio 15_17r” and “Page 17 of 43.”

⁴The foliation “Bv” is the location given in Anderson’s catalog and edition, the CPI database, and the DIAMM inventory, but the leaf is indicated as “Folio Reconstructed fol B” – implying Br – in the image description given in DIAMM, and additionally designated in the heading above the displayed image as “page 33 of 47.” Because the previous piece, the conductus A deserto veniens I (J3/1), continues from the other side of the leaf onto the page that transmits Genitus divinitus, it is clear that the recto and verso indications of Anderson and CPI reflect the original disposition of this folio.

⁵This source is an extant portion of a larger MS possessed by the Dominican library of Soest that originally included the now disparate *GB-Cssc 117, D-MÜsa Mscr. VII, 6115, D-MÜu 382, and D-MÜu 378. For information, see Eva Maschke, “Notre Dame Manuscripts and their History: Case Studies on Reception and Reuse,” Ph.D. dissertation (University of Southampton / Universität Hamburg, 2015), 87-131.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Versification and stanzaic division: The layout of the text as given here departs from that of Anderson’s edition (NDRC, 4:xxxi) by considering lines 1, 3, and 23 not as discrete verses of 3pp or 4pp, but as single 8pp or 6pp lines with internal rhyme. This decision makes sense in the way that Strophes I-III are thereby composed wholly of 7pp verses, and the only outlier would be the penultimate 6pp line 23 of the poem. The stanzaic division of this piece is also intriguing, since the final couplet of the poem, designated here as a conjectural fourth strophe [IV], is a rather curious appendage, similar in outward appearance to a refrain.⁶ In this case, though, this two-line unit – whose special status is indicated by the larger letters that head it in each extant source – appears only at the end of the piece, with no indications for use within the prior two stanzas, as one might expect from a refrain. Also compelling is the coincidence that these two ultimate lines provide exactly the number of verses necessary to bring the six-line first stanza into agreement with the eight-line Strophes II and III. One might even hypothesize that Strophe [IV] could initially have concluded Strophe I and was only later separated and placed after III; its rather independent syntax makes this conceivable. Therefore, in addition to executing the piece ut stat, performers might consider the various alternatives of pressing Strophe [IV] into service as a refrain after each of the other stanzas, or attaching it to the end of Strophe I as well as – or conceivably in place of – following Strophe III. Textual notes: See also the observations on the text below for some discussion of further details on the translation. 1-3: central to the orthodox idea of the consubstantiality of Christ with God, is that Christ (“the Word”) existed before his conception and incarnation on earth (see John, 1:1-3). Hence he was “begotten, not made” (Nicene Creed) by God the Father, with whom he existed consubstantially from eternity. As a result, these opening lines of Genitus divinitus demonstrate that Christ (“begotten divinely”), when given to the world in human form, was the same in substance as God the Father who had existed since eternity (“the very same one that was unbegotten”). This miraculous unity of the Father and Son is further emphasized in line 5. 4: i.e., the temporal world; see the similar expression “vallis lacrimarum” (“vale of tears”) from Psalm 83:7. 7-9: i.e., Christ, already in existence by being one with God, is created anew via his incarnation. His conception was not brought about by sexual means (i.e., from the “desire” that can “beguile”), but through the “chaste kiss” of Mary’s acceptance of Gabriel’s charge (see the story of the Annunciation in Luke, 1:26-38). The reference to this kiss, as Anderson notes (NDRC, 4:xxxi, note 2), occurs in other conductus besides Genitus divinitus, such as Perotin’s Dum sigillum summi patris (J24/100), Strophe II (lines 9-16), and possibly in Philip the Chancellor’s Centrum capit circulus (J38/57), lines 23-24, from Strophe IIb, although here the comparison of the kiss with Genitus divinitus and Dum sigillum seems less apt. 10: the “common garment” (vilis pallium) that covers Christ could be either the swaddling clothes that Mary wrapped Jesus in after his birth (see Luke, 2:7, 2:12), and may also refer to Christ’s humbling himself by taking on human flesh; for the latter conceit see the remarks for the conductus Parit preter morem (E12/261), lines 9-14 (especially 11-12), and Sol sub nube latuit (I16/334), lines 17-20. In scriptural exegesis, these two biblical images are sometimes juxtaposed as related allegories (see, for example, the treatment in Strophes I-II of Sol sub nube latuit). 11-14: this passage, rather loose in its grammatical construction, continues the idea of the chaste begetting of Jesus. The close proximity of the word for “divorce/separation” (divortio) with that for “marriage” (connubio) is striking, but the absence of separation/division/divorce referred to here in the poem seems more likely to connote the impossibility of the human Christ being separated from the Godhead, since they both are one in a figurative marriage. 15-20: on King Solomon’s association with dancing, see Song of Songs, 7:1 [6:13 in other versions]: “Quid videbis in Sulamite, nisi choros castrorum? Quam pulchri sunt gressus tui in calceamentis, filia principis!” (“What shall you see in the Shulamite woman but the companies [choros – other translations render this word as “dance”] of the camps? How beautiful are your steps in shoes, ⁶Cf. the somewhat analogous situations with the monostrophic conductus Legis in volumine [F13/193] and the probably spurious “refrain” of Excitatur caritas in Yerico [F30/111]).

O prince’s daughter!”); on David’s frolicking, see his dancing naked before the Ark in the sight of the Lord from 2 Kings (2 Samuel), 6:14-22; in this passage David is criticized by Michal, his first wife and a daughter of Saul, who had observed him from a window; David chastises her, explaining that he was dancing before the Lord, and Michal, in consequence, suffers childlessness. 18: WI, in contrast to the other extant sources, gives gentium for 18,2, which could also suffice (“appeaser of peoples”). It is additionally unclear whether the phrase of line 18 may refer to Solomon (as offered in Anderson’s edition, NDRC, 4:xxi, note 4) or David, who first appears in the following line 19. Based on the punctuation in F (the only source to include such information at this point in the poem), the first internal period in the stanza appears at the end of line 17, and as a result I take line 18 here to form the beginning of a new syntactic unit where David is the subject, although the alternatives for the word choice and referent of 18,2 are certainly possible. For further justification of the adopted reading, the description of David via the phrase “appeaser of minds” in a musical context such as this is particularly apropos in light of his pacifying King Saul with his musicianship in 1 Kings (1 Samuel), 16:14-23. 20: the mention of the lyre (or cithara) and psaltery here in connection with David’s participation in the dance is notable due to their frequent appearance in the book of Psalms, a part of the Bible especially associated with David; additionally, psalterium, the word used for the biblical stringed instrument in the conductus poem, is also used as a synonym for the Book of Psalms as a whole. 23-24: see the discussion of these lines and the various possibilities for their significance in the above notes on stanzaic division.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 2: “idem quod” is an idiomatic expression meaning “the same as,” “equivalent to,” “identical with” (see the DMLBS, s.v. “quod,” no. 13 at <http://logeion.uchicago.edu/quod>). 7-10: since the gender of “defraudata,” indicates that the subject of this passage is feminine, I am positing that “prolis,” from line 5, serves this role, rather than, say, “nativitas.” 11,3: F: written “coiunctio,” as if a macron abbreviation was omitted over the “o,” or the scribe confused the number of text minims in the middle of the word; the adopted form is verified by all other extant sources (WI, *Cssc 117, CaJ). 18,2: see the remarks on the choice of this word in the notes on the text for line 18 above. MUSIC: Musical repetition: there are several instances (unmarked here) of motivic repetition connected to various elements of this piece. A frequent rising or falling 3-note scalar figure, such as bcd, bag, and the like, can be seen (and often in combination) at the start of numerous phrases, such as the one for line 2, which reappears at the start of line 4, and also opens Strophe II (at line 7) with the parts exchanged; it arises noticeably once again in lines 21 and 24. Similarly, the cauda closing Strophe I (following line 6) is tightly constructed of only two different motivic ideas throughout its short course; this latter instance is marked above the staves in the score. Further relationships occur in the appearance of similar motives in both voices that begin the caudae at the ends of Strophes II (following line 14) and [IV] (after line 24). Modal transmutation: WI offers several caudae, or portions thereof, in readings that offer mode 1 in preference to the mode 3 that appears in the other sources. These are signaled in the score and supplied as alternatives at the end of the transcription. Line 5,3: T: F: the 4 of 4li over “un[itas]” looks like e, clearly given as f in the extant materials of WI, CaJ, *Cssc 117. Line 22,4: T: F: the a that appears here over the penultimate syllable of “[propi]ti[a]” is f, as adopted here, in all other extant sources. Cauda closing Strophe III (following line 22): T: F: the 2li=gb near the start of the second T phrase at L14 is smudged, clarified by all extant sources; also the low d pitch following soon after looks more like e; d is suggested by all other extant sources. Cauda opening Strophe [IV] (at line 23,1): D: F: the om si=g closing the first D phrase at L3 occurs in all other extant MSS; the F reading may be performed as it stands via the alternative rendition above the staves (and further realizations are possible as well).

RENOVANTUR VETERUM ORACULA
 Conductus: (J5/305)

F, f. 292r (7,25)

D
 [Re - [Re]-no - van - tur

T
 Re - [Re]-no - van - tur

ve - te - rum o - ra - cu - si si - la.

ve - te - rum o - ra - cu - - la.

ve - te - ra. res in - no - vat mi - ra - cu - la. um - bris [b] [b] ve - te - ra. res in - no - vat mi - ra - cu - la. um - bris [a] su - bit cla - ri - tas et fi - gu - ris ve - - ri - tas. [b'] [a'] su - bit cla - ri - tas et fi - gu - ris ve - - ri - tas.

va - - cu - an - - tur ve - - te - ra. vir - gi - - ne

va - - cu - an - - tur ve - - te - ra. vir - gi - - ne

pu - er - pe - ra. nec io - nas sub he - de - ra. ne - que iam sub lit - te - ra [h] [h]

pu - er - pe - ra. nec io - nas sub he - de - ra. ne - que iam sub lit - te - ra [h] [h]

la - tet pro-phe-ti - a.

la - tet pro-phe-ti - a.

la - tet pro-phe-ti - a.

la - tet pro-phe-ti - a.

D
II In fi-cel-la mo-y - ses vi-mi-ne - a. et sub car - ne clau - sus est

T
In fi-cel-la mo-y - ses vi-mi-ne - a. et sub car - ne clau - sus est vir - gi - ne - a sum-mi re - gis fi - li - us. pa - nis ci - ne - ri -

vir - gi - ne - a sum-mi re - gis fi - li - us. pa - nis ci - ne - ri -

- ti - - us iam sub - ver - tit o - mni - a ma - di - am tem-pto - ri - a.

- ti - - us iam sub - ver - tit o - mni - a ma - di - am tem-pto - ri - a.

et an - ti - qua som - pni - a no - va sup-plet gra - ti - a.

et an - ti - qua som - pni - a no - va sup-plet gra - ti - a.

na - to sal - va - to - re.
na - to sal - va - to - re.

na - to sal - va - to - re.
na - to sal - va - to - re.

III

S No - stre no - ctis te - ne - bras il - lu - mi - nat. hu - ius mun - di prin - ci - pem e - li - T No - stre no - ctis te - ne - bras il - lu - mi - nat. hu - ius mun - di prin - ci - pem e - li -

- mi - nat stel - le ia - cob ra - di - us. yes - se
- mi - nat stel - le ia - cob ra - di - us. yes - se

flos e - gre - gi - us. ba - la - ham pes le - di - flos e - gre - gi - us. ba - la - ham pes le - di -

- tur.
- tur.

et a - sel - la lo - qui-tur. dum vis ho - stis
et a - sel - la lo - qui-tur. dum vis ho - stis

fran - gi - tur. et [et] vox no - stra sol - vi - tur
fran - gi - tur. et [et] vox no - stra sol - vi - tur

chri - - stum
chri - - stum

con - fi - ten - - do.]
con - fi - ten - - do.

RENOVANTUR VETERUM ORACULA

Conductus (J5/305)

F, f. 292r (7,25)

- | | |
|--|---|
| I Renovantur veterum oracula.
 Vetera res innovat miracula.
 Umbris subit claritas, et figuris veritas.
 Vacuantur vetera virgine puerpera.
 Nec Ionas sub hedera, neque iam sub littera
 latet prophetia. | The prophecies of the ancients are renewed.
 An event restores the miracles of old.
 Brightness overtakes the shadows,
 and truth the allegories.
 5 Ancient matters are cleared away
 by a virgin giving birth.
 Jonah doesn't lie hidden under a vine, nor does prophecy now
 lurk underneath scripture. |
| II In ficella Moyses viminea, et sub carne clausus est virginea summi regis filius.
 Panis cineritius
 iam subvertit omnia Madiam temptoria, et antiqua sompnia
 nova supplet gratia.
 nato salvatore. | 10 In a wicker basket lies Moses, and beneath virginal flesh is confined the son of the highest king.
 A hearth cake
 now upends all the 15 tents of Midian, and new grace brings old dreams to fruition with the birth of a savior. |
| III Nostre noctis tenebras illuminat.
 Huius mundi principem eliminat, stelle Iacob radius,
 Yesse flos egregius.
 Balaham pes leditur,
 et asella loquitur,
 dum vis hostis frangitur et vox nostra solvitur
 Christum confitendo. | He illuminates the shadows of our night.
 20 He banishes the prince of this world,
 this beam from Jacob's star,
 this excellent flower of Jesse.
 Balaam's foot is injured,
 and his little she-ass speaks, 25 while the strength of the enemy is shattered and our voice is unleashed by acknowledging Christ |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 25, f. 292r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with II-III indicated by capitals; this is the first piece in F-7 to be uniquely transmitted, with no known concordances. The next such piece with this feature is Nobilitas animi (J8/220), at F-7, 50, f. 317r.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Content: the primary theme in this conductus is the change from the Old Testament covenant to that of the New, with earlier miracles and allegories now revealed as typological prefigurations of the coming of Christ and his bestowal of the gift of grace. As a result, several Old Testament narratives appear in this text as harbingers of the new law, and the poem exploits metaphorical conceits that feature light overtaking darkness and the disclosure or revelation of things that were previously hidden. Textual notes: 3: cf. Matthew, 4:16 (paraphrasing Isaiah, 9:2): “populus qui sedebat in tenebris lucem vidit magnam et sedentibus in regione et umbra mortis lux orta est eis” (“The people that sat in darkness have seen a great light; and for those sitting in the region and the shadow of death, light is sprung up”). 5: cf. 2 Corinthians, 5:17: “Si qua ergo in Christo nova creatura, vetera transierunt; ecce facta sunt nova” (“Therefore, if anyone is a new creature in Christ, the old things have passed away; behold all things are made new”). 7: see Jonah, 4,5-11. Jonah, having finally journeyed to Nineveh after attempts to avoid God’s command to do so, became distressed that his prophecies of the city’s destruction had not come to pass, thanks to the Lord’s forgiveness of the people. He exited the city and set up a shelter to await further developments. While Jonah waited there, God caused a vine to grow, which offered some welcome shade to the prophet. However, the next day God created a worm that destroyed the vine’s roots and it immediately withered away, which caused Jonah to be angry and the Lord to chastise him. Note that the word in the Vulgate (Jonah, 4:6-9) is indeed “vine” (hedera), although other translations sometimes use “gourd.” Jerome, in one of his letters to Augustine (no. 112 – see, e.g., PL, 22, cols. 930-931), defends his choice of words in rendering this specific passage, saying that the word “gourd” is actually not found in the Hebrew text, and the specific type of plant referred to in the biblical passage would be unrecognizable to his readers if left untranslated. In Anderson’s edition of this conductus (NDRC, 5:v, note 2), the meaning of the passage is explained with quotations from Jerome’s In Jonam commentarium, drawn from PL, 25, cols. 288-289. These indicate that the vine is an allegory for the quick rise and sudden fall of the Israelites. The juxtaposition of light and shade unites with the other expressions in this strophe, and the revealing of something previously hidden or covered by the withering of the vine finds corollaries later on in the poem. 10: see Exodus, 2:1-10; the birth of Moses, his hiding in a wicker basket by his mother, and his adoption by the daughter of Pharaoh are common allegories associated with Christ. Here the image is juxtaposed with Jesus being enclosed in Mary’s womb in lines 11-12. 13-15: a reference to events in Judges, 7, where the Israelite warrior Gideon was promised by God that he would miraculously defeat the army of the Midianites, who were oppressing his people. After the Lord forces Gideon to whittle down his forces to only 300 men to make the miracle of the future victory more palpable, he and a servant sneak down the hill into the valley where the Midianite camp lies. There they overhear one of the enemy recount a dream (Judges, 7:13) in which a hearth cake made of barley bread (a symbol of the Israelites who regularly ate this simple type of food) rolls down into the Midianite encampment and overturns their tents. As Anderson recounts from the Glossa ordinaria (in NDRC, 5:v, note 5, cited from PL, 13, col. 527), the hearth cake is read as an allegory of Christ. Its upending of the tents, furthermore, continues the conceit of revealing what was earlier hidden or covered, as in the references in lines 7 and 10. Furthermore, later on in Judges, 7:15-21, the revelation of a dream to Gideon causes him to wage the attack that night, with his soldiers bearing lamps concealed within pitchers. On the sounding of a trumpet signal, the Israelite soldiers broke their pitchers and revealed the lights within them. This implicit reference also incorporates the light-versus-darkness trope that appeared earlier in Strophe I, beginning with line 3. 16-18: the mention of “old dreams” in line 16 recalls the reference to the story of Gideon from lines 13-15, and indicates that the Old Testament account is now to be read in light of the new covenant. 20,2-3: the “prince of this world” is a common figure for the Devil, see, for example, John, 12:31, 16:11, and 14:30. The Devil is also suggested in the reference to the enemy in line 25 of the conductus poem. 21-22: Two prophetic images – star and flower – that prefigure Christ: the first, a continuation of the omnipresent light imagery throughout this poem, comes from Numbers, 24:17: “Videbo eum, sed non modo; intuebor illum sed non prope. Orietur stella ex Iacob et consurget virga de Israhel” (“I shall see him, but not now; I shall behold him, but not near. A star shall rise out of Jacob and a scepter shall spring up from Israel.”). The speaker of the oracle is Balaam, who actually emerges later in the conductus poem in lines 23-24. The second reference is to Isaiah, 11:1: “Et egredietur virga de radice Iesse, et flos de radice eius ascendet” (“And there shall come forth a rod out of the root of Jesse, and a flower shall rise up out of his root.”). 23-24: in Numbers, 22, the Gentile soothsayer/prophet Balaam is asked by Balak, king of the Moabites, to journey to his kingdom in order to level a curse on the Israelite forces camped outside his city’s walls. After twice refusing to come, because he says he would be unable to speak except what God may command him to say, Balaam eventually undertakes the trip at the Lord’s command, although God has now become angry with him. Along the way, God sends an angel with a drawn sword to block Balaam’s path, although the entity is visible only to the donkey that Balaam is riding (in the conductus poem an asella, in the Vulgate an asina – a she-ass in both cases). Upon encountering the angel the donkey refuses to proceed and turns away from the path, which causes Balaam to beat her several times in an attempt to get her to continue. At one point, passing within a narrow, walled part of the road, the beast presses against the wall and injures Balaam’s foot (Numbers, 22:25). Finally she falls down beneath her rider, which occasions a third and final beating. Miraculously, God causes the she-ass to speak and bemoan her treatment by Balaam, at which point the angel appears and relays God’s anger, indicating that Balaam would have been killed if the donkey had not hesitated. Balaam repents his behavior, acknowledges his sin, and continues on his journey; but he is cautioned by the angel that he is only to speak words he is commanded to utter. The eventual prophecies that Balaam pronounces (in Numbers, 23 and 24) praise the Israelites and include the Christological pronouncement echoed in the conductus text in line 21. Anderson’s extracts from the Glossa ordinaria (in NDRC, 5:v, note 10, taken from PL, 13, col. 421) portray the donkey as a figure for the Gentiles who are able to see Christ (the angel), whose presence is hidden from those who deny him. 25: the enemy is the Devil, cf. the remarks for line 20,2-3, above. 26-27: The voice given to the donkey in line 24 is here applied to those who acknowledge and proclaim Christ; cf. also Philippians, 2:11: “Et omnis lingua confiteatur quia Dominus Iesus Christus in gloria est Dei Patris” (“And let every tongue confess that the Lord Jesus Christ is in the glory of God the Father”).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 23,3: F: ledi ditur, syllable repeated after a system change, with the second instance (omitted in the transcription) underlaid to the penultimate T note of the cauda; either placement of the syllable would be acceptable. 15,2: F: the more usual spelling is “tentoria”; I have retained the MS orthography here, which denotes the same object. 27,1: F: cristum; the MS spelling of Christ’s name here does not use the expected Greek χρ for the first two letters, but Roman characters; the “chr-” form adopted here has been changed for consistency’s sake to the more familiar spelling used elsewhere in these transcriptions. MUSIC: Caudae: a number of the melismas in this piece feature strict mode-3 ligature patterns (si,3li,3li, etc.). They may be performed alternatively in the iambic form of this mode, or, conceivably, in mode 6. However, since some of these caudae also include phrases in mode 1 (as in the closing caudae of Strophe I), and since there are no demonstrable instances of unambiguously iambic modes throughout this work, all the melismas in the transcription are rendered trochaically. Opening cauda: D: F: the first a in the third phrase at L13 has its subsequent stroke erased, not restored here. Lines 3-4: F: notice that the openings of these two lines in the T and partially in the D are musically the same, signaled in the score. Lines 12,17: D: F: “summi regis filius”=D of line 17 (“nova supplet gratia”). Cauda at line 23,3: D: F: an e-flat sig precedes the music over “ledi[tur],” yet has no accompanying b-flat sig to correspond with the one in the T that begins at line 23,3. Although the sigs in both parts are canceled by the system change just 7L prior to the end of the cauda, b-flats as well are posited editorially for the entire passage, with the proposed accidentals valid for the remainder of the phrase, as usual. A similar situation obtains in the T in lines 24-25,3. Lines 24-25,3: F: cf. the remarks for the cauda at line 23,3. At the start of line 24 (“et asella”), an e-flat sig appears in the T, canceled by a system change before line 25,4 (“frangitur”), with no expected corresponding b-flat sig until before line 24,3 (“loquitur”); hence b-flats are provided editorially for the intervening segment. Cauda at line 27,1: TD: F: the final phrase of the cauda on the first syllable of “Chri[stum]” lacks a penultimate note in the T at L16; a g has been supplied editorially. Similarly I think it quite likely that rest strokes have been omitted at the end of this phrase in both voices at L18; these have been added conjecturally as well.

LEX HONUS IMPORTABILE
Conductus (119/197)

F, f. 293v (7,26)*

I

D

T

[b]

[Lex
a]

Lex

ho - nus im - por - ta - bi - le sub se

ho - nus im - por - ta - bi - le sub se

fu - it sta - tu - tis. nunc tem - pus

fu - it sta - tu - tis. nunc tem - pus

ac - cep - ta - bi - le. nunc sunt di - es sa - lu - tis.

ac - cep - ta - bi - le. nunc sunt di - es sa - lu - tis.

[b2]

[c'] nunc le - gis in - pos - si - bi - le dat gra - ti - a nunc le - gis in - pos - si - bi - le dat gra - ti - a

so - lut - is a iu - go ser - vi - tu -

so - lut - is a iu - go ser - vi - tu -

*See the alternative reading of the opening cauda and line 1 from WI at the end; the opening phrases in T and D of Strophe I supply material for the caudae closing I-III.

-tis nunc mo-y-ses ex-clu-di-tur

-tis nunc mo-y-ses ex-clu-di-tur

a ter-ra que di-vi-di-tur ihe-sum

a ter-ra que di-vi-di-tur ihe-sum

See alternative reading of cauda from W1 at end of piece; T melody at a' and D at b3 offers varied opening of initial cauda du-cem se-cu-

du-cem se-cu-

-tis.

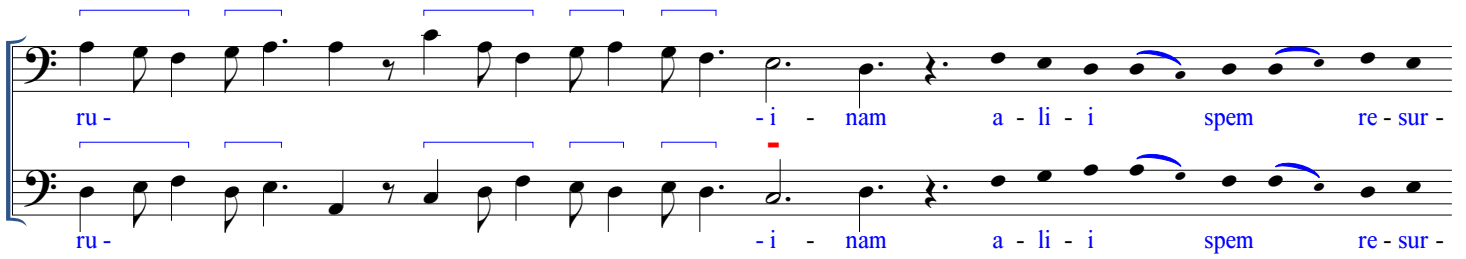

-tis.

Ha-bent in or-tu

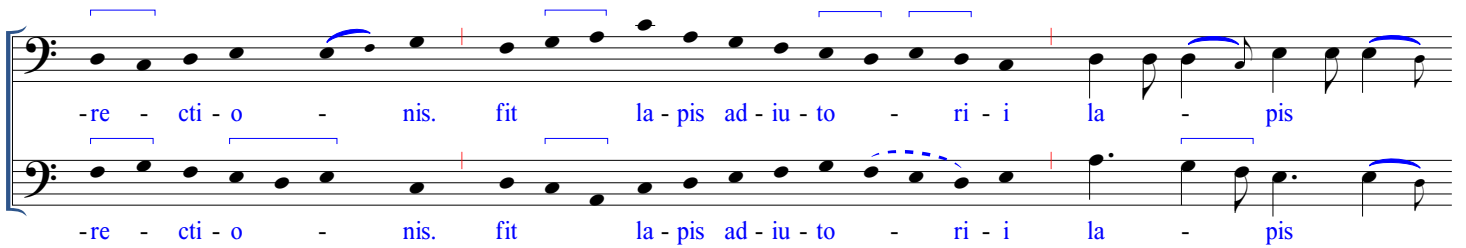

Ha-bent in or-tu

fi-li-i ad ver-bum sy-me-o-nis qui-dam

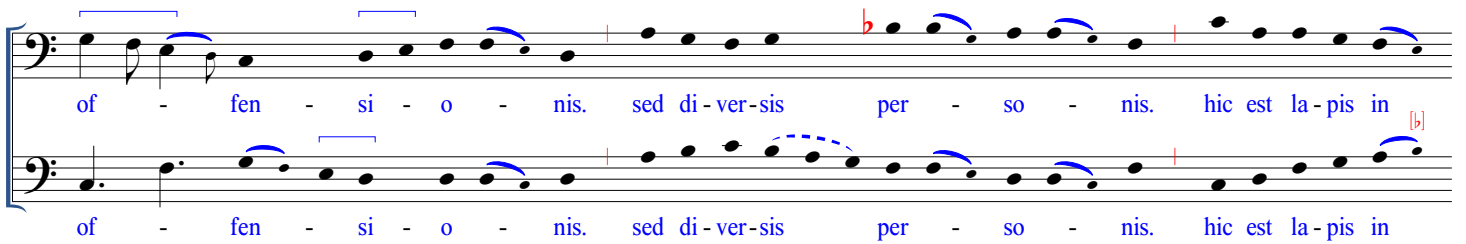

fi-li-i ad ver-bum sy-me-o-nis qui-dam

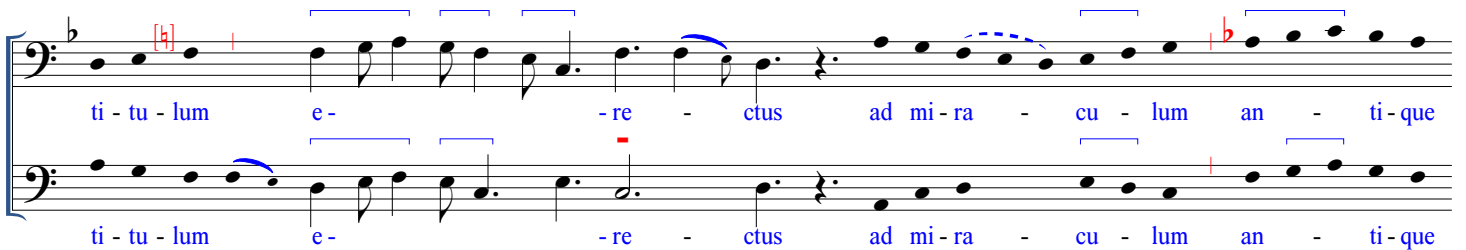

ru - i - nam a - li - i spem re - sur -

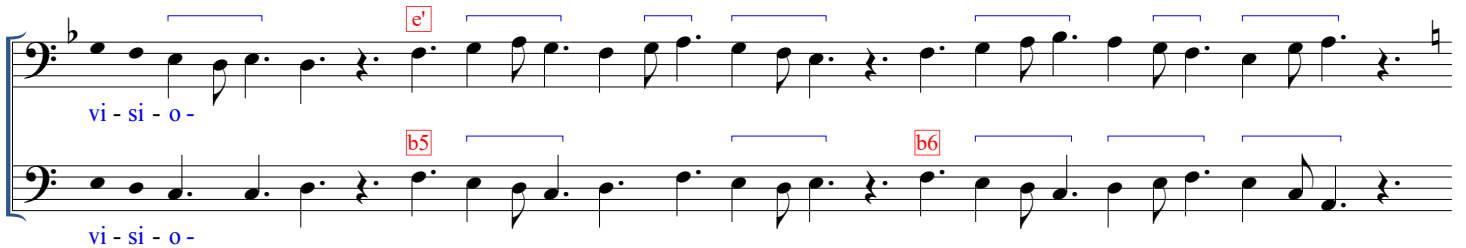

-re - cti - o - nis. fit la - pis ad - iu - to - ri - i la - pis of - fen - si - o - nis. sed di - ver - sis per - so - nis. hic est la - pis in ti - tu - lum e - re - ctus ad mi - ra - cu - lum an - ti - que vi - si - o -

- nis.

III

D Hic

T Hic

la - pis de la - pi - di - bus

la - pis de la - pi - di - bus

a - bra - he su - sci - ta - vit fi - li - os.

a - bra - he su - sci - ta - vit fi - li - os.

quos pri - o - ri - bus e - ie - ctis a - do - pta - vit

quos pri - o - ri - bus e - ie - ctis a - do - pta - vit

pri - o - rum pa - nem ca - ni - bus sub men - sa

pri - o - rum pa - nem ca - ni - bus sub men - sa

†See alternative reading of cauda from WI at the end

mi - ni - stra - vit. (h)

mi - ni - stra - vit. (h)

quod ia - cob fi - gu - ra - vit cum fra-trem

quod ia - cob fi - gu - ra - vit cum fra-trem

pri - mo - ge - ni - tum ius e - mens il - li de - bi - tum

pri - mo - ge - ni - tum ius e - mens il - li de - bi - tum ty - pi - ce sup - plan - ta -

ty - pi - ce sup - plan - ta -

| T: b7 motive sequenced, then repeated

- vit.]

- vit.

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*Opening cauda and line 1, from WI, f. 154r (145r), V; religation after phrase 2 compared to F

[Lex ho - nus in - por - ta - bi - le]

Lex ho - nus in - por - ta - bi - le

Closing cauda of Strophe I (at line 10,3), from WI f. 154v (145v), III-IV; several curtailed rests and religation compared to F

[se - cu - - tis.]

se - cu - - tis.

†Cauda at line 26,3, from Wl f. 155r (146r), VI; differing rest placement from F

The image shows a musical score for two voices, D (Dessus) and T (Tenor). The music is written on two staves, each with a bass clef. The lyrics are "mi - ni - stra - vit." The notes are connected by blue brackets, and there are red dashes above the notes for "vit." The score is a single line of music, likely representing a specific phrase or a section of a larger work.

LEX HONUS IMPORTABILE

Conductus (I19/197)

F, f. 293v (7,26)

I Lex honus importabile sub se fuit statutis. Nunc tempus acceptabile, nunc sunt dies salutis. Nunc legis impossibile dat gratia solutis a iugo servitutis. Nunc Moyses excluditur a terra que dividitur Ihesum ducem secutis.	The Law was a burden unbearable for those placed under it. Now is the acceptable time, now are the days of salvation. 5 Now grace grants the impossible to those released from the yoke of the Law’s slavery. Now Moses is shut out from the land that is distributed 10 to those following Jesus as a leader.
II Habent, in ortu filii, ad verbum Symeonis, quidam ruinam alii spem resurrectionis. Fit lapis adiutorii lapis offensionis, sed diversis personis. Hic est lapis in titulum erectus ad miraculum antique visionis.	Upon the birth of a son, according to the word of Simeon, some receive ruin, others the hope of resurrection. 15 The “stone of help” becomes a stumbling block, but for different people. This stone is the one erected as a monument to the miracle 20 of the ancient vision.
III Hic lapis de lapidibus Abrahe suscitavit filios. Quos prioribus eiectis adoptavit. Priorum panem canibus sub mensa ministravit. Quod Iacob figuravit, cum fratrem primogenitum ius emens illi debitum, typice supplantavit.	This stone raised up children to Abraham out of stones. These children it adopted, although they were cast out by their predecessors. 25 It served the bread of their predecessors to the dogs under the table. This is what Jacob represented allegorically, when he supplanted his first-born brother, obtaining 30 the birthright owed to him.

SOURCES:F, fasc. 7, no. 26, f. 293v: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with II-III indicated by capitals.W1, fasc. 9, no. 70, f. 154r (145r): a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with stanzas signaled by painted initials.Text only: none.Music only: none.Contrafacts: none.Notes on the Text: Poetic structure: This strophically constructed poem happens to share the same verse arrangement and rhyme scheme as the single-stanza conductus Caput in caudam vertitur (J37/54) and two of the first three strophes of the conductus Hi sunt sal quod evanuit foras (Q20), published in 1552 in the Pia quaedam vetustissima poemata edited by Matthias Flacius Illyricus.¹ Strophe II of Hi sunt sal differs from I and III only in the construction of its third line (7pp instead of 8p). The fourth and final stanza of this latter poem (at least as it is published by Flacius) is the text beginning Monstruosis fluctibus (I3/209), which is set alone as a free-standing conductus in the Parisian repertory and does not conform to the rhythmic and rhyme schemes of the previous three strophes, thus suggesting that Flacius's incorporation of Monstruosis fluctibus into this poem is a mistake. Content: As in a number of other conductus texts (most similarly, perhaps, Novum sibi texuit [I22/225] and the previous work in F-7, Renovantur veterum oracula [J5/305]), Lex honus importabile treats the passing of the Old Testament law or covenant into that of the New (cf. Jeremiah, 31:31-34). A more complete list of Old-versus-New-Law conductus, as well as my article on the topic, are included in my notes to the text of Legem dedit olim deus (I21/192). Beginning in line 15 (with a possible earlier implicit nod in lines 8-10) the poem deploys a number of biblical references that portray Christ metaphorically as a stone, an idea concordant with a number of scriptural invocations of God as a rock or stone. Within Lex honus itself, a particular conceit arises in how the perception of “Christ as a stone” differs between the Gentiles who accept him and the Jews who dispute his role in the covenant. For further treatments in the conductus repertory of stones serving as allegories of Christ, see De monte lapis scinditur (D2/79) and Nove geniture (I13/224), lines 29-35 (Strophe V). Textual notes: 3-4: see 2 Corinthians, 6:2: “ait enim: ‘tempore accepto exaudivi te; et in die salutis adiuvavi te.’ Ecce, nunc tempus acceptabile; ecce nunc dies salutis” (“For he [God] says: ‘at an acceptable time I heard you; and on the day of salvation I helped you.’ Behold, now is the acceptable time; behold, now is the day of salvation.”). The apostle refers here to Isaiah, 49:8, which he interprets as a foreshadowing of the granting of the new covenant. Furthermore, the use of anaphora through the repetition of the word nunc (“now”) at the start of these two lines spills over into the remainder of the stanza, reflecting the shift of the rhyme scheme from a-b couplets in lines 1-4 to tercets in lines 5-7 (a-b-b) and 8-10 (c-c-b). 5-7: the reference in these lines to the slavery imposed by Mosaic Law implies an association with the Israelites who escaped the bonds of servitude imposed by Pharaoh in Exodus, 13:17-14:31; cf. also the motet Non orphanum te deseram / Et gaudebit (VdW 322/M24), attributed to Philip the Chancellor, lines 10-11 (in Payne, Motets and Prosulas, p. 137). Paradoxically, though, thanks to the new covenant's gift of grace, the privileges once accorded to the Israelites who followed Moses out of Egypt are now settled only on those who are free from the laws he imposed – an action that was earlier inconceivable. This point is further explored in lines 8-10. 8-10: in Numbers, 20:1-12, Moses disobeyed God's explicit orders when he drew water from a rock as the Israelites thirsted at Kadesh in the desert of Zin (cf. also Numbers, 27:14). Rather than achieving the miracle as commanded by speaking to the rock, Moses struck it with his rod; he also prefaced the act with words that implied that it was his effort, rather than God's, that caused the water to flow (Numbers, 20:10). This reference is the first in the conductus text to evoke the image of rocks or stones that will appear throughout Strophes II-III, but it does so only covertly here. In Deuteronomy, 32:51-52, God informs Moses that, due to his trespass, he shall not enter the promised land of Canaan. The injunction is presaged in Deuteronomy, 1:37-39, where Moses relays God's commands that Joshua will be the one to take his place when the Israelites enter Canaan, and that Joshua also will supervise the division of the land therein. Joshua thus becomes a figure of Christ, and the Israelites that enter the promised land represent the Gentiles who will partake of the new covenant to the exclusion of the Jews, represented here by Moses; for support of this interpretation, see the remarks by Anderson drawn from the Glossa ordinaria in NDRC, 4:xxii, note 3 (taken from PL, 13, col. 430). 11-14: the son invoked here is, of course, Jesus. The figure of Simeon referred to in line 12 comes from Luke, 2:25-35, where Jesus was presented by his parents at the temple in Jerusalem, as required by Mosaic Law. Simeon had been promised by the Lord that he should not die before he had seen Christ, and when the family entered the temple, Simeon took Jesus in his arms and uttered the speech now known as the Nunc dimittis (Luke, 2:29-32). The reference in the conductus text is to some of his subsequent words as he blessed Mary and Joseph (Luke, 2:34): “Ecce, positus est hic in ruinam et resurrectionem multorum in Israhel, et in signum cui contradicetur” (“Behold, this [child] is set for the fall [ruinam] and for the resurrection of many in Israel, and for a sign which shall be spoken against”). Anderson (NDRC, 4:xxii, note 5), quoting Bede, In sancti Lucae evangelium (from PL, 92, col. 346A-B), demonstrates how this passage sets those who do and do not share in the new covenant in opposition to each other, a conceit explored further as the poem progresses. Moreover, the Bede quotation also includes a reference to the lapis offensionis (“stumbling block”) that first appears in line 16 of Lex honus importabile. 15: here begins the first explicit invocation of the stone symbolism that populates the remainder of the conductus text (cf. the remarks to lines 8-10). The “stone of help” in the conductus poem (“lapis adiutorii” – Ebenezer in Hebrew) evokes the stone memorial set up by Samuel between the cities of Mizpah and Shen. This was done after the armies of Israel – with God’s aid – had triumphed over the Philistines following a series of defeats that lost them the Ark of the Covenant for seven months. For the raising of this stone, see the account in 1 Kings (1 Samuel), 7:10-13; the “stone of help” is also mentioned by name in 1 Kings (1 Samuel), 4:1 and 5:1 prior to its actual erection by Samuel. For the earlier battles and the taking of the Ark, see 1 Kings (1 Samuel), 4-6, and the conductus Caput in caudam vertitur (J37/54), line 6, which, as described above, shares the same verse scheme as Lex honus importabile. The “stone of help” is specifically interpreted as a figure of Christ by Jerome near the end of his Tractatus de Psalmo CXXXIII (Homily 46) – see the note in the remarks to lines 18-20 for Jerome’s text. Given its placement between the two cities, the stone also stands for Christ’s role as mediator, whether between carnal and spiritual bliss, as relayed by Augustine in City of God (book 17, near the end of chapter 7), or between the Old and New Testaments, as indicated by the citation of Isidore’s Quaestiones in Anderson, NDRC, 4:xxii, note 6 (from PL, 83, col. 396). Furthermore, Jerome’s text also associates Samuel’s stone with one that appears in the story of Jacob’s Ladder, recollected in lines 18-20 of Lex honus (see the remarks below). 16: see as well the notes on lines 11-14; the “stumbling block” derives originally from Isaiah, 8:14, but also appears in Romans, 9:32-33, and 1 Peter, 2:8. The Old Testament text reads: “Et erit vobis in sanctificationem, in lapidem autem offensionis et in petram scandali duabus domibus Israhel, in laqueum et in ruinam habitantibus Hierusalem” (“And he [the Lord of Hosts] shall be a sanctuary for you, a rock of offence and a stumbling block to the two houses of Israel, and a snare and a ruin to the inhabitants of Jerusalem”). The two expressions rendered here as “rock of offence” (lapis offensionis) and “stumbling block” (petra scandali) actually have much the same basic meaning in Latin, appearing numerous further times in the Bible. Here, as before, the “stumbling block” serves as a symbol of Christ’s role in the new covenant: his gift of grace through faith supplants the observations of the older law and thus forms an obstacle to those who do not acknowledge him. Such an interpretation is explicit in the language of Romans, 9:32-33, 1 Peter, 2:4-10, and – using the term scandalum – in 1 Corinthians, 1:23. The passage in 1 Peter, moreover, assembles additional images of stones that prefigure Christ and the new covenant: the cornerstone of the foundation (Isaiah, 28:16; 1 Corinthians, 3:11; Ephesians, 2:20), and the stone initially rejected by builders that ends up being the cornerstone (Psalm 117:22; Matthew, 21:42,44; Mark, 12:10; Luke, 20:17; Acts, 4:11). 17: the contrasting portrayals of Christ as a stone in lines 15 and 16 refer to the respective viewpoints of those Gentiles who are accepted into the new covenant, and the Jews who are denied it; each group will thus see the “stone” in a very different light. The implications of these different attitudes are explored as the poem continues. 18-20: the “miracle of the ancient vision” referred to here is the story of Jacob’s Ladder from Genesis, 28:10-22. In this account, Jacob fled from his brother Esau (for why, see the remarks for lines 27-30) and stopped to spend the night outdoors near the city of Luz. He took a stone to serve as a pillow, and while sleeping experienced his miraculous vision of a ladder extending from heaven to earth, traversed by angels and surmounted by God, who promised to Jacob and his progeny the land on which he slept. God further indicated that Jacob’s offspring would spread to the ends of the earth and enjoy his constant protection, before they eventually returned back to the place where Jacob rested. Jacob was both amazed and frightened by his dream; he took the stone he used as a pillow, set it up as a monument, and anointed it with oil. He also named the place anew, calling it Bethel, Hebrew for “house of God.” This narrative relates closely in some respects to the account of Samuel’s erection of the “stone of help” recalled in line 15. These two stories are also brought together in Jerome’s Tractatus de Psalmo CXXXIII (Homily 46), mentioned above in connection with line 15, where both stones – as well as the image of the rejected cornerstone from Psalm 117:22 – are specifically associated with Christ.² 21-24: turning from the aspects of Christ and the new covenant as portrayed by the stones of Samuel’s Ebenezer and Jacob’s Bethel, the remaining biblical references now explore the contrasting perspective of the covenant as a “stumbling block” for the practitioners of the Old Law, presaged in line 16. The first allegory comes from New Testament accounts of John the Baptist, himself often portrayed as a forerunner of Christ. The conductus text paraphrases John’s words from Matthew, 3:9 and Luke, 3:8, where he castigates the Pharisees and Sadducees (Matthew), or the crowd in general (Luke), who have come to be baptized by him. John accuses them of failing to do proper actions of penance to prepare for the coming of the Lord. Instead, as Jews, they expect that God’s covenant with their forefather Abraham will suffice to save them from wrath (cf. John, 8:33,39). The text from Matthew is: “Et ne velitis dicere intra vos ‘patrem habemus Abraham.’ Dico enim vobis quoniam potest Deus de lapidibus istis suscitare filios Abrahae” (“And think not to say among yourselves ‘we have Abraham for our father.’ For I tell you that God is able from these stones to raise up children to Abraham.”). Jerome, in his Ad Eustochium (Letter 22, chap. 19)³ identifies the progeny of these generative stones with the Gentiles, people distinct from the Jews who would therefore replace them in the new covenant. The expressions in lines 23,2-24 of Lex honus, which Anderson (NDRC, 4: xxiii, note 9) connects with the rejected builders’ stone (from Psalm, 117:22, etc., see the remarks for line 16), indicate that the new children spawned by the stones represent peoples that were earlier left out of the agreement, but who will be adopted by Christ, the “stone” that gives them new life in Lex honus. 25-26: the curious canine imagery in these verses comes from the Gospel story of Jesus’s exorcism of the daughter of the Canaanite (Matthew, 15:21-28) or Syrophenician (Mark, 7:24-30) woman: Jesus was approached by a mother whose child was possessed by demons; she requested his help in ridding her of them. The woman, though, was a Gentile (described explicitly as such in Mark), and Jesus at first demurred, indicating that his first objective was to aid the children (Mark) or sheep (Matthew) of Israel. He told her: “It is not good to take the bread of the children, and to cast it to the dogs” (“Non est bonum sumere panem filiorum et mittere canibus” – Matthew, 15:26; cf. Mark, 7:27). The woman, however, shot back that “even dogs get to eat the crumbs that fall from their masters’ table, Lord” (“Domine, nam et catelli edunt de micis quae cadunt de mensa dominorum suorum,” – Matthew, 15:27; cf. Mark, 7: 28). Jesus then commended the woman and indicated her daughter would be healed. In the context of the conductus poem, then, the bread represents the blessings of the covenant, once intended for the children of Abraham (the “predecessors” of lines 23 and 25) that Christ (the stone) now feeds to the Gentiles (the dogs under the table), who were once considered unworthy of such nourishment; see the analogous interpretations drawn from the Glossa ordinaria, cited in Anderson, Opera omnia, 4:xxiii, note 10, from PL, 114, col. 139. 27-30: for the final allegory in this text to associate the Christian covenant with the “stumbling block” of line 16, the poet returns, intriguingly, to Jacob, the same figure who earlier served to illustrate Christ as a “stone of help” in lines 18-20. The story in Genesis, 27:1-30, of Jacob and his mother Rebecca deceiving ²See, for example, the edition of Jerome’s work by Germain Morin: Sancti Hieronymi Presbyteri: Tractatus sive homiliae ..., Anecdota Maredsolana, vol. 3, part 2 (Maredsous: G. Morin; Oxford: J. Parker, 1897), p. 259: “Vultis scire quia lapis ille, qui erat ad caput Iacob, Christus erat lapis angularis ‘Lapis quem reprobaverunt aedificantes hic factus est in caput anguli.’ Lapis ille, qui scriptus est in Regnorum libro, Abenezzer. Lapis iste Christus est. Abenezzer autem interpretatur lapis adiutorii” (“Do you want to know what that stone was that Jacob had at his head? It was Christ the cornerstone: ‘The stone that the builders rejected; the same is become the head of the corner [Psalm 117:22].’ That stone that was written about in the book of Kings, Ebenezer: that stone is Christ. ‘Ebenezzer is translated ‘stone of help’ ”).

¹Matthias Flacius Illyricus, ed., Pia quaedam vetustissima Poemata, partim Anti-Christum, ejusque spirituales Filiolos insectantia, partim etiam Christum, ejusque beneficium mira spiritus alacritate celebrantia. Cum praefatione Matthiae Flacii Illyrici. (Magdeburg: Michael Lotter, 1552), no. 18, pp. 24-25.

³The text of Letter 22 is taken from Select Letters of St. Jerome, F.A. Wright, ed. and trans., Loeb Classical Library, 262 (Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press; London: W. Heinemann, 1933), p. 92; the translation is from W.H. Fremantle, G. Lewis and W.G. Martley, trans., in Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, series 2, vol. 6, Philip Schaff and Henry Wace, eds. (Buffalo: Christian Literature Publishing Co., 1893), p. 29: “Postquam de duritia nationum generati sunt filii Abraham, coeperunt sancti lapides volvi super terram” (“Now that out of the hard stones of the Gentiles God has raised up children unto Abraham, they begin to be ‘holy stones rolling upon the earth.’ ” [Zechariah, 9: 16]).

his old, blind father Isaac to usurp the blessing intended for the firstborn son, Esau, is well known; also, prior to the deception (in Genesis, 25:29-34), Esau had previously forfeited his birthright in exchange for a share of some food that Jacob made. This is most likely the particular focus of the Jacob reference in the conductus, as it comes on the heels of the feeding image in lines 25-26. Esau's anger at the deprivation caused him to pursue his younger brother, and this led to Jacob's flight to Luz where he had his vision of the ladder, alluded to in lines 18-20. In scriptural exegesis, Jacob is commonly presented as a figure of the Gentiles and Esau as the Jews. This is demonstrated by Anderson (NDRC, 4:xxiii, note 11) in his citation from Bede's In Pentateuchum comentarii, taken from PL, 91, col. 248. For more on Jacob and Esau in the conductus repertory, see the conductus Novum sibi texuit (I22/225), strophe III (lines 17-24). Incidentally, the connection of these lines to the conceit of the "stumbling block" is furthered by the primary meaning of the verb supplantare as "to trip up one's heels."

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 1,2: F: the spelling "honus" for "onus" appears in both surviving sources; the orthography is retained here. 10,3: F: period at end of strophe omitted. MUSIC: Opening cauda: subtly varied musical repetition can be seen throughout this piece; several repeated motivic patterns are signaled above the staves. Interestingly, the opening motives in both the T and D voices supply musical material for the several caudae that close all three of the poetic stanzas. TD: W1: different ligations after the second phrase; the alternative reading according to this MS appears at the end of the transcription. Lines 1 and 5: T: there is similar music for these two phrases, corresponding to the change in rhyme scheme beginning with line 5 ("nunc legis"). 3,1: D: F: the first syllable of ("nunc tempus") has 2liP, 2li=fe, de; the adopted reading comes from W1. 7,1: D: F: a sig rot on b precedes "a iugo," along with one in the T, but there are no b pitches in the D to inflect prior to its cancellation before the last syllable of line 8,2 ("[moy]ses"). 9,2: the descent down to the low g (gamma ut) on the second syllable of the word "terra" is notable, as I do not recall encountering such a low pitch in any other Parisian conductus. It appears again on the second syllable of line 22,1 ("[A]bra[he]"). It is thus tempting to posit a possible attempt at word painting for at least the first instance. Cauda at line 10,3 (closing Strophe I): TD:W1: the reading of the cauda on "[se]cutis" in this source omits several rests and indicates only one note extension that might suggest a DL (the penultimate note in the D); see the alternative reading that this source implies at the end. T: notice within this cauda the extended reformulation (into 16L) of the opening 12L of the T segment of the first cauda in this piece; the D at this point also shows correlations with the first cauda. Line 11,2-4: rhythmic values are indicated for this cum littera segment on "in ortu filii," since there are 2si=d, c in the D for "or[tu]," and similar melodic figures and ligations appear in the cauda at line 21,2-4, which have prompted me to indicate rhythms at that point also. 16,1-2: the multiple repeated-note si figures over "lapis" and the 2si on "of[fensionis]" have prompted the rhythmic values indicated in the transcription. Cauda at line 20,2 (closing Strophe II): D: F: a penultimate e is apparently omitted, supplied from W1. Cauda at line 21,1 (opening Strophe III): T: F: the rhythm of the ca, f=2li, si figure in the middle of the phrase after the third rest makes better harmonic sense if read rhythmically – as adopted here – as the 3li=LBL that appears in W1; the ligation of both sources is indicated above the staff at this point for explanation. Line 21,2-4: for the reasoning behind the rhythms presented here in the transcription for "lapis de lapidibus," see the remarks for line 11,2-4. 22,1: another low g at "[A]bra[he]"; see the remarks for line 9,2. 25,2: D: F: the editorially recommended b-flat over the first syllable of "panem" comes from W1. Cauda at line 26,3: TD: for "[mini]stravit" W1 places the division strokes differently than F, resulting in contrasting phrase demarcations for this melisma; see the alternative reading from this MS at the end. Line 29,4: D: the plica pitch over the first syllable of "debitum" is specifically indicated as an e in W1, which supplies a 4li for the 3liP figure in F. Final cauda (at line 30,3): T: F: notice how the repeated phrase marked as "b7" in the score is variously sequenced before recurring as the final phrase.

SOLE BREVEM IANI LUCEM
Conductus: (126/335)

F, f. 295r (7,27)

I

D [Sol - le bre - vem ia - ni lu - cem in - co - han - te

T So - le bre - vem ia - ni lu - cem in - co - han - te re - no - van - te re - vo - lu - to re - no - van - te re - vo - lu - to cir - cu -

cir - cu -

b

a

b'

a'

- lo;

- lo;

a''

II

D chri - sto no - vas at - tol - la - mus

T chri - sto no - vas at - tol - la - mus

d

e

e

b

lau - des. gra - tes re - fe - ra - mus

lau - des. gra - tes re - fe - ra - mus

can - ti - cis et mo - du -

can - ti - cis et mo - du -

c2 c3

- lo.

- lo.

D III Cu - ius sunt sol - lem - pni - a. cu - ius sunt pre - co - ni - a. cu - ius hec

Cu - ius sunt sol - lem - pni - a. cu - ius sunt pre - co - ni - a. cu - ius hec ma - gna - li - ma - gna - li -

i i'

h h'

The image shows a musical score for two staves in F major, 3/4 time. The top staff contains a melodic line with eighth and quarter notes, and the bottom staff contains a bass line with eighth and quarter notes. Blue annotations include brackets above the top staff, dashed blue arcs above the bottom staff, and the text "- a.]" and "- a." at the end of each staff.

SOLE BREVEM IANI LUCEM

Conductus (I26/335)

F, f. 295r (7,27)

I	Sole brevem iani lucem, incohante, renovante, revoluto circulo,	As the sun repeats its orbit, beginning and renewing 3 the new year's short day,
II	Christo novas attollamus laudes, grates referamus canticis et modulo;	let us raise new praises, let us render thanks in 6 songs and music to Christ,
III	cuius sunt sollempnia, cuius sunt preconia, cuius hec magnalia.	whose festivities these are, whose celebrations these are, 9 whose are these mighty works.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 27, f. 295r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete; Strophe II not indicated by any distinctive feature; Strophe III headed with a capital.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 82, f. 168r (159r): a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with I-III signaled by painted initials, and I-II featuring additional filigree decoration.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: A division into three strophes is suggested by W1. As the whole text consists of a single sentence, and as there is no special enlargement, capitalization, illumination, decoration, or other distinctive treatment of the initial of Strophe II in F, it is conceivable that this poem may be alternatively considered as a single, nine-line stanza or two irregular ones. Lines 1-3 and 7: given the opening and closing statements, it seems likely that this piece is intended to celebrate feasts of the Temporale on or around the new year, which could include celebrations from Christmastide to Circumcision (1 January). 1,3: for this connotation of the word “ianus,” see <https://logeion.uchicago.edu/Ianus>, s.v. “Ianus,” LewisShort, D. Interestingly, the reference to the shortness of the day (“brevem ... lucem”) as well as the invocation of Janus suggests that 1 January was considered as the beginning of the year in the context of this particular poem. For considerations of the various ways the new year was conceived, see the notes to the text to Hac in anni janua (E6/148), lines 1-8 (Strophe I).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 4,3: F: atollamus; the more acceptable spelling adopted here with a double “t” is taken from W1. MUSIC: Syllabic/melismatic identity: 1. TD of “laudes grates refera[mus]” (line 5) = 1a. similar T and D of the first phrase of the later cauda on “[mo]du[lo]” (line 6,3); and = 1b. the similar T of the second and third phrases of the later cauda on “[mo]du[lo]” (line 6,3). Musical repetition: a number of the caudae, especially the ones concluding the strophic divisions of this piece as interpreted here, feature some notable repetition as well as internal sequential patterning; these have been signaled with boxed letters above the staves. 2,1: TD: F, W1: the rhythmicized reading of the cum littera segment on “renovante” is prompted by the sequential descent of the opening motives of the first phrase in both voices. 4,3: T: F: the music om for the second syllable of “[at]tol[lamus]” is supplied from W1, despite the fact that this results in the same pitches in both voices. 5,1: T: F: the e-flat accidental that precedes the first note of “laudes” is written in the d space on the staff (as the one is later for the cauda at line 6,3); W1 has no accidental, and a b-flat sig where the e-flat sign occurs in F. Cauda at 6,3: D: F: as is the case for line 5,1 the b-flat sig before L3 of this melisma is written in the d space on the staff; the penultimate note of Strophe II is om, supplied from W1. Line 9,1: T: F: 3 of the 3li for the first syllable of “cuius [hec]” looks like e, confirmed as f by W1.

DEI SAPIENTIA
Conductus (J6/86)

F, f. 295v (7,28)

I

D

T

[De - i sa - pi-en - ti - a iu - gum

De - i sa - pi-en - ti - a iu - gum

mor - - tis fran - ge - - re ve - nit ad ter - re - stri-a mor - - tis fran - ge - - re ve - nit ad ter - re - stri-a

no-stre sor - tis mi - se-re. ve - sti - tus

no-stre sor - tis mi - se-re. ve - sti - tus

ca - mi - si - a quam al - vo pu-er - pe-re pa - ra-cli - tus tex - u -

ca - mi - si - a quam al - vo pu-er - pe-re pa - ra-cli - tus tex - u -

| mode 3 also possible

- it.

- it.

II

D

T

Ex da-vit o - ri - gi - ne stel - la ia - cob o - ri-tur. ex ma - ri - a vir - gi - ne

Ex da-vit o - ri - gi - ne stel - la ia - cob o - ri-tur. ex ma - ri - a vir - gi - ne

de - us ho - mo na - sci - tur. de - us est cum ho - mi - ne. iam ho - mo re - gre -

de - us ho - mo na - sci - tur. de - us est cum ho - mi - ne. iam ho - mo re - gre -

- di - tur sur - sum ad ce - le - sti -

- di - tur sur - sum ad ce - le - sti -

| mode 3

- a.

- a.

III Post - quam rex ac - cu - bu - it ven - tris in pa - la - ti - o. ius na - tu - re

Post - quam rex ac - cu - bu - it ven - tris in pa - la - ti - o. ius na - tu - re stu - pu - it.

stu - pu - it.

ad - mi - ra - tur ra - ti - o qua - lit - er in - tu - mu - it

ad - mi - ra - tur ra - ti - o qua - lit - er in - tu - mu - it nul - lo ta - ctus vi - ti - o ven - - ter tu - mens ce - li -

nul - lo ta - ctus vi - ti - o ven - - ter tu - mens ce - li - e d d''

(e') (d'') (d''') - tus.] - tus.

DEI SAPIENTIA

Conductus (J6/86)

F, f. 295v (7,28)

- | | | |
|--|--------------------------------------|---|
| I Dei sapientia
iugum mortis frangere
venit ad terrestria, nostre sortis misere.
vestitus camisia,
quam alvo puerpere
Paraclitus texuit. | 5 | The wisdom of God came to earth
to break the yoke of death, clothed in the garment of our wretched lot, which the Holy Spirit wove in the womb of the birth mother. |
| II Ex Davit origine stella Iacob oritur;
ex Maria virgine deus homo nascitur.
deus est cum homine.
Iam homo regreditur
sursum ad celestia. | 10 | From the lineage of David a star arises from Jacob;
from the Virgin Mary
God is born as man.
God is with man.
Man now returns upwards to the heavenly regions. |
| III Postquam rex accubuit ventris in palatio, ius nature stupuit.
Admiratur ratio
qualiter intumuit,
nullo tactus vitio,
venter tumens celitus. | 15

20 | When the king lay in the palace of the womb,
the law of nature was amazed.
Reason wonders how a divinely swelling womb has increased, when it has been touched by no vice. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc.7, no. 28, f. 295v: a2, Strophes I-III complete, with II-III indicated by capitals. This is the first piece in F-7 with concordances that lie only outside of the four central Parisian sources (F, W1, W2, Ma). The two other instances of this piece, however, amount to the same thing, as one is an offset imprint of the other.

GB-Csss 117 (Cambridge, Sidney Sussex College, MS 117),¹ no. 4, f. 2v: a2; fragmentary, with music and text (including the remains of a painted and filigreed opening initial) for lines 1-3,1 in the first of the two preserved systems, followed by most of the music (with all of the verbal text cut away) from line 3,2 up through line 6,1 in the second system; portions are quite faded. As Eva Maschke has shown,² some of the material on the lowest extant staff on this leaf has been transferred via offset from the top staff of f. 1r from this same source, thus imprinting in reverse parts of the T melody (without D or verbal text) of the conductus Iam vetus littera (H24/167) from its line 15,3 through the first 25L of its closing cauda. This transfer occurred when these portions of the two leaves were pasted together in the nineteenth century to form an outer parchment wrapper for a cardboard cover that earlier surrounded the host MS, Cambridge, Sidney Sussex College, 117.

¹This source is an extant portion of a larger MS originally possessed by the Dominican library of Soest that originally included the now disparate *GB-Cssc 117, D-MÜsa Mscr. VII, 6115, D-MÜu 382, and D-MÜu 378. For information, see Eva Maschke, “Notre Dame Manuscripts and their History: Case Studies on Reception and Reuse,” Ph.D. dissertation (University of Southampton / Universität Hamburg, 2015), 87-131.

²Maschke, “Notre Dame Manuscripts and their History,” 104. For images of the pertinent leaves of *Cssc 117 and the description relied upon here, see the appendices at the end of the dissertation, plates 3.1.7, 3.1.7.1, and 3.1.7.2; along with 3.6.1, 3.6.2, 3.7.1, and 3.7.2.

D-MÜsa Mscr. VII, 6115 (Münster, Landesarchiv Nordrhein Westfalen Abteilung Westfalen [formerly Staatsarchiv], Mscr VII Nr. 6115), front binding board (interior): a2: fragmentary; this is a mirror-image offset, imprinted from an essentially complete parchment leaf that now survives trimmed down as f. 2v of *Cssc 117, described above; the folio was originally glued to the wooden board to serve as a pastedown. Although some patches are slightly faded, the binding board offset preserves an additional portion that is now cut away from the bottom of the surviving parchment specimen, thereby preserving all the material originally from lines 3,2 through 6,1 on the last system of the folio, including the verbal text.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1: for the use of the term “wisdom of God” to refer to Christ, as it does here, see Luke, 11:49,³ 1 Corinthians, 1:30,⁴ and the related sentiments in 1 Corinthians, 1:24: and Ephesians, 3:10-11. Besides its use at the opening of Dei sapientia, the conceit also appears in the conductus In terram Christus exruit (J7/185), line 4. 2: the non-biblical expression “yoke of death” refers to the mortal burden placed upon humankind by original sin. For some related biblical images that carry the same portents, see the discussion of the expression “yoke of sin” (iugum criminis) in lines 7-8 of the conductus Veri vitis germine (H14/372). 4-5: Christ, becoming incarnate and mortal, took on lowly human flesh (“the garment [camisia] of our wretched lot”), debasing his outward godliness but not compromising his divine power; see Philippians, 2:7-8;⁵ see also, for just two further examples of a similar treatment of this conceit within the conductus repertory, Sol sub nube latuit (I16/334), lines 17-20, and Parit preter morem (E12/261), lines 10-14. 8: Jesus and his mortal parents traced their descent from the line of Jesse through David; see the genealogies given in Matthew, 1:1-17 and Luke, 3:23-38. 9: from the prophecy of Balaam in Numbers, 24:17: “Videbo eum, sed non modo; intuebor illum sed non prope. Orietur stella ex Jacob et consurget virga de Israhel” (“I shall see him, but not now; I shall behold him, but not near. A star shall rise out of Jacob and a scepter shall spring up from Israel.”). Balaam and his prophecy also appear in the conductus Renovantur veterum (J5/305), lines 21-24. 13-14: assuming that the image of “a man returning to heaven” does not refer to Christ’s assumption, this expression likely indicates that humankind now has the possibility of salvation, thanks to Christ’s sacrifice. 16: for the closely related image of the Virgin as a castle that housed the Lord, see the citation from Honorius of Autun’s Sigillum Beatae Mariae given in the notes on the text to Philip the Chancellor’s conductus O Maria virginiei (E14/239), line 8,3-4. 17-21: another example expressing the astounding event of the Virgin Mary’s bearing of Jesus; for just a selection of some additional nods to this commonplace, see the notes to the conductus Lene spirat spiritus (H16/194), ³Luke, 11:49: “Propterea et sapientia Dei dixit: Mittam ad illos prophetas, et apostolos, et ex illis occident, et persequentur” (“For this cause also the wisdom of God said: ‘I will send to them prophets and apostles; and some of them they will kill and persecute.’”).

⁴1 Corinthians, 1:30: “Ex ipso autem vos estis in Christo Jesu, qui factus est nobis sapientia a Deo, et justitia, et sanctificatio, et redemptio” (“But of him are you in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and justice, and sanctification, and redemption.”).

⁵Philippians, 2:7-8: “... sed semet ipsum exinanivit, formam servi accipiens in similitudinem hominum factus, et habitu inventus ut homo. Humiliavit semet ipsum, factus oboediens usque ad mortem, mortem autem crucis” (“But he [Christ] emptied himself, taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men, and devised in appearance as a man. He humbled himself, becoming obedient unto death, even to the death of the cross.”) line 5.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 20,2: F: tractus, emended editorially. MUSIC: Features a very ornate cum littera text setting, especially in the opening phrases of Strophe I. To aid in execution, conjectural rhythmic values have been suggested above the staff for the opening lines. Many harmonic fourths occur throughout the setting, and there is frequent use of thirds. The caudae that close Strophes II and III prominently feature sequentially related phrases, some of which have been signaled by letters above the staves in parentheses; the final cauda employs variation as well between its two halves, especially in the T. Syllabic/melismatic identity: the T of “paraclitus texu[it]” (line 7) = the T of first phrase of the following cauda on “[tex]u[it].” Line 1,2: F: D: the second 2li on the syllable “[sa]pi[entia]” looks like ec; ed confirmed by Csss 117,MÜsa 6115*. 5,2: T: F: has a for the final note of “camisia”; f confirmed by Csss 117,MÜsa 6115*.

SINE MATRE GENITUS

Conductus (I27/330)

F, f. 296v (7,29)

*W1: cauda in faster rhythms, see at end; F: mode 3 also possible

I
T

[Si- ne ma-tre ge- ni - tus de pa - tre

Si- ne ma-tre ge- ni - tus de pa - tre

| F: mode 3 possible

si- ne pa- tre na- sci- tur de ma- - tre.

si- ne pa- tre na- sci- tur de ma- - tre.

W1: cauda in quicker rhythms, see at end; F: mode 3 possible

le- gem su- am ne- scit hic na- tu-

le- gem su- am ne- scit hic na- tu-

| F: mode 3 possible

-ra. cum sit ca- sta vir- go pa- ri- tu-

-ra. cum sit ca- sta vir- go pa- ri- tu-

-ra. pa- rit mi- rum vir- go vi- rum vi- ri

-ra. pa- rit mi- rum vir- go vi- rum vi- ri

†W1: opening and closing phrases in shorter values, see at end; F: mode 3 possible ta- men ne- sci- - a.

ta- men ne- sci- - a.

††WI: cauda in mode 1, see at end; F: in mode 3

et pa - ren - tem pa - ri - en - tem non pre - mit an - gu - sti -

et pa - ren - tem pa - ri - en - tem non pre - mit an - gu - sti -

(c) (c) (d) (e)

(d) (d) (e) (e1) (e2)

(d) (d) (e3) - a. - a.

‡WI: cauda in mode 1, see at end; F: in mode 3

D Ros di - vi - nus

T Ros di - vi - nus

[vel - lus] ir - ri - ga - - vit sic - ca yes - se vir - ga

[vel - lus] ir - ri - ga - - vit sic - ca yes - se vir - ga

pul - lu - la - - vit. tu - um na - tum dum ma - ri - a pul - lu - la - - vit. tu - um na - tum dum ma - ri - a f gig -

f' gig -

- nis. iu - bar vi - tro. ru - bo par -

- nis. iu - bar vi - tro. ru - bo par -

h - cit ig -

h' - cit ig -

ge - cit ig -

ge' - cit ig -

- nis. clau - sa por - ta;

- nis. clau - sa por - ta;

lux est or -

lux est or -

- ta.
- ta.

que ce - cos il - lu - mi - nat. ma - nu
que ce - cos il - lu - mi - nat. ma - nu

for - tis iu - ra mor - tis car - ne
for - tis iu - ra mor - tis car - ne

sum - pta ter - mi - or:
sum - pta ter - mi - or:

I (I) (I)
k (k) (k)

¶¶W1: different punctus organi conclusion, see at end
- nat.]
- nat.

ALTERNATIVE READINGS FROM W1:

*cauda over line 1,5 (“patre”) in quicker rhythms: f. 169v (160v), VI

Musical score for the cauda over line 1,5 (“patre”). It consists of two staves: a soprano staff (D) and a tenor staff (T). The soprano staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The lyrics are [de pa - tre]. The tenor staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The lyrics are de pa - tre. Blue brackets indicate phrasing over the notes. A red dash is under the final note of the soprano staff.

cauda over line 3,5 (“natura”) in quicker rhythms: f. 170r (161r), I-II

Musical score for the cauda over line 3,5 (“natura”). It consists of two staves: a soprano staff (D) and a tenor staff (T). The soprano staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The lyrics are [na - tu - - ra]. The tenor staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The lyrics are na - tu - - ra. Blue brackets indicate phrasing over the notes. A blue dashed line indicates a slur over the final notes of the soprano staff.

†cauda over line 6,3 (“nescia”), with quicker rhythms for the opening and closing phrases: f. 170r (161r), II-III

Musical score for the cauda over line 6,3 (“nescia”). It consists of two staves: a soprano staff (D) and a tenor staff (T). The soprano staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The lyrics are [ne - sci - - a]. The tenor staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The lyrics are ne - sci - - a. Blue brackets indicate phrasing over the notes. A blue dashed line indicates a slur over the final notes of the soprano staff.

††cauda over line 8,3 (“angustia”)

a. in mode 1 (F has mode 3); see also the other possible reading immediately following: f. 170r (161r), IV-V

Musical score for the cauda over line 8,3 (“angustia”) in mode 1. It consists of two staves: a soprano staff (D) and a tenor staff (T). The soprano staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The lyrics are [an-gu-sti -]. The tenor staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The lyrics are an-gu-sti -. Blue brackets indicate phrasing over the notes. A red ‘R’ is above the final note of the tenor staff.

Continuation of the musical score for the cauda over line 8,3 (“angustia”) in mode 1. It consists of two staves: a soprano staff (D) and a tenor staff (T). The soprano staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The lyrics are - a.]. The tenor staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The lyrics are - a. Blue brackets indicate phrasing over the notes. A blue dashed line indicates a slur over the final notes of the soprano staff. A red ‘R’ is above the final note of the tenor staff.

b. another possible reading of the cauda over line 8,3, incorporating the first-mode indications of the T that begin with the fourth phrase: f. 170r (161r), IV-V

Musical score for the cauda over line 8,3 (“angustia”) in mode 1, alternative reading. It consists of two staves: a soprano staff (D) and a tenor staff (T). The soprano staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The lyrics are [an-gu-sti -]. The tenor staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The lyrics are an-gu-sti -. Blue brackets indicate phrasing over the notes. A red ‘R’ is above the final note of the tenor staff.

Continuation of the musical score for the cauda over line 8,3 (“angustia”) in mode 1, alternative reading. It consists of two staves: a soprano staff (D) and a tenor staff (T). The soprano staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The lyrics are - a.]. The tenor staff has a treble clef and a 6/8 time signature. The lyrics are - a. Blue brackets indicate phrasing over the notes. A blue dashed line indicates a slur over the final notes of the soprano staff. A red ‘R’ is above the final note of the tenor staff.

(Alternative readings from WI, continued)

‡cauda on line 9,1 (“Ros”) in mode 1 (F has mode 3): f. 170r (161r), V

D
8 [Ros]

T
8 Ros

‡different closing punctus organi over line 16,3 (“terminat”): f. 171r (162r), I

D
8 (termi) - - [nat.]

T
8 (termi) - - nat.

SINE MATRE GENITUS

Conductus (I27/330)

F, f. 296v (7,29)

- | | |
|---|---|
| I Sine matre genitus de patre,
sine patre nascitur de matre.
legem suam nescit hic natura, cum sit casta virgo paritura.
Parit mirum virgo virum,
viri tamen nescia;
et parentem parientem
non premit angustia. | Begotten from a father without a mother, he is born from a mother without a father.
Nature doesn't recognize her own law here,
when a chaste virgin is a childbearer.
5 A virgin bears a wondrous man, yet knows not man;
and distress does not oppress
the mother giving birth. |
| II Ros divinus [vellus] irrigavit;
sicca Yesse virga pullulavit.
Tuum natum dum, Maria, gignis, iubar vitro, rubo parcit ignis.
clausa porta lux est orta, que cecos illuminat.
Manu fortis iura mortis,
carne sumpta, terminat. | A divine dew has moistened the fleece;
10 Jesse's dry rod has sprouted.
When you, Mary, bear your son,
the sunbeam spares the glass, the fire the bush.
Light that gives light to the blind has arisen behind a closed gate.
15 With his hand, the strong one, having taken on flesh, abolishes the laws of death. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 29, f. 296v: a2; Strophes I-II, complete, with II indicated by a capital, and the text of line 9,3 is missing with no indication of the lapse; a number of the caudae in this source are rendered in slower rhythmic values and some show the use of iambic rhythmic modes in contrast to WI.

WI, fasc. 9, no. 84, f. 169v (160v): a2; Strophes I-II, complete, with both indicated by painted and filigreed capital initials, and with the music and text of line 4 omitted in this MS with no sign of a break. Several of the caudae in this source are rendered in quicker rhythmic values, and all show a more consistent use of trochaic modes in comparison to F.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: This meditation on the Incarnation is much taken over by familiar symbolism relating to the Virgin birth, the chastity of Mary, and the eternal existence of Christ before he was conceived in human form.

Versification: The layout of the text here departs from that of Anderson's edition (NDRC, 4:xxxii) by considering lines 5, 7, 13, and 15 not as denoting separate verses of 4p each, but as single 8p lines with internal rhyme, signaled by the extra horizontal spacing in the above presentation of the text; note that Anderson has unaccountably left out line 7,3 from his presentation of the text and translation. The use of 10p lines for the opening quatrain of each strophe is rather unusual within the Parisian conductus repertory, and although the opening two lines may be divided by rhyme into 4+6 syllables (as shown above), this does not obtain for the subsequent couplet, nor for any of the four lines that open the otherwise identically formulated Strophe II.

Textual notes: 1-2: These opening lines, with their chiastic, antithetical expressions, refer to the dual nature of Christ as both divine and human. These expressions derive from the description in Hebrews, 7:3,¹ of Melchizedek, a priest and king of Salem who blessed Abraham with bread and wine in Genesis, 14:18-20, and who was regarded as a prefiguration of Christ. The concept of Christ's generation was developed principally by Augustine during the ongoing Trinitarian and Christological debates of the fourth and fifth centuries.² Central to the orthodox idea of the consubstantiality of Christ with God is that Christ ("the Word") existed before his conception and incarnation on earth (see John, 1:1-2).³ Hence he was "begotten, not made" (as related in the Nicene Creed) from God the Father from eternity, and thus required no mother. Likewise, in his human incarnation and birth from the Virgin Mary, Christ required no human father. As Augustine remarks in one of his sermons (no. 189, chap. 4): "Generatio Christi a Patre sine matre, et a matre sine patre; ambae mirabiles. Prima, aeterna; secunda, temporalis" ("The begetting of Christ [was] from the Father without a mother and from the mother without a [human] father; both [births being] miraculous. The first [birth] was eternal; the second, temporal").⁴ For a detailed study of this matter, see Piotr Paciorek, "Christ and Melchizedek both Fatherless and Motherless in the Christology of Augustine of Hippo," in Augustine, Other Latin Writers, Studia Patristica, no. 43, Frances Young, Mark Edwards, Paul Parvis, eds., 213-220 (Leuven; Paris; Dudley, MA: Peeters, 2006). Compare also the heretical controversy of Arianism, which claimed that God begat Christ separately from himself, and so the Son was therefore neither consubstantial with the Father nor eternally coexistent with him; and that of Adoptionism, which held that Jesus was not the true or direct son of God at his birth, but became his son at some point later in his life, such as at his baptism, resurrection, or ascension (hence Jesus was, so to speak, "adopted" by God, not begotten from him). References to these and related issues can be seen in the conductus repertory; in addition to lines 1-2 of Sine matre genitus (I27/330), see the remarks on the text of the opening lines of the conductus Verbum pater exhibuit (E5/368), line 16 of Deus creator omnium (H11/89), line 2 of O qui fontem gratie (H28/243), line 7 of Rose nodum reserat (I1/313), and lines 51-52 of Veni creator spiritus et in me robur insere (J41/360). 9: the dew that collected on Gideon's fleece, as recounted in Judges, 6:36-40, is symbolic of Christ here; the fleece itself is a figure of the Virgin Mary; cf., among the many instances of the use of this image, Philip the Chancellor's conductus Gedeonis area (F15/143), lines 1-2. 3-8: further examples expressing the astounding event of the Virgin Mary's bearing of Jesus; for just a selection of some additional nods to this commonplace, see the notes to the conductus Lene spirat spiritus (H16/194), line 5. 10: see Isaiah, 11:1 for the prophecy of the rod, shoot, or twig (Mary) sprouting from the tree, or root, of Jesse.⁵ The flower that blooms upon this originally dry rod (a reference to Mary's chastity) was Christ. The images arising from this biblical passage are common within the conductus repertory; cf. also the opening line of the triplum from the double motet Stirps Iesse progreditur / Virga cultus nescia / Flos filius eius (647/648/O16), as well as the text of its host chant, the Marian responsory Styrps Yesse. Virgo dei genitrix (O16).⁶ 12,1-2: another common symbol of the virgin birth is the image of a sunbeam passing through glass. Just as glass remains intact when admitting the sun's (God's) rays (Christ), in the same way Mary's virginity is not ¹Hebrews, 7: 3: "... sine patre, sine matre, sine genealogia, neque initium dierum neque finem vitae habens, adsimilatus autem filio dei manet sacerdos in perpetuum" ("... without father, without mother, without genealogy, having neither beginning of days nor end of life, but likened unto the Son of God, continues as a priest for ever.").

²Primarily in his Tractatus in Iohannis Evangelium and a number of his sermons.

³John, 1:1-2: "In principio erat Verbum, et Verbum erat apud Deum, et Deus erat Verbum. Hoc erat in principio apud Deum" ("In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God.").

⁴The text is taken from PL, 38, col. 1006, under chap. 4.

⁵"Et egredietur virga de radice Iesse, et flos de radice eius ascendet" ("And a shoot shall come forth out of the root of Jesse, and a flower shall rise up out of his root.").

⁶"Styrps Iesse virgam produxit virgaque florem et super hunc florem requiescit spiritus almus" ("The stem of Jesse produced a branch, and the branch a flower; and on this flower rested the kind Spirit.").

compromised by her conception of the Word (Christ). For a treatment of a wide variety of sources that offer this conceit, see Andrew C. Breeze, “The Blessed Virgin and the Sunbeam through Glass, Celtica, 23 (1999): 19-29. See also the conductus Pater noster commiserans (H19/266), line 14. 12,3-4: the burning bush, not consumed by the fire in which God appeared to Moses (in Exodus, 3:2-4), is another common symbol associated with Mary’s virginity, just as the fire within it is associated with Christ. 13,1-2: the image of the gate of Ezekiel (44:2-3) is customarily read as a Marian allegory.⁷ Here the gate refers to Mary’s chastity; the prince in the chamber within, to Christ. 13,3-14: for Christ as risen light, illuminating darkness, see, for just a single example of many, Isaiah, 9:2.⁸ For the Lord giving light or sight to the blind, see Psalm 145:8: “Dominus inluminat caecos. Dominus erigit adlisos. Dominus diligit iustos” (“The Lord gives light to the blind. The Lord lifts up the downcast. The Lord loves the just”); as well as Exodus, 4:11, and the various miracles of Jesus healing the blind (in Matthew, 20:29-34; Mark, 8:22-26 and 10:46-52; Luke, 18:35-43). 15-16: for Christ conquering death, see Isaiah, 25:8; 1 Corinthians, 15:26 and 15:55; 2 Timothy, 1:10; Hebrews, 2:14; and Payne, Motets and Prosulas, p. 27 (note to lines 136-137).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 4: W1: text and music of the entire line (including the following cauda) om, with no hint of hiatus in the MS. 7,3: W1: patientem. 9,3: F: om, supplied from W1. 10,4: W1: last syllable of “pullulavit” om, likely due to the page turn just before. 12,2: W1: rubro. 15,3: W1: possibly vita. 15-16: also conceivable for the translation, but in my opinion less likely: if “fortis” is seen to modify “mortis,” these lines could read: “With his hand, having taken on flesh, he [Christ] abolishes the laws of strong death.”

MUSIC: Caudae and modal transmutation: In addition to relying on melodic sequence to construct a number of the caudae in this piece (the more extensive examples are signaled by letters above the staff in parentheses), several of the melismatic sections in this piece feature modal transmutation between F and W1. These include the caudae over lines 1,5 (“patre”), 3,5 (“natura”), and the opening and closing phrases of 6,3 (“nescia”). All of these instances present quicker, first-mode rhythms in W1 as opposed to the more extended, mode-5 renderings of F. In other instances, clear distinctions between mode-1 trochaic (W1) and mode-3 iambic (F) readings on the same rhythmic level appear in the caudae that close both Strophes I (line 8,3, “angustia”) and II (line 9,1, “Ros”). Each of the varying readings from W1 is given at the end of the transcription for comparison. In the case of the example of line 8,3 (“angustia”), two different alternatives for interpreting W1 are supplied. The first of these corresponds essentially to the rhythmic values seen at this point in F, although these are rendered trochaically in W1; the second interpretation reads more literally the first-mode implications in the T of W1 within the latter portion of the cauda (beginning with the fourth phrase). This latter alternative leads to fractio modi in the D and yields greater consonance overall. Additionally, the result of the second reading of W1 is a series of phrases in 6L periods, which happen to correspond in length with all but the first phrase in the earlier portion of this same cauda (and this first phrase may also be made to match by shortening the final note and rest, as it is in the W1 alternatives supplied here). In terms of the priority of the different MS redactions, it is not possible to determine for certain which, if any, of the caudae versions may present the initial rhythmic conception, although the W1 redactions sometimes offer more consonant readings. Nonetheless, the dissonance level is rather high throughout this piece, with numerous unavoidable harmonic seconds as well as more than a usual share of fourths in the cum littera segments. Interestingly, one of the most startling of the dissonances, the b/c dyad on the first syllable of “angustia,” (“distress”) at line 7,3 might lay claim to an instance of word paining. Also, there are some caudae in W1 where one might expect faster values, but which are essentially identical to F (such as the one over line 2,5, “matre”), or that appear to be only partially “converted” (as in the melisma over line 6,3, “nescia”), which could argue for the F version as primary. After the opening melisma of Strophe II (over line 9,1 – “Ros”), evidence of modal transmutation between the two sources ceases. Lastly, since F has individual caudae that propose specific iambic and trochaic modal readings, any of the melismas that are ambiguously notated within Strophe I of this piece may be read in either fashion (even though this transcription presents them in a trochaic, mode-1 guise); places where an iambic interpretation may be implemented in F are marked above the system in the transcription. Line 1,5: Tt: W1: the syllable “pa-” of “patre” appears later in this source, underlaid to the 2li=fg in the T prior to the end of the cauda; the differing placement in F (followed in the transcription) also conforms with the placement of the corresponding syllable at the start of the cauda over 2,5 (“matre”) in both sources, so there is little internal reason to shift the “pa-” in F to later. 3,5: D: W1: g for the falling a cadence note before the cauda, making a possibly preferable harmonic fifth instead of a fourth. 4: TD: W1: text and music for this verse and the following cauda completely om with no sign of disruption in the MS. Cauda over line 8,3 (Closing Strophe I): W1: T: in the fourth phrase of the cauda on “angustia,” at the pitch series e,d at L22-L23 of the W1 redaction (marked with a dashed bracket in the alternative readings given at the end of the score), the d is written as a rhomb shape; this is likely intended to signal ligation with the previous e, as in the respective places in each of the following T phrases in this cauda, hence the dashed-bracket markings in the score at these points. Line 9,4: for this and all following caudae, both F and W1 show mode 1, in contrast to several of the prior melismas in F; see the above remarks on caudae and modal transmutation. 11,5: Tt: F: syllabic division as in MS. 12,4: TD: F: the DL g notes placed in both parts just before the second syllable of “parcit” are elongated much more broadly than usual, strongly implying extension. 12,5: Tt: F: syllabic division as in MS. D: F: the syllable stroke at L6 of the melisma, after the first phrase of the cauda over the first syllable of “ignis,” is faint, but visible. 13: the cum littera passage on “clausa porta lux est or[ta]” suggests to me a rhythmical reading (especially for the plicated 3li figures over its first two words), due to its correspondences with the cauda phrases surrounding it; I have therefore stipulated rhythms in the score. Closing cauda (on line 16,3): D: F: the penultimate c and f notes in the respective second (at L18) and fourth phrases (at L30) of the melisma apparently read b for the first and g for the second instance; the adopted readings are taken from W1, where they are more clearly depicted. Final punctus organi: TD: W1: shows a completely different closing figure in the this cadential passage; this alternative reading is given at the end of the transcription.

⁷Ezekiel, 44:2-3: “Et dixit Dominus ad me: ‘Porta haec clausa erit; non aperietur, et vir non transiet per eam, quoniam Dominus Deus Israel ingressus est per eam, eritque clausa principi. Princeps ipse sedebit in ea ut comedat panem coram domino...’” (“And the Lord said to me: ‘This gate shall be shut; it shall not be opened, and no man shall pass through it, because the Lord God of Israel has entered through it; and it shall be shut for [the benefit of] the prince. The prince himself shall sit within it, that he may eat bread in the sight of the Lord...’”).

⁸Isaiah, 9:2: “populus qui ambulabat in tenebris vidit lucem magnam: habitantibus in regione umbrae mortis, lux orta est eis” (“The people who walked in darkness, have seen a great light: for those living in the region of the shadow of death, light is risen to them”).

REX ET PATER OMNIUM
 Conductus: (I17/307)

*F, f. 297v (7,30)

I

D [Rex] et pa-ter o - mni - um T Rex [Rex] et pa-ter o - mni - um

in ia-ctu - ram ho - sti-um fa-bre-fa - ctum sed non fa - ctum e - va-gi - nans
 in ia-ctu - ram ho - sti-um fa-bre-fa - ctum sed non fa - ctum e - va-gi - nans

gla - di-um qua-si per si-len - ti-um in - car - na-tum ut lar - va-tum gla - di-um qua-si per si-len - ti-um in - car - na-tum ut lar - va-tum mi-sit ad nos fi - li - mi-sit ad nos fi - li -

- um.
 - um.

Reading in iambic mode 3 equally likely, see at end

II

D Quem
 T Quem

*Alternative rhythmical readings are possible for the opening cauda, see at end

[Quem] non clau - dit pa - tu - lus in se mun - di cir - cu - lus; ius - - su pa - tris

[Quem] non clau - dit pa - tu - lus in se mun - di cir - cu - lus; ius - - su pa - tris

† Alternative D phrase in W1, see at end

al - vo ma - tris sal - tum fe - cit hy - nu - lus su - sci - ta - tur par - vu - lus.

al - vo ma - tris sal - tum fe - cit hy - nu - lus su - sci - ta - tur par - vu - lus.

quod tem - pta - vit nec pa - tra - vit he - li - se - i ba - cu -

quod tem - pta - vit nec pa - tra - vit he - li - se - i ba - cu -

- lus.

- lus.

†† Alternative reading of cauda in W1, see at end

Ut

Ut

[Ut] per mor - tis ca - li - cem ve - tu - sta - tem dup - pli - cem

[Ut] per mor - tis ca - li - cem ve - tu - sta - tem dup - pli - cem

am-mo - ve - ret et de-le - ret u-nam tu-lit sim-pli - cem. et e-mi-sit

am-mo - ve - ret et de-le - ret u-nam tu-lit sim-pli - cem. et e-mi-sit

la - ti-cem. per quem la - vit et dam - pna - vit pec - ca - to-rum

la - ti-cem. per quem la - vit et dam - pna - vit pec - ca - to-rum

‡ Alternative reading in mode 3 possible, see at end; WI has different ligation in parts favoring mode 1

o - - bi - o - - bi -

- cem.]

- cem.

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*Two other possible readings of the opening cauda (at line 1,1), from F, f. 297v, VI:

a. Default ligature readings, produces unison 4C=cbag fall

[Rex] [Rex]

Rex [Rex]

b. Reading with faster values throughout

[Rex] [Rex]

Rex [Rex]

Possible mode-3 reading of the initial cauda of Strophe II (at line 8,1), from WI, f. 124v (115v), IV

[Quem]

Quem

Alternative readings (cont.)

† Differing D phrase for line 10,3-4, from WI, f. 124v (115v), V-VI

D [al - vo ma - tris]

T al - vo ma - tris

†† Reading of the initial cauda of Strophe III (at line 15,1) in faster rhythms, from WI, f. 125r (116r), II

D [Ut]

T Ut [Ut]

‡ Possible mode-3 reading of the final cauda (at line 21,2), from F, f. 298v, VI

D | mode 1 | mode 3 |

D [o - bi -]

T o - bi -

D - cem.]

T - cem.

‡ Mode-1 reading of the final cauda (at line 21,2) from WI, f. 125r (116r), V, showing contrasting ligations with F

D [o - bi -]

T o - bi -

D - cem.]

T - cem.

REX ET PATER OMNIUM

Conductus (I17/307)

F, f. 297v (7,30)

- | | |
|---|--|
| I Rex et pater omnium –
in iacturam hostium, fabrefactum sed non factum, evaginans gladium – quasi per silentium
incarnatum, ut larvatum, misit ad nos filium. | The king and father of all – unsheathing a blade, forged yet unmade,
for overthrowing the enemy – 5 as if in silence sent his incarnate son to us, though in disguise. |
| II Quem non claudit patulus in se mundi circulus, iussu patris, alvo matris saltum fecit hynulus.
Suscitatur parvulus,
quod temptavit, nec patravit Helisei baculus. | The young deer, which the widespread circle of the earth does not enclose in itself, 10 by the command of the father, leaps in the mother's womb.
A little boy is restored to life, because Elisha's staff tried
yet did not succeed. |
| III Ut, per mortis calicem, vetustatem dupplicem
ammoveret et deleteret, unam tulit simplicem,
et emisit laticem,
per quem lavit et dampnavit
peccatorum obicem. | 15 In order, through the cup of death, that he might remove and efface
our double failing,
he took on a single one,
and sent forth a stream, 20 through which he washed away and condemned the impediment of sin. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 30, f. 297v: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with II-III indicated by capitals; this piece ends a short series of contiguous items, beginning at F-7,24 with Genitus divinitus (I25/144), where the transmission of works is more limited: none is in *W*2 or Ma, one piece is wholly unique to F, and any concordances outside F and *W*1 for the others are limited.¹ Rex et pater omnium is followed immediately afterwards by Austro terris influente (G1/26), beginning at the top of f. 299r; the latter piece is headed by a large historiated initial, the first to appear since f. 263r, the start of the fascicle, and boasts a much wider concordance base.

*W*1, fasc. 9, no. 43, f. 124r (115r): a2; Strophes I-III, complete, indicated as usual by painted initials, although the one for III is about half the size of the one for II.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

¹*Genitus divinitus* (I25/144 – F-7,24) and Dei sapientia (J6/86 – F-7,28) are the only other pieces that show concordances beyond F and *W*1 (with three additional sources for the first item, and two for the second – although in both cases two of these sources amount to different representations of the same object due to offset imprinting of a folio's contents upon a binding board housed elsewhere); the latter piece, furthermore, is absent from *W*1, while Renovantur veterum (J5/305 – F-7,25) is unique to F.

Notes on the Text: Versification: the layout of the text here departs from that of Anderson’s edition (NDRC, 4:xix-xx) by considering lines 3,6,10,13,17, and 20 not as denoting two separate verses of 4p each, but as single 8p lines with internal rhyme. Textual notes: 1-7: a number of the expressions contained in this first stanza appear in Wisdom, 18:14-16.² As Anderson reports (NDRC, 4:xix, note 5), drawing on Bede’s Quaestiones in Vetus Testamentum (cited from PL, 83, col. 373), the sword in the conductus text stands for Christ (and see also the remarks for lines 3-4); for more on the leaping image that arises in the biblical text, see the remarks for lines 10-11. 3-4: WI (as well as a number of modern editions of this poem) has “fractum” for 3,4 here, which might conceivably work as a reference to the sword (i.e., Christ, see the remarks for lines 1-7) as constituting two different elements, the divine and the human, that are inseparable from each other; or that Christ and the Father are unified as members of the Trinity, and thus cannot be divided. On the other hand, the F reading of “factum” may make better sense, as there is no real biblical connection that I have been able to find with the idea of a broken sword that would readily refer to Christ (the closest is in Psalm 75: 4, which refers to breaking the powers of various weapons, among them swords).³ Central to the orthodox idea of the consubstantiality of Christ with God, is that Christ (“the Word”) existed before his conception and incarnation on earth (see John, 1:1-3). Hence he was “begotten, not made” (as related in the Nicene Creed) from God the Father from eternity. For some similar nods to this conceit in the conductus repertory, see the opening lines of the conductus Verbum pater exhibuit (E5/368) and Sine matre genitus (I27/330, which is transmitted just prior to Rex et pater omnium in F-7), line 2 of O qui fontem gratie (H28/243), as well as line 16 of Deus creator omnium (H11/89). For more on the unsheathed sword in the context of the figure of Christ, see Joshua, 5:13-14.⁴ 5: on the reference to silence, see the biblical citation from Wisdom in the remarks above for lines 1-7. 6-7: i.e., Christ was God’s incarnate son, but his human form masked his divine nature. 8-9: Christ, though he lived in the world as a mortal human, was not bound by it because he was also God. For related expressions in the conductus repertory, see Exceptivam actionem (K67/110) by Alanus ab Insulis, lines 41-44; Sol sub nube latuit (I16 /334), lines 17-20, by Walter of Châtillon; and Centrum capit circulus (J38/57), lines 1-2, by Philip the Chancellor. Note also the saying: “God is an infinite sphere whose center is everywhere and circumference is nowhere” from The Book of 24 Philosophers ascribed to Hermes Trismegistus; and Alanus’s similar, probably derivative remark “God is an intelligible sphere, whose center is everywhere, and whose circumference is nowhere” (“Deus est sphaera intelligibilis, cuius centrum ubique, circumferentia nusquam”), from his Sermo de sphaera intelligibilis, available in Marie-Thérèse d’Alverny, ed., Alain de Lille: textes inédits (Paris: J. Vrin, 1965), pp. 295-306; for treatments of these and related concepts, see Peter Dronke “The Fable of the Four Spheres” in Fabula: Explorations into the Uses of Myth in Medieval Platonism, Mittellateinische Studien und Texte, no. 9 (Leiden: Brill, 1985), pp. 143-153. 10-11: for the figure of the leaping deer in the Bible, see Song of Songs,

²*Wisdom*, 18:14-16: “cum enim quietum silentium contineret omnia, et nox in suo cursu medium iter haberet, omnipotens sermo tuus de caelo a regalibus sedibus, durus debellator in mediam exterminii terram prosilivit, gladius acutus insimulatum imperium tuum portans, et, stans, replevit omnia morte, et usque ad caelum adtingebat stans in terra” (“For while quiet silence enveloped all things, and the night was in the midst of her course, your almighty word leapt down from heaven from your royal throne, as a fierce conqueror into the midst of the land of destruction, as a sharp sword bearing your undisguised command, and, standing, filled all things with death, and standing on the earth reached even to heaven.”).

³*Psalms*, 75:4: “ibi confregit potentias arcuum, scutum et gladium, et bellum” (“There has he [God] broken the powers of bows, the shield and sword, and the battle.”).

⁴*Joshua*, 5:13-14: “Cum autem esset Iosue in agro urbis Hiericho, levavit oculos et vidit virum stantem contra se et evaginatum tenentem gladium, perrexitque ad eum et ait: ‘Noster es, an adversarium?’ Qui respondit: ‘Nequaquam, sed sum princeps exercitus Domini et nunc venio’” (“And when Joshua was in the field of the city of Jericho, he raised his eyes, and saw a man standing in front of him and holding a drawn sword, and he went to him, and said: ‘Are you one of ours, or of our adversaries?’ And he answered: ‘Not at all, but I am the prince of the host of the Lord, and now I have come.’”).

2:8-9.⁵ Anderson’s edition (NDRC, 4:xx, note 2), with support drawn from chapter 2 of the Sigillum Beate Marie of Honorius of Autun (cited from PL, 172: col. 502D), explains the deer/hart as a symbol of Christ. The image of leaping into the womb may also recall the events of the Visitation in Luke, 1:39-56, where Mary, having already conceived Christ, goes to visit her cousin Elizabeth, who was then pregnant with John the Baptist. Elizabeth’s pregnancy was also miraculous, since she and her husband Zachariah had been unable to conceive until Zachariah was visited by an angel who informed him that his wife would bear a son (see Luke, 1:13-15). Upon Mary’s arrival, her greeting to Elizabeth caused John to leap (“exultavit”) in Elizabeth’s womb (Luke, 1:41,44). John himself is typically regarded as a forerunner of Christ who predicted his coming; thus the leaping described in the conductus text has here been transferred from John to Jesus. 12-14: see 4 Kings (2 Kings), 4:1-37. In verses 32-37, the Old Testament prophet Elisha brings back to life the dead son of a mother who had miraculously conceived him through Elisha’s intervention (verses 8-17). An earlier attempt to resurrect the boy (verses 29-31), in which Elisha sent his servant Gehazi to lay his master’s staff upon the son, failed, and the child was revived only when Elisha himself bent his own body over the child. In a number of exegetical commentaries, Elisha’s staff represents the Old Law of the Mosaic covenant, whereas Elisha himself is portrayed as a figure of the new covenant represented by Christ. See also the conductus Flos de spina procreatur (H29/127), lines 10-11; Deus misertus hominis (B1/92), lines 21-24; and Legem dedit olim deus (I21/192), lines 3-6. For a similarly framed story concerning the prophet Elijah, of whom Elisha was a devoted disciple and successor, see the notes on the text for lines 15-16 of the conductus Novum sibi texuit (I22/225). 15: the “cup of death” recalls both the chalice used at the Last Supper (see Matthew, 26:26-29; Mark, 14:22-25; and Luke, 22:17-20; cf. also 1 Corinthians, 11:25-26), as well as Christ’s wish to be relieved of his mortal fate during his prayers to God in the garden of Gethsemane (Matthew, 26:39,42; Mark, 14:36; Luke, 22:42; cf. also John, 18:11). Both instances ring with associations of his sacrifice in taking on the sins of mankind. 16-18: Anderson’s rendering of these lines in English (NDRC, 4:xx) goes rather wide of the mark. The “duplex vetustas” that the poem invokes (literally “double oldness,” rendered in the above translation as “double failing”), refers to the two-fold imposition of guilt (culpa) along with punishment (poena) that was visited upon mankind with the inculcation of original sin by Adam. Through his crucifixion, in which he accepted the punishment for the sin, but not its actual guilt of commission, Christ thus used a single quality of this “oldness” (the “unam ... simplicem” of line 18) to render both of them void. The association of these qualities with agedness stems originally from language in Romans, 6:6⁶ and Romans, 7:6.⁷ Later commentators, most notably Peter Lombard in his books of Sentences, went on to delineate the two-fold nature of the ancient “oldness” specifically with guilt and punishment: “Suscepit enim nostram vetustatem, ut suam nobis infunderet novitatem. Simplicem ille accepit vetustatem, id est, poenae, ut nostram duplam consumeret, id est, poenae et culpaē” (“For he [Christ] took on our oldness in order that he might pour his newness upon us. He took on a single oldness, i.e., of punishment, in order to consume our double [oldness], i.e., of punishment and of guilt.”⁸ Similar interpretations are found in the many writings based on Lombard’s work, such as the commentaries on the Sentences by Thomas Aquinas and Bonaventura. Jacques de Vitry’s reference to the idea in one of his Easter ⁵Song of Songs, 2:8-9: “Vox dilecti mei; ecce iste venit, saliens in montibus, transiliens colles. Similis est dilectus meus capreae, hinnuloque cervorum. En ipse stat post parietem nostrum, respiciens per fenestras, prospiciens per cancellos” (“The voice of my beloved, behold he cometh leaping upon the mountains, skipping over the hills. My beloved is like a roe, or a young hart. Behold he standeth behind our wall, looking through the windows, looking through the lattices.”).

⁶Romans, 6:6: “Hoc scientes, quia vetus homo noster simul crucifixus est, ut destruat corpus peccati, ut ultra non serviamus peccato” (“Knowing this, that our old man is crucified at the same time [as Christ], that the body of sin may be destroyed, so that we may serve sin no longer”).

⁷Romans, 7:6: “Nunc autem soluti sumus a lege morientes, in quo detinebamur, ita ut serviamus in novitate spiritus et non in vetustate litterae” (“But now, in dying, we are freed from the [old] law, wherein we were held back, so that we may serve in the newness of the spirit, and not in the oldness of the [Mosaic] letter”).

⁸From Peter Lombard, Sententiarum quattuor libri, book 3, distinction 15, article 1; text from PL, 192, col. 785.

sermons is demonstrative of how thoroughly this conceit had penetrated the intellectual culture of the later twelfth and early thirteenth centuries: “Duplicem vetustatem nostram, poenae, scilicet, et culpae, sua simplici delevit vetustate, scilicet, poenae, quam pro nobis assumpsit, sed eam resurgendo deposuit” (“He effaced our double oldness, that is to say of punishment and guilt, with his own single oldness, that is to say, of punishment, which he took on for us, but laid aside by rising again.”).⁹ 19: on Christ as water, see, e.g., the conductus Relegentur ab area (C6/304), lines 10-12; Fulget in propatulo (H17/134), lines 3-4; Veni creator spiritus ... recreator (E13/361), line 13; Ave virgo virginum (F16,P46/39), 21-22; Gedeonis area (F15/143), line 10; and Beata viscera ... cuius (K14/42), line 49; as well as Traill, “Biblical Exegesis,” 334,¹⁰ which gives explanations of the figure of Christ as fons, rivulus, and flumen, drawn from the Allegoriae of Rabanus Maurus.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 15,4: Anderson’s text edition (NDRC, 4:xix-xx) has a non-sensical typo: “portis”; the correct “mortis” occurs in both the extant sources and in Anderson’s presentation of the music (NDRC, 4:32). MUSIC: Caudae: several of the caudae in this work allow for different rhythmical realizations. These include the melismas that open each strophe as well as the final cauda of the piece. Alternative readings of these passages are presented at the end of the transcription. Cauda at line 1,1 (opens Strophe I): reading the ligatures in the most typical manner causes the 4C descent of cbag in both parts to occur in unison; this rejected reading, as well as another possible version in faster rhythmic values throughout, is given for comparison at the end of the transcription. Line 4,1: D: W1: siP=a for the first syllable of “evaginans”; this is adopted here as a more consonant reading than the 3C=bag in F. Cauda at line 8,1 (opens Strophe II): a reading in iambic mode 3 is possible, given at the end of the transcription and taken from W1, which also shows an interesting notational variant, since each plicated note in F in this cauda is represented by 2si figures in W1. This notational feature in W1 has suggested the extended rhythmic interpretation and the choice of pitches given to these passages in F. Line 10,3-4: D: W1: a slightly different musical phrase is set to “alvo matris” here; for this alternative reading, see at the end. Cauda at line 14,2 (closes Strophe II): T: F: the b-flat sig preceding the melisma never appears in W1. D: F: no flat sig on b is ever indicated for this voice, although some seem necessary (given as ficta above the staff); curiously, though, a sig quad on b appears in both the T and D at the start of Strophe III (at line 15,1), perhaps suggesting previous b-flats are expected in the D; the two si pitches c,a in the D at the end of the fourth phrase of the cauda (at L14-L15) are ligated in W1, confirming the choice of rhythm adopted here. Cauda at line 15,1 (opens Strophe III): TD: F: sig quads on b precede, despite no prior appearance of a b-flat sig in the D. The rhythms for the siP figures that begin each of the first two phrases are based on the treatment of the similar figures at the start of the cauda at line 8,1 (q.v.); the pitches are clarified by the alternative version of this cauda in W1 that implies faster values; look for this version at the end of the transcription. Cauda at line 21,2 (closes Strophe III): TD: F: an alternative reading in an iambic mode 3 is also possible, beginning with the second phrase of this rhythmicized passage (starting at L9), see at end. TD: W1: implies mode 1 more strongly than F due to the slightly different ligation seen in several phrases; this version is also given at the end of the transcription.

⁹Text taken from Jacques de Vitry, Sermones in epistolas et evangelia dominicalia totius anni ... (Antwerp: Johannis Stelsius, 1575), p. 374.

¹⁰David A. Traill, “Biblical Exegesis and Medieval Latin Lyric: Interpretational Problems in Nutante mundi cardine, Relegentur ab area, and Vite perditae,” The Journal of Medieval Latin, 17 (2007): 329-341.

AUSTRO TERRIS INFLUENTE
 Conductus (G1/26)

F, f. 299r (7,31)

D
 I
 T

Au - stro ter - ris

Au - stro ter - ris

in - flu - en - te; sur - gens ce - dit a - qui - lo. fla - tu sa - cro

in - flu - en - te; sur - gens ce - dit a - qui - lo. fla - tu sa - cro suc - ce - den - te; pul -

suc - ce - den - te; pul -

c

a

b

a

- so men - tis nu - bi - lo; fer - vet i - gnis

- so men - tis nu - bi - lo; fer - vet i - gnis

e

e'

d

d'

d'' sed fe - cun -

sed fe - cun -

- dans. et hu - ma - num cor e - mun - dans a le - ta - li fri - go -

- dans. et hu - ma - num cor e - mun - dans a le - ta - li fri - go -

or: $\dot{2}$ $\dot{3}$ $\dot{4}$ $\dot{5}$ |

or: $\dot{2}$ $\dot{3}$ $\dot{4}$ |

- re.

- re.

II

In - no - va - tur

In - no - va - tur

e

g

g'

ter - ra ve - tus no - vo mo - re ger - mi -

ter - ra ve - tus no - vo mo - re ger - mi -

h

- nans. pa - rit

- nans. pa - rit

c

b

vir - go. pro - dit fe - tus e - ve lu - ctum ter - mi - nans.

vir - go. pro - dit fe - tus e - ve lu - ctum ter - mi - nans.

quo con - plen-te ius le - ga - le;
quo con - plen-te ius le - ga - le;

co - ap - tan - tur ce - lo sca - le. vi - a pa -
co - ap - tan - tur ce - lo sca - le. vi - a pa -

- tet re - gi -
- tet re - gi -

- a.
- a.

- a.
- a.

III Ser - pens di - T Ser - pens di -

musical notation system 1

- rus ex-tur - ba -

- tur ad va-gi - tum pu - e - ri. per quem pau - per li - be - ra - - tur. po-tens da - tur car - - ce - ri. ab er - ro - ris vi - a flex - - us; pa - tris re - dit

in am - plex - us mi - nor na - tu fi - li -
in am - plex - us mi - nor na - tu fi - li - p q q

t t' r s r s' r' v v' x p u u' w

x' w
- us.]
- us.

AUSTRO TERRIS INFLUENTE

Conductus (G1/26)

F, f. 299r (7,31)

- | | |
|--|--|
| I Austro terris influente, surgens cedit Aquilo.
Flatu sacro succedente, pulso mentis nubilo, fervet ignis, sed fecundans et humanum cor emundans
a letali frigore. | As the warm south wind flows over the lands, the surging north wind takes its leave.
As the sacred gust draws ever nearer,
having driven away the cloud of the mind, 5 a fire rages, but one enriching and cleansing the human heart from deathly cold. |
| II Innovatur terra vetus, novo more germinans.
Parit virgo; prodit fetus,
Eve luctum terminans,
quo conplente ius legale.
Coaptantur celo scale;
via patet regia. | The old earth is renewed,
budding in a new manner.
10 A virgin gives birth; a child goes forth, ending Eve's sorrow
and thereby concluding the old legal code.
A stairway is joined together with heaven;
a regal path lies open. |
| III Serpens dirus exturbatur ad vagitum pueri, per quem pauper liberatur potens datur carceri.
Ab erroris via flexus, patris redit in amplexus
minor natu filius. | 15 The dreadful serpent is driven away by the cry of a child, through whom the pauper is freed and the mighty consigned to prison.
The younger son by birth, 20 turned away from the path of error, returns to his father's embrace. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 31, f. 299r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with II-III indicated by capitals. The historiated illumination opening Strophe I at the top left of the folio (though not the start of a gathering) suggests a major division within the manuscript, as it is the first encountered decoration of its type since the beginning of the fascicle. Such a division is supported by the transmission patterns of Austro terris, which are wider than the more limited concordances presented by the series of pieces from F-7,24-30 (for these, see the remarks on the transmission in F of Rex et pater omnium [I17/307]). The opening illumination presents a bi-level rendering within the initial "A," with the top segment portraying the three Marys and the angel at Christ's empty tomb on Easter morning (see Mark, 16:1-8), and at the bottom the Noli me tangere (see John, 20:17), depicting Christ's encounter with Mary Magdalene after his resurrection; here he warns her not to touch him, since he has not yet ascended to God the Father. There is no direct correlation of these images with the content of the poetry they illustrate, although the advent of fair weather alluded to in the opening lines of the poem connects with the springtime celebration of Easter as depicted in the initial.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 40, f. 121r (112r): a2; Strophes I-III, complete, each indicated by painted initials.

Ma, fasc. 4, no. 3, f. 69r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, each rather unusually indicated by filigreed initials, with a larger, system-high capital for the opening letter.

W2, fasc. 6, no. 6, f. 104v: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with II-III indicated by capitals.

Heid (D-Heidelberg, Universitätsbibliothek, 2588), no. 4, f. 3v-3r:¹ a2 (but with a third staff provided throughout for a Tr voice whose content was never entered); the two folios, as presently numbered, are reversed from their original disposition, so the present recto was originally verso; fragmentary; much of the music and text is preserved from the very end of the cauda prior to the last syllable of line 15,2 (“[di]rus”) up through nearly the end of the piece.² The notation sometimes displays mensural properties: imperfect and sine proprietate ligatures and distinctions between L and B values in repeated-note passages are evident in the caudae, along with rest strokes occasionally distinguished in length; similarly, the extant cum littera segments, when legible, show declamation mostly in L values.

GB-Llp 752 (London, Lambeth Palace Library, MS 752),³ no. 3, front cover board, interior (offset), and f. Br: a2: fragmentary; visible are the last syllable of line 14 and first three syllables of line 15 to start Strophe III (“[regi]a / Serpens di[rus]”) – the latter line beginning with a capital), as well as what looks like text and music of part of line 16 (“[vagi]tum pueri”), along with occasional notational figures, preserved as offset images onto the covering of the inside of the front cover board. The folio that rendered the offset is now, unfortunately, lost. The first system of the portion of the leaf now designated as f. Br presents the Tt and T of lines 20 (“patris redit ...”) through about the first 7L of the final cauda on line 20,3 (“fili[us]”); the D is completely cut away here. The second system shows T and D of the final cauda from L19 to L78, with its remainder and final Tt syllable lost; some further portions of the cauda’s music are also missing from this segment, since some of the parchment of this system has been cut away (probably for binding purposes), leaving a hole somewhat in the shape of a stretched-out “V” in this double-leaf fragment (ff. Av-Br).

Stutt (D-Sl HB I Asc. 95; Stuttgart, Württembergische Landesbibliothek, HB I Asc. 95), no. 34, f. 27v (25v): a1 (T?), with neumes quite similar to those in Eng 102; Strophe I only. The single line of text and music just below the first system of Austro terris, at the bottom of f. 27v and preceded by a Greek cross, does not belong to this piece, but signals an earlier omission occurring within the third text line on this leaf.⁴

CH-EN 102 (Eng 102; Engelberg, Stiftsbibliothek, Cod. 102), no. 27, f. 150v: a1 (T?), with neumes quite similar to those in Stutt; Strophe I only, opening just above the center point of the leaf with a fairly nondescript capital letter and following a portion of a different written text without neumes; it begins about

¹The numbering of the leaves and their sides is based on the library’s current foliation in the images of these fragments that are available online at <https://digi.ub.uni-heidelberg.de/diglit/heidhs2588/0013/image>. This enumeration does not always indicate the original sequence of the leaves. Other resources (including the CPI website, DIAMM, and Anderson, NDRC) may show different foliations.

²The specific remains of this piece in Heid are as follows, organized according to the six systems that carry it (the first four systems on f. 3v, the remainder on f. 3r, according to the foliation now used by the Universitätsbibliothek, Heidelberg). Each system has an added Tr staff, all of which are empty except for the fifth (q.v.); this one shows the later addition of both parts of a completely different piece a2. For folio 3v, much of the music and text is significantly faded, and legibility is further challenged by the heavy bleedthrough of ink from the other side of the leaf. Folio 3v: system 1) D of approximately the last 7L (and the last 6L from the T) of the cauda over the penultimate syllable of line 15,2 (“[di]rus”), extending through the T,D, and Tt of 16,2 (“vagitum”). 2) Tt,T,D from “[p]er” of 17,1 (“per quem pauper”) through 18,1 (“potens”). 3) T,D,Tt from “[car]ceri” of 18,3 through the end of the cauda on 19,4 (“flexus”). 4) Tt,T,D from approximately “[pa]tris” of 19,4 through approximately the first 12L of the final cauda on 21,3 (“fili[us]”). Folio 3r: 5) T,D of the final cauda from roughly L14 to L54. In addition, the otherwise empty Tr staff that appears uniquely throughout this transmission of Austro terris shows the subsequent addition in a different text and music hand of the opening portion of the troped BD Procedentem sponsum de thalamo a2 (found in CH-EN 314, f. 180v, as well as other sources); this added material does not continue beyond this fifth system. 6) T,D of final cauda from L61 through the first 5C pitches of the concluding punctus organi of the D and penultimate note of the T; the final syllable of “filius” (line 21,3) is also missing.

³Online images of GB-Llp 752 are available via DIAMM at: <https://www.diamm.ac.uk/sources/451/#/>.

⁴Images of this source are available here: <https://digital.wlb-stuttgart.de/suche/suchergebnis>; search “HB I 95.”

midway through the line of written text after a relatively large empty space.⁵

Lost transmission:

Austro terris is also cited as the first item in a lost “minimus liber vetus” from a 1295 inventory of St. Paul’s Cathedral, London (see Rebecca A. Baltzer, “Notre Dame Manuscripts and their Owners: Lost and Found,” Journal of Musicology, 5 [1987]: 380-399, at 382).

Text only:

CH-Zz C.58/275 (Zürich, Zentralbibliothek, MS C.58/275), no. 332⁶ (5), f. 148r: text only of Strophes I-III, complete. Images of this source are presently unavailable to me; details stem from NDRC and the CPI website.

The following source is conjectural:

F-T 1471 (Troyes, Médiathèque du Grand Troyes, MS 1471; [olim] Troyes, Bibliothèque municipale, MS 1471), no. 1, f. Ar (first front flyleaf, recto): text only of the final syllable (“-us”) of the entire poem. The likelihood that this is a remnant from Austro terris is suggested by Eva Maschke’s revelation that no other conductus from F-7 finishes with a cauda on this specific syllable.⁷ This source was unknown to Anderson and is not included in his catalog or edition; the leaves are ruled to accommodate music a2, but staves were never inscribed and only verbal text is entered throughout.

The opening line of Austro terris also appears as line 8 of the conductus Hac in die rege nato (I30/150), the poem of which is constructed nearly completely from the incipits of other conductus. Similarly, portions of lines 3 and 5 of Austro terris (“Flatu sacro succedente / ... / fervet ignis sed fecundans”) also may be recalled in line 15 of Hac in die rege nato (“Quam fecundat sacer flatus”). Hac in die rege nato is transmitted in the following sources:

F, fasc. 7, no. 73, f. 332r: a2; Strophes I-II, complete.

WI, fasc. 9, no. 89, f. 174v (165v): a2; Strophes I-II, complete.

Music only: the conductus prosula Minor natu filius (K82/208), found in the following sources, is equivalent to the Tt and T melody of line 21 and the T music of the ensuing final cauda:

F: fasc. 10, no. 82, f. 450v: a1 (T).

⁵Images of this source may be found through this website: <https://www.e-codices.unifr.ch/en>. Locate “Engelberg, Stiftsbibliothek,” and select the codex from the lists that appear.

⁶The numbering of the pieces in CH-Zz C.58/275 is that of Jakob Werner, Beiträge zur Kunde der lateinischen Literatur des Mittelalters (Aarau: Sauerländer, 1905). Werner’s numbers occasionally split or combine various poems, but this does not apply for the Parisian conductus in this source (nos. 328-335 – although no. 331 is Virgo deum generat from St Gall 383). The numbering as in Anderson, NDRC, which apparently only applies to the conductus portion, is given afterwards in parentheses.

⁷For this point and for images of this source, see Gregorio Bevilacqua, “The Earliest Source of Notre-Dame Polyphony? A New Conductus Fragment from the Early Thirteenth Century,” Music and Letters, 97:1–41, at p. 12, note 25. Similarly, for the pieces transmitted in F-6, the only possible candidate is the otherwise uniquely transmitted A solis ortus cardine (F22,Q23/5).

LoB: no. 12, f. 36r: a1 (T); rubric: “De filio prodigo.” The music on only the opening leaf includes rhomb-shaped figures intermingled with the tailed square shapes (which look like an L) that serve as the default single-note figure seen throughout this portion of the source. This feature suggests a mensural reading for this portion at least. After the page turn, all the figures then adopt the default shape or its plicated form.

Praha: no. 6, f. 37v^b: text only of Minor natu filius; rubric in right margin: “de filio prodigo.”

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Attribution: because its final cauda is texted in a separate transmission as the prosula Minor natu filius, there is circumstantial evidence to suggest that the poetry of Austro terris influente may be attributable to Philip the Chancellor. For this claim, see Anderson, “A Postscript,” 37.⁸ Dronke (“Lyrical Compositions,” 587, note 56)⁹ raises doubts, but concedes the attribution is possible. Similarly, the numerous occasions where Philip is known to have added texts to melismatic segments of Perotin’s music opens the possibility that Perotin may be the composer of this piece (see, for such claims, Payne, “Associa,” 238, note 13; and idem, Motets and Prosulas, xiii). Textual notes: 1-2: as Anderson remarks (NDRC, 3:ii), the commentary of Honorius of Autun (from his Sigillum Beatae Mariae as rendered in PL, 172, col. 508) on Song of Songs, 4:16: “Surge, aquilo, et veni, auster: perfla hortum meum, et fluant aromata illius” (“Arise, O north wind, and come, O south wind, blow through my garden, and let the aromatical spices thereof flow”), interprets the north and south winds as figures for the Devil and the Holy Spirit, respectively. The same negative and positive assessments of the winds also may obtain for Isaiah, 43:6: “Dicam aquiloni: Da; et austro: Noli prohibere: affer filios meos de longinquo, et filias meas ab extremis terrae” (“I will say to the north [wind]: Give up: and to the south [wind]: Keep not back: bring my sons from afar, and my daughters from the ends of the earth.”). 3: the centonized text of the conductus Hac in die rege nato (I30/150), which appropriates the opening line of Austro terris, makes particularly clear the association of the sacred breath with the Holy Spirit infusing the womb of the Virgin in lines 14-16 of its text.¹⁰ 5,1-2: fire is a common symbol of Christ, as in, for instance, its appearance within the unconsumed burning bush (itself an allegory for the virgin birth) in which God appeared to Moses (see Exodus, 3:2-4). 8-9: on the incarnation of Christ signaling a renewal of creation in which he is depicted as a new Adam, see the text and notes for lines 14-17 of Perotin’s conductus Salvatoris hodie – Novus Adam (C5/315). 10-11: the birth of Christ, which established the new covenant between God and humankind (prophesied by Jeremiah, 31:31),¹¹ undid the effects of original sin prompted from Eve’s temptation by the serpent (see especially Genesis, 3:15-16);¹² see additionally the conductus Beate virginis (H15/43), lines 5-8.¹³

⁸Gordon A. Anderson, “Symbolism in Texts of Thirteenth-Century Music – A Postscript,” Studies in Music, 5 (1971): 36-42.

⁹Peter Dronke, “The Lyrical Compositions of Philip the Chancellor,” Studi medievali, 3rd series, 28 (1987): 563-592.

¹⁰*Hac in die rege nato*, lines 14-16: “Gaude, virgo virginum, / quam fecundat sacer flatus, / unde puer nobis natus” (“Rejoice, virgin of virgins, / whom the sacred breath made fertile, / whence a child was born to us.”).

¹¹Jeremiah, 31:31: “Ecce dies venient, dicit Dominus, et feriam domui Israel et domui Juda foedus novum” (“Behold the days shall come, says the Lord, and I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Juda.”).

¹²Genesis, 3:15-16: “ ‘Inimicitias ponam inter te et mulierem, et semen tuum et semen illius: ipsa conteret caput tuum, et tu insidiaberis calcaneo ejus.’ Mulieri quoque dixit: ‘Multiplicabo aerumnas tuas, et conceptus tuos: in dolore paries filios, et sub viri potestate eris, et ipse dominabitur tui’ ” (“ ‘I [God] will put enmities between you [the serpent] and the woman, and your seed and her seed: she shall crush your head, and you shall lie in wait for her heel.’ To the woman also he said: ‘I will multiply your sorrows, and your conceptions: in sorrow shall you bring forth children, and you shall be under your husband’s power, and he shall have dominion over you.’ ”).

¹³*Beate virginis*, lines 5-8: “Carens originis / labe, puerpera / dei et hominis / dat nova federa” (“Lacking the blemish of our ancestor, a new mother presents a new covenant between God and mankind.”).

13-14: possibly a reference to the story of Jacob’s Ladder from Genesis, 28:10-22, of which Jesus speaks in John, 1:51, implying a reference to the new covenant: “Et dicit ei: ‘Amen, amen dico vobis, videbitis caelum apertum, et angelos Dei ascendentes, et descendentes supra Filium hominis’” (“And he [Jesus] says to him: ‘Amen, amen I say to you, you shall see heaven opened, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man.’”). For more on this biblical figure and its associations with Christ, see the remarks for the text of the conductus Lex honus importabile (I19/197), lines 18-20. 15-16: the serpent is the devil of Genesis 3, Apocalypse, 12:9, and 20:2;¹⁴ the child is Christ (see the remarks above for lines 10-11). 17-18: on the freeing of the poor and the imprisonment of the powerful, see Psalm 71:12: “Quia liberabit pauperem a potente, et pauperem cui non erat adjutor” (“For he shall deliver the poor from the mighty: and the needy that had no helper.”); and cf. Luke, 1:42 (from the Magnificat): “Deposuit potentes de sede, et exaltavit humiles” (“He has put down the mighty from their seat, and has exalted the humble.”). 19-21: references to Jesus’s parable of the Prodigal Son (Luke, 15:11-32), a common figure where the father represents God, the younger son the Gentiles and the sacrifice of the fatted calf (Christ) prompts the envy of the older son (The Jews). For more on this biblical allegory, see the remarks on the text of the troped organum Beatis nos adhibe / Benedicamus domino (A7/44 – vdW 761/BD VI), lines 26-31, transmitted in F-6,58, on f. 250r.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. MUSIC: The abundant motivic play and phrase repetition seen throughout this piece has been illustrated more copiously than usual by boxed letters above the staves. Opening cauda: T: F: the stroke after the third phrase at L8 om; supplied from W1, Ma, W2. Line 7,1: D: F, W2: si=a, Ma: Pa for “a [letal]”; adopted g from W1. 8,1: T: F, W1: stroke om prior to the second syllable of “innovatur”; taken from W2, Ma. 15,1-2 (beginning Strophe III): T: F: 3 too low through the end of folio 299v, concluding with the 3li over “di[rus]”; confirmed by W1, Ma, W2.

¹⁴Apocalypse, 12:9: “Et projectus est draco ille magnus, serpens antiquus, qui vocatur diabolus, et Satanas, qui seducit universum orbem: et projectus est in terram, et angeli ejus cum illo missi sunt” (“And that great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, who is called the devil and Satan, who seduces the whole world; and he was cast unto the earth, and his angels were thrown down with him.”). Apocalypse, 20:2: “Et apprehendit draconem, serpentem antiquum, qui est diabolus, et Satanas, et ligavit eum per annos mille” (“And he laid hold on the dragon the old serpent, which is the devil and Satan, and bound him for a thousand years.”).

QUOD PROMISIT AB ETERNO

Conductus (G6/295)

F, f. 300vr (7,32)

I

D [Quod] pro - mi-sit ab e - ter -

T Quod pro - mi-sit ab e - ter -

- no; di - e sol - vit ho - di - er -

- no; di - e sol - vit ho - di - er -

- no, ver - bum mit - tens de su - per-no pa - ter in y - du - me -

- no, ver - bum mit - tens de su - per-no pa - ter in y - du - me -

a b

a b

- am.

- am.

II

D Le-vis nu - bes et vi - ta - - lis

T Le-vis nu - bes et vi - ta - - lis

mun - da ca - ro vir - gi - na - lis no - bis

mun - da ca - ro vir - gi - na - lis no - bis

plu - ens spi - ri - ta - lis ro - ris ple - ni - tu - di - plu - ens spi - ri - ta - lis ro - ris ple - ni - tu - di -

f

e

| mode 3 also possible to end of stanza

- nem.

- nem.

O - lim fu - it ar - gu - men - tum ver - bi si - gnans

O - lim fu - it ar - gu - men - tum ver - bi si - gnans

in - du - men -

in - du - men -

-tum nu - bes fe - rens ad -

-tum nu - bes fe - rens ad -

-iu - iu - men - tum lu-cis et um - bra-cu -

-iu - men - tum lu-cis et um - bra-cu -

-iu - iu - men - tum lu-cis et um - bra-cu -

-iu - iu - men - tum lu-cis et um - bra-cu -

-iu - iu - men - tum lu-cis et um - bra-cu -

-li.]
-li.

QUOD PROMISIT AB ETERNO
Conductus (G6/295)

F, f. 300v (7,32)

- | | | | |
|-----|---|----|--|
| I | Quod promisit ab eterno,
die solvit hodierno, Verbum mittens de superno
pater in Ydumeam. | | What he promised from eternity, on this very day the Father fulfils, sending the Word from on high into Edom. |
| II | Levis nubes et vitalis, munda caro virginalis,
nobis pluens spiritalis
roris plenitudinem. | 5 | A delicate and life-giving cloud is the sinless virginal flesh, raining upon us an abundance of spiritual dew. |
| III | Olim fuit argumentum
verbi signans indumentum:
nubes ferens adiumentum
lucis et umbraculi. | 10 | From long ago this was a sign designating the mantle of the Word:
a cloud, bringing the assistance of light and of shade. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 32, f. 300v: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with II-III headed by capitals, and with empty staves at the end of the final system to contain the work.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 56, f. 139v (130v): a2; Strophes I-III, complete, indicated by painted initials.

Ma, fasc. 4, no. 6, f. 76v: a2; Strophes I-III, complete: I presents a partially executed initial whose outline was sketched, but the decoration left incomplete; II is headed by a painted red initial, yet nothing ever was entered in the system-high space available for the beginning of III.

W2, fasc. 6, no. 8, f. 111r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with II-III indicated by capitals.

Hu, no. 146, f. 132r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with each stanza opening at the left margin, as though beginning three separate pieces, with space left at the ends of the systems before II and III, and headed by system-high painted initials; in mensural notation.

Stutt (D-Sl HB I Asc. 95; Stuttgart, Württembergische Landesbibliothek, HB I Asc. 95), no. 41, f. 32v (30v): a1 (T?), neumes; Strophe III only (“Olim fuit argumentum”) of Quod promisit, followed by Strophe II (“Si quis in hoc artem”) of the conductus prosula Curritur ad vocem (see below), headed by a smaller painted red initial; rubric (preceding the piece at the end of f. 32r): “Conductum.”¹

Text only:

The first two words of Quod promisit begin line 5 (“Quod promisit vox divina”) of the conductus Hac in die rege nato (I30/150), the poem of which is constructed nearly completely from the incipits of other conductus. It is transmitted in the following sources:

F, fasc. 7, no. 73, f. 332r: a2; Strophes I-II, complete.

¹Images of this source are available here: <https://digital.wlb-stuttgart.de/suche/suchergebnis>; search “HB I 95.”

W1, fasc. 9, no. 89, f. 174v (165v): a2; Strophes I-II, complete.

Music only: the melody of the T and D of the final cauda is equivalent to the following conductus prosulas:

Crucifigat omnes (D3/70):

F, fasc. 6, no. 35, f. 231v, a3; Strophes I-II only.

W1, fasc. 8, no. 10, f. 78v (71v): a3; Strophe I only, but with the text of the two stanzas of the contrafact Mundum renovavit (see below) entered into the otherwise empty staff lines of the Tr and D directly after Crucifigat; this latter textual addition appears to be in a different hand and in differently colored ink; it extends horizontally out of the writing block into the right margin of the folio.

W2, fasc. 3, no. 10, f. 46v: a3; incomplete: music and text of Strophe I up through the first syllable of line 8; also transmitted in fasc. 7, no. 23, f. 138v: a2 (TD): Strophe I only.

CaJ (GB-Cjec QB 1; Cambridge, Jesus College, Ms QB1), Fragment A, no. 9, f. 1c^r: a3 (with a different Tr than in the other a3 sources of this piece); fragmentary: music and text of Strophe I only up through line 14, with all portions of the Tr from lines 2-5 cut away that are higher than the f that sits in the space above the fourth line of the c3-clef staff.

Stutt (D-Sl HB I Asc. 95; Stuttgart, Württembergische Landesbibliothek, HB I Asc. 95), no. 42, f. 33r (31r): a1 (T?), in unheightened neumes: Strophe I only.

Hu, no. 97, f. 97r: a2 (TD): Strophe I only, in mensural notation.

The following two sources transmit only the text of Crucifigat omnes:

CB (D-Mbs Clm. 4660; Carmina Burana), no. 47, f. 13r: text only of Strophes I-III, complete, without neumes; followed without break by the contrafact Curritur ad vocem (see below).

Ox Rawl (GB-Ob Rawl.poet.C510), no. 28, f. 242v (13v): text only of Strophes I-III, complete; superscript: “De effectu crucifixionis Jhesu Christi” (“On the consequences of the crucifixion of Jesus Christ”).

Mundum renovavit (see under Anderson catalog D3/-):

W1, fasc. 8, no. 10a, f. 79v (72v): a3; text only of Strophes I-II, complete; entered in the margin next to a setting of Crucifigat (see above) as if part of its poem; a unique text transmission.

Curritur ad vocem (see under Anderson D3/-):

CB (D-Mbs Clm. 4660; Carmina Burana), no. 47a, f. 13r: text only, Strophes I-II, complete; follows directly after strophe III of Crucifigat as if part of it.

Stutt (D-Sl HB I Asc. 95; Stuttgart, Württembergische Landesbibliothek, HB I Asc. 95), no. 44, f. 32v (30v): a1 (T?), in unheightened neumes that seem to show the same melody in this MS as the one for Crucifigat (see above); Strophe II only (“Si quis in hoc artem”); follows directly after the isolated Strophe III (“Olim fuit argumentum”) of Quod promisit (see above).

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Attribution: because its final cauda is fitted with a prosula that has been ascribed to Philip the Chancellor (Crucifigat omnes),² there is therefore circumstantial evidence to suggest that the poetry of Quod promisit may also be attributable to him.³ Similarly, the numerous occasions where Philip is known to have used Perotin’s music as sources for his prosula texts opens the possibility that Perotin may have composed this piece (see, for this speculation, Payne, “Associa,” 238, note 13;⁴ and idem, Motets and Prosulas, xiii). Textual notes: 3,1: on Christ as the Word or Logos (λόγος), see John, 1:1: “In principio erat Verbum, et Verbum erat apud Deum, et Deus erat Verbum” (“In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.”); and Revelation, 19:13: “Et vestitus erat veste aspersa sanguine: et vocatur nomen ejus: Verbum Dei” (“And he was clothed with a garment sprinkled with blood; and his name is called the Word of God.”). 4,3: the biblical kingdom of Edom, which descended from Esau, the twin brother of Jacob, is found frequently throughout the Old Testament and is often represented as a land of unbelievers or enemies, just as Esau himself is often portrayed as a typological symbol for the Jews; see, for example, the remarks on the text of the conductus Lex honus importabile (I19/197), lines 27-30; and Novum sibi texuit (I22/225), strophe III (lines 17-24). One may also note the conductus Circa mundi versperam (J54/63), lines 7-8, which evokes Isaiah, 63:1-4,⁵ where Edom is presented as the land from which a red-robed figure comes who is portrayed as a figure of Christ at the Last Judgment. 7-8: dew is a frequent symbol of Christ and God’s power; see the story of Gideon’s fleece in Judges, 6:36-40; and also Isaiah, 45:8.⁶ For just one example among many instances of this image in the conductus repertory, see Philip the Chancellor’s Gedeonis area (F15/143), lines 1-2. 9-10: the mantle or covering of the Word in this context is the womb of the Virgin Mary. For biblical images of clouds as symbolic figures for Mary bearing Christ, consider Job, 38:8-9⁷ and Luke, 21:27.⁸ 11-12: cf. Anderson’s commentary on this text (NDRC, 3:vi); since the cloud is associated with the flesh of the Virgin previously in the poem (lines 5-

²See the remarks on attribution in the notes to the text of Crucifigat, transmitted in F-6,35, on f. 231v

³For this suggestion, see the relevant portion of the works list given in Payne, “Philip the Chancellor,” Grove Music Online, accessed 4 December, 2021, through <http://www.oxfordmusiconline.com>. An earlier version of the article is available in print in The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians, eds. Stanley Sadie and J. Tyrrell (London: Macmillan, 2001), 19:594–597.

⁴Thomas B. Payne, “Associa tecum in patria: A Newly Identified Organum Trope by Philip the Chancellor,” Journal of the American Musicological Society, 39 (1986): 233-254.

⁵Isaiah, 63:1-4: “Quis est iste qui venit de Edom tinctis vestibus de Bosra, iste formosus in stola sua, gradiens in multitudine fortitudinis suae? ‘Ego, qui loquor iustitiam, et propugnator sum ad salvandum.’ Quare ergo rubrum est indumentum tuum, et vestimenta tua sicut calcantium in torculari? ‘Torcular calcavi solus, et de gentibus non est vir mecum; calcavi eos in furore meo, et conculcavi eos in ira mea: et aspersus est sanguis eorum super vestimenta mea, et omnia indumenta mea inquinavi’ ” (“Who is this that comes from Edom, with dyed garments from Bosra, this beautiful one in his robe, walking in the greatness of his strength? ‘It is I, who speak justice, and who am a defender for salvation.’ Why then is your apparel red, and your garments like theirs that tread in the winepress? ‘I have trodden the winepress alone, and of the Gentiles there is not a man with me: I have trampled on them in my indignation, and have trodden them down in my wrath, and their blood is sprinkled upon my garments, and I have stained all my apparel.’ ”). See also Apocalypse, 19:13, given above in the notes to line 3,1.

⁶Isaiah, 45:8: “Rorate, caeli, desuper, et nubes pluant justum; aperiatur terra, et germinet salvatorem, et justitia oriatur simul: ego Dominus creavi eum” (“Drop down dew, O heavens, from above, and let the clouds rain down a just man: let the earth be opened, and bud forth a savior: and let justice spring up at the same time: I the Lord made him”).

⁷Job, 38:8-9: “Quis conclusit ostiis mare, quando erumpebat quasi de vulva procedens; cum ponerem nubem vestimentum ejus, et caligine illud quasi pannis infantiae obvolverem?” (“Who shut up the sea with doors, when it broke forth as issuing out of the womb: when I [the Lord] made a cloud the garment thereof, and wrapped it in a mist as in swaddling bands?”).

⁸Luke, 21:27: “et tunc videbunt Filium hominis venientem in nube cum potestate magna et majestate.” (“And then they shall see the Son of man coming in a cloud, with great power and majesty”).

8), Mary’s womb functions as shade for the light of the holy child within. For further use of this imagery within the conductus repertory, see the notes on the text for Sol sub nube latuit (I16/334), line 1 et passim.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 12,2: F: ad (not recorded in the commentary on this piece in Anderson, NDRC, 3:194); corrected from W1, Ma, W2, Hu. MUSIC: Line 10,3: T: for the figure over the second syllable of “indumentum”: F, W2: siP=agP; W1, Ma: 2li=ag, as adopted here; Hu: 2L=a,g. 11,3: D: F: over the second syllable of “adiumentum”: 9C from g down to either f or e; W1, Ma, W2, Hu give the expected series g-g as adopted here. Final cauda: T: F: the b-flat sig is operative up through the seventh phrase to L27, where it is then canceled by a change of system; the use of b-natural throughout the cauda’s T voice is suggested by W1, Ma (where, in the latter source, the cauda is preceded by a natural sign on b in the T); the natural sign on b that begins the cauda in the D in F; and all applicable sources for the conductus prosulas, which show b-natural throughout. Alternatively, W2 and Hu both show a b-flat sig operative through the sixth phrase to L23, at which point W2 cancels it with a change of system and Hu with a natural sig; T: F: d, db, ac, db for the fifth phrase (L16-L19); W1, Ma, W2, Hu: d, dc, bd, db as adopted here, additionally supported by all applicable sources of the conductus prosulas except W1, where the phrase is om.

MAGNIFICAT ANIMA MEA DOMINUM QUI IUDICAT

Conductus: (H10/203)

*F, f. 301v (7,33)

The score consists of two systems of staves. Each system has a Soprano (S) and Tenor (T) voice. The lyrics are: Mag-ni-fi-cat a-ni-ma me-a do-mi-num. qui iu-di-cat ver-ba, cor, re-nes ho-mi-num. po-nens-que mor-tis ter-mi-num per a-dam pro-pa-ga-te. Ex-ter-mi-nat pri-sti-ni se-men ge-mi-tus, et se-mi-nat gau-di-a no-bis spi-ri-tus. The score includes various musical notations such as notes, rests, and bar lines. There are also several annotations in red boxes: 'a', 'y', 'x', 'a1', 'y1', 'a2', 'b', 'x', 'a3', 'b', 'y2', 'c', and 'c'. Blue brackets and lines connect notes across staves, indicating musical correspondences. A blue dashed line with a red arrow points to a specific note in the Tenor part of the first system.

*In addition to the smaller-scale musical correspondences noted in the score for the beginning of Strophe I, much of the T voice from its opening cauda through the setting of lines 1-2 shows some striking motivic correspondences with that of lines 3-4.

gra - ti - a plu - ens ce - li - tus vi - te ros in - no - va -

gra - ti - a plu - ens ce - li - tus vi - te ros in - no - va -

- te.

- te.

III Qui de - spi - cit po - pu - li fa - stus ve - te - ris, et re - spi - cit an - cil - le

Qui de - spi - cit po - pu - li fa - stus ve - te - ris, et re - spi - cit an - cil - le fle - tum pau - pe - ris, pro - les hu - ma - ni ge - ne - ris. iam me be - a - tam di -

fle - tum pau - pe - ris, pro - les hu - ma - ni ge - ne - ris. iam me be - a - tam di -

- cent.

- cent.

IV O - sten - dunt de - i se - mi - tas pa - ten - tes ab i - ni - ti - o pi - us a - mor

O - sten - dunt de - i se - mi - tas pa - ten - tes ab i - ni - ti - o pi - us a - mor et ve - ri - tas. sed pre - mi - net iu - di - ti - o que non tur - ba - tur o - di - o dul -

 et ve - ri - tas. sed pre - mi - net iu - di - ti - o que non tur - ba - tur o - di - o dul -

- cis e - ius be - ni - gni - tas. ne - que fri - ge - scit se - ni - o. sed sem - per
 - cis e - ius be - ni - gni - tas. ne - que fri - ge - scit se - ni - o. sed sem - per si - ne te - di - o fer - vet pa - ter - na ca - ri - tas er - ga de - um ti - men - si - ne te - di - o fer - vet pa - ter - na ca - ri - tas er - ga de - um ti - men -

- tes.
 - tes.

V D T
 Ie - iu - ne men - tis ma - ti - e con - tra - cta ter - ra gen - ti - um.
 Ie - iu - ne men - tis ma - ti - e con - tra - cta ter - ra gen - ti - um.

pa-nis af - fer-tur gra-ti - e. sol - ve le - ta ie - iu - ni-um. re-spi - ret mens
 [i] [i']

pa-nis af - fer-tur gra-ti - e. sol - ve le - ta ie - iu - ni-um. re-spi - ret mens ad gau - di - um. gra-num ce - le - stis pa - tri - e.

 [h] [h] ad gau - di - um. gra-num ce - le - stis pa - tri - e.

mor-tis in ex-ter-mi - ni - um vi - te lar - gi - tur pran - di - um.
 [h] [h] [b]

mor-tis in ex-ter-mi - ni - um vi - te lar - gi - tur pran - di - um.

pul - sa cor - dis e - su - ri - e. quod de - us im - plet bo - [g"] [h']

pul - sa cor - dis e - su - ri - e. quod de - us im - plet bo -

*F, W1, Ma: differing readings arise among parts of this cauda; see at end

[b] [b]

[k] [b] [b]
 [j]

Two staves of musical notation. The top staff has a red box with 'k' above it and a blue box with 'b' above it. The bottom staff has a red box with 'j' above it. Both staves end with the lyrics "- nis." in blue. There are various musical markings including brackets, slurs, and a blue dashed line with a 'p' dynamic marking.

Two staves of musical notation. The top staff is labeled 'VI' and the bottom staff is labeled 'T'. Both staves have the word 'Iam' in blue below the first few notes. The lyrics 'sol - vens quod pro - mi - se - rat a - bra - he san - cto se - mi - ni' are written in blue below the staves. There are various musical markings including brackets, slurs, and a red box with 'b' above it.

Two staves of musical notation. The lyrics 'sum - mis i - ma con - fe - de - rat. de - scen - dens ver - bum do - mi - ni' are written in blue below the staves. There are various musical markings including brackets, slurs, and a red box with 'k' above it.

Two staves of musical notation. The lyrics 'pa - cem re - por - tans ho - mi - ni. li - brum - que clau - sum re - se - rat. u - ni - ta car - ne nu - mi - ni.' are written in blue below the staves. There are various musical markings including brackets, slurs, and red boxes with 'a5' and 'y3' above them.

Two staves of musical notation. The lyrics 'quod est con - ces - sum ne - mi - ni ni - si quem vir - go ge - ne - rat. qui ma - tris est o - ri -' are written in blue below the staves. There is a red box with 'f4' above the first few notes of the bottom staff.

Two staves of musical notation. This system continues the musical notation from the previous system, with various musical markings including brackets, slurs, and a blue dashed line with a 'p' dynamic marking.

This 24L segment of the cauda features some unusual harmonies and shows differing ligations in each source; see the comparison of all MS versions at end

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*Cauda closing Strophe V (line 38), opening segment: a comparison of the three different MS readings

a. F, f. 232v, VI – as given in the transcription above, with double strokes specified in opening portions of T and D (shown above the staff)

b. Ma, f. 73v, III – distinguishes single and double rest strokes differently from F (both indicated above the staff); apparent 3li=3L ligations in T near end

c. WI, f. 130v (121v), VI – 3si figures in D appear as 3li in F and Ma; first of two readings, with longer rests in the opening portion, as in F

Musical score for example c, showing two staves (D and T) with annotations for '3si' and '3li' figures. The score includes a key signature of one flat and a common time signature. The D staff has a treble clef and the T staff has an alto clef. Annotations include blue brackets and lines indicating specific rhythmic patterns and rests. A red vertical bar is present in the D staff. The text '(bo)[nis.]' is written below the T staff.

d. WI, f. 130v (121v), VI – second of two readings, with shorter rests in the first portion, as in Ma

Musical score for example d, showing two staves (D and T) with annotations for '3si' and '3li' figures. The score includes a key signature of one flat and a common time signature. The D staff has a treble clef and the T staff has an alto clef. Annotations include blue brackets and lines indicating specific rhythmic patterns and rests. A red vertical bar is present in the D staff. The text '(bo)[nis.]' is written below the T staff.

Closing cauda (line 48), L43-64 – a comparison of the three different MS readings, possibly corrupt in all sources

a. F, f. 203r V – as given in the transcription above; opening three T notes a third too high, several dissonances

Musical score for example a, showing two staves (D and T) with annotations for 'f'ef' and 'd'c'd'. The score includes a key signature of one flat and a common time signature. The D staff has a treble clef and the T staff has an alto clef. Annotations include blue brackets and lines indicating specific rhythmic patterns and rests. A red vertical bar is present in the D staff. The text '(ori)[go.]' is written below the T staff.

b. Ma, f. 74v, II – most acceptable as it stands, fewest dissonances

Musical score for example b, showing two staves (D and T) with annotations for 'ori' and 'go'. The score includes a key signature of one flat and a common time signature. The D staff has a treble clef and the T staff has an alto clef. Annotations include blue brackets and lines indicating specific rhythmic patterns and rests. A red vertical bar is present in the D staff. The text '(ori)[go.]' is written below the T staff.

c. WI, f. 131r (122r), V – given here as it stands; most clearly corrupt: missing phrase in D, omitted rests, and ligation of last phrase in T

Musical score for example c, showing two staves (D and T) with annotations for 'ori' and 'go'. The score includes a key signature of one flat and a common time signature. The D staff has a treble clef and the T staff has an alto clef. Annotations include blue brackets and lines indicating specific rhythmic patterns and rests. A red vertical bar is present in the D staff. The text '(ori)[go.]' is written below the T staff.

MAGNIFICAT ANIMA MEA DOMINUM QUI IUDICAT

Conductus (H10/203)

F, f. 301v (7,33)

- | | |
|---|---|
| I Magnificat
 anima mea dominum, qui iudicat
 verba, cor, renes hominum;
 ponensque mortis terminum per Adam propagate. | My soul doth magnify the Lord, who judges the words, the heart, the innermost feelings of mankind,
 5 putting an end to the death handed down through Adam. |
| II Exterminat
 pristini semen gemitus;
 et seminat gaudia nobis spiritus gratia pluens celitus
 vite ros innovate. | He drives out the seed of the very first sorrow;
 and the dew of renewed life, 10 raining down with grace from heaven, sows
 the joys of the spirit in us. |
| III Qui despicit populi fastus veteris, et respicit
 ancille fletum pauperis.
 Proles humani generis.
 iam me beatam dicent. | He despises the arrogance of the people of old, 15 and he looks with favor on the weeping of the poor handmaiden.
 The descendants of mankind
 now will call me blessed. |
| IV Ostendunt dei semitas patentes ab initio pius amor et veritas;
 sed preminet iuditio,
 que non turbatur odio,
 dulcis eius benignitas;
 neque frigescit senio,
 sed semper, sine tedio, fervet paterna caritas
 erga deum timentes. | Merciful love and truth 20 reveal God's paths, lying open from the start;
 but his sweet kindness, which is unmuddied by hatred,
 excels in judgment;
 25 and it grows not cold with age, but always, without annoyance, his fatherly charity warms towards those who fear God. | | V Ieiune mentis matie contracta terra gentium, panis affertur gratie.
 Solve, leta ieiunium.
 Respiret mens ad gaudium.
 Granum celestis patrie,
 mortis in exterminium,
 vite largitur prandium, pulsa cordis esurie, quod deus implet bonis. | When the land of the Gentiles is diminished 30 by the emaciation of a fasting mind, the bread of grace is brought forth.
 Break it off, abolish the fast.
 Let the mind breathe again for joy.
 Upon the expulsion of death, 35 when the hunger of the heart has been dispelled, the grain of the celestial homeland grants to life a feast
 that God fills with good things. |
| VI Iam solvens quod promiserat
 Abrahe sancto semini, summis ima confederat | Now accomplishing what he had promised 40 to the holy descendants of Abraham, the Word of the Lord, descending, |

descendens verbum domini, pacem reportans homini, librumque clausum reserat, unita carne numini. Quod est concessum nemini, nisi quem virgo generat, qui matris est origo.	bringing back peace to mankind, joins together the highest with the lowest, and unlocks the closed book 45 by uniting flesh to divinity. This is granted to no one, except the one the Virgin bore, who is his mother's creator.
---	---

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 33, f. 301v: a2; Strophes I-VI, complete, with II-V indicated by capitals; the piece begins at the very top of the folio, as in WI. This and the following two works in F are also contiguous in Oxf-Sol, but in reverse order.

WI, fasc. 9, no. 47, f. 129v (120v): a2; Strophes I-VI, complete, each indicated by painted initials, with further filigree decoration for those beginning I and V (slight); the piece begins at the very top of the folio, as in F, and the final phrase of the closing cauda, along with its subsequent punctus organi, was apparently initially omitted and later completed on staves drawn into the right margin, conceivably in the same hand as the main scribe. This may account for the repeated pentrials of the letter “a” that appear below in the bottom margin of f. 131r (122r).

Ma, fasc. 4, no. 4, f. 71r: a2; Strophes I-VI, complete; no opening initial for I; painted initials for II, III, V, and VI, with additional filigree decoration for the latter three. There is no indication of any major division for IV, which begins with a standard letter “o,” prefaced by an apparent erasure.

Oxf-Sol,¹ no. 19 (= Sol, no. 6), fol. IIv: a2; fragmentary; text and music – faded in many places – survive from the beginning of the piece through line 7,1 (beginning Strophe II); a large, system-high painted initial opens Strophe I; a capital begins II. This and the previous two works in Sol are also contiguous in F, but in reverse order.

Text only:

Two places in the text of Magnificat ... qui iudicat – the adjacent lines 39 and 40 that begin Strophe VI – may be recalled in the text of the conductus Hac in die rege nato (I30/150), whose poem is constructed nearly completely from the incipits of other conductus. Hac in die rege nato is transmitted in the following sources:

F, fasc. 7, no. 73, f. 332r: a2; Strophes I-II, complete.

WI, fasc. 9, no. 89, f. 174v (165v): a2; Strophes I-II, complete.

In contrast, though, to most of the other identifications proposed for Hac in die rege nato, its possible evocations of Magnificat ... qui iudicat do not involve the incipit, and each of these can also refer to other pieces:

¹This siglum as used here brings together the related fragments now preserved in Oxford, Bodleian Library, Auct. Q.3.17 (GB-Ob [pr. bk.] Auct. 6 Q.3.17; OxAuct) and CH-MSbk S.231 (Mariastein, Benediktinerkloster, S.231), the latter olim: Solothurn, Zentralbibliothek, S. 231 (Sol). The numbering and sequence of the items in this reconstituted source derives from the more complete combined listing in Everist, “A Reconstructed Source,” 107 (Table 2).

Line 20 of Hac in die rege nato (“Persolvens quod promiserat”) not only evokes line 39 (opening Strophe VI) of Magnificat ... qui iudicat (“Iam solvens quod promiserat”), but it also recollects the incipit of Quod promisit ab eterno (G6/295), already cited in line 5 of Hac in die rege nato (“Quod promisit vox divina”). Furthermore, Quod promisit precedes Magnificat ... qui iudicat in F.

Similarly, line 4 of Hac in die rege nato (“Abrahe et semini”) recalls line 40 (the second line of Strophe VI) of Magnificat ... qui iudicat (“Abrahe sancto semini,”), as well as line 5 (“ut Abrahe semini”) of the motet Deo confitemini (A3/87 – vdW 131/M13), and the opening of the motet Ex semine Abrahe divino (vdW 483/M38).

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1-2: The opening two lines of the poem and the italicized portions in lines 15, 16, 18, 28, 37, 38, and 40 are drawn from the Magnificat, Mary’s canticle addressed to her cousin Elizabeth in Luke, 1:46-55; the opening two lines in the conductus poem relay Luke, 1:46, and the remaining references arise in the same order in both texts. See the notes on the specific places below for more details. 4: all three parts of the body that appear in this line – the mouth or speech (os, verba, or related terms), the heart (cor) and the “kidneys” (renes, i.e., “reins,” “loins,” or, as rendered here, “innermost feelings”) – occur in Wisdom, 1:6.² 4,1-2: For some biblical passages discussing only speech and heart in close quarters, see Romans, 10:8;³ Romans, 10:10;⁴ Psalm 18:15;⁵ and Psalm 48:4.⁶ 4,2-3: for biblical images of just the heart and “innermost feelings” (renes) in close juxtaposition, see Psalm 7:10;⁷ as well as the analogous expressions in Psalm 25:2, Psalm 72:21, Jeremiah, 11:20, 17:10, and 20:12, and Revelation, 2:23. 5-6: mankind incurred the punishment of death through Adam’s inculcation of original sin, which is then rectified by Christ; see 1 Corinthians, 15:22,⁸ and Romans, 5:14.⁹ 8: the “seed of the very first sorrow” is the fall of Adam and Eve as presented in Genesis, 3

²Wisdom, 1:6: “Benignus est enim spiritus sapientiae, et non liberabit maledicum a labiis suis: quoniam renum illius testis est Deus, et cordis illius scrutator est verus, et linguae ejus auditor” (“For the spirit of wisdom is benevolent, and will not acquit the evil speaker from his lips: for God is witness of his reins [“innermost feelings”], and he is a true searcher of his heart, and a hearer of his tongue”).

³Romans, 10:8: “Sed quid dicit Scriptura? Prope est verbum in ore tuo, et in corde tuo: hoc est verbum fidei, quod praedicamus.” (“But what says the scripture? The word is close to you, even in your mouth, and in your heart [cf. Deuteronomy, 30:14]. This is the word of faith, which we preach.”).

⁴Romans, 10:10: “Corde enim creditur ad justitiam: ore autem confessio fit ad salutem.” (“For with the heart we believe in justice; but with the mouth confession is made for salvation.”).

⁵Psalm 18:15: “Et erunt ut complacent eloquia oris mei, et meditatio cordis mei in conspectu tuo semper. Domine, adjutor meus, et redemptor meus” (“And the words of my mouth shall be such as may please, and the meditation of my heart always in your sight. O Lord, my helper, and my redeemer.”)

⁶Psalm 48:4: “Os meum loquetur sapientiam, et meditatio cordis mei prudentiam.” (“My mouth shall speak wisdom, and the meditation of my heart understanding.”).

⁷Psalm 7:10: “Consumetur nequitia peccatorum, et diriges justum, scrutans corda et renes, Deus.” (“The wickedness of sinners shall be brought to nought: and thou shalt direct the just: the searcher of hearts and reins [i.e., “innermost feelings”] is God.”).

⁸1 Corinthians, 15:22: “Et sicut in Adam omnes moriuntur, ita et in Christo omnes vivificabuntur” (“And as in Adam all die, so also in Christ all shall be made alive.”).

⁹Romans, 5:14: “Sed regnavit mors ab Adam usque ad Moysen etiam in eos qui non peccaverunt in similitudinem praevaricationis Adae, qui est forma futuri” (“But death reigned from Adam unto Moses, even over them also who have not sinned after the similitude

(see the remarks for lines 5-6). 9-12: dew is a frequent symbol of Christ and God's power; see the story of Gideon's fleece in Judges, 6:36-40; and also Isaiah, 45:8.¹⁰ For just one example among many instances of this image in the conductus repertory, see Philip the Chancellor's Gedeonis area (F15/143), lines 1-2. 13-16: a disparagement of the Jews, the keepers of the Old Law (see also the remarks for lines 29-30 and 44), in preference to the handmaiden Mary (see Luke, 1:38; and 1:48 – the latter from the Magnificat). The apparent reference to Mary weeping in line 16 escapes me, unless it is a further example of her humility, as exemplified in the passages from Luke (see the notes to line 18); also conceivable is a nod to Mary's future grief at her son's crucifixion. 18: the "me" here probably refers to the Virgin Mary, as the phrase in line 18,2-4 comes directly from the text of the Magnificat in Luke, 1:48: "Quia respexit humilitatem ancillae suae: ecce enim ex hoc beatam me dicent omnes generatione." ("Because he has regarded the humility of his handmaid; for behold from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed"). 19-21: see, for example, Luke, 3:4, which quotes Isaiah, 40:3 "... Parate viam Domini; rectas facite semitas ejus" ("... Prepare the way of the Lord; make straight his paths."). 22-28: on God's kindness (benignitas) and his willingness to save sinners, see Titus, 3:4-5.¹¹ The expressions in lines 26-28 recall Luke, 1:50, from the Magnificat: "et misericordia ejus a progenie in progenies timentibus eum" ("And his mercy is from generation unto generations, to them that fear him."). 29-30: these are some evocative and difficult images to construe, so the explanations of these lines are provisional. According to Augustine, commenting on Acts, 13:46,¹² in a rebuke to the Jews in his Sermo 38 (available in PL, 39, col. 1821), the expression "terra gentium" – translated as "land of the Gentiles" – is glossed as the "hearts of all peoples": "Hoc est dicere, quia Christum repulistis, et dignum locum non praeparastis in quo altare Domini poneretur, in terra Gentium, id est, in cordibus omnium populorum altare Domini collocamus" ("That is to say, because you repulsed Christ, and did not prepare a worthy place in which the altar of the Lord may be placed, we are establishing an altar of the Lord in the land of the Gentiles, that is, in the hearts of all peoples"). Similarly, in a commentary on Luke, 5:30,¹³ a text ascribed variously to Ambrose, Bede, and Rabanus Maurus of the transgression of Adam, who is a figure of him who was to come.").

¹⁰Isaiah, 45:8: "Rorate, caeli, desuper, et nubes pluant justum; aperiatur terra, et germinet salvatorem, et justitia oriatur simul: ego Dominus creavi eum" ("Drop down dew, O heavens, from above, and let the clouds rain down a just man: let the earth be opened, and bud forth a savior: and let justice spring up at the same time: I the Lord made him").

¹¹Titus, 3:4-5: "Cum autem benignitas et humanitas apparuit Salvatoris nostri Dei, non ex operibus justitiae, quae fecimus nos, sed secundum suam misericordiam salvos nos fecit per lavacrum regenerationis et renovationis Spiritus Sancti" ("But when the goodness and kindness of God our Saviour appeared: not by the works of justice, which we have done, but according to his mercy, he saved us, by the laver [i.e., cleansing] of regeneration and renovation of the Holy Ghost.").

¹²Acts, 13:46: "Tunc constanter Paulus et Barnabas dixerunt: 'Vobis oportebat primum loqui verbum Dei: sed quoniam repellitis illud, et indignos vos judicatis aeternae vitae, ecce convertimur ad gentes' " ("Then Paul and Barnabas said boldly: 'To you it behooved us first to speak the word of God: but because you reject it, and judge yourselves unworthy of eternal life, behold we turn to the Gentiles.' "). In Acts, 13:14-52, Paul and Barnabas visit Pisidian Antioch and speak to a congregation in the Jewish synagogue there about conversion to Christianity. They are rebuffed and expelled by the Jewish contingent there, although they do succeed in converting a number of the Gentiles in the city (Acts, 13:48-49).

¹³The passage relates to an event in Luke, 5:27-34 where Jesus and his disciples feasted with a tax collector named Levi and his associates, and were reproved by the scribes and Pharisees, not only for eating with Levi's company, but for not fasting. Luke 5:30: "Et murmurabant pharisaei et scribae eorum, dicentes ad discipulos ejus: 'Quare cum publicanis et peccatoribus manducatis et bibitis?' " ("But the Pharisees and scribes murmured, saying to his [Jesus's] disciples: 'Why do you eat and drink with publicans [i.e., tax collectors] and sinners?' "); and Luke 5:33: "At illi dixerunt ad eum: 'Quare discipuli Joannis jejunt frequenter, et obsecrationes faciunt, similiter et pharisaeorum: tui autem edunt et bibunt?' " ("And they [the Pharisees and scribes] said to him [Jesus]: 'Why do the disciples of John [the Baptist] fast often, and make prayers, and the disciples of the Pharisees in like manner; but yours eat and drink?' "). See also the related expression in Luke, 15:2: "Et murmurabant pharisaei, et scribae, dicentes: 'Quia hic peccatores recipit, et manducat cum illis' " ("And the Pharisees and the scribes murmured, saying: 'This man [Jesus] receives sinners, and eats with them.' ").

(available in PL, 107, col. 875D)¹⁴ discusses the image of the “ieiune mentis” (the “fasting mind”) as a negative attribute of the Pharisees who are figuratively starving themselves by following the Old Law and distancing themselves from the nourishment of Christ’s grace. The passage in the conductus text, therefore, seems to offer another occurrence of the trope of the Old Law succumbing to the New in its all too familiar deployment as a disparagement of the Jews. This interpretation is abetted by the reference to the Lord’s despising the “arrogance of the people of old” (“populi fastus veteris”) in lines 13-14, and the image of the closed book of the Law that appears later on in the poem (see the remarks for line 44). 29,1: “macie” is the ablative of “macies.” 32: this reading assumes “leta” to be an imperative, along with “solve,” rather than a noun or adjective. 36: the frequently encountered Gospel image (from Matthew, 3:12; Luke, 3:17) of threshed wheat, without chaff, typically referring to a saved soul, may be in play here; it is a favorite image of Philip the Chancellor and appears in a number of other Parisian conductus, motets, and prosulas (see Payne, Philip the Chancellor: Motets and Prosulas, 27); notice also the use of the grain/chaff figure in line 4 of the conductus Seminavit Gretia (I23/322), that appears later at F-7,40, f. 309r. 37-38: this passage derives from the words of the Magnificat in Luke, 1:53: “Esurientes implevit bonis: et divites dimisit inanes” (“He has filled the hungry with good things; and the rich he has sent empty away.”). 39-40: this language recalls Luke, 1:55, from the Magnificat: “sicut locutus est ad patres nostros, Abraham et semini eius in saecula” (“As he spoke to our fathers, to Abraham and to his seed for ever.”). God’s covenant with Abraham is given in Genesis, 17, with further references in Genesis, 12:1-3, 12:7, 13:15, and 24:7. In Galatians, 3:16¹⁵ and 3:29,¹⁶ the promises to the patriarch made by the Lord are re-appropriated specifically to refer to the New Covenant with Christ. 41: as confirmed by line 45, God (“the highest”) unites himself with human flesh (“the lowest”) in Jesus, who additionally was born in the lowly circumstances of the Bethlehem manger. For this conceit, see Philippians, 2:7-8;¹⁷ for additional appearances of this image, see the remarks on the conductus Sol sub nube latuit (I16/334), lines 17-20. 44: the closed book is a symbol of the Old Law; see the similar expression in the opening lines of the conductus Librum clausum et signatum (J51/198). 48: another example of the fascination with the logical implausibility that Mary is simultaneously daughter and mother to the same entity, since Christ is her father as well as her son; see, for a few instances among many, the opening notes on the text for Parens patris natique filia (F31/260).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: Versification: The through-composed setting of Magnificat ... qui iudicat presents an engaging verse structure made up of two different stanzaic constructions, such that the six-line stanzas of I-III are poetically identical, as is the construction of the three strophes IV-VI, with ten lines each. 24,3: F: benignitas; correct spelling in all other applicable sources (WI, Ma). 33,4: F: gaudia; adopted reading

¹⁴*PL*, 107, col. 875D: “Convivantibus cum Domino publicanis, Pharisaei murmurantes de ieiunio gloriantur. Ubi primo legis et gratiae quanta sit distantia declaratur, quia qui legem sequuntur, ieiunae mentis famem patientur aeternam; qui vero verbum in interioribus animae receperunt alimenti coelestis, et fontis ubertate recreati, esurire et sitire non possint” (“As the tax collectors were feasting together with the Lord, the murmuring Pharisees prided themselves on fasting. In that place it is first declared how great is the discrepancy of law and of grace: for they who follow the law endure the eternal hunger of a fasting mind; but they who receive the word of heavenly nourishment in the inner parts of the soul, and are recreated by the richness of the stream [i.e., Christ], cannot hunger or thirst.”).

¹⁵Galatians, 3:16: “Abraham dictae sunt promissiones, et semini ejus. Non dicit: ‘Et seminibus,’ quasi in multis: sed quasi in uno: ‘Et semini tuo,’ qui est Christus” (“To Abraham were the promises made and to his seed. He [God] says not, ‘And to his seeds,’ as of many: but as of one, ‘And to your seed,’ which is Christ.”).

¹⁶Galatians 3:29: “Si autem vos Christi, ergo semen Abrahamae estis, secundum promissionem haeredes” (“And if you be Christ’s, then are you the seed of Abraham, heirs according to the promise.”).

¹⁷Philippians, 2:7-8: “... sed semet ipsum exinanivit, formam servi accipiens in similitudinem hominum factus, et habitu inventus ut homo. Humiliavit semet ipsum, factus oboediens usque ad mortem, mortem autem crucis” (“But he [Christ] emptied himself, taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men, and devised in appearance as a man. He humbled himself, becoming obedient unto death, even to the death of the cross.”).

from W1, Ma, plus it preserves the rhyme. 41,3: F: confederans; corrected via W1, Ma, which again preserves the rhyme. MUSIC: Internal Repetition: Melodic recollection is especially prominent in this piece and accounts for the more frequent than usual boxed letters above the staves. Many more such relationships could be labeled. Strophes I-V, for example, each feature opening lines with repeated elements. In addition to the smaller-scale musical correspondences noted in the score for the beginning of Strophe I, much of the T voice from its opening cauda through the setting of lines 1-2 shows some striking motivic correspondences with that of lines 3-4. Meanwhile, in Stanza II, the first T phrase of its closing cauda also supplies the music of its closing lines (11-12), resulting in syllabic/melismatic identity (see further below). Furthermore, this same figure in Strophe II also appears in the T of the setting of the closing lines 17-18 of Strophe III. Lastly, Stanzas IV and V share nearly identical melodic gestures for their respective concluding lines 27-28 and 37-38.

Syllabic/Melismatic identity: 1. the T of “gratia pluens celitus / vite ros” (lines 11-12,2) = 1a. T of following cauda on “[inno]va[te]” (line 12,3, closing cauda of Strophe II) = 1b. “proles humani generis / iam me be[atam]” (lines 17-18,3). Opening cauda (line 1): note the near canon between the parts, starting with L3 of the D and followed by the T one beat later, extending through L9. The initial gesture of these passages, the descent from f-c marked in the score, is a frequently encountered motive throughout the piece, as is the final T motive of the short cauda in line 2 (the descent g-d), which often appears as a cadential figure throughout, although its appearances are not signaled in this transcription. Line 1,1: T: F, Ma: the om siP=c is supplied from W1; it may also be in Oxf-Sol, but the source is heavily faded at this point, making verification extremely difficult. 2: TD: F, W1: the om rests before the punctus organi at “[do]minum” come from Ma. Cauda on line 6,3 (closing Strophe I): D: W1, Ma: the sequence of pitches for L5-L10 of the melisma over “[propa]ga[te]” is slightly different: c, d, c, dec, d, as the result of merely relocating the 3li=dec later by 2L than its occurrence in F; Oxf-Sol presents the same pitch sequence as F, but with the 3li=dec rendered as siP’si. Line 22,3: T: F, Ma: a for the third syllable of “iudicio”; the more consonant g supplied by W1. Cauda on line 38 (closing Strophe V): TD: F, W1, Ma: the extant sources show differing readings among parts of this cauda, including contrasting ways for delineating the rests, as well as different ligations; all versions are presented together at the end of the transcription for comparison. D: F: the closing stroke in this voice prior to the subsequent punctus organi is supplied editorially to match the one in the T at this same point. Line 40,3: TD: F: the repeated c’s over the final syllable of “semini,” are grouped under a dashed tie in the transcription; this should not necessarily be taken to indicate that the second note of the pair should not sound. As with other places where this particular presentation occurs in F, it appears to suggest an indication of greater length. For the use of this figure in a similar context, see the remarks on notation in the commentary to the conductus a3 Nicholai presulis (F27/217) from F-6,55. Cauda on 42,1: T: F: the rhythm of the melisma on “[descen]dens,” beginning with 2li repeated-note figures, is clarified by the different ligations and note groupings in W1 and Ma = 2li, 3si (W1: si, R, si), 2li. Line 43,2: D: F, Ma: si, siP=a, ag for the third syllable of “reportans”; the more consonant figure on e is adopted from W1. 45,2: T: F, Ma: d, c for “carne”; the more consonant e, d comes from W1. Final cauda (line 48): the second section of the final melisma (L43-L64) appears to be corrupt or at least questionable in all sources: W1 has a phrase missing and ligations that suggest the scribe may have tried to correct for the omission, and F has three wrongly transposed pitches opening the first T phrase and ligations that imply a level of dissonance rather higher than expected. While the contrasting ligations in Ma appear to offer the most consonant reading overall, there is still a questionable dissonance with the occurrence of the a/b ninth at L7 within this smaller passage. This part of the cauda is also curious as it extends the range of the T lower (to a) than at any other point in the piece. For comparison, the three different extant readings of this segment are given together at the end of the transcription.

DE NATURE FRACTO IURE
 Conductus: (118/80)

F, f. 303v (7,34)*

D
I
T

[De na-tu - re fra - cto iu - re
 De na-tu - re fra - cto iu - re

ra - ti - o mi-ra -
 ra - ti - o mi-ra -

- tur. si - cut do - cet lit - te - ra; vir - go
 - tur. si - cut do - cet lit - te - ra; vir - go fit pu - er - pe-ra vi - ri - lis ex - pers se - mi-nis al - vus tu - me-scit fit pu - er - pe-ra vi - ri - lis ex - pers se - mi-nis al - vus tu - me-scit

vir - gi-nis. re
 vir - gi-nis. re

no - mi-nis in vir-gi - ne ser - va -
 no - mi-nis in vir-gi - ne ser - va -

*Caudae in this piece with phrases beginning with the standard si,3li ligature pattern of mode 3 may be rendered iambically just as readily as in the trochaic form of the mode that is most customarily employed here.

*For a hypothetical extended reading of this cauda based on WI, see at end.

car - nis pal - li - at ne - que mi - nus ra - di - at

car - nis pal - li - at ne - que mi - nus ra - di - at

de - i - tas ve - sti -

de - i - tas ve - sti -

- ta.

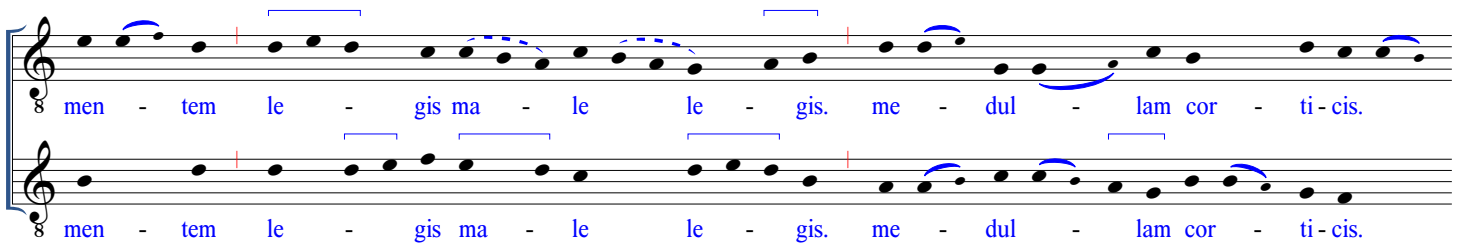

- ta.

III D Quid per - ver - tis nec a - ver - tis le - gis ad - um - bra - cu - la

T Quid per - ver - tis nec a - ver - tis le - gis ad - um - bra - cu - la iu - de - a in - cre - du - la?

iu - de - a in - cre - du - la?

men - tem le - gis ma - le le - gis. me - dul - lam cor - ti - cis.
men - tem le - gis ma - le le - gis. me - dul - lam cor - ti - cis.

F, Oxf-Sol: modes 2,3; W1: mode 1, see at end*

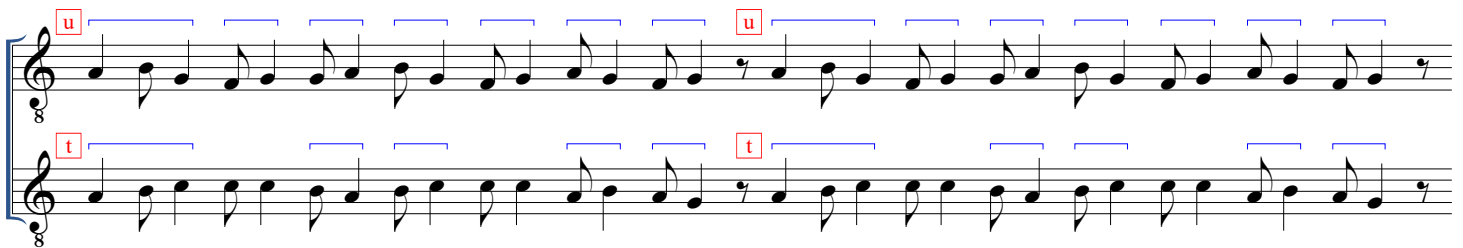

nec e - li - cis. va -
nec e - li - cis. va -

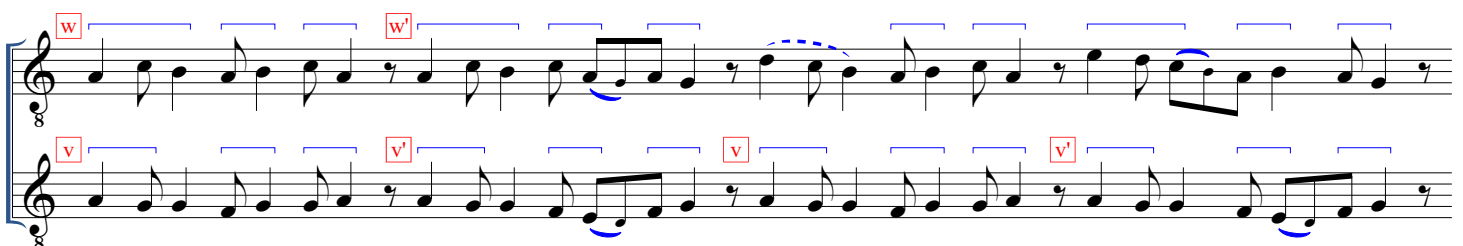

[va] - nis he - rens do-cens va - na dum de spi-ca pa - le - as [va] - nis he - rens do-cens va - na dum de spi-ca pa - le - as quas te-ne - as col - li-gis non gra - quas te-ne - as col - li-gis non gra -

u
t

w
v

Two staves of music. The upper staff (D) has annotations: a red box with 'y' above a blue dashed slur, a red box with 'v"' above a blue bracket, another red box with 'y' above a blue dashed slur, and a red box with 'v' above a blue bracket. The lower staff (T) has annotations: a red box with 'x' above a blue bracket, a red box with 'x'' above a blue bracket, another red box with 'x' above a blue bracket, and a red box with 'x'' above a blue bracket.

†D: WI, Oxf-Sol: differing closing flourishes, see at end

Two staves of music showing closing flourishes. The upper staff (D) ends with a blue dashed slur and a red box containing '- na.]. The lower staff (T) ends with a red box containing '- na.'

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*Cauda at line 10,3: hypothetical extended reading from WI, f. 141r (132r), III – prompted by the 4si in the third phrase of the D

Two staves of music showing alternative readings for cauda. The upper staff (D) has a red box with '(hodi)er -' and a blue dashed slur, and ends with a red box containing '- na.]. The lower staff (T) has a red box with '(hodi)er -' and ends with a red box containing '- na.'

Cauda at line 22,1: WI, f. 141v (132v), III – reading in mode 1

Two staves of music showing alternative readings for cauda. The upper staff (D) has a red box with '[va] -' and ends with a red box containing '- (nis)'. The lower staff (T) has a red box with 'va -' and ends with a red box containing '- (nis)'. Blue brackets are present above the notes in both staves.

†Closing punctus organi at line 25,3:

a. : WI, f. 141v (132v), VI

Two staves of music showing closing punctus organi. The upper staff (D) has a red box with '(gra) -' and a blue dashed slur, and ends with a red box containing '- [na.]. The lower staff (T) has a red box with '(gra) -' and ends with a red box containing '- na.'

b. Oxf-Sol, f. IIv, III

Two staves of music showing closing punctus organi. The upper staff (D) has a red box with '(gra) -' and a blue dashed slur, and ends with a red box containing '- [na.]. The lower staff (T) has a red box with '(gra) -' and ends with a red box containing '- na.'

DE NATURE FRACTO IURE

Conductus (I18/80)

F, f. 303v (7,34)

- | | |
|---|--|
| I De nature fracto iure ratio miratur.
Sicut docet littera,
virgo fit puerpera.
Virilis expers seminis.
alvus tumescit virginis re nominis
in virgine servata. | Reason is astonished at the breaking of nature's law.
Just as scripture teaches,
a virgin becomes a child-bearer.
5 Without manly seed a virgin's womb swells through the action of a word
upon an untouched virgin. |
| II Verbum patris, lux eterna, luce lucet hodierna.
Lucet lux in tenebris, sed latebris
nostre carnis palliat;
neque minus radiat
deitas vestita. | 10 The Word of the father, the light eternal, shines with the light of this day .
The light shines in the darkness, yet lurks within the recesses of our flesh;
and godliness shines no
15 less when it is clothed. |
| III Quid pervertis, nec avertis, legis adumbracula,
Iudea incredula?
Mentem legis male legis, medullam corticis.
nec elicis.
Vanis herens, docens vana, dum de spica paleas
quas teneas, colligis non grana. | Why do you corrupt and not reject these mere shadows of the Law, unbelieving Judea?
You read wrongly the intent of the Law, 20 and extract not the shell's nutmeat.
Clinging to vain things, teaching vain things, while you may possess some of the chaff from the tuft,
25 you do not harvest the grains. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 34, f. 303v: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with II-III signaled by capitals. This piece and the works immediately surrounding it in F are contiguous also in Oxf-Sol, but in reverse order.

WI, fasc. 9, no. 57, f.140v (131v): a2; Strophes I-III, complete, indicated by painted initials.

Oxf-Sol,¹ no. 18 (= Sol, no. 5), on ff. Bv, Iir, Iiv (in that order): a2; fragmentary. This source is not listed for this work in Anderson's conductus catalog, nor in his edition of the piece from NDRC, 4:95-96, but recognition of it does appear in the handwritten annotations to his personal copy of the catalog. The surviving text and music of both voices begin on the strip designated as f. Bv in Stenzl, "Solothurner Fragmente"² (this is the trimmed left segment of the remains of the double leaf ff. Bv-IIr, a portion not included in the facsimiles published in the article).³ Starting in its third system, f. Bv contains music and text of the following portions of Strophe I on the remnants of four accolades: 1) lines 1,4-2,2 (“[i]ure ... mira[tur]”); 2) lines 3,3-4,3 (“[litte]ra ... puer[pera]”); 3) lines 6,2-7,1 (“[tume]scit ... re [nominis]”); and 4) all but the first 5L of the first five phrases (i.e., L6-L20) of the cauda concluding Strophe I (on line 8,3 “[ser]va[ta]”). The piece then continues directly onto f. IIr (the fully preserved right portion of the double leaf and reproduced in Stenzl’s article) with the rest of the cauda that ends Strophe I, and proceeds up to line 19,2 (“mentem legis”); a capital initial is given for the start of Strophe III, but only an extended left diagonal ascender distinguishes the “v” of “verbum” for the start of II. De nature finishes on f. IIv, continuing directly with line 19,3 (“male legis”) up to the close of the piece at the end of the third system. This work and the ones immediately surrounding it in Sol are contiguous also in F, but in reverse order.

¹This siglum as used here brings together the related fragments now preserved in Oxford, Bodleian Library, Auct. Q.3.17 (GB-Ob [pr. bk.] Auct. 6 Q.3.17; OxAuct) and CH-MSbk S.231 (Mariastein, Benediktinerkloster, S.231), the latter olim: Solothurn, Zentralbibliothek, S. 231 (Sol). The numbering and sequence of the items in this reconstituted source derives from the more complete combined listing in Everist, "A Reconstructed Source," 107 (Table 2).

²Jurg Stenzl, "Eine unbekannte Notre-Dame-Quelle: Die Solothurner Fragmente," Die Musikforschung, 26 (1973): 311-321.

Text only:

F-T 1471 (Troyes, Médiathèque du Grand Troyes, MS 1471; [olim] Troyes, Bibliothèque municipale, MS 1471), no. 3, f. Av (first front flyleaf, verso): fragmentary, text only of Strophe I up through its penultimate syllable. This source was unknown to Anderson and is not included in his catalog or edition; the few variants from it are collated in the variants below; the leaves are ruled to accommodate music a2, but staves were never inscribed and only verbal text is entered.⁴

Ox Rawl (GB-Ob Rawl.poet. C 510), f. 242r (13r): text only; Strophes I-III, complete, with II-III signaled by pilcrow in the left margin; rubric: “item de partu beate virgine” (“also about the Blessed Virgin giving birth”).

CH-Zz C.58/275 (Zürich, Zentralbibliothek, MS C.58/275), no. 334 (7),⁵ f. 148r: text only, Strophes I-III, complete. Images of this source are presently unavailable to me; details stem from NDRC and the CPI website.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: General remarks: There are a number of poetic images and stylistic traits favored by Philip the Chancellor throughout this poem; discussion of these appears below. No medieval source or modern scholar argues for his authorship of this text, so I do not claim it here. Versification: I have combined several of the lines presented separately in Anderson’s edition (NDRC, 4:xxi), as several of the breaks are not supported by rhyme. Internal rhyme is shown by added space between line segments. Textual notes: 1-8 (Strophe I): another instance of wonder at the astounding event of the Virgin Mary’s bearing of Jesus; for just a selection of some additional nods to this commonplace, see the notes to the conductus Lene spirat spiritus (H16/194), line 5.

³The portions of this piece preserved on the strip Bv are also not included in the information on CH-MSbk S.231 (Sol) supplied by the CPI website, even though Anderson’s handwritten annotations to his catalog indicate that it is the initial folio.

⁴For more on this source, see Gregorio Bevilacqua, “The Earliest Source of Notre-Dame Polyphony? A New Conductus Fragment from the Early Thirteenth Century,” Music and Letters, 97 (2016): 1-41.

⁵The numbering of the pieces in Zz C.58/275 is that of Jakob Werner, Beiträge zur Kunde der lateinischen Literatur des Mittelalters (Aarau: Sauerländer, 1905). Werner’s numbers occasionally split or combine various poems, but this does not apply for the Parisian conductus in this source (nos. 328-335 – although no. 331 is Virgo deum generat from St Gall 383). The numbering as in Anderson, NDRC, which apparently only applies to the conductus portion, is given afterwards in parentheses.

3-4: a reference to the prophecy of Isaiah, 7:14: “Propter hoc dabit Dominus ipse vobis signum: ecce virgo concipiet, et pariet filium, et vocabitur nomen ejus Emmanuel” (“Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign. Behold a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and his name shall be called Emmanuel.”). 7: the “word” in this case could be either the “Ave” of the angel Gabriel (Luke, 1:28) from the Annunciation, or the “Verbum” of John, 1:1. 9-11: note the use of annominatio (word play, a favored device of Philip the Chancellor) in the frequent appearance of nominal and verbal forms of “lux”; further use of the technique appears in lines 16 and 18-21. 11: the image comes directly from John, 1:5: “Et lux in tenebris lucet et tenebrae eam non comprehenderunt” (“And the light shines in the darkness, and the darkness did not comprehend it”); see also the related expressions in 2 Peter, 1:19; Luke, 1:79; and Isaiah, 60:3. 12-15: for the idea of Christ clothing himself in flesh, yet suffering no debasement of his divinity, see, among other places, the conductus Parit preter morem (E12/261), lines 9-14, and Sol sub nube latuit (I16/334), lines 17-20. 16: further annominatio, playing upon the verbal root “verto”; see remarks for lines 9-11 and 18-21. 16-17: another possible way to read these lines is prompted by the apparent splitting of line 16,2 into two words (“ad umbracula”), which, it could be argued, is implied by all the musical sources. In this case the connotation would be “... and do not turn away to the shady places [i.e., ‘comfortable havens’] of the Law”; “adumbraculum,” moreover, does not occur in the major dictionaries, nor in Ducange, Glossarium, although its existence is attested by other texts. The “split-word” reading is also supported if put together with the variant reading “advertis” that occurs in Oxf-Sol, Ox Rawl, and Zz C.58, hence: “... and not turn to the shelter [i.e. ‘shady places’] of the law.” 18-21: see the remarks above for lines 9-11 and 16; here the annominatio plays on words with “lego” as their root (possibly including the closely similar form of “elicis” in line 21). 20-21: for the nutmeat drawn from the shell of the nut, symbolic of Christ, and thus of the New Covenant that replaces the Old Law, see the remarks drawn from Augustine in the notes to the text of Philip the Chancellor’s conductus Gedeonis area (F15/143), lines 5-7; as well as those for the motet Latex silice / Latus (vdW 228/M14), line 3, whose text has also been attributed to Philip the Chancellor. 23-25: in the Gospel image of the wheat and chaff, the threshed wheat, without chaff, refers to souls that have been saved, see Matthew, 3:12; Luke, 3:17; it is a favorite image of Philip the Chancellor and also appears in a number of other Parisian conductus, motets, and prosulas (see Payne, Philip the Chancellor: Motets and Prosulas, p. 27).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: Variants: F: none. F-T 1471: the few different readings of this source, not available for collation in Anderson’s edition, are given here: 1,1: opening initial never supplied: [D]e; 5,3: criminis; 8,3: serva[ta], the folio and remains of this piece end with the second syllable. MUSIC: Repetition: Most caudae in this piece contain repeated phrases (sometimes complicated by voice exchange), as well as antecedent-consequent and sequentially related gestures. A few caudae also restate motives from others. Reiterated and closely related phrases are indicated above the staff. In addition to the repetition that arises in melismatic segments, a prominently recurring motive (bbcbag), represented in the score by the Greek letter alpha (α), appears in several cum littera passages, typically in the D, at or near the beginning of phrases, and close to the start of all three stanzas. Cauda rhythms: the majority of the melismas in all the musical sources imply performance in rhythmic mode 1; however, in F and Oxf-Sol, the cauda at line 22,1 (at “va[nis],” see the remarks below) is presented in the iambic modes 2 or 3, as opposed to the differently ligated mode-1 reading of WI. It is therefore also possible to render iambically any of the various cauda phrases in this piece that begin with the standard si,3li ligature series of mode 3. Cauda at line 8,3: D: W1: the 5li=fecaf descending figure just before the final D phrase at the end of Strophe I is written 3li,2li in this MS; this use of mode-1 ligation in WI, along with its representation via the commonly used variant of 5li in F (likely also used in Oxf-Sol, but the MS is difficult to read at this point), has caused me to present this cadence in specific rhythmic values. Line 9,2: D: W1: a b-flat sig appears prior to the second syllable of “patris,” valid to the end of Strophe II and then followed by a further b-flat sig at the start of the system break that begins Strophe III in WI; its possible use prior to its appearance in F is not reflected in the score. Oxf-Sol has a sig quad on b in the D to begin Strophe II, which is possibly reiterated at the system break before the second syllable of line 9,2 (although, given the difficulty of reading the MS at this point, it is conceivable that it may be a sig rot, thus corresponding with WI);

the subsequent appearances in line 10 of b-flat sigs in both T (before “[ho]di[erna]”) and D (before “[luce lu]cet”) of Oxf-Sol affirm the slightly earlier ones in the T and D of F and in the T of W1. Cauda at line 10,3: T: Oxf-Sol: the first four notes of the third phrase (L6-L9) over “[hodi]er[na]” show 2siP=gP,aP. D: W1: the first four notes at the same place are written 4si=d,b,d,b; in Oxf-Sol they are: 2siP=dP,dP. The variants in W1 and Oxf-Sol that imply TL values for each of these four notes, along with the busy D ornamentation throughout this cauda – strikingly active in comparison to the other melismas in this piece – provoke the conjecture that this melisma may have been transmuted from slower into faster rhythmic values at some point; see the hypothetical alternative reading based on W1 at the end of the transcription. A similarly extended execution might apply for the ornate cum littera segment from lines 12,2-13,3 (“[late]bris nostre carnis palliat”). Line 11,1: T: W1: the e-flat sig that appears here before “lucet [lux]” is in affect until the system change just prior to line 13,2 (“carnis”); its possible implementation after its cancellation in F before line 11,4 (“tenebris”) is not reflected in the transcription. Cauda at line 15,2: T: W1: for “[ve]sti[ta],” no flat sigs at all throughout the cauda. D: W1: b-flat sigs throughout cauda, but none on e-flat. Line 16,1: D: W1: a b-flat sig, continuing from the previous four systems, appears here at the start of Strophe III; this is specifically contradicted by the sig quads on b for both voices at this same point in F and Oxf-Sol; the possibility of using the flat is not signaled in the transcription; this b-flat sig in W1 is not cancelled until the system break following the first phrase of the cauda at line 18,1 (“iu[dea]”). Cauda at line 22,1: TD: W1: “va[nis]” rendered in mode 1, as opposed to the iambic versions in F and Oxf-Sol; see the alternative reading at the end of the transcription. D: F: at the end of the second phrase, the 1 of the 3li=fdc at L13-L14 is written as e; the f has been taken from both W1 and Oxf-Sol. Closing punctus organi at line 25,3: D: W1,Oxf-Sol: different final flourishes on “gra[na]” appear in these sources; see the end of the transcription for these readings.

FLOS DE SPINA PROCREATOR ... MISSO RORE CELITUS
Conductus (H29/127)

F, f. 304v (7,35)*

I
D
8 [Flos de spi - na pro - cre - a -
T
8 Flos de spi - na pro - cre - a -

a1
or: si si
- tur. et flos flo -
- tur. et flos flo -

*the rhythmic reading of this portion is based upon the different T ligation in Ma and Hu; see at end for alternatives

- re fe - cun - da -
- re fe - cun - da -

si
- tur. mis - so ro - re
- tur. mis - so ro - re

a2
ce - li - ce - li -

b
b' a3 a4
- tus.
- tus.

*various renderings of line 1,1-3 are suggested by the sources; see the alternatives presented at the end

II

Ro - rant ce - li. nu - - bes plu - - unt.

stil-lant mon-tes. col-les flu - - unt. nu - da pa - tet ve - ri -

- tas.

III

Quod ce - - la -

- rat um - bra le -

f
- gis in na - ta - si
e'
- gis in na - ta - li

sum - mi re - gis to-tum pa-tet ho-mi - sum - mi re - gis to-tum pa-tet ho-mi -

h1 h2 h3
g1 g2 g3

- ni.
- ni.

D
He - li - se - us in-cur - va -
IV
T
He - li - se - us in-cur - va -

j j'
i i'

- tur. ver - bum pa - tris in - car - na -

- tur. ver - bum pa - tris in - car - na -

or: or: - tur. ver - bum per quod fi - li - a

- tur. ver - bum per quod fi - li - a

[V] D ba - bi - lo - nis vi - si -

T
ba - bi - lo - nis vi - si -

- ta - tur per quod sa - lus pre - di - ca - tur

- ta - tur per quod sa - lus pre - di - ca - tur

il - lis de sa - ma - ri -

il - lis de sa - ma - ri -

| this phrase optional, only in CH-SGs 383

il - lis de sa - ma - ri -

il - lis de sa - ma - ri -

The main musical score consists of three systems of two staves each (Soprano and Tenor). The music is in a minor key with a common time signature. The lyrics are: Flos de spina misso rore. The score includes various musical notations such as slurs, ties, and dynamic markings. Red boxes highlight specific notes with phonetic labels: n', m', p, o, p', and o'. Blue slurs and ties are used to indicate phrasing and connections between notes. The final system ends with a fermata and the instruction - a. on both staves.

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*Other possible readings of line 1,1-3:

Four alternative readings (a, b, c, d) are provided for the first line of the score. Each reading shows a different rhythmic interpretation for the words Flos de spina.
 a. WI, f. 161r (152r), V. Shows a reading with a T ligation on na.
 b. Ma, f. 74v, IV. Shows a reading with a T ligation on na.
 c. CH-SGs 383, p. 138, III (assuming a rhythmic interpretation is wanted). Shows a reading with a T ligation on na.
 d. Hu, f. 134r, III. Shows a reading with a T ligation on na.
 Each reading includes a Soprano (S) and Tenor (T) staff with the corresponding lyrics and musical notation.

*Cauda on line 2,3 ("flore"):

Two alternative readings (a, b) are provided for the cauda on line 2,3. Both readings show a reading favoring the T ligation in F and WI.
 a. A reading favoring the T ligation in F and WI (WI, f. 161r (152r), VI). Shows a reading with a T ligation on re.
 b. As it stands in Ma, f. 75r, I (the basis of the reading adopted above). Shows a reading with a T ligation on re.
 Each reading includes a Soprano (S) and Tenor (T) staff with the corresponding lyrics and musical notation.

FLOS DE SPINA PROCREATOR ... MISSO RORE CELITUS

Conductus (H29/127)

F, f. 304v (7,35)

- | | | | |
|-----|--|----|---|
| I | Flos de spina procreatur, et flos flore fecundatur
misso rore celitus. | | A flower is produced from a thorn, and this flower is impregnated with a blossom
by way of dew sent from heaven. |
| II | Rorant celi, nubes pluunt, stillant montes, colles fluunt;
nuda patet veritas. | 5 | The heavens pour forth dew, the clouds rain down,
the mountains sweat, the hills run with water;
the naked truth becomes clear. |
| III | Quod celarat umbra legis, in natali summi regis,
totum patet homini. | | All that the shadow of the Old Law had concealed is revealed to mankind upon the birthday of the highest king. |
| IV | Heliseus incurvatur,
verbum patris incarnatur:
verbum, per quod filia | 10 | Elisha bends down,
the Word of the Father is made flesh:
the Word, whereby the daughter |
| [V] | Babilonis visitatur, per quod salus predicatur
illis de Samaria. | 15 | of Babylon is punished, and whereby salvation is preached to those from Samaria. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 35, f. 304v: a2; Strophes I-[V], complete, with II-IV indicated by capitals, and with no attention paid to the beginning of what is here called [V], a feature mirrored in all the other sources to preserve this part of the piece.¹ This and the previous two works in F are contiguous also in Oxf-Sol, but in reverse order.

Wl, fasc. 9, no. 76, f. 161r (152r): a2; Strophes I-[V], complete, with painted initials for I-IV.

Ma, fasc. 4, no. 5, f. 74v: a2; Strophes I-[V], complete, with an erased opening initial, none entered in the empty space left for II, painted examples for III and IV, and no special treatment for [V].

Oxf-Sol,² no. 17 (= Sol, no. 4), fol. Br-v: a2; fragmentary; the surviving text and music of both voices (often quite faded) begins on the strip designated as f. Br in Stenzl, “Solothurner Fragmente”³ (this is the trimmed right-hand segment of the remains of the double leaf ff. Br-IIv, a portion not included in the facsimiles published in the article)⁴ and continues onto the remains of the first two systems inscribed on f. Bv. The ¹See additionally the remarks below on the strophic division of the text.

²This siglum as used here brings together the related fragments now preserved in Oxford, Bodleian Library, Auct. Q.3.17 (GB-Ob [pr. bk.] Auct. 6 Q.3.17; OxAuct) and CH-MSbk S.231 (Mariastein, Benediktinerkloster, S.231), the latter olim: Solothurn, Zentralbibliothek, S. 231 (Sol). The numbering and sequence of the items in this reconstituted source derive from the more complete combined listing in Everist, “A Reconstructed Source,” 107 (Table 2).

³Jurg Stenzl, “Eine unbekante Notre-Dame-Quelle: Die Solothurner Fragmente,” Die Musikforschung, 26 (1973): 311-321.

⁴Unlike the material preserved on the other side of this strip (f. Bv, containing portions of the conductus De nature fracto iure [I18/80]), the remains of Flos de spina procreatur ... misso rore found on f. Br of CH-MSbk S.231 (Sol) are reported on the CPI website, as well as in Anderson’s handwritten annotations to his catalog.

various, non-contiguous small segments of Flos de spina preserved in this source begin with line 4,4 (“pluunt”) and continue through the close of the piece.⁵ This and the following two works in Oxf-Sol are contiguous also in F, but in reverse order.

CH-SGs 383 (Sankt Gallen, Stiftsbibliothek, Cod. Sang. 383), collection 1, no. 2 (no. 2),⁶ p. 138: a2; Strophes I-[V], complete, with painted initials for I-IV. As is typical of this source, the ligation of the more ornate passages, including the caudae, does not appear to encode rhythmic information as precisely as the manuscripts more closely associated with the Notre Dame repertory.⁷

Hu, no. 147, f. 134r: a2; Strophes I-[V], complete, with major, system-high initials for I, III, and IV, a staff-high capital for II, and with [V] undistinguished as in all other applicable sources; in mensural notation. Strophes IV-[V] are transposed down a fourth from other sources, which obviates the need for the e-flat sigs that appear elsewhere and causes the piece to close on a d final.

Text only:

CH-EN 102 (Eng 102; Engelberg Stiftsbibliothek, Cod. 102), no. 12, f. 13r: text only of Strophes I-[V], complete, with likely capitals opening I-II (the initials here are quite faded) and verifiable ones beginning III-IV. The pieces on the previous folio in this source are supplied with neumes, but none appears on this leaf, which offers three rhythmic poems to the Virgin (Flos de spina leads them off) followed by six hexameters examining the genealogy of Christ. The verso of this folio then begins a new segment of this MS (a directorium cantus) with neumed liturgical chants.⁸

F-T 1471 (Troyes, Médiathèque du Grand Troyes, MS 1471; [olim] Troyes, Bibliothèque municipale, MS 1471), no. 6, f. Cr (also foliated as 113r – first back flyleaf, recto): text only of Strophes I-[V], complete, with I-IV allotted empty space for initials. This source was unknown to Anderson and is therefore not included in his catalog or edition; its leaves are ruled to accommodate music a2, but staves were never inscribed and only ⁵The specific contents of each of the eight system fragments (1-6 on f. Br, 7-8 on f. Bv) are as follows: 1) Tt,T,D of line 4,4 (“pluunt”) through the first syllable of 5,1 (“stil[lant],” including the D pitch only over the following, missing syllable. 2) TD of the first 12L of the cauda following the cadence on the second syllable of line 6,3 (“veri[tas]”). 3) Tt,T,D of line 7,3 (“umbra”) through the first 4L of the cauda after the cadence on the first syllable of line 7,4 (“le[gis]”). 4) What appears to be Tt,T,D of line 9,2 (“patet”) through the first 3L of the cauda after the cadence on the second syllable of line 9,3 (“homi[ni]”). 5) Apparently Tt,T,D of the complete setting of line 10,1 (“Heliseus” – opening Strophe IV, yet with no indication of a capital or other type of initial), but without the closing D pitch over its last syllable and with part of that syllable and final T pitch cut away. 6) This seems to show Tt,T,D of line 11,2-3 (“patris incarnatur”), with the D pitch over the last syllable cut away. 7) T of L7-24 and D of L8-24 of the cauda after the cadence on the third syllable of line 15,3 (“samari[a]”); the added phrase unique to CH-Sgs 383 (the bracketed L9-16 in the transcription from F) is also absent in Oxf-Sol. 8) Tt,T,D presenting the final syllable of 15,3 (“[samari]a”), the last two notes (e|f,g) of the T, and the close of the D, beginning with a small remnant of the c pitch of the conjunctura cascade in the final punctus organi (the penultimate D figure additionally presents the variant 2li [=ga] where F has si=a).

⁶Pieces are cited here first by collection and number within the collection, according to their appearance within the two series of Notre Dame conductus that appear within CH-SGs 383 from pp. 135-144 and 158-176 (4 and 10 pieces respectively). These two groups of pieces are separated by a collection of Sanctus and Agnus tropes, some of which are also in W1, fasc. 10. The following number in parentheses then gives the enumeration of the piece according to the total tally of Notre Dame conductus within this manuscript.

⁷For images of this source, see <https://www.e-codices.unifr.ch/en/searchresult/list/one/csg/0383>.

⁸Images of this source are available at <https://www.e-codices.unifr.ch/en/searchresult/list/one/bke/0102>.

verbal text is entered; it shows no variants from the poem as given above.⁹

The entire text of Flos de spina ... misso rore is used for a four-voice motet by the fifteenth-century Franco-Flemish composer Johannes Pullois.

The poem's opening line appears as line 6 of the conductus Hac in die rege nato (I30/150), slightly rearranged ("procreatur flos de spina") in order to supply a rhyme for the previous verse. The text of Hac in die rege nato is constructed nearly completely from incipits of other conductus; the piece appears in the following sources:

F, fasc. 7, no. 73, f. 332r: a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 89, f. 174v (165v): a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

The text of either the opening verse or couplet from Flos de spina ... misso rore is found to begin a number of poems in a variety of further sources not listed here. Some of these lyrics are set to music as prosas, tropes, and sequences. In one of these examples at least (the prosa Flos de spina procreator ... fructum vite perferens, available in the so called "Dublin Troper" [GB-Cul Add. 710]),¹⁰ the music of the opening two concordant lines also shows similarities to the T voice of the conductus. For an additional textual parallel, cf. the motet Flos de spina rumpitur / Regnat (vdW 437/M34), which I have attributed to Philip the Chancellor (see my Motets and Prosulas, 97-100.¹¹

I have not been able to verify the following source:

Andrew Wathey, in RISM, B/IV,1-2, supplement 1,¹² as part of the combined entry on the two MS components that make up Oxf-Sol (pp. 77-80), reports the following transmission of the text alone of Flos de spina ... misso rore. This reference is corroborated neither by Anderson's catalog, his annotations to it, his edition, the CPI website, nor by any other mention in the literature I have seen. Since I have not yet been able to consult this MS to verify the concordance, and since no other witness acknowledges its presence, I cannot confirm it as a concordance:

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Clm 9630, f. 1r: text only, complete (?).

Music only: none

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Strophic division: The stanzas designated here as IV and [V] each exhibit the same poetic structure as the other three, but in this case IV and [V] also preserve the same rhyme sounds in each tercet.

⁹For more on this source, see Gregorio Bevilacqua, "The Earliest Source of Notre-Dame Polyphony? A New Conductus Fragment from the Early Thirteenth Century," Music and Letters, 97 (2016): 1-41.

¹⁰See, René Jean Hesbert, Le tropaire-prosaire de Dublin: Manuscrit Add. 710 de l'Université de Cambridge (vers 1360), (Rouen: Impr. rouennaise, 1966), 148.

¹¹Please note my rectification in explaining the opening flower imagery of this motet poem in my notes on the text to the conductus Virga Yesse regio [I24/383], lines 5-7).

¹²Andrew Wathey, Manuscripts of Polyphonic Music: The British Isles, 1100-1400, Supplement 1 to RISM B/IV,1-2 (Munich: G. Henle, 1993), see p. 80.

Further, none of the extant sources indicate a new strophe through the typical means of a capital letter, painted initial, or some other kind of signification at this point. The omission is likely due to the lack of a syntactic or musical break between the two stanzas. As a result, the fifth stanza's numeral represents a conjecture and stands enclosed in brackets. Textual notes: 1-2: There are two flowers in this portion of the poem, representing Christ and the Virgin, respectively. The flower of the rose, a common Marian symbol, grows from a thorny branch, which most typically represents the transgression of Adam and Eve that brought on original sin (Genesis, 3). Mary herself, based on the authority of St. Ambrose (Hexameron, book 3, chap. 11),¹³ who described the rose in Eden before the fall of mankind as thornless, was sometimes identified with this paradisiacal symbol and styled as a “rose without thorns” (rosa sine spina).¹⁴ For one example of this image in the conductus repertory, see Philip the Chancellor's Ave gloriosa virginum regina (K75/28), lines 16-17: “Venustate vernans rosa, / sine culpe spina” (“Rose, blooming in beauty, / without the thorn of sin.”). Christ (the blossom in the second line of the conductus poem) is also frequently represented by floral imagery, as in the text of the responsory Stirps Yesse. Virgo dei genetrix, with the phrase “flos filius eius,” (“the flower is her [Mary's] son”) or in the conductus In rosa vernat lilium (H9/184), where Jesus is represented as a lily (a flower also frequently called on to represent Mary) blooming within a rose (the Virgin). See also the description of the beloved in Song of Songs, 2:1-2: “Ego flos campi, et lilium convallium. Sicut lilium inter spinas, sic amica mea inter filias.” (“I am the flower of the field, and the lily of the valleys. As the lily among thorns, so is my love among the daughters.”). 3: dew is a symbol of God's power; cf. Hosea, 14:6, where the Lord speaks: “Ero quasi ros; Israel germinabit sicut lilium, et erumpet radix ejus ut Libani” (“I will be as the dew, Israel shall spring forth as the lily, and its root shall shoot forth as that of Lebanon.”). Dew is also closely connected with typological symbols of the virgin birth of Jesus, or with Christ himself; for this, see especially the story of Gideon in Judges, 6:36-40, as well as the related expressions throughout the conductus Gedeonis area (F15/143) and Hac in die Gedeonis (H26/149). 4-5: these lines offer various allegories of God's or Christ's manifestations above and on the earth (moving steadily downwards through the heavens, clouds, mountains, and hills) in the forms of dew, rain, condensation, and flowing water; see Isaiah, 45:8,¹⁵ Ecclesiasticus (Sirach), 35:26,¹⁶ and Joel, 3:18.¹⁷ Allusions to Moses drawing water from the rock (see Numbers, 20:1-11) are also possible, since this figure was allegorized with reference to Christ's birth (the water) from Mary (the rock); see, for example, the remarks on the text for the conductus Ave virgo virginum verbi (F16/39), lines 21-22, and Gedeonis area (F15/143), line 10. 6-9: another instance of the figure of the Old Law superseded by the New Covenant represented by the birth of Christ (further nods to this same trope resurface in lines 14-15); on the Old ¹³See the translation of this portion offered by John J. Savage in Hexameron, Paradise, and Cain and Abel, The Fathers of the Church, 42 (Washington, D. C.: Catholic University of America Press, 1961), 102-103.

¹⁴See Jean Delumeau, History of Paradise: The Garden of Eden in Myth and Tradition, Matthew O'Connell, trans. (New York: Continuum, 1995), 125.

¹⁵Isaiah, 45:8: “Rorate, caeli, desuper, et nubes pluant justum; aperiatur terra, et germinet salvatorem, et justitia oriatur simul: ego Dominus creavi eum” (“Drop down dew, O heavens, from above, and let the clouds rain down a just man: let the earth be opened, and bud forth a savior: and let justice spring up at the same time: I the Lord made him”).

¹⁶Ecclesiasticus (Sirach), 35:26: “Speciosa misericordia Dei in tempore tribulationis, quasi nubes pluviae in tempore siccitatis” (“The mercy of God is beautiful in the time of affliction, as a cloud of rain in the time of drought”).

¹⁷Joel, 3:18: “Et erit in die illa: stillabunt montes dulcedinem, et colles fluent lacte, et per omnes rivos Juda ibunt aquae; et fons de domo Domini egredietur, et irrigabit torrentem spinarum.” (“And it shall come to pass in that day, that the mountains shall drop down sweetness, and the hills shall flow with milk: and waters shall flow through all the rivers of Juda: and a fountain shall come forth of the house of the Lord, and shall water the torrent of thorns.”).

Law as a shadow, see Hebrews, 10:1.¹⁸ 10: the reference is to the Old Testament prophet Elisha, who brought back to life a dead child whose mother earlier had miraculously conceived him through Elisha's intervention. In the biblical account (4:32-37), Elisha restores the son to life by bending or stretching himself over the child; see 4 Kings (2 Kings), 4:34.¹⁹ In the conductus poem, as in a number of exegetical commentaries, Elisha is seen as a prefiguration of Christ. For further discussion of this figure, see the remarks on the texts of the conductus Legem dedit olim deus (I21/192), lines 3-6, Deus misertus hominis (B1/92), lines 21-24, and Rex et pater omnium (I17/307), lines 12-14. 11: John, 1:14: “Et Verbum caro factum est, et habitavit in nobis: et vidimus gloriam ejus, gloriam quasi unigeniti a Patre plenum gratiae et veritatis” (“And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, and we saw his glory, the glory as it were of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth.”). 12-13: for biblical references to the daughter of Babylon, a symbol of unbelievers, see Psalm 136:8,²⁰ Isaiah, 47:1,²¹ and Jeremiah, 50:42,²² and 51:33.²³ For Babylon represented as a woman, see Revelation, 14:8,²⁴ and 17:5.²⁵ 14-15: see Acts, 8:1-18, where the deacon and evangelist Philip (not the apostle) preaches the word of God to the Samaritans (a Gentile community). This event occurred during a great persecution of the incipient church in Jerusalem, which caused a number of Christian followers to flee elsewhere. Anderson (NDRC, 3:xxxiii, note 5), drawing on passages from the Glossa ordinaria that treat Matthew, 10:5 (see PL, 114, col. 117), explains that the scriptural citation is employed in the conductus to contrast the Jews, who did not hearken to the Word even though they were given a first chance to embrace it, with the people of Samaria, who did and were saved (see also the remarks above on lines 6-9).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. The opening line or lines occasionally occur in other poems, ¹⁸Hebrews, 10:1: “Umbram enim habens lex futurorum bonorum, non ipsam imaginem rerum: per singulos annos, eisdem ipsis hostiis quas offerunt indesinenter, numquam potest accedentes perfectos facere.” (“For the law having but a shadow of the good things to come, not the very image of the things; by the selfsame sacrifices which they offer continually every year, can never make the comers thereunto perfect.”).

¹⁹4 Kings (2 Kings), 4:34: “Et ascendit, et incubuit super puerum: posuitque os suum super os ejus, et oculos suos super oculos ejus, et manus suas super manus ejus: et incurvavit se super eum, et calefacta est caro pueri” (“And he went up, and lay upon the child: and he put his mouth upon his mouth, and his eyes upon his eyes, and his hands upon his hands: and he bowed himself upon him, and the child's flesh grew warm.”).

²⁰Psalms, 136:8: “Filia Babylonis, misera! Beatus qui retribuet tibi retributionem tuam quam retribuisti nobis” (“O miserable daughter of Babylon! Blessed shall he be who repays your payment which you have paid us.”).

²¹Isaiah, 47:1: “Descende, sede in pulvere, virgo filia Babylon: sede in terra; non est solium filiae Chaldaeorum, quia ultra non vocaberis mollis et tenera” (“Come down, sit in the dust, O virgin daughter of Babylon, sit on the ground: there is no throne for the daughter of the Chaldeans, for you shall no more be called delicate and tender.”).

²²Jeremiah, 50:42: “Arcum et scutum apprehendent: crudeles sunt, et immisericordes: vox eorum quasi mare sonabit, et super equos ascendent, sicut vir paratus ad praelium contra te, filia Babylon” (“They shall take the bow and the shield: they are cruel and unmerciful: their voice shall roar like the sea, and they shall ride upon horses: like a man prepared for battle against you, O daughter of Babylon.”).

²³Jeremiah, 51:33: “Quia haec dicit Dominus exercituum, Deus Israel: Filia Babylonis quasi area, tempus triturae ejus: adhuc modicum, et veniet tempus messisionis ejus” (“For thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: The daughter of Babylon is like a threshing floor, this is the time of her threshing: yet a little while, and the time of her harvest shall come.”).

²⁴Revelation, 14:8: “Et alius angelus secutus est dicens: Cecidit, cecidit Babylon illa magna: quae a vino irae fornicationis suae potavit omnes gentes” (“And another angel followed, saying: That great Babylon is fallen, is fallen; which made all nations to drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.”).

²⁵Revelation, 17:5: “Et in fronte ejus nomen scriptum: Mysterium: Babylon magna, mater fornicationum, et abominationum terrae” (“And on her forehead a name was written: A mystery; Babylon the great, the mother of the fornications, and the abominations of the earth.”).

some of which operate as liturgical items. MUSIC: General remarks: this piece is notable for a relatively large number of repetitive forms in its caudae (noted in boxed letters above the staves), both in terms of voice exchange and antecedent-consequent pairings. Harmonically, there is a notable presence of parallel thirds and fifths, with occasional harmonic fourths. Several of these features are also prominent in the following piece in F-7, Novum sibi texuit (I22/225). There is also conceivable word painting in the musical setting of Strophe II with its invocations of rain, flowing water, and condensation; see especially the settings of “pluunt” (line 4,4) and “fluunt” (5,4). Line 1,1-3: various rhythmical differences are implied by the mixed cum and sine littera setting of the opening words “Flos de spina” in the extant sources; some possible alternative interpretations appear at the end of the transcription. Cauda on line 2,3: within the various sources, the melisma on “flore” features different ligations opening its second T phrase at L3; these affect the way one interprets the D. W1 and F show an apparent mode-1 pattern in the T (3li,2li,2li); CH-SGs 383 offers 2li,2li,4li (=fd,ec,cbag) with two initial 2liP figures in the D (fgaP, efgP), while the T in Ma and Hu begins with a mode-5 series of 6si (Ma) or 4L (Hu). In the adopted reading here, which assumes the rhythm in both D and T in the first phrase of the cauda is continued in the second, the ligation is presented as in F, but with rhythms implied by Ma and Hu. For comparison, the renditions of W1 (equivalent to F) and Ma appear the alternative readings at the end of the transcription. Final cauda: TD: W1, Ma, Hu (transposed 4 lower): in the setting of “[sama]ri[a],” each of these sources gives the four pitches in both voices that open the second phrase (at L4) as 4si (or 4L for Hu); this alternative appears above the D staff. The third phrase of the cauda (L12-L19) appears only in CH-SGs 383; it is supplied for optional inclusion in the transcription, where it echoes the immediate repetition that also occurs in each of the two subsequent phrase pairs. The interpretation of phrases 6 and 7 (L27-L35, marked with “o” and “p” and their variants) as “upbeat” mode 1 instead of mode 2 is justified by the lack of a concluding 3li or other indication that would more forcefully imply the other mode.

NOVUM SIBI TEXUIT

Conductus (I22/225)

F, f. 306r (7,36)

I

D [b] do - mi - nus lum - ba - [d] - re.

T [a] No - vum si - bi tex - u - it [c] do - mi - nus lum - ba - - re.

[b] vo - lens quod con - pu - tru - it [d'] in hoc con - pen - sa -

[a] vo - lens quod con - pu - tru - it [c] in hoc con - pen - sa -

| mode 3 also possible for these three phrases

[f] - re. [e'] or: (after W1)

[e] - re. [f]

ste - - ri -

ste - - ri -

or: or:

- lis le - ta - re. nam tot chri - sto pa - ri - - es.

- lis le - ta - re. nam tot chri - sto pa - ri - - es.

ut iu - de - um sup - plan - ta - re tu - - us pos -

ut iu - de - um sup - plan - ta - re tu - - us pos -

-sit pa - ri- h h'
-sit pa - ri- g g'

- es.
- es.

D II
T
Pri - us ta - ctu fin - bri - e
Pri - us ta - ctu fin - bri - e

men - stru - a cu - ra - tur ya - i - ri quam
men - stru - a cu - ra - tur ya - i - ri quam

fi - li - e sa - ni - tas red - da - tur. per fi - li - e sa - ni - tas red - da - tur. per

a - cum in - tra - tur
a - cum in - tra - tur

ca - me - lus gen - ti - li - um. nec he - ly - as a - sper - na - tur vi - du - e

ca - me - lus gen - ti - li - um. nec he - ly - as a - sper - na - tur vi - du - e

tur - gu - ri -

tur - gu - ri -

| mode 3 also possible for these three phrases

- um.

- um.

- um.

- um.

E - sa - u re - pu - di - at. ia - - cob chri - stus gra - tis vo - cat.

E - sa - u re - pu - di - at. ia - - cob chri - stus gra - tis vo - cat.

et in - i - ci - at fi - de tri - ni - ta -

et in - i - ci - at fi - de tri - ni - ta -

- tis. cu - - ius
- tis. cu - - ius

di-gni-ta - tis si - gnum de - dit gen - ti - bus
di-gni-ta - tis si - gnum de - dit gen - ti - bus

ia - cob na - tis can - cel - la - tis be - ne - di - cens ma - ni - ia - cob na - tis can - cel - la - tis be - ne - di - cens ma - ni -

p o

o' p' r1

q1 r2
q2

Immediately after the conclusion of this piece, beginning at the start of the fourth system on F, f. 307r, are the two-voice continuations for the remaining two examples of the five conductus from fascicle 6 that begin in three parts (F-7,37-38): Novus Adam natus est, from Perotin's Salvatoris hodie (C5/315), and Veris hyemps, from Ortu regis evanescit (G3/256); the other three continuations occur together earlier in fascicle 7 of F at nos. 20-22.

NOVUM SIBI TEXUIT

Conductus (I22/225)

F, f. 306r (7,36)

I Novum sibi texuit dominus lumbare, volens quod computruit in hoc compensare. Sterilis, letare, nam tot Christo paries, ut Iudeum supplantare tuus possit paries.	The Lord wove a new loincloth for himself, wishing to compensate for the one that putrefied. 5 Rejoice, barren woman, for you shall bear so many for Christ, that your house will supplant that of the Jews.
II Prius, tactu finbrie, menstrua curatur, Yairi quam filie sanitas reddatur. Per acum intratur camelus gentilium, nec Helyas aspernatur vidue turgurium.	First, with a touch to his hem, 10 the bleeding woman is cured; then health is restored to the daughter of Jairus. The camel of the Gentiles is passed through the needle, 15 and Elijah rejects not the widow's hut.
III Esau repudiat. Iacob Christus gratis vocat, et iniciat fide trinitatis, cuius dignitatis signum dedit gentibus: Iacob natis cancellatis benedicens manibus.	Christ scorns Esau. He summons Jacob with favor, and consecrates him 20 in the faith of the Trinity, the worthiness of which he gave as a sign to the Gentiles: Jacob blessing his grandchildren with crossed hands.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 36, f. 306r: a2, Strophes I-III, complete, with II-III indicated by the usual capitals. Following this piece are the two-voice continuations (F-7,37-38) for the remaining pair from the five conductus from fascicle 6 that begin in three parts: Novus Adam natus est, from Perotin's Salvatoris hodie (C5/315), and Veris hyemps, from Ortu regis evanescit (G3/256); the other three continuations occur together earlier in fascicle 7 at nos. 20-22.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 78, f. 163r (154r): a2, Strophes I-III, complete, with painted initials for each stanza; that of Strophe I, furthermore, has decorative tracery, not typical for many of the opening initials in this portion of the MS, but present also in the preceding work, Legem dedit olim deus (I21/192); an upper-case letter begins line 5 and also line 24, as if the scribe was expecting a Benedicamus domino formulation to close.

CH-SGs 383 (Sankt Gallen, Stiftsbibliothek, Cod. Sang. 383), collection 2, no. 3 (no. 7),¹ p. 165: a2; Strophes I-

¹Pieces are cited here first by collection and number within the collection, according to their appearance within the two series of Notre Dame conductus that appear within CH-SGs 383 from pp. 135-144 and 158-176 (4 and 10 pieces respectively). These two groups of pieces are separated by a collection of Sanctus and Agnus tropes, some of which are also in W1, fasc. 10. The following number in parentheses then gives the enumeration of the piece according to the total tally of Notre Dame conductus within this

III, complete, with their beginnings, as well as those of lines 6, 14, and 21, indicated by red painted initials. As is typical of this source, the ligation of the more ornate passages, including the caudae, does not appear to encode rhythmic information as precisely as the manuscripts more closely associated with the Notre Dame repertory.²

Text only:

F-T 1471 (Troyes, Médiathèque du Grand Troyes, MS 1471; [olim] Troyes, Bibliothèque municipale, MS 1471), no. 10, f. Dv (=114v – second back flyleaf); fragmentary; the MS is ruled to accommodate music a2, but only the verbal text for lines 1-12,1 survives, with empty space allotted for an opening initial, and apparently also space for one in Strophe II (though this portion of the leaf is heavily worn and difficult to construe); staves were never entered.³ This source was unknown to Anderson and is not listed in his catalog or edition; its minor variants are collated below.

CH-Zz C.58/275 (Zürich, Zentralbibliothek, MS C.58/275), no. 333 (6),⁴ f. 148r: text only, Strophes I-III, complete. Images of this source are presently unavailable to me; details stem from NDRC and the CPI website.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: General remarks: This poem marshals a wealth of biblical figures that relate symbolically to the passing of the Old Testament covenant into that of the New (cf. Jeremiah, 31:31-34). Anderson's explications of this conductus text as given in NDRC, 4:xxvi-xxvii, are generally thorough and solid; they form the basis for most of the interpretations supplied here. My single major disagreement lies in his reading of the final lines, 23-24, q.v. Further examination of the topic of the two laws within the conductus repertory is available in my article "Vetus abit littera," with Novum sibi texuit specifically treated on pp. 178-183, and 187-193, and where some of the information given here can also be found.⁵ Textual notes: 1-4: see Jeremiah, 13:1-11, where the Lord commands the prophet to acquire a linen loincloth. After wearing it for a time, Jeremiah is then ordered to hide it in a rocky crevice by the river Euphrates. Many days later, he is asked to retrieve it and finds it rotted and unfit for use. Here the old cloth represents the old law of the Israelites, while the new one in the conductus poem signifies the new covenant with Christ; see Anderson's explanation drawn from Jerome's In Jeremiam prophetam in NDRC, 4:xxvi, notes 1-2 (citing PL, 24: col. 793). 5-8: line 5 quotes a portion of manuscript.

²For images of this source, see <https://www.e-codices.unifr.ch/en/searchresult/list/one/csg/0383>.

³For more on this MS, see Gregorio Bevilacqua, "The Earliest Source of Notre-Dame Polyphony? A New Conductus Fragment from the Early Thirteenth Century," Music and Letters, 97 (12016): 1-41.

⁴The numbering of the pieces in Zz C.58/275 is that of Jakob Werner, Beiträge zur Kunde der lateinischen Literatur des Mittelalters (Aarau: Sauerländer, 1905). Werner's numbers occasionally split or combine various poems, but this does not apply for the Parisian conductus in this source (nos. 328-335 – although no. 331 is Virgo deum generat from CH-SGs 383). The numbering as in Anderson, NDRC, which apparently only applies to the conductus portion, is given afterwards in parentheses.

⁵Thomas B. Payne, "Vetus abit littera: From the Old to the New Law in the Parisian Conductus," Ars Antiqua: Music and Culture in Europe c. 1150-1330, Gregorio Bevilacqua and Thomas B. Payne, eds., 163-204, Speculum Musicae, no. 40 (Turnhout: Brepols, 2020).

Galatians, 4:27,⁶ which echoes Isaiah, 54:1.⁷ The Pauline context directly juxtaposes the Old and New Law within the events of the story of Sarah and Hagar, wives of Abraham, from Genesis, 16 and 21. Hagar was the handmaiden of Abraham’s initially barren wife, Sarah. Sarah gave Hagar to Abraham so that he might have children, whereupon Hagar became pregnant with Ishmael and began to despise Sarah. Eventually Sarah gave birth to Isaac, and Hagar and Ishmael were compelled to leave Abraham’s household. Christian biblical commentaries associate Hagar with the old law and the Jewish people, and Sarah with the new Christian covenant; for this, see Galatians, 4:22-31; Augustine, City of God, book 15, chapters 2-3; the references from the Glossa ordinaria given in Anderson, NDRC, 5:xxx, note 2 (citing PL, 113: col. 122); and cf. the conductus Caput in caudam vertitur (J37/54), lines 1-4. The latter poem is attributed to Philip the Chancellor in Dronke, “Lyrical Compositions,” 591.⁸ 6,4;8,3: note the use of annominatio (punning, word play) for the homonym “paries,” (“you shall bear” / “house”) leading to the connotation of line 8,3 (again “paries,” literally meaning “wall” here) as “house” by synecdoche (part standing for the whole). It is also conceivable that the phrase might have some connection to the Western Wall on Temple Mount in Jerusalem. 9-12: a reference to two overlapping Gospel miracles wrought by Jesus: the healing of the bleeding woman, and the raising of Jairus’s twelve-year-old daughter (both covered in Mark, 5:21-43, Matthew, 9:18-26, and Luke, 8:40-56). In the first story, as Jesus was traveling to the house of Jairus, a leader of the synagogue who had sought his aid, a woman suffering for twelve years from bouts of bleeding surreptitiously grasped the hem or fringe of his garment and was healed of her illness. Jesus paused and wondered who had touched his clothing; on finding out, he sent the woman on her way with a benediction and continued on his original errand. In the subsequent miracle, the daughter of Jairus lay near death, and immediately after the earlier episode of healing the bleeding woman, news came forth that the child had died. The crowd around Jesus then advised Jairus not to bother him, as it was too late for any help. Jesus, nonetheless, told Jairus not to fear, but rather to believe, and his daughter would be healed. He continued on to the house and, upon reaching the girl, stated that she was not dead but merely sleeping, and told her to rise; she arose miraculously, and Jesus told her to eat. All accounts but Matthew also report that Jesus told her parents to keep the miracle quiet. As Anderson indicates (NDRC, 4:xxvii, n. 5, drawing on the Lucae evangelium expositio ascribed to Bede available in PL, 92: col. 441), in the case of these intercalated miracles, the daughter appears as a figure of the Old Law and the woman of the New: the one who was cured first represents the Gentiles who first receive the grace of Christ; the later recipient is connected with the Jews, since they were initially left behind (as when Jesus paused during his encounter with the bleeding woman before hastening anew to the house of Jairus), but still have the opportunity for acceptance under the new covenant. 11,1: “Yairi” is trisyllabic, as required by the poetic scheme and reflected in the musical setting. 13-14: this phrase might also be rendered – though more awkwardly – as: “one is passed through the needle on the camels of the Gentiles,” and thus may retain the reading of “camelis” for line 15,1 that occurs in F and CH-SGs 383. The passage derives from Jesus’ saying: “it is easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God” (from Matthew, 19:24, Mark, 10:25, and Luke, 18:25).⁹ Anderson’s glossing of these lines quotes the In Matthei evangelium expositio ascribed to Bede (NDRC, 4:xxvii, note 7, citing PL, 92: col. 87), which explains that the figure of the camel here relates to Christ, who has shouldered the weight of sin for the Gentiles. By taking on the burden himself

⁶“Scriptum est enim: Laetare, sterilis, quae non paris; erumpe et clama, quae non parturis: quia multi filii desertae, magis quam ejus quae habet virum” (“For it is written: Rejoice, you barren one, that bear not: break forth and cry, you that travail not: for many are the children of the desolate, more than of her that has a husband.”).

⁷“Lauda, sterilis, quae non paris; decanta laudem, et hinni, quae non pariebas: quoniam multi filii desertae magis quam ejus quae habet virum, dicit Dominus” (“Give praise, O barren one, that bear not: sing forth praise, and make a joyful noise, you that did not travail with child: for many are the children of the desolate, more than of her that has a husband, saith the Lord”).

⁸Peter Dronke, “The Lyrical Compositions of Philip the Chancellor,” Studi medievali, 3rd series, 28 (1987): 563-592.

⁹The version from Matthew reads: “... Facilius est camelum per foramen acus transire, quam divitem intrare in regnum caelorum.”

(like a camel), he more easily achieves the Gentiles' salvation than for those who need to convert. Nevertheless, as the author says in a portion of the text just prior to Anderson's quotation (see PL, 92: col. 87A-B): “‘amen dico vobis, quia dives difficile intrabit in regnum caelorum.’ Non ait: ‘impossibile est,’ sed ‘difficile,’ quia maximi laboris est, in pecuniis confidentes aulam regni coelestis intrare” (“‘Amen, I say to you, it is difficult that a rich man shall enter into the kingdom of heaven’ [Matthew, 19:23]. He [Jesus] does not say ‘impossible,’ but ‘difficult’ because it is of the greatest labor that those trusting in money enter into the court of the heavenly kingdom.”). Thus, salvation is ultimately open even to the ones who seem least able to attain it, and all may still be welcomed in heaven. 15-16: in the narrative of 3 Kings (1 Kings), 17, Elijah restores life to the son of a widow in Zarephath. The prophet had been directed by God to flee from the kingdom of Ahab (the husband of Jezebel, who with her promoted the worship of the god Baal), after Elijah had warned the king that no rain would fall except at his command. Elijah then escapes to the east and is fed by ravens and refreshed by the stream of Chorath. When this water supply dries up, he journeys to Zarephath where he seeks refuge in the home of the widow and her son, who have only a handful of meal and some oil for food. Elijah asks the woman to feed him first from her small stores, for he assures her that her meal and oil will not diminish until the rains return. She faithfully complies, and the miracle occurs as promised. After this event, the widow's son dies; she complains to Elijah, blaming him for the tragedy, and the prophet restores the boy to life by stretching over him three times. This causes the widow to proclaim Elijah a true prophet. A similar episode occurs in the accounts of Elijah's successor, the prophet Elisha (see 4 Kings [2 Kings], 4:34). This latter story is recalled in the conductus Flos de spina procreatur ... misso rore (H29/127), line 10 (which happens directly to precede Novum sibi texuit in F-7), Legem dedit olim deus (I21/192), lines 3-6, and Rex et pater omnium (I17/307), lines 15-18. As Anderson relates (in NDRC, 4:xxvii, n. 8, drawing on the Glossa ordinaria in PL, 113: col. 606), Elijah can be seen here as a symbol of Christ, the widow's son as the people of Judea, and the widow herself as a figure of the Jewish synagogue who complains that Elijah's coming caused the death of her congregation. Alternatively, given the emphases of the earlier images in the poem, the widow may just as readily represent the Jews, while her son is a figure for the Gentiles. The expression in the conductus poem here again suggests, as in the previous portions of the strophe, that the same possibility of acceptance into grace is possible for the mother (who, indeed, eventually acknowledges the authenticity of Elijah) as for the son. 17-19,1: see Malachi, 1:2-3, echoed in Romans, 9:13: “Sicut scriptum est: Iacob dilexi, Esau autem odio habui” (“As it is written: Jacob I loved, but Esau I hated”). The Apostle Paul includes the passage as part of his plea that the Jews allow themselves to be included with the Gentiles as part of the new covenant. In Novum sibi texuit, Jacob is presented as a figure of the Gentiles and Esau as the Jews, with their father Isaac representing God. The two brothers were twins, although Esau was the first to exit fully from his mother's womb, thus securing his rights as firstborn. Nevertheless, in Genesis, 27:1-30, Jacob, aided by his mother Rebecca, deceived the nearly blind Isaac to usurp his blessing upon Esau. Earlier (in Genesis, 25:29-34) Esau had forfeited his birthright in exchange for a share of a stew that Jacob made. Thus Jacob, who came later, is given the blessing from his father Isaac in preference to Esau, who originally had the privilege of inheritance but spurned it. 17,1: “Esau” has three syllables here, as shown by the poetic scheme and the musical setting of this word. 18-19: interestingly, the musical setting reflects the enjambment in the poetry through the lack of a pause between “gratis / vocat”. 19,2-20,2: the mention of Jacob here in connection with the doctrine of the Trinity is given further weight by his role as the third member of the principal Jewish patriarchs, following Abraham and Isaac. 23-24: Anderson (ANDRC, 4:xxvii, notes 10-11) sees this passage as a further exposition of Jacob's deceptive appropriation of the birthright from Isaac. He argues the same for a closely related phrase in the conductus O crux ave spes unica (H4/230), line 6 (see NDRC, 3:xii, note 3). Yet a more telling connection arises with the story of Jacob's later blessing of his grandchildren Ephraim and Manasseh, sons of Joseph (see Genesis, 48:12-20). In this account, Jacob crossed his arms so that his right hand was placed on the head of Ephraim, the younger, who stood at Jacob's left, and his left hand on Manasseh, standing on his right. Thus the younger child of the two received the greater blessing, and the act also recalled the result of Jacob's earlier deception. In this case, the verb “cancello,” used in both conductus poems, does not connote cancelling or striking out Esau's birthright, but rather signifies the action of Jacob latticing his hands, crossing them one over the other. As in O crux ave, the action in Novum sibi texuit recalls the figure of the Cross as a symbol of salvation through Christ, and places Jacob even more squarely in his role of a signifier for the new covenant and as a figure for a member of the Trinity. For more on how the music in this cauda may relate to the image of Jacob's crossed hands and further suggest symbolic connections to the topic of the Two Laws, see Payne, "Vetus abit littera," pp. 192-193, as well as the observations on the music below.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: All legible variants between the adopted text (which conforms to F with one emendation for line 14,1) and that of F-T 1471 are collated here, as this source was unknown to Anderson at the time he prepared his catalog and edition; other divergences are mostly orthographical and very minor, consisting of the substitution of the letter "m" for "n" after a vowel. 1,1: F-T 1471: [N]ovum, initial never entered. 3,3: F-T 1471: computruit, as in all MSS but F. 4,3: F-T 1471: compensare, as in all MSS but F. 6,1-3: F-T 1471: faded and difficult to read, no obvious variants. 8,2-9,1: F-T 1471: so faded as to be nearly illegible after the first syllable of 8,2; apparently empty space is left for an initial to begin line 9. 8,3: F: period om. 9,3: F-T 1471: somewhat faded, possibly spelled fimbrie, as in all MSS but F. 10: F-T 1471: rather faded, but no apparent variants. 11,1: F-T 1471: yayre. 12,1: F-T 1471: last word on the folio, remainder lost. 14,1: F,CH-SGs 383: camelis, reading taken from W1 and CH-Zz C.58; see the remarks on the text for lines 13-14. MUSIC: Signatures: F and W1 have b-flat sigs throughout Strophes I-II; CH-SGs 383 has a single, solitary b-flat sign appearing only once, just before the figure over the last syllable of line 7,3 ("sterilis laetare") in the T. For Strophe III, W1 implies that b-natural should apply for the whole stanza, thanks to a system change without signatures just prior to the third syllable of line 17,2 ("repudiat"); this occurs before any b pitches are encountered in the music of Strophe III. F cancels its b-flats with a signature-less system change just prior to line 18,3 ("gratis"). Although several b pitches occur in both parts of Strophe III in F before this change, the evidence of W1 proposes these should be read as natural, and they are so signaled by above-staff accidentals in the transcription. Caudae: the caudae in this piece are striking for their frequent use of parallel-third chains, also seen in several cum littera phrases. Repeated and antecedent-consequent phrases, including ones that feature voice exchange, are also common, indicated by boxed letters above the vocal parts. These features, interestingly, are also prominent in the piece immediately prior in F-7, Flos de spina procreatur ... misso rore (H29/127). Lines 1-4: this cum littera section, rather exceptionally, repeats the music for both voices of lines 1-2 in lines 3-4, with a slight change for the closing figures in the D. 2,2: D: F: the rhythm of the 4li over "[lum]ba[re]" (LBLL) is prompted by W1, which has 3 of 4li el. Cauda at line 4,3: T: W1,CH-SGs 383: in the fourth phrase of the melisma on "[compen]sa[re]," at L19, b is written as the third note of the 3li=bca in F. In F an original b in the same place is apparently erased and a is entered, suggesting a scribal preference for the a adopted here. Prior to the arrival on the last syllable of "[compensa]re," the T of W1 has a stroke preceding the penultimate d at L33 and a corresponding stroke above in the D as well. D: the plicated figure at L32-L33 of the cauda in F, falling before the concluding 3li=agf (given as 3C in W1) is rendered 2liP (with 1 el)=abaP in W1, while CH-SGs 383 has si,3li=a,agb here. It is likely in these sources that a different rhythm and alignment is intended that would replace the d-b sixth in F with a d-a fifth (and an alternative proposed by W1 is given above the staff), but I have chosen to retain the rhythmical implications of this passage as it appears in F. Cauda at 7,3: for this single 4L phrase over "[supplanta]re": D: F: 3li,2li,2li=bab,dc,ba; W1: 3li,2li,si=bdc,ba,f; CH-SGs 383: 2li,3li,si=bd,caf. I am using the W1 version in place of the reading in F here. It obviates the bab unison sonorities at the start of the cauda, and although it introduces a b/c dissonance at L2, this is compensated by the frequent dissonances that occur in the later caudae of this piece (such as the one on "tuus" immediately following); see the remarks on the final cauda. The W1 D reading also corresponds in its opening with a motive occurring elsewhere in the work; see the second phrase at L5-L8 of the cauda on "per [acum] and the D setting of "[in]tra[tur]" (line 13,2-3). Line 15: in contrast to the other cum littera segments in this piece, the starkly syllabic appearance of this portion ("nec helyas aspernatur") suggests that a performance in a rhythmic mode might not be out of the question here. The two dissonant seconds in "aspernatur" are sanctioned by all three musical sources and may conceivably present a form of text painting (see also the remarks on the music in the final cauda). 24,1: T: F,CH-SGs 383: 2 lower for the siP figure at "[benedi]cens"; the adopted reading is derived from the 2li=ba from WI and avoids the dissonance. Final cauda: at the occurrence of the syllable “[ma]ni[bus]” that opens the melisma: TD: W1: 3li,si; CH-SGs 383: 4li. Each source thus both contradicts and agrees with the differing T and D ligations at this point in F. I have based the rhythm in the transcription on the 4li that appears in the T of F at this point, and provided an alternative reading (based on F’s D) above the system. TD: F: the voice-exchange passage that begins in L20 after the fifth phrase of this cauda (signaled by the boxed letters “o” and “p” over the staves) is given here in an “upbeat” version of mode 1. This is because the entire passage is composed solely of 2li, with no concluding 3li or other signal to argue for mode 2. What is especially striking about this segment in either rhythmic interpretation is the insistent harping on the f/b tritone that occurs every 4L. This could have some significance in terms of word painting. Given that there is no evidence among the surviving musical sources of any use of b-flats in this segment, I have not sought to soften it with any editorial accidentals. Additional reiterated dissonance is also observable in the frequent striking of simultaneous harmonic seconds in the varied repetition seen in the subsequent phrases of the cauda (see also the remarks on the music of line 15).

IN TERRAM CHRISTUS EXPUIT
 Conductus (J7/185)

F, f. 308r (7,39)

I

D

8 a. [In ter-ram chri-stus ex - pu - it. sa - li - vam ter - re mi - scu - it.
 b. [Ex o - re pa - tris pro - di - it hu - ma - num ge - nus li - ni - it.

T

8 a. In ter-ram chri-stus ex - pu - it. sa - li - vam ter - re mi - scu - it.
 b. Ex o - re pa - tris pro - di - it hu - ma - num ge - nus li - ni - it.

8 cum ser - vi for - mam in - du - it de - i sa - pi - en - du - as na - tu - ras u - ni - it mi - ra pro - vi - den -

8 cum ser - vi for - mam in - du - it de - i sa - pi - en - du - as na - tu - ras u - ni - it mi - ra pro - vi - den -

*a mode-2 reading is also possible, see at end [b]

8 - ti - - a.
 - ti - - a.

8 - ti - - a.
 - ti - - a.

II

D

8 a. Il - la mun - dans. hec mun - da - ta. il - la
 b. De - us li - mo - se con - iunx - it. et con -

T

8 a. Il - la mun - dans. hec mun - da - ta. il - la
 b. De - us li - mo - se con - iunx - it. et con -

8 cre - ans. hec cre - a - ta. un - de lu - tum fit ex spu - to.
 - iun - ctis nos in - un - xit. in - ter - mix - ta fit mix - tu - ra.

8 cre - ans. hec cre - a - ta. un - de lu - tum fit ex spu - to.
 - iun - ctis nos in - un - xit. in - ter - mix - ta fit mix - tu - ra.

sed non spu - tum fit ex lu - to. as - si - gnans mi - ste - ri -
 u - bi dup - plex est na - tu - ra. quis au - di - vit ta - li -

sed non spu - tum fit ex lu - to. as - si - gnans mi - ste - ri - u - bi dup - plex est na - tu - ra. quis au - di - vit ta - li -

[e] [e'] [e] [g]
 [d] [d'] [d''] [f]

[g']? [f']?
 - a.
 - a.
 - a.
 - a.

III

a. Chri - stus ta - men sic pro - vi - dit quod non sta - tim
 b. Que di - vi - no mun - dant ro - re ne - que flu - unt

a. Chri - stus ta - men sic pro - vi - dit quod non sta - tim
 b. Que di - vi - no mun - dant ro - re ne - que flu - unt

ce - cus vi - dit. nun - quam do - vi - det ce - cus na - tus ni - si cum cla - mo - re. his do - ce - tur sim - plex cul - tus. o - mnis

ce - cus vi - dit. nun - quam do - vi - det ce - cus na - tus ni - si
 cum cla - mo - re. his do - ce - tur sim - plex cul - tus. o - mnis pri - us ba - pti - za - tus in a - quis mi - ste - ri - lon - ge fit tu - mu - ltus ab a - quis si - len - ti -

pri - us ba - pti - za - tus in a - quis mi - ste - ri -
 lon - ge fit tu - mu - ltus ab a - quis si - len - ti -

this phrase may also be rendered in faster values, see at end

- i.]
- i.]
- i.]
- i.]

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*Cauda closing strophe I (at line 4,2); F, f. 308r, VI-308v, I: reading in mode 2 (less likely, given that the first T phrase closes with a 2li figure

D (sapienti) - - [a.]
T
(sapienti) - - a.

Final cauda, closing strophe III (at line 23,3); F, f. 308v, VI: reading of second phrase in faster values

D (misteri) - - [i.]
T (misteri) - - i.

IN TERRAM CHRISTUS EXPUIT
Conductus (J7/185)

F, f. 308r (7,39)

Ia	In terram Christus expuit; salivam terre miscuit cum servi formam induit dei sapientia.		Christ spat upon the ground; he mixed saliva with dirt when God's wisdom took on the form of a servant.
Ib	Ex ore patris prodiit. Humanum genus liniit. Duas naturas uniit mira providentia.	5	From the mouth of the Father he came forth. He daubed (the eyes of) the human race. A wondrous providence united two substances.
IIa	Illa mundans, hec mundata; illa creans, hec creata. Unde lutum fit ex sputo, sed non sputum fit ex luto, assignans misteria.	10	One is the cleanser, the other the cleansed; one the creator, the other created. Whence clay is made from the spittle, but the spittle is not made from clay, thereby marking them as divine symbols.
IIb	Deus limo se coniunxit, et coniunctis nos inunxit. Intermixta fit mixtura ubi duplex est natura. Quis audivit talia?	15	God joined himself together with the mud and smeared us with what was conjoined. What is intermixed becomes a mixture where the substance remains twofold. Who has heard such things?
IIIa	Christus tamen sic providit quod non statim cecus vidit. Nunquam videt cecus natus, nisi prius baptizatus in aquis misterii.	20	Yet Christ also established that the blind man did not see at once. One who is born blind never sees, unless they are first christened by the waters of the sacrament.
IIIb	Que divino mundant rore neque fluunt cum clamore. His docetur simplex cultus: Omnis longe fit tumultus ab aquis silentii.	25	These waters cleanse with heavenly dew and flow without a sound. By them a simple lesson is taught: All uproar occurs far from the waters of silence.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 39, f. 308r: a2; Strophes Ia-IIIb complete, with each of the subsequent paired versicles (the first piece in F-7 to have this feature) indicated by the usual ink capitals, and with the second member of each pair entered in carefully executed blank spaces provided within the staff system directly following the conclusion of each preceding versicle. This is the second piece in F-7 to share no concordances with W1, W2, or Ma since Dei sapientia (J6/86) at F-7,28, on f. 295v. Note the coincidence with the last line here of Strophe Ia.

Text only:

GB-Ob Auct. F.6.4 (Oxford, Bodleian Library, Auct. F.6.4), f. 61bv (sic): text only of Strophes Ia, IIa, IIIa, only. The poem appears at the end of an early thirteenth-century copy of Boethius's Consolation of Philosophy, preceded by two mazes inscribed by different hands; it is followed by an early fourteenth-century commentary on the Consolation by Nicholas Trevet (ca. 1258-ca. 1328) that constitutes the second half of this bipartite MS.¹ According to the CPI website, there is an accompanying rubric: “Scio carmina et versus componere cantus modula[mina] notare e[t] legere” (“I know [how?] to compose songs and verses, [and] notate and read the melodies of a tune”).²

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Content: This conductus poem is an exegetical disquisition of the Gospel account of Jesus curing a man who had been blind since birth (John, 9:1-41, especially 9:6-7, quoted below for the remarks on lines 1-2). Jesus accomplished the miracle by spitting on the ground, making a clay poultice of the mixture of saliva and dirt, and applying it to the eyes of the blind man. After being commanded by Jesus to wash away the clay in the pool of Siloam,³ the man was miraculously able to see. The lyric then goes on to interpret the various components of the story in ways that are congruent with a number of medieval biblical commentaries. Further nods to this miracle and its implications appear elsewhere in the Notre Dame repertory: see, for instance, the organum prosulas Vide prophete / Viderunt (A9/- – vdW 3/M1), lines 47-50; Homo cum mandato dato / Omnes (A10/- – vdW 3/M1), lines 72-84; and the motet Latex silice / Latus (A2/190 – vdW 228/M14), all attributed to Philip the Chancellor and available in Payne, Motets and Prosulas. Anderson’s explications of the text of this conductus and the biblical images that lie behind it appear both in his edition (NDRC, 5:vii), and with fuller treatment in his earlier article “Symbolism in Texts of Thirteenth-Century Music,” Studies in Music, 4 (1970): 19-39; see especially pp. 30-35. The main authorities he cites come from the Glossa ordinaria (using the version in PL, 114: col. 395A), some so-called Quaestiones ascribed to Isidore of Seville (PL, 83: col. 128C),⁴ and a work designated as Allegoriae in Novum Testamentum by Hugh of St. Victor (PL, 175: col. 760B-D). My discussion below is indebted to all these resources. Symbolism: Most of the elements in this poem articulate symbols that are explicable through the exegetical texts just cited (cf. especially Anderson, “Symbolism in Texts,” 30-32). Among them: a) the blind man = the human race corrupted by sin, which his blindness represents. b) the dirt or dust into which Jesus spat = Christ’s humanity, as opposed to his divine nature. c) Jesus’s saliva = wisdom from the mouth of God (see the remarks for line 3, below) as well as Christ’s divinity that he shares with God. Hence, d) the clay mixture applied to the blind man’s eyes represents the Incarnation that united Jesus’s godly and mortal attributes, which nevertheless remained separate and equal. e) the Siloam pool = baptism, which is what eventually restores the blind man’s sight; it also signifies, by extension, Christ. This latter association is emphasized by the passage in John, 9:7, where “Siloam” is glossed as meaning “sent,” thus corresponding to the son God sent to redeem mankind. f) the restoration of the man’s vision = the salvation Christ can confer. In the biblical verse that immediately precedes the recounting of the ¹As the Oxford source is not presently available to me, in addition to what is given on the CPI site I rely here on the information provided by Penelope Reed Doob in her The Idea of the Labyrinth from Classical Antiquity through the Middle Ages (Ithaca and London: Cornell University Press, 1990), 341; see also pp. 139-143 in this work for additional discussion of GB-Ob Auct. F.6.4. Further details can be gleaned from the descriptions given in Falconer Madan and H. H. E. [Herbert Henry Edmund] Craster, A Summary Catalogue of Western Manuscripts in the Bodleian Library at Oxford (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1922), vol. 2, part 1: 232, under no. 2150.

²The minor conjectural completion of the rubric is my own.

³The Vulgate gives Siloe, which the Gospel text glosses as meaning “sent”; this pool was a large reservoir that served as a protected water supply located within the walls the city of Jerusalem.

⁴So named according to Anderson, “Symbolism in Texts,” p. 30, note 60, but the title of this segment in the PL volume he cites is Allegoriae quaedam sacrae scripturae.

miracle, Jesus says: “quamdiu sum in mundo, lux sum mundi” (“As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world” – John, 9:5), thus solidifying the metaphor of Christ as light and sight. Textual notes: 1-2: see John, 9: 6-7.⁵ 3: The familiar image of Christ as a servant reflects God’s humbling of himself when he adopted human form; see Philippians, 2:7-8.⁶ For some additional appearances of this image, see the remarks on the conductus Sol sub nube latuit (I16/334), lines 17-20. 4: for the use of the term “wisdom of God” to refer to Christ, as it does here, see Luke, 11:49,⁷ 1 Corinthians, 1:30,⁸ and the related sentiments in 1 Corinthians, 1:24: and Ephesians, 3:10-11. The conceit also appears in the opening lines of the conductus Dei sapientia (J6/86). See also the following remarks for line 5. 5: Christ, issuing from the mouth of God, is equated here with the saliva that represents his divine nature. The citation Anderson provides from the Glossa ordinaria (drawn from PL, 114: col. 395A) makes this very clear and also associates the saliva with God’s wisdom, seen just before in line 4, with language very similar to that of the conductus: “De saliva lutum fecit, quia Verbum caro factum est. Saliva est sapientia quae ex ore Altissimi prodiit. Terra est caro Christi” (“Christ made clay from the saliva because the Word was made flesh. The saliva is wisdom emanating from the mouth of the Most High. The dust is the flesh of Christ” – cited from Anderson, “Symbolism in Texts,” 30-31). 6,3: on the particular form of this word (“liniit”), see the observations on the text below. 7-8: God’s providence brought together the human and divine via Christ’s incarnation, in the same way that Jesus combined the “lowly” dirt and the “divine” spittle. 9-10: Here the divine nature of the spittle and the mortal essence inherent in the dirt or dust are correlated directly through their respective associations with God and Christ/humankind. 11-13: in making clay from spittle and dust, the effect of the combination does not mitigate the divine power of the spittle; it does, though, empower the earthly nature of the dust it combines with. The former point is a frequent conceit within the Notre Dame repertory; see, for example, the textual notes of the conductus Sol sub nube latuit (I16/334) and Parit preter morem (E12/261) and the references included therein. Line 13, moreover, expressly affirms that the two elements represent symbolic types. 14-18 (Strophe IIb): further emphasis (cf. lines 11-13) on the tenet that the incarnation effected a new manifestation of God as a man, separate from the God the Father, but also equivalent to him as per the doctrine of the Trinity. See the related expression in the conductus Relegendur ab area (C6/304), lines 13-14 (at the end of Strophe II): “assumensque mutabile / quod erat non mutavit” (“and [Christ] taking on the changeable [i.e., the form of a human] did not change what he was”); see also Sol sub nube latuit, lines 15-16. 19-23 (Strophe IIIa): as the Glossa ordinaria passage quoted by Anderson observes (in “Symbolism in Texts,” 31) and the conductus poem emphasizes here, the blind man (i.e., the sinful human race) who had the clay mixture (i.e., Christ incarnate) applied to his eyes did not obtain his sight immediately. It was only his subsequent washing in the Siloam pool (i.e., undergoing baptism) that established his ability to see; see also the remarks for line 25-28. 24,1: the subsequent clause of line 25 clarifies that this pronoun (que) more effectively refers back to the waters for its antecedent, rather than the sacraments (misteria) of line 23. 24: another instance of the frequent trope of signifying the power of God through the image of dew; see the ⁵John, 9: 6-7: “Haec cum dixisset, expuit in terram, et fecit lutum ex sputo, et linivit lutum super oculos ejus, et dixit ei: Vade, lava in natatoria Siloe (quod interpretatur Missus). Abiit ergo, et lavit, et venit videns” (“When he [Jesus] had said these things, he spat on the ground, and made clay of the spittle, and spread the clay on his [the blind man’s] eyes, and said to him: Go, wash in the pool of Siloe, which is interpreted, ‘Sent.’ He went therefore, and washed, and he came seeing.”).

⁶Philippians, 2:7-8: “... sed semet ipsum exinanivit, formam servi accipiens in similitudinem hominum factus, et habitu inventus ut homo. Humiliavit semet ipsum, factus oboediens usque ad mortem, mortem autem crucis” (“But he [Christ] emptied himself, taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men, and devised in appearance as a man. He humbled himself, becoming obedient unto death, even to the death of the cross.”).

⁷Luke, 11:49: “Propterea et sapientia Dei dixit: Mittam ad illos prophetas, et apostolos, et ex illis occident, et persequentur” (“For this cause also the wisdom of God said: ‘I will send to them prophets and apostles; and some of them they will kill and persecute.’”).

⁸1 Corinthians, 1:30: “Ex ipso autem vos estis in Christo Jesu, qui factus est nobis sapientia a Deo, et justitia, et sanctificatio, et redemptio” (“But of him are you in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and justice, and sanctification, and redemption.”).

remarks on the text of the conductus Flos de spina procreatur ... misso rore (H29/127), line 3, and the references it offers. 25-28: Interestingly, the waters of the Siloam pool (not otherwise directly present in the conductus text) are described in the Bible as quietly flowing; see Isaiah, 8:6: “... Pro eo quod abjecit populus iste aquas Siloe, quae vadunt cum silentio ...” (“... Forasmuch as this people have cast away the waters of Siloe, that go with silence ...”). 27-28: although the final couplet of In terram Christus has the ring of a proverbial saying, I have not yet found a suitable corollary to it.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: All variants from the adopted text (which uses F as its base source) are collated here, since GB-Ob Auct. F.6.4 was unknown to Anderson at the time he prepared his catalog and edition. As I have not yet seen the Oxford MS, I rely here on the helpful transcription in Doob, The Idea of the Labyrinth, 341. 3,1: GB-Ob Auct. F.6.4: et; this could serve just as well as the “cum” supplied here by F. 6,3: not included in GB-Ob Auct. F.6.4, this word as given in F shows either the form “liniit” or “liviit” (with the former appearing a bit more likely given the specific shapes here of the second and third letters); both are acceptable (through contraction) as third-person perfect-tense forms of the verb “lino / linere”; the final group of letters is additionally confirmed by the tittles (“dots” or “jots”) over the minims indicating “-ii-” in F; the Vulgate text cited above from John 9:7, however, gives “linivit,” an uncontracted form, but the spelling is notoriously variable overall; the adopted “liniit” is used by both Anderson (NDRC, 5:vii), and AH, 20:127, no. 162. 11,5: GB-Ob Auct. F.6.4: sputu; this is an acceptable form, being the ablative of “sputus” (“spitting”), but the reading of “sputo” from F supplies the requisite rhyme. 13,1: GB-Ob Auct. F.6.4: assignant, which would work just as well as the adopted participial form that appears in F. 13,2: F: misterium, which, though serviceable, seems less preferable than “misteria” taken from GB-Ob Auct. F.6.4, since this reading results in an identical rhyme sound occurring at the end of each of the Strophes Ia through IIb. Given that the paired versicles IIIa and IIIb also share closing rhymes (albeit different ones than in the other stanzas), the F variant is jettisoned here in favor of the reading from the Oxford source. 15,4: F: the MS reading “inunxit,” as adopted here and also in AH, 20:127, no. 162, is a recognized form of the verb “inungo” (“coat,” “anoint,” “spread over,” “apply to”); Anderson (NDRC, 5:vii, 14) gives “iniunxit” (from “iniungo” – hence “joined,” although he translates it as “anointed”) and does not report the variant in his commentary (NDRC, 5:113). It seems possible that Anderson’s reading is a typo, although it appears in both the textual and musical sections of his edition, as well as in his article “Symbolism in Texts,” 34. 16,1: equally satisfactory if rendered as two separate words (“inter mixta”), as in Anderson, NDRC, 5:vii, and AH, 20:127, no. 162. 19,1: F: written “Cristus,” without the more typical use of the Greek letter pair χρ (chi-ro) for the opening. 19,4: GB-Ob Auct. F.6.4: providet, a change in tense from F. 21,1: GB-Ob Auct. F.6.4: numquam. 23,2: GB-Ob Auct. F.6.4: aquas, an equally serviceable variant. 23,3: F: the final letter of “misterii” is enlarged, as if a capital; this is not reflected in the transcription. 24,3: F: mundans, which does not make grammatical sense in the larger context of the stanza; the adopted reading of “mundant” is prompted by Anderson, NDRC, 5:vii, and AH, 20:127, no. 162. 26,1: F: “hiis;” a single syllable is required here for the proper syllable count. Although the alternative spelling that appears in F could serve if rendered as a monosyllable, the form as adopted here is less ambiguous in terms of pronunciation. MUSIC: Cauda closing Strophe I (at line 4,2): TD: F: in addition to allowing for different interpretations of smaller notational details, a reading in either modes 1 or 2 is possible for this melisma; mode 1, though, seems more likely, given that the first T phrase closes with a 2li figure and the mode-1 version features consonance at the beginning of every beat. An alternative mode-2 version appears at the end of the transcription. My reading of this cauda differs from both of the ones offered by Anderson (NDRC, 5:14 – in mode 2, the more consistent rendition of the two; and “Symbolism in Texts,” 36 – in mode 1). In my interpretation, I have attempted to portray similar figures with similar rhythms, and to make sure that the passages in imitation (marked in the score) are as alike as possible. D: F: at L7 of the cauda, a partly erased stroke appears just after the si=g and before the 4C=agfe; it is om in the transcription. Cauda closing Strophe II (at line 13,2): TD: F: the strokes (rendered here as breath marks) that occur just 4L-5L prior to the final cadence of Strophe II may serve to signal alignment, one possible implication of this is given in the transcription. This cauda provides some particular musical interest in the way it presents sequential material that deviates throughout the course of the melisma, but which still manages to recall the essence of the earlier phrases. Final cauda, closing strophe III (at line 23,3): TD: F: the second phrase of the melisma (L13-L22) may also be read in faster values; an alternative version appears at the end.

SEMINAVIT GRECIA
Conductus (I23/322)

*F, f. 309r (7,40)

D
I
T

[Se - mi - na - vit]
[Se] - mi - na - vit

Se - [Se] - mi - na - vit

gre - ci - a quod men - tis in hor - re - a gre - ci - a quod men - tis in hor - re - a

iam re - po - nit gal - li - a gra - num si - ne pa - le - a iam re - po - nit gal - li - a gra - num si - ne pa - le - a quod se - ni - o non in - te - rit.

a quod se - ni - o non in - te - rit.

quod mun - di mo - la non te - rit. quod nunc us - que
quod mun - di mo - la non te - rit. quod nunc us - que

da - pi - bus fi - de - les ce - le - sti - bus sa - gi -
da - pi - bus fi - de - les ce - le - sti - bus sa - gi -

W1: the opening cauda is partly religated; see the alternative version at end*

First system of musical notation, consisting of two staves. The top staff has a red 'b' above it. Blue brackets and slurs are used throughout to indicate phrasing and articulation.

Second system of musical notation, continuing the two-staff format. Annotations include red boxes containing '[b]', '[c]', and '[d]'. The system concludes with the text '- nat.' on both staves.

Third system of musical notation, labeled 'D II' and 'T'. It features two staves with the lyrics 'Per de-fe - ctum' written below. Red annotations include a box with '[b]' and a box with '[d]'.

Fourth system of musical notation, featuring two staves with the lyrics 'so - la - ris lu - mi - nis il - lu - stra - tur lu - mi - ne nu - mi - nis' written below. Red annotations include boxes with '[b]', '[e]', and '[d]'.

Fifth system of musical notation, featuring two staves with the lyrics 'he - rens dy - o - ni - si - us, in e - cly - psi' written below. Blue brackets and slurs are used for phrasing.

Sixth system of musical notation, featuring two staves with the lyrics 'du - bi - us, ne - que clau - sas di - u cau - sas a - pe - ri - re' written below. Red annotations include a box with '[b]' and a box with '[e]'.

suf-fi- g f suf-fi- f g

| W1: T: religated as a series of mostly 2li up to punctus organi; D: similar ligation to F

i

h i - cit.

h - cit.

III or:

D Na - tu - ra se - cum dis-pu - tans mo-tus

T Na - tu - ra se - cum dis-pu - tans mo-tus

a - stro - rum con-pu - tans; non

a - stro - rum con-pu - tans; non

in - ve-nit quod que - ri- j in - ve-nit quod que - ri-

- tur. sic
- tur. sic

ra - ti - o scru - ti - ni - o de - fi - ci - ens; con - pel - li - tur ut se ra - ti - o scru - ti - ni - o de - fi - ci - ens; con - pel - li - tur ut se

su - pra se que - rat.
su - pra se que - rat.

dum quod que - rit; at - tin - ge - re non te - me - re de - spe -
dum quod que - rit; at - tin - ge - re non te - me - re de - spe -

W1: religation of these two phrases, see at end

o' p' n' p'

†W1: religation for closing phrases of cauda, see alternative at end or:

ALTERNATIVE READINGS FROM W1:

*Opening cauda, religated: W1, f. 164v (155v), IV

| F: D: ded=3si | F: D: d' om

Final cauda (line 23,3), phrases 3-4, religated: W1, f. 166r (157r), II

F: g----- | F: g----- | F: T: g=2li ag; D: si=d

†Final cauda (line 23,3), closing phrases, religated: W1, f. 166r (157r), III

| F: T,D: 3si or: ? | F: T: 3si'; D: 3li+3C,si,siP (=ccdP) | F: D: 2li2li=fd,ef om | F: D: 2li=si a

SEMINAVIT GRECIA

Conductus (I23/322)

F, f. 309r (7,40)

I Seminavit Grecia quod mentis in horrea iam reponit Gallia: granum sine palea, quod senio non interit, quod mundi mola non terit, quod nunc usque dapibus fideles celestibus saginat.	Greece sowed what Gaul now stores in the granary of the mind: grain without chaff, 5 which has not spoiled from age, which the world's millstone grinds not, which even now fattens the faithful at heavenly feasts.
II Per defectum solaris luminis, illustratur lumine numinis herens Dyonisius, in eclypsi dubius, neque clausas diu causas aperire sufficit.	10 Through an obscuration of the sun's light, Denis, transfixed in wonderment at the eclipse, is enlightened by the light of the godhead, and unable to reveal 15 causes long hidden.
III Natura, secum disputans, motus astrorum computans. non invenit quod queritur. Sic ratio, scrutinio deficiens, compellitur ut se supra se querat, dum quod querit, attingere non temere desperat.	Nature, arguing with herself, reckoning the movements of the celestial bodies, finds not what is sought. And so Reason, failing in the 20 inquiry, is forced to seek herself beyond herself, while she despairs, not without cause, of attaining what she seeks.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 40, f. 309r: a2, Strophes I-III, complete, with II-III indicated by capitals.

WI, fasc. 9, no. 79, f. 164v (155v): a2, Strophes I-III, complete, indicated by painted initials; Strophe III is further divided at line 19 by an additional painted initial. Folio 165 (156) has a diagonal slit, perhaps a quarter-centimeter wide, cutting through portions of the top two systems on each side of the leaf; the damage appears to have been caused prior to copying, as no textual or musical information seems to be missing.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: I wish to thank Lena Wahlgren-Smith, Anne Walters Robertson, and Lisa M. Esposito for advice on the translation, and for help with the interpretation of several of the more problematic passages within this extremely complex lyric, particularly the expressions that appear throughout Strophes II and III. Content:

The subject of this poem is St. Denis (Dionysius),¹ the first known bishop of Paris and its patron saint, martyred ca. 250-270 along with his associates Rusticus and Eleutherius. The liturgical feast of the bishop and his companions is celebrated on 9 October, while another, honoring the finding of the three martyrs' remains, occurs on 22 April. A number of the legendary accounts of Denis report that, following his decapitation on the hill of Montmartre, he walked for several miles, bearing his severed head, to the spot where the Benedictine abbey that bears his name was founded during the reign of the Frankish King Dagobert I (reg. 628-637). This abbey served for centuries as the burial site for the royal families of France. From the ninth century, Denis was routinely confounded with two other persons. The first is the biblical Dionysius the Areopagite, supposedly a member of the Areopagus, the judicial tribunal of ancient Athens (so called from the large stone outcropping where the tribunal met that was visible from the Acropolis). This Dionysius was a pagan who was prompted to conversion from hearing the preaching of Saint Paul at Athens (see Acts, 17:34), and who became the first bishop of that city (see Eusebius, History of the Church, book 3, chap. 4, §10; and also 4,23,3). The second is the Christian philosopher now known as Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite, active most probably in the late fifth to early sixth centuries. This Dionysius presented himself as if he were the Pauline convert, and his body of work became an important theological authority in Western Europe after it had been translated into Latin (most notably by John Scotus Eriugena) from a book of his Greek writings given to the Carolingian ruler Louis the Pious (reg. 813-840) by the Byzantine emperor Michael II (reg. 820-829). King Louis donated this book to the abbey of St. Denis, and the efforts of Hilduin (775-840), abbot of the monastery from 815, were formative for the first attempts at Latin translation (generally regarded as inadequate) and as the source of the confusion of identities. The fusion of the various Dionysian personalities granted the Parisian bishop special esteem, and although a number of individuals (including Peter Abelard in his Historia calamitatum) had earlier questioned the identities of the three, the confusion was not effectively laid to rest until centuries later. Attributes for all three of the figures and evocations of the writings of Pseudo-Dionysius are at work in the conductus text.

Versification: The lineation presented for Strophe II does not correspond to that in Anderson, NDRC, 4:xxviii-ixxx. Instead, I have combined his opening quatrain into a 10pp couplet, thus obviating the lack of rhyme in the lines as he gave them. I have also combined two lines from Anderson's lineation into the penultimate and last lines of this strophe; they thus display the same type of internal rhyme and syllable count (though not the accentual pattern) as found in the fourth line of Strophe III, where both Anderson and I agree on the line division. Conceivably, the last line of the poem might also be divided after 23,2 ("temere"), to form a (rather weak) rhyme with line 21 ("attingere") and to draw attention to the incomplete rhyme of 23,3 ("desperat") with the otherwise lone, trisyllabic line 9 ("saginat"), that closes Strophe I. Textual notes: 1-3: reflective of the fusion of bishop Denis with Dionysius the Areopagite: originally from Greece, Denis/Dionysius now rests in Paris. 2,2-4: the "granary (or storehouse) of the mind" is an image typically associated with concepts of memory; Jerome, for instance, uses the expression in his Commentarium in Aggaeum Prophetam (see PL, 25: col. 1464A).² 4: for the oft-mentioned Gospel image of the wheat and chaff, where the threshed wheat, without the chaff, refers to saved souls (in this case connected with Denis/Dionysius), see Matthew, 3:12; Luke, 3:17; it is a favorite image of Philip the Chancellor and appears in a number of other Parisian conductus, motets, and prosulas (see Payne, Motets and Prosulas, 27). 6,2-3: given the citation in line 4, the "millstone (or mill) of the world" is likely a reference to sin or the condemnation that comes with the loss of salvation. In the Bible, the image of the millstones is sometimes used to refer to punishing labor, as in Isaiah, 47:2, and Judges 16:21; or as an instrument of death, as in Judges, 9:53, 2 Samuel, 11:21, Matthew, 18:6, Luke, 17:2, and Apocalypse, 18:21.

¹Note that the otherwise identical spelling of the name of the saint and the later Christian philosopher differs from that of the Greek god, Dionysus.

²*PL*, 25: col 1464A, where Jerome is commenting on Haggai, 1:9: "Sed et haec quoque parva, quae in domum et horreum mentis considerant, exsufflantur a sermone Dei, quasi indigna eius custodia atque tutela" ("But even these things, though small, which they stored in the house and granary of the mind, were blown away by the word of God, as if its protection and safeguarding were unworthy." Haggai, 1:9 begins: "Respexistis ad amplius, et ecce factum est minus; et intulistis in domum, et exsufflavi illud ..." ("You have looked for more, and behold it became less, and you brought it home, and I blew it away.").

10-13: within the Pseudo-Dionysian corpus is a letter to the hierarch Polycarp (conceivably identifiable with the second-century bishop of Smyrna) where the author reports that he and his friend Apollophanes witnessed an inconceivable solar eclipse in Heliopolis, Egypt, that occurred during Christ’s crucifixion (for Eriugena’s Latin translation, see PL, 122: cols. 1179-1181). The event was seen as miraculous. The moon was not at the point in its cycle where an eclipse could occur, and when the moon made contact with the sun, it then reversed its course and moved parallel with it for about three hours. Not being aware of Jesus, the two observers nonetheless supposed some divine intervention had brought about the anomaly. The incident passed into the Dionysian legendarium (see the account of Denis/Dionysius in the Legenda aurea, for instance), where it is related that this fantastic eclipse caused the people of Athens to set up an altar to an “unknown god” (based on the report in Acts, 17:22-23). Subsequently, upon Paul’s coming to Athens, the apostle told Dionysius that the god responsible for the eclipse was the one he had been preaching, and Dionysius realized that the event had occurred during the Crucifixion (see Mark, 15:33; Matthew, 27:45; Luke, 23:44, where the phenomenon is described as a darkness that occurred over all the land). This realization, as well as further legendary miracles that were performed in conjunction with Paul’s visit, led to the Athenian’s conversion. 10-12: note the irony here, since the lack of light caused by the eclipse is what prompts Denis/Dionysius to become enlightened. 12-13: I am extremely grateful for the help of Lena Wahlgren-Smith with this passage in particular; her advice has yielded the rendering given above. Here the meaning of “herens” works together with “dubius” to indicate that Denis/Dionysius was perplexed or at a loss to explain the eclipse (see Lewis and Short, A Latin Dictionary, s.v. “haereo,” II.B.3; and the DMLBS, s.v. “haerere,” 4, both available through <https://logeion.uchicago.edu/>). Another related connotation, suggested to me by Anne Walters Robertson, is provided by the text of the Sandionysian sequence Salve pater Dionysi, Strophe IIa, which mentions that Denis/Dionysius, like the apostle John, has the ability to look directly at the sun (a symbol of the godhead): “Mente legens, celi numen, ut aquila solis lumen non aversa facie” (“elect in mind, godhead of heaven, light of the sun, like the eagle with his face not turned away”). The complete text with Robertson’s translation (from which comes the portion quoted here) is available in The Service-Books of the Royal Abbey of Saint-Denis: Images of Ritual and Music in the Middle Ages, Oxford Monographs on Music (Oxford and New York: Oxford University Press, 1991), 279-83. With this manner of reading, Denis/Dionysius is transfixed by the celestial and divine light of the sun during the eclipse. 14-15: the interpretation offered here is based on the implications that arise in Strophe III (lines 16-23, q.v.), and is also connected with the fantastic occurrence of the eclipse described in the remarks on lines 10-13: since normal reasoning and experience cannot account for the workings of God, which are beyond human understanding and conception, Denis/Dionysius, upon seeing the eclipse, is at a loss to determine its cause or its meaning. 16-23 (Strophe III): this stanza appears to continue the implications of the eclipse from Strophe II by its reference to the movement of celestial bodies in line 17. It also (I would contend) expands upon the expressions in lines 14-15 by bringing to the fore certain Pseudo-Dionysian theological concepts. My thanks go out to Lisa M. Esposito for turning me towards his Mystical Theology as the most direct manifestation of principles that appear to inhere in this strophe (for Eriugena’s Latin translation of the treatise, see PL, 122: cols. 1171-1176). Stated perhaps overly simply, Pseudo-Dionysius regards the godhead as ineffable; it lies beyond any perceivable qualities of essence or knowledge. Therefore, just as with Denis/Dionysius in Strophe II, the actions here of personified Reason and Nature – the latter of which I assume implies natural laws – are insufficient to describe or explain the supra-essence and supra-knowledge of divinity. Moreover, the association of these ideas with the image of the eclipse also appears particularly relevant in terms of the Pseudo-Dionysian depiction of the godhead as a “cloud (or gloom) of unknowing” (see the end of the first chapter of the Mystical Theology, which explicates Moses’s ascent up Mount Sinai to speak with God, based on Exodus, 19): to encounter God is to move to a realm of figurative “darkness” that is beyond light, beyond visibility, and beyond what can be known (described in the opening of Chapter 2 of the Mystical Theology). Therefore, using Pseudo-Dionysius’s favored technique of affirmation through negation (cf. the Mystical Theology, chapters 3 and 5), when one admits that they cannot know the unknowable, they may come to know that which is beyond knowledge.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: F: no variants; those from W1 are collated below; but see the remarks for line 1,2. 1,2: both F and W1 clearly spell “Grecia” with “t” rather than “c,” even when it is compared with other places in the poem where “e” is followed by “c.” Although the custom in my transcriptions is to honor the orthography of the sources as much as possible, I have decided to use “Grecia” here, since its adoption is nearly universal in other presentations and discussions of this text (such as the Anderson and Falck catalogs, Anderson’s edition, the CPI website, DIAMM, AH [21:67, no. 98], and more), and thus less likely to cause confusion. See the similar response in the observations on the text of the conductus Nulli beneficium (H7/229), line 1,2. 2,4: although the more common configuration here would be horreo” or “horreis,” the feminine, first-declension form of the word as found here is also seen (see the DMLBS, s.v. “horreum”). 11,3: W1: luminis. 12,2: W1: dionisius. 13,2: W1: eclipsim. 14, 2-4: W1: “causas” and “clausas” reversed. 17,3: W1: computans. 20,1: W1: defitiens. 23,3: W1: desperet. MUSIC: Syllabic/Melismatic identity: 1. the T of first phrase (L1-L8) in the cauda on “quod” (line 5,1) = 1a. the T of the entire following phrase, which ends with a cum littera portion on “senio” (line 5,2) that corresponds closely with L5-L8 in the first phrase of the cauda. Opening cauda: W1 features a reading with different ligation, presented alternatively at the end of the transcription. Cauda at line 9,1: T: F: the b-flat sigs here and elsewhere never appear in W1. D: F: beginning with the second presentation of the voice-exchange section at L17-L28 of the melisma, the ficta b-flats are taken from the identical prior phrases in the T. Line 10,1 (opens Strophe II): TD: F: the b-flat sigs here (in force until the system change in F after the second syllable of line 11,1) also do not appear in W1. Cauda at line 15,2: TD: FW1: the two cauda phrases on “[suff]fi[ci]t” consisting of regular series of 2li, that undergo voice exchange from L8-L16 and L16-L24, are read here as upbeat phrases rather than in mode 2; the choice was made due to the lack of a concluding 3li, expected in mode 2.³ TD: W1: in the first half of the cauda, the second voice-exchange passage is om. The second half of the cauda, beginning with L25 with TL values in the T, is religated in W1 as a series of 2li; the D has largely the same ligation as F, which suggests that a change in rhythm or mode is not likely for W1, since the faster values that would result in the D do not appear to be implied by any expected way of reading the ligatures as they stand. Cauda at line 18,4: D: F: the 2li=gb figure at L13-L14, several notes prior to the punctus organi, appears to be written ab, although this protrudes into the right margin and the pitches are somewhat difficult to discern; the clearer reading from W1 is used here. Lines 19,2-20,2: TD: FW1: the doubled unison si=g notes on “[compelli]tur” at the end of this phrase (connected with dashed ties in the transcription – not necessarily implying that the second note of the pair be silent), along with the completely syllabic disposition of the melodies in both parts suggest that a reading of this passage in mode 1 might be applicable; see the similar features found throughout the conductus Nicholai presulis (F27/217) and in the four-voiced Vetus abit littera (B3/379) in F-1. Line 21,2: D: W1: 3 lower beginning with “[ut] se [supra]” up through the penultimate phrase (to L10) of the cauda at line 21,5 (“querat”). Final cauda (at line 23,3): TD: W1: religation and slight variance in the third and fourth phrases of “[de]spe[rat]” from L15-L22, see the alternative reading from this MS given at the end of the transcription. TD: W1: the ending phrases of the closing cauda from L51 to the end are partially religated; see the alternative version from this source at the end. D: F: the decision to use two L values to begin the 3li+3C=ecd+cba gesture at L63 of the cauda just before the closing punctus organi is the result of favoring the reading of the 3si in the T below; an alternative version privileging the ligation in the D appears above the staff.

³On this point, see Ernest H. Sanders, “The Notation of Notre Dame Organa tripla and quadrupla,” in Le notazioni della polifonia vocale dei secoli IX-XVII: Antologia, Parte prima, secoli IX-XIV, Daniele Sabaino and Stefano Aresi, eds. (Pisa: Edizioni ETS: 2006), p. 68 under §10).

SONET VOX ECCLESIE SONET

Conductus (I28/337)

F, f. 310r (7,41)

The musical score is arranged in systems. Each system contains two staves for voices (Soprano and Tenor) and a lute accompaniment. The lyrics are written below the vocal staves. Red boxes with letters (a, b, c, d, d', e, e', f, f', g, g') are placed above specific notes, likely indicating performance instructions or editorial changes. Blue brackets and slurs are used to group notes and indicate phrasing. The score concludes with the syllable '-o.' on both vocal staves.

Soprano: [So-net vox ec-cle-si-e. so-net in ho-no-rem lar-gi-to-ris glo-ri-e na-ti pre-ter mo-rem. bos co-gno-vit ho-di-e su-um pos-ses-so-rem. vi-sum in pre-se-pi-o. -o.

Tenore: [So-net vox ec-cle-si-e. so-net in ho-no-rem lar-gi-to-ris glo-ri-e na-ti pre-ter mo-rem. bos co-gno-vit ho-di-e su-um pos-ses-so-rem. vi-sum in pre-se-pi-o. -o.

Lute accompaniment: (Musical notation for the lute part, including tablature and rhythmic notation)

D
II
T
In - est gre - gi ra - ti - o co - gni - to pa - sto - re. ma - net in - cor -

- ru - pti - o na - to sal - va - to - re. fu - git de - spe - ra - ti - o
- ru - pti - o na - to sal - va - to - re. fu - git de - spe - ra - ti - o

vi - so re - dem - pto - re sub gre - gis cu - sto - di - vi - so re - dem - pto - re sub gre - gis cu - sto - di -

h

h
- a.
- a.

D
III
T
Psal - lat er - go se - du - lo su - o grex pa - sto - ri.
Psal - lat er - go se - du - lo su - o grex pa - sto - ri.

li - ti - get pro ba - cu - lo pars u - tra - que cho - ri.

li - ti - get pro ba - cu - lo pars u - tra - que cho - ri.

*TD: W1: differing ligation and some pitches, see alternative at end

vhe si in er - ga - stu - lo per - mit - ta - tur

vhe si in er - ga - stu - lo per - mit - ta - tur

W1: in faster values, see at end

†W1: differs slightly; see at end

mo - ri ho - stis a - va - ri - ti -

mo - ri ho - stis a - va - ri - ti -

mo - ri ho - stis a - va - ri - ti -

mo - ri ho - stis a - va - ri - ti -

- e.]

- e.

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*Cauda at line 19,1 ("ve"): W1, f. 171v (162v), IV

Final cauda, second phrase, faster values: W1, f. 171v (162v), V

†W1: final cauda, third phrase: W1, f. 171v (162v), VI

[ve]

ve

(avariti) - (a.)

(avariti) - (a.)

(avariti) - (a.)

(avariti) - (a.)

SONET VOX ECCLESIE SONET
Conductus (I28/337)

F, f. 310r (7,41)

- | | |
|--|--|
| I Sonet vox ecclesie.
Sonet in honorem largitoris glorie,
nati preter morem.
Bos cognovit hodie
suum possessorem,
visum in presepio. | Let the voice of the church resound.
Let it sound forth in honor of glory's benefactor, born contrary to custom.
5 Today the ox recognized his owner,
having seen him in the manger. |
| II Inest gregi ratio, cognito pastore.
Manet incorruptio,
nato salvatore.
Fugit desperatio,
viso redemptore
sub gregis custodia. | Understanding suffuses the flock as it recognizes the shepherd.
10 Incorruptibility endures with the birth of the savior.
Hopelessness flees upon seeing the redeemer
in care of his flock. |
| III Psallat ergo sedulo suo grex pastori.
Litiget pro baculo
pars utraque chori.
Vhe, si in ergastulo permittatur mori
hostis avaritie! | 15 So let the flock sing zealously to its shepherd.
Let both sides of the choir vie for the staff of office.
Woe be it, if the enemy 20 of greed is allowed to die in prison! |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 41, f. 310r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, subsequent strophes indicated by capitals.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 85, f. 171r (162r): a2; Strophes I-III, complete, shown by painted initials, with a single decorative tendril for the beginning letter of III.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Note: this work should not be confused with the two-voiced conductus with the same incipit: Sonet vox ecclesie laudes (P48 / -),¹ transmitted in two sources in Cividale del Friuli (I-CFm Cod. LVI and I-CFm Cod. LVIII).

Notes on the Text: 1: the “voice of the church” is its clergy. 3: the “benefactor of glory” is Christ; cf. the parallel expression “enemy of avarice” in line 21, which presumably also refers to Jesus. 4: Jesus’s birth by the Virgin Mary was an unnatural, irrational phenomenon. The conceit is rife throughout the conductus repertory;

¹This is the number given to Sonet vox ecclesie laudes according to Anderson’s handwritten revisions to his catalog and in his published edition of the piece (NDRC, 10:xxx, 96, 108). He had reckoned it as P46 in the published version of his catalog.

see, for example, the opening lines of Parit preter morem (E12/261), and for a selection of some additional nods to this commonplace, consult the textual notes to the conductus Lene spirat spiritus (H16/194), line 5. 5-6: for the source of these lines, which also specify that this piece was written in celebration of Christmas, see Isaiah, 1:3: “Cognovit bos possessorem suum, et asinus praesepe domini sui; Israhel non cognovit; populus meus non intellexit” (“The ox knew its owner, and the ass its lord’s manger; but Israel did not know; my people did not understand.”). Although these two animals appear countless times in representations of the Nativity from as far back as the fourth century, their presence has no support in any canonical biblical accounts of the event. Based on interpretations of the cited passage of Isaiah, the symbolic and representative associations of the ox and ass are manifold, but most typically they appear as respective figures for Jews and Gentiles – and by extension the Old and New Law.² 8-9: continuing the metaphors of livestock and proprietor from lines 5-6, this passage is a clear reference to John, 10:14: “Ego sum pastor bonus: et cognosco meas, et cognoscunt me meae” (“I am the good shepherd; I know mine, and mine know me”), as well as the related expression of John, 10:11. 10-11: possibly a reference to Mary’s retention of her virginity with the birth of Jesus. Also likely is the idea of the incorruptibility of the human spirit that seeks refuge in Christ, as in Romans, 2:7; 1;³ and the related passages in 2 Timothy, 1:10;⁴ Wisdom, 6:20; Corinthians, 9:25; and 15:52-53; Ephesians, 6:24; and 1 Peter, 1:23. 17-18: Anderson (NDRC, 5:xxxiii) reasonably interprets this passage as a reference to the Feast of Fools, where lower members of the choir would assume the duties of the higher officials, represented by the staff of office, from after Christmas through New Year’s Day. For further references to the Feast of Fools, see the notes for the conductus Ysyas cecinit (C4/188), lines 25 and 27. The reference to the two parts of the choir (“pars utraque chori”) in line 18 suggests the characteristic structural layout of the stalls of a church choir into north and south sections on either side of the central aisle – that is, on the corresponding left and right positions when one is facing the main altar. These are designated respectively as cantoris (“belonging to the cantor”) and decani (“belonging to the dean”). The terms refer to the common seating plan of these cathedral chapter officials within the choir (see Wright, Music and Ceremony, 98-100).⁵ 19-21: rather a difficult passage to construe; Anderson, (NDRC, 4:xxxiii) offers a conjecture that suggests its linkage to the flight into Egypt undertaken by the Holy Family (Matthew, 3:13-23), the allegorical connection of this event with the flight of the Israelites from the “prison” of Egypt in Exodus 6:6 and 6:7, and the passage’s conceivable liturgical associations with the possible Feast of Fools reference in lines 17-18. In the latter case, Anderson considers that the regular bishop, being temporarily replaced by another authority, would effectively be “imprisoned.” The temporal proximity of the flight to Christ’s circumcision (reported in Luke, 2:21) may also impinge upon the associations of these various passages and the conductus poem. There may additionally be nods towards the stories of the imprisonments of the prophet Jeremiah by King Zedekiah in Jeremiah, 37 and 38, and the prophet Daniel in Daniel, 6, although there is no particular connection in this set of correspondences to the expression “enemy of avarice” that occurs in line 21. Another possible referent could be John the Baptist, especially in terms of his preaching against greed in Luke, 3:10-14, and his own imprisonment by the tetrarch Herod ²See, for example, Jerome’s Commentary on Isaiah, book 1, drawn here from PL, 24: col. 27B-C: “Bos iuxta anagogen refertur ad Israel; qui Legis portavit iugum, et mundum animal est. Asinus, peccatorum onere praegravatus, gentium populus accipitur, cui Dominus loquebatur: ‘Venite ad me omnes qui laboratis et onerati estis; et ego reficiam uos.’ (Matthew, 12 [recte 11]:28)” (“The ox, according to the anagogical [prophetic, eschatological] sense, refers to Israel, which bore the yoke of the [Old] Law, and is a clean animal. The ass, weighed down by the burden of sins, is taken to be the Gentile people, to whom the Lord said: ‘Come to me, all you that labor, and are burdened, and I will refresh you [Matthew 11:28].’”).

³Romans, 2:7: “Iis quidem qui secundum patientiam boni operis, gloriam, et honorem, et incorruptionem quaerunt, vitam aeternam” (“To them indeed, who according to patience in good work, seek glory and honour and incorruption, eternal life.”).

⁴2 Timothy, 1:10: “Manifestata est autem nunc per illuminationem Salvatoris nostri Jesu Christi, qui destruxit quidem mortem, illuminavit autem vitam, et incorruptionem per Evangelium” (“But is now made manifest by the illumination of our Saviour Jesus Christ, who has destroyed death, and has brought to light life and incorruption by the gospel.”).

⁵Craig Wright, Music and Ceremony at Notre Dame of Paris: 500-1550 (Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 1989).

Antipas (Matthew, 14:1-12; Mark, 6:17-29; Luke, 3:19-20; John, 3:24). However, the expression “hostis avaritie” seems to recall the expression “largitoris glorie” of line 3, which could indicate a possible connection between the two items, and thus link the “hostis” phrase more closely to Christ. On Jesus speaking against greed, see, e.g., Luke, 12:15: “Dixitque ad illos: ‘Videte et cavete ab omni avaritia; quia non in abundantia cuiusquam vita eius est ex his quae possidet.’ ” (“And he said to them: ‘Take heed and beware of all avarice; for one’s life does not consist in the abundance of things which he possesses.’ ”). Conceivably then, the expressions in these lines might suggest that, should the company of clergy (the flock) not recognize Christ (their shepherd and the “enemy of greed”) as their divine redeemer, he would be compelled figuratively to suffer death, as would any ordinary individual “imprisoned” within mortal flesh.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. MUSIC: Repetition: This piece shows relatively frequent melodic correspondences between phrases, often in pairs and involving both voices, particularly in the caudae (where, interestingly, the short penultimate melisma on “vhe” of line 19,1 reappears somewhat later as the second phrase of the closing cauda at line 28), but also on occasion in a few cum littera segments (note the analogous situation where the T of 6 – “suum possessorem” – recurs as line 11 – “nato salvatore”). Line 3,2: D: F: 2 higher for the first syllable of “glorie,” correction is based on W1, which shows: si,siP=a,Pa. Strophe I, closing cauda (at line 7): D: W1: in the penultimate ligature of the melisma’s fifth phrase at L20-L21, the 1 of 2liP=d, 2 higher than F; this makes better consonance with the T, but as the note passes by quickly, I have decided not to change the F reading. TD: W1: the final phrase in both T and D parts from L30-L37 shows different ligations from F and an absence of plicas, but no likely change in rhythm: T: W1: si,2li,si,3li,2si; D: W1: si,2li,3li,2li,2si. Line 11,2: T: W1: generally 2 lower except for the cadence: si,2li(with 1 el),si=e,fe,d; D: W1: pitched slightly differently: 2li, 4li,si=ab,cabc,d. Line 12,2: T: F: for the P figure on the last syllable of “desperatio,” a descending P was originally entered, then corrected; the initial reading adopted here is confirmed by W1. Line 13: T: F: 2si,2li,si+2li,si+siP,si=d,c,ba,g,g+gf,g+Pg,e; modified with reference to W1, which offers a slightly more consonant reading: 2si,2li,2si,2li,si=d,c,ag,f,g,gf,e. Strophe II, closing cauda (at line 14): T: F: in the third phrase at L8 the 1 of 3li is written as g; the more preferable reading of f used here is from W1. Line 17,3: for the last two sylls of “baculo”: T: W1: 2 lower; D: W1: 2 higher. Cauda at 19,1: TD: FW1: with slight variants, this short melisma on “vhe” is repeated later as the second phrase of the cauda that closes Strophe III (at line 21, q.v.); W1 shows different ligations and variation of a few pitches, see the alternative reading at the end of the transcription; D: F: the final 3li figure=abd; the more consonant bcd is supplied from W1. Line 21,1: T: W1: a,Pa,c for “hostis.” Final cauda (closing Strophe 3 at line 21,2): TD: W1: the second phrase (L4-L11) in the T is written in mode 1 rather than 5, which compels a slightly irregular interpretation of the D ligatures; this varied reading is given at the end of the transcription. TD: FW1: the third phrase (L12-L19) essentially repeats the earlier melisma on “vhe” at line 19,1; for this same second phrase, W1 is different in some minor details, which introduce a dissonance not seen in F; this portion is also provided at the end of the transcription, where it may be compared both with the F reading at this point and the corresponding cauda passage at line 19, 1.

HAC IN DIE GEDEONIS

Conductus (H26/149)

F, f. 311r (7,42)

I
D [Hac in di - e ge - de - - o - nis

T
Hac in di - e ge - de - - o - nis

ros mun - di no - vit

ros mun - di no - vit

a - di -

a - di -

- tus.

- tus.

per quem prin - ceps ba - bi - lo -

per quem prin - ceps ba - bi - lo -

- nis fit ba - bi - lo - ni sub - or: 7

- nis fit ba - bi - lo - ni sub - or: 7

Musical score for two voices, Soprano and Alto. The Soprano part is marked with a red box containing 'd'' and the Alto part with 'c''. Both parts have a red box containing 'or: 7' above the first measure. The lyrics are '- di -'.

Musical score for two voices, Soprano and Alto. The Soprano part is marked with red boxes containing 'd', 'd', and 'd''' above the first three measures. The Alto part is marked with red boxes containing 'c', 'c', and 'c''' above the first three measures. The lyrics are '- tus.'

Musical score for Soprano II and Tenor. The Soprano II part is marked with a red box containing 'D' and the Tenor part with a red box containing 'T'. The lyrics are 'Ver - bum ca - ro de - us ho - mo'.

Musical score for two voices, Soprano and Alto. The lyrics are 'cre - ans fit cre - a - si'.

Musical score for two voices, Soprano and Alto. The lyrics are '- tum quod in vir - gi - na - li do - mo fu - it hu - ma - na -'.

Musical score for two voices, Soprano and Alto. The lyrics are 'si si'.

- tum.
- tum.

III

D Ger - mi - na - vit ra - dix yes - se. ut hu - ma - num
T Ger - mi - na - vit ra - dix yes - se. ut hu - ma - num

e

de - us es - se ter - mi - na - de - us es - se ter - mi - na -

g g f f - ret
- ret

per - ne - ces - se qui cum su - is su - us per - ne - ces - se qui cum su - is su - us

i (i)
h (h) es - se vo - lu -
es - se vo - lu -

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*Final punctus organi (at line 13):

a. W1, f. 156v (147v), I

b. CH-SGs 383, p. 164, IV

HAC IN DIE GEDEONIS

Conductus (H26/149)

F, f. 311r (7,42)

- | | | | |
|-----|--|----|---|
| I | Hac in die Gedeonis
ros mundi novit aditus, per quem princeps Babilonis fit Babiloni subditus. | | On this day, the dew of Gideon gained access to the world.
Because of this, the prince of Babylon becomes subject to Babylon. |
| II | Verbum caro, deus homo, creans fit creatum,
quod in virginali domo
fuit humanatum. | 5 | Word becomes flesh, God becomes man, the creator becomes a creature that was made mortal
in a virginal dwelling. |
| III | Germinavit radix Yesse;
ut humanum deus esse terminaret pernesse, qui cum suis suus esse
voluit. | 10 | The root of Jesse sprouted forth.
Since God determined it was truly indispensable to be human, he wished to be one of his own along with his own. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 42, f. 311r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with II-III indicated by capitals.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 71, f. 155v (146v): a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with each strophe beginning with painted initials, and with Strophe I divided with an additional painted initial opening line 3, as in CH-SGs 383.

Ma, fasc. 4, no. 7, f. 78r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with space left before each stanza for opening initials that were never executed.

CH-SGs 383 (Sankt Gallen, Stiftsbibliothek, Cod. Sang. 383), collection 2, no. 2 (no. 6),¹ p. 162: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with each strophe beginning with painted red initials (that of II is noticeably smaller than the others, consistent in size with the letters surrounding it), and with an additional painted initial opening line 3 (this one, unusually, blue-green), as with W1. As is typical of this source, the ligation of ornate passages, particularly in the caudae, does not appear to encode rhythmic information as precisely as the manuscripts more closely associated with the Notre Dame repertory.

Text only:

F-T 1471 (Troyes, Médiathèque du Grand Troyes, MS 1471; [olim] Troyes, Bibliothèque municipale, MS 1471), no. 9, f. Dr (=114r – second back flyleaf, recto); text only of Strophes I-III, complete; the MS is ruled to accommodate music a2, with empty space allotted for initials for each stanza; staves were never entered. This source was unknown to Anderson and is thus not listed in his catalog or edition; its variants from F are collated below.

¹Pieces are cited here first by collection and number within the collection, according to their appearance within the two series of Notre Dame conductus that appear within CH-SG 383 from pp. 135-144 and 158-176 (4 and 10 pieces respectively). These two groups of pieces are separated by a collection of Sanctus and Agnus tropes, some of which are also in W1, fasc. 10. The following number in parentheses then gives the enumeration of the piece according to the total tally of Notre Dame conductus within this manuscript.

The opening line of Hac in die Gedeonis, slightly modified in order to supply a rhyme for the following verse, opens the conductus Hac in die rege nato (I30/150), whose text is constructed nearly completely from incipits of other conductus. For sources and further correspondences, see just below.

Music only:

In addition to the textual parallelism noted just above, the music of both D and T for the entire opening line of Hac in die Gedeonis is equivalent to the setting of the poetic line that follows the initial cauda of Hac in die rege nato. The latter piece appears in these sources:

F, fasc. 7, no. 73, f. 332r: a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 89, f. 174v (165v): a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1-2: The dew that collected on Gideon’s fleece, as recounted in Judges 6:36-40, is symbolic of Christ and God’s power; the fleece itself is a figure of the Virgin Mary. For several instances among many within the Notre Dame repertory of this frequently encountered allegory, see the remarks on the text for the conductus Flos de spina procreatur ... misso rore (H29/127), line 3, and the references it offers. As a result, I consider the opening couplet to refer principally to Jesus’s incarnation, rather than invoking any festival or similar remembrance devoted to Gideon himself, who enjoys no formal celebration within the western church. Accordingly, I find unsatisfactory other translations that render the Latin phrases as “day of Gideon” and “dew of the world” (as in Anderson, NDRC, 3:xxxii, or in the liner notes by Christopher Page to the compact audio disc recording Jerusalem: Vision of Peace, performed under Page’s direction by the ensemble Gothic Voices [London: Hyperion, 1998], CDA67039, p. 10; the work appears on track 6 of the CD). It should also be noted for clarity that “aditus” [2,4] is fourth declension and thus either nominative or genitive singular, or nominative or accusative plural. The second line therefore literally reads: “the dew learned/recognized/came to know the entrances/passages/avenues of the world.” Thus, the reading offered here is that Christ (“the dew”) entered into the world with his incarnation as a human being. The final lines, 10-13, also seem to accord with this interpretation. 3-4: The prince of Babylon is the devil (cf. the same expression in the conductus Deduc Syon uberrimas (G8/85), line 27, a modern attribution to Philip the Chancellor). Babylon, though typically redolent of worldly sin, and often used as a metaphor for Rome in New Testament scriptures and especially in the book of Revelation (Apocalypse), serves here as a figure for the realm of the devil and the abode of the damned souls who inhabit it after their death; for this connotation, see Revelation, 18:2.² Thus, with Christ’s birth, the devil (the prince of Babylon) is to be defeated through Christ’s eventual death and resurrection and thus becomes subject to and imprisoned in the very domain he had earlier ruled. 5: see John, 1:1;³ and John, 1:14.⁴ 6: cf. the similar expression in the conductus Parit preter morem (E12/261), lines 24-25: “Mira genitura, / fit creans creatura” (“With a wondrous birth, the creator becomes a creature”). In contrast to other translations, I read 6,3 (“creatum”) as neuter, meaning literally “the thing that was created,” and I construe “quod” of line 7,1 as a relative neuter pronoun with “creatum” as its antecedent, rather than as a conjunction meaning “because.” 7-8: God’s human incarnation in Jesus occurred with the acceptance of his Word (Christ) by the Virgin Mary; see Luke, 1:38: “Dixit autem Maria: ‘Ecce ancilla Domini: fiat mihi secundum verbum tuum.’ ” (“And Mary said: ‘Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it done to me according to thy word.’ ”). 9: the root, tree, or stem of Jesse signifies Jesus’s ancestral lineage from Jesse through King David; for these images, see Isaiah, 11:1;⁵ cf. also the verse text of the responsory Stirps Iesse. Virgo dei (O16).⁶ 10-13: i.e., with the incarnation, God, in his determination to save mankind, became human and dwelt among humans, as in John, 1:14, quoted above in the remarks for line 5, and in John, 3:16.⁷ Also, there may be some reflection of the sentiments of these poetic lines in John, 17:24: “Pater, quos dedisti mihi, volo ut ubi sum ego, et illi sint mecum ...” (“Father, I wish that where I am, they also whom you have given me may be with me ...”).

²Revelation, 18:2: “Et exclamavit in fortitudine, dicens: ‘Cecidit, cecidit Babylon magna: et facta est habitatio daemoniorum, et custodia omnis spiritus immundi, et custodia omnis volucris immundae, et odibilis’ ” (“And he [the angel] cried out with a strong voice, saying: ‘Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen; and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every unclean spirit, and the hold of every unclean and hateful bird.’ ”).

³John, 1:1: “In principio erat Verbum, et Verbum erat apud Deum, et Deus erat Verbum” (“In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.”).

⁴John, 1:14: “Et Verbum caro factum est, et habitavit in nobis ...” (“And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us ... ”).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: Because F-T 1471 was unknown to Anderson, its variants are collated here. 1,1: F-T 1471: [H]ac, capital initial never executed. 3,1: F-T 1471: [P]er; space is left for an apparent capital initial, as in W1 and CH-SGs 383. 3,4: F-T 1471: ba[bilo]nis, syllables lost to apparent worm damage. 4,1: F-T 1471: apparently “sic” for “fit,” particularly evident when compared to the obvious “fit” of line 6,2. 5,1: F-T 1471: [V]erbum, initial never entered and part of the final letter lost through worm damage. 8,2: F-T 1471: humana[tum], last syllable either not entered or worn away; the latter seems more probable, as the expected period that would conclude this line seems to survive. 9,1: F-T 1471: [G]erminavit, initial never entered. 9,3: F-T 1471: iesse for “yesse. 11,2: F-T 1471: written so as to imply two words “per necesse,” in every source but CH-SGs 383 and perhaps W1; the use of the single-word form here is preferred in terms of the additional intensity it brings to the statement. 13,1: F-T 1471: this clearly appears as “noluit,” which negates the whole sentence; this would certainly seem to be an error. MUSIC: General remarks: The setting is especially florid in the D, with numerous organal passages and frequent figures of three or more notes over syllables in cum littera sections. The frequency of sequential patterns (several of them marked in the score) is common in both cum and sine littera portions and in both parts. Series of 3li figures also obtains in the T more than might be expected, whereas the D often offers 4C gestures (see, e.g., the music over line 2,1 and the second syllable of 2,3); this last feature is expanded to exceptional proportions in the conjunctura chain that makes up the first part of the final punctus organi in both F and Ma (the other MSS differ at this point, see below). Line 1,1-3: D: CH-SGs 383: the setting of the first four syllables of the poem is simplified: si,2siP, 2li=d,eP,bP,cd. 1,3: D: F,Ma: 3C,2li,si=cbabc,d; the more consonant reading of W1 for these two syllables (4li,si=babc,d) is adopted here; for the CH-SGs 383 reading, see the remarks for line 1,1-3, above. 3,2-4: T: the sequential chain of five consecutive descending 3C/3li figures in alternation is noteworthy. Cauda on line 4,3 (closing Strophe I): there is an strikingly emphatic triple statement of the opening motive in both the T and D in the sixth phrase of this cauda from L25-L32 (marked above the staves). Lines 9-10 (beginning Strophe III): Notice how the exact T phrase of line 9,1 moves to the D for line 10,1-2. Final punctus organi (at line 13): D: W1,CH-SGs 383: these two sources offer a different version of the closing flourish, both of which omit the expanding series of falling conjunctura figures given in F and Ma; see the alternative versions given at the end of the score.

⁵Isaiah, 11:1: “et egredietur virga de radice Iesse, et flos de radice eius ascendet” (“And a shoot shall come forth out of the root of Jesse, and a flower shall rise up out of his root.”).

⁶Responsory Stirps Iesse. Virgo dei (O16), opening of verse text: “Virgo dei genetrix virga est, flos filius ejus” (“The shoot [of Jesse] is the virgin mother of God, the flower is her son”).

⁷John, 3:16: “Sic enim Deus dilexit mundum, ut Filium suum unigenitum daret: ut omnis qui credit in eum, non pereat, sed habeat vitam aeternam” (“For God so loved the world, as to give his only begotten Son; that whosoever believes in him, may not perish, but may have life everlasting.”).

LEGEM DEDIT OLIM DEUS

Conductus (I21/192)

F, f. 312r (7,43) W1, CH-SGs 383:

Soprano: [Le - gem de - dit o - lim de - us
 Tenor: Le - gem de - dit o - lim de - us

Soprano: ut pec - ca - tum tem - - pe - ra - Tenor: ut pec - ca - tum tem - - pe - ra -

Soprano: - ret. ser - vum mi - sit Tenor: - ret. ser - vum mi - sit

Soprano: he - ly - se - us ut de - fun - ctum su - sci - ta -
 Tenor: he - ly - se - us ut de - fun - ctum su - sci - ta -

*W1: differing ligations for third and sixth phrases, see alternatives at end Alternative ligation options for the third and sixth phrases, marked with red boxes: c, d, a, b (=a\''.

Alternative ligation options for the third and sixth phrases, marked with red boxes: c, d\'' and b\'' (=a\''.

- ret.

II

S In - cur - va - tur

T In - cur - va - tur

S he - ly - se - us. et de - fun - ctus su - sci - ta -

T he - ly - se - us. et de - fun - ctus su - sci - ta -

S - tur. in - car - na - tur ho - mo

T - tur. in - car - na - tur ho - mo

mode 3; mode 1 in W1; CH-SGs 383: shortened with divergent D; see at end*

S de - us. et pec - ca - tum ter - mi - na -

T de - us. et pec - ca - tum ter - mi - na -

| mode 1 in both F/W1

S - tur.

T - tur.

S - tur.

T - tur.

III

D
In - mu - tan - tur na - to re - ge lex et le - gis o - pe - ra.

T
In - mu - tan - tur na - to re - ge lex et le - gis o - pe - ra.

Detailed description: This block shows the beginning of section III. It consists of two staves: a Soprano (D) and a Tenor (T). The lyrics are "In - mu - tan - tur na - to re - ge lex et le - gis o - pe - ra." The music is in a minor key with a common time signature. There are various annotations above the notes, including red boxes with letters 'k', 'l', and 'm', and blue brackets indicating phrasing. A red 'III' is placed to the left of the Soprano staff.

et in - tran - te no - va le - ge ex - clu - dun - tur ve - te - ra.

et in - tran - te no - va le - ge ex - clu - dun - tur ve - te - ra.

Detailed description: This block continues the musical score for section III. It shows the Soprano and Tenor parts for the lyrics "et in - tran - te no - va le - ge ex - clu - dun - tur ve - te - ra." The notation includes phrasing brackets and red boxes with letters 'k', 'l', and 'm'.

IV

D
est pro le - ge lit - te - ra - li spi - ri - ta - lis gra - ti - a.

T est pro le - ge lit - te - ra - li spi - ri - ta - lis gra - ti - a.

Detailed description: This block shows the beginning of section IV. It consists of two staves: a Soprano (D) and a Tenor (T). The lyrics are "est pro le - ge lit - te - ra - li spi - ri - ta - lis gra - ti - a." The music continues with phrasing brackets and red boxes with letters 'o' and 'n'. A red 'IV' is placed to the left of the Soprano staff.

D
et pro mor - te tem - po - ra - li e - ter - na - lis glo - ri -

T
et pro mor - te tem - po - ra - li e - ter - na - lis glo - ri -

Detailed description: This block continues the musical score for section IV. It shows the Soprano and Tenor parts for the lyrics "et pro mor - te tem - po - ra - li e - ter - na - lis glo - ri -". The notation includes phrasing brackets and red boxes with letters 'o', 'n', and 'a'.

†D: CH-SGs 383: a different D phrase here, see at end

D
et pro mor - te tem - po - ra - li e - ter - na - lis glo - ri -

T
et pro mor - te tem - po - ra - li e - ter - na - lis glo - ri -

Detailed description: This block continues the musical score for section IV. It shows the Soprano and Tenor parts for the lyrics "et pro mor - te tem - po - ra - li e - ter - na - lis glo - ri -". The notation includes phrasing brackets and red boxes with letters 'q' and 'p'.

D
et pro mor - te tem - po - ra - li e - ter - na - lis glo - ri -

T
et pro mor - te tem - po - ra - li e - ter - na - lis glo - ri -

Detailed description: This block continues the musical score for section IV. It shows the Soprano and Tenor parts for the lyrics "et pro mor - te tem - po - ra - li e - ter - na - lis glo - ri -". The notation includes phrasing brackets and red boxes with letters 's' and 'r'.

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*Cauda closing Strophe I (at line 4,3)

a. WI, f. 162v (153v), III; differing D ligations in the third and sixth phrases as given below, prompting faster rhythms in the T

b. CH-SGs 383, p. 136, II; differing ligation throughout (assuming rhythm is intended), shortened third and sixth phrases, no punctus organi, barlines in MS

Cauda closing Strophe II (at line 8,3):

a. WI, f. 162v (153v), VI; mode 1 throughout (Tt: "terminatur" in F,Ch-SGs 383)

b. CH-SGs 383, p. 137, I; shortened, with a more divergent D set over different phrases in the T, mode 2? (assuming a rhythm was intended), barlines in MS

†Final cauda (at line 16,2): CH-SGs 383, p. 138, II: differing ligation (assuming a rhythm was intended), different D for second phrase (error?), barlines in MS

[D: f3 clef precedes; subsequent "r" and "r'" T phrases entered here, rather than expected prior T "p" phrase

Musical score for the first system, featuring two staves (D and T) with various annotations and ligatures. The D staff has a red box 'q' above the first measure and red boxes 'r' above the second and third measures. The T staff has a red box 'p' above the first measure and a red box 'q'' above the second measure. Blue brackets group notes across measures. A blue dashed line indicates a ligation between notes in the T staff. The text '(glori) -' is written below the T staff.

| D: correct a4 clef

Musical score for the second system, featuring two staves (D and T) with various annotations and ligatures. The D staff has red boxes 's' above the first, second, and third measures, and a red box 's'' above the fourth measure. The T staff has red boxes 'r' above the first, second, and third measures, and a red box 'r'' above the fourth measure. Blue brackets group notes across measures. The text '- (a.)' is written below the T staff.

††Final punctus organi closing Strophe III (at line 16,2): W1, f. 163r (154r), VI; a more ornate flourish

Musical score for the third system, featuring two staves (D and T) with various annotations and ligatures. The D staff has a blue dashed line indicating a flourish. The T staff has a red box 'r' above the first measure. The text '(glori) -' is written below the T staff, and '- a.' is written below the D staff.

LEGEM DEDIT OLIM DEUS

Conductus (I21/192)

F, f. 312r (7,43)

I	Legem dedit olim deus ut peccatum temperaret. Servum misit Helyseus ut defunctum suscitaret.		God enacted a law long ago in order to temper sin. Elisha sent his servant to raise the dead boy.
II	Incurvatur Helyseus. et defunctus suscitatur. Incarnatur homo deus. et peccatum terminatur.	5	Elisha bends over him, and the dead boy is restored; God is embodied as man and sin is cancelled.
III	Inmutantur nato rege lex et legis opera, et, intrante nova lege, excluduntur vetera.	10	The law and the workings of the law are transformed through the birth of a king, and, with the entrance of the new law, ancient matters are shut out.
[IV]	Est, pro lege litterali, spiritualis gratia, et, pro morte temporali, eternalis gloria.	15	In place of the written law is spiritual grace, and, for earthly death, eternal glory.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 43, f.312r: a2; Strophes I-[IV] complete; as in all other applicable sources of this piece no indication to signal the beginning of Strophe [IV]; stanzas II-III are indicated by conventional capitals. This and the succeeding work in F, Lux illuxit gratiosa (H27/201), appear in the same order in the strikingly similar looking MS E-Mn 6528.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 77, f. 162v (153v): a2; Strophes I-[IV] complete; Strophes I and II have painted initials and there is added tracery for the first letter of I, as well as some decorative strokes for II, not typical for many of the opening initials in this portion of the MS, but also present in the very next work, Novum sibi texuit (I22/225); Strophe III opens mildly with an upper-case letter, but there is nothing special to signal [IV].

E-Mn 6528 (Madrid, Biblioteca Nacional, MS 6528),¹ no. 1, back flyleaf, with the remains of the piece beginning on what was originally the verso side of this repurposed folio (which is now numbered f. 124r); it is also presently bound upside down: a2; fragmentary, although the leaf itself is essentially complete. The survival of Legem dedit in this source is not reported in Anderson's catalog or edition, since these took account only of the original verso side of the folio. As a result its variants with the version in F are reported below. The absence of the source from Anderson's work is due to the fact that the leaf had earlier been attached (with its original recto side down) to the back cover of its host volume, and until recently also had a glued-down flap of parchment folded over its surface that obscured about one third of the left side of the leaf's recto. The now completely visible contents of the original recto side of this back flyleaf contain portions of Legem dedit from the second syllable of line 13,4 (“[Est pro lege lit]terali”) to the end of the piece. It is followed by a transmission of the beginning of Lux illuxit gratiosa (H27/201), also incompletely reported by Anderson, that continues onto the verso. These same two pieces occur in F in the same order, and both sources are strikingly similar in layout and appearance.

¹For more on the conductus fragment preserved in E-Mn 6528, see the study by Gregorio Bevilacqua, David Catalunya, and Nuria Torres, “The Production of Polyphonic Manuscripts in Thirteenth-Century Paris: New Evidence of Standardised Procedures,” Early Music History, 37 (2018): 91-139 (the online versions of this article have a correction to the first author's email address).

CH-SGs 383 (Sankt Gallen, Stiftsbibliothek, Cod. Sang. 383): collection 1, no. 1 (no. 1),² p. 135; a2; Strophes I-[IV], complete, with red painted initials to signify I-III, and an additional one for the beginning of line 7; no capital letter or indication of even a line or phrase break to signal [IV]. As is typical of this source, the ligation of the more ornate passages, including the caudae, does not appear to encode rhythmic information as precisely as the manuscripts more closely associated with the Notre Dame repertory.

Text only:

The first two words of Legem dedit appear in line 22,3-4 (in Strophe II) of the conductus Hac in die rege nato (I30/150): “quam nature legem dedit.” The text of Hac in die rege nato is constructed nearly completely from incipits of other conductus, although the source of the two opening words of this quoted line (if it ever existed) has not yet been identified. Hac in die rege nato appears in the following sources:

F, fasc. 7, no. 73, f. 332r: a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

WI, fasc. 9, no. 89, f. 174v (165v): a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Versification: The poetic disposition of this lyric implies a design of four, four-line stanzas, paired so that two different rhythmic schemes are shared by Strophes I-II and III-[IV], respectively; the rhyme scheme throughout each stanza is in abab quatrains with repetition of a single rhyme sound between Strophes I and II. However, none of the extant sources signals the beginning of Strophe [IV] in any noticeable way, and CH-SGs 383 does not even show a phrase break after the end of III. As a result, the stanzaic division and line numbering proposed here for Strophes III and [IV] is contestable and [IV] is given here in brackets throughout. Content: The Old and the New Law: Because the matter of Christ’s incarnation is perhaps the most favored topic within the Parisian conductus repertory overall, the closely affiliated conflict of the Old versus the New Law is a topic also frequently entertained within the corpus; for an investigation, see my article on the topic, “Vetus abit littera: From the Old to the New Law.”³ In an ongoing attempt to gather the relevant works in one place, the following provisional alphabetical list offers those pieces where the opposition of the Old and New Law is especially prominent, whether stated directly or through a veil of exegetical allegory:

Beata viscera Marie virginis cuius (K14/42), Strophes IV-VI;

Circa mundi vesperam (J54/63), lines 1-4;

Cortex occidit littere (I6/69), lines 1-2;

De nature fracto iure (I18/80), Strophe III;

²Pieces are cited here first by collection and number within the collection, according to their appearance within the two series of Notre Dame conductus that appear within CH-SGs 383 from pp. 135-144 and 158-176 (4 and 10 pieces respectively). These two groups of pieces are separated by a collection of Sanctus and Agnus tropes, some of which are also in WI, fasc. 10. The following number in parentheses then gives the enumeration of the piece according to the total tally of Notre Dame conductus within this manuscript.

³Thomas B. Payne, “Vetus abit littera: From the Old to the New Law in the Parisian Conductus,” Ars Antiqua: Music and Culture in Europe c. 1150-1330, Gregorio Bevilacqua and Thomas B. Payne, eds., 163-204, Speculum Musicae, no. 40 (Turnhout: Brepols, 2020).

Dum medium silentium tenerent (K15/99), Strophes I, VI, refrain; Excitatur caritas in Yericho (F340/111), Strophes I (allegorical), II, IV;
Flos de spina procreatur ... misso rore (H29/127), Strophes III-IV (allegorical);
Iam vetus littera (H24/167), Strophe I;
Legem dedit olim deus (I21/192), passim;
Legis in volumine (F13/193), lines 1-6;
Lex honus importabile (I19/197), Strophes I and II-III (allegorical); Librum clausum et signatum (J51/198), passim (allegorical);
Lux illuxit gratiosa (H27/201), line 9;
Nove geniture (I13/224), Strophes IV, V;
Novum sibi texuit (I22/225), passim (allegorical);
Ortu regis evanescit (G3/256), line 2 and Strophe III (allegorical);
Purgator criminum (F2/277), lines 7-11 and II (allegorical);
Relegata vetustate (H23/303), passim;
Relegantur ab area (C6/304), lines 19-22;
Renovantur veterum (J5/305), Strophes I and II (allegorical); Salvatoris hodie – Novus Adam natus (C5/315), lines 12-13;
Sol oritur in sydere (K13/333), lines 3-4, Strophe III;
Sursum corda elevare (G9/343), lines 29-36;
Veri solis presentia (F6/370), lines 1-3;
Vere vitis germine (H14/372), Strophe II;
Vetus abit littera (B3/379), passim.

Textual notes: 1-2, 9-16: The old law of the Mosaic covenant, propounded through the Ten Commandments (see Exodus, 20:1-17), is now replaced by a new covenant represented through the birth, death, and resurrection of Christ.⁴ 3-6: see 4 Kings (2 Kings), 4:1-37. In 4:32-37, the Old Testament prophet Elisha brings back to life the dead son of a Shunamite widow who had miraculously conceived him through Elisha's prior intervention (4:8-17). An earlier attempt to resurrect the boy (4:29-31), in which Elisha sent his servant Gehazi to lay his master's staff upon the son in hopes of a miracle cure, had failed, and the child was revived only when Elisha himself bent his own body over the child ("incurvavit se" in the Vulgate – the verb form used in the conductus poem appears to act as a deponent). In a number of exegetical commentaries, Elisha's servant and the ineffective staff he wielded represent the Old Law, whereas Elisha himself is portrayed as a figure of Christ and the mother as a symbol for the Jews;⁵ see, for example, the Expositio in Cantica Canticorum of Honorius of Autun, as presented in PL, 172: cols. 352D-353A:

Shunem is the city where that Shunamite woman was from, the one whose son Elisha raised from the dead, since he earlier sent his servant with the staff, but it could not resuscitate the dead boy. Elisha ⁴See, for example, the statement of Romans, 7: 4-6: "Itaque fratres mei, et vos mortificati estis legi per corpus Christi: ut sitis alterius, qui ex mortuis resurrexit, ut fructificemus Deo. Cum enim essemus in carne, passiones peccatorum, quae per legem erant, operabantur in membris nostris, ut fructificarent morti. Nunc autem soluti sumus a lege mortis, in qua detinebamur, ita ut serviamus in novitate spiritus, et non in vetustate litterae" ("Therefore, my brethren, you also are become dead to the law, by the body of Christ; that you may belong to another, who is risen again from the dead, that we may bring forth fruit to God. For when we were in the flesh, the passions of sins, which were by the law, did work in our members, to bring forth fruit unto death. But now we are loosed from the law of death, wherein we were detained; so that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter.").

⁵Anderson's glossing of the Elisha narrative that he provides in NDRC, 4:xx, note 4, supposedly drawn from the Quaestiones of Honorius of Autun and quoted by Anderson with reference to the conductus Rex et pater omnium (I17/307), appears to cite PL, 172: col. 718. Unfortunately, I am as yet unable to find the text he names in that place, and a search within the volume has not revealed its presence. The reference given in its place in the following note, from the same author but within a different work, does not relay the same material Anderson uses, but still communicates much the same information.

came and made himself like the dead boy [i.e., adopted the same position as the boy in bending over him] and the boy rose up immediately. This dead boy represents the human race [i.e., both Jews and Gentiles]. The servant who put his staff on the dead boy was Moses, who placed the staff of the [old] law over those dead in sin, which [law] oppressed them all the more and did not resuscitate them. Elisha, which means ‘God, my salvation,’ is Christ, given to us by God as our salvation, the one who became a mortal in the likeness of men, and revived the dead human race. Furthermore, Shunamite means ‘captive,’ and represents the Synagogue (i.e., the Jewish people), still held captive in treachery by the devil.⁶

The image of Elisha’s staff also occurs in the conductus Flos de spina procreatur (H29/127), lines 10-11; Deus misertus hominis (B1/92), lines 21-24; and Rex et pater omnium (I17/307), lines 12-14. For a similarly framed story concerning the prophet Elijah, of whom Elisha was a devoted disciple and successor, see the notes on the text for lines 15-16 of the conductus Novum sibi texuit (I22/225). 11-12: see Romans, 7:6: “Nunc autem soluti sumus a lege mortis, in qua detinebamur, ita ut serviamus in novitate spiritus, et non in vetustate litterae” (“But now we are loosed from the law of death, wherein we were detained; so that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter.”). 14: note Romans, 1:11: “Desidero enim videre vos, ut aliquid impartiar vobis gratiae spiritualis ad confirmandos vos” (“For I long to see you, that I may impart unto you some spiritual grace, to strengthen you.”). 15-16: see 2 Corinthians, 4:18: “... Quae enim videntur, temporalia sunt: quae autem non videntur, aeterna sunt” (“... For the things which are seen, are temporal; but the things which are not seen, are eternal.”). 16: see Ecclesiasticus (Sirach), 31:10: “Qui probatus est in illo, et perfectus est, erit illi gloria aeterna ...” (“He who has been tried thereby, and made perfect, he shall have glory everlasting. ...”); and 1 Peter, 5:10: “Deus autem omnis gratiae, qui vocavit nos in aeternam suam gloriam in Christo Jesu, modicum passos ipse perficiet, confirmabit, solidabitque” (“But the God of all grace, who has called us into his eternal glory in Christ Jesus, after you have suffered a little, will himself perfect you, and confirm you, and establish you.”).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: The remains of E-Mn 6528 (from the second syllable of line 13,4 to the end), not collated in Anderson’s edition, show no variants from the text presented above. 13,1: F: est, adopted reading from W1, CH-SGs 383, missing from E-Mn 6528. MUSIC: General remarks: There is a relatively generous amount of melodic repetition throughout this piece: the caudae are especially reiterative, with repetition often featured in both voice parts; voice exchange occurs once in the final cauda, while Strophes III and [IV] feature extensive repetition within their cum littera segments. The few musical variants in E-Mn 6528 from the transcribed version from F are collated below, since the appearance of this piece in this source was unknown to Anderson and not included in his catalog or edition. Line 1,3: TD: W1, CH-SGs 383: in the short 4L cauda on the second syllable of “[o]lim,” the opening 3si are rendered as 3li; the implied rhythms according to this reading are given above the staves. Cauda closing Strophe I (at line 4,3): D: W1: different ligations within “[susci]ta[ret]” for phrase 4 (at L11-L18): 2li,si,2li,3li=ag,g,fe,efg; and for phrase 7 (at L27-L34): 2li,si,2liP,2li=ag,g,fe,cd, the first of which will not fit with the T unless the T is transcribed irregularly; both variant D phrases in W1 seem to prompt faster rhythms in the T. TD: CH-SGs 383: although the majority of the cauda shows differing ligation for melismatic passages (something often seen in this MS), the same fourth and seventh phrases of this melisma are additionally shortened; for phrase 4: T= 4li=dedc, D=2li,2li=fe,fg; for phrase 7: T=4li,si=dedc,c; D= 4li, 2li=fedc, de. See the alternative readings of this cauda from both these other sources at the end of the score. Punctus organi closing Strophe I (at line 4.3): D: CH-SGs 383: no flourish over the penultimate T note, see the alternative reading from this source of the cauda that closes Strophe I supplied at the end of the transcription. Cauda opening Strophe II (at line 5,1): T: F: fifth T pitch at L4: si=a om; from W1, CH-SGs 383. Line 6,3: D: CH-SGs 383: a somewhat simplified organal flourish prior to the last syllable of “suscitatur”: 3li+ 3C,2li,si=fef+edc,de,d. Cauda closing Strophe II (at line 8,3): TD: W1: the first two phrases of the melisma on “[termi]na[tur]” are in mode 1 as opposed to an apparent mode 3 in F; the remainder (phrases 3-6) seems to suggest mode 1 in both W1 and F, based on the D ligation of phrase 6 (at L29-L32) and the fact that these four latter phrases offer a series of antecedent-consequent pairs. D: W1: the descending 2si at the ends of phrases 3 (L17-L20) and 4 (L21-L24) seem to be the occasional substitution of si for C figures that is sometimes seen in W1, rather than regular ligation, so it is conceivable that W1 may present an older rhythmic reading. This same cauda in CH-SGs 383, on the other hand, has a ligature series that looks on the surface more like mode 2 (assuming its ligation was intended to convey rhythm along the same lines as the more central sources). Furthermore, and very curiously, the cauda in CG-SGs 383 is shortened to only the first three phrases of the T, which is overlaid with a new D melody for the first T phrase, but with the last four D phrases set to the second and third phrases in the T. As with the final cauda in CH-SGs 383, this may be a copying error, prompted by the high volume of repetition that occurs here, but, as later, the end result can nonetheless stand on its own. See the alternative versions from both W1 and CH-SGs 383 at the end of the transcription. Punctus organi closing Strophe II (a line 8,3): D: W1 gives a different flourish over the penultimate T note, repeating the one it uses at the end of Strophe I. Line 9,2, 11,3: T: CH-SGs 383: at each of these places, which feature the same melody, there is a more ornate setting of the second syllable of the respective words “nato” and “nova”: 2li,3li=fg,fed. 13,1: D: E-Mn 6528: si=f, thus making more exact the later repetition of the melody for line 15,1. 13,4: the extant portion of E-Mn 6528 begins with the second syllable of this word (“[lit]terali”). T: E-Mn 6528: g for the final syllable. D: E-Mn 6528: for the surviving three syllables: 2li,2li,si= de,gf,e, forming a cadence on e, rather than on f as in F, W1; CH-SGs 383, rather surprisingly though, has f in the T and e in the D. 15,2: D: E-Mn 6528: 2li for the siP over “pro” in F. 15,3: T: E-Mn 6528 si,2li=f,fg over “morte” for the 2li,2li=ef,fg in F. 16,2: D: E-Mn 6528: siP for F’s 2li on the first syllable of “gloria.” Final cauda (at line 16,2): D: CH-SGs 383: a different melody for the third phrase (L12-L19), rather than the one exchanged with the previous T gesture that occurs in all other sources: 4li,si,3li=fed,e,eca, 4li,3li=fed,edc. This reading actually replicates the following T passage beginning at L20 of the melisma, as the changed phrase is preceded by an f3 clef. It therefore seems very likely that this aberrant D phrase is a mistake, rather explicable given the large amount of repetition in this melisma; see the literal transcription in the alternative version of the entire cauda at the end of the score, and cf. the similar curiosities in the cauda that closes Strophe II (at line 8,3). D: E-Mn 6528: in the third phrase before the punctus organi, 3C for the last 3 pitches (at L26-L27) which are regularly ligated in F. Final punctus organi closing Strophe [IV] (at line 16,2): D: E-Mn 6528: 2li,2li=ga,bc for the si,3li=f,gac figures in F that precede the C cascade; for the penultimate note: si=e for the 2li=de in F. D: W1: a different, more involved flourish over the penultimate T note, given as an alternative at the end of the transcription.

⁶*PL*, 172: cols. 352D-353A: “Suna enim est civitas de qua illa Sunamitis fuit, cujus filium Elisaeus a morte suscitavit, quia prius servum cum baculo misit, sed mortuum suscitare non potuit. Venit Elisaeus et assimilatus est mortuo, et surrexit continuo. Hic mortuus significat genus humanum. Servus qui baculum super mortuum posuit, Moyses fuit, qui legis baculum super mortuos in peccatis posuit, quae eos magis oppressit non resuscitavit. Elisaeus, qui dicitur ‘Deus mei salus’ est Christus, nobis a Deo datus salus, hic in similitudine hominum mortalis factus, mortuum suscitavit humanum genus. Porro Sunamitis dicitur ‘captiva’ et est Synagoga adhuc in perfidia a diabolo captivata”

LUX ILLUXIT GRATIOSA – Ma version
 Conductus (H27/201)

Ma, f. 79v (4,8) = F, (7,44)*

D
 I [Lux il - lu -
 T Lux il - lu -

- xit gra - ti - o - sa no - vum fe - rens gau - di - um
 - xit gra - ti - o - sa no - vum fe - rens gau - di - um

in hac di - e glo - ri - o - sa lu - mi - na - re gen - ti - um
 in hac di - e glo - ri - o - sa lu - mi - na - re gen - ti - um

F,Wl,Mn 6528: cauda in compressed rhythms, see at end*

su - [su]-per nos e - ni - tu -
 su - [su]-per nos e - ni - tu -

- it.
 - it.

F, Mn 6528: cauda in mode 3, see at end. See also the commentary for the use here of Ma as the base source over F.*

†F, Mn 6528: cauda in compressed rhythms, see at end

II

In qua for - ma spe - ti - o -

In qua for - ma spe - ti - o -

- sus pre

- sus pre

fi - li - is ho - mi - num fru - ctus da - vid ge - ne-ro - sus le - gi po - nens

fi - li - is ho - mi - num fru - ctus da - vid ge - ne-ro - sus le - gi po - nens

††F, Mn 6528: cauda in mode 3, see at end

ter - mi - num cir - cum - ci-di vo - lu -

ter - mi - num cir - cum - ci-di vo - lu -

d' f f'

c' e si si e1

- it.

- it.

III

D lu - ra - vit

T lu - [Iu] - ra - vit

da - vid do - mi - nus

da - vid do - mi - nus

et e - um non pe - ni - tu - it nam su - per da - vid

et e - um non pe - ni - tu - it nam su - per da - vid

so - li - um da - vid de fru - ctu po - su -

so - li - um da - vid de fru - ctu po - su -

so - li - um da - vid de fru - ctu po - su -

so - li - um da - vid de fru - ctu po - su - o o' q r q' p p' r'

- it.]
- it.

ALTERNATIVE READINGS OF CAUDAE IN OTHER SOURCES:

*Opening cauda (at line 1,1) in mode 3 (F,Mn 6528): F, f. 313r, I

[Lux]
Lux

Strophe I, closing cauda (at line 5,3): transmutation to compressed rhythms (in W1,F,Mn 6528): F, f. 313r, IV

[enitu] - (eni)tu -
- [it.]
- it.

†Strophe II, opening cauda (at line 6,1): transmutation to compressed rhythms (in F, Mn 6528): F, f. 313r, V

[In]
In

††Strophe II, closing cauda (at line 10,2) in mode 3 (in F, Mn 6528): F, f. 313v, II

D [volu]-
T (volu)-

- [it.]
- it.

LUX ILLUXIT GRATIOSA

Conductus (H27/201)

Ma, f. 79v (4,8) (= F-7,44)

I	Lux illuxit gratiosa, novum ferens gaudium. In hac die gloriosa luminare gentium super nos enituit.	A favorable light has dawned, bringing new joy. On this glorious day the light of the Gentiles 5 shone upon us.
II	In qua forma, spetiosus pre filiis hominum, fructus David generosus, legi ponens terminum, circumcidi voluit.	In this form, as one beautiful above the sons of men, the noble fruit of David, putting an end to the Law, 10 wished to be circumcised.
III	Iuravit David dominus. et eum non penituit, nam super David solium David de fructu posuit.	The Lord swore to David and did not regret it, for upon the throne of David 14 he placed the fruit of David.

SOURCES:

Ma, fasc. 4, no. 8, f. 79v: a2, Strophes I-III, complete, with a blue painted initial with red decorative tracery opening I at the top left area of the leaf, but no further initials entered in the spaces left for them in the other stanzas. A number of the caudae in this MS offer different rhythmic profiles from those in the other sources, which has led to the choice of Ma over F as the base source for the transcription presented here; for more on this reasoning, see the discussion below of the musical features of this piece.

F, fasc. 7, no. 44, f. 313r: a2, Strophes I-III, complete, with II-III indicated by capital letters. This and the previous work in F, Legem dedit olim deus (I21/192), appear in the same order in the strikingly similar looking MS E-Mn 6528.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 72, f. 156v (147v): a2, Strophes I-III, complete, with the stanzas indicated by the usual painted initials (III, though appears to show an “A”).

E-Mn 6528 (Madrid, Biblioteca Nacional, MS 6528),¹ no. 2, back flyleaf of the MS, with Lux illuxit beginning on what was originally the recto side of this repurposed folio (which is now numbered f. 124v); it is also presently bound upside down: a2; fragmentary, although the folio itself is essentially complete. More of Lux illuxit is preserved in E-Mn 6528 than the information presented in Anderson’s edition (NDRC, 3:225) and his catalog indicates, since he only took account of the folio’s original verso. As a result, Anderson also was unaware of the extant closing portion of Legem dedit olim deus preserved by E-Mn 6528. Reasons that explain Anderson’s oversight are explored in the remarks on E-Mn 6528 among the sources of Legem dedit. Lux illuxit follows directly after Legem dedit in E-Mn 6528, starting on the original recto of the back flyleaf folio, second system. These same two pieces occur in F in the same order as in E-Mn 6528, and both sources are strikingly similar in layout and appearance, including the style of the opening filigreed initial. Music and text of the piece are recoverable from its opening up through the first five notes of both the T and D of its closing cauda; stanzas II-III are indicated by black-ink capitals, as in F. The variants from this source that were omitted in Anderson's edition are listed below.

¹For more on the conductus fragment preserved in E-Mn 6528, see the study by Gregorio Bevilacqua, David Catalunya, and Nuria Torres, “The Production of Polyphonic Manuscripts in Thirteenth-Century Paris: New Evidence of Standardised Procedures,” Early Music History, 37 (2018): 91-139 (the online versions of this article have a correction to the first author’s email address).

Text only:

The first two words of Lux illuxit appear in line 3 of the conductus Hac in die rege nato (I30/150): “lux illuxit homini.” The text of Hac in die rege nato is constructed nearly completely from incipits of other conductus; it appears in the following sources:

F, fasc. 7, no. 73, f. 332r: a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 89, f. 174v (165v): a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1-5: on Jesus as light, see, e.g., John, 9:5: “quamdiu sum in mundo, lux sum mundi” (“As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world”), and the similar passages in John, 1:4-9 and 8:12. 4-5: see Isaiah, 42:6, and 49:6,² as well as the similar language in Acts, 13:47. See also Luke, 2:32, where Simeon describes the infant Jesus: “lumen ad revelationem gentium, et gloriam plebis tuae Israhel” (“A light for the revelation of the Gentiles, and the glory of your people Israel”). 4,1: “luminare” is a neuter noun here. 6-7: the person being described is Christ, and although the previous stanza was concerned wholly with light imagery, the second strophe emphasizes Christ's incarnation in human form, a manifestation it states that he himself desired; for biblical echoes, see Psalm 44:3: “speciosus forma prae filiis hominum: diffusa est gratia in labiis tuis; propterea benedixit te Deus in aeternum” (“You are beautiful above the sons of men: grace is poured over your lips; therefore God has blessed you for ever”). 8: Jesus was a descendant of the house of David, see Matthew, 1:1, Luke, 3:31; and also lines 13-14, below. 9: the old law of the Mosaic covenant, propounded through the Ten Commandments (see Exodus, 20: 1-17), is now replaced by a new covenant through the birth of Christ; for just a few examples of this assertion, see Romans, 7:6, and 10:4.³ The conductus Legem dedit olim deus (I21/192), which precedes Lux illuxit in both F and E-Mn 6528, treats this issue in its lines 9-16 (Strophe III and [IV]); there also, in the notes on the text of this piece, a list is offered of the works in the conductus repertory that treat the frequent theme of the Old versus the New Law. 10: the circumcision of Christ is often interpreted as a prefiguration of the Passion, see, e.g., the opening lines of Perotin's conductus Salvatoris hodie – Novus Adam (C5/315): “Salvatoris hodie / sanguis pregustatur, / in quo Syon filie / stola candidatur.” (“Today the blood of the Savior is foretasted, in which the robe of the daughter of Zion is whitened.”); it is thus possible that the Christmastide conductus Lux illuxit also invokes the feast of Christ's Circumcision (1 January). For more information on the concept of “circumcision” as a form of salvation under the New Law, see the notes to the text of Salvatoris hodie – Novus Adam, lines 21-22. 10,1: the translation of ²Isaiah, 42:6: “ego Dominus vocavi te in iustitia, et adprehendi manum tuam, et servavi; et dedi te in foedus populi in lucem gentium” (“I the Lord have called you in righteousness, and taken you by the hand, and protected you; and I have given you for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles”). Isaiah, 49:6: “... dedi te in lucem gentium, ut sis salus mea usque ad extremum terrae” (“... I have given you to be the light of the Gentiles, that you may be my salvation even to the farthest part of the earth”).

³Romans, 7:6: “Nunc autem soluti sumus a lege mortis, in qua detinebamur, ita ut serviamus in novitate spiritus, et non in vetustate litterae” (“But now we are loosed from the law of death, wherein we were detained; so that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter.”). Romans, 10:4: “finis enim legis Christus, ad iustitiam omni credenti” (“For the end of the law is Christ, as regards justice to every believer”).

“circumcidi” as “circumcised” corresponds with the way this Latin verb is most frequently understood in the Bible, although it might also conceivably imply the idea of Christ humbling himself by being born human, thanks to its related connotations of “diminish” or “circumscribe” (see Lewis and Short, A Latin Dictionary, s.v. “circumcido,” II, accessible via <https://logeion.uchicago.edu/circumcido>). Anderson suggests this meaning in his translation of lines 8 and 10 as: “the fruit of David’s noble line ... has willed himself to be made lowly” (NDRC, 3:xxxi). 11-12: see Psalm 131:11, and 109:4,⁴ and the similar language in Hebrews, 7:21. Also, see 2 Kings (2 Samuel), 7:8-16, for the promises that God (speaking through the prophet Nathan) swore to grant David. 13-14: cf. Isaiah, 9:7;⁵ see also line 8 of this conductus poem.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: General remarks: Ma has no punctuation throughout, except what looks either like a colon or the start of an unfinished, unintended letter after 12,2 (omitted in the transcription); periods have been supplied editorially in the musical transcription to end each stanza. The textual remains of Lux illuxit that remain on the original recto side of the back flyleaf of E-Mn 6528 (i.e., from the start of the piece up through line 6,1 that opens Strophe II) were not collated in Anderson’s edition; except for the lack of any punctuation until the period that closes the poetry of Strophe I (at line 5), they show no variants from the text as presented here. 1,2: the syllabic division in the musical transcription (“illu-xit”) follows all sources. 3,1-2: F: hac in, the only source with this word order. 6,1: Ma: initial omitted, from WI,F,E-Mn 6528. 7,3: Ma: hominun, corrected after all other sources. 8,2; 11,2; 13,3; 14,1: F: curiously, gives varying spellings of the four closely packed instances of David’s name that appear in this poem; all but the first also present evidence of erasure and correction of the final letter. The first instance reads “davit,” with no hint of emendation, and this appears to be the form that the scribe eventually settled on. The second and fourth instances clearly have had the original final “d” changed to “t,” while the third instance preserves “david,” but shows the ascender of the final “d” partly erased with no further correction. All other sources show “david” throughout. 9,1: Ma,F: legis, adopted reading from WI,E-Mn 6528. 11,1: Ma: initial omitted, from WI,F,E-Mn 6528. 11,1: F: Iuraravit (the extra syllable follows a system change). 12,4: Ma: penitebit, with the variant “-eb-” letters partly erased or smudged, as if to be corrected. Apparently the scribe expected the form of the word to correspond with the language of Psalm 109:4 (see the notes on the text for lines 11-14, above); the adopted reading, made necessary by rhyme, comes from F,WI,E-Mn 6528. MUSIC: General remarks: The remains of Lux illuxit that are preserved on the original recto side of the back flyleaf of E-Mn 6528 (i.e., from the opening of the piece up through the cauda on line 6,1 that starts Strophe II) were never collated in Anderson’s edition; variants for these omitted portions only are listed below. Caudae: many of the caudae are extremely elegant with reiterated phrases disposed into pairs or antecedent-consequent series. The cauda that closes Strophe I (at line 5,3) features two motives (“a” and various forms of “b”) repeated in melodic sequence. Modal transmutation: The melisma that begins the piece, the one that closes Strophe I, and the two caudae that surround Strophe II (at lines 6,1 and 10,2) show transmutation of rhythmic mode among the various sources (for all four instances Ma lines up against F and E-Mn 6528, and also against WI for the second example). The transcription offered here relies on Ma as the base source, which favors mode 1 throughout and appears from comparison of the notational details given in the other sources to be closest to the original rendering. The primacy of the Ma versions is suggested particularly by the cauda that ends Strophe I (at line 5,3). Here the three other sources halve the length of the mode-1 gestures in the T that make up phrases 2, 3, 4, and 7 – not by ⁴Psalm 131:11: “Iuravit Dominus David veritatem et non frustrabit eum: de fructu ventris tui ponam super sedem tuam” (“The Lord has sworn truth to David, and he will not make it void: of the fruit of your womb I will set upon your throne”). Psalm 109:4: “Iuravit Dominus, et non paenitebit eum: tu es sacerdos in aeternum secundum ordinem Melchisedech” (“The Lord has sworn, and he will not repent: You are a priest for ever according to the order of Melchisedech”).

⁵Isaiah, 9:7: “multiplicabitur eius imperium et pacis non erit finis super solium David et super regnum eius sedebit ut confirmet illud et corroboret in iudicio et iustitia, amodo et usque in sempiternum: zelus Domini exercituum faciet hoc” (“His empire shall be multiplied, and there shall be no end of peace: he shall sit upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom; to establish it and strengthen it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth and for ever: the zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this.”).

compressing the rhythms from mode 1 into mode 6, as might be expected, but by retaining a general mode-1 framework and reducing the number of T notes in each case from 10 to 7. The number of notes in the D phrases throughout the cauda remains essentially untouched, which results in the mode-5 patterns in Ma being reduced to mode 1 and its mode-1 portions compressed to mode 6. This arrangement, though, retains several 2li figures for short values in the D that must be read in an irregular fashion if they are to correlate with the T at these points; see especially the ends of the sixth and seventh D phrases of this cauda. This latter detail thus suggests that the Ma readings could well represent the initial rhythmic conception for these caudae, since their rhythmic realization is much more straightforward. The alternative readings of all the passages in question, taken from F, appear at the end of the transcription. Opening cauda (at line 1,1): TD: F,E-Mn 6528: the opening cauda of the piece is given in mode 3, the alternative reading at the end from F is identical here to E-Mn 6528 and may be consulted for its variants from Ma. The only exception is the presence of the b-flat signature at the start of the D, absent in F, which is then cancelled at the opening of the next phrase with a sig quad on b. Line 1,2: T: E-Mn 6528: the low a note on the second syllable of “illuxit” is rendered as a P; the 2li that precedes its last syllable is given as siP=e. D: E-Mn 6528: 4li=edef replaces the 3li,2li prior to the syllable “[illu]xit”. 2,1: D: Ma: ag for the 2li over the first syllable of “novum”; the adopted ba has been taken from F,WI,E-Mn 6528; the ficta b-flat suggested here is in WI. 2,1: D; E-Mn 6528: no stroke after “in.” 2,2: TD: E-Mn 6528: stroke follows “hac.” 3,4: T: F: 3C=bag over first syllable of “gloriosa”; Ma: 2li,si over its last two syllables =ed,c; the adopted 2si=e,d reading is taken from F,WI,E-Mn 6528 gives ed,d. D: the b-flat ficta pitch at this same place is called for in F,WI,E-Mn 6528. 4,2: T: E-Mn 6528: for “gentium,” first syllable has fpf. D: F,E-Mn 6528: Pf at the first syllable for the 2li. Cauda in line 5,1: T: E-Mn 6528: stroke after second note si=e. TD: following the cauda, strokes following each of the two notes over “[su]per.” Line 5,2: T: E-Mn 6528: si=g for “nos.” D: E-Mn 6528: si=d. 5,3: T: E-Mn 6528: 2si=cd for the 2li,si=cd,d closing the first short phrase of the cauda. D: E-Mn 6528: the om e note for “[eni]tu[it]” is transmitted only in F. Cauda closing Strophe I (at line 5,3): TD: F,WI,E-Mn 6528: this cauda is rhythmically compressed into shorter phrases with faster values, particularly in the D, see the alternative reading at the end. Unlike the other transmuted sections, WI here disagrees with Ma and concords with F and E-Mn 6528. The only variant from F in E-Mn 6528 is in the figures prior to the final syllable of line 5,3: T: E-Mn 6528: s,3li=d,edc for 2li,3C=de,edc. D: E-Mn 6528: 4li=gage for 2li,3li,si=ga,age,e. D: the b-flats in the last two phrases of the cauda are specified in Mn 6258. T: the reading of the si=c as a DL in the penultimate cauda phrase is prompted by F,E-Mn 6528. Cauda opening Strophe II (at line 6,1): TD: the opening cauda of Strophe II, like the one closing Strophe I, is rhythmically compressed in F,E-Mn 6528; see the end for this alternative reading. Cauda in line 6,4: T: the omitted c note starting the final phrase of the cauda comes from F,E-Mn 6528. 7,3: T: Ma: om stroke after “hominum” supplied from F,WI,E-Mn 6528. 10,2: D: Ma: the om stroke after “[vo]lu[it]” is from F,WI,E-Mn 6528; a redundant b-flat sig appears here in Ma as well. Cauda closing Strophe II: TD: F,E-Mn 6528: in mode 3, see the alternative reading at the end. D: F: a b-flat signature appears before the third phrase in the cauda (at L17); though not in other sources, b-flats in the D seem necessary for the final two D phrases at least. T: Ma: the 2si=e,c, seen twice in the cauda at the end of phrases 3 (at L24) and 5 (L40), are written as +2C in WI,F,E-Mn 6528, hence their rhythmic interpretation here as B,L. D: Ma: the final TL rests in the third through fifth phrases of this cauda have an added si g' (=L,B-rest) in their places in F,E-Mn 6528; WI has this g' only for the third phrase. 11-13: TD: Ma: the omitted strokes following lines 11,2-3; 12,4; and 13,4 appear in all other MS sources; they are supplied here for clarity in determining the ends of the phrases. 11,3: D: Ma: the 2si=a,f (notes 5-6) in the organal phrase over “[do]mi[nus]” are rendered 2li in WI,F,E-Mn 6528. 14: D: Ma: a redundant b-flat sig precedes “david de fructu”; the first note is el (signifying DL?) in WI. 14,4: TD: E-Mn 6528: after the first five notes of the final cauda, the remainder of the piece is lost. D: Ma: the omitted si d at the end of the seventh phrase of the cauda comes from F,WI.

ROSE NODUM RESERAT
Conductus (11/313)

F, f. 314r (7,45)

I

D [Ro - - se no - dum re - se - rat ve - ri so - lis

T Ro - - se no - dum re - se - rat ve - ri so - lis ra - di - us dum ad or - tum pro - pe - rat ve - rus de - i fi - li - us.

ra - di - us dum ad or - tum pro - pe - rat ve - rus de - i fi - li - us.

hunc mun - dus in - car - ce - rat qui mun - da - na li - be - rat in - cli - na - to hunc mun - dus in - car - ce - rat qui mun - da - na li - be - rat in - cli - na - to

di - e no - cti lu - cem ge - ne - rat gra - ti - a ma - ri -

di - e no - cti lu - cem ge - ne - rat gra - ti - a ma - ri -

- e.

- e.

II

D Styrys yes - - se pro - - gre - di - tur.

T Styrys yes - - se pro - - gre - di - tur.

no - va fit in - si - ti - o. sur - cu - lus in - se - ri - tur.

sed non fit in - ci - si - o dum chri - stus con - ci - pi - tur.

ca - [ca] - sti - tas non le - di - tur. no - va res pu - el - la pa - [pa] - rit et com - ple - cti - tur fir - ma - men - tum stel -

The first system of music consists of two staves. The top staff begins with a red box containing the letter 'g' above the first note. Further right, another red box contains the letter 'j' above a note. The bottom staff begins with a red box containing the letter 'h' above the first note. Further right, another red box contains the letter 'i' above a note. Blue brackets are placed above various groups of notes in both staves. Blue curved lines are drawn under some notes in the bottom staff.

The second system of music consists of two staves. The top staff begins with a red box containing the letter 'i' above the first note. Further right, another red box contains the letter 'i'' above a note. The bottom staff begins with a red box containing the letter 'i'' above the first note. Further right, another red box contains the letter 'i'' above a note. Blue brackets are placed above various groups of notes in both staves. Blue curved lines are drawn under some notes in the bottom staff.

The third system of music consists of two staves. The top staff begins with a red box containing the letter 'l' above the first note. Further right, another red box contains the letter 'l'' above a note. The bottom staff begins with a red box containing the letter 'k' above the first note. Further right, another red box contains the letter 'k'' above a note. Blue brackets are placed above various groups of notes in both staves. Blue curved lines are drawn under some notes in the bottom staff. The system concludes with a double bar line. Below the top staff, the text "- la.]" is written. Below the bottom staff, the text "- la." is written.

ROSE NODUM RESERAT

Conductus (II/313)

F, f. 314r (7,45)

I	Rose nodum reserat veri solis radius, dum ad ortum properat verus dei filius. Hunc mundus incarcerat qui mundana liberat. Inclinato die, nocti lucem generat gratia Marie.		A ray of the true sun unlocks the bud of the rose, when the true son of God hastens to the garden. 5 The world imprisons the one who liberates the things of the world. At the close of the day, the grace of Mary creates light for the night.
II	Styrps Yesse progreditur. Nova fit insitio. Surculus inseritur, sed non fit incisio dum Christus concipitur. Castitas non leditur. Nova res! Puella parit, et complectitur firmamentum stella.	10	A stem comes forth from Jesse. A new grafting is made. A shoot is inserted, but no incision occurs when Christ is conceived. 15 Chastity is not violated. What novelty! A maiden gives birth, and a star encircles the heavens.

SOURCES:

F: fasc. 7, no. 45, f. 314r: a2; Strophes I-II, complete, with II indicated with the conventional capital.

W1: fasc. 6, no. 69, f. 62r (54r): a2; Strophes I-II, complete, with no initials for either stanza ever entered, an omission that similarly applies to many of the works that surround this piece in the MS. Rose nodum closes fasc. 6, which otherwise contains two-voice clausulae, rather than conductus. It follows Et florebit 2¹ and is succeeded by the three-part organum Alleluya. Dies sanctificatus (M2 a3) that begins fasc. 7 at the top of f. 63r (55r). Occupying much of the left margin on the preceding leaf f. 62v (54v), which contains the closing portion of Rose nodum, is the later addition of a simple, brown-ink illustration of a bearded man, divided into separated portions, so that one may make out at least his head, part of one leg, two feet, and portions of either his torso or thigh, as well as a hand bearing an ax-shaped weapon (a halberd according to the report of Staehelin).² The drawing is labeled below with the name “lorimar” and suggests no connection to the musical contents of the leaf.

Text only:

¹This work, no. 102 among the clausulae preserved in W1, is the last member of the second of two cycles of clausulae now preserved in this MS (the first in fasc. 5 with 34 works; the second in fasc. 6 with the remaining 68). The loss of the original folios 51-52 from W1 means that an unknown number of pieces is missing from the first series in fasc. 5.

²Martin Staehelin, ed., Die mittelalterliche Musikhandschrift W1: Vollständige Reproduktion des “Notre Dame”-Manuskripts der Herzog August Bibliothek, Wolfenbüttel, Cod. Guelf. 628 Helmst, Wolfenbütteler Mittelalter-Studien, no. 9, (Wiesbaden: Harrasowitz Verlag, 1995), 20, 44.

CH-Zz C.58/275 (Zürich, Zentralbibliothek, MS C.58/275): no. 328 (no. 1),³ f. 147v: text only, Strophes I-II, complete. Images of this source are presently unavailable to me; details stem from NDRC and the CPI website.

The text of line 1 of Rose nodum is also quoted as most of line 18 (“nec rose nodum reserat”) within the conductus Hac in die rege nato (I30/150). The text of Hac in die rege nato is constructed nearly completely from incipits of other conductus; it appears in the following sources:

F, fasc. 7, no. 73, f. 332r: a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 89, f. 174v (165v): a2, Strophes I-II, complete.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: The poem is replete with common symbols of the incarnation and virgin birth: the sun denotes God; the rose, garden, and star, Mary; the sun’s ray, the shoot (surculus), and the heavens surrounded by the star, Christ; the stem (styrps), Jesus’s ancestral lineage from Jesse through King David; the bud (nodus), Mary’s womb; the grafting, Christ’s incarnation; and the absence of an incision, Mary’s conceiving Christ while retaining her virginity. 3-4: for a passage particularly evocative of garden symbolism applicable to the Virgin Mary, see Song of Songs, 4:12: “Hortus conclusus soror mea, sponsa, hortus conclusus, fons signatus” (“A garden enclosed is my sister, my spouse, a garden enclosed, a fountain sealed up.”). Also apropos are: Song of Songs, 6:1: “Dilectus meus descendit in hortum suum ad areolam aromatum, ut pascatur in hortis, et lilia colligat” (“My beloved is gone down into his garden, to the bed of aromatical spices, to feed in the gardens, and to gather lilies”); as well as the similar expressions in Song of Songs, 5:1, and 6:10. 3,3: an alternative spelling of “hortus” (“garden”); it may also conceivably be rendered as it stands (“ortum”) meaning “birth/origin,” although the frequency of horticultural images throughout this poem prompts the translation adopted here; punning is also likely. 5-6: for a conceivable biblical echo, see John, 16:33: “Haec locutus sum vobis, ut in me pacem habeatis. In mundo pressuram habebitis: sed confidite, ego vici mundum” (“These things I [Jesus] have spoken to you, that in me you may have peace. In the world you shall have distress: but have confidence, I have overcome the world.”). This expression in the poem seems a likely nod to the metaphor of God/Christ assuming mortal flesh, and thus voluntarily “imprisoning” himself in human form. For similar associations see the remarks on the text of the conductus Sol sub nube latuit (I16/334), lines 17-20, Sonet vox ecclesie sonet (I28/337), lines 19-21, as well as the extensive discussion of the concept of Christ as a captive or prisoner in the notes on the conductus O qui fontem gratie (H28/243), line 2,1. 7: Anderson (NDRC, 4:ii), quoting Augustine’s Sermones (no. 81), suggests that the mention of the lateness of the day refers to the change in covenant from the Old to the New Testament.⁴ But perhaps more immediately apropos, this statement most likely refers to the teaching that, although Christ was coexistent with God from the beginning, he was not incarnate as man until a later time; see, for example, the remarks for the comparable expression in line 16 of the conductus Deus creator omnium (H11/89); and, for more detailed information, the remarks on the text to the conductus Sine matre genitus (I27/330), lines 1-2 and the references to the other pieces given there. 8,2: on Jesus as light, see, e.g., John, 9:5: “quamdiu sum in mundo, lux sum mundi” (“As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world”), and the similar passages in John, 1:4-9 and 8:12. 9: the association of Mary with grace is, of course, from Luke, 1:28: “Et, ingressus angelus ad eam, dixit: ‘Ave gratia plena: Dominus tecum: benedicta tu in mulieribus.’” (“and, coming in to her [Mary], the angel said ‘Hail, full of grace, the Lord is with you; blessed are you among women’”). 10: cf. Isaiah, 11:1, for the prophecy of the rod (virga, i.e., Mary) sprouting from the stem (styrps) of Jesse,⁵ recalled frequently within the conductus repertory (e.g. in Fraude ceca desolato [G4/133], lines 21-22); and note the opening line of the triplum from the double motet Styrps Iesse progreditur / Virga cultus nescia / Flos filius eius (vdW 647/648/O16), as well as its host chant, the Marian responsory Styrps Yesse. Virgo dei genetrix (O16).⁶ 17,3: “complectitur” is a deponent verb, hence it is the star (Mary) that encircles the heavens (God as Christ).

³The numbering of the pieces in Zz C.58/275 is that of Jakob Werner, Beiträge zur Kunde der lateinischen Literatur des Mittelalters (Aarau: Sauerländer, 1905). Werner’s numbers occasionally split or combine various poems, but this does not apply for the Parisian conductus in this source (nos. 328-335 – although no. 331 is Virgo deum generat from St Gall 383). The numbering as in Anderson, Opera omnia, which apparently only applies to the conductus portion, is given afterwards in parentheses.

⁴The Latin text translated by Anderson is: “Ideo seni Abrahae natus est filius, quia erat utique Christus in ipsius mundi senectute uenturus,” which he renders: “And so a son is born to Abraham, an old man (Genesis, 17:15-19), so that Christ would also come in the old age of the world.” It may be found in PL, 38: col. 505, paragraph 8. This particular section of the sermon, though, does not appear to refer specifically to the turnover of the Old Law to the New, as Anderson suggests. It actually appears more relevant to the point I make immediately following.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 8,1: Tt: F: noctis; reading from W1, CH-Zz C.58/275. MUSIC: The repeated-note si figures over a single syllable that end most of the lines throughout the settings in both F and W1 (apparently indicating additional length) are denoted in the transcription by dashed ties; these may, but should not necessarily suggest that the second note of the pair should not sound. It conceivably might also be argued that the appearance of these figures could suggest a modal-rhythmic reading of some of the applicable cum littera segments of this conductus. For the use of these figures in a similar context, see, for example, the conductus Nicholai presulis (F27/217) and Vetus abit littera (B3/379). Line 8,3: TD: F: the figures over “[gene]rat” in both voices are 2siP; T: gPg; D: aPa; the adopted reading that avoids the cadence on the major second comes from W1. Final cauda: T: for the last phrase F begins 4li=defg; the opening 3li that obviates the dissonance is supplied from W1, which gives 3li,4C,2i=efg,agfe,f’g for the entire passage.

⁵Isaiah, 11:1: “Et egredietur virga de radice Iesse, et flos de radice eius ascendet” (“And a shoot shall come forth out of the root of Jesse, and a flower shall rise up out of his root.”).

⁶“Styrps Iesse virgam produxit virgaque florem et super hunc florem requiescit spiritus almus. Virgo dei genetrix virga est, flos filius ejus” (“The stem of Jesse produced a branch, and the branch a flower; and on this flower rested the kind Spirit. The branch [of Jesse] is the virgin mother of God, the flower is her son.”).

WI, f. 166r (157r) (9,80) (= F, 7,46)*

D [Vir - a]

T Vir - a

- ga yes - se re - gi - o flo - re de - co-ra - tur

- ga yes - se re - gi - o flo - re de - co-ra - tur

 the setting of these four words appears differently in each source, see at end

F, Wood 591: alternative readings for this phrase, see at end; F implies mode 3 throughout dum ma - ri - a fi - li - o de - i fe - cun - da -

dum ma - ri - a fi - li - o de - i fe - cun - da -

F, Wood 591: alternative readings for this phrase, see at end

c' c'' si si †

- tur.

b' b''

- tur.

Flos ad tem - pus a - ru - it a - re - fa - ctus flo - ru - it et fru - cti - fi - ca - vit

Flos ad tem - pus a - ru - it a - re - fa - ctus flo - ru - it et fru - cti - fi - ca - vit

†F: alternative reading, see at end

chri - stus mo - ri vo - lu - it mo - ri - ens - que ge - nu - it quos pre - de - sti - na -

chri - stus mo - ri vo - lu - it mo - ri - ens - que ge - nu - it quos pre - de - sti - na -

F*: opening cauda in mode 3, see at end. See also the commentary for the use here of WI as the base source over F.

or. \dot{e} \dot{e}' \dot{g}
 or. \dot{d} \dot{d}' \dot{f}

\dot{g}' \dot{f}' \dot{f}'' or. \dot{e}

- vit.
- vit.

D
II Ex hac er - go pa - ri - tu - ra vi - ne - a pro - ces - sit
 T
Ex hac er - go pa - ri - tu - ra vi - ne - a pro - ces - sit que e - gy - pti tem - pnens iu - ra ter - mi - nos ex - ces - que e - gy - pti tem - pnens iu - ra ter - mi - nos ex - ces -

\dot{b} \dot{si} \dot{si} \dot{b} ††F: alternative reading, see at end
 - sit a
 - sit a qua pre - lum ba - bi - lo - nis in - tra si - tu - lam ful - lo -

 qua pre - lum ba - bi - lo - nis in - tra si - tu - lam ful - lo -

- nis san-gui-nem ex-pres -

- nis san-gui-nem ex-pres -

i i' b k

h b h' b j

k' m m' j l l'

[+]

- sit.]

- sit.

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*Opening cauda (at line 1,1) in mode 3: F, f. 314v, V

Vir -

- ga

Lines 3-4: differing settings compared
a. W1, f. 166r (157r), V

| beginning of phrase in F, Wood 591

dum ma - ri - a fi - li - o de - i fe - cun - da(tur.)

b. F, f. 314v, VI

D
T
8 dum ma - ri - a fi - li - o de - i fe - cun - da(tur.)

c. Wood 591, f. 3r, V

D
T
8 dum ma - ri - a fi - li - o de - i fe - cun - da(tur.)

Cauda at line 4,2: F, f. 314v, VI-f. 315r, I (in mode 3); Wood 591, f. 3r, II: (differing pitches, ligations)

a. Second phrase, F (mode 3)

b. Last phrase, F (mode 3)

c. Second phrase, Wood 591

d. Last phrase, Wood 591

D
T
8 (fecunda) - - tur. (fecunda) - - tur.

†Cauda at line 10,2 (closing Strophe II): F, f. 315r, III: opening phrase implies religation in mode 3 in comparison to W1, remainder in mode 1

D
T
8 (predestina) -

8 - vit.

††Cauda at line 15,1 (in mode 3): F, f. 315r, VI

D
T
8 (a)

VIRGA YESSE REGIO

Conductus (I24/383)

WI, f. 166r (157r) (9,80) (= F-7,46)

I	Virga Yesse regio flore decoratur dum Maria filio dei fecundatur.		The twig of Jesse is adorned with a regal flower when Mary is impregnated with the son of God.
	Flos ad tempus aruit, arefactus, floruit, et fructificavit. Christus mori voluit, moriensque genuit quos predestinavit.	5	Over time the flower withered, dried up, then flourished again, and bore fruit. Christ wished to die, and in dying produced 10 those he predestined.
II	Ex, hac ergo paritura, vinea processit, que, Egypti tempens iura, terminos excessit, a qua prelum Babilonis intra situlam fullonis sanguinem expressit.	15	Thus, because of this birth, there issued a vineyard, which, scorning the laws of Egypt, departed from its territories, and from it the winepress of Babylon squeezed forth blood into the fuller's vat.

SOURCES:

WI, fasc. 9, no. 80, f. 166r (157r): a2, Strophes I-II complete, indicated by painted capital letters and with an additional painted initial opening line 5 (hence the added space in the text of Strophe I above); some of the caudae present rhythmic profiles differing from those in F, but agreeing for the most part with those in Wood 591; this feature has led to the choice of WI as the base source for the transcription presented here; for more on this reasoning, see the discussion below of the musical features of this piece.

F, fasc. 7, no. 46, f. 314v: a2, Strophes I-II complete, with II signaled by a conventional capital; some of the caudae offer different rhythmic profiles from the versions in both WI and Wood 591; these appear as alternative readings at the end of the score.

Wood 591 (GB-Ob [pr. bk.] Wood 591; OxWood), no. 7, f. 3r:¹ a2, fragmentary, with music and text extant from the opening of the piece through line 8,2, but with no additional omissions apparent. Since the present recto of this leaf was originally the verso, the piece does not continue on the other side. Most of the caudae in this source with rhythmic profiles differing from those in F agree with WI; these appear within the alternative readings at the end of the score. The marginal jotting at the bottom of the leaf is from the late sixteenth century: “on sunday the xxxth of July in the yeare of oure Lord one thousand five hundred foure score and xii

¹Pieces are identified, numbered, and foliated according to the description in RISM. The folio numbering in RISM is not indicative of the original MS order; as it states on the DIAMM site: “f. 1-2v is really f. 2v-1, since these pages are upside down in the source. Rectos are really versos and vice versa.” The MS preserves 7 conductus, nos. 5-7 belonging to the Notre Dame repertory. Nos. 1-4 are English pieces.

the xxxiiiith of quene elisabeth.”²

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1-2: the flower is Christ, and the twig is Mary, with the name of Jesse connoting Jesus’s royal lineage from him through King David. For the prophecy of the twig/rod/shoot (virga) sprouting from the stem/root (stirps/radix) of Jesse, see Isaiah, 11:1: “et egredietur virga de radice Iesse, et flos de radice eius ascendet” (“And a shoot shall come forth out of the root of Jesse, and a flower shall rise up out of his root.”); and note the opening line of the triplum from the double motet Stirps Iesse progreditur / Virga cultus nescia / Flos filius eius (vdW 647/648/O16),³ as well as its host chant, the Marian responsory Styrps Yesse. Virgo dei genetrix (O16).⁴ 5-7: on the symbol of Christ as a flower that withered during the Passion and flourished again with the Resurrection, see Richard of St. Laurent’s De laudibus Beatae Mariae Virginis, book 12, chap. 4, §2 of the cited edition.⁵ See also the motet Flos de spina rumpitur / Regnat (vdW 437/M34), lines 1-9, attributed to Philip the Chancellor. This explanation in the De laudibus effectively challenges my argument in Motets and Prosulas, p. 100, that the flower symbol in the motet is that of Mary, even though she is commonly associated with floral imagery herself (see, for example the notes to the opening lines of the texts of the conductus In rosa vernat lilium [H9/184] and O lilium convallium [F18/236]); rather it appears more likely that it is Christ. 8: for Jesus’s willingness to sacrifice his own life, see his words in John, 10:17-18.⁶ Cf. also the Passiontide liturgical text: “Christus factus est pro nobis obediens usque ad mortem, mortem autem crucis” (“Christ became obedient for our sake even unto death, the death on the cross”). 10: see Romans, 8:29-30.⁷ Also cf. Ephesians, 1:5: “Qui

²Despite some difficulty in making out the exact day of the month here – and assuming the writer is not mistaken – 30 July 1592 does correspond to a Sunday at the end of July in the 34th year of the reign of Elizabeth I in the old Julian calendar (which England followed until 1752) and thus gives the most satisfactory result.

³This piece is one of only three double motets in F (at f. 409v), and it boasts a relatively involved concordance base that includes not only further Latin and French motets, but a French refrain and a clausula a3, also in F, that conforms to all three voices of the double motet. For recent and differing considerations of the questions posed by this musical family, see Catherine A. Bradley, “Contrafacta and Transcribed Motets: Vernacular Influences on Latin Motets and Clausulae in the Florence Manuscript,” Early Music History 32 (2013): 1–70, at 40–56; and Alejandro Planchart (2003) “The Flower’s Children,” Journal of Musicological Research, 22 (2003): 303–348.

⁴“Styrps Iesse virgam produxit virgaque florem et super hunc florem requiescit spiritus almus. Virgo dei genetrix virga est, flos filius ejus” (“The stem of Jesse produced a branch [virga], and the branch a flower; and on this flower rested the kind Spirit. The branch is the virgin mother of God, the flower is her son.”).

⁵Richard of St. Laurent, De laudibus Beatae Mariae Virginis, misattributed to Albertus Magnus and published in B[eat]i Alberti Magni, Ratisboniensis episcopi, ordinis Praedicatorum, opera omnia ..., vol. 36, Auguste and Emile Borgnet, eds. (Paris: Louis Vivès, 1898).

⁶John, 10:17-18: “Propterea me pater diligit, quia ego pono animam meam ut iterum sumam eam. Nemo tollit eam a me, sed ego pono eam a me ipso; potestatem habeo ponendi eam et potestatem habeo iterum sumendi eam. Hoc mandatum accepi a Patre meo” (“Therefore the Father loves me, because I lay down my life, that I may take it up again. No man takes it away from me, but I lay it down by myself; I have the power to lay it down, and I have power to take it up again. This commandment I have received from my Father”).

⁷Romans, 8:29-30: “Nam quos praescivit, et praedestinavit conformes fieri imaginis filii eius, ut sit ipse primogenitus in multis fratribus. Quos autem praedestinavit, hos et vocavit; et quos vocavit, hos et iustificavit; quos autem iustificavit, illos et glorificavit” (“For those he [God] knew before [would be justified], he also predestined to be conformed to the image of his son, so that he [the son]

praedestinavit nos in adoptionem filiorum per Iesum Christum in ipsum, secundum propositum voluntatis suae” (“He [God] has predestined us for adoption as sons to himself through Jesus Christ, according to the purpose of his will”). 11-17: the second stanza of this conductus develops an extended discourse on: a. the figure of the vineyard (usually seen as the church or the body of the faithful, with Christ as the vine that produces it and God as its keeper), b. the pressing of blood from a winepress (a symbolic representation of the cross), and c. the image of a fuller’s bucket or vat, an instrument used to clean and whiten clothes through the application of some bleaching agent such as urine or fuller’s earth. The implication of whiteness here is a likely reference to purity, salvation, resurrection, and transfiguration; and the fuller’s tub thus appears as a figure for a eucharistic chalice. Anderson (NDRC, 4:xxx) gives an interpretation of the press as the cross and the vat as the chalice alongside a quotation from Jerome’s commentary on Isaiah.⁸ For specific discussions of the particular items in this portion of the conductus text, see the remarks on individual lines below. 12: on Christ as the true vine, see John, 15:1: “Ego sum vitis vera, et pater meus agricola est” (“I am the true vine, and my Father is the vine keeper”). For biblical imagery that suggests the figurative association of the vineyard with the church, see Jesus’s parable of the evil vinekeepers in, e.g., Matthew, 21:32-43, described in the notes to the text of the conductus Excitatur caritas in Yerico (F30/111), line 7. Also cf. the notes to lines 13-14 below, as well as Isaiah, 5:7,⁹ Matthew, 21:40 (part of the above-mentioned parable),¹⁰ and Jeremiah, 2:21.¹¹ 13-14: in addition to the freeing of the Israelites from Egypt given in the book of Exodus (symbolic of the deliverance from worldly sin into salvation), see Psalm 79:9: “Vineam de Aegypto transtulisti; eiecisti gentes et plantasti eam” (“You have brought a vineyard out of Egypt; you have cast out the Gentiles and planted it”). The negative associations allotted to Egypt here also apply to the invocation of Babylon in line 15 (q.v.). 15-17: cf. the remarks to lines 13-14; like Egypt, Babylon figures as a land of sin (see, e.g., Revelation, 18:2-5). The image of a winepress producing blood as a symbol of the cross is suggested by the dialogue in Isaiah, 63:2-3.¹² See also Revelation, 19:13-15,¹³ and Revelation, 14:20.¹⁴ There is also a related image in Lamentations, 1:15:

might be as a firstborn among many brothers. Moreover, those he predestined, he also called; and those he called, he also justified; and those he justified, he also glorified”).

⁸Anderson in the place cited refers to the following Latin text from PL, 24: col. 635B (not col. 631f, as he gives it): “... et de utero virginali tantum candorem habuit, quantum nullus fullonum possit facere super terram, sanguine cruentares?” He translates this as: “From the virgin womb he was clothed in whiteness such as no fuller on earth can match; why do you besmirch it with blood?” See further the comments on line 16 with their quote from Mark, 9:3.

⁹Isaiah, 5:7: “Vinea enim domini exercituum domus Israhel, et vir Iuda germen delectabile eius; et expectavi ut faceret iudicium, et ecce, iniquitas; et iustitiam et ecce, clamor” (“For the vineyard of the Lord of hosts is the house of Israel, and the man of Judah is his pleasant planting; and I waited for him to make judgment, and behold, there was iniquity; and [I waited for him to do] justice, and behold there was a cry”).

¹⁰Matthew, 21:40: “Cum ergo venerit dominus vineae, quid faciet agricolis illis?” (“Therefore when the lord of the vineyard shall come, what will he do with those vine keepers?”).

¹¹Jeremiah, 2:21: “Ego autem plantavi te vineam electam, omne semen verum; quomodo ergo conversa es in pravum, vinea aliena?” (“Yet I planted you as a chosen vineyard, all true seed; how then are you turned upon me into that which is good for nothing, O strange vineyard?”).

¹²Isaiah, 63:2-3: “‘Quare ergo rubrum est indumentum tuum, et vestimenta tua sicut calcantium in torculari?’ ‘Torcular calcavi solus, et de gentibus non est vir mecum; calcavi eos in furore meo, et conculcavi eos in ira mea, et aspersus est sanguis eorum super vestimenta mea, et omnia indumenta mea inquinavi.’ ” (“‘Why then is your apparel red, and your garments like theirs that tread in the winepress?’ ‘I have trodden the winepress alone, and of the Gentiles there is not a man with me: I have trampled on them in my indignation, and have trodden them down in my wrath, and their blood is sprinkled upon my garments, and I have stained all my apparel.’ ”).

¹³Revelation, 19:13-15: “Et vestitus erat vestem aspersam sanguine, et vocatur nomen eius Verbum Dei.” Et exercitus qui sunt in caelo, sequebantur eum in equis albis, vestiti byssino albo et mundo. Et de ore ejus procedit gladius ex utraque parte acutus, ut in ipso percutiat gentes. Et ipse reget eas in virga ferrea: et ipse calcet torcular vini furoris irae Dei omnipotentis. (“And he was clothed with “torcular calcavit Dominus virgini filiae Iuda” (“The Lord has trodden the virgin daughter of Judah [i.e., Jerusalem] in the winepress.”). Additionally, the figure of the man with red garments who trod in the winepress appears in the conductus Circa mundi vesperam (J54/63), lines 7-8, as an image of Christ. For a thorough treatment of the winepress image in a host of different contexts centered around Circa mundi, see the article by Caldwell, “I Have Trod the Winepress Alone,” cited earlier. 15,1-2: the antecedent to which the phrase “a qua” refers is most likely the vineyard rather than the birth, given that wine is expressed from it; in this specific case the vineyard seems more to refer to Christ than his church. 16: applicable biblical references to fulling and its results occur in: Malachi, 3:2,¹⁵ and Mark, 9:3.¹⁶ The fact that the winepress (the cross) that produces the blood is placed within a fuller’s vat, which is associated with the cleansing and whitening of garments (a symbol of salvation, as in Revelation, 3:5 and 19:8; and resurrection and transfiguration, as in the passages from Mark, 9:3, Matthew, 17:2 and 28:3, and Luke 9:29), suggests the connection of the fuller’s vat with the chalice, which holds the transfigured wine (the resurrected Christ’s blood) that provides cleansing from sin.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 1,2: Wood 591: iesse. 3,2: Wood 591: marie. 5,1: A painted capital letter occurs at this point in WI, but not in F or Wood 591; the break is shown in the lineation of the poem above, but a new strophe is not advocated here. Both F and WI agree in a strophic division at line 11, while Wood 591 breaks off before this point. 8,1: Wood 591: looks like “χρc” (?), with a macron over the “p”; likely this abbreviated name was intended to employ Greek characters throughout, as “χρς.” 8,2: Wood 591: the remainder is lost following “mori.” 11,4: F: genitura, an equally correct, synonymous reading in comparison with the text in WI. MUSIC: Caudae and rhythmic modes; base source: F occasionally offers varied readings for its melismas, some with clear indications for iambic modal treatment. The transcription offered here relies on WI as the base source, since it, like Wood 591, favors mode 1 throughout and appears from comparison with F to suggest a more authoritative rendering of certain notational details. In particular, the cauda closing Strophe I at line 10,2 (over “[predesti]na[vit]”) shows apparent religation in F of the opening of the D’s first phrase that suggests mode 3 when compared to the mode-1 ligation at this point in WI; the choice of the iambic mode in F seems intentional here even in view of the repeated c that begins the D phrase (the opening D figures are given as si,3li,2li’=c,cde,fe’ in WI, but as si,2li, 3li for the same pitch series in F). Following the end of the long first phrase in F (beginning at L16 in WI, see L15 in the alternative transcription supplied from F), F clearly seems to indicate mode 1, suggesting it has been partially converted from an earlier version disposed throughout in mode 1. Alternative versions of caudae, or portions thereof, from F and Wood 591 are provided at the end of the transcription. Opening cauda: TD: F: the whole cauda is clearly religated according to mode 3, as opposed to mode 1 in WI and Wood 591; the F version is given at the end of the a garment sprinkled with blood, and his name is called the Word of God.” And the armies that are in heaven followed him on white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean. And out of his mouth proceeds a sharp two-edged sword; that with it he may strike the nations. And he shall rule them with a rod of iron; and he treads the winepress of the fierceness of the wrath of God the Almighty.). For a investigation of the multiple contexts of the winepress image in a study centered around the Latin rondellus Vineam meam plantavi, transmitted in the eleventh fascicle of F, f. 466v, see the article by Mary Channen Caldwell, “‘I Have Trodden the Winepress Alone’: The Voice of Christ and the Mystic Winepress in a Thirteenth-Century Conductus.” Revue de musicologie, 108 (2022): 3-40.

¹⁴Revelation, 14:20: “et calcatus est lacus extra civitatem, et exivit sanguis de lacu usque ad frenos equorum per stadia mille sescenta” (“And the press was trodden outside the city, and blood came out of the press, up to the horses’ bridles, for one thousand six hundred furlongs.”).

¹⁵Malachi, 3:2: “Et quis poterit cogitare diem adventus eius? Et quis stabit ad videndum eum? Ipse enim quasi ignis conflans et quasi herba fullonum” (“And who shall be able to think of the day of his coming? And who shall stand to see him? For he is like a refining fire, and like the fuller’s herb.”).

¹⁶Mark, 9:3: “Et vestimenta eius facta sunt splendentia, candida nimis velut nix, qualia fullo super terram non potest candida facere” (“And his [Jesus’] garments became shining, exceedingly white as snow, as no fuller upon earth can make white.”).

transcription. T: W1: the stroke at L4 after the second g is omitted, taken from F, Wood 591. Line 1,3: D: F, Wood 591: $siP, 2li, 2li+siP = bPa, gf, ga+aPb$; T: F, Wood 591: $si=a'$ for “[regi]o”; these readings effect a cadence on a rather than the b in W1. 3-4: TD: W1, F, Wood 591: all sources show differing details in the setting of the two lines preceding the cauda at 4,2; each reading is offered for comparison at the end of the transcription. W1 seems particularly distant from F and Wood 591 in placing its vertical strokes of division. In W1 these markers segment the two lines so that breaks occur within line 3 and after each of its two opening words (“dum | maria |); the final word of this verse (“filio”) is then run together with the opening word of line 4 (“dei”), following it with a further vertical stroke before the three syllables that introduce the subsequent cauda (“filio dei | fecunda[tur]”). The atypical divisions here may at least partially be explained by the harmony of a second (g/a) moving to a fifth (g/d) that sets line 4,1 (“de-i”). By inserting the break within the line – following instead of preceding line 4,1 – the scribe of W1 masks somewhat the initial dissonance that results when the phrase begins with “dei,” as it does in F and Wood 591. Instead, the phrase barrels on through to conclude on “(de)i” with the g/d fifth, and, thanks to this enjambment, the dissonance is thus relegated to the penultimate sonority of the newly recast phrase. As a result, the preceding additional strokes could well have been entered to provide places for the singers to catch their breath. The scribe’s apparent reconstitution of these phrases may also have resulted in the repeated and apparently unnecessary $si=g$ that appears over the second syllable of line 4,2 (“fecundatur” – indicated by a dashed tie in the transcription), which is supported by no other source. 4,2: as can be seen in the alternative versions provided at the end: for “[fecun]da[tur]” prior to the cauda: TD: F: DL, $si=a, g$ (in T), f, g (in D); Wood 591: D: $si, 2li, 1$ of 2 el ; these readings prompt the elongations given here in the W1 version. Cauda at line 4,2: TD: F, Wood 591: the variant readings of the second and last phrases of this melisma are given at the end of the transcription. F implies a mode-3 reading for the entire cauda, as the seeming opening 3li in the D of the last cauda phrase is written L+2li; this suggests L, 2li was initially intended to open the melisma. For the end of the third phrase at L15-L16: T: F: DL; Wood 591: $2si=a, a$; this justifies the elongation of the si in the W1 version. Prior to the final syllable of “fecundatur” in line 4,2: D: W1: ‘om, supplied from F and Wood 591. Line 5: D: Wood 591: $2si, 2li, si, siP, si, 3li = d, f, ef, f$ (or g) feP, g, fed ; a slightly different melodic line that effects a cadence on a unison d, rather than the g/d fifth of W1 and F. 8,2: TD: Wood 591: remainder lost. 9,1: T: F: music for the first three syllables 3 higher. Cauda at line 10,2: TD: F: there are different ligations in the first half (suggesting mode 3) and at other points of this melisma on “[predesti]na[vit]”; it also finishes with a different cadential phrase in the D and with the addition of a punctus organi; see at end for this version and above under “caudae and rhythmic modes” for further discussion of this melisma’s rhythmic indications. D: W1: antepenultimate cauda phrase at L35-L39 om, supplied from F. Line 11,2: TD: W1: following strokes om, taken from F for clarity. 13,4: D: W1: following stroke om, taken from F. Cauda at line 14,2: T: F: opens with $2si, 2li, si=b, b, ba, g=L, L, BL, L$; this justifies the 3L rhythm for the 3li employed in the W1 reading. D: F: 2li for the 2si in W1 just prior to the fall of 7C before the cadence; this suggests the adopted rhythm. Cauda at line 15,1: TD: F: can also be rendered in mode 3; F presents some notably different readings, especially in its second phrase, see at end for this version, where the ficta b-flats in the D are verified by W1; T: W1: stroke 3L prior to cadence om, from F. Line 16,3 and following cauda: T: W1: the note over the second syllable of “fullonis” and the first phrase of the succeeding cauda are written 3 lower, corrected via F. TD: F: a mode-3 rendering throughout is likely for this cauda. T: W1: the last note of the cauda (f) surmounting the final syllable of “fullonis” at L15 is om, creating an uncharacteristically harsh-sounding pre-cadential dissonance of a semitone (b-flat over a,¹⁷ if the preceding T 3li=cba at L13 is rendered as LBL) and closing the phrase with a g-c fourth, a concluding interval that appears rarely in this piece, and only in the cauda at line 10,2 (twice in the F redaction and four times in the differently ligated W1 version); this likely error is corrected and the result rhythmicized according to F. Final cauda (at line 17): TD: F: the entire cauda may be rendered in mode 3, but 2li figures ending several phrases suggests mode 1 is more likely; e-flat sigs in both parts occur 8L into the cauda. D: W1: the om stroke prior to the final syllable comes from F.

¹⁷Although, admittedly, in W1 one appears briefly in the previous phrase, and is avoided in F through re-ligation, shown above the staff in the score.

QUI DE SABBA VENIUNT

Conductus (I20/281)

F, f. 315v (7,47)

D
I
T

[Qui de sab - ba ve - ni - unt; thus et au - rum de - fe - runt.
Qui de sab - ba ve - ni - unt; thus et au - rum de - fe - runt.

et re - gi cui ser - vi - unt su - um mu - nus of - fe - et re - gi cui ser - vi - unt su - um mu - nus of - fe -

- runt. Thu-re de - i de - i -
- runt. Thu-re de - i de - i -

- ta - - tem au - ro re - gis po - te - sta - - tem
- ta - - tem au - ro re - gis po - te - sta - - tem

pre - di - cet ec - cle - si -
pre - di - cet ec - cle - si -

- a.
- a.

II De the - sau - ro pe - cto - ris e - xit hec ob - la - ti - o

T De the - sau - ro pe - cto - ris e - xit hec ob - la - ti - o

*WI: cauda in mode 1, see at end; see also final cauda ni - si mo - tu cor - po - ris mens de - cli - net a - li - o. non ni - si mo - tu cor - po - ris mens de - cli - net a - li - o. non sit pe - ctus de - au - ra - tum. ni - chil de - o

sit pe - ctus de - au - ra - tum. ni - chil de - o

| T: first two phrases share opening with T of previous cauda (D partial)

se - mi - gra - tum. sed to - tum sit au - re -

se - mi - gra - tum. sed to - tum sit au - re -

The remainder of the cauda can also be rendered in mode 6, see at end

- um.]

- um.

(alternative readings follow)

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*Cauda on line 12,1-2, mode-1 reading from WI (mode 5 in F): WI, f. 157v (148v), VI

Musical score for the first alternative reading. It consists of two staves, D (top) and T (bottom), in 8/8 time. The D staff contains a melodic line with various note values and rests, including a red 'H' symbol above the final note. The T staff contains a corresponding line with lyrics 'non' and 'sit' written below it. Blue brackets above the notes indicate phrasing. A red 'H' symbol is also present above the final note in the T staff.

Final cauda, with the faster rhythmic reading implied by the opening two phrases used throughout: F, f. 316r, V

Musical score for the final cauda. It consists of two staves, D (top) and T (bottom), in 8/8 time. The D staff contains a melodic line with various note values and rests, including a red 'H' symbol above the final note. The T staff contains a corresponding line with lyrics '(aure) -' and '- (um.)' written below it. Blue brackets above the notes indicate phrasing. A red 'H' symbol is also present above the final note in the T staff.

QUI DE SABBA VENIUNT

Conductus (I20/281)

F, f. 315v (7,47)

I	Qui de Sabba veniunt thus et aurum deferunt, et regi cui serviunt suum munus offerunt.	They who come from Sheba bear frankincense and gold, and offer their tribute to the king they serve.
	Thure dei deitatem, auro regis potestatem, predicet ecclesia.	5 Let the church proclaim the deity of God in the frankincense, and the power of a king in the gold.
II	De thesauro pectoris exit hec oblatio, nisi motu corporis mens declinet alio. Non sit pectus deauratum nichil, deo semigratum; sed totum sit aureum.	From the treasury of the heart this offering goes forth, 10 unless the mind should turn elsewhere through an impulse of the body. Let the heart not be a gilded nothing, removed from God; let it rather be a golden whole.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 47, f. 315v: a2; Strophes I-II, complete; capital letters divide Strophe I after line 4 (hence the added space above) and indicate Strophe II at line 8. This is the final work in a nearly unbroken series of primarily through-composed pieces that has been in force since the start of F-7. Some of these have strophic texts and through-composed music, some are through-composed both textually and musically, and all bear relatively substantial cauda sections. For additional details on the musical-poetic structural features of this opening segment of the fascicle, see the remarks on the F transmission of the following work, the strophic A deserto veniens (I29/1), at F-7,48.

WI, fasc. 9, no. 73, f. 157v (148v): a2; Strophes I-II, complete, indicated by painted initials.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: General remarks: This poem explores a number of images that evoke the biblical accounts of the Epiphany, as well as the liturgical feast that commends it, celebrated on 6 January. These include the account of the visit of the Magi to the infant Jesus (Matthew, 2:1-12) and Old Testament prophecies and narratives that were seen to prefigure the event. Given the emphasis on gifts and offerings that appear in Strophe II of this conductus text, it is also possible that a nod is intended towards the offering ceremony within the liturgy of the Mass. 1-4: these lines may be translated equally well by using the subjunctive forms for 1,3 and 2,4 that appear in WI (see the textual variants listed below): “May those who come from Sheba carry ... and let them offer their tribute” Poetically, the primary difference that results is that the sound of the final syllable is uniform throughout the opening quatrain of F, but is disposed into couplets in WI. For biblical and liturgical references contained in this passage, see Isaiah, 60:6: “... omnes de Saba venient aurum, et tus deferentes et laudem domino adnuntiantes” (“... all shall come from Sheba, bringing gold and frankincense and announcing praise to the Lord”). This biblical text appears numerous times in the Epiphany liturgy; it serves, for instance, as the respond section of the Epiphany gradual Omnes de Saba. Surge et illuminare (M9), set as a two-part organum in the Magnus liber organi in F, W1, and W2. 1,3: the kingdom of Sheba (Saba), located in the southwest portion of the Arabian peninsula, was celebrated for its production of spices. In the biblical accounts in 1 Kings, 10:1-13, and 2 Chronicles, 9:1-12, the Queen of Sheba visits King Solomon with a large convoy of spices and gold (see also her mention in Matthew, 12:42, and Luke 11:31). This story was often interpreted as a typological prefiguration of the adoration of the Magi. Note also Psalm 71:10: “Reges Tharsis et insulae munera offerent; reges Arabum et Saba dona adducent” (“The kings of Tarshish and the islands shall offer presents: the kings of the Arabians and of Sheba shall bring gifts”). 5-7: for an early authority that ascribes the same symbolic meanings to the gifts, see Origen, Contra Celsum, book 1, chap. 60: “These gifts were symbols, the gold being offered as to a king, the myrrh for one who would die, and the frankincense to God.”¹ The omission of myrrh in the conductus text is interesting, as the particular focus on the Epiphany in this poem avoids any consideration of the Christ’s death. For the wide variety possible in medieval interpretations of the Magi’s gifts, see Anderson, NDRC, 4:xxiv, note 2, who quotes Bede’s exposition of the gospel of Matthew, cited from PL, 92: col. 13C, in reference to Matthew, 2:11,² in which four different representations are presented.³ 7,1: “predicet” (“declare/preach”) is in the subjunctive mood; its infinitive is “pr(a)edicare”; this is a different conjugation from the root “dico/dicere” (“speak/say”). 8-14: there may be a possible reflection in this strophe of Jesus’s story of the poor widow who gave only two small coins – all that she possessed – to the temple treasury. He praises her generosity, and contrasts her gift with those of wealthy donors who gave much more money, but proportionally less of their assets. For the narrative, see Mark, 12:41-44, and Luke, 21:1-4. 8: see the equivalent language of Matthew, 6:21, and Luke, 12:34: “Ubi enim est thesaurus tuus, ibi est et cor tuum” (“For where your treasure is, there is your heart also.”). 8-11: perhaps recalling Luke, 6:45.⁴ 10-11: on the (lowly) body turning the (more exalted) mind away from actions that may lead towards salvation, see Romans, 7: 23: “Video autem aliam legem in membris meis, repugnantem legi mentis meae, et captivantem me in lege peccati quae est in membris meis.” (“But I see another law in my [body’s] members, fighting against the law of my mind, and captivating me in the law of sin that is in my members.”); cf. also Romans, 7:25, 6:13, and 6:19. 11,3: “alio” functions here as an adverb.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 1,3: W1: saba; F: the spelling with two “b”s from F is retained here; it also ¹Taken from Origen, Contra Celsum, Henry Chadwick, transl. (Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 1953), 55.

²Matthew, 2:11: “Et intrantes domum, invenerunt puerum cum Maria matre ejus, et procidentibus adoraverunt eum: et apertis thesauris suis obtulerunt ei munera, aurum, thus, et myrrham” (“And entering into the house, they [the wise men] found the child with Mary his mother, and falling down they adored him; and opening their treasures, they offered him gifts; gold, frankincense, and myrrh.”).

³From PL, 92: col. 13C: “In auro regalis dignitas ostenditur Christi; in thure, ejus verum sacerdotium; in myrrha, mortalitas carnis; aliter: in auro spiritualis sensus, in thure olfactus virtutum, in myrrha mortificatio corporis designatur, quae quotidie omnia ab ista Ecclesia in tribus partibus mundi dispersa Domino offeruntur. Alii tres species philosophiae in his muneribus intelligere volunt: physicam, ethicam, logicam, quas post fidem ad laudem Dei iste mundus obtulit, cum antea inani studio impendit. Alii in auro allegoriam, in myrrha historiam, in thure anagogen, dicunt insinuari.” This is translated by Anderson as follows (from NDRC, 4: xxiv, note 2): “In gold is shown the natural dignity of Christ; in frankincense, his true priesthood; in myrrh, the mortality of his flesh. This may otherwise be interpreted: in gold is the spiritual sense, in frankincense, the odour of Virtues; and in the myrrh, the mortification of the flesh; daily all these things are offered to God by the Church dispersed in three parts of the world. Some wish to understand in these three gifts three systems of philosophy: Physics, Ethics, and Logic, which the world offered in praise of God when faith was received, in contrasts to its previous inane zeal. Others see in gold, allegory; in myrrh, history; and in frankincense, spiritual instruction.”

⁴Luke, 6:45: “Bonus homo de bono thesauro cordis sui profert bonum: et malus homo de malo thesauro profert malum. Ex abundantia enim cordis os loquitur” (“A good man out of the good treasure of his heart brings forth that which is good; and an evil man out of the evil treasure brings forth that which is evil. For out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaks.”).

occurs in other medieval Parisian musical documents; see, e.g., the noted breviary F-Pn lat. 15181, f. 154^v^b, which contains the responsory Omnes de Sabba. Reges Tharsis. 2,4: W1: deferant; see the notes on the text above for lines 1-4. 3,3: F, W1: “cui” is treated as a monosyllable in both the poem and its musical setting. 4:3: W1: offerant; see the notes on the text above for lines 1-4. 14,1: W1: set. MUSIC: Line 1,1: TD: W1: the note shapes over the first syllable of the text are elongated; the D is also decorated with a five-note ornamental figure recollective of the principium ante principium, a type of opening formula seen in many Notre Dame organa: 3li (with 2 el), si,R=fg,g,g. 2,4: D: F: the notes over “[servi]unt” are written 2 higher as si,2li=b,ba; W1 has si=a; the reading of F has been transposed here to reflect the consonant reading offered by W1. Cauda on line 7,2 (closes Strophe I): note the use of the same opening motive in both parts for each phrase; also, the series of parallel fifths opening the last phrase is complemented by the parallel thirds used throughout the closing phrase of the final cauda prior to the punctus organi. The notes omitted in the second phrase in F: D: 2si=c,b (at L12-L13), T: si=g (at L16), all supplied from W1. Cauda on line 12,1-2: TD: W1 in mode 1, as opposed to (the mostly) mode 5 in F; this reading is given at the end of the transcription; see also the remarks for the final cauda, which recalls some of the music from this melisma. Final cauda (at line 14,4): see also the remarks for the cauda at line 7,2. T: F, W1: the initial two phrases share their openings with the previous cauda at line 12,1-2; the opening three notes of the D are also identical; furthermore, beginning with the third phrase, this melisma can be rendered in faster values akin to mode 6; this version is supplied at the end of the transcription.

W1, f. 143r (134r) (9,59)*

I
T

[A] [Per] [Pa -]

[a]
A Per [Pa -]

CaJ:

[A] de - ser - to ve - ni - ens
[Per] de - ser - tum gra - di - ens
[Pa] - la - ti - um a - ni - mi

[a']

[A] de - ser - to ve - ni - ens
[Per] de - ser - tum gra - di - ens
[Pa] - la - ti - um a - ni - mi

| mode 2 possible?

or:

CaJ:

gra - vis ven - tus ir - ru - it quem de - vo - ret cir - cu - it su - os ha - bet an - gu - los.

or:

CaJ:

[a''] gra - vis ven - tus ir - ru - it

quem de - vo - ret cir - cu - it su - os ha - bet an - gu - los.

qui do - mum iob con - cu - tit. ut sub - ver - sa ia - ce - at sa - tan qui nos in - cu - tit. ne mens la - psa per - e - at su - per quos e - ri - gi - tur tur - ris for - ti - tu - di - nis.

qui do - mum iob con - cu - tit. ut sub - ver - sa ia - ce - at sa - tan qui nos in - cu - tit. ne mens la - psa per - e - at su - per quos e - ri - gi - tur tur - ris for - ti - tu - di - nis.

*see the alternative reading of the opening cauda from CaJ, at the end of this transcription.

 (see the alternative reading of this line from CaJ, at end) qua - tu - or in an - gu - lis. fi - li - os iob op - pri-mit vi - cta su - is e - mu - lis. dum vir - tu - tes ad - i - mit pri - mum te - net an - gu - lum pru - den - ti - a vi - gi - lans.

or (in both parts): ♩ ♫ or (in both parts): ♩ ♫ ve - rum - ta - men u - ni - cus pu - er pe - dem re - tu - lit. Qui a - ni - mi ve - ri - dic - us. mo - tus men - tem con - su - lit. ut for - ti - tu - do al - te - rum. iu - sti - ti - a ter - ti - um. quar -

| D: W1A: 4li=cbag; CaJ: very faded; editorial emendation

[Qui] dam - pnum iob nun - ti - [ut] hunc ca - sum fu - gi - [quar] - tum tem - pe - ran - ti -

| D: adopted rhythm from CaJ

W1A: ♩ ♫ ♩ ♫ ♩ ♫ ♩ ♫ ♩ ♫ ♩ ♫ ♩ ♫

W1A: ♩ ♫ ♩ ♫ ♩ ♫ ♩ ♫ ♩ ♫ ♩ ♫ ♩ ♫

b c

c d e

†(see alternative ending from CaJ, at end)

- at.]
- at.]
- a.]

- at.
- at.
- a.]

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*Opening cauda (omitted portions from W1A): CaJ, f. Br, I

A (deserto)

Line 6: CaJ, f. Br, III-IV

fi - li - os iob op - pri - mit

†Final cauda (closing line 9): extended closing punctus organi: CaJ, f. Bv, I (fugi) - at.

F, f. 316r (7,48)*

*All caudae in F allow for realization in iambic rhythms (modes 2 and 3); these alternative versions appear at the end of this transcription. Also, alternative readings from WIB of the opening cauda and the one at line 9,1 appear at the end under **.

W1B shows slightly different ligations, see at end pu - er pe - dem re - tu - lit. qui mo - tus men - tem con - su - lit. ut

 iu - sti - ti - a ter - ti - um. quar -

pu - er pe - dem re - tu - lit. qui mo - tus men - tem con - su - lit. ut
 iu - sti - ti - a ter - ti - um. quar -

[qui] dam - pnum iob nun - ti - at.
 [ut] hunc ca - sum fu - gi - at.
 [quar] - tum tem - pe - ran - ti - a.

[qui] dam - pnum iob nun - ti - at.
 [ut] hunc ca - sum fu - gi - at.
 [quar] - tum tem - pe - ran - ti - a.

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*Caudae in F in iambic modal readings (modes 2,3):

a. opening cauda: F, f. 316v, I

b. the same, in partly faster values

c. cauda at line 9,1: F, f. 316v, IV

d. final cauda (closing line 9), as it stands: F, f. 316v, V

e. The same, with conjectured omissions supplied from W1B (nunti) - at.

(nunti) - at.

Caudae in W1B with slightly different ligations from F:

a. opening cauda: W1B, f. 174r (165r), VI

b. cauda at line 9,1: W1B, f. 174v (165v), III

A (deserto)

qui

A DESERTO VENIENS – settings I (WIA) and II (F)
Conductus (J3/1 [I], I29/1 [II])

F, f. 316v (7,48): Strophes I-III; base source for the verbal text of both settings

I A deserto veniens, gravis ventus irruit, qui domum Iob concutit ut subversa iaceat, quatuor in angulis. Filios Iob opprimit, verumtamen unicus puer pedem retulit, qui dampnum Iob nuntiat.	Arising from the desert, a heavy wind rushes in, which so strikes the house of Job on all four corners 5 that it lies upended. It crushes Job's sons, and yet a single boy returned, who reported the damage to Job.
II Per desertum gradiens, quem devoret circuit, Satan, qui nos incutit. ne mens lapsa pereat, victa suis emulis. Dum virtutes adimit, animi veridicus motus mentem consulit ut hunc casum fugiat.	10 Advancing through the desert, Satan, who strikes against us, circles what he would devour, in case a lapsed mind should perish, subdued by its jealousies. 15 When [Satan] snatches away ones virtues, the truth-telling impulse of the soul counsels the mind to flee this misfortune.
III Palatium animi suos habet angulos, super quos erigitur turris fortitudinis. Primum tenet angulum prudentia vigilans, fortitudo alterum, iustitia tertium, quartum temperantia.	The palace of the soul 20 has its own corners, over which is erected a tower of Fortitude. The first corner watchful Prudence maintains, 25 Fortitude the second, Justice the third, and Temperance the fourth.

SOURCES:

This same text is found within W1 in two completely different musical settings, the second of which corresponds to the version in F. These are delineated respectively as settings I and II below, which reflects the way they are differentiated both in Anderson's conductus catalog and on the CPI website. Falck's catalog includes both settings under the same entry number: 1. This is the only time such substantially musically different settings of the same conductus text appear within the four main Parisian conductus sources F, W1, W2, and Ma. Both versions of this piece, beginning with that of setting I from WIA, are given here for comparison.

Setting I (J3/1) – WIA/CaJ version:

W1, fasc. 9, no. 59, f. 143r (134r): a2; Strophes I-II only, with painted initials at the start of I and at the opening of line 9, the last line of the stanza. This version is collated here as WIA. Strophe II, entered on f. 143v (134v) and running down the left margin at a 90-degree angle to the rest of the content on the page, is not reported in Anderson's edition.

CaJ (GB-Cjec QB 1; Cambridge, Jesus College, MS QB 1), Fragment A, no. 11, f. Br:¹ a2; a reconstituted leaf made up originally of the strips 35r, 14r, 16r, 15v (from left to right) according to the foliation on the binding fragments themselves;² Strophe I only, with no indication of further text, or space provided for it; an elaborate filigreed initial appears at the start and no additional distinctions are indicated within the poem. The reconstructed page preserves most of the piece with only minor illegible segments or lost portions resulting from gaps between the extant strips; although not presently reported by the CPI website, the piece continues onto f. Bv.³

Setting II (I29/1) – F/W1B version:

F, fasc. 7, no. 48, f. 316v: a2; Strophes I-III complete, with the texts of II-III entered in an empty space provided for them within the writing block at the end of last system to contain the piece. This is the first work in F-7 to feature a strophic (as opposed to a through-composed) musical setting for a strophic text, although the actual inclusion of the additional stanzas only obtains for this and the next three strophic pieces.⁴ A deserto (F-7,48) also inaugurates a series of works that are either strophic in form, or which transmit only single stanzas, that extends up through F-7,62 (In novas fert animus formas [J14/177]) – the only exception to this is the strophic sequence form of Redit etas aurea (I8/298), at F-7,53.⁵ Furthermore, of the works now surviving only with single stanzas, nearly all have empty space at their ends that could accommodate extra strophes.⁶ Beginning with the through-composed Ego reus confiteor (H20/106) at F-7,63 (f. 324r), occasional

¹“Br” is the foliation given in Anderson’s catalog and edition, the CPI database, and the DIAMM inventory, but the leaf is indicated as “reconstructed fol Bv” in the image’s description in DIAMM, and is additionally designated in the heading above the displayed image as “page 34 of 47.” Because A deserto veniens continues onto the other side of the leaf, it is clear that the recto and verso indications of Anderson and CPI reflect the original disposition of this folio.

²The image of this folio as reconstructed in DIAMM is incomplete: its rightmost strip (15v) is omitted and another (13v) is in its place.

³For a catalog and correctly reconstituted images of this source, including the labeling system used here to refer to the fragments, see William J. Summers and Peter M. Lefferts, English Thirteenth-Century Polyphony: A Facsimile Edition, Early English Church Music, no. 57 (London: Stainer and Bell for the British Academy, 2016), pp. 14-15, plates 11-34.

⁴For more information on the inclusion of additional strophes in F-7, see the discussion in the source reports on the F version of Roma gaudens iubila (I9/31), at F-7,52 (f. 318r). For the 47 works that precede A deserto in F-7: besides the non-strophic-sequence form of In terram Christus expuit (J7/185) at F-7,39 (f. 308r) and the prose text of Ave Maria (G7/29) at F-7,18 (f. 284v) – designated as Ave Maria II on the CPI website, and as Ave Maria I in Anderson’s catalog and edition – 24 pieces transmit strophic poems with through-composed music, different for each stanza, 4 are questionable or ambiguous as to their strophic stature (e.g., a through-composed setting where the poem conceivably could constitute a single stanza), while the remaining 17 multi-stanzaic works are through-composed in both their text and music. The only earlier work in F-7 that is analogous visually to the strophic formatting of A deserto is In terram Christus expuit (ff. 308r-v), a sequence form whose three supplementary versicles are entered at the end of each corresponding stanza. Additionally, the emphasis on through-composed settings in this part of the fascicle cuts across the apparent partition of the fascicle at f. 299r with the historiated initial of Austro terris influente (G1/26, at F-7,31).

⁵In F, this work supplies the additional text for the second of its two paired versicles (IIb), but not the first (Ib), although space has been provided for it.

⁶The single piece without such an accommodation, Frater iam prospicias (I31/132), presents a rather long single stanza with empty staves extending to the right margin of its final system. Its poetic irregularity and spare, syllabic musical style – almost akin to a prosula or motet – seems to suggest it is not conceived as a strophic form.

through-composed pieces reappear (in addition to two examples of *metra*⁷ and a single sequence form⁸), but single-strophe (and occasional verifiably strophic) works are still well represented up to F-7,77, at which point the through-composed Deduc Syon uberrimas (G8/85) begins an apparently new division of F-7 at f. 336r with its historiated initial.

WI, fasc. 9, no. 88, f. 174r (165r): a2, Strophes I-II only, beginning with a filigreed initial for Strophe I, a painted one for II, and with II entered in various clumps within the wider margin area of each system (whether left or right) that correspond roughly with the text of I that is underlaid to the music in that same system. This version is collated here as WIB.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Verse structure: the stanzas are notable for their lack of an internal rhyme scheme, yet the same rhyme sounds of Strophe I recur in Strophe II. This suggests the possibility that at least one additional stanza may originally have existed to complete a further pair of stanzas along the line of coblas doblas (as suggested by Anderson, NDRC, 5:iv, note 4). However F, the only source to preserve the third stanza, does not leave enough room to accommodate an additional strophe. Textual notes: 1-9: from an incident related in Job, 1:19;⁹ the speaker in the biblical passage is the boy referred to in line 8. 8: the idiom “pedem referre” normally means “to return” or “to go back,” and is so rendered here. 10-12: cf. 1 Peter, 5:8: “Sobrii estote, vigilate: quia adversarius vester diabolus, tamquam leo rugiens, circuit quaerens quem devoret.” (“Be sober and keep watch: because your adversary, the devil, as a roaring lion, goes about seeking whom he may devour”). Here Satan is associated with the desert wind that destroys Job’s house in Strophe I. The indirect correlation of Satan with the lion through the citation of 1 Peter in this poem is also implied in the final strophe; see the remarks to lines 19-27. Note also that, like the wind that destroyed Job’s house, the leonine Satan also circles his prey on all sides in the poem. 19-27 (Strophe III): here the four cardinal virtues – as depicted in the Bible (Wisdom, 8:7)¹⁰ and described by Cicero (De officiis, I,ii,5), Ambrose (De officiis ministrorum, I,xxiv-xxv; Expositio evangelii secundum Lucam, 5,62-67), and Augustine (De moribus ecclesiae, chap. 15), among others – form the pillars or cornerstones of the temple of the soul. The fact that the tower erected over these virtues is dedicated specifically to Fortitude (Courage) appears significant with the recognition that a frequent visual attribute of ⁷The two metrical texts, both in dactylic hexameter, are Alma redemptoris mater (I32/13), Celorum porta (J19/55).

⁸*Nulli beneficium* (H7/229) shows three paired versicles of varying poetic construction; only the first member of each pair is transmitted in F, and, of all its six extant sources, only WI transmits the whole poem.

⁹Job, 1:19: “Repente ventus vehemens inruit a regione deserti, et concussit quattuor angulos domus, quae corruens oppressit liberos tuos et mortui sunt; et effugi ego solus ut nuntiarem tibi.” (“Suddenly a violent wind rushed in from the area of the desert, and shook the four corners of the house, which, falling upon your children, crushed them and they are dead; and I alone have escaped to tell you”).

¹⁰Wisdom, 8:7: “Et si iustitiam quis diligit, labores hujus magnas habent virtutes: sobrietatem enim et prudentiam docet, et iustitiam, et virtutem, quibus utilius nihil est in vita hominibus.” (“And if a man love justice: her labors have great virtues; for she teaches temperance, and prudence, and justice, and fortitude, which are such things as men can have nothing more profitable in life”).

Fortitude is a conquered or subdued lion¹¹ – here synonymous with Satan, as demonstrated in Strophe II (see the remarks above on lines 10-12).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: Since F is the only source to preserve all stanzas of the poem, it is used here as the base manuscript for the text of both musical versions. 3,4: W1A, CaJ: conterit; the synonymous reading in F, WIB (“concutit” – “shake, knock”) is preferred, due to its replication of the rhyme at the same place in Strophe II (line 12,3: “incutit” – “strike, hit, shatter”). 6,2: W1A: loth. 7,1: W1A, WIB, CaJ: verumptamen. 9,1: CaJ: et. 9,3: CaJ: 3ob. 11,3-12,1: W1B: sathan circuit (these two words exchanged). 13,1: W1A, WIB: ut; this reading could also suffice: “... encircles what he would devour, so that a lapsed mind might perish, subdued by its jealousies.” MUSIC: Setting I (W1A): Syllabic/melismatic identity: 1. the T of the initial phrases of the opening cauda “A [deserto]” (line 1,1) = 1a. the similar T of the following texted section “[A] deserto veniens” (line 1), which also = 1b. the T in the first phrase of the following cauda on “[A] deserto veni]ens,” (line 1,3); the differences in the quotations here consist of added or omitted opening or closing notes. Opening cauda: as Anderson observes (NDRC, 5:112), the opening cauda in W1A appears to be corrupt in places; thus the setting in CaJ has helped establish certain details of this passage (which nonetheless differ from Anderson’s version; the ligature designations of CaJ appear above the score for reference); the reading of CaJ as it stands is supplied at the end of the transcription for the sake of comparison. D: W1A: the om portion of the third phrase at L19-L20 is supplied from CaJ. Cauda following line 1: TD: W1A: the ligatures of CaJ (added for comparison above the staff) supply the adopted rhythms of the transcription; a conceivable mode-2 version is also rendered above the staff, although the ligature sequence, beginning with a si in both parts, seems to argue against it, as well as the harmonic sixth that would begin L3 of the cauda. The penultimate notes of the cauda, om in W1A, are from CaJ. Line 2,2: D: W1A: 2si=c,c over “[ven]tus.” 6: see the varied treatment of this verse in CaJ, supplied as an alternative at the end of the transcription. 7,2: TD: W1A: the strokes that conclude the phrase om, supplied from CaJ. Cauda following line 9,1: D: W1A: 4li=cbag begins the fifth phrase at L7; CaJ: very faded, but high magnification does suggest the adopted editorial emendation for better consonance. Final cauda (closing line 9): D: W1A: the end of the third phrase of the cauda (from L9-L12) closes with 2R,2li,2si=d,d,ab,c,a, its implied rhythm is given above the staff, its ligation is retained in the score (note that the W1A rhythmic reading requires the TL closing rest in the T under the final a in the D, and would be the only phrase in the final cauda where the T and D do not cadence exactly together). The adopted rhythm is implied by CaJ, where the D phrase ends 2li,si=bc,a, but unfortunately the previous few notes corresponding to the opening series dda in W1A are cut away in CaJ. The adoption of the CaJ phrase ending here provides a cadence corresponding to the rhythms of all following phrases that close with 2li,si=bc,a in both W1A and CaJ (see, for example, the close of the D phrases overlaid to the segments indicated with the letters “c” and “d” above the T staff in the transcription at L28-L29 and at L45-L46). On the other hand, the implied W1A rhythm as it stands would render the second through fifth phrases as a 4L+6L pair (from L4-L22); either version thus has its logic. Final cadence: the punctus organi conclusion is extended slightly in CaJ, which inserts a brief 3L mode-1 phrase just prior to the final sonority; the CaJ version appears at the end of the transcription. Also, the pitches making up the conjunctura descent in the D are somewhat unclear in W1A, as the gesture is written – for lack of space – in the right margin without extending the stafflines; it appears to include a full octave fall from f to f. Since reading the figure as it stands in W1A would cause the final two D notes after the run of conjuncturae to be rendered as g,f (the heightening of these final pitches with those notes in the prior conjunctura run seems clear) – which would not correspond with an expected final on g – the last two si notes of the cadence are presented as a,g. Anderson’s edition, in contrast, presents the initial four ascending notes prior to the fall as 2li,2li=cd,eg, which also gets rid of the problem, but which seems unusual for this stock ¹¹See, for example, the illustrations in some of the late-thirteenth-century MSS of the Somme le Roi, such as those in London, British Library, Add. 54180, f. 91v; or Paris, Bibliothèque nationale, fr. 938, f. 69r. These present full-page illuminations depicting the four cardinal virtues. In both of these sources, Fortitude (Force) is depicted at the bottom left of the illustration as a woman holding a small circular shield or roundel with an image of a lion on it.

figure set over an f note in the T; Anderson’s interpretation also conflicts with the information in CaJ, which is otherwise identical to WIA until right after the descent. Setting II (F): Syllabic/melismatic identity: 1. T of “puer pedem retulit” (line 8, penultimate line of strophe) = 1a. similar T (and part of D) in the first phrase of the cauda immediately following on “qui [dampnum]” (line 9,1, last line of Strophe I). General remarks: in the occasional places where F and WIB disagree, WIB frequently provides better readings in terms of consonance and clearer rhythm in its cauda segments. As a result, WIB has sometimes served to amend certain segments in the base source, F; all variants from F are indicated in the notes below. Caudae: all caudae in F allow for realization in iambic rhythms (modes 2 and 3) – some better than others; alternative versions appear at the end of the transcription. Similarly, two of the caudae in WIB show occasional ligations contrasting with F; these also appear at the end as alternatives. Line 6,3: T: F: si=d over “op[primit]”; the adopted 2li=ed from WIB. 8,3: D: F: 3li=age for “[re]tu[lit]”; adopted reading from WIB. 9,1: D: F: 2li,siP=dc,Pc for the (bracketed) repeat of the syllable “qui” following the cauda on 9,1, conceivably compounded with the transposition error evident in line 9,2; adopted reading from WIB: 2liP (with 1 el)=caP. 9,2: D: F: agf,abaP over “dampnum,” mistakenly written 3 higher; adopted reading from WIB. Final cauda (closing line 9): T: F: the lack of a closing 3li or other signifier in the opening phrase of the cauda suggests “upbeat” mode 1 is preferable; the 4li at the end of this same phrase appears as 2li,2li in WIB, which helps justify the adopted rhythm; for a (less satisfactory) reading of this cauda in mode 2, see the alternative readings at the end. TD: F: in the penultimate phrase of the cauda (at L10), at least a final si=d appears to be wanting in the T, supplied from WIB; since WIB also gives additional pitches in both voices at L7 that duplicate the first notes of the following 3li, these are included in the F transcription as well, although their inclusion could be considered optional.

F, f. 316v (7,49): Strophes I-II; W1, f. 109r (100r) (9,17): Strophes III-V

8

1. [Cor-tex oc-ci - dit lit - te - re. sed spi - ri - tus vi - vi - fi - cat.
2. [Fi - des non ha - bet me - ri - tum que ra - ti - o - nem se - qui - tur.
3. [Na - tu - re clau - di re - gu - lis au - ctor na - tu - re re - nu - it
4. [In ce - lis ho - mo po - si - tus su - a la - psus su - per - bi - a
5. [Ex vi - ro fa - cta fe - mi - na si - ne mix - tu - ra se - mi - nis

8

1. Cor-tex oc-ci - dit lit - te - re. sed spi - ri - tus vi - vi - fi - cat.
2. Fi - des non ha - bet me - ri - tum que ra - ti - o - nem se - qui - tur.
3. Na - tu - re clau - di re - gu - lis au - ctor na - tu - re re - nu - it
4. In ce - lis ho - mo po - si - tus su - a la - psus su - per - bi - a
5. Ex vi - ro fa - cta fe - mi - na si - ne mix - tu - ra se - mi - nis

8

1. Sed plus quam sat est sa - pe - re tur - rim ba - bel e - di - fi - cat.
2. stul - te cre - dit quod sub - di - tum sit na - tu - re quo con - di - tur.
3. qui se re - ve - lans par - vu - lis mun - di pru - den - tes la - tu - it
4. ne de - spe - ret quod in - si - tus iu - gi es - set mi - se - ri - a
5. mun - do sug - ges - sit cri - mi - na in su - i ne - cem san - gui - nis

8

1. Sed plus quam sat est sa - pe - re tur - rim ba - bel e - di - fi - cat.
2. stul - te cre - dit quod sub - di - tum sit na - tu - re quo con - di - tur.
3. qui se re - ve - lans par - vu - lis mun - di pru - den - tes la - tu - it
4. ne de - spe - ret quod in - si - tus iu - gi es - set mi - se - ri - a
5. mun - do sug - ges - sit cri - mi - na in su - i ne - cem san - gui - nis

8

1. cor ho - mi - nis le - ti - fi - cat vi - ni po - tus vel si - ce - re.
2. qua na - tu - ra con - ci - pi - tur; na - tu - ris est ab - scon - di - tum.
3. cum ser - vi for - mam in - du - it si - ci - vis sta - tum ex - u - lis
4. su - a de - us cle - men - ti - a ne de - spe - ret quod red - di - tus
5. sed no - stre par - tus vir - gi - nis ab - hor - rens vi - ri se - mi - na

8

1. cor ho - mi - nis le - ti - fi - cat vi - ni po - tus vel si - ce - re.
2. qua na - tu - ra con - ci - pi - tur; na - tu - ris est ab - scon - di - tum.
3. cum ser - vi for - mam in - du - it si - ci - vis sta - tum ex - u - lis
4. su - a de - us cle - men - ti - a ne de - spe - ret quod red - di - tus
5. sed no - stre par - tus vir - gi - nis ab - hor - rens vi - ri se - mi - na

1. si non co - gat ex - ce - de - re quod fid - es pa - trum pre - di - cat.]
 2. cum ex na - tu - ris e - di - tum vix ra - ti - o con - se - qui - tur.]
 3. cla - ris re - for - mans vin - cu - lis mor - te mor - tem ab - sor - bu - it.]
 4. non sit car - nis et spi - ri - tus sum - mis iunx - it mor - ta - li - a.]
 5. mun - di tol - lit pec - ca - mi - na de - i pro - les et ho - mi - nis.]

*F: a realization in mode-3 is equally likely; W1: the cauda is written in faster values, see alternatives at end

1. si non co - gat ex - ce - de - re quod fid - es pa - trum pre - di - cat.]
 2. cum ex na - tu - ris e - di - tum vix ra - ti - o con - se - qui - tur.]
 3. cla - ris re - for - mans vin - cu - lis mor - te mor - tem ab - sor - bu - it.]
 4. non sit car - nis et spi - ri - tus sum - mis iunx - it mor - ta - li - a.]
 5. mun - di tol - lit pec - ca - mi - na de - i pro - les et ho - mi - nis.]

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*Final cauda:

a. F version in mode 3: F, f. 317r, III

(predicat.)

b. W1 version, showing faster values: W1, f. 109v (100v), II

(predicat.)

CORTEX OCCIDIT LITTERE

Conductus (I6/69)

F, f. 316v (7,49): Strophes I-II; WI, f. 109r (100r) (9,17): Strophes III-V

- | | | |
|-----|---|---|
| I | Cortex occidit littere,
sed spiritus vivificat. | The shell of the Old Law kills,
but the Spirit gives life. |
| | Sed plus quam sat est sapere turrim Babel edificat.
Cor hominis letificat vini potus vel sicere, si non cogat excedere
quod fides patrum predicat. | And yet, thinking more than is necessary erects a Tower of Babel.
5 A drink of wine or spirits cheers a man's heart, as long as it does not compel him to go beyond what the faith of the Fathers proclaims. |
| II | Fides non habet meritum que rationem sequitur.
Stulte credit quod subditum sit nature quo conditur qua natura concipitur.
Naturis est absconditum,
cum ex naturis editum,
vix ratio consequitur. | Faith that follows
10 reason has no merit.
One is foolish to believe that what is subject to nature arises from what is created by that nature.
Reason scarcely follows
15 when what comes forth from natural laws is not revealed by natural laws. |
| III | [Nature claudi regulis
auctor nature renuit.
Qui, se revelans parvulis, mundi prudentes latuit.
Cum servi formam induit, sic civis statum exulis
claris reformans vinculis, morte mortem absorbit. | The author of nature rejects being confined by the rules of nature.
He is the one who, while revealing himself to children,
20 lay hidden from the sages of the world.
When he took on the form of a servant,
he swallowed up death with death, and thereby restored the state of the exiled citizen in clear bondage. |
| IV | In celis homo positus, sua lapsus superbia.
Ne desperet quod insitus iugi esset miseria, sua Deus clementia, ne desperet quod redditus non sit carnis et spiritus,
summis iunxit mortalia. | 25 Man, placed in the heavens, fell from it, thanks to his own pride.
Lest he despair that he was implanted with the hardship of a yoke,
God, in his mercy, joined mortal 30 things with those on high, lest man despair that his restoration might not be of both flesh and spirit. |
| V | Ex viro facta femina, sine mixtura seminis,
mundo suggestit crimina,
in sui necem sanguinis.
Sed nostre partus virginis, abhorrens viri semina,
mundi tollit peccamina:
dei proles et hominis.] | Woman, created out of man without the mingling of seed, 35 heaped sin upon the world,
even unto the destruction of her own lineage.
But the offspring of our Virgin, who scorns the seed of man,
takes away the world's sins:
40 he is the progeny of God and mankind. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 49, f. 316v: a2; Strophes I-II only, with a capital letter beginning line 3, shown by extra space in the above text; Strophe II, opening with a capital, is entered in the empty compartment provided for it at the end of the first system of the following piece in F-7, Nobilitas animi (J8/220); there is very little room to accommodate any further text.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 17, f. 109r (100r): a2; Strophes I-V, complete. The remaining stanzas II-V (with each signaled by capitals) are entered on the subsequent leaf, f. 109v (100v), starting in the left margin aligned at about the center line of the D staff of the last (sixth) system on the folio. This is the third system to contain the following work, the conductus O quotiens [vos] volui (J1/244, uniquely preserved in W1-9). The text continues down from where it begins and into the bottom margin below the writing block, thereafter essentially extending across the entire leaf, from left to right. This continuation of the poem is thus separated somewhat from the end of Cortex occidit itself, which concludes earlier at the end of the second system on the page.

Text only:

CH-Zz C.58/275 (Zürich, Zentralbibliothek, MS C.58/275): no. 329 (no. 2),¹ f. 147v: text only of Strophe I. Images of this source are presently unavailable to me; details stem from NDRC and the CPI website.

Music only:Contrafacts:

Notes on the Text: General remarks: this poem is notable for the number of frequently confronted topics it packs within five stanzas that meditate overall on the miracle of the Incarnation. These include: a) the conflict between the Old and New Laws, b) the conflict of faith over reason, c) God's power over natural law, d) Christ humbling or demeaning himself in becoming incarnate, e) the death of death through the Incarnation, f) the fall of mankind and original sin offset by the Incarnation, g) Eve as the instigator of original sin, h) the Virgin Mary overturning the woe caused by Eve. Textual notes: 1-2: deriving from 1 Corinthians, 3:6: “qui et idoneos nos fecit ministros novi testamenti: non littera, sed Spiritu: littera enim occidit, Spiritus autem vivificat.” (“[God,] who also has made us fit ministers of the new testament, not in the letter, but in the spirit. For the letter kills, but the spirit quickens.”). In both the Bible and the conductus, the letter is the Mosaic Law, the Spirit the grace of the new covenant, offered by Christ. See also the conductus Circa mundi vesperam (J54/63), lines 3-4. 3: see Romans, 12:3.² Paul's injunction here, by warning that one should not think themselves to be wiser than they actually are, is to warn of pride, the ill effects of which populate the rest of this stanza and the following strophe. 4: the well-known story of the Tower of Babel occurs in Genesis, 11:1-9. In verse 9, the name Babel ¹The numbering of the pieces in Zz C.58/275 is that of Jakob Werner, Beiträge zur Kunde der lateinischen Literatur des Mittelalters (Aarau: Sauerländer, 1905). Werner's numbers occasionally split or combine various poems, but this does not apply for the Parisian conductus in this source (nos. 328-335 – although no. 331 is Virgo deum generat from St Gall 383). The numbering as in Anderson, NDRC, which apparently only applies to the conductus portion, is given afterwards in parentheses.

²Romans, 12:3: “Dico enim per gratiam quae data est mihi, omnibus qui sunt inter vos, non plus sapere quam oportet sapere, sed sapere ad sobrietatem: et unicuique sicut Deus divisit mensuram fidei” (“For I say, by the grace that is given me, to all that are among you, not to be more wise than it behooves to be wise, but to be wise unto sobriety, and according as God has divided to every one the measure of faith”).

is glossed as “confusion,”³ and patristic writings echo this significance, connecting it as well to Babylon, and asserting that the leader of the effort was king Nimrod, although he is not actually named in the biblical account. The story is generally framed as an example of pride and overreach on the part of mankind against God. For examples of these interpretations, see Augustine, City of God, 16:4, and the references from the Quaestiones in Vetus Testamentum (1,9,1) of Isidore of Seville, given in Anderson, NDRC, 4:vi, note 3, cited from PL, 83: col. 237C. 5-8: as Anderson relates (NDRC, 4:vi, note 8), moderation in drinking is used here in comparison to exercising moderation in the pursuit or practice of knowledge: one should take the pronouncements of the Church Fathers as authorities, rather than pursue investigation with no guidance. This metaphor sets up the following stanza, where faith and reason are placed in opposition to each other in explaining Christ’s incarnation. 5-6: a possible nod to Psalm 103:15 “et vinum laetificet cor hominis. ...” (“And that wine may cheer the heart of man. ...”); and Ecclesiasticus (Sirach), 40:20: “Vinum et musica laetificant cor: et super utraque dilectio sapientiae” (“Wine and music rejoice the heart, but the love of wisdom is above them both.”); as well as Proverbs, 31:6: “Date siceram moerentibus, et vinum his qui amaro sunt animo” (“Give strong drink to them that are sad: and wine to them that are grieved in mind”). 9-16 (Strophe II): this stanza expresses an oft-encountered trope that the circumstances surrounding Christ’s birth upended natural law in an irrational manner that only faith can hope to comprehend; see the textual notes to the conductus O felix Bituria (E8/232), lines 23-24, for some further examples of this conceit, and also the remarks on the related concepts broached in lines 17-18, below. 9-10: this expression argues the folly of those who would seek to reverse the terms of Augustine’s statement “faith precedes reason” (“fides praecedat rationem”).⁴ As he lays out in his letter to Consentinus (no. 120),⁵ one should consider matters of salvation according to faith before subjecting them to rational argument. Augustine supports this with a citation of a portion of Isaiah, 7:9, according to the Latin translation of the Greek Septuagint text: “nisi credideritis, non intelligetis” (“unless you believe, you will not understand”), showing the necessity of the proper sequence of actions. 11-13: this is a point taken up at the start of Strophe III: that God, in creating natural laws, has ultimate command over them and may bend them to his will; see the remarks on lines 17-18 that follow. 17-18: following from the arguments laid out in Strophe II (lines 9-16, and especially 11-13) this passage deals with the principle that, since it was God (the “author of nature”) who established natural laws, he is likewise able to contravene them; see the remarks for lines 9-16, above, for some further instances of this maxim in the Notre Dame musical repertory. 19-20: in the nearly identical expressions given in both Matthew, 11:25, and Luke, 10:21,⁶ Jesus here indicates that he has revealed his gift of grace more directly to humble, simple children than to those more learned or important, such as the oft-reviled scribes and Pharisees (for these, see, e.g., the account in Luke, 11:37-54, although there are even more woes recounted against them in each of the other three gospels). There may also be a nod towards the actions in Matthew, 19:13-15, where Jesus invites a number of children to pray with him and is initially rebuked

³Genesis, 11:9: “Et idcirco vocatum est nomen ejus Babel, quia ibi confusum est labium universae terrae: et inde dispersit eos Dominus super faciem cunctorum regionum” (“And therefore the name thereof was called Babel, because there the language of the whole earth was confounded: and from thence the Lord scattered them abroad upon the face of all countries”).

⁴See the analogous maxims associated with Anselm of Canterbury (1033/4–1109), from his Proslogion (written 1087-1088): “Credo ut intelligam” (“I believe so that I may understand”) and “fides quaerens intellectum” (“faith seeking understanding”).

⁵See the text in PL, 33: col. 453, chapter 3.

⁶From Luke, 10:21: “In ipsa hora exsultavit Spiritu Sancto, et dixit: Confiteor tibi Pater, Domine caeli et terrae, quod abscondisti haec a sapientibus et prudentibus, et revelasti ea parvulis. Etiam Pater: quoniam sic placuit ante te.” (“In that same hour, he [Jesus] rejoiced in the Holy Ghost, and said: I confess to you, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because you have hidden these things from the wise and prudent, and have revealed them to little ones. Yea, Father, for so it has seemed good in your sight.”).

by his disciples.⁷ 21: The familiar image of Christ as a servant reflects God’s humbling of himself when he adopted human form; see Philippians, 2:7-8.⁸ For additional appearances of this image within the Notre Dame repertory, see the remarks on the conductus Sol sub nube latuit (I16/334), lines 17-20. 22: most specifically, this passage recalls the language of 1 Corinthians, 15:54: “Cum autem mortale hoc induerit immortalitatem, tunc fiet sermo, qui scriptus est: Absorpta est mors in victoria” (“And when this mortal hath put on immortality, then shall come to pass the saying that is written: Death is swallowed up in victory.”). For Christ conquering death, see Isaiah, 25:8; 1 Corinthians, 15:26 and 15:54-55; 2 Timothy, 1:10; Hebrews, 2:14; and Payne, Motets and Prosulas, p. 27 (note to lines 136-137); the irony of Christ surmounting death with his own death is a common theme in the conductus repertory and beyond. 23-24: the exiled citizen in chains is presumably mankind, after its fall and before the promise of Christ’s grace; perhaps the expression may reflect Ephesians, 2:19: “Ergo jam non estis hospites, et advena: sed estis cives sanctorum, et domestici Dei” (“Now therefore you [new Christians] are no more strangers and foreigners; but you are fellow citizens with the saints, and the domestics of God.”). 25-26: mankind’s fall from God’s grace, due to pride, and his expulsion from the paradise of Eden (represented figuratively here as a fall from heaven), as related in Genesis, 3. 29-32: without the saving intervention of the spirit, mankind was doomed to death in the flesh. Christ’s incarnation, fusing mortal flesh with the spirit of God, restored the possibility that mankind could achieve salvation. See, for reflections of these ideas, 1 Thessalonians, 5:23, Romans, 8, especially 8:6, 8:13, Galatians, 5:17, John, 3:6.⁹ 33-34: Eve – here cast in a typical role as an inverted figure for the Virgin Mary – was created, not by sexual procreation, but by God fashioning her from out of Adam’s body; see Genesis, 2:20-23.¹⁰ This passage echoes not only the conception of Jesus by Mary, but also the doctrine of Mary’s own immaculate conception; see, for example, the conductus Beate virginis (H15/43), lines 5-8. 35-36: Because Eve succumbed to the serpent’s temptation, plucked the fruit, and offered it to Adam (Genesis, 3:6), she is here accorded the blame for bringing original sin upon all of mankind to follow; for some biblical passages bearing on this point, see 1 Timothy, 2:13-14;

⁷Matthew, 19:13-15: “Tunc obliti sunt ei parvuli, ut manus eis imponeret, et oraret. Discipuli autem increpabant eos. Jesus vero ait eis: Sinite parvulos, et nolite eos prohibere ad me venire: talium est enim regnum caelorum. Et cum imposuisset eis manus, abiit inde” (“Then were little children presented to him, that he should impose hands upon them and pray. And the disciples rebuked them. But Jesus said to them: Suffer the little children, and forbid them not to come to me: for the kingdom of heaven is for such. And when he had imposed hands upon them, he departed from thence.”).

⁸Philippians, 2:7-8: “... sed semet ipsum exinanivit, formam servi accipiens in similitudinem hominum factus, et habitu inventus ut homo. Humiliavit semet ipsum, factus oboediens usque ad mortem, mortem autem crucis” (“But he [Christ] emptied himself, taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men, and devised in appearance as a man. He humbled himself, becoming obedient unto death, even to the death of the cross.”).

⁹Some of the above references are provided here: 1 Thessalonians, 5:23: “Ipse autem Deus pacis sanctificet vos per omnia: ut integer spiritus vester, et anima, et corpus sine querela in adventu Domini nostri Jesu Christi servetur” (“And may the God of peace himself sanctify you in all things; that your whole spirit, and soul, and body, may be preserved blameless in the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ”). Romans, 8:6: “Nam prudentia carnis, mors est: prudentia autem spiritus, vita et pax” (“For the wisdom of the flesh is death; but the wisdom of the spirit is life and peace”); Romans, 8:13: “Si enim secundum carnem vixeritis, moriemini: si autem spiritu facta carnis mortificaveritis, vivetis” (“For if you live according to the flesh, you shall die: but if by the Spirit you mortify the deeds of the flesh, you shall live”). Galatians, 5:17: “Caro enim concupiscit adversus spiritum, spiritus autem adversus carnem: haec enim sibi invicem adversantur, ut non quaecumque vultis, illa faciat” (“For the flesh lusteth against the spirit: and the spirit against the flesh; for these are contrary one to another: so that you do not the things that you would”). John, 3:6: “Quod natum est ex carne, caro est: et quod natum est ex spiritu, spiritus est” (“That which is born of the flesh, is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit, is spirit.”).

¹⁰Genesis, 2:20-2: “Appellavitque Adam nominibus suis cuncta animantia, et universa volatilia caeli, et omnes bestias terrae: Adae vero non inveniebatur adiutor similis ejus. Immisit ergo Dominus Deus soporem in Adam: cumque obdormisset, tulit unam de costis ejus, et replevit carnem pro ea. Et aedificavit Dominus Deus costam, quam tulerat de Adam, in mulierem: et adduxit eam ad Adam. Dixitque Adam: Hoc nunc os ex ossibus meis, et caro de carne mea: haec vocabitur Virago, quoniam de viro sumpta est” (“And Adam called all the beasts by their names, and all the fowls of the air, and all the cattle of the field: but for Adam there was not found a helper like himself. Then the Lord God cast a deep sleep upon Adam: and when he was fast asleep, he took one of his ribs, and filled up flesh for it. And the Lord God built the rib which he took from Adam into a woman: and brought her to Adam. And Adam said: This now is bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh; she shall be called woman, because she was taken out of man.”)

Romans, 5:12, 15, 17-19.¹¹ 37-38: I presume the phrase “who scorns the seed of man” refers to Mary. 39: reflective of John the Baptist’s exclamation to Jesus (John, 1:29), as well as the Agnus dei of the Mass liturgy: “Altera die vidit Joannes Jesum venientem ad se, et ait: ‘Ecce agnus Dei, ecce qui tollit peccatum mundi’ ” (“The next day, John saw Jesus coming to him, and he said: ‘Behold the Lamb of God, behold him who takes away the sin of the world’”).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: Since W1 supplies the text for Strophes III-V, its text variants as well as those of F are collated throughout. 1,3: Tt: W1: littere. 2,1: Tt: W1: set. 3,1: Tt: W1: set. 6,4: Tt: F: cicere; adopted reading from W1, Ch-Zz C.58/275; the spelling “sicere” is preferred here to avoid possible confusion with the homonym “cicer” (“chickpea”). 13: in addition to several typos elsewhere in the poem, Anderson (NDRC, 4:vii) omits this entire line in his edition of the Latin text, yet translates it in the opposite column while leaving out a translation for line 12. As a result, his line numbering of the poem is off by one unit for the remainder of the text. The line is present in the extra listed strophes that follow his edition of the music (NDRC, 4:13). 13,1: Tt: F: quo; from W1. 18,3: Tt: W1: tenuit; emended after Anderson’s edition and AH, 20, p. 41, no. 8. 22,1: Tt: W1: si; emended after Anderson and AH. 31,5: Tt: W1: abbreviated $\sigma\varsigma$ (i.e., closing with a Greek sigma), with a macron over the last two letters. MUSIC: Line 6,4: D: F: a b-natural on “[si]ce[re]” is implied here by the absence of a sig at the start of the system, and because the b sits under an e in the T; in W1 a b-flat sig is operative. 7,3-4: D: F: si+siP,3li,3si=d+Pd,bag,c,d,d for “[co]gat excedere”; the adopted reading from W1 seems better (the shape indications of the figures are retained from F, as the error involves an apparent shift of pitch overlay); F makes less sense, as it apparently omits the figure over syllable 2 of 7,3 (“[co]gat”), continues the rest of phrase over the wrong notes (creating a dissonance, then a sixth over “ex[ce]de[re]”), and adds a repeated last note (d) to supply the missing pitch. 7,4: D: W1: a b-flat sig is operative, none in F. 8,3: D: b-flats implied by sig in W1. Final cauda: F presents this melisma in slower values than W1, and may be realized with equal legitimacy in mode 3; the alternatives appear at the end of the score. Because the version in F closes its penultimate phrase in the T with a 3li where 3si would seem called for (see L37-L40), and since the second and third notes of the final D phrase (d,f) at L42-L43 seem written as if the scribe initially intended to ligate them – or, in another way of looking at it, the f seems as if it might have been squeezed in over the d as an afterthought – it would appear that the W1 version has some claim of priority. Even so, W1 exhibits some erasures in its second and third T phrases, and the penultimate T phrase that begins at L17 of the alternative transcription starts uncharacteristically with a harmonic seventh (g/f).

¹¹ Timothy, 2:13–14: “Adam enim primus formatus est: deinde Heva: et Adam non est seductus: mulier autem seducta in praevaricatione fuit” (“For Adam was first formed; then Eve. And Adam was not seduced; but the woman being seduced, was in the transgression.”). Romans, 5:12: “Propterea sicut per unum hominem peccatum in hunc mundum intravit, et per peccatum mors, et ita in omnes homines mors pertransiit, in quo omnes peccaverunt” (“Wherefore as by one man sin entered into this world, and by sin death; and so death passed upon all men, in whom all have sinned.”). Romans, 5: 17–19: “Si enim unius delicto mors regnavit per unum: multo magis abundantiam gratiae, et donationis, et justitiae accipientes, in vita regnabunt per unum Jesum Christum. Igitur sicut per unius delictum in omnes homines in condemnationem: sic et per unius justitiam in omnes homines in justificationem vitae. Sicut enim per inobedientiam unius hominis, peccatores constituti sunt multi: ita et per unius obeditionem, justi constituentur multi” (“For if by one man’s offence death reigned through one; much more they who receive abundance of grace, and of the gift, and of justice, shall reign in life through one, Jesus Christ. Therefore, as by the offence of one, unto all men to condemnation; so also by the justice of one, unto all men to justification of life. For as by the disobedience of one man, many were made sinners; so also by the obedience of one, many shall be made just.”).

NOBILITAS ANIMI

Conductus (J8/220)

F, f. 317r (7,50)

D

[No - [Proh

T

No -
Proh

[No] - bi - li - tas a - ni - mi so - la est ac u - ni - ca, [Proh] do - lor pro - di - ti - o sum - ma ra - dix cri - mi - num

[No] - bi - li - tas a - ni - mi so - la est ac u - ni - ca, [Proh] do - lor pro - di - ti - o sum - ma ra - dix cri - mi - num vir - tus do - let op - pri - mi. fu - it fu - it pu - bli - ca, pro - dit in hoc pre - li - o vul - tum ge - rens ge - mi - num,

vir - tus do - let op - pri - mi. fu - it fu - it pu - bli - ca,
pro - dit in hoc pre - li - o vul - tum ge - rens ge - mi - num,

mo - do so - la re - lin - qui - tur. sub tri - bu - to re - di - gi - tur, si - mu - la - trix iu - sti - ti - e pri - ma vi - de - tur fa - ci - e mo - do so - la re - lin - qui - tur. sub tri - bu - to re - di - gi - tur, si - mu - la - trix iu - sti - ti - e pri - ma vi - de - tur fa - ci - e

Se - fa - [Se] - dens ge - mit se con - te - ri,
[fa] - ve - re quam non o - pe - re

Se - fa - [Se] - dens ge - mit se con - te - ri, [fa] - ve - re quam non o - pe - re

se de - so - la - tam de - se - ri, et ge - mi - tus e - ius non est ab - scon - di - tus.]
sed ver - bo cu - rat co - le - re. of - fi - ti - o cum su - is ser - vit vi - ti - o.]

se de - so - la - tam de - se - ri, et ge - mi - tus e - ius non est ab - scon - di - tus.
sed ver - bo cu - rat co - le - re. of - fi - ti - o cum su - is ser - vit vi - ti - o.

[g] [h] [h] [g] [h]

[h'] [i']

[i']

NOBILITAS ANIMI

Conductus (J8/220)

F, f. 317r (7,50)

I Nobilitas animi sola est ac unica. Virtus dolet opprimi. Fuit, fuit publica; modo, sola, relinquitur; sub tributo redigitur. Sedens, gemit se conteri, se desolatam deseri, et gemitus eius non est absconditus.	Nobility of the mind is alone and forlorn. Virtue grieves in being oppressed. She was – was – prevalent; 5 now, alone, she is forsaken; she is placed under tribute. Languishing, she laments being worn down, that she is left desolate; and yet her sighing 10 has not been silenced.
II Proh dolor, proditio, summa radix criminum, prodit in hoc prelio, vultum gerens geminum. Simulatrix iustitiae, prima videtur facie favere quam, non opere sed verbo, curat colere. Offitio cum suis servit vitio.	Oh, the pain! Treachery, the deepest root of evil, advances in this battle, presenting a double face. 15 As an impersonator of Justice, with her first face she seems to favor what she takes care to cultivate, but with words, not deeds. In the exercise of her duties she 20 serves her own minions with vice.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 50, f. 317r: a2; Strophes I-II complete, with line 7 opening with a capital letter, signified by the extra space in the text above; Strophe II, headed with a capital, is entered in the empty space provided for it within the writing block at the end of the last system of this piece, with no room for more stanzas; a unique textual and musical setting, so far only the second such piece with this feature in F-7 since Renovantur veterum (J5/305) at F-7,25. Settings unique to F-7 become more frequent with Heu he heu quam subditis (J9/154) at F-7,55.

Text only: none.Music only: none.Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: General remarks: This poem, a critique of the loss of virtue and the increase in treacherous behavior, is the first piece in F-7 not to feature explicit sacred content. It also serves to inaugurate a series of conductus featuring mostly critical texts, planctus, and in one case an invocation to the eternal city (Roma gaudens iubila [I9/312]); most of these (Roma gaudens excepted) also shy away from explicit sacred subjects or imagery. Also, the evocation of classical literature in Nobilitas animi, and in a number of the poems that follow it,¹ is additionally noteworthy, as is the fact that all the references to outside texts that I have been able to identify in Nobilitas animi are more paraphrastic than literal. This feature stands in contrast to the cluster of texts with frequent classical citations that appears between F-6,20-26. Textual notes: 1-3,1: the opening of the poem suggests a clear nod to Juvenal, Satires, 8,20: “/ ... nobilitas sola est atque unica virtus. /” (“virtue is the one and only nobility”). Juvenal’s intent in his satire is to question the idea that virtue is gifted to those with distinguished family pedigrees. It opens with the phrase: “Stemmata, quid faciunt?” (“Just what are your family trees worth?”) The expression alluded to in the conductus gained further currency thanks to its inclusion in the twelfth-century Moralium dogma philosophorum, attributed variously to William of Conches, Walter of Châtillon, Alan of Lille, and others.² Here and in other instances, Juvenal’s phrase was filled out – and its meaning reshaped – as “nobilitas animi sola est atque unica virtus” (“nobility of mind is the one and only virtue”) in order to complete a dactylic hexameter, since Juvenal’s verse began with the three-syllable word atria, carried over from the previous line through enjambment. This latter expression is the form of the maxim that, for example, Dante invoked in his Monarchia (2,3,4). Furthermore, the punctuation in F suggests that line 3 begins a new syntactic unit, and that the sentiment of the medieval form of the maxim (i.e., in the Moralia dogma) is ironically recalibrated in the conductus poem, just as the rendering in the Moralium differs in its own nuance from the phrase as used by Juvenal. This therefore suggests that the medieval transmission of this expression comprehended it from a different perspective than the one invested by the Roman poet. For additional classical correspondences, see the remarks for line 4; and for a further nod to the supremacy of virtue over noble birth, see lines 23-25 of the conductus Nulli beneficium (H7/229). 4: although the verbal series “fuit fuit” here may seem to be an error, AH, 21:131, no. 187, retains the reading as it stands. Against Anderson’s correction to “olim” (NDRC, 5:viii) – or to something else like “prius” – there is a demonstrable correspondence to Cicero’s first oration against Catiline (in the third or fourth paragraph or so), where the repetition serves for rhetorical emphasis: “Fuit, fuit ista quondam in hac re publica virtus, ut viri fortes acrioribus suppliciis civem perniciosum quam acerbissimum hostem coercerent” (“There was – there was – once virtue in this republic, such that valiant men would keep pernicious citizens in check with punishments harsher than the bitterest enemy.”). Along with the almost certain reference to Juvenal in lines 1-3, this would present a further nod to a classical source. Most interestingly, Brunetto Latini (ca. 1220–1294, guardian and possible teacher of Dante) brings the Juvenal and Ciceronian references together in his Li Livres dou Trésor, (2,114,2-3), that he wrote while exiled in France from 1261-1268. In this passage, Latini notes that those who like to call attention to their noble heritage, but who act without virtue, bring shame upon themselves; he then follows soon thereafter with the example of Catiline, who touted his pedigree as he planned his conspiracies against Rome.³ Furthermore, almost immediately thereafter, Latini invokes the saying of Juvenal that appears in Nobilitas animi, but ascribes it here (apparently mistakenly) to Horace.⁴ 5-6: cf. Lamentations, 1:1: “Quomodo sedet sola civitas plena populo! Facta est quasi vidua domina gentium; princeps provinciarum facta ¹These include, in addition to Nobilitas animi (J8/220, at F-7 50), Debet se circumspicere (I10/83, F-7,53), Rege mentem et ordina (I33/299, F-7,54), and Heu he heu quam subditis (J9/154, F-7,55).

²See the edition of John Holmberg, Das Moraliu dogma philosophorum des Guillaume de Conches: lateinisch, altfranzösisch und mittelniederfränkisch, (Uppsala: Almqvist and Wiksells, 19290, 54; an online version is available at: <http://www.intratext.com/IXT/LAT0662/>). The text is also available, here ascribed to Hildebert of Lavardin in PL, 171, with the Juvenal quote at col. 1043C (not 1073 as sometimes reported).

³See Brunetto Latini, The Book of the Treasure, Paul Barrette and Spurgeon Baldwin, trans., Garland Library of Medieval Literature, vol. 90, ser. B (New York and London: Garland, 1993), 261: “If those who delight in the nobility of great lineage and boast of having noble ancestors do not do virtuous things, they do not realize that the praise of their parentage will turn more to their shame than to their esteem; for when Catiline was conspiring secretly in Rome and doing only bad deeds, and spoke before the senators of the goodness of his father and the nobility of his lineage and the good that his family had done for the commune of Rome, he was indeed expressing more his shame than his honor.”

⁴*Ibid.*: “But concerning true nobility, Horace says that it is only in virtue.”

est sub tributo!” (“How does the city sit solitary that was full of people! How is the mistress of the Gentiles become as a widow: the princes of provinces made tributary!”). 7-10: conceivable echoes of Isaiah, 47:1, directed there towards Babylon: “Descende, sede in pulvere, virgo filia Babylon: sede in terra; non est solium filiae Chaldaeorum, quia ultra non vocaberis mollis et tenera” (“Come down, sit in the dust, O virgin daughter of Babylon, sit on the ground: there is no throne for the daughter of the Chaldeans, for you shall no more be called delicate and tender.”).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. 3,1: note that virtus is feminine. MUSIC: no variants. Repetition: this conductus is notable for the amount of musical repetition it displays. Only the setting of its final four lines shows no apparent re-use of musical material. The opening cauda is interesting in its frequent use of the two-note motive f-g (here represented by a boxed “a” above the staff), separated by phrases that generally involve different variations of a descent from b-flat to f (here shown as “b”), followed by a brief conclusion. A further stepwise, falling-and-rising motive (shown here as “c”) is also prominent and seen in various transpositions, such as its use in the D of the setting of lines 5-6. Motivic sharing with other works: the first and third T phrases in the final cauda (marked above the staff in the score with a boxed “g”) present a case of a musical gesture that appears multiple times throughout the conductus repertory, in both melismatic and syllabic contexts. These are all listed here in the order they occur in F: a) Tr of opening phrase in opening cauda in Dic Christi veritas (C3/94) – a3 – F-6,3; b) a prominent motive found in various caudae of Ave Maris stella virgo (D1/34) – a3 – F-6,17; c) T in opening motive of penultimate phrase in final cauda of Ave presul gloriose (F20/36) – a3 – F-6,48; d) D of “Ista dies ce[lebrari]” (line 1,1-2) of Ista dies celebrari (H30/189) – a2 – F-7,10; e) T of first and third phrases in final cauda of Nobilitas animi (J8/220) – a2 – F-7,50; f) opening phrase of Tr in Omni pene curie (I34/252) – a2 – F-7,99.

DEBET SE CIRCUMSPICERE

Conductus (110/83)

F, f. 317v (7,51): Strophes I-II, IV; WI, f. 116v (107v) (9,29): Strophe III; OxRawl, f. 236r (7r) (no. 9): Strophe V*

1. [De -
2. [Quid
3. [Ac -
4. [Gra -
5. [Qui

1. De -
2. Quid
3. [Ac -
4. Gra -
5. [Qui

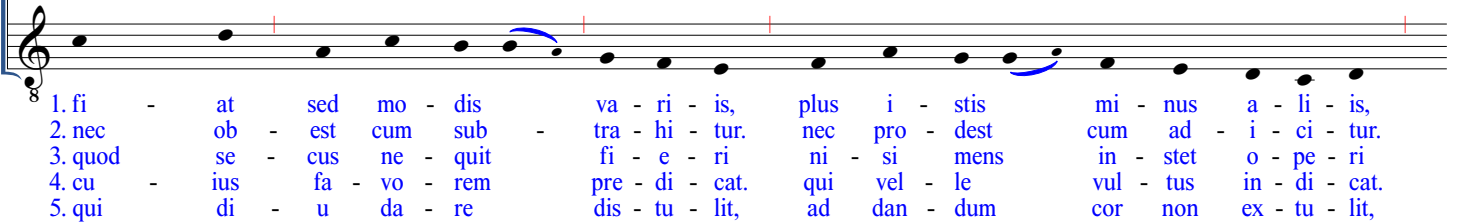

1. [De] - bet se cir - cum - spi - ce - re da - tor in dan - do mu - ne - re
2. [Quid] iu - vat gut - ta mi - ni - ma stil - lans de nu - be max - i - ma,
3. [Ac] - ce - pta fa - cit mu - ne - ra lar - gi - to - ris mens li - be - ra
4. [Gra] - ta ve - nit ce - le - ri - tas u - bi dis - pen - sat lar - gi - tas,
5. [Qui] dat, ci - to det, quo - ni - am mo - ra mi - nu - it gra - ti - am;

1. quis quid cu - i det et qua - li - ter. ut cun - ctis li - be - ra - li - ter
2. si scin - til - lam quis ad - i - cit ro - go; quid ro - go pro - fi - cit?
3. cau - sam [mo - dum] con - si - de - rat ut gra - tum mi - nus of - fe - rat
4. que cir - ca be - ne - fi - ti - um men - tis ge - rit in - di - ti - um.
5. nam spem con - fun - dit te - di - o, dum lan - guet ex - pe - cta - ti - o;

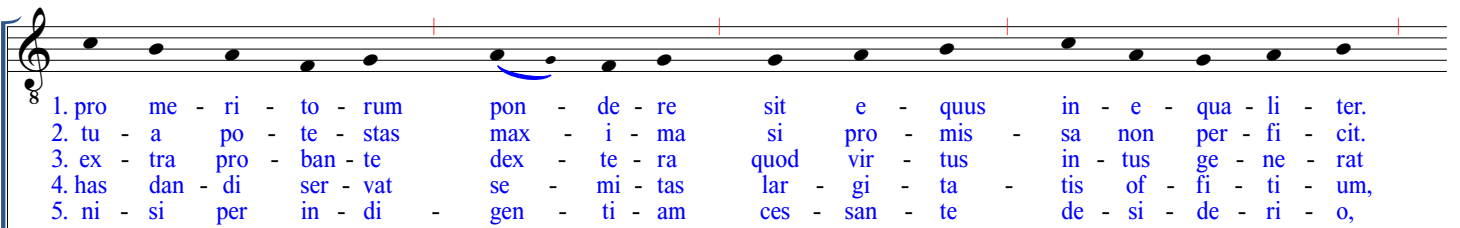

*The music of the opening cauda reappears in the final melisma, with an added, intervening segment.

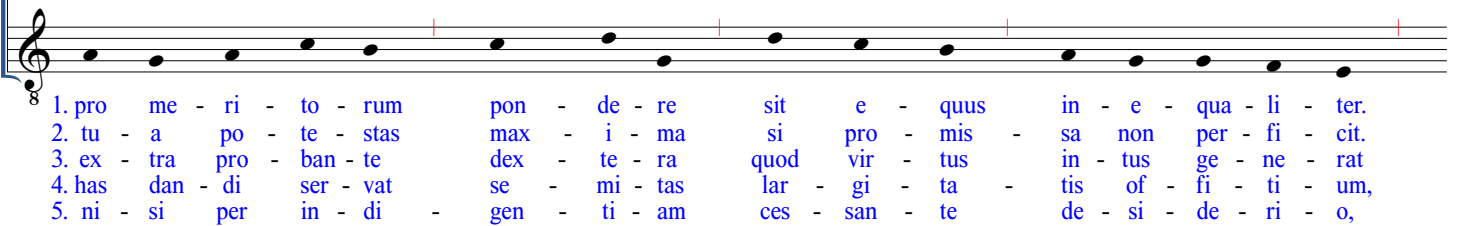

1. fi - at sed mo - dis va - ri - is, plus i - stis mi - nus a - li - is,
2. nec ob - est cum sub - tra - hi - tur. nec pro - dest cum ad - i - ci - tur.
3. quod se - cus ne - quit fi - e - ri ni - si mens in - stet o - pe - ri
4. cu - ius fa - vo - rem pre - di - cat. qui vel - le vul - tus in - di - cat.
5. qui di - u da - re dis - tu - lit, ad dan - dum cor non ex - tu - lit,

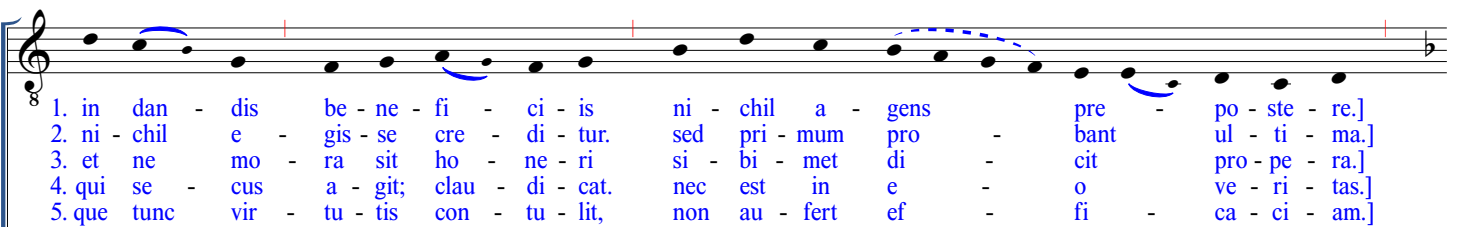

1. fi - at sed mo - dis va - ri - is, plus i - stis mi - nus a - li - is,
2. nec ob - est cum sub - tra - hi - tur. nec pro - dest cum ad - i - ci - tur.
3. quod se - cus ne - quit fi - e - ri ni - si mens in - stet o - pe - ri
4. cu - ius fa - vo - rem pre - di - cat. qui vel - le vul - tus in - di - cat.
5. qui di - u da - re dis - tu - lit, ad dan - dum cor non ex - tu - lit,

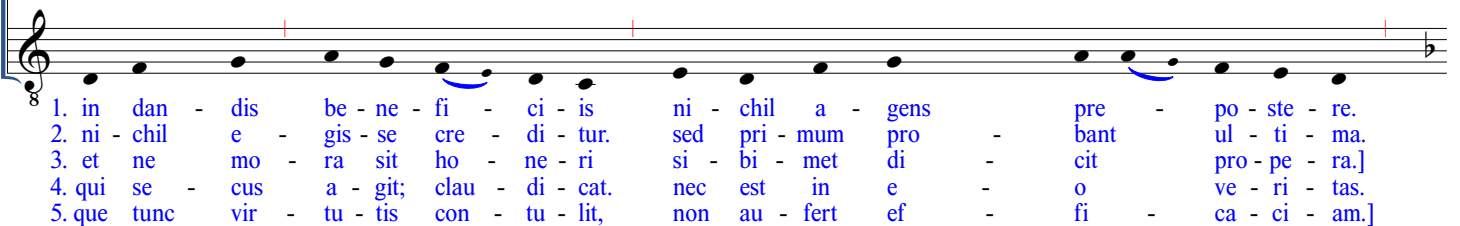

1. pro me - ri - to - rum pon - de - re sit e - quus in - e - qua - li - ter.
2. tu - a po - te - stas max - i - ma si pro - mis - sa non per - fi - cit.
3. ex - tra pro - ban - te dex - te - ra quod vir - tus in - tus ge - ne - rat
4. has dan - di ser - vat se - mi - tas lar - gi - ta - tis of - fi - ti - um,
5. ni - si per in - di - gen - ti - am ces - san - te de - si - de - ri - o,

1. pro me - ri - to - rum pon - de - re sit e - quus in - e - qua - li - ter.
2. tu - a po - te - stas max - i - ma si pro - mis - sa non per - fi - cit.
3. ex - tra pro - ban - te dex - te - ra quod vir - tus in - tus ge - ne - rat
4. has dan - di ser - vat se - mi - tas lar - gi - ta - tis of - fi - ti - um,
5. ni - si per in - di - gen - ti - am ces - san - te de - si - de - ri - o,

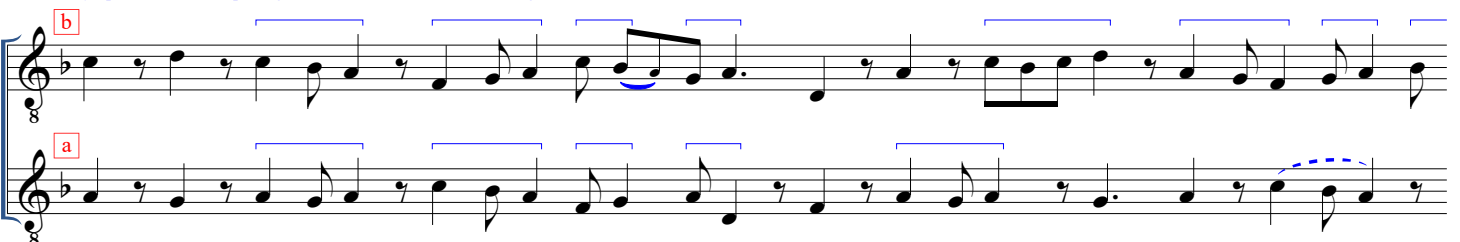

1. in dan - dis be - ne - fi - ci - is ni - chil a - gens pre - po - ste - re.]
2. ni - chil e - gis - se cre - di - tur. sed pri - mum pro - bant ul - ti - ma.]
3. et ne mo - ra sit ho - ne - ri si - bi - met di - cit pro - pe - ra.]
4. qui se - cus a - git; clau - di - cat. nec est in e - o ve - ri - tas.]
5. que tunc vir - tu - tis con - tu - lit, non au - fert ef - fi - ca - ci - am.]

1. in dan - dis be - ne - fi - ci - is ni - chil a - gens pre - po - ste - re.
2. ni - chil e - gis - se cre - di - tur. sed pri - mum pro - bant ul - ti - ma.
3. et ne mo - ra sit ho - ne - ri si - bi - met di - cit pro - pe - ra.]
4. qui se - cus a - git; clau - di - cat. nec est in e - o ve - ri - tas.
5. que tunc vir - tu - tis con - tu - lit, non au - fert ef - fi - ca - ci - am.]

| repeats the entire opening cauda with an added, intervening section

b

a

The image shows a musical score for two staves in F major, 110/83, a2. The score includes blue annotations: brackets above notes, a red box around a 'c'' note, and a dashed blue line connecting notes in the bass staff.

The score is written in F major (one flat) and 110/83 time. The key signature is one flat (F major). The time signature is 110/83. The piece is in a2 (second ending).

The score consists of two staves. The upper staff is in treble clef and the lower staff is in bass clef. The music is in F major. The score includes blue annotations: brackets above notes, a red box around a 'c'' note, and a dashed blue line connecting notes in the bass staff.

DEBET SE CIRCUMSPICERE

Conductus (I10/83)

F, f. 317v (7,51): Strophes I-II, IV; WI, f. 116v (107v) (9,29): Strophe III; OxRawl, f. 236r (7r) (no. 9): Strophe V

- | | |
|--|--|
| I Debet se circumspicere, dator in dando munere,
quis quid cui det, et qualiter, ut cunctis liberaliter
fiat, sed modis variis:
plus istis, minus aliis,
pro meritorum pondere.
Sit equus inequaliter.
in dandis beneficiis,
nichil agens prepostere. | A giver, in giving a gift, is obliged to consider who might give what to whom, and how, so that his giving may be done generously 5 for all, but with different allotments:
more to some, and less to others,
according to the weight of what they deserve.
A giver should be equitable by granting benefits unequally,
10 doing nothing the wrong way around. |
| II Quid iuvat gutta minima, stillans de nube maxima, si scintillam quis adicit rogo? Quid, rogo, proficit?
Nec obest cum subtrahitur, nec prodest cum adicitur.
Tua potestas maxima, si promissa non perficit,
nichil egisse creditur;
sed primum probant ultima. | What good is the smallest raindrop, squeezed from the largest cloud, if someone puts a spark to a bonfire? What, I ask, does that accomplish?
15 It neither hinders when it is withdrawn, nor benefits when it is added.
The grandest of all your powers,
if it is not carried through as promised,
is considered to have done nothing;
20 for the ends determine the beginning. |
| III [Accepta facit munera largitoris mens libera.
Causam, [modum] considerat, ut gratum minus offerat.
Quod secus nequit fieri,
nisi mens instet operi,
extra probante dextera.
Quod virtus intus generat, et ne mora sit honeri, sibimet dicit: "Propera!"] | A giver's open mind makes his gifts effective.
He takes into account their occasion and their amount, so that he might offer something gratifying, even if 25 to a lesser degree. This could not be done otherwise, unless the mind perseveres in the deed,
and without the right hand's approval.
Because virtue issues from within,
and in order that there be no delay to the task,
30 it says to itself: "Hurry!" |
| IV Grata venit celeritas ubi dispensat largitas que circa benefitium.
Mentis gerit inditium
cuius favorem predicat.
Qui velle vultus indicat.
Has dandi servat semitas largitatis offitium.
Qui secus agit, claudicat,
nec est in eo veritas. | Rapidity comes to be pleasing when generosity pays out what pertains to a gift.
It bears the mark of the mind
35 that commends the favor.
Such an appearance discloses what it wants.
The kindness of the giver maintains these paths of giving.
One who does otherwise, falters,
40 and there is no truth in him. |
| V [Qui dat, cito det, quoniam | One who does give, should give promptly, since |

mora minuit gratiam;	delay diminishes the favor;
nam spem confundit tedio,	for it confounds hope with harm,
dum languet expectatio,	while it grows weaker and weaker as it waits.
Qui diu dare distulit,	45 One who puts off giving for long,
ad dandum cor non extulit.	has not elevated his heart towards giving.
Nisi per indigentiam	Unless his desire is cessante desiderio,	lapsing due to want,
que tunc virtutis contulit,	then he claims no advantage to non aufert efficaciam.]	50 whatever he has virtuously bestowed .

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 51, f. 317v: a2; Strophes I-II, IV, only, with II and IV entered into a dedicated space for the stanzas at the end of the last system of the piece and headed by capitals. This and the following work in F, Roma gaudens iubila (I9/312), are also together in WI, but in reverse order.

WI, fasc. 9, no. 29, f. 116v (107v): a2; Strophes I-III, only, with II-III entered below the setting in the bottom area outside the writing block as an unbroken series of lines from the left to the right margin; painted initials head the stanzas, with their inclusion signaled by fully visible guide letters. This and the previous work in WI, Roma gaudens iubila (I9/312), are also together in F, but in reverse order.

Text only:

OxRawl (GB-Ob Rawl. poet. C510), no. 9, f. 236r (7r): text alone of Strophes I-III, V, only; rubric: “De modo dandi; qualiter dandum est” (“On the manner of giving; how one should give”).¹ The folio of OxRawl that preserved this piece is now missing, although its complete text was edited before the loss; see the remarks in Hans Walther, “Die poetische Anthologie des cod. Oxford Rawl. C. 510,” Mittellateinisches Jahrbuch, 3 (1966), 218-227, at 218. Walther’s publication has provided the above text for Strophe V; its modern punctuation and capitalization is reproduced above and in the musical score.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: General remarks: This poem, which treats charitable giving, is similar in topic to the conductus Frater iam prospicias (I31/132), which appears just a few pieces later as F-7,56, and Fas et nefas ambulans (F7/119), transmitted much earlier in the MS as F-6,22; see also the conductus Premii dilatio (E3/270), at F-6,6. Quite a number of the expressions in Debet se circumspicere evoke the tone of common or proverbial sayings, apparently stemming from a variety of resources, but with most of them deriving from ancient moralistic Roman writings. The reliance on classical Roman authors is prevalent in the pieces in this section of F-7, beginning with the previous piece, Nobilitas animi (J8/220), at F-7,50 and extending to Heu he heu quam subditis (J9/154), at F-7,55). The most likely authorities for the references here, Seneca’s De beneficiis and the earlier Sententiae of Publilius Syrus (also ascribed at one time to Seneca), tread over ground

¹Since the folio containing Debet se circumspicere is now missing from OxRawl, and, in giving the text for Strophe V of the poem, Hans Walther does not supply the rubric for this particular piece in his cited article (although he does include the rubrics for most of the other poems), the text of this rubric is taken directly from William D. Macray, Catalogi codicum manuscriptorum Bibliothecae Bodleianae: partis quintae, fasciculus secundus, viri munificentissimi Ricardi Rawlinson, J.C.D. ... (Oxford: E Typographeo Clarendoniano [i.e., from the Clarendon Press], 1878), col. 274. Both Anderson (NDRC, 4:93) and the CPI website mistakenly give the second word of the rubric as “modi.”

similar to Debet se circumspicere, but do not necessarily offer direct linguistic echoes for this poem. As a result, there are likely many more such allusions and intermediary sources to be discovered beyond the ones suggested in these textual notes. Strophic inclusion and order: No one source preserves all the extant stanzas of this poem, and one may readily question both the ordering of the stanzas as presented here and whether the five-strophe version of the text as given above ever existed as a complete entity. Strophes I-III are given in the order above because they appear so both in WI and OxRawl; Stanza IV, unique to F, follows, because this stanza seems to offer a direct continuation of the sentiments that arise at the end of Strophe III. Strophe V, the single remainder, unique to OxRawl, concludes and offers a suitable ending to the poem, as it continues the emphasis on rendering gifts in an expedient manner. Such a conceit not only closes Strophe III, but furnishes the main argument of Stanza IV. Even so, the final two stanzas might easily be exchanged, or either one – or both – omitted in performance. Textual notes: 3: Lucius Annaeus Seneca (“the Younger” – ca. 4 BCE-65 CE) offers similar sentiments in his De beneficiis, 2.16.2: “Nihil enim per se quemquam decet; refert, qui det, cui, quando, quare, ubi, et cetera, sine quibus facti ratio non constabit.” (“Nothing is by itself a becoming gift for anyone: all depends upon who gives it, to whom he gives it, when, for what reason, where, and so forth, without which details it is impossible to argue about it.”).² See also the slight correspondence in the text of the conductus Fas et nefas ambulant (F7/119), line 27: “cui des, et quando” (“[observe] those to whom you should give, and when”), and the connection of this reference to the Distichs of Cato. Language comparable to this passage is employed in connection with the study of rhetoric in the Ars loquendi et tacendi [or De doctrina dicendi et tacendi] of Albertano of Brescia (ca. 1195-ca. 1251), from 1245, which offers the following leonine hexameter after its opening sentences: “Quis, quid, cui dicas, cur, quomodo, quando, requiras” (“You should investigate who, what, and to whom you should speak, why, how, and when”). An expression corresponding to that of Albertano arises in Ambrose’s De officiis (1.10.35): “Sapiens ut loquatur, multa prius considerat, quid dicat, aut cui dicat, quo in loco, et tempore” (“When a wise man speaks, he first considers a number of things: what he is to say, or to whom he is to speak, and in what place and at what time.”).³ 5-10: possibly evocative of Seneca’s statements in De beneficiis (2.16.2) on the worthy practice of properly tailoring the size of one’s gift to the qualities of both gift and giver: “Habetur personarum ac dignitatum portio et, cum sit ubique virtus modus, aequè peccat, quod excedit, quam quod deficit” (“There should be a proportion between men’s characters and the offices they fill; and as virtue in all cases should be our measure, he who gives too much acts as wrongly as he who gives too little.”).⁴ More of this sentiment arises in lines 23-25. 20: redolent of Aristotle’s principle of ultimate or final causality, which teaches that whatever occurs last in a chain of events is actually the first in conception.⁵ See also, for some similar expressions, Isaiah, 46:10: “Annuntians ab exordio novissimum, et ab initio quae necdum facta sunt ...” (“[I am God] who shows from the beginning the things that shall be at last, and from ancient times the things that as yet are not done ...”). 21-22: cf. Seneca, De beneficiis, 1.1.8: “Eodem animo beneficium debetur, quo datur” (“A benefit is received in the same temper in which it is given”);⁶ and in the alphabetically arranged Sententiae of the epigrammatist Publilius Syrus (first-century B.C.E.): “Bis gratum est, quod dato opus est, ultro si offeras” (“Twice pleasing is that gift that is given, if you offer it voluntarily”). Significantly, medieval sources of Publilius’s Sententiae regularly ascribe them to ²This translation is from Aubrey Stewart, trans., L. Annaeus Seneca: On Benefits: Addressed to Aebutius Liberalis, (London: George Bell and Sons, 1887), 33.

³For the Latin text, see, e.g., PL:16, col. 37C.

⁴Translation from Stewart, Seneca: On Benefits, 33.

⁵See, for example, Aquinas, Summa Theologica, 1a2ae1,1: “... finis, etsi sit postremus in executione, est tamen primus in intentione agentis. Et hoc modo habet rationem causae..” (“... an end, even if it is last in execution, is nonetheless first in the intention of the agent. And in this manner it has the force of a cause”).

⁶Translation from Stewart, Seneca: On Benefits, 2.

Seneca. The idea of generosity expressed in the freedom of the giver’s character or spirit (mens) appears throughout this conductus (e.g., lines 34-40) and in Seneca’s De beneficiis. Also cf. 2 Corinthians, 9:7: “Unusquisque, prout destinavit in corde suo, non ex tristitia, aut ex necessitate: hilarem enim datorem diligit Deus.” (“Every one [should give] as he has determined in his heart, not with sadness, or of necessity: for God loves a cheerful giver.”). 23-25: see the remarks for lines 5-10. 27: a recollection of Matthew, 6:3: “Te autem faciente eleemosynam, nesciat sinistra tua quid faciat dextera tua.” (“But when you do alms, let not your left hand know what your right hand does”). 31-33: another conceivable reference to the Sententiae of Publilius Syrus: “Beneficium celeritas gratius facit” (“Speed makes a gift more gracious”). The idea of giving quickly, without hesitation or delay, occupies much of the remainder of the conductus poem. For further instances of this conceit, see the remarks for lines 41-50. Note also the main argument of the conductus Premii dilatio (E3/270), especially evident in its lines 1-2 and 9-12, which criticizes those who delay the granting of a promised reward. 36: cf. Cicero, De legibus, 1.27: “... et is qui appellatur uultus, qui nullo in animante esse praeter hominem potest, indicat mores,” (“... and what is called the countenance, which can exist in no animate being besides the human being, indicates character.”).⁷ 41-50 (Strophe V): more treatment of the virtue of rendering a benefit without delay, earlier broached in lines 31-33: the first line recalls the proverbial phrase “bis dat qui cito dat” (“he who gives quickly gives twice”), transmitted, for instance, in the Adagia of Erasmus (who ascribes it to Seneca), and in comparable form in Publilius Syrus’s Sententiae, which appears to be its earliest Latin incarnation: “Inopi beneficium bis dat, qui dat celeriter (“One gives aid twice to the needy, who gives it quickly.”). For Seneca’s actual advice on this point, see his De beneficiis, 2.1.1-2: “Sic demus, quomodo vellemus accipere. Ante omnia libenter, cito, sine ulla dubitatione” (“Let us therefore give in the manner we would like to receive: before all freely, quickly, and with no hesitation.”); as well as his similar statements at 2.5.4.⁸ This latter passage shows some connections as well to the sentiments in lines 45-46. See also Proverbs, 3:27 for another possible connection: “Noli prohibere benefacere eum qui potest: si vales, et ipse benefac” (“Do not withhold him from doing good, who is able: if you are able, do good yourself also.”).⁹ 45-46: see the remarks for lines 41-50, above, with their citation of Seneca’s De beneficiis, 2.5.4. 45: another apparently proverbial expression; see its similar occurrence in Zelo tui languet virgo speciosa, the so-called Canticum amoris, a Marian lyric attributed to the fourteenth-century hermit and mystic Richard Rolle (ca. 1290-1349), whose third line gives the phrase: “diu dare distulit, diva generosa” (“the generous goddess [the Virgin Mary] has held off giving for a long time”).¹⁰

Observations and Variants: TEXT: Since F provides the base source for Strophes I, II, and IV, W1 supplies the text for Strophe III, and OxRawl for V, the variant verbal readings of all extant sources are collated for each of the surviving strophes. 3,2: W1: quicquid. 3,3: F, W1: “cui” is regarded as a monosyllable in terms of the poem’s verse structure (10x8pp lines/strophe), but as bisyllabic in the musical setting; see also the observations on this place, below, for its effect on the musical setting. 5,1: OxRawl: si det. 8,2: F: this word in the presentation of the main text should not be confused with “equus” (“horse”); it is reckoned as a bisyllable in both the poetic and musical setting; W1: equus. 13,3: W1, OxRawl: quid for “quis.” 13,4: F: addicit, the spelling

⁷The English rendering is from David Fott, transl., Marcus Tullius Cicero: On the Republic and On the Laws (Ithaca and London: Cornell University Press, 2014), 139

⁸Omnis benignitas properat, et proprium est libenter facientis cito facere; qui tarde et diem de die extrahens profuit, non ex animo fecit (“Kindness is always eager to do good, and one who acts by love naturally acts at once; he who does is good, but does it tardily and with long delays, does not do so from the heart” – translation from Stewart, Seneca: On Benefits, 25.).

⁹For a translation of this biblical passage that stands a little closer to the sentiment of the conductus text, see that of the Revised Standard Version Catholic Edition: “Do not withhold good from those to whom it is due, when it is in your power to do it.”

¹⁰The triplum text of the fourteenth-century motet Zelo tui languet / [T Omnes de Saba] / Reor nescia, which opens with the same expression as Rolle’s Canticum amoris, does not contain this phrase.

of which differs in meaning from the adopted form “adicit,” supplied by W1, OxRawl; as a result it is preferred here to the small orthographical discrepancy in F; cf. the comment to line 16,4. 14,3: W1, OxRawl: rogus. 15,4: W1: subtrahitur. 16,4: F: addicitur; the adopted “adicitur” (without the double “d”) comes from W1, OxRawl; cf. the remarks to line 13,4. 17,3: W1: plurima for “maxima.” 18,4: W1: proficit for “perficit.” 23,2: W1: om; supplied from OxRawl. 23,3: OxRawl: consideret; rejected due to non-correspondence with the rhyme scheme of the poem, which requires the adopted “considerat,” present in W1. 31,3: F: sceleritas; the accepted reading, “celeritas,” is presented as an editorial emendation by Dreves in AH, 21: 160, no. 228; it seems much more likely and logical, and therefore is used here, since, in opening Strophe IV, it follows the treatment of hastening the giving of a gift that closes Strophe III. 32,1: Anderson (NDRC, 4:xi) and the CPI website give “nisi” for the unique transmission in F, but the form of the abbreviation seems to favor the reading here (“ubi” – also given in AH, 21: 160, no. 228), since the shortened word is here represented as a single letter (with a superscript “i” hovering over it) that seems closer in form to “u” than “n.” 39,4: F: cladicat; corrected editorially, since the word as it stands does not seem to exist in Latin. 40,4: F: the adopted form of “eo” looks somewhat more like “et” in this singular MS transmission, since the letter “o” is apparently not fully closed. 41-50 (Strophe V): as the unique source for this stanza, OxRawl, has lost its applicable folio, the presentation of this stanza derives directly from Walther, “Poetische Anthologie,” 218, and reproduces its modern punctuation and capitalization in the musical transcription. MUSIC: Caudae: This piece has the unusual property of repeating a substantial amount of material from its fairly modest opening cauda in subsequent melismas. The final cauda restates with near exactitude all of the material from the melisma that opens the piece, but it inserts a 10L section between the first 11L segment and the last (also rendered here as 11L). The short length of the rests throughout both melismas is prompted by W1, which sometimes omits the strokes that appear in F. Perhaps significantly, a stroke in the D at L8 is erased in the final cauda from F, thus corresponding with the absence of such a stroke in the opening cauda of this piece. Cum littera segments: The musical setting of the text of the first strophe in F is frequently broken up by strokes within many of the poem’s lines. This practice occurs in W1 also, but to a much lesser extent. Since such breaks in subsequent stanzas can occur at apparently inopportune moments (for instance when they bisect words), it seems as though the scribe of F was concerned with indicating patterns of declamation that were appropriate chiefly for the first stanza. Performers who wish to reflect these interlinear strokes in their delivery of Strophe I may therefore choose to modify their declamation in later stanzas. See the related remarks below for line 3,3. Remarks: 3,3: F, W1: “cui” is considered a monosyllable in terms of the poem’s verse structure (10x8pp lines/strophe), but it is set as two syllables in the musical settings in both F and W1. As the same ambiguity of syllable count never obtains for any of the other stanzas, this “extraneous” note is accommodated to the delivery of the syllables in the subsequent stanzas by a dashed slur extending from below the note pair. Such a distinction in Strophe I suggests that its musical setting was executed without consideration for the differences at this point in the subsequent stanzas. This is analogous to the proliferation of interlinear strokes throughout the music, especially in F; see the above remarks on the music of the cum littera segments. 7,2: D: F: for “meri[torum]”: written 2 lower=a, g; corrected from W1.

ROMA GAUDENS IUBILA
Conductus (19/312)

F, f. 318r (7,52)

I
[Ro] - ma gau - dens iu - bi - la

T
Ro - [Ro] - ma gau - dens iu - bi - la men - tis pro - cul nu - bi - la splen - dor ex - pel - lat ho - di - e. splen - dor

men - tis pro - cul nu - bi - la splen - dor ex - pel - lat ho - di - e. splen - dor pa - cis et glo - ri - e fi - de - li - bus lu - gen - ti - bus or -

pa - cis et glo - ri - e fi - de - li - bus lu - gen - ti - bus or -

[or] - tus de tu - o prin - ci - pe. sy - on er - go fi - li - a

[or] - tus de tu - o prin - ci - pe. sy - on er - go fi - li - a sur - ge de tri - sti - ti - a. sa - lu - tis ad - est do - mi - nus

sur - ge de tri - sti - ti - a. sa - lu - tis ad - est do - mi - nus

ut tu - o fi - at ter - mi - nus ex - i - li - o. cum gau - di - o ut tu - o fi - at ter - mi - nus ex - i - li - o. cum gau - di - o

iam re - gem re - gum su - sci-pe.]
iam re - gem re - gum su - sci-pe.

Annotations: A red 'b' is above the first staff, and a red 'a'' is above the second staff. Blue brackets group notes across both staves. Blue arrows point from the first staff to the second staff.

| T: W1: a for opening b-flat (corresponds more closely with later D phrase) – optional alternative Annotations: Red boxes containing 'c', 'b', 'c'', and 'c' are placed above and below notes. Blue brackets group notes. Blue arrows point from the first staff to the second staff.

ROMA GAUDENS IUBILA

Conductus (I9/312)

F, f. 318r (7,52)

I	Roma, gaudens, iubila!		Rome, rejoicing, shout in triumph!
	Mentis procul nubila		Today let brightness banish splendor expellat hodie,		far away the clouds of the mind, splendor pacis et glorie		a brightness of peace and glory
	fidelibus lugentibus,	5	for the grieving body of the faithful,
	ortus de tuo principe.		arising from your prince.
	Syon, ergo, filia,		Therefore, daughter of Zion,
	surge de tristitia.		rise up from your sadness.
	Salutis adest dominus,		The lord of salvation is at here
	ut tuo fiat terminus	10	to make an end of your exilio. Cum gaudio		exile. Receive now the iam regem regum suscipe.		king of kings with joy!

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 52, f. 318r: a2; Strophe I, complete, with no internal capitals or other means to signal further divisions within the stanza. There is an area of completely empty space within the writing block that follows the last system of this work. This may have been intended to contain further stanzas, but none are extant here or elsewhere. Roma gaudens iubila is the first ostensibly single-strophe work to occur in F-7 (with the possible exception of the prose text for Ave Maria II [G7/29] seen earlier at F-7,18). It stands as the fifth work since the start of the series of strophic pieces that began at F-7,48 with A deserto veniens (I29/1), and is the first item in this segment of the MS to lack any additional text stanzas known from elsewhere. The apparent provision of leaving empty space in the MS for additional – if absent – strophes, though, appears in all the other supposedly single-stanza pieces up to F-7,63, Ego reus confiteor (H20/106), where through-composed pieces begin to return, except for the somewhat unusual Frater iam prospicias (I31/132) at F-7,56. In this lattermost case, the music ends with a significant amount of space at the right of its final system, but this is covered with empty staff lines that extend to the right margin of the writing block. Roma gaudens and the previous work in F, Debet se circumspicere (I10/83), are also together in W1, but in reverse order.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 28, f. 116r (107r): a2; Strophe I, complete, with no internal capitals or other means to signal further divisions within the stanza. This and the following work in W1, Debet se circumspicere (I10/83), are also together in F, but in reverse order.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Poetic structure and strophic organization: As indicated in the above section on sources, both F and W1 present the text as though it is a single stanza. F, additionally, is rather spare with its punctuation, offering only a single period within the first half of the text (after line 3), and nothing at all to separate the poem into the two identically formulated stanzas of six lines as presented in Anderson's edition (NDRC, 4:x). W1, for its part, and characteristically, employs punctuation (a period) only at the end of the entire poem. As a result, this poem is here interpreted conjecturally as a single stanza of twelve lines. Further discrepancies here with Anderson's version arise in presenting lines 5 and 11 as 8pp verses with internal rhyme

(4pp+4pp), rather than splitting it in half. This way they correspond to the similarly constructed 8pp verses that surround them. Textual notes: 1: The appearance of this apostrophe to Rome at this particular place in F-7 seems fitting, as quite a number of the pieces, beginning with Nobilitas animi (J8/220) at F-7,50, include nods to classical literature, even though these seem withheld from Roma gaudens. In the poem given here, Rome appears to be invoked as here as a figure for the collective church or Christendom, perhaps recollecting passages in the Psalms that call for the whole earth, or all of humankind, to sing, as in Psalms 46:2¹ and 97:4,² as well as the similar language in Psalms 65:1, 80:2, and 99:2. Conceivably, Rome might even stand here for heaven, or a heavenly city analogous to Augustine’s City of God. For this latter symbol, in addition to the remarks on Zion and Jerusalem given below for lines 7-8, see, Aelred of Rievaulx (1110-1167), Sermones, 3.2.220, glossing Psalm 86:3: “‘Gloriosa dicta sunt de te, civitas Dei.’ Hec civitas merito potest appellari Roma, id est excelsa” (“‘Glorious things are spoken of you, city of God.’ This city deservedly can be called Rome, that is exalted”)³ 4: the brilliant light is that of the grace that comes through Christ from God; see Hebrews, 1:3: “... qui cum sit splendor gloriae, et figura substantiae ejus ...” (“... [God’s son,] who being the brightness of his glory, and the figure of his substance ...”). 6: as the biblical associations in line 4 and the poem’s statements in lines 9-12 confirm, the prince here is Christ. 7-8: as Anderson remarks in his notes to the conductus Virtutum thronus frangitur (J11/385), quoting the Glossa ordinaria from the text given in PL, 113: col. 1057D (NDRC, 5:ix, note 2), the daughter or daughters of Zion, or of Jerusalem, symbolize the larger body of the faithful that is the church.⁴ Biblical instances of these images in contexts similar to the conductus poem (i.e., rising up from grief, rejoicing in exaltation, or praising a king) appear in Isaiah, 52:2;⁵ Zephaniah, 3:14;⁶ Zechariah, 2:10;⁷ Zacharias, 9:9 (also recalled in Matthew, 21:5);⁸ and Isaiah, 62: 11.⁹ 9: the phrase “dominus salutis” does not appear as such in the Bible, but for the closely related expression “God of [my] salvation,” see 2 Samuel, 22:47; Psalm 17:47; Psalm 37:23; Psalm 50:16; Psalm 87:2. 12,2-3: on Christ as the king of kings, see 1 Timothy, 6:15; Revelation, 17:14; Revelation, 19:16.

¹Psalm 46:2: “Omnes gentes, plaudite manibus; jubilate Deo in voce exultationis” (“O clap your hands, all ye nations: shout unto God with the voice of Joy.”).

²Psalm 97:4: “Jubilare Deo, omnis terra; cantate, et exultate, et psallite” (“Sing joyfully to God, all the earth; make melody, rejoice and sing.”).

³For this text, see <https://logeion.uchicago.edu/Roma>, under the DMLBS heading, no. 2.

⁴*PL*, 113: col. 1057D, reportedly quoting Augustine, glossing Psalm 136:8, which refers to the daughter of Babylon: “Per successionem, facta est filia Babylonis civitas malorum, sicut Ecclesia: Jerusalem scilicet, civitas bonorum per successionem filia Sion” (“Through succession, the daughter of Babylon becomes the city of evil; just as the church – that is to say, Jerusalem – through succession the daughter of Zion becomes the city of good.”).

⁵“Excutere de pulvere, consurge; sede, Jerusalem! solve vincula colli tui, captiva filia Sion” (“Shake yourself from the dust, arise, sit up, O Jerusalem: loose the bonds from off your neck, O captive daughter of Sion.”).

⁶“Lauda, filia Sion; jubila, Israel: laetare, et exsulta in omni corde, filia Jerusalem” (“Give praise, O daughter of Sion: shout, O Israel: be glad, and rejoice with all your heart, O daughter of Jerusalem.”).

⁷“Lauda et laetare, filia Sion, quia ecce ego venio, et habitabo in medio tui, ait Dominus” (“Sing praise, and rejoice, O daughter of Sion: for behold I come, and I will dwell in the midst of you: saith the Lord.”).

⁸“Exsulta satis, filia Sion; jubila, filia Jerusalem: ecce rex tuus veniet tibi justus, et salvator: ipse pauper, et ascendens super asinam et super pullum filium asinae” (“Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Sion, shout for joy, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold thy king will come to thee, the just and saviour: he is poor, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass.”).

⁹“Ecce Dominus auditum fecit in extremis terrae: Dicite filiae Sion: Ecce Salvator tuus venit; ecce merces ejus cum eo, et opus ejus coram illo” (“Behold the Lord has made it to be heard in the ends of the earth, tell the daughter of Sion: Behold your Saviour comes: behold his reward is with him, and his work before him.”).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 5,2: W1: lugentibus; this reading is preferred here in place of “ingentibus” that appears in F; this seems appropriate, given the prior sentiment in lines 2-3 of banishing the clouds of the mind. Nevertheless, the F reading can work equally well if understood in the sense of “vast,” or “great in number”; cf. the similar situation with line 6,1. Anderson’s edition of the text (NDRC, 4:x) gives the F reading in the Latin version, but uses the W1 reading in both the translation and music (4:17), and reports none of these discrepancies in the commentary (4:93). 6,1: W1: ortus; as with line 5,2 the reading from W1 is preferred here to that of F (“orto”), yet the F reading again can easily suffice if wished. What sways my decision here is that, in my opinion, the ablative absolute construction in F (“having arisen from your prince”) sounds less preferable in translation than the adopted participial phrase. 6,4: the period that closes this major syntactic unit is, uncharacteristically, omitted in F; it is added editorially in the musical transcription. 8,3: W1: tristicia: the only remaining textual variant between the two sources, a minor alternative spelling. MUSIC: Repetition: the recollection of earlier material is not especially prominent in this piece, but the few cases are interesting. For one, the D of the opening cum littera portion (line 1) is closely echoed by the T setting of the cum littera segment of the final line (12). Also, the final cauda shows some particularly taut construction in terms of repeated phrases, indicated above the respective staves; for more information on the repetition here, see the remarks below for the final cauda. Line 4,4: T: F: over “glorie,” the initial 2li=dc om, thus leaving the first syllable unset; furthermore, the subsequent e on the last syllable is written as c (3 too low); both corrected from W1. Cauda on 8,1: T: stroke om, supplied from W1. Final cauda: in W1, the second phrase of the T voice in this cauda (L7-L11) begins with a; if adopted, this would make this phrase identical to the final gesture in the D, with the exception of only its last note; it would also reproduce the same harmonic context (an f/a third) between the voices in both places. I have hesitated to change the F reading in favor of W1 primarily because of the b-flat sig that is inscribed right at the start of the T phrase in F, and which thus implies it is not likely to be an error. Nevertheless, performers should feel free to make the phrases match if they so wish.

REDIT ETAS AUREA – F and Fauv versions (Floret fex favellea)
Conductus (18/298)

F, f. 318v (7,53): Strophe Ia, IIa-b; OxRawl, f 237v (8v) (no. 16): Strophe Ib.

1. I

a. [Re - dit e - tas au - re - a. mun - dus re - no - va - tur. di - ves nunc de - pri - mi - tur.
b. [De - us re - gem con - tu - lit no - bis pre - op - ta - tum ter - ra cor - nu pro - tu - lit

a. Re - dit e - tas au - re - a. mun - dus re - no - va - tur. di - ves nunc de - pri - mi - tur.
b. [De - us re - gem con - tu - lit no - bis pre - op - ta - tum ter - ra cor - nu pro - tu - lit

pau - per ex - al - ta - tur. o - mnis su - o prin - ci - pi plebs con - gra - tu - la - tur.
co - pi - e di - ca - tum mur - mur o - mne po - pu - li pror - sus est se - da - tum

pau - per ex - al - ta - tur. o - mnis su - o prin - ci - pi plebs con - gra - tu - la - tur.
co - pi - e di - ca - tum mur - mur o - mne po - pu - li pror - sus est se - da - tum nec est lo - cus sce - le - ri. sce - lus da - tur fu - ne - ri. scan - da - la fu - plebs sub pa - ce re - gi - a gau - det pax iu - sti - ci - a se - se o - scu -

nec est lo - cus sce - le - ri. sce - lus da - tur fu - ne - ri. scan - da - la fu - plebs sub pa - ce re - gi - a gau - det pax iu - sti - ci - a se - se o - scu -

- gan -
- lan -

- gan -
- lan -

- tur.
- tur.]

- tur.
- tur.]

or: si si

D
 II
 T

a. Pi - us po - tens hu - mi - lis di - ves et ma - tu - rus e - ta - te.
 b. Gau - de - at pi - cta - vi - a iam re - ge di - ta - ta. tu - me - scat

a. Pi - us po - tens hu - mi - lis di - ves et ma - tu - rus e - ta - te.
 b. Gau - de - at pi - cta - vi - a iam re - ge di - ta - ta. tu - me - scat

sed do - ci - lis. et re - rum se - cu - rus su - a - rum; pre - fi - ci - tur an - gli - e.
 nor - man - ni - a au - ro co - ro - na - ta. va - sco. sco - tus. bri - to - nes ob - ti - nent

sed do - ci - lis. et re - rum se - cu - rus su - a - rum; pre - fi - ci - tur an - gli - e.
 nor - man - ni - a au - ro co - ro - na - ta. va - sco. sco - tus. bri - to - nes ob - ti - nent

da - tu - rus ra - pi - nis in - te - ri - tum cle - ro iu - ris a - di - tum ob - ta - ta. si - ne do - lo cam - bri - a ser - vit et hi - ber - ni - a da - tu - rus ra - pi - nis in - te - ri - tum cle - ro iu - ris a - di - tum ob - ta - ta. si - ne do - lo cam - bri - a ser - vit et hi - ber - ni - a lo - cum ve - ri - ta - no - stre po - te - sta -

lo - cum ve - ri - ta -
 no - stre po - te - sta -

- ti.]
 - ti.]

- ti.
 - ti.

(Fauv version follows)

Fauv, no. 13, f. 4vb
 |= T of F version, lines 1-9

2. I T a a

Flo - ret fex fa-vel - le - a mun - dus in - no - va - tur Cu - ri - a fit fer - re - a fau - vel ex - al - ta - tur

Quis - que pau - per ho - di - e in con - tem - ptum da - tur. For - ma - tus in spe - ci - e chri - sti vir dam - pna - tur

In - cen - sa - te be - sti - e plebs con - gra - tu - la - tur Nunc est lo - cus sce - le - ri fi - des da - tur fu - ne - ri ve - ri - tas fu - ga - tur.

REDIT ETAS AUREA – F and Fauv versions (Floret fex favellea)
Conductus (I8/298)

F, f. 318v (7,53): Strophes Ia, IIa-b; OxRawl, f. 237v (8v) (no. 16): Strophe Ib.

Ia Redit etas aurea, mundus renovatur. Dives nunc deprimitur, pauper exaltatur. Omnis suo principi plebs congratulatur, nec est locus sceleri; scelus datur funeri. Scandala fugantur.	The golden age returns, the world is renewed. The rich man is cast down, the poor man is raised up. 5 All the people rejoice in their prince, and there is no place for crime; it is given over to the pyre. Scandals are put to flight.
Ib [Deus regem contulit nobis preoptatum. Terra cornu protulit copie dicatum. Murmur omne populi prorsus est sedatum. Plebs sub pace regia gaudet. Pax, Iusticia sese osculantur.]	10 God has conferred the king we've so long longed for. The earth has brought forth the one blessed with the horn of plenty. The people's every complaint 15 is instantly resolved. The populace rejoices under a regal peace. Peace and Justice kiss each other.
IIa Pius, potens, humilis, dives et maturus etate, sed docilis et rerum securus suarum, preficitur Anglie. Daturus rapinis interitum, clero iuris aditum, locum veritati.	Righteous, powerful, humble, 20 rich and mature in age, but adaptable and certain of his own affairs, he is put in charge of England. He will 25 abolish plundering, grant the clergy access to their rights, and provide a place for truth.
Iib Gaudeat Pictavia iam rege ditata. Tumescat Normannia, auro coronata. Vasco, Scotus, Britones obtinere obtata. Sine dolo Cambria servit, et Hibernia, nostre potestati.	Poitou should rejoice, now enriched with a king. 30 Normandy should swell with pride, as it is crowned with gold. The Gascon, the Scot, the Bretons obtain what they desire. Without deceit Wales 35 renders service, as does Ireland, to our ruler.

The following stanza shows the reworked version of the text as presented in Fauv.

Fauv, no. 13, f. 4v^b

I Floret fex favellea. Mundus innovatur	Fauvel's scum is flourishing. The world is transformed.
--	--

Curia fit ferrea.		The curia becomes like iron.
Fauvel exaltatur.		Fauvel is extolled.
Quisque pauper hodie in contemptum datur.	5	Whoever is poor today receives scorn.
Formatus in specie Christi, vir dampnatur.		A man fashioned in the semblance of Christ is condemned.
Incensate bestie plebs congratulatur.	10	The people fawn over the perfumed beast.
Nunc est locus sceleri, Fides datur funeri.		There is now a place for crime. Faith is given over to the pyre.
Veritas fugatur.		Truth is put to flight.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 53, f. 318v: a2; with text of Strophes Ia, IIa-b, only. Empty space is left within the writing block at the end of the setting of Stanza Ia on the first system of f. 319r, presumably to accommodate the single missing versicle (Ib), since the text of IIb appears in the corresponding place at the end of the setting of IIa four systems later. Each subsequent stanza begins with capitals. This is the second piece in F-7 to present multiple versicles in the manner of the sequence; the first was In terram Christus expuit (J7/185) at F-7,39.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 20, f. 110v (101v): a2; Strophes Ia-b, IIa-b, complete, with the secondary versicles entered outside the writing block in the left margin (for Ib) and at the bottom of the leaf (for IIb); Strophes Ia, IIa are indicated by painted initials; Ib, IIb by capital letters. The previous piece in W1 is Eclipsim patitur (I7/105), which also treats the English royal family (cf. the report on OxRawl below).

Text only:

OxRawl (GB-Ob Rawl. poet. C510), no. 16, f. 237v (8v): text only of Strophes Ia-b, IIa-b, complete, with the first letters of each subsequent versicle headed by pilcrows; rubric: “Cuiusdam commemoratio” (“A commemoration of someone”). For the last three lines of each stanza as given above, the penultimate verse is entered below the antepenultimate, with both aligned at the left margin, but the concluding line is written flush with the right margin of the writing block and vertically aligned with the antepenultimate line. A shape similar to an asymmetrical sideways caret (>), connects the ends of the penultimate and antepenultimate verses to the final line of the stanza by having the caret shape point to the start of the closing line.¹ The next piece in OxRawl is In occasu syderis (I11/178), which also treats the English royal family (cf. the report on W1 above).

Music only: none.

Contrafacts:

Floret fex favellea (I8/298):

Fauv (F-Pn fr. 146), no. 13, f. 4v^b: a1 (T), in mensural notation; a “fauvelized” parody of Redit etas aurea, consisting of one 13-line stanza that expands its model by inserting four additional lines between verses 5 and 6 of Redit etas, as the structural poetic correlations between the Fauv and F, W1, OxRawl versions attest. For details on the musical correspondences between Redit etas aurea and Floret fex favellea, see the observations below on the music of the latter piece. The adaptation from Fauv – music and text – is included here after the F redaction for comparison.

¹For a study that examines the ways that OxRawl presents its poetic contents, see Anne-Zoé Rillon-Marne, “Conductus sine musica: Some Thoughts on the Poetic Sources of Latin Songs,” Ars Antiqua: Music and Culture in Europe c. 1150-1330, Gregorio Bevilacqua and Thomas B. Payne, eds., 205-226, Speculum Musicae, no. 40 (Turnhout: Brepols, 2020), at 211-217.

Notes on the Text: Redit etas aurea: Dating and Attribution: this poem is a commemoration of the accession to the crown by King Richard I of England (“Richard the Lionheart,” “Richard Coeur de Lion”). Richard lived from 8 September 1157 to 6 April 1199 and ruled from 1189 to his death. Much of the discussion in the literature on this poem dates Redit etas aurea to 1189, assuming that it is prompted by Richard’s coronation in 1189 on 3 September. On the other hand, a second conceivable date arises for the composition of this poem, since Richard underwent a second coronation in England on 11 March 1194, soon after his release from captivity by Duke Leopold V of Austria and Holy Roman Emperor Henry VI. These two rulers variously held Richard prisoner from approximately Christmas of 1192 to 4 February 1194, capturing him as he was returning from the Third Crusade in the Holy Land.² David A. Traill has published a recent analysis of Redit etas that has informed many of the observations presented here.³ In this study Traill argues that Philip the Chancellor is the likely poet of Redit etas, based on its placement in W1 and OxRawl next to other poems that Traill believes are also by Philip (these are O quotiens [vos] volui [J1/244], unique to W1, Eclipsim patitur [I7/105], and In occasu syderis [I11/178]), as well as similarities in verse structure and certain linguistic and topical echoes with Philip’s other poems. At present Traill’s attribution has not seen wide acceptance. Rhyme scheme and the words of the opening line: Christopher Page, in his liner notes to the audio CD recording of Redit etas by the ensemble Gothic Voices,⁴ notes that the opening quatrain as it stands in all the MS sources does not exhibit the same abab rhyme sequence that appears in the other three stanzas. He proposes changing the first line to “Etas auri reditur” to rectify the situation, a suggestion also followed by Traill. Such a modification is indeed a conceivable alternative for performance and presentation, but is not adopted here. Reasons for this stance include the fact that all of the sources for the text give the first line as shown here. Even the contrafact version in Fauv, although it does present an abab rhyme scheme in its opening quatrain, echoes the end rhyme of line 1 of Redit etas aurea in its own first line: Floret fex favellea. Lastly, it should be noted that, although each of the nine-line stanzas besides Ia does offer an alternating abab rhyme for their first four lines, all stanzas then proceed with a scheme in which the fifth and last line of each stanza remains unrhymed, while line 6 rhymes with 2 and 4, and 7 and 8 rhyme with each other (see the related discussion of the variants of lines 9 and 27,2 below). The one anomaly, though, is that in Strophe IIb, its seventh and eighth lines (34-35) recall the “-ia” rhyme of its first and third lines (28 and 30), a recurrence not seen elsewhere throughout the poem. This slight deviation may further suggest a certain looseness might be entertained in assessing the strictness of the rhyme scheme across the entire poem. Textual notes: 1: a reference to the earliest and most idealized age of mankind, as delineated in Greek and Roman mythology and transmitted to medieval Europe. In addition to Hesiod’s Works and Days, from which the concept originally sprang, other classical sources for the idea include Virgil’s Eclogues, 4,4-10, a poem that was frequently seen as a proto-Christian messianic prophecy,⁵ and Ovid, ²On some impressive musical features in Redit etas aurea, which might suggest a slight preference for the later date of 1194, see Thomas B. Payne “Datable Notre Dame Conductus: New Historical Observations on Style and Technique,” Current Musicology, 64 (2001): 104-151, at 134-136.

³“Philip the Chancellor and Richard the Lionheart,” The Journal of Medieval Latin, 28 (2018), 1-13; all references in the discussion here are to page 7.

⁴Gothic Voices, directed by Christopher Page, Music for the Lion-Hearted King (Hyperion CDA 66336: London, 1989); see page 13 of the accompanying booklet.

⁵Virgil, Eclogues, 4,4-10: “Ultima Cumaevi venit iam carminis aetas; / magnus ab integro saeculorum nascitur ordo: / iam redit et Virgo, redeunt Saturnia regna; / iam nova progenies caelo demittitur alto. / Tu modo nascenti puero, quo ferrea primum / desinet ac toto surget gens aurea mundo, / casta fave Lucina: tuus iam regnat Apollo” (“Now is come the last age of Cumaean song; the great line

Metamorphoses, 1,89-90.⁶ Anderson (NDRC, 4:ix, note 1) gives several other references to the image, drawn from the In Rufinum of Claudian (1,51-52) and the Anticlaudianus of Alanus ab Insulis (9,384-386), a work that invokes Claudian's name in its title. For an additional reference to the In Rufinum, see the notes on the text for the opening lines of the conductus Heu he heu quam subditis (J9/154). See also the remarks about line 3 of the contrafact Floret fex favellea, below. 3-4: see 1 Samuel (1 Kings), 2:7: “Dominus pauperem facit et ditat, humiliat et subleuat.” (“The Lord makes the poor and makes the rich, he humbles and he exalts.”); and cf. Luke, 1:52-53 (from the Magnificat): “Deposuit potentes de sede, et exaltavit humiles. Esurientes implevit bonis: et divites dimisit inanes” (“He has put down the mighty from their seat, and has exalted the humble. He has filled the hungry with good things; and the rich he has sent empty away.”). 7-9: Traill suggests that there is a possible reference in these lines to the misdeeds of Richard's father, King Henry II, who had made Richard's betrothed, Alys, countess of Vexin and daughter of Louis II of France, his mistress. A common rumor of the time was that Henry had fathered a child by Alys. The connection of this event to the poem is certainly possible, but there are a large number of other incidents that surrounded Richard's accession to his rule that could be equally characterized as crimes or scandals, whether in 1189 or 1194. These include multiple revolts by Richard and his brothers against their father (see, for example, the remarks on the conductus Novus miles sequitur [E11/228], lines 25-30), as well as conniving by Richard's brother John (his successor in 1199) and Philip Augustus of France during his imprisonment, among a host of other incidents. 12-13: a likely authority for the well-traveled image of the “horn of plenty” is Ovid, Metamorphoses, 9,1-97, which recounts the struggle between Hercules and the river god Achelous over the Calydonian princess Deianira, whom they both hope to wed. During their conflict Hercules grabs one of the horns of Achelous, who at this point in the conflict has shape-shifted into the form of a bull, and breaks it off. Achelous's detached horn was delivered to the Naiads, who endowed it with powers to supply plentiful food. 16-17,1: Traill suggests this reference to “royal peace” may refer to an alliance between Richard and Philip Augustus, but as with lines 7-9 it may conceivably bring many other matters into the mix. For instance, on July 4 1189, just two days before Henry II's death, Richard and Philip Augustus had successfully joined forces against Richard's father. Their triumph over Henry's army at Ballans in central-west France resulted in Henry finally declaring Richard as his successor.⁷ Similarly, in 1194 after his imprisonment, Richard forgave his brother John, who had earlier revolted against him with the help of Philip Augustus, and named John as his heir to the throne. 17,2-18: see Psalm 84:11: “Misericordia et veritas obviaverunt sibi; justitia et pax osculatae sunt” (“Mercy and truth have met each other: justice and peace have kissed.”). 19-27 (Strophe IIa): the amount of enjambment that appears in this stanza is notable; it contrasts greatly with the lack of such a device in IIb (line 35 excepted) and does not seem to be reflected at all in the musical setting. 19,1: as Traill suggests, Richard's greatest claim to piety was likely his taking up of the cross and his efforts during the Third Crusade from 8 June 1191 to October 9 1192. 20,3-21,1: Richard was 31 years of age at his first coronation, 36 at his second. 26: the reference to restoring the rights of the clergy could refer to the unusual practice that they, as well as the laity, were subject to the onerous taxes that were levied to meet Richard's ransom during his imprisonment (see the above remarks on dating and attribution). 28-36

of the centuries begins anew. Now the Virgin returns, the reign of Saturn returns; now a new generation descends from heaven on high. Only do you, pure Lucina, smile on the birth of the child, under whom the iron brood shall at last cease and a golden race spring up throughout the world! Your own Apollo now is king!”). The translation is from Virgil, Eclogues, Georgics, Aeneid: Books 1-6, H.R. Fairclough, trans., revised by G. P. Goold, Loeb Classical Library, vol. 63 (Cambridge, MA.: Harvard University Press, 1916; revised edition, 1999), 49.

⁶Ovid, Metamorphoses, 1,89-90: “Aurea prima sata est aetas, quae vindice nullo, / sponte sua, sine lege fidem rectumque colebat” (“Golden was that first age, which, with no one to compel, without a law, of its own will, kept faith and did the right.”). Translation from Ovid, Metamorphoses, Frank Justus Miller, trans., revised by G. P. Goold, Loeb Classical Library, vols. 42-43 (Cambridge, MA.: Harvard University Press, revised edition, 1999), 42: 9.

⁷See, for additional information, the notes on the text to In occasu syderis (I11/178) concerning its subject and date.

(Strophe Iib): all of these localities are regions over which Richard held sway in some fashion.⁸ He became Count of Poitou in June 1172 in a ceremony held in the capital city of Poitiers and, thanks in no small part to his father's earlier military successes, Richard acceded to the title of Duke of Normandy along with control over Brittany, Wales, and part of Ireland upon his succession to the crown. Richard also ruled the Aquitanian and Gascon regions as duke beginning in 1170, thanks to the legacies and efforts of his mother, Eleanor of Aquitaine; and he released King William I ("the Lion") of Scotland from his oath of allegiance – a result of William's failure in the 1173-74 revolt against Richard's father – prior to his setting out on crusade (see the above remarks to lines 7-9). Floret fex favellea: 3: the reference to iron here was probably intended to provoke comparison with the mention of the golden age that appears in line 2 of Redit etas. As implied by the quote from Virgil above, the age of iron (representing the decadent and corrupt present day)⁹ will give way to a new golden age. In the case of the Fauv poem, the return to the age of gold is confounded by the papal curia or royal court becoming increasingly more like iron.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: F version (Redit etas aurea): Since OxRawl supplies the text of Strophe Ib, missing from F, all variants from these two sources are recorded here, with several readings from W1 included for additional context. 6,1: OxRawl: "plebs" written "ples," with the missing "b" added as a superscript above the word, with an insertion mark below indicating its placement. 9: OxRawl: scandalum fugatur, which could serve equally well as the plural forms used here; W1 gives "scandala fuga," omitting the last syllable. As the last line of each stanza in the poem as a whole is not consistent in rhyming with other verses in the strophe, the F reading has been allowed to stand. This choice also allows the final line in each of the two strophic pairs to rhyme (see the remarks for line 27,2 below). 27,2: F: veritatis; both OxRawl and W1 give the adopted reading "veritati," a choice that furnishes the same rhyme as the end of Strophe Iib (see the remarks for line 9 above). 30,2: OxRawl: Normannia (capitalized). 32,1: W1: vasce (?). 32,2: OxRawl: scottus. 33: OxRawl: optinent optata (cf. the spelling of line 11,2 in the poem, where the orthography follows this source); W1: obtinent optata. 34: OxRawl: sine dolo kambria; W1: "fine (?) dolos cambria" or "dolo scambria (?)." 35,3: W1: ybernia; OxRawl: hybernia. Fauv version (Floret fex favellea): 7,1: Fauv: Formatur (capitalized), emended editorially. MUSIC: F version (Redit etas aurea): Cauda closing Strophe I (line 9): T: F: an alternative rhythmic interpretation is given above the staff for the closing phrase. Both F and W1 have the same reading in both parts, but the chosen rendering allows at least the opening of this phrase in the T to correspond with the similar gesture three phrases prior. Reading the T phrase ut stat as L, LB, 4L prior to the last note provokes a strong antepenultimate as well as penultimate dissonance with the inclusion of the D voice, the former of which seems rather harsh in this particular context, and is therefore avoided here. Fauv version (Floret fex favellea): Musical correspondences: The music in Fauv generally corresponds to the T of the first strophic pair (Ia-b) in the F, W1 version up through line 9 without interruption. At this point, unrelated material appears for line 10 ("plebs congratulatur"), while the remainder from lines 11-13 uses the opening three phrases from the second stanzaic pair (Strophe Iia-b) in F, W1. These identities are noted in the score. The cauda that closes the strophe in Fauv is also reworked and shortened, using a single motive (here marked b") from the cauda closing Ia-b in F, W1. Observations: in a few places within the transcription, the Fauv version shows some rhythmic extensions that depart from what might be an expected first-mode pattern; these can be found at lines 8,2-3 ("vir dampnatur," including the following L rest) and 10,1 ("plebs"). These departures have been rendered without modification.¹⁰ Moreover, the penultimate figure of the entire setting, the cum proprietate, sine perfectione 2li = dc is here interpreted as brevis altera, brevis recta, which also disrupts the mode-1 rhythmic configuration that otherwise applies to this piece. I take the stroke that appears in Fauv above and just before this ligature to be a divisio syllabarum. This factor prompted my placement of the final syllable under the 2li figure, while the very short tractus that precedes the final d pitch is considered here as a signum perfectionis or divisio modi, since similar instances of this use appear earlier in the piece, e.g. before the plicated figure at “[inno]va[tur]” at line 2,2 and the corresponding place in line 4.

⁸For details on the following points, see the references supplied by Traill in the notes to "Philip the Chancellor and Richard the Lionheart," 7.

⁹See the description in Ovid, Metamorphoses, 1:127-131: "... De duro est ultima ferro. / Protinus inrupit venae peioris in aevum / omne nefas: fugere pudor verumque fidesque; / in quorum subiere locum fraudesque dolusque / insidiaeque et vis et amor sceleratus habendi" ("The harsh iron age was last. Immediately every kind of wickedness erupted into this age of baser natures: truth, shame and honour vanished; in their place were fraud, deceit, and trickery, violence and pernicious desires"). The translation here is by Anthony S. Kline, trans., Ovid: Metamorphoses (Anne Arbor, MI: Borders Classics, 2004), p. 14.

¹⁰See, in contrast, the example of the Tischler/Rosenberg edition, which maintains a stricter LB modal pattern throughout in these places and does not report completely its departures from the MS: Hans Tischler, and Samuel Rosenberg, eds., The Monophonic Songs in the Roman de Fauvel (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 1991), pp. 20-21.

REGE MENTEM ET ORDINA
Conductus (I33/299)

F, f. 319r (7,54)*

The musical score is presented in two systems, each with two staves (D and T). The lyrics are in Latin. The score includes various musical annotations such as blue brackets above notes, red circles with 'x' around notes, and red boxes with letters (a, a', b, b', c, c') around notes. The lyrics are as follows:

System 1:
 D: [Re-ge men - tem et or - di - na sub tru - ti - na
 T: Re-ge men - tem et or - di - na sub tru - ti - na

System 2:
 D: que ni - si pa - ret im - pe - rat. et su - pe - rat.
 T: que ni - si pa - ret im - pe - rat. et su - pe - rat.

System 3:
 D: sed su - pe - rans e - li - mi - nat ho - ne - stum et iu - sti - ti - am.
 T: sed su - pe - rans e - li - mi - nat ho - ne - stum et iu - sti - ti - am.

System 4:
 D: se - que - strat et ex - ter - mi - nat a se vir - tu - tis
 T: se - que - strat et ex - ter - mi - nat a se vir - tu - tis

System 5:
 D: glo - ri - am.]
 T: glo - ri - am.

System 6:
 D: (continuation of the previous system)
 T: (continuation of the previous system)

*Husmann, "Grundlegung," 20-21, sees possible syllabic/melismatic identity between the opening T phrase on "mentem et ordina" and the repetition of short motives in both T and D throughout the closing cauda on "[glori]am"; the repetitive and sequential play of these and other phrases and motives (shown by boxed and circled letters, respectively) with the latter outlining falling fourths and thirds is rife throughout this piece.

REGE MENTEM ET ORDINA
Conductus (I33/299)

F, f. 319r (7,54)

I Rege mentem et ordina sub trutina, que nisi paret, imperat et superat. Sed superans, eliminat honestum et iustitiam; sequestrat et exterminat a se virtutis gloriam.	Restrain your temper and keep it in balance, for unless it is held in check, it takes charge and gains the upper hand. 5 Moreover, as it takes over, it drives out morality and justice; it separates and banishes from itself the glory of virtue.
---	--

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 54, f. 319r: a2, Strophe I, complete, although empty space is left within the writing block at the end of this transmission, extending down into the right segment of the first system apportioned to the following piece, all of which suggests that this work was laid out with the intention of entering additional strophes that no longer survive. Further stanzas are provided by similar means in the previous piece in F (Redit etas aurea [I8/298]) – although not all its extant strophes are included – and similar generous space, again without text or staff lines, appears at the end of the item that follows (Heu he heu quam subditis [J9/154]).¹

W2, fasc. 7, no. 24, f. 143v: a2, Strophe I, complete. The final bit of text from line 7,2 to the end is entered over what looks like an apparent erasure extending under the whole final staff system in what may be a different copyist's hand. This context suggests that this final bit of text might originally have extended to the system margin, but was then cleared and re-entered upon the subsequent entry of the music. Reasons for the rectification could include the need to make room for the final cauda, or possibly to correct a mistake; it is very difficult to make out the text that was erased, as what is now mainly visible is the bleedthrough from the other side of the leaf showing the opening lines of the conductus Omni pene curie (I34/252).

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1-3: as with three of the pieces that follow Nobilitas animi (J8/220) in F-7 (no. 50), Rege mentem et ordina is beholden to classical Roman literature.² See Horace, Epistulae: 1,2,62-63: “Ira furor brevis est: animum rege; qui nisi paret, imperat” (“Anger is a brief madness: rule your temper; if it is not subject to you, it lords it over you.”). 5-6: cf. Augustine, De Libro Arbitrio: 3,31: “Nihil ei extorquens violento dominatu, sed superans eum lege iustitiae” (“in no way torturing him [the devil] by violent domination, but conquering him with the law of justice”) – the text is available in PL, 32: col. 1286, par. 31. 6,1: this is the neuter noun ¹For further information on how additional stanzas may be accommodated by the layout of most of the other apparently single-stanza pieces in this segment of F-7, see the source reports on F for A deserto veniens (J3/1, I29/1), f. 316v (at F-7,48) and Roma gaudens iubila (I9/31), f. 318r (at F-7, 52).

²These include, in addition to Nobilitas animi and Rege mentem, Debet se circumspicere (I10/83, F-7,53) and Heu he heu quam subditis (J9/154, F-7,55).

“honestum” (“honorable conduct, morality, virtue”), not an adjective.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. 7: Anderson (NDRC, 4:xxxvii) splits this into two lines with internal rhyme and uses the form “sequesterat” for 7,1. As this reading is not borne out in Anderson’s transcription of the music and in his commentray (NDRC, 4:85, 104-105), this change therefore appears to be a typo. MUSIC: The alignment of text syllables and single notes with the ends of ligatures seems to work exceptionally well here to provide a more consonant polyphony throughout. A notable exception is the figures over “[ex]ter[minat],” which also features a curious d/e second for the si figures over the prior syllable “ex-.” This d/e sonority is validated by both F and W2, but makes for a rather grating continuation if the ligatures over the next syllable “-ter-” are aligned in the same way that others are treated throughout this rendering, hence the inconsistency at this particular point in the transcription. Syllabic/melismatic identity: Husmann, “Grundlegung,” 20-21,³ sees possible syllabic/melismatic identity between the opening T phrase on “mentem et ordina” and the repetition of short motives in both T and D throughout the closing cauda on “[glori]am.” The repetitive and sequential play of these and other phrases and motives (shown by boxed and circled letters, respectively), with the latter outlining falling fourths (x,z) and thirds (y) is rife throughout this piece. Lines 6-8: T: the music for line 6 is repeated in varied fashion for line 7 a fourth higher, and then an additional fourth higher at the beginning of line 8; this is shown as a, (a), (a’) in boxes above the staff. Final cauda: the final cauda has been rendered in an “upbeat” mode 1, due to the lack of a concluding 3li at the end of phrases.

³Heinrich Husmann, “Zur Grundlegung der musikalischen Rhythmik des mittellateinischen Liedes,” Archiv für Musikwissenschaft, 9 (1952): 3-26.

HEU HE HEU QUAM SUBDITIS

Conductus (J9/154)

F, f. 319v (7,55)

I

[He - u he he - u quam sub - di - tis cau - sis per - e - unt in - gen - ti - a.

He - u he he - u quam sub - di - tis cau - sis per - e - unt in - gen - ti - a.

va - cant ho - mi - nes il - li - ci - tis ce - ci vi - dent ba - cha - na - li - a.

va - cant ho - mi - nes il - li - ci - tis ce - ci vi - dent ba - cha - na - li - a.

neu - trum no - tant ter - mi - num vi - te pon - dus cri - mi - num.

neu - trum no - tant ter - mi - num vi - te pon - dus cri - mi - num.

blan - di - un - tur te - me - re si - bi sem - per vi - ve - re.

blan - di - un - tur te - me - re si - bi sem - per vi - ve - re.

ho - mo cur am - ple - cte - ris ster - co - ra pro cro - ce - is? mi - ser qua - re

ho - mo cur am - ple - cte - ris ster - co - ra pro cro - ce - is? mi - ser qua - re

de - se - ris au - re - a pro lu - te - is.]

de - se - ris au - re - a pro lu - te - is.

First system of musical notation. The upper staff is in treble clef and the lower staff is in bass clef. The key signature has one flat (B-flat). The music consists of eighth and sixteenth notes with various rests. There are blue brackets above the notes in both staves. A red box containing the letter 'f' is positioned above the first measure of the upper staff. A red box containing 'f2' is above the final measure of the upper staff. A red box containing 'f1' is above the final measure of the lower staff. Blue dashed lines connect notes between the two staves, indicating phrasing or articulation.

Second system of musical notation, continuing from the first system. It features the same two-staff layout (treble and bass clefs) and key signature. The notation continues with eighth and sixteenth notes. A red box containing 'f3' is positioned above the final measure of the upper staff. Blue dashed lines continue to connect notes between the two staves.

HEU HE HEU QUAM SUBDITIS

Conductus (J9/154)

F, f. 319v (7,55)

I Heu! – he! – heu! quam subditis causis pereunt ingentia. Vacant homines illicitis; ceci vident bachanalia. Neutrum notant terminum vite pondus criminum. Blandiuntur temere sibi semper vivere. Homo, cur amplecteris stercora pro croceis? Miser, quare deseris aurea pro luteis?	Alas! – ah! – alas! how great affairs perish due to humble causes. Men give themselves over to unlawful things; those who look upon debaucheries are blind. 5 They ascertain neither the end of life nor the weight of sins. They recklessly flatter themselves that they live forever. Man, why do you embrace 10 dung instead of saffron? Wretch, why do you forsake golden things for ones of clay?
---	--

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 55, f. 319v: a2; a unique musical/textual setting of a single extant strophe, a feature that now begins to occur somewhat more frequently in this fascicle, until the return to wider transmission patterns with Ego reus confiteor (H20/106), at F-7,63. As with the two previous conductus in F-7 that transmit single stanzas (Roma gaudens iubila [I9/312] and Rege mentem et ordina [I33/299]), the likely intention that further strophes were destined for inclusion is suggested by the areas of empty space left within the writing block, in this case not only at the end of the piece, but also extending down into the right portion of the first system of the following work.¹

Text only: none.Music only: none.Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1-2: the opening expression is drawn from Claudian, In Rufinum, 2,49: “Eheu, quam brevibus pereunt ingentia fati” (“Alas, how great affairs perish in quick destruction.”). For another possible nod to this work of Claudian, see the textual notes for the opening lines of Redit etas aurea (I8/298) that appears two pieces earlier in F-7. A similar threefold exclamation like that in line 1 – “Heu! heu! heu!” – is encountered in the Bible several times, as in Jeremiah, 4:10 and 32:17; as well as in Ezekiel, 9:8, 11:13; and 2 Kings, 6:15. See lines 9-10 for a further biblical nod to Jeremiah. 9-10: see Lamentations, 4:5: “Qui vescebantur voluptuose, interierunt in viis; qui nutriebantur in croceis, amplexati sunt stercora” (“They that were fed delicately have died in the streets; they that were brought up in scarlet have embraced the dung.”).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 1-4: the opening quatrain of the stanza is composed of 9pp verses with a regular caesura after the second syllable. The 9pp line is a rather unusual formation in the four main MSS of the Parisian conductus repertory; it appears elsewhere, according to my count, only in Trine vocis tripudio (E4/351) in lines 15-16, to close Strophe II (divided 3x3pp); Excitatur caritas in Yericho (F30/111), as the third and fifth lines in each 6-line stanza (divided 5pp+4pp); in the first three and penultimate lines of the six-line strophes of Veterem merorem pellite (M39/378); and singly in the closing line of Relegata vetustate (H23/303), which includes the text of the BD (“sic Benedicamus domino”). 5,2: F: notam, which makes no sense in this context; the reading is adopted from Anderson, NDRC, 5:ix. 10: F: a question mark appears in the MS as punctuation at the end of this line; the following question in line 12 uses a period. MUSIC: Form: this highly syllabic text setting features extensive successive repetition in the T (less so in the D), with the disposition: aa'aa'bb'bb'cc'cc', a form echoed by the verse structure and its semantic content. The closing cauda, although it has a few reiterated motives, generally avoids such extensive repetition and shows –with one exception at L4 – consistent overlap of phrases throughout. For further discussion of how musical, textual, and discursive elements may interact within this piece, see Anne-Zoé Rillon-Marne, “Notre Dame Conductus and the Renewal of Speech at the Turn of the 12th and 13th Centuries: the Sonorous Framing of the Congregation,” Musica Disciplina, 58 (2013): 265-286, at 274-279.

¹For further information on the apparent provision for additional strophes in those works in F-7 that transmit single stanzas, see the source reports on F for A deserto veniens (J3/1, I29/1), f. 316v (at F-7,48) and Roma gaudens iubila (I9/31), f. 318r (at F-7,52).

FRATER IAM PROSPICIAS
Conductus (I31/I32)

F, f. 320r (7,56)

I

[Fra - ter iam pro - spi - ci - as ut ab - i - ci - as has de - li - ci - as. que te va - ri - as

Fra - ter iam pro - spi - ci - as ut ab - i - ci - as has de - li - ci - as. que te va - ri - as tra - hunt ad in - e - pti - as. fra - ter ne la - sci - vi - as ob di - vi - ti - as.

tra - hunt ad in - e - pti - as. fra - ter ne la - sci - vi - as ob di - vi - ti - as.

im - mo re - cor - da - re. chri - stus in - ops anx - i - as quot tu - lit an - gu - sti - as.

im - mo re - cor - da - re. chri - stus in - ops anx - i - as quot tu - lit an - gu - sti - as.

et me - men - to qua - re. res si re - si - gna - re non - dum ve - lis pro - pri - as;

et me - men - to qua - re. res si re - si - gna - re non - dum ve - lis pro - pri - as;

cau - te con - tem - pla - re ut ad in - mun - di - ti - as re - bus non u - ta - re. di - scas ha - bun - da - re

cau - te con - tem - pla - re ut ad in - mun - di - ti - as re - bus non u - ta - re. di - scas ha - bun - da - re

ut non cor - rum - pa - re si res vis ser - va - re; in cau - sas non im - pi - as de - bes e - ro - ga - re.

ut non cor - rum - pa - re si res vis ser - va - re; in cau - sas non im - pi - as de - bes e - ro - ga - re.

nam te dis-pen - sa - re non lux - u - ri - a - re vult qui af-flu-en-ti-as re - rum scit do-na-re.

nam te dis-pen - sa - re non lux - u - ri - a - re vult qui af-flu-en-ti-as re - rum scit do-na-re.

fra - ter sa - ne pre - sci - as i - stas o - pum co - pi - as chri - stus mul - tis so - let da - re

fra - ter sa - ne pre - sci - as i - stas o - pum co - pi - as chri - stus mul - tis so - let da - re ad ex-pe - ri-en - ti - as. Er-go sic suf - fi - ti - as ut per hoc pro - fi - ci - as.

ad ex-pe - ri-en - ti - as. Er-go sic suf - fi - ti - as ut per hoc pro - fi - ci - as.

i - gi-tur in - ci - pi - as fra - trum sup - por - ta - re mi - se - ri - as.]

i - gi-tur in - ci - pi - as fra - trum sup - por - ta - re mi - se - ri - as.

FRATER IAM PROSPICIAS

Conductus (I31/132)

F, f. 320r (7,56)

I Frater, iam prospicias, ut abicias has delicias, que te varias trahunt ad ineptias. Frater, ne lascivias ob divitias, immo recordare. Christus inops anxias quot tulit angustias, et memento quare. Res si resignare nondum velis proprias, caute contemplare ut ad inmunditias rebus non utare. Discas habundare ut non corrumpare, si res vis servare. In causas non impias debes erogare, nam te dispensare, non luxuriare vult, qui affluentias rerum scit donare. Frater, sane prescias istas opum copias. Christus multis solet dare ad experientias.	5 10 15 20 25 30 34	Now see to it, brother, that you renounce these allurements, the ones that draw you into various types of nonsense. Brother, don't even think of pleasures with regard to riches. Remember, poor as he was, how many arduous afflictions Christ endured – and why. If you do not yet desire to give over your own possessions, consider carefully not to use your assets for sordid ends. You should learn how to be rich without becoming corrupted, if you wish to maintain your riches. You should not invest in wicked causes, for the one who knows that you offer the abundance of your goods, he wants you to disburse them, not wallow in them. Brother, certainly you should already know about the opportunities wealth affords. Christ was accustomed to give to many according to their situation.
Ergo sic suffitias ut per hoc proficias. Igitur, incipias fratrum supportare miserias.	30 34	And so you should be sufficient enough to succeed in this endeavor. In short, start shouldering your brothers' afflictions.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 56, f. 320r: a2; Strophe I, complete, with a capital beginning line 30 (indicated by the extra space in the text above), and with room available at the end of the last system of the piece which conceivably could accommodate extra text. Unlike the previous redactions of single-strophe conductus in F-7, though, this piece has staff lines extending through the unused portion up through to the right margin of the writing block, which could indicate either that additional lyrics were not immediately available, or never actually existed. Frater iam prospicias is the first work in F-7 to have no caudae whatsoever; the next work with such a feature is Virtus moritur (J12/384), three pieces later at F-7, 59. See the remarks below on attribution and versification for some other features these pieces share.

Ma, fasc. 4, no. 1, f. 66r: a2; Strophe I complete, with an illuminated, filigreed initial for the opening of the piece (begun at the top recto of the folio), but no further graphical distinctions to indicate any other type of division within this long text. As is typical of this source, there is no provision for additional strophes.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: General remarks: This poem, which treats charitable giving, is comparable in topic to the conductus Debet se circumspicere (I10/83), which occurs just a few pieces earlier at F-7,51; see also the conductus Fas et nefas ambulant (F7/119) and Premii dilatio (E3/270), both of which appear in F-6, for treatment of related issues. The invocation of classical Roman authors is noteworthy for the pieces in this section of F-7, beginning with Nobilitas animi at F-7,50. For the possible influence of classical authorities on Frater iam prospicias, such as Seneca's De beneficiis and the earlier Sententiae of Publilius Syrus (also ascribed at the time to Seneca), see the textual notes to Debet se circumspicere. Most of the above ancient authors that treat this topic tread over ground similar to Frater iam prospicias and Debet se circumspicere, but do not necessarily offer direct linguistic echoes for these poems. As a result, there are likely many more allusions and intermediary sources to be discovered for the conductus that treat giving. Attribution and versification: Anderson, NDRC, 4:xxxvi, note 2, proposes that Philip the Chancellor might be the author of this text based on its style and substance. The censorious tone of the poem and its focus on aiding the poor are indeed redolent of Philip, but Anderson also remarks how the musical setting offers characteristics similar to a number of Philip's organum and conductus prosulas. Like Frater iam prospicias, these prosulas typically feature short, uneven text lines set to the musical phrases of a previously existing melisma and tend to have no caudae; they also tend to delight in wordplay such as annominatio and may present segments that harp upon just a few rhymes as they prolong the sound of the syllable that underlies the original melisma. Some similar features also apply to the conductus Virtus moritur (J12/384), transmitted just three pieces later in F-7. Frater iam prospicias, with its irregular patterning of five different line lengths (7pp, 5pp, 6p, 8p, 4pp) and its confinement to only two different rhyme sounds ("-ias," "-are"), certainly does seem to fit this bill, but as of yet no melismatic concordance has surfaced. Perhaps as a result, Anderson's suggestion for Philip's authorship has not found much traction. Textual notes: 1-5: The opening address to a brother, as well as the emphasis in the poem of divesting oneself of one's riches in order to do good work for one's fellow brothers, opens the possibility that this poem may allude to one of the mendicant orders, such as the Franciscans or Dominicans. 3-4: see Titus, 3:3: "Eramus enim aliquando et nos insipientes, increduli, errantes, servientes desiderii, et voluptatibus variis, in malitia et invidia agentes, odibiles, odientes invicem" ("For we ourselves also were some time unwise, incredulous, erring, slaves to diverse desires and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another"). This reference is misprinted as "Ritus" in Anderson, NDRC, 4:xxxvi, note 1. 13,3: "proprias" here modifies the plural form "res" in line 12,1. 18,3: "corrumpare" here presents the second-person singular present passive subjunctive form of the verb, rather than the infinitive (which would be "corrumpere"). 19: the use in F of a semicolon as punctuation at the end of this line, and with nothing to conclude line 18, suggests line 19 continues the previous clause, rather than starts a new sentence, as given in Anderson, NDRC, 4:xxxvi, and AH, 21, p. 200, no 25.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 4,1: F: quo; from Ma. 5,3: F: inopias; from Ma. MUSIC: General remarks: the music is composed of fairly short phrases that use a number of recurring motives. Some of the more obvious melodic correlations among phrases are signaled by boxed letters above the staves, with the certainty that further relationships may be posited for some of the phrases that are not so labeled. Line 13,1: TD: FMa: in both sources and at the same place, faint but visible b-natural sigs appear, almost certainly in a different hand from the main scribe in both sources. Then in F there are b-flat sigs in both parts prior to the very next word, line 13,2 (“velis”), which begins the following system. These flat signs appear to be reconfigured in the MS as b-natural sigs, again by a different hand, through an added, faint vertical stroke descending from the right of the flat sign. They therefore correspond to the indications presented in Ma and, as a result, b-naturals are proposed here for the remainder of the transcription. No further sigs appear in either source, so any succeeding b/f tritones are not softened by editorial ficta.

QUOT VITE SUCCESSIBUS

Conductus (J10/297)

F, f. 321r (7,57)

D
I
T

[Quot
Quot

[Quot] vi - te suc - ces - si - bus no - stra sors pre - flo - ru - it;

[Quot] vi - te suc - ces - si - bus no - stra sors pre - flo - ru - it;

tot mor - tis e - ven - ti - bus pec - can - do suc - cu - bu - it.

(a') tot mor - tis e - ven - ti - bus pec - can - do suc - cu - bu - it.

vi - tam de - dit gra - ti - a. mor - tem con - tu - ma - ti - a.

(b) vi - tam de - dit gra - ti - a. mor - tem con - tu - ma - ti - a.

fit vi - a tunc pre - vi - a. nunc in - vi - o de - vi - a fit vi - a tunc pre - vi - a. nunc in - vi - o de - vi - a for - me de - for - ma - ti - o mor - tis in - for - ma - ti - o.]

(b') for - me de - for - ma - ti - o mor - tis in - for - ma - ti - o.

The first system of musical notation consists of two staves. The upper staff is in treble clef and the lower staff is in bass clef. Both staves are in the key of F major (one flat). The music is written in a common time signature. The upper staff begins with a quarter note G4, followed by quarter notes A4, Bb4, and C5. This is followed by a quarter rest, then quarter notes D5, E5, and F5. The system concludes with a quarter note G5. The lower staff begins with a quarter note F3, followed by quarter notes G3, A3, and Bb3. This is followed by a quarter rest, then quarter notes C4, D4, and E4. The system concludes with a quarter note F4. Blue brackets are placed above the notes in both staves, indicating phrasing or articulation points.

The second system of musical notation also consists of two staves. The upper staff is in treble clef and the lower staff is in bass clef. Both staves are in the key of F major (one flat). The music is written in a common time signature. The upper staff begins with a quarter note G4, followed by quarter notes A4, Bb4, and C5. This is followed by a quarter rest, then quarter notes D5, E5, and F5. The system concludes with a quarter note G5. The lower staff begins with a quarter note F3, followed by quarter notes G3, A3, and Bb3. This is followed by a quarter rest, then quarter notes C4, D4, and E4. The system concludes with a quarter note F4. Blue brackets are placed above the notes in both staves, indicating phrasing or articulation points. A dashed blue line is drawn above the notes in the upper staff, indicating a slur or a specific phrasing.

QUOT VITE SUCCESSIBUS

Conductus (J10/297)

F, f. 321r (7,57)

I	Quot vite successibus nostra sors prefloruit, tot mortis eventibus peccando succubuit. Vitam dedit gratia; mortem, contumacia. Fit via, tunc previa, nunc invio devia. Forme deformatio, mortis informatio.		Our destiny flourishes just as much due to our successes in life as, through sinning, it fails, thanks to the misfortunes of death.
		5	Grace gave life; obstinacy, death. The road, once showing the way, becomes now an unmarked track in the wilderness. The disfiguring of a form
		10	is the representation of death.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 57, f. 321r: a2; Strophe I, complete; a unique transmission of music and text, which continues to occur somewhat more frequently in this fascicle, until the return to wider transmission patterns with Ego reus confiteor (H20/106), at F-7,63. Empty space without staves appears at the end of the last system of the piece that could accommodate further strophes that were never entered, a feature also seen in several of the surrounding works in F.¹

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 5-6: cf. Romans 6:23: “Stipendia enim peccati, mors. Gratia autem Dei, vita aeterna, in Christo Jesu Domino nostro” (“For the wages of sin is death. But the grace of God, life everlasting, in Christ Jesus our Lord.”). 7-8: see Proverbs 12:28: “In semita justitiae vita; iter autem devium ducit ad mortem” (“In the path of justice is life: but the by-way leads to death.”). Also cf. Isaiah, 40:3: “Vox clamantis in deserto: Parate viam Domini, rectas facite in solitudine semitas Dei nostri” (“The voice of one crying in the desert: Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the wilderness the paths of our God.”); the same passage or similar expressions appear in Matthew, 3:3, John, 1:23, Luke, 1:76; 8,2: for this meaning of “invio,” see Psalm 106:40: “in invio” (“where there was no passing”); Isaiah, 43:19: “in invio” (“in the wasteland”); Isaiah, 43:20: “in invio” (“in the wilderness”).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. MUSIC: Caudae: the series of ligatures throughout the two caudae in this piece suggest realization in iambic mode 3.

¹For further information on the apparent provision for additional strophes in those works in F-7 that transmit single stanzas, see the source report on F for Roma gaudens iubila (I9/312), at F-7,52.

VIRTUTUM THRONUS FRANGITUR
Conductus (J11/385)

F, f. 321v (7,58)*

I
D
T

[Vir -
A Vir -

b a
a'

[Vir] - tu - tum thro - nus fran - gi - tur
[Vir] - tu - tum thro - nus fran - gi - tur

re - gnant u - bi - que vi - ti - a re - gnant u - bi - que vi - ti - a

d
c
d'

iam ca - ri - tas ex - tin - gui - tur
iam ca - ri - tas ex - tin - gui - tur

b

ha - bun - dan - te ma - li - ti - a.
ha - bun - dan - te ma - li - ti - a.

*Unusually, the T melodies of the entire opening and closing caudae in this piece are essentially identical.

lu - ge - at sy - on fi - li - a cu - ius
lu - ge - at sy - on fi - li - a cu - ius

pu - dor cor - rum - pi - tur. dum ve - na - lis ex - po - ni - tur in pre - la - to - rum cu - ri - a.
pu - dor cor - rum - pi - tur. dum ve - na - lis ex - po - ni - tur in pre - la - to - rum cu - ri - a.

iu - ben - te a - va - ri - ti - a que [que] si - tim cra[s] - si
iu - ben - te a - va - ri - ti - a que [que] si - tim cra[s] - si pa - ti - pa - ti -

pa - ti - pa - ti -

- tur.
- tur.

VIRTUTUM THRONUS FRANGITUR

Conductus (J11/385)

F, f. 321v (7,58)

I Virtutum thronus frangitur; regnant ubique vitia. Iam caritas extinguitur habundante malitia. Lugeat syon filia; cuius pudor corrumpitur dum venalis exponitur in prelatorum curia, Iubente avaritia, que sitim Crassi patitur.	The throne of the Virtues is broken; everywhere the Vices reign. Charity is now snuffed out by Malice in abundance. 5 Zion's daughter should mourn; her decency is ruined so long as bribery is on show in the prelates' court, and Avarice is in charge, 10 who suffers the thirst of Crassus.
--	---

SOURCES:

F: fasc. 7, no. 58, f. 321v, a2; a unique musical and textual transmission of the single extant strophe, like the piece before it (Quot vite successibus [J10/297]) and several that follow, until the return to wider transmission patterns with Ego reus confiteor (H20/106), at F-7,63. A small space is available for the inclusion of a possible further stanza at the end of the last system of the setting, as is common for the single-stanza transmissions at this point in F-7. The following piece in F, Virtus moritur (J12/384), also deals with virtue and vice.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 3-4;9: unlike the figures of Charity in line 3 and Avarice in line 9, either of which appears, as appropriate, in the most familiar enumerations of the seven principle virtues and vices associated with Christianity, Malice is not typically recognized as one of the seven deadly (or capital) sins.¹ It appears scores of times in the Bible, but not in direct opposition to Charity. For more information on the virtues, see the notes on the conductus Veni creator ... recreator (E13/361), lines 17-20, and A deserto veniens (J3/1, I29/1), lines 19-27 (Strophe III). 5: as Anderson remarks in his notes on the text to this conductus (NDRC, 5:ix, note 2), quoting the Glossa ordinaria from the text given in PL, 113: col. 1057D, the daughter or daughters of Zion, or of Jerusalem, symbolize the larger body of the faithful that is the church.² 10,3: Marcus Licinius Crassus (ca. 112-53 B.C.E.), nicknamed Dives (“The Rich”), was a famous Roman statesman and military commander. A member of the first triumvirate with Julius Caesar and Pompey (60 B.C.E.), and instrumental in quelling the revolt of Spartacus (73-71 B.C.E.), he was known for his greed and his accumulation of wealth, and died in Carrhae in Mesopotamia during his unprovoked campaign against the Parthians. According to some authors, ¹The most common listing of the seven deadly sins was prompted by Pope Gregory I in his Moralia in Job, 31,45, 87 (for the text, see PL, 76: col. 621A), who gives vainglory, envy, sadness, avarice, gluttony, and lust. Later enumerations modified a few of these candidates to form the typical list of vices: pride, avarice, envy, wrath, lust, gluttony, and sloth.

²*PL*, 113:1057D, reportedly quoting Augustine, glossing Psalm 136:8, which refers to the daughter of Babylon: “Per successionem, facta est filia Babylonis civitas malorum, sicut Ecclesia: Jerusalem scilicet, civitas bonorum per successionem filia Sion” (“Through succession, the daughter of Babylon is made the city of evil; just as the church, namely Jerusalem, the Daughter of Zion is through succession the city of good.” – Anderson’s translation).

molten gold was poured down the throat of his decapitated head, which was subjected to further indignity by being used as a prop in a production of Euripides' Bacchae. See the reference to him in Philip the Chancellor's conductus prosula Bulla fulminante, line 44, and his sketch in Plutarch's Lives. The story of molten gold stems from the histories of Dio Cassius and Florus Annaeus.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 3,3: exterminat; the lack of a corresponding rhyme throughout the rest of the stanza and the lack of sense in the text as it stands suggest this is an error, and it has been corrected accordingly; Anderson, NDRC, 5:ix, offers “deciditur.” Note the original reading of line 3,2-3 corresponds exactly with line 3 of the motet Mens fidem seminat / In odorem (vdW 495/M45) attributed by modern scholars to Philip the Chancellor, see the discussion in Motets and Prosulas, 123. 10,3: crasi. Syllabic/melismatic identity: 1. T(D) of “[cari]tas extinguitur [MS: exterminat]” (l. 3) = 1a. T(D similar) of end of first phrase of following cauda on “[extingui]tur” (l. 3). This correspondence includes only the last 6 cadential pitches of the T at the end of the phrase: g,g,fe,f,g and the basic contour of the D; this is therefore rather minor and formulaic in terms of correspondence. MUSIC: Opening and closing caudae: Note that the complete T melodies of these two melismas (marked with a boxed capital “A” in the score) are – unusually – essentially the same. T:F: the first 3 pitches of the eighth T phrase (opening fga in the transcription) appear 2 lower as efg in both caudae; following Anderson (NDRC, 5:19, measure 11, and 5:20, measure 79), the first series (at L21 in the first cauda) is raised a second, the other (at L23 in the last) is left as it is. T:F: the second pitch of the ninth T phrase in both caudae c (at L25 and L27 in each, respectively) may conceivably be d, allowing for a lack of space for the ligature to indicate the rise to e after the dip in pitch to c.

VIRTUS MORITUR
Conductus (J12/348)

F, f. 322r (7,59)

D
I
T

[Vir - tus mo - ri - tur. vi - vit vi - ti - um. fi - des tru - di - tur in ex - i - li - um.
Vir - tus mo - ri - tur. vi - vit vi - ti - um. fi - des tru - di - tur in ex - i - li - um.

iam ius co - gi - tur ad si - len - ti - um. do - lus o - ri - tur. et fraus co - li - tur.
iam ius co - gi - tur ad si - len - ti - um. do - lus o - ri - tur. et fraus co - li - tur.

in - cur - rit lex dis - pen - di - um. o - mne ve - ti - tum cen - set li - ci - tum
in - cur - rit lex dis - pen - di - um. o - mne ve - ti - tum cen - set li - ci - tum

ce - ca di - vi - tum mens cu - pi - di - ne. non in nu - mi - ne fi - dens a - li - o
ce - ca di - vi - tum mens cu - pi - di - ne. non in nu - mi - ne fi - dens a - li - o

quam de - na - ri - o. cu - ius gra - ti - a fit pro - pi - ti - a ro - me cu - ri - a.] quam de - na - ri - o. cu - ius gra - ti - a fit pro - pi - ti - a ro - me cu - ri - a.

ALTERNATIVE READING:

Fauv, f. 3v^b: added closing material, modifying and expanding last line in F (line 19)

T

O - mnis cu - ri - a pre - vi - a fal - vel - li ma - li - ci - a

VIRTUS MORITUR

Conductus (J12/348)

F, f. 322r (7,59)

I	Virtus moritur, vivit vitium, fides truditur in exilium. Iam ius cogitur ad silentium. Dolus oritur, et fraus colitur. Incurrit lex dispendium. Omne vetitum censet licitum, ceca divitum mens cupidine. Non in numine fidens alio quam denario, cuius gratia fit propitia Rome curia.		Virtue is dead, Vice lives, Faith is forced into exile. 5 Justice is now compelled to silence. Trickery raises its head, and Fraud is encouraged. The Law incurs a loss. 10 The mind, blind in its lust for riches, deems everything forbidden as licit. It trusts in 15 no authority other than coin, thanks to which the papal court at Rome is becoming 19 favorably disposed.
---	--	--	---

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 59, f. 322r: a2; Strophe I, complete, based on comparison with the other sources, none of which offers additional stanzas. As with other single-stanza items in this section of F, though, at the end of the piece there is some empty space remaining at the right edge of the writing block (partially though not completely taken up with empty staves) that could accommodate further text. Interestingly, the previous piece in F, Virtutum thronus frangitur (J11/385), also deals with virtue and vice. Virtus moritur is, furthermore, only the second piece in F-7 to present no caudae whatsoever, a feature seen previously in Frater iam prospicias (I31/132) at F-7,56. See the notes on the text below for some other features these pieces may share.

Fauv (F-Pn fr. 146; Paris, Bibliothèque nationale, fonds français 146 [Roman de Fauvel]), no. 11, f. 3v^b: a1 (T), in mensural notation; Strophe I, complete, with an added, “fauvelizing” segment following a modified line 19 with new music and text: “... omnis curia / previa / falvelli malicia” (“... every court is becoming favorably disposed, with Fauvel’s malice leading the way”). This addition appears as an alternative reading following the main transcription. The last musical system for this piece intrudes into the area of the “c” column of the writing block at the bottom of the leaf.

Text only:

OxAdd (GB-Ob Add. A. 44), no. 78 (with “lxxvi” entered in the right margin, apparently twice, in two different shades of ink), f. 126r: text only of Strophe I, complete; rubric: “Contra avaritiam romane curie” (“Against the greed of the Roman curia”).

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: General remarks: This poem features common topics within the Parisian conductus repertory in its criticism of morals, greed, the evil of monetary riches, and the corruption of the papal curia. Similar themes appear as recently as the previous piece in F-7, Virtutum thronus frangitur (J11/385); for examples of some other conductus that invoke the evils of the papal court in particular (which appears rather prominently at the end of Virtus moritur), see the conductus Non habes aditum (J29/221) and Philip the Chancellor's Fontis in rivulum (K6/130), as well as his conductus prosula Bulla fulminante (L5/53). Style and versification: Although different in some key ways, the style and poetic techniques of Virtus moritur echo somewhat the features of Frater iam prospicias (I31/132), transmitted just three pieces earlier in F-7. In addition to recalling some of the criticism of money and riches seen in Frater iam, Virtus moritur presents short text lines set to nearly completely syllabic musical phrases and it contains no caudae. These latter features might also suggest, as was proposed for Frater iam, that Virtus moritur may possibly have originated as a prosula to an originally melismatic section of a composition. On the other hand, Virtus moritur seems slightly more expansive in containing six different rhyme sounds in its 19 lines (“-itur,” “-ium,” “-itum,” “-ine,” “-io,” and “-ia”), and it also departs from the expectation that a prosula, like a motet, would favor uneven text lines, since the entire poem is disposed into 5pp verses, except for the centrally placed line 9, which offers 8pp. Its transmission in F in two parts, rather than as a monody, might also seem to separate it from the typical characteristics of the prosula repertory associated with Notre Dame; the most notable exception to this is the three-part transmission of Crucifigat omnes (D3/70) at F-6,35. All of these elements together suggest that although the derivation of Virtus moritur from a melismatic source is conceivable, it seems rather less likely than the case of Frater iam prospicias.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 10,2: F: vitium, from Fauv, OxAdd. MUSIC: no variants. General remarks: It seems rather remarkable that the melodic content of this piece, which is given over nearly completely to five-syllable phrases that feature a significant number of similarly shaped motives, appears from my reckoning never to repeat a full phrase exactly, in either part, throughout its entire course. There is, however, exact correspondence in contour between the T of lines 7 and 12, the T of 15 and 19, the D of 10 and 12, and the D of 6 and 19, all unmarked here.

ECLYPSIM PATITUR

Conductus (17/105)

F, f. 322v (7,60): Strophe I and refrain; WI, f. 110r (101r) (9,19): Strophes II-IV

D
 [E - - - - - cly - psim pa - ti - tur splen - dor mi - li - ti - e.
 [Vir - - - - - tu - tis fo - mi - tem fon - tem ir - ri - gu - um
 [Co - - - - - mes qui te - nu - it mun - di do - mi - ni - um
 [Mo - - - - - rum ma - tu - ri - tas co - mi - ti nu - pse - rat

T
 E - - - - - cly - psim pa - ti - tur splen - dor mi - li - ti - e.
 [Vir - - - - - tu - tis fo - mi - tem fon - tem ir - ri - gu - um
 [Co - - - - - mes qui te - nu - it mun - di do - mi - ni - um
 [Mo - - - - - rum ma - tu - ri - tas co - mi - ti nu - pse - rat

so - lis ex - tin - gui - tur ra - di - us ho - di - e.
 iam chri - sti mi - li - tem mun - do re - si - du - um qui for - tes do - mu - it pi - is suf - fra - gi - um vul - tus sim - pli - ci - tas gra - ti - am hau - se - rat

so - lis ex - tin - gui - tur ra - di - us ho - di - e.
 iam chri - sti mi - li - tem mun - do re - si - du - um
 qui for - tes do - mu - it pi - is suf - fra - gi - um vul - tus sim - pli - ci - tas gra - ti - am hau - se - rat

lux mun - di la - bi - tur dum flos bri - tan - ni - e mors ra - pit co - mit - em fit re - gnum vi - du - um fa - tis oc - cu - bu - it er - go so - la - ti - um dan - di se - re - ni - tas se - dem e - le - ge - rat

lux mun - di la - bi - tur dum flos bri - tan - ni - e mors ra - pit co - mit - em fit re - gnum vi - du - um fa - tis oc - cu - bu - it er - go so - la - ti - um dan - di se - re - ni - tas se - dem e - le - ge - rat

de vi - a mit - ti - tur in se - dem pa - tri - e.
 dum vi - te li - mi - tem lin - quit am - bi - gu - um.]
 ab - sit nam af - fu - it fa - ta - le te - di - um.]
 in e - o lar - gi - tas o - mni - bus pre - e - rat.]

de vi - a mit - ti - tur in se - dem pa - tri - e.
 dum vi - te li - mi - tem lin - quit am - bi - gu - um.]
 ab - sit nam af - fu - it fa - ta - le te - di - um.]
 in e - o lar - gi - tas o - mni - bus pre - e - rat.]

[Refrain]

Refr. mors sor - tis a - spe - re

mors [mors] sor - tis a - spe - re

cun - ctis e - qua non no - vit par - ce -

cun - ctis e - qua non no - vit par - ce -

[a reading of this cauda in mode 3 and conceivably 6 is also possible

- re.]

a (a')

- re.

ECLYPSIM PATITUR

Conductus (I7/105)

F, f. 322v (7,60): Strophe I and refrain; WI, f. 110r (101r) (9,19): Strophes II-IV

I Eclipsim patitur splendor militie. Solis extinguitur radius hodie. Lux mundi labitur dum flos Britannie de via mittitur in sedem patrie.	Knighthood's splendor suffers an eclipse. A ray of the sun is extinguished today. 5 The light of the world fades away as the flower of Brittany is sent from the earthly path into the seat of heaven.
Refr. Mors sortis aspere, cunctis equa, non novit parcere.	Death, whose harsh destiny 10 is the same for all, could not spare him.
II [Virtutis fomitem, fontem irriguum, iam Christi militem, mundo residuum, mors rapit comitem. Fit regnum viduum dum vite limitem linquit ambiguum.	Death snatches away the count, a spark of virtue, an overflowing fountain 15 left to the world, but now a soldier of Christ. The kingdom is widowed as he leaves behind the uncertain track of life.
Refr. Mors sortis aspere, cunctis equa, non novit parcere.	20 Death, whose harsh destiny is the same for all, could not spare him.
III Comes, qui tenuit mundi dominium, qui fortes domuit, piis suffragium, fatis occubuit. Ergo, solatium, absit, nam affuit fatale tedium.	This count, who held dominion over the world, 25 who tamed the powerful, and gave support to the devout, has succumbed to fate. Therefore, solace, be gone, for deadly 30 suffering is at hand.
Refr. Mors sortis aspere, cunctis equa, non novit parcere.	Death, whose harsh destiny is the same for all, could not spare him.
IV Morum maturitas comiti nupserat. Vultus simplicitas gratiam hauserat. Dandi serenitas sedem elegerat in eo, largitas	Maturity of conduct 35 had been married to the count. The frankness of his countenance had drunk deeply of grace. The peacefulness of giving had chosen a seat 40 within him, his generosity omnibus preerat.

surpassed all.

Refr. Mors sortis aspere, cunctis equa,
non novit parcere.]

44 Death, whose harsh destiny is the same for all,
could not spare him.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 60, f. 322v: a2; only Strophe I and refrain transmitted, with no special indication for the refrain, and with empty space remaining at the right edge of the writing block of the final system that could accommodate further stanzas. Eclipsim patitur is the second piece in F-7 to transmit a refrain, the first since O qui fontem gratie (H28/243) at F-7,23. For further information on the apparent provision for additional strophes in those works in F-7 that transmit single stanzas, see the source reports on F for A deserto veniens (J3/1, I29/1), f. 316v (at F-7,48) and Roma gaudens iubila (I9/31), f. 318r (at F-7,52).

W1, fasc. 9, no. 19, f. 110r (101r): a2; Strophes I-IV complete, with a somewhat larger, possibly capital letter pointing out the start of the refrain. The residual stanzas, with no further indications of the refrain, are entered immediately after the close of the musical setting, their initials signaled by larger letters. The first words of Strophe II begin under an empty portion of the T staff of the final system on the leaf, entered upon the same ruled line accorded to the text in the musical setting; they then proceed below, outside the writing block to the right margin. The remainder of Strophe II and the other additional stanzas are inscribed in several lines underneath this same system, extending from the left to the right margin, with the final two words, inscribed on their own, separate line, set nearly flush with the right margin and preceded by a pilcrow (¶). The following piece in W1 is Redit etas aurea (I8/298), which also treats the English royal family.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Subject, date, and poetic attribution: This text is widely recognized as lament or planctus on the death of Geoffrey, Duke of Brittany (1158-1186), the fourth of the five sons of Henry II of England (reg. 1154-1189) and Eleanor of Aquitaine (1122-1204). A close friend and ally of Philip II Augustus of France (reg. 1180-1223), Geoffrey died in Paris on 19 August 1186, reportedly as the result of an accident at a tournament, and was buried in Notre Dame cathedral. Geoffrey is noted for his participation in two rebellions against his father, where he allied himself with his older brother Henry the Young King. The first of these, from 1173-1174, is acknowledged in the conductus Novus miles sequitur (E11/228), lines 25-30. A second campaign, during which the younger Henry met his death, arose in 1183, where the two brothers were additionally pitted against their sibling Richard (“Lionheart,” later ruler of England from 1189-1199). A number of other datable conductus in the Parisian repertory involve the members of this royal family; see, in addition to Eclipsim patitur (I7/105) and the indirect nod in Novus miles sequitur (E11/228), In occasu syderis (I11/178), Redit etas aurea (I8/298), and Anglia planctus itera (K12/14) – although sometimes disagreement has arisen over who the exact subject(s) of some of these poems may be. Opinions are divided, for example, over whether Anglia planctus or In occasu may involve Henry II or either one of his sons Henry and Geoffrey. Furthermore, in my study “Datable ‘Notre Dame’ Conductus,”¹ I proposed Henry the Young King as the subject of both Eclipsim patitur and In occasu, a stance that – although still conceivable for both poems – I now feel less confident about at present for Eclipsim patitur. A recent article by David A. Traill argues the more widely held view that Geoffrey is the one mourned.² A number of Traill’s reasons for this stance (and some of mine for the other position) are enumerated in the textual notes below. In addition, the translation I offer here has benefitted from the rendering of Eclipsim patitur in Traill’s article. Traill also proposes that all of the lyrics cited above except for Novus miles are the poetic work of Philip the Chancellor, an assertion that has yet to achieve wider consideration in the literature.³ Textual notes: 1-2: in terms of qualifying as “the splendor of knighthood,” both Geoffrey and his brother Henry were skilled in battle. 1: the image of an eclipse as a symbol of doom or tragedy appears frequently in the Parisian conductus repertory, and figures prominently in the planctus of the datable corpus that mourn the passing of royalty or other renowned individuals; see, for example, the opening lines of Sol eclipsim patitur (K83/331 – on the death of Ferdinand III, king of León and Castile, 1252)⁴ and Eclipsim passus tociens (K33/104 – on the passing of the theologian Petrus Cantor, 1197), the opening couplet of Strophe II (lines 10-11) of Anglia planctus itera (K12/14 – more about which is above), and line 5 of Pange melos lacrimosum (I15/258 – mourning Emperor Frederick Barbarossa, 1190). For additional echoes of the language of Eclipsim patitur in other conductus, see Traill, “More Poems,” 175-176. 5,1-2: see Matthew, 5:14, from Jesus’s Sermon on the Mount: “Vos estis lux mundi. Non potest civitas abscondi supra montem posita” (“You are the light of the world. A city seated on a mountain cannot be hid.”). Also note the similar expression in Sol eclipsim patitur, line 3 (“Mundi lux extinguitur” – “The light of the world is snuffed out”). 6,2-3: although, as Anderson notes in his commentary to the text of Anglia planctus itera (NDRC, 7:xx, note 2), “Britannia” can refer to England as well as Brittany (which point might conceivably might argue for the younger King Henry as the poem’s subject), the context here seems to favor Geoffrey. This likelihood is further compounded by the lack of any indication that the subject mourned here is a king. Such an acknowledgment might reasonably be expected, since the younger Henry had been crowned on 14 June 1170, some nineteen years prior to his father’s death, a practice earlier adopted by the Capetian monarchs of France to avoid disputes over royal succession. On the other hand, it does seem somewhat curious that Geoffrey’s title is specified three times (in lines 16, 23, and 35) as “count” (comes), rather than “duke” (dux). The title of count would apply more fittingly to Henry the Young King, who bore the titles of Count of Anjou and Maine at his death in addition to being Duke of Normandy (the latter title, interestingly, was given to Geoffrey by his father after his brother’s death).⁵ 13: conceivably an indirect recollection of Genesis, 2:6: “Sed fons ascendebat e terra, irrigans universam superficiem terrae” (“But a spring rose out of the earth, watering all the surface of the earth.”). 14,2-3: see Timothy, 2:3: “Labora sicut bonus miles Christi Jesu” (“Labor as a good soldier of Christ Jesus.”). 17: although not at all conclusive, the rhetorical point here that the kingdom is now widowed might suggest that the subject of the poem would be a king (such as the younger Henry) rather than a member of the lesser nobility. 23-24: again, the expression “mundi dominium” might suggest royalty, rather than a duke or count, but Traill (“More Poems,” 174-175) argues that this is explicable through Henry II’s handing over of the dukedom of Normandy to Geoffrey in 1184 (see the remarks for lines 6,2-3), as well as Philip Augustus naming him as seneschal of France in 1186 before Geoffrey’s death, all of which could point to the possibility of ²David A. Traill, “More Poems by Philip the Chancellor,” The Journal of Medieval Latin, 16 (2006): 164-181, at pp. 173-176.

¹ Thomas B. Payne “Datable ‘Notre Dame’ Conductus: New Historical Observations on Style and Technique,” Current Musicology, 64 (2001): 104-151; see pp. 106, 141, and note 7.

³See, in addition to the citations already mentioned, Traill’s “Philip the Chancellor and Richard the Lionheart,” The Journal of Medieval Latin, 28 (2018), 1-13; especially 7, which argues for Philip’s authorship of Redit etas.

⁴On this candidate, rather than the more frequently encountered Fernando II, who died in 1188, see Payne, “Datable ‘Notre Dame’ Conductus,” 110, note 18, 143; and David Catalunya, “Music, Space, and Ritual in Medieval Castile, 1221-1350” (Ph.D. dissertation, Universität Würzburg, 2016), 54-55. The earliest mention I know of the claim for Ferdinand III as the subject of Sol eclipsim patitur is in Janthia Yearley, “A Bibliography of Planctus in Latin, Provençal, French, German, English, Italian, Catalan, and Galician-Portuguese from the Time of Bede to the Early Fifteenth Century,” Journal of the Plainsong and Medieval Music Society, 4 (1981): 12-52.

⁵See Traill, “More Poems,” 174.

grooming Geoffrey as Henry II's successor, despite Richard's ostensible claim to the throne. 26: neither Henry the Young King nor Geoffrey are especially known for their piety or kindness towards the church or religious institutions; both of them, in fact, were wont to despoil churches and monasteries to fund their military enterprises. Nevertheless efforts arose to canonize Henry the Younger after his death, occasioned primarily by reaction to a harsh penance he undertook prior to his decease.⁶

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants in either of the two sources. MUSIC: General remarks: This is (at present) the earliest datable polyphonic conductus to contain caudae (a claim that remains even if the later date of 1186 is applied to it – see the opening notes on the text); see Payne “Datable ‘Notre Dame’ Conductus,” 131-134, for this point and for further observations on its musical style. The low tessitura of both voice parts, with the D actually hitting its lowest point (the pitch a) more frequently than the T, may be noteworthy, given the mournful content of the poetry. Opening cauda (line 1,1): T: F,W1: ‘om prior to the second syllable, supplied editorially. Line 9,1 (Refrain): D: F: low a pitch om immediately following the refrain's initial cauda; restored from W1. Final cauda: this portion is equally at home in rhythmic mode 1 or 3; mode 6 is even conceivable.

⁶See Matthew Strickland, Henry the Young King, 1155-1183 (New Haven: Yale University Press, 2016), 313-315.

ETERNO SERVIET
(J13/107)

F, f. 323r (7,61)

D
I
T

[E - - ter - no
E - - ter - no

ser - vi - et qui par - vo ne - sci - et u - ti com - mer - ti - o.
ser - vi - et qui par - vo ne - sci - et u - ti com - mer - ti - o.

a e - ter - num sen - ti - et iu - gum cui pa - ri - et pro - lem am - bi - ti - o
b c e - ter - num sen - ti - et iu - gum cui pa - ri - et pro - lem am - bi - ti - o

c a'
vi - pe - ra - rum ge - ni - mi - na ma - ter - na rum - punt in - gui - na.
b vi - pe - ra - rum ge - ni - mi - na ma - ter - na rum - punt in - gui - na.

b sic sic mo - tus quem con - ci - pit va - ne li - bi - do b sic sic mo - tus quem con - ci - pit va - ne li - bi - do

glo - ri - e dis - ten - dit in - flat di - ri - pit. men - tem - que fla - tum su - sci - pit am - bi - tus
glo - ri - e dis - ten - dit in - flat di - ri - pit. men - tem - que fla - tum su - sci - pit am - bi - tus

The image shows a musical score for two staves. The top staff is in treble clef and the bottom staff is in bass clef. Both staves have a key signature of one flat (B-flat) and a common time signature (C). The music consists of a series of eighth and sixteenth notes, with some rests. Blue brackets are placed above the notes in both staves, indicating phrasing. A blue dashed line connects the end of a phrase in the top staff to the beginning of a phrase in the bottom staff. The lyrics are written below the notes: "et po - ten - ti - e.]" for the top staff and "et po - ten - ti - e." for the bottom staff.

ETERNO SERVIET

Conductus (J13/107)

F, f. 323r (7,61)

I	Eterno serviet qui parvo nesciet uti commertio. Eternum sentiet iugum cui pariet prolem ambitio. Viperarum genimina materna rumpunt inguina. Sic, sic motus quem concipit vane libido glorie, distendit, inflat, diripit; mentemque flatum suscipit ambitus et potentie.		One who doesn't know how to profit in small business will forever be enslaved. The one to whom ambition 5 bears offspring will endure an eternal yoke. A brood of vipers bursts from her maternal loins. Thus, thus is he aroused, 10 the one whom the lust for vainglory seizes, stuffs, bloats, and bursts; and he takes on the puffed-up temperament of ostentation and power.
---	--	--	---

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 61, f. 323r: a2; a unique transmission of music and text; there is space at the end of this piece (as there is for the works that surround it in F-7) for possible additional strophes, though none exist. This blank area comprises not only space after the final system, but impinges into a significant portion of the area at the right margin of the first system of the following piece in the MS.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 7: the image of a brood of vipers appears several times in the gospels as a metaphor for haughtiness and greed; see Matthew, 3:7, 12:34, 23:33; Luke, 3:7.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 5,2: considered as a monosyllable here, as the music and the poetic form indicate. 13,3: period omitted. MUSIC: Opening cauda: T: F: I am assuming the omission of a stroke at L14 after the first c (written very like an L figure) in order to render the conjunctura groups and rest strokes with analogous rhythms. The use of an iambic division of the Long for the cauda appears to be the most likely interpretation at first glance and also provides better consonance in some places, yet the frequent repeated notes, the use of a first-mode pattern beginning the second phrase in the D (rendered iambically here), and the prominent 3-note ligatures and conjuncturae allow various ways to realize the rhythms of this melisma. Since the later caudae in this piece also seem to favor an iambic mode interpretation, it is employed here as well.

IN NOVAS FERT ANIMUS FORMAS
 Conductus (J14/177)

F, f. 323v (7,62)

I
 D
 8
 [In] no - vas fert a - ni - mus
 T
 8
 In [In] no - vas fert a - ni - mus

a for - mas ver - sum ho - mi - nem di - ce - re quem no - vi - mus
 a1
 for - mas ver - sum ho - mi - nem di - ce - re quem no - vi - mus

b fa - ctum ad y - ma - gi - nem de - i. quem cre - a - ti - o
 a1
 fa - ctum ad y - ma - gi - nem de - i. quem cre - a - ti - o

b pri - ma si - ne vi - ti - o fe - cit vas e - gre - gi - um.
 c pri - ma si - ne vi - ti - o fe - cit vas e - gre - gi - um.

d (b1)
 nam ci - ster - na sor - di - um pri - mam for - mam ex - u - it.
 c nam ci - ster - na sor - di - um pri - mam for - mam ex - u - it.

e (a3)
 pe - re - gri - nas in - du - it.]
 c (a3)
 pe - re - gri - nas in - du - it.

IN NOVAS FERT ANIMUS FORMAS

Conductus (J14/177)

F, f. 323v (7,62)

I In novas fert animus formas versum hominem dicere, quem novimus factum ad ymaginem dei, quem creatio prima sine vitio fecit, vas egregium; nam, cisterna sordium, primam formam exuit, peregrinas induit.	The spirit moves me to speak of a man turned into new forms, the one we learned was made in the image 5 of God, whom the first creation fashioned without blemish, a distinguished vessel; but now, as a pit of filth, he has cast off his initial form 10 and clothed himself in strange ones.
--	--

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 62, f. 323v: a2; a unique musical and textual transmission. As usual for this part of F, empty space is available at the end of the final system that could readily accommodate further stanzas, but none exists. In novas fert animus formas ends a nearly unbroken series of strophic or single-stanza pieces that begins with A deserto veniens (J3/1, I29/1) at F-7,48 (f. 316v). It is succeeded by Ego reus confiteor (H20/106), the first multi-stanzaic, through-composed piece to be transmitted in F-7 since Qui de Saba veniunt (I20/281) at F-7,47 (f. 315v), which itself was the last of an uninterrupted succession of through-composed works that launched the fascicle. The single, minor exception to these formal groupings is the strophic-sequence form of Redit etas aurea (I8/298) at F-7,53 (f. 318v). For further details on all these points, see the source reports on F for A deserto veniens and Roma gaudens iubila (I9/31) at F-7,52 f. (318r).

Text only: none. The incipit is similar to the conductus In nova fert animus via gressus (K29/176), preserved in a monophonic setting in F-10,29 (f. 427v). A text-only transmission of a different poem in OxAdd (GB-Ob Add. A. 44) on f. 65v, also begins in the same way: “In nova fert animus mutare querimoniam.”

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1-2: these lines are a non-metrical paraphrase of the opening statement from Ovid’s Metamorphoses (I:1-2,1): “In nova fert animus mutatas dicere formas / corpora” (“The spirit compels me to tell of forms changed into new bodies.”). The line was frequently quoted, parodied, or paraphrased over time, sometimes with the variant “novas,” as seen in line 2,1 of this conductus text. This variant slightly recalibrates the sense as to whether the forms are being changed into new bodies, or the bodies into new forms. 3,2-7,1: the metaphor of Christ as a new Adam, born without sin, but who will eventually assume the sufferings of the world, appears, for example, in Salvatoris hodie – Novus Adam (C5/315), lines 14-17; see as well 1 Corinthians, 15:45, and 15:47.¹ 4-5,1: for man made in the image of God, see Genesis, 1:27, 9:6; 1 Corinthians, 11:7; and 2 Corinthians, 4:4. 10: see Zephaniah, 1:8: “et erit in die hostiae domini, visitabo super principes, et super filios regis, et super omnes qui induti sunt veste peregrina” (“And it shall come to pass in the day of the victim of the Lord, that I will visit upon the princes, and upon the king’s sons, and upon all who are clothed with strange garments.”).

¹ 1 Corinthians, 15:45: “Factus est primus homo Adam in animam viventem novissimus Adam in spiritum vivificantem” (“The first man Adam was made into a living soul; the last Adam into a quickening spirit”). 1 Corinthians 15:47: “Primus homo de terra, terrenus; secundus homo de caelo, caelestis” (“The first man was of the earth, earthly; the second man, from heaven, heavenly”).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. MUSIC: In the cum littera sections of this piece, the T makes use of a small number of motives, sometimes slightly varied or transposed. These are indicated above the T staff with letters. 5,2-3: T:F: g,a for the adopted editorial revision a,b over “quem cre[atio]” taken from line 7,2-3.

EGO REUS CONFITEOR – F and Metz versions
Conductus (H20/106)

F, f. 324r (7,63)

1. I

[E-]
E-

[E] - go
[E] - go

re - us con - fi - te - or de - [de] - o. sem-per-que
re - us con - fi - te - or de - [de] - o. sem-per-que

vir - gi - ni ma - tri ma - ri - e do - mi - ni. san - vir - gi - ni ma - tri ma - ri - e do - mi - ni. san -

[san] - ctis - que cun-ctis fa - te - or ad - [b]
[san] - ctis - que cun-ctis fa - te - or ad - [a] [b]

[ad] - di - ctus pe - ne te - ne - or et ve - re - or [ad] - di - ctus pe - ne te - ne - or et ve - re - or

W1/Metz:

quod me-re-or. of -

quod me-re-or. of -

[of] - fen - di nam-que plu-ri-mum se - [se] - pe

[of] - fen - di nam-que plu-ri-mum se - [se] - pe

de - um et prox-i - mum. in pu - bli - co me pu - bli - co. re - um val - de me iu - di - co.

de - um et prox-i - mum. in pu - bli - co me pu - bli - co. re - um val - de me iu - di - co.

D

cor -

T

cor -

[cor] - dis o - ris et o - pe - ris me -

[cor] - dis o - ris et o - pe - ris me -

[me]-a cul - pa. nunc sup - pli - co ma - tri ihe - su cum

[me]-a cul - pa. nunc sup - pli - co ma - tri ihe - su cum

ce - te - ris ce - le - stis au - le ci - vi - bus. pi - is im - plo - ret pre - ci - bus

ce - te - ris ce - le - stis au - le ci - vi - bus. pi - is im - plo - ret pre - ci - bus

a [a] fi - li - o

a [a] fi - li - o ne tre - men - do iu - di - ci - o su - pre - ma dif - fi - ni - ti - o in pro - fun - dum

ne tre - men - do iu - di - ci - o su - pre - ma dif - fi - ni - ti - o in pro - fun - dum

me de - pri - mat et op - pri - mat. sed

me de - pri - mat et op - pri - mat. sed

[sed] con - fi - ten - tem re - di - mat et ex - i - mat sup -

[sed] con - fi - ten - tem re - di - mat et ex - i - mat sup -

[sup] - pli - ci - o de - vo - ta sup - pli - ca - ti -

[sup] - pli - ci - o de - vo - ta sup - pli - ca - ti -

First system of musical notation. The upper staff begins with a red box containing the letter 'f'. The lower staff begins with a red box containing the letter 'e'. Both staves feature blue bracketed phrasing marks and blue slurs. The music is in a minor key with a common time signature.

Second system of musical notation. The upper staff has a red box containing 'e' above a note. The lower staff has a red box containing 'e'' above a note. Blue bracketed phrasing marks and blue slurs are present throughout the system.

Third system of musical notation. The upper staff has a red box containing 'g' above a note. The lower staff has a red box containing 'g' above a note. Blue bracketed phrasing marks and blue slurs are present throughout the system.

Fourth system of musical notation. The upper staff has a red box containing 'i' above a note. The lower staff has red boxes containing 'g'' and 'h' above notes. Blue bracketed phrasing marks and blue slurs are present throughout the system.

Fifth system of musical notation. The upper staff has a red box containing 'i'' above a note. The lower staff has a red box containing 'h'' above a note. Blue bracketed phrasing marks and blue slurs are present throughout the system. The system concludes with a double bar line and the text '- o.]' on the upper staff and '- o.' on the lower staff.

Metz (F-ME 732bis/20), f. 2r (no. 4)*

Tr [E -]
 2. I D [E -]
 T E -

[E] - go
 [E] - go
 [E] - go

re - us con - fi - te - or de - [de] - o. sem-per - que
 re - us con - fi - te - or de - [de] - o. sem-per - que
 re - us con - fi - te - or de - [de] - o. sem-per - que

vir - gi-ni ma - tri ma-ri - e do - mi-ni. san - [b] vir - gi-ni ma - tri ma-ri - e do - mi-ni. san - vir - gi-ni ma - tri ma-ri - e do - mi-ni. san -

*In this source, the cum littera sections supply mensural values for both simple and ligated notational figures. Rest strokes are likewise distinguished as longer or shorter by their length. The caudae, on the other hand are in modal notation throughout.

[san] - ctis - que cun - ctis fa - te - or ad -
[san] - ctis - que cun - ctis fa - te - or ad -
[san] - ctis - que cun - ctis fa - te - or ad -

[ad] - di - ctus pe - ne te - ne - or et ve - re - or [ad] - di - ctus pe - ne te - ne - or et ve - re - or [ad] - di - ctus pe - ne te - ne - or et ve - re - or

quod me - re - or of - quod me - re - or. of -
quod me - re - or. of -

[of] - fen - di nam - que plu - ri - mum se - [se] - pe
[of] - fen - di nam - que plu - ri - mum se - [se] - pe
[of] - fen - di nam - que plu - ri - mum se - [se] - pe

de - um et prox - i - mum. in pu - bli - co [me pu - bli - co.] re - um val - de me iu - di - co.

de - um et prox - i - mum. in pu - bli - co [me pu - bli - co.] re - um val - de me iu - di - co.

de - um et prox - i - mum. in pu - bli - co [me pu - bli - co.] re - um val - de me iu - di - co.

Tr cor -

[II] D cor -

T cor -

[cor] - dis o - ris et o - pe - ris me -

[cor] - dis o - ris et o - pe - ris me -

[cor] - dis o - ris et o - pe - ris me -

[me] - a cul - pa. nunc sup - pli - co ma - tri ihe - su cum

[me] - a cul - pa. nunc sup - pli - co ma - tri ihe - su cum

[me] - a cul - pa. nunc sup - pli - co ma - tri ihe - su cum

ce - te - ris ce - le - stis au - le ci - vi - bus. pi - is im - plo - ret pre - ci - bus

ce - te - ris ce - le - stis au - le ci - vi - bus. pi - is im - plo - ret pre - ci - bus

ce - te - ris ce - le - stis au - le ci - vi - bus. pi - is im - plo - ret pre - ci - bus

a [a] fi - [d] [c] [d]

a [a] fi -

a [a] [fi] -

remainder lost

EGO REUS CONFITEOR

Conductus (H20/106)

F, f. 324r (7,63)

I Ego reus confiteor deoque semper virgini matri Marie domini; sanctisque cunctis fateor, addictus, pene teneor, et vereor quod mereor; offendi namque plurimum sepe deum et proximum. In publico me publico. Reum valde me iudico.	I, a sinner, confess to God and to the ever virgin Mary, mother of the Lord; and to all the saints I admit that, 5 as one condemned, I am held for punishment, and I fear what I deserve; for indeed very often have I vexed God and my neighbor. I declare myself in front of everyone. 10 I judge myself guilty indeed.
[II] Cordis, oris, et operis mea culpa nunc supplico matri Jhesu, cum ceteris celestis aule civibus piis imploret precibus a filio; ne, tremendo iudicio, suprema diffinitio in profundum me deprimat et opprimat. Sed confitentem redimat et eximat supplicio devota supplicatio.	I now beseech that the mother of Jesus, along with the rest of the dwellers in the heavenly palace, appeal my sins of heart, word, and deed 15 through devout prayers to her son; lest, in frightful judgment, the final reckoning cast me into hell 20 and crush me. But still devout atonement may redeem one who confesses, and deliver them 24 through supplication.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 63, f. 324r: a2; Strophes I-[II], complete, with no indication that a different stanza might begin at line 11, as is suggested by both WI and Ma, but not by Metz (hence the above indication of the second strophe in brackets, reflecting its disposition in F); nor is there any space at the end of the piece here, or in any of the other applicable sources, that might accommodate further stanzas.¹ Ending the nearly unbroken series of strophic or single-stanza pieces that begins with A deserto veniens (J3/1, I29/1) at F-7,48 (f. 316v), Ego reus confiteor is the first multi-stanzaic, through-composed piece to be transmitted in F-7 since Qui de Saba veniunt (I20/281) at F-7,47 (f. 315v), which itself was the last of a nearly uninterrupted succession of similarly constructed works that launched the fascicle.² Caudae, as well, are now more extensive and elaborate beginning with Ego reus. The single, minor exception to the formal groupings from F-7,48-62 is the strophic-sequence form of Redit etas aurea (I8/298) at F-7,53 (f. 318v). For further details on all these points, see the source report on A deserto veniens (setting II, the F/WIB version). Ego reus confiteor is also the first piece in F-7 to be preserved in three of the main Parisian-repertory MSS F, WI, and Ma since Lux illuxit gratiosa (H27/201) at F-7,44 (f. 313r), a detail that also applies to the following three pieces in F-7. What is more, Ego reus and the next two compositions in F happen to appear in the same order in Ma.

¹*Ma* does have space with empty staff lines at the end of the last system to contain this piece, but supplying additional conductus stanzas is regularly avoided throughout this source. Additionally, the last text syllable of the final cauda of Ego reus is inscribed nearly flush with the right margin of the final system in Ma, after the music above it has concluded, suggesting (as do all other sources) that no extra stanzas existed. On the regular provision of leaving empty space in this part of MS F for the possible accommodation of additional strophes, see the source reports on this MS for Roma gaudens iubila (I9/312 at F-7,52, f. 318r).

²The sole outliers from F-7,1-47 are the non-strophically organized sequence form of In terram Christus expuit (J7/185) at F-7,39 (f. 308r) and the prose text of Ave Maria (G7/29) at F-7,18 (f. 284v).

WI, fasc. 9, no. 64, f. 147v (138v): a2; Strophes I-II, complete, with provision for a painted initial that was never entered at line 11,1, thus supporting the strophic division reflected in the layout of the poetic text above; this same stanzaic indication applies to the transmission in Ma, but not to the concordances in F or Metz. Due to a need for extra space, the close of the final cauda in WI is inscribed at the end of the final system on newly added staff lines that extend beyond the writing block to the extreme right margin of the page.

Ma, fasc. 4, no. 12, f. 87r: a2; Strophes I-II, complete, with the opening initial never entered and the first word appearing as “[E]rgo.” Like WI there is provision for an unexecuted initial to begin line 11, thus signaling a new strophe. In Ma and F this and the following two pieces appear in the same order.

Metz (Metz, Bibliothèque de la Ville, Réserve précieux, MS 732bis/20), no. 4, ff. 2r-2v: a3; fragmentary; with a Tr part not found in any other source,³ and with significant portions of this voice missing from lines 6,3 (“quod”) through line 7,3 (“plurimum”), thanks to trimming and wear of the top system of f. 2v. Even so, most of the Tr music set to the first three syllables of line 8 (“sepe de[um]”), which follow immediately and conclude this same trimmed system in Metz, is preserved, thanks to the lower tessitura of this passage. Otherwise Metz offers the piece from its beginning up through the first pitch of the cum littera setting of line 16,2 that immediately follows the cauda on 16,1 – although no text for the applicable syllable “fi[lio]” can be seen. Like F, there is no special treatment of the initial for strophe [II], in contrast to WI and Ma. In the cum littera portions of this piece in Metz, simplex figures are distinguished notationally as L and B, and a number of the ligatures show sine proprietate and sine perfectione mensural modifications to their shapes. Long rests are also distinguished by full-staff strokes, while the caudae assert modal notation throughout. For comparison, the remains of the Metz rendering of Ego reus confiteor are supplied as an independent transcription after the F version.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Liturgical associations: This conductus poem paraphrases much of the content of the Confiteor of the Mass, this being a smaller component within a series of usually Ordinary prayers that were spoken at the foot of the altar by the celebrant and his assistants prior to opening the Mass service with the Proper chant of the Introit.⁴ The canonical text of the Confiteor was in flux up through the twelfth and thirteenth centuries. A recognized early formulation appears in the Micrologus de ecclesiasticis observationibus of Bernold of Constance (d. 1100), available in PL, 151: col. 992C. Bernold’s rendering opens with what becomes the customary declaration: “Confiteor deo omnipotenti,” and then asks that all saints, as well as God and a brother, attend to his subsequent general confession.⁵ Later versions of the Confiteor, in a manner reflected by the conductus poem, regularly include an appeal to the Virgin after the opening petition to God, and may often follow this up further with a list of assorted individual saints prior to the invocation of them all as a group. Significantly, a few opening formulas for the Confiteor preserved in medieval French liturgical books actually use the same opening expression as the conductus;⁶ and at least one thirteenth-century missal for the use of Paris (F-Pn 9441, f. 84r), specifically gives “Ego reus confiteor” as the prompt for the remainder of the text.⁷ Public and private confession and penance: In addition to its liturgical affiliations with the ceremony of general confession linked most prominently with the opening of the Mass, certain passages in Ego reus confiteor suggest relationships with other medieval sacramental rituals of confession and penance. Further pieces in the Parisian conductus repertory that deal with confession and penance include Nulli beneficium (H7/229) and Age penitentiam (H31/11). Notably, Canon 21 of the Fourth Lateran Council of 1215 (beginning “Omnis utriusque sexus fidelis”) formally instituted a requirement that every member of the faithful who had reached the age of discretion⁸ should individually confess their sins to their own priest at least once a year, and perform whatever acts of penance the priest should impose. Additionally, each soul was enjoined to receive the Eucharist at Easter, with the threat that failure would forbid them to enter a church and would deny them a Christian burial.⁹ The council’s directive essentially made mandatory a confessional practice that was already employed widely at the time, but its formal instigation at Lateran 4 is often seen as the starting point for a greater emphasis on private confession over more public rituals in the history of the development of medieval ⁶See, for example, the instance of the Confiteor from the Ordo of the Mass in a thirteenth-century missal from Noyon, Abbeville, Bibliothèque municipale, Ms. 7, f. 138r (F-AB 7). The transcription of this text derives from Victor Leroquais, Les sacramentaires et les missels manuscrits des bibliothèques publiques de France, 4 vols. (Paris: s.n., 1924), 2:109: “Ego reus confiteor Deo omnipotenti et beate Marie et omnibus sanctis et vobis, fratres, quia ego peccator peccavi nimis in cogitatione, locutione, in consensu et opere, mea culpa, mea culpa, mea maxima culpa; propterea precor te, virgo semper Maria, et vos omnes sancti Dei, et vos, fratres, ut oratis pro me peccatore ad Dominum Deum nostrum omnipotentem misereatur mei [italics mine]” (“I, a sinner, confess to almighty God and blessed Mary, and to all the saints, and to you, brothers, that I, a sinner, have sinned greatly in thought, word, complicity, and in deed, through my fault, my fault, my most grievous fault. Consequently I beseech you, the ever virgin Mary, and all you saints of God; and you, brothers, that you may pray for me, a sinner, to our almighty Lord God, that he may take pity on me.”).

³The addition of a Tr voice that occurs only in Metz also obtains for the conductus Sursum corda elevate (G9/343).

⁴For a description of the numerous and various components of this segment of the ceremony, see Andrew Hughes, Medieval Manuscripts for Mass and Office: A Guide to their Organization and Terminology (Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1982), item nos. 201, 503, 741, 927.

⁵*PL*, 151, col. 992C: “Confiteor Deo omnipotenti, istis Sanctis et omnibus Sanctis et tibi, frater, quia peccavi in cogitatione, in locutione, in opere, in pollutione mentis et corporis. Ideo precor te, ora pro me” (“I confess to omnipotent God, to those saints and to all saints and to you, brother, that I have sinned in thought, word, and deed, towards the defilement of mind and body. Hence, I pray you, pray for me.”).

⁷For some further instances, in addition to F-AB 7 and F-Pn 9441, of the phrase Ego reus as an opening for various formulations of the Confiteor, see, Leroquais, Les sacramentaires et les missels, 1: 326; 2: 186, 310; and 3: 69. Within other Parisian missals I have consulted, F-Pn lat. 15615, f. 138v, shows the more prevalent expression, Confiteor deo, as the prompt for the confessional segment, while F-Pn lat. 830, f. 118v, on the other hand, does not offer a precise text, whittling down the opening ceremony as a whole only to its starting phrase: “Hic introibo ad altare dei. et cetera.” F-Pn lat. 1112, unfortunately, is missing two leaves (originally placed between what are now ff. 102v and 103r) that likely contained the relevant portion of this segment of the Mass ceremony; but some other occurrences of the prompt “Confiteor” elsewhere in the MS (at ff. 95v and 102r, for instance) suggest that F-Pn lat. 1112 most likely employed the more common formulation.

⁸The council’s directives do not specify what age this might be. Various interpretations have ranged from approximately seven years to around fourteen. For some historical stipulations of the age of discretion, see Paul Turner, Ages of Initiation: The First Two Christian Millennia (Collegeville, MN: Liturgical Press, 2000), 50.

⁹Latin texts and English translations of the Fourth Lateran Council’s canons appear in Decrees of the Ecumenical Councils, 2 vols., Norman P. Tanner, S.J., ed. and transl. (London: Sheen and Ward; Washington D.C.: Georgetown University Press, 1990), 1:230-271. For the injunctions on confession and penance in Canon 21, see 1:245 of Tanner’s edition.

penance.¹⁰ Nonetheless, rituals of public confession and penance were still ingrained and practiced in thirteenth-century France and elsewhere, and were demarcated into two primary types. One variety, frequently described as “public” and “solemn,” was enacted annually by the bishop, and was usually reserved for particularly serious offenses. This type featured a liturgical service of flexible components that was executed over Lent beginning on Ash Wednesday. It typically involved the expulsion of penitents as a group from the church until Maundy Thursday, after which they were re-admitted, but routinely continued to perform the (often protracted) obligations required by their penance. The other form of public penance was designated as a non-solemn observance that could be enacted by priests, and which was conducted without specific ceremony and designated for typically lesser offenses. Its common result was the imposition of a pilgrimage.¹¹ In terms of some expressions in this poem which seem to lean more towards the idea of public as opposed to private confession and penance, see the remarks for line 8 and 9. Versification: The reasons for the division of this poem into two strophes are given in the source reports above. The layout of its various lines follows that of Anderson, NDRC, 3:xxvii, rather than what appears on the CPI website. Since lines 6 and 9 as presented above feature internal rhyme, they could rightfully be considered as pairs of distinct 4pp verses. Nevertheless, the preference for 8pp lines throughout the majority of the entire poem, as well as the ability to pair the 4pp units in Strophe I, argues for subsuming them into a single verse. In Strophe [II], however, lines 16, 20, and 22-23 cannot be paired in the same manner and thus are presented as individual 4pp lines, each of which rhymes with another verse elsewhere in the poem. Textual notes: 8: classifying and evaluating sins and penalties in terms of how they affected penitents’ relationships with God, their neighbors, and sometimes also the Church, was common in the later twelfth and the thirteenth centuries. Offenses that involved one’s neighbors typically required the offender ask forgiveness from the affected party, thus bringing these crimes more into the public sphere (see Mansfield, The Humiliation of Sinners, 41-49). 9: note here the striking example of annominatio, effected by the closely grouped homonyms “publico” (“I declare myself openly”). This choice also suggests that the emphasis in this poem is more closely associated with the context of the general communal confessions associated with the Confiteor of the Mass service, or with the solemn or non-solemn public penance rituals described above in the general remarks on the text. This is in contrast to any evocations of private confession that were promulgated by the Fourth Lateran Council (again, see above in the initial notes on the text). 11: the familiar tripartite division of sins into those of thought, word, and deed is queried and defended by Thomas Aquinas (Summa Theologica, 1a2ae,72,7) with reference to Jerome’s Commentary on Ezekiel. Ezekiel, 43:23-27, describes the ceremonies for the consecration of the altar as part of the prophet’s vision of a rebuilt Temple in Jerusalem. The actions portrayed in the scriptural passage call for a daily offering of an unblemished male goat, a young bull, and a ram for seven straight days as a purificational rite. The part of Jerome’s work that treats this section describes these sacrificial victims as allegorical symbols of the three divisions of the confessional classification of sin, where the ram, goat, and bull correspond respectively to the sins of thought, ¹⁰For example, around the year 1200, bishop Eudes de Sully (reg.1196–1208), in a set of statutes for the diocese of Paris, enjoined his parishioners to confess frequently, particularly at the start of Lent, while one of his slightly later successors, William of Seignelay (reg. 1220–1223), made this directive more forceful, saying that parishioners should confess annually before Palm Sunday, or be barred from confession until after the octave of Easter and forced to continue refraining from eating meat, just as they had during Lent. Some evidence suggests that the “Omnis utriusque” canon per se was not widely propagated in France until some time following Lateran 4 – an act of omission that was completely contrary to the instructions within the canon itself that commanded its active dissemination – and that Eudes’s earlier statutes on confession were the ones more regularly applied until that time. Similarly, the annual reception of the Eucharist, also enjoined by Canon 21, was not stipulated in regulations observed by medieval French churches until the middle of the thirteenth century. For these various details, see Mary C. Mansfield, The Humiliation of Sinners: Public Penance in Thirteenth-Century France (Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1995), 68-70.

¹¹On the often fluctuating and diverse distinctions of these types of penance as practiced in France during the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, see Mansfield, The Humiliation of Sinners, particularly the details given on pp. 21, 29-30, 92-93, 106, and 167. See also the similar findings on the persistence of public penance into the twelfth century in Rob Meens, Penance in Medieval Europe: 600-1200 (Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2014).

word, and deed.¹²

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 7,1: F: of-ffendi (divided by a short cauda). MUSIC: Line 1,1: F: D: written 3 lower for “Ego”; corrected with recourse to W1, Ma, Metz. Cauda on 6,3: TD: W1, Metz: these MSS give extended rhythmic values for this short melisma on “quod [mereor]”; the readings of these sources appear above the staves in the F version, with the additional possibility of reading this portion in rhythmic mode 3; the “x” indication here above the T shows an omitted note found only in F and Ma. Additionally, the D reading in Ma for this passage is si, 3(3li), which could also be rendered according to the readings in W1 and Metz, with possible rhythmic extension in the T, if read irregularly.

¹²Jerome writes near the end of his thirteenth chapter (the text comes from PL, 25: col. 427B): “In hirco autem, et vitulo, et ariete tria generalia delicta demonstrantur, quibus omne mortalium subjacet genus. Aut enim cogitationibus, aut sermone, aut opere peccamus. Cogitatio refertur ad arietem, quae prima est omnium peccatorum, et ex qua alia duo peccata nascuntur. Haedus autem, sive hircus, ad eloquium sive sermonem, qui semper de excelsioribus disputat. Opera vero proprie vitulo deputantur: quoniam vomeri et labori et terrenis operibus mancipatus est. Haec igitur immaculata per septem dies veri sabbati atque perfecti Deo offerre debemus, et expiare altare, ut oratio nostra munda perveniat ad Deum” (“And in the male goat, the young bull, and the ram are shown the three general offenses to which every type of mortal sin is subject. For we sin either by thought, word, or deed. ‘Thought’ refers to the ram, for it is the first of all sins, and the one from which the two other sins are born. The kid, or male goat, though, [refers] to speech or discourse, which always argues about loftier matters. ‘Deeds,’ however, are properly ascribed to the young bull, for he is assigned to the plow, to labor, and to the working of the land. Therefore we are beholden to offer these unblemished things during the seven days of a true and perfect sabbath, and to purify the altar, so that our unsullied speech may reach towards God.”).

SCRUTATOR ALME CORDIUM – F, WI, and Fauv (motet) versions
Conductus (H22/319)

F, f. 325r (7,64)

1. I

D: mode 1 | T: mode 1 or 3 | TD: modes 2,3

[Scru -

Scru -

[Scru] - ta - tor al - me cor - di - um

[Scru] - ta - tor al - me cor - di - um

D: mode 1 | TD: modes 2,3

lu - men ve - rum de lu - mi - ne.

lu - men ve - rum de lu - mi - ne.

re - dem - ptor et fi - de - li - um.

re - dem - ptor et fi - de - li - um.

ho-mo fa - ctus pro ho - mi-ne. a a''

ho-mo fa - ctus pro ho - mi-ne. a'

| T: mode 1 or 3; D: mode 1 | TD: mode 2 cum b b''

cum

| TD: mode 1
[cum] la-cri - ma - rum flu-mi-ne b

[cum] la-cri - ma - rum flu-mi-ne

tu - um pe - to pre - si - di - um. ne in - tres in iu - di - ci - um

tu - um pe - to pre - si - di - um. ne in - tres in iu - di - ci - um

| TD: mode 2 | T: mode 1 or 3, D: mode 1 | TD: modes 2,3 cum

cum

| TD: mode 1 or 3
[cum] ser - vo tu - o do - b

[cum] ser - vo tu - o do -

| TD: mode 1

W1, f. 149v (140v) (9,59)

2. I

S [Scru -
T Scru -

[Scru] - ta - tor al - me cor-di - um [Scru] - ta - tor al - me cor-di - um

lu-men ve - rum de lu-mi-ne
lu-men ve - rum de lu-mi-ne

re-dem-ptor et fi - de-li - um
re-dem-ptor et fi - de-li - um

ho-mo fa - ctus pro ho - mi-ne

ho-mo fa - ctus pro ho - mi-ne

a a'

[D: W1 has unnecessary b-flat sig to end of piece *reading corrected via F, Ma; cauda in W1 apparently corrupt; see at end

cum

cum

b b'

[cum] la - cri - ma - rum flu - mi - ne

[cum] la - cri - ma - rum flu - mi - ne

- b'

[T: W1: NB divisi notes

tu - um pe - to sub - si - di - um ne in - tres in iu - di - ci - um

tu - um pe - to sub - si - di - um ne in - tres in iu - di - ci - um

- b'

reading corrected via F, Ma; cauda in W1 apparently corrupt; see at end

cum

cum

- b'

[cum] ser - vo tu - o do -

[cum] ser - vo tu - o do -

si b'

First system of musical notation, consisting of two staves. The upper staff contains a melodic line with various note values and rests. The lower staff contains a bass line with similar note values. A red box labeled 'c' is positioned above the first measure of the lower staff. A red box labeled 'c'' is positioned above the eighth measure of the lower staff. Blue brackets and slurs are used to group notes across both staves.

Second system of musical notation, consisting of two staves. The upper staff continues the melodic line. The lower staff continues the bass line. A red box labeled 'e' is positioned above the eighth measure of the upper staff. A red box labeled 'd' is positioned above the eighth measure of the lower staff. A red box labeled 'g' is positioned above the tenth measure of the upper staff. A red box labeled 'f' is positioned above the tenth measure of the lower staff. Blue brackets and slurs are used to group notes across both staves.

Third system of musical notation, consisting of two staves. The upper staff continues the melodic line. The lower staff continues the bass line. A red box labeled 'g'' is positioned above the second measure of the upper staff. A red box labeled 'f'' is positioned above the second measure of the lower staff. Blue brackets and slurs are used to group notes across both staves.

Fourth system of musical notation, consisting of two staves. The upper staff continues the melodic line. The lower staff continues the bass line. A red box labeled 'e'' is positioned above the first measure of the upper staff. A red box labeled 'g'' is positioned above the second measure of the upper staff. A red box labeled 'd'' is positioned above the first measure of the lower staff. A red box labeled 'f''' is positioned above the second measure of the lower staff. Blue brackets and slurs are used to group notes across both staves.

Fifth system of musical notation, consisting of two staves. The upper staff continues the melodic line. The lower staff continues the bass line. Blue brackets and slurs are used to group notes across both staves. At the end of the system, there are two lines of text: '- mi - - ne:]' on the top line and '- mi - - ne:' on the bottom line. A red bracket is positioned above the first measure of the lower staff.

SOME LITERAL READINGS OF THE TWO PROBLEMATIC CAUDAE FROM WI:

*Cauda at line 5,1

Cauda at line 8,1:

a. with mostly long rests

b. with mostly short rests

SCRUTATOR ALME CORDIUM / [TENOR: Neuma VI toni] – Fauv motet version

Motet (vdW 936/-)

Fauv, f. 43^{va}, (no. 153)

3. I

SCRUTATOR ALME CORDIUM – F, W1, and Fauv (motet) versionsConductus (H22/319 – Fauv motet version: vdW 936/- [Neuma VI toni])F, f. 325r (7,64)

I	Scrutator alme cordium, lumen verum de lumine, redemptor et fidelium, homo factus pro homine: cum lacrimarum flumine	Kind searcher of hearts, true light from light, and redeemer of the faithful, a man made for mankind: 5 with a river of tears,
	tuum peto presidium, ne intres in iudicium cum servo tuo, domine.	I seek your protection, lest you enter into judgment with your servant, O Lord.

The Fauv version of the text varies the closing lines 6-8:

...	...
tuum petimus filium	6a we beseech your son
ut mittat in exilium	to send Fauvel into exile
Fauvel cum suo semine.	8a along with his seed.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 64, f. 325r: a2; Strophe I, complete; as is typical for the single-strophe works in F, there is a small bit of completely empty space at the end of the last system that could accommodate extra text, but since no other source implies the possibility of additional strophes, the likelihood of omitted text is minimal. As with Ma, the F version of this piece implies a mixture of trochaic and iambic rhythms for some of its caudae, in contrast to W1, which emphasizes mode-1 rhythms throughout. This piece and the ones immediately surrounding it are in the same order in both F and Ma.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 66, f. 149v (140v): a2; Strophe I, complete; this setting tends to favor trochaic, mode-1 rhythms throughout for its caudae, as opposed to the mixtures of iambic and trochaic divisions prompted by both F and Ma. The endings of the opening and closing caudae in W1, as well as a small portion near the start of the concluding melisma, are inscribed at the ends of the first, final, and penultimate systems, respectively, on newly drawn staves that extend beyond the writing block to the extreme right margin of the page. The opening folio of this piece additionally shows a series of three, partially erased textual entries – appearing to have nothing to do with the conductus setting – in a later, cursive hand inscribed in the left margin. The respective entries are aligned with the first, second, and fourth systems on the leaf, with some words still visible.¹ The W1 version of this piece is supplied as a separate reading following the redaction in F.

Ma, fasc. 4, no. 13, f. 89r: a2; Strophe I, complete, with the opening initial never entered into the space provided for it. The caudae in this redaction of the piece correspond with F in showing both trochaic and iambic rhythms; this contrasts with the preponderance of trochaic, mode-1 rhythms presented in W1. This piece and the ones immediately surrounding it are in the same order in both F and Ma.

¹The remains of these three erasures (reading from top to bottom) are transcribed by Martin Staehelin as 1) “Si capias hastam ?” (“If you should grasp a spear”) – 2) “Iste salmus debbat stare miserere mei” (“This [P]salm should stand for [?] Miserere mei”) – 3) “Si vis provideri ad defectus magnos (“If you want to be provided for due to great hardships” [?]).” (see Staehelin, ed., Die mittelalterliche Musikhandschrift W1: Vollständige Reproduktion des “Notre Dame”-Manuskripts der Herzog August Bibliothek, Wolfenbüttel, Cod. Guelf. 628 Helmst, Wolfenbütteler Mittelalter-Studien, no. 9, [Wiesbaden: Harrasowitz Verlag, 1995], p. 44).

Text only:

Fauv, no. 153, f. 43v^a: a2; Strophe I, complete; the poem is set as the D of a uniquely preserved motet (vdW 936/-), set to music differing completely from the other sources, with its untexted T identified as “Neuma VI toni” in the CPI database and in Anderson (NDRC, 3:219 – unidentified in VdW); the ending lines 6-8 are newly configured to fit the context of the Fauvel poem (presented above as lines 6a-8a). The Fauv motet is supplied for comparison following the W1 version of Scrutator alme cordium.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1: see Wisdom, 1:6: “... quoniam renum illius testis est Deus, et cordis illius scrutator est verus ...” (“... for God is the witness of his [mankind’s] innermost thoughts, and he is a true searcher of his heart ...”). See also the Lententide Vespers hymn Audi benigne conditor, whose second strophe begins with the same line as the conductus (as reported in Anderson, NDRC, 3:xxviii), e.g. in F-Pn lat 15181, f. 223r (CCXIIIr). 2: for one of many biblical passages that refer to God or Christ as light, cf. I John, 1:5: “Et haec est adnuntiatio quam audivimus ab eo et adnuntiamus vobis: quoniam Deus lux est et tenebrae in eo non sunt ullae” (“And this is the declaration which we have heard from him and declare to you: That God is light, and in him there is no darkness”). Cf. also this portion of the Nicene Creed, used for the Credo: “Deum de deo, lumen de lumine, deum verum de deo vero” (“God of God, light of light, true God of true God.”). 5: cf: Psalm 118:136: “Exitus aquarum deduxerunt oculi mei, quia non custodierunt legem tuam” (“My eyes have sent forth springs of water: because they have not kept your law.”); note also the analogous expression in Lamentations, 1:16, 2:18. 7-8: see Psalm 142:2: “et non intres in iudicio cum servo tuo: quia non iustificabitur in conspectu tuo omnis vivens” (“And enter not into judgment with your servant: for in your sight not every man living shall be justified.”).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 6-8: Fauv replaces these lines with different text, supplied above as 6a-8a. 6,3: W1: subsidium; since “presidium” occurs in both F and Ma, the latter reading is adopted for the text above. Either word is acceptable, as they are essentially synonyms. 8,4: W1: this source punctuates the last line with an apparent colon, retained in the separate transcription of this MS version of the piece. W1: The text was inscribed first, and not enough space was allotted for the music of the final cauda that continues into the right margin of the folio (see the source report on W1 above), so the last two syllables of this final word appear at the right border of the writing block, underneath the music that occurs just prior to the second hocketing section of the cauda; the underlay used here has been supplied from F and Ma. MUSIC: Rhythm: Due to the strikingly different rhythmic approaches among the sources for this piece, both the F and W1 readings of Scrutator alme are presented here, as well as the completely different music of the Fauv motet version. As reported above, the caudae in the W1 setting are largely in rhythmic mode 1 throughout. F and Ma, in contrast, favor mostly the iambic modes 2 and 3, with some occasional phrases and nearly all of the final cauda presented in mode 1. Those few places where W1 also gives mode-2 ligations (i.e., in the T at middle and end of opening cauda, for several phrases following line 2 in the D, and after line 8,1 in both parts), as well as W1’s corrupted transmission of the caudae for lines 5,1 and 8,1, strongly suggest that the W1 scribe was attempting – with mixed success – to redact a mixed-mode exemplar like F and Ma completely into mode 1. He appears to have been particularly challenged by the hocket sections in these two caudae, which show the most serious errors. Such a detail could imply a certain lack of familiarity with this piece. The claim for scribal redaction of W1 is further supported by the observation that its final cauda (in mode 1 in all the conductus sources) has a much lesser degree of corruption than the other hocketing caudae. In this edition the problematic caudae of lines 5,1 and 8,1 from W1 are presented in alternative literal transcriptions following the complete W1 version so that their variants with F and the edition of the W1 redaction may be assessed. Shifts in mode in the transcription from F are signaled above the system for clarity. The occasional mode-2 ligations in W1 are accommodated here to mode 1, since that was the apparent objective of the scribe. The use of single versus double strokes in the transmission in Ma (also seen in the opening caudae in F and W1) has influenced the choice of the length of rests throughout much of this transcription (further details on this usage appear in the notes below). Signatures: W1 and Ma open with b-flat sigs in both T and D; these are in force up to the start of the cauda beginning line 5,1; at this point W1, like F, cancels the accidentals with sig quads on b (b-naturals) in both T and D, while Ma begins a new system with no signatures in either voice. No further sigs appear in Ma or F, whereas W1 restores a b-flat sig following the third rest in the D (at L8) during the cauda at line 5,1; this flat sig remains in force on several systems throughout the rest of the piece, although it does not seem particularly applicable or even justifiable, given the frequent simultaneous occurrences of b's in both T and D throughout the rest of the piece. Hence, this particular sig has been omitted from the W1 transcription and its presence indicated by a comment in the score. Opening cauda: TD: F,W1: the use here of double strokes to indicate TL rests is consistently applied in F and Ma; in W1 they occur when required in the D (with the exception of the penultimate phrase), but not consistently in the T (to illustrate, the disposition of both types of strokes throughout the opening cauda is shown above the staves in the W1 transcription). As a result I have chosen not to lengthen the values that conclude this cauda, so that they reflect the use of the single stroke (in the D) or lack of strokes (in the T) at this point in Ma. T: W1: the stroke after c at L11 (in the third T phrase) is obscured by the following si b, as if in error; this is omitted in the transcription. D: W1: the pitches of the om phrase in the middle of the cauda from L41-L45 come from F and Ma, with a conjectural mode-1 ligation given in dashed brackets to correspond to what the W1 scribe might conceivably have entered at this point. D: W1: in the penultimate phrase of the cauda, at L56-L57, the 1 of the 3li=gcf is written as e, corrected after F,Ma. Cauda after line 2: D: W1: the omitted c at the start of the third phrase at L9 is supplied from F,Ma. Cauda after line 4: D: W1: the final a at L4 of the first phrase is written as g, from F,Ma. Cauda for line 5,1: TD: F,W1,Ma: for a description of the changes in sigs that appear prior to this cauda, see the separate discussion above. TD: W1: the omitted strokes and faulty note readings in this cauda are corrected via F and Ma; for the questionable reading from W1, see the literal version of the cauda that follows the F transcription. TD: Ma: the double strokes that appear here throughout this cauda propose the TL rests adopted here. T: F: rest stroke at the end of the first T phrase at L8 om, from W1,Ma. D: W1: on the decision to omit the apparently unnecessary b-flat sig in the transcription from this source, see the discussion of signatures above. D: W1: the 1 of the 3li=bde following the system change and sig is written a rather than b, likely due to lack of space prompted by the preceding b-flat sig. Line 6,1: T: W1: note the highly unusual presence of divisi voices here, providing an added lower line not seen in F or Ma. This could indicate an alternative melody for the two syllables here, or perhaps imply a splitting of lines if the work were sung with more than one performer on the T. Caudae for lines 7,4 and 8,1: TD: F: the use of double strokes in Ma has prompted the use of most of the TL rests at these points. Cauda for line 8,1: TD: W1: as with the cauda of line 5,1, the faulty W1 version of this melisma has been corrected with recourse to F and Ma, with the few occurrences of mode-2 ligation in W1 rendered trochaically here; two different attempts to make sense of the W1 reading as it stands are given at the end of the transcription, where its variants with F and the corrections to the edited version of W1 may be compared. T: F: there is a stroke in this cauda just after the d in the final T phrase at L20 that appears to be partially erased; it occurs only in this source and is omitted in the transcription. Final cauda (at line 8,4): TD: W1: in contrast to the corrupted versions of the caudae at lines 5,1 and 8,1, the closing cauda is notably free from error (the minor omissions in the W1 T near its start and close (at L12 and L65-L66) have been supplied by F and Ma). This feature further suggests that the W1 redaction of this piece was rearranged from a mixed-mode version like those in F and Ma; see the discussion above under “Rhythm.” D: W1: the 2liP=ab in the fourth phrase in this voice at L18-L19 is smudged, reading clarified by F,Ma. TD: F,W1: the two closely related hocket sections in this cauda are rendered here in shorter values, in contrast to the emphasis on TLs in the previous hocketing sections of this piece. Although the hockets in the closing cauda may also be rendered in extended values, Ma's use of single (rather than double) strokes at this point has influenced the adopted reading of the hocket, as well as most of the other rests in this final melisma.

GAUDE PRESUL IN DOMINO

Conductus H3/137

F. f. 326r (7,65)

D [Gau -

I

T Gau -

Mode 2

Mode 2

[Gau] - de pre - sul in do - b

[Gau] - de pre - sul in do - b' b'' - mi - no mul - ti - pli -

- mi - no mul - ti - pli -

Mode 3

- ci - - ter. i - c

- ci - - ter. i - c'

[i] - te-rum di - co gau - de - as.

[i] - te-rum di - co gau - de - as.

Mode 2

cum fe - li - ci - ter quod

cum fe - li - ci - ter quod

[quod] cor - nu si - gnas ge - mi-no lin - gua ma - nu - que com - ple - as.

[quod] cor - nu si - gnas ge - mi-no lin - gua ma - nu - que com - ple - as.

Modes 3, 2

cum

cum

d''

e'

[cum] pro-de - re pro-

-cu - res tam af - fe - ctu quam ef - fe - ctu quid

Modes 3,2

-cu - res tam af - fe - ctu quam ef - fe - ctu quid

[quid] ba - cu-li quid a - nu-li, ge - sta-mi - ne fi - gu-

[quid] ba - cu-li quid a - nu-li, ge - sta-mi - ne fi - gu-

Mode 2

[quid] ba - cu-li quid a - nu-li, ge - sta-mi - ne fi - gu-

| Mode 1

First system of musical notation, featuring two staves with treble clefs and a common time signature. The music consists of eighth and sixteenth notes with various rests and ties. Blue brackets are placed above the notes, and a blue slur is under a group of notes in the upper staff.

Second system of musical notation, continuing the piece with similar rhythmic patterns and note values. A red comma is visible above a note in the upper staff.

Third system of musical notation, which concludes the piece. It includes red flat symbols (b) above several notes and a blue slur with a dashed line. The system ends with a double bar line and the text "- res." in blue.

GAUDE PRESUL IN DOMINO

Conductus (H3/137)

F, f. 326r (7,65)

I	Gaude, presul, in domino, multipliciter!		Rejoice, bishop, in the Lord, over and over again!
	Iterum, dico, gaudeas, cum, feliciter,		Again, I say, you should rejoice, since, happily, what you quod cornu signas gemino, lingua manue compleas,	5	prescribe through the twin horns [of your authority], you fulfill by word and deed, cum prodere procures, tam affectu, quam effectu,		when – through both will and action – you take care to deliver on quid baculi, quid anuli, gestamine figures.	10	whatever you may pronounce, whether it be by the trappings of staff or ring.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 65, f. 326r: a2; Strophe I, complete, though unlike many of the other single-stanza works so far in F-7, there is no allotment of space that might suggest the existence of additional strophes.¹ This and the following work, Consequens antecedente (H2/68), are also adjacent in W1, but in reverse order; while Gaude presul and the two pieces that immediately precede it are in the same order in both F and Ma.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 22, f. 111v (102v): a2; Strophe I, complete, with the final syllable never supplied at the end of the concluding cauda. The guide letter for the opening initial, somewhat unusually, is visible rather far to the left of its correspondent. The previous work, Consequens antecedente (H2/68), is also found together with Gaude presul in F, but in reverse order.

Ma, fasc. 4, no. 14, f. 90v: a2; Strophe I, complete, with the opening initial never entered in the space provided for it at the left margin. This piece and the two immediately preceding it are in the same order in both F and Ma.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Possible addressee: Since this poem importunes a bishop in its opening lines,² if one assumes it to be an artistic product of Paris and intended for a specific individual, the following holders of the Parisian cathedral see from the late twelfth to the mid thirteenth century could most likely be the recipient: Maurice de Sully (reg. 1160–1196), Odo de Sully (1196–1208), Peter of Nemours (1208–1220), William of Seignelay (1220–1223), Barthélmy of Chartres (1224–1227), William of Auvergne (1228–1249), Walter of ¹On the regular provision of leaving empty space in MS F for additional strophes in the case of the strophic or single-stanza pieces within the earlier sections of F-7, see the source report on this MS for Roma gaudens iubila (I9/312 at F-7,52), as well as for A deserto veniens (J3/1, I29/1 at F-7,48).

²For a consideration of conductus and motets in MS F that address the various circumstances of bishops, see Payne, “Chancellor versus Bishop: the Conflict Between Philip the Chancellor and Guillaume d’Auvergne in Poetry and Music,” Philippe le Chancelier: prédicateur, théologien, et poète parisien du début du XIIIe siècle, Gilbert Dahan, Anne-Zoé Rillon-Marne, eds., 265–306, Bibliothèque d’histoire culturelle du Moyen Âge, no. 19 (Turnhout: Brepols, 2017); see especially pp. 275–282.

Château-Thierry (June to 23 September 1249). Bishops from other localities in this time frame, of course, are also in the running. Furthermore, the fairly advanced style of some of the elements of this conductus, in view of its use of modes 2 and 3, frequent dovetailing of phrases as well as apparent hocket, might argue for a later individual. Note also that a conductus with a text praising a bishop appears also in Soli nitorem equori (J15/336), just two pieces later in F at F-7,67. Textual notes: 1-3: see Philippians, 4:4: “Gaudete in domino semper; iterum, dico, gaudete” (“Rejoice in the Lord always; again, I say, rejoice.”). 5: the twin horns are symbols of humility and altruism, allied with ruling power. The conceit of “two-ness” raised here is carried out in the complementary binary constructions that fill the poem: “rejoice/rejoice again,” “word/deed,” “will/action,” “staff/ring.” For the likely direct reference, see Ovid, Metamorphoses, 15,611: “Exhibuit gemino praesignia tempora cornu.” (“[Cipus] showed them his temples, conspicuous by their twin horns.”). This allusion is drawn from the story of Genucius Cipus (in Ovid, Metamorphoses, 15,565-621), who gave up the opportunity to become king of Rome and sought self-exile for the good of his people. The event is also recounted in Valerius Maximus, Factorum et dictorum memorabilium libri IX, 5,6,3; Pliny the Elder, Historia naturalis, 11,123; and by Marcus Terentius Varro (116-27 BCE) in the remains of his De lingua latina, 5,163. Cipus, a Roman praetor, found horns unaccountably growing out of his head one day after exiting the city. He made offerings to the gods in search of an explanation. An Etruscan seer read the entrails of a sacrificed sheep and prophesied that the horns were a sign that Cipus would become king of then republican Rome upon entering the city, but in so doing would enslave its occupants. Cipus, not wishing to subjugate the populace, hid his horns with a laurel wreath, gathered the inhabitants together outside the city walls, and related the warnings of the prophecy – at first without revealing his role in the matter. When he then uncovered his horns, the people were grateful for his generosity toward them and rewarded him with as much land as he could plow with two oxen from sunrise to sunset. Representations of his miraculous horns were reportedly engraved upon the bronze gateposts of the ancient Porta Radusculana of Rome in commemoration of the event. The story is frequently interpreted as an allegory, subversive or otherwise, of the rise of either Julius Caesar or Augustus. 6,1-2: literally “by tongue and hand.” 9-10: the bishop’s rod, or crozier, and ring symbolize, respectively, his pastoral responsibility for the care of his flock and his figural marriage to the church and resulting fidelity to his congregation.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: F: no variants. Versification: Lines 8 and 9 feature internal rhyme and thus could rightfully be considered as pairs of distinct 4pp verses. Nevertheless, frequency of 8-syllable lines throughout the majority of the entire poem argues for subsuming these into single verses. MUSIC: Caudae: Most of the caudae in this piece favor the iambic rhythms of modes 2 and 3, a view supported by the readings of all the extant sources. The main exceptions occur at the first half of the opening and latter half of the closing melismas, in which all sources imply mode 1. The second portion of the opening cauda (beginning at L42), transcribed here in mode 2, conceivably could be rendered in an “upbeat” form of the first mode and thus continue in the same vein in which it starts, but clear indications later on in this piece for mode-2 rhythms led to the choices adopted here. Opening cauda: D: F: a b-flat sig is om until much later in this melisma (at L46), the proposed ficta flats come from W1, Ma. Line 3,1: TD: F: the a/g seventh on the second syllable of “[i]te[rum]” is also vouched for by W1, Ma, although W1 writes the pitches for this entire word 3 higher prior to a clef change before line 3,2 (“dico”) sets things aright. Cauda at line 5,1: TD: F: b-naturals are proposed as well for the opening segment of the melisma on “quod [cornu],” because this cauda is preceded by explicit sig quads on b in W1, whereas Ma curtails its flat sigs slightly earlier with a system change that starts at line 4,1 (“cum [feliciter]”). D: W1: no sig quad on f throughout the entire conductus; Ma places the sig quad as does F, but curtails it with a system change 12L later. Cauda at line 7,1: T: F: there is a partially erased stroke before the penultimate d near the end of the fifth phrase in the T (at L36), not seen in W1, Ma; it is omitted here. D: F: the omitted c approximately two-thirds of the way through this cauda on “cum [prodere]” (at L39) is supplied by W1, Ma. Cauda at line 9,1: D: F: at its very beginning an el L=c abuts the following 2li=de; the c has an el tail to help clarify the intended si,2li opening of this melisma on “quid [baculi],” as verified by W1, Ma. The repeated D notes at L10, near the start of this cauda’s second phrase, allow for various rhythmical realizations of this portion, as do other repeated note series throughout this work. Final cauda: As noted above, there is an apparent change of rhythmic mode from iambic 2 to trochaic 1 about halfway through this closing melisma (at L39). Yet the likelihood of short hocket passages both before and right after the change, as well as the different ways one might render the strokes or rests, means that there are some ambiguities in terms of the rhythmical realization of this segment of the cauda; cf. the versions in Anderson, NDRC, 3: 57-58; and Tischler, The Earliest Polyphonic Art Music, 2:VII, 65-6-7.³

³Hans Tischler, ed., The Earliest Polyphonic Art Music: the 150 Two-part Conductus in the Notre-Dame Manuscripts, 2vols., Collected Works, no. 24 (Ottawa, Canada: Institute of Mediaeval Music, 2005).

CONSEQUENS ANTECEDENTE

Conductus: H2/68

F, f. 327r (7,66)

D
I [Con -
Con -

[a] [Con] - se - quens an - te - [Con] - se - quens an - te -

- ce - den - - te de -
- ce - den - - te de -

[de] - stru - cto de - stru - i - tur be - - ne
[de] - stru - cto de - stru - i - tur be - - ne

nam - que se - qui - tur ne - mi - ne con - tra - di - cen - te quod
nam - que se - qui - tur ne - mi - ne con - tra - di - cen - te quod

[quod] si da - bis da - bi - tur. sed si pri - mum tol - li - tur
[quod] si da - bis da - bi - tur. sed si pri - mum tol - li - tur

(c') (d) non non (b')

[non] cu - res de con-se - quen - te quo - [non] cu - res de con-se - quen - te quo - (f) (e) (e) (f')

[quo] - ni - am ne - ga - bi - tur si non ap - pro - ba - bi - tur [quo] - ni - am ne - ga - bi - tur si non ap - pro - ba - bi - tur (h) (i) (g) (a') au - ro vi - am fa - ci - en - au - ro vi - am fa - ci - en - (j) (j')

(d)

(h) (i') (a'')

The first system of music consists of two staves. The top staff begins with a double bar line and contains a series of notes with blue slurs. A red box containing the letter 'c'' is positioned at the end of the staff. The bottom staff contains a series of notes with blue slurs and two red boxes containing the letters 'k' and 'k''.

The second system of music consists of two staves. The top staff continues with notes and blue slurs, ending with a red box containing '- te.]'. The bottom staff continues with notes and blue slurs, ending with a red box containing '- te.'.

CONSEQUENS ANTECEDENTE

Conductus (H2/68)

F, f. 327r (7,66)

I Consequens, antecedente destructo, destruitur. Bene namque sequitur, nemine contradicente, quod si dabis, dabitur. Sed si primum tollitur, non cures de consequente, quoniam negabitur, si non approbabitur auro viam faciente.	With the destruction of the antecedent, the consequent is destroyed. For surely it follows, and none would deny, 5 that if you give, it will be given. But if the first part is removed, you needn't worry about what follows, since it will be refused, unless it be made good 10 by paving the way with gold.
--	--

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 66, f. 327r: a2; Strophe I, complete, with staff-free space at the end of the last system for possible additional strophes, although none exist in any extant source. This and the previous work, Gaude presul in domino (H3/137), are also together in W1, but in reverse order.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 21, f. 111r (102r): a2; Strophe I, complete. This and the following work, Gaude presul in domino (H3/137), also appear together in F, but in reverse order.

Ma, fasc. 4, no. 20, f. 101r: a2; Strophe I, complete, with the opening initial never entered in the space provided for it at the left margin, and the final syllable of the poem entered flush with the right margin of the writing block, well after the attendant music above it has concluded.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Attribution: The poem is attributed to Phillip the Chancellor by Guido Maria Dreves and Peter Dronke (see AH, 20:31, and “Lyrical Compositions,” 591, respectively, for the ascriptions). Textual notes: 1-2: The opening two lines invoke the language of a formal logical proposition. Yet the idea that, in a conditional statement, if the first premise is shown to be false, the second one also always becomes false, is actually a logical fallacy, since it does not always apply that denying the antecedent falsifies the consequent statement. In this poem, the poet seems to indicate (quite possibly ironically) that the case does work in relation to the biblical reference in line 5, for here “if you do not give, it will not be given” always applies for the case in point, as – in the poet’s view – one never does receive anything unless through bribery. 5: cf. Luke, 6:38: “date, et dabitur vobis; mensuram bonam confersam et coagitatam et supereffluentem dabunt in sinum vestrum. Eadem quippe mensura qua mensi fueritis remetietur vobis” (“Give, and it will be given to you. A good measure, pressed down, shaken together and running over, they will give into your lap. In fact, with the same measure you shall distribute, it will be distributed back to you.”).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. MUSIC: Syllabic/melismatic identity: 1. TD of “[quo]niam negabitur / si non approbabitur” (lines 8-9) = 1a. TD of internal phrases (from L27-L34) of final cauda on “[faci]en[te]” (line 10). These are marked as “g,” “h,” “a,” and “i” in the score; the ends of the second D

phrases have very minor differences between them, and the corresponding phrase in the T of the cauda continues on for 4 more Longs past the matching material. Opening cauda: D: W1, Ma: the final 3li figure is written ecd; the adopted dcd is from F. Line 1,2: D: F: si c om over the second syllable of “[an]te[cedente],” supplied from W1; Ma has the same as W1 with an additional following stroke. Final cauda: T: F: just after the double stroke in this voice (||) near the middle of the cauda at L40, the 1 of the 3li=dcd that opens the phrase looks like an e; d confirmed by W1, Ma. T: F: note the close correspondence of the repeated phrases near the closing part of the cauda (beginning at L45, marked in the score as “k” and “k'”) with the D voice of the conductus prosula Crucifigat omnes (D3/70) in its phrases over lines 8 (“sola sedet civitas”) and 10 (“plorat dotes perditas”), as well as its slightly varied occurrence in line 6 (“gens evertit extera”). TD: F: the likelihood of hocket, implied by the repeated d notes and their accompanying rests in both voices that precede the second double stroke (||) in the D at L54 of the cauda, is further suggested by the lack of a similar || in the T (where one would be expected if the phrase were not rendered in hocket), and that the 2li, si'si'=cd, d'd' at this point in the D sounds better to my ear if these notes are hocketed, as otherwise they would rather ineffectually meld together with the unison d's in the T at this point.

SOLI NITOREM EQUORI
Conductus (J15/336)

F, f. 327v (7,67) b

I
Soprano: [So - a]

T
Tenor: So -

[So] - li ni - to - rem, e - quo - ri pu - gil - lum A d h

[So] - li ni - to - rem, e - quo - ri pu - gil - lum c

B ad - do la - ti - cis. e g h j ad - do la - ti - cis. c1 f f i lim - phis hu - j1 i1

lim - phis hu -

C I c2 A' d

- mo - rem. ro - bo - ri fron - des ad - iun - go fi - li -

- mo - rem. ro - bo - ri fron - des ad - iun - go fi - li - k e c3

C' e l1 e1

C' e l1 e1

- cis; dum pre-su-li qui se-cu-li no-stri no-ctem

- cis; dum pre-su-li qui se-cu-li no-stri no-ctem

il-lu-mi-nat. et te-ne-bras ex-ter-mi-nat cla-ro vir-tu-tum sy-de-re;

il-lu-mi-nat. et te-ne-bras ex-ter-mi-nat cla-ro vir-tu-tum sy-de-re;

| D: syllable alignment from Hu

sub-iun-ge-re lau-dis pre-sum-mo ti-tu-

sub-iun-ge-re lau-dis pre-sum-mo ti-tu-

A''
d'

c3

e' C'' l'' c1 B'' g'

c1 k' e'' f'

h j j' f' i i'

- lum.]

- lum.

SOLI NITOREM EQUORI

Conductus (J15/336)

F, f. 327v (7,67)

I Soli nitorem, equori pugillum addo laticis, limphis humorem. Robori frondes adiungo filicis, dum presuli qui seculi nostri noctem illuminat et tenebras exterminat, claro virtutum sydere, subiungere laudis presummo titulum.	5 10	To the sun I add a spark; to the sea, a handful of water; to the rivers, a drop. To the oak I graft the leaves of a fern, when I presume to affix a token of praise to the bishop who brightens the night and effaces the shadows of our age with the marked eminence of his merits.
---	--------------------	---

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 67, f. 327v: a2; Strophe I, complete, with utterly empty space provided within the writing block after the last system, ideal for accommodating additional strophes (a common occurrence for single-stanza works in F-7), but no further text survives in any source. Unaccountably, the entire two-staff system that succeeds the conclusion of this piece in F is left blank. Also compelling is the fact that this and the following item in F-7, Columbe simplicitas (J16/66), appear together in Hu (the only other concordant source for both works) but in reverse order.¹ In terms of transmission patterns, Soli nitorem is the first composition in F-7 since the unique In novas fert animus formas (J14/177), five pieces back at F-7,62, that is not also disseminated in both W1 or Ma. Soli nitorem additionally inaugurates a series of seven pieces (F-7,67-73) that show very few – if any – sources beyond F,² a feature that applies as well to two of the following three works,³ until the ostensibly major structural division within the fascicle implied by the large historiated initial that opens Deduc Syon uberrimas (G8/85) at F-7,77, when all the four main manuscripts (F, W1, W2, Ma), among others, are again represented.

Hu, no. 149, fol.138r: a2; Strophe I, complete; in mensural notation throughout. This piece and Columbe simplicitas (J16/66) are contiguous in F and Hu, but with their order reversed; see the above source report on F.

Text only: none

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Possible addressee: It is not known for which bishop this poem may have been written. If the contender was a bishop of Paris, the most likely candidates would be Maurice de Sully (reg. 1160–1196), ¹An analogous situation applies for the previous two pieces in F-7, Gaude presul in domino (H43/137) and Consequens antecedente (H2/68), which are contiguous in both F and W1, but again with their order reversed.

²*Alma redemptoris mater* (I32/13 – at F-7,69) and Hac in die rege nato (I30/150 – at F-7,73) are individually transmitted outside of F only in Ma and W1, respectively. Nulli beneficium (H7/229) at F-7,74, on the other hand, is the exceptional outlier here, extant in six sources: F, W1, W2, the Carmina burana MS (D-Mbs Clm. 4660), Fauv (F-Pn fr. 146), and OxAdd (GB-Ob Add. A .44).

³These are the two unica Manna mentis dat refectionem (J20/204 – F-7,75) and Superne lux glorie (J21/341 – F-7,76)

Odo de Sully (1196–1208), Peter of Nemours (1208–1220), William of Seignelay (1220–1223), Barthélmy of Chartres (1224–1227), William of Auvergne (1228–1249), and Walter of Château-Thierry (June to 23 September 1249). Bishops from other localities in this time frame, of course, are also in the running.⁴ The complex musical style of this polyphonic piece, though, would appear to argue against composition before ca. 1200.⁵ Note also that another conductus with a text praising a bishop appears in Gaude presul in domino (H3/137), just two pieces earlier at F-7,65. Versification: Line 5 features internal rhyme and thus could rightfully be considered as a pairs of distinct 4pp verses. Nevertheless, the frequency of 8pp lines throughout the poem argues for subsuming these into a single verse. Textual notes: 6-7: some conceivable biblical allusions: Job, 17:12: “Noctem verterunt in diem, et rursum post tenebras spero lucem” (“They have turned night into day, and after darkness I hope for light again.”); Psalm 17:29: “Quoniam tu illuminas lucernam meam, Domine; Deus meus, illumina tenebras meas” (“For you light my lamp, O Lord: O my God enlighten my darkness.”). 10: interestingly, there is no corresponding rhyme for the final poetic line.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. 10,2: an alternative spelling of “presumo.” MUSIC: Syllabic/melismatic identity and other musical correspondences: Soli nitorem is notable for featuring some of the most extensive examples of identity between various caudae and texted portions within the Parisian conductus repertory, complicated on occasion by modal transmutation and voice exchange. The correspondences (both large and small) are marked in the score with both capital and lower case letters and listed by number as follows:

1. TD of “equori / pugillum addo laticis” (lines 1-2) – marked “A” in score):
 - = 1a. TD of phrases 1 and 2 of cauda on “[fi]li[cis]” (line 4) – in fast rhythms – “A’ ” in score).
 - = 1b. TD of phrases 1 and 2 of cauda on “[ti]tu[lum]” (line 10) – in slow rhythms – “A” ” in score).
2. TD of “robori frondes adiungo fili-[cis]” (lines 3-4) – “C” in score:
 - = 2a. TD of phrases 3 and 4 of cauda on “[fi]li[cis]” (line 4) – in fast rhythms – “C’ ” in score.
 - = 2b. TD of phrases 3 and 4 of cauda on “[ti]tu[lum]” (line 10) – in slow rhythms – “C” ” in score.
 - = 2c. Moreover, the 2nd and 4th phrases of the caudae on “[fi]li[cis]” and “[ti]tu[lum]” = each other through voice exchange and thus also = both “addo laticis” and “adiungo fili[cis]” – marked “c,” “e,” and their variations.
3. All this is in addition to:
 - 3a. the appearance of an extended canon, 12L in length, in the opening cauda on “So[li]” (line 1), beginning in the D with L3 – marked “b” in score;
 - 3b. the use of the initial 5L motive in the T (2si,3liP,2li=g,f,gacPb,ag), to preface the canonic passage in the T and close it in the D – marked “a” in score;
 - 3c. and the fact that the final cauda on “[presumo ti]tu[lum]” (line 10) is made up almost wholly of earlier cauda material⁶ (some of it also occurring in cum littera passages) in a different order of presentation from its appearance earlier in the setting – these segments marked in the score as “A,” “C,” and “B” respectively, along with their variations.
 - 3d. Lastly and notably, the final cauda is in extended rhythms in comparison to the previous quotations. This thus presents a challenge in using the evidence of syllabic/melismatic correspondences between caudae and cum littera sections to inform the rhythm of the latter.

⁴For a consideration of conductus in MS F that address the various circumstances of bishops, see Payne, “Chancellor versus Bishop: the Conflict Between Philip the Chancellor and Guillaume d’Auvergne in Poetry and Music,” Philippe le Chancelier: prédicateur, théologien, et poète parisien du début du XIIIe siècle, Gilbert Dahan, Anne-Zoé Rillon-Marne, eds., 265-306, Bibliothèque d’histoire culturelle du Moyen Âge, no. 19 (Turnhout: Brepols, 2017); see especially pp. 275-282.

⁵See Thomas B. Payne “Datable Notre Dame Conductus: New Historical Observations on Style and Technique,” Current Musicology, 64 (2001): 104-151, at 129-141.

⁶The 16L that precede the final punctus organi is new.

For another piece with similarly wide-ranging relationships between cum and sine littera segments, see the three-part conductus Veri solis presentia (F6/370) (= Mater patris et filia – F34/207) at F-6,18. Line 8,3: D: F: the pitches of “sydere” (“sidere” in Hu) are re-aligned with this word’s syllables based on the authority of Hu, which gives: L,2li cop,L =c,ba,g.

COLUMBE SIMPLICITAS
Conductus (J16/66)

F, f. 328v (7,68) *see note below

D [Co -

T Co -

[Co]-lum-be sim-pli - ci - tas fel hor - ret ma - li - ti - e

[Co]-lum-be sim-pli - ci - tas fel hor - ret ma - li - ti - e

tur -

tur -

[tur]-tu - ris et ca - sti - tas

[tur]-tu - ris et ca - sti - tas

fe - to - rem lux - u - ri - e

fe - to - rem lux - u - ri - e

e - ti - am ve - ri - tas in - me - ri - tum men - da - cem o - dit

e - ti - am ve - ri - tas in - me - ri - tum men - da - cem o - dit

*Notice the prominence of melodic sequence in many of the caudae in this piece and throughout the cum littera setting of lines 8-11 ("sic decertat ... agmina").

spi - ri - tum sic de - cer - tat cum vi - ti - is vir - tus si - bi con - tra - ri - is. sed cri - mi - na ma - io - ra du - cunt a - gmi - a - gmi -

- na. - na.

*Cf. the start of the T and D melodies here with the opening of the conductus Hac in die salutari (J45/151)

Cf. the T here, as well as the D beginning with the next phrase, with the closing portions of the conductus Veris ad imperia (F11/373) and the canso l'entrada del tens clar (Pillet-Carstons no. 461-12)

[Optional BD clausula = "[Domi]Ne" from M3 Sederunt. Adiuva (W1, claus. 15 and F MLO) and motet Qui servare puberem / Domine (59)]

BD

S
Be - ne - di - ca - mus do - si si mus do -

T
Be - ne - di - ca - mus do -

S
- mi -

T
- mi -

S
- no.]
si

T
- no.

COLUMBE SIMPLICITAS

Conductus (J16/66)

F, f. 328v (7,68)

I	Columbe simplicitas fel horret malitie, turturis et castitas fetorem luxurie. Etiam veritas inmeritum, mendacem odit spiritum. Sic decertat cum vitiis virtus sibi contrariis, sed crimina maiora ducunt agmina.		The simplicity of the dove dreads the bitterness of malice, and the chastity of the turtle-dove fears the stench of lust. 5 Likewise, truth hates an undeserving, lying soul. Thus virtue does battle with vices contrary to itself, 10 but the sins command the larger forces.
---	--	--	---

BD Benedicamus domino.

Let us bless the Lord.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 68, f. 328v: a2; Strophe I, complete, with BD conclusion; there is empty space provided after the last system that could accommodate additional strophes that were never entered, but the single direct concordance, in Hu, also offers no further text (quite a number of single-strophe pieces with such accommodating space are present in this section of F); additionally, the entire previous system (two staves) is left blank following the prior conductus, Soli nitorem equori (J15/336). The F redaction of Columbe ends uniquely with a Benedicamus domino clausula, signaled in the MS with a capital letter and preserved independently both as a clausula with a different chant text and also as a motet (see below); the BD does not seem prompted by any ostensible features of the conductus poem or its music and does not appear in Hu, the only other source. See below, though, on the sources for the motet which may demonstrate a rather covert connection to the conductus poetry. Columbe simplicitas and Soli nitorem are contiguous in both F and Hu (the only MSS to contain either piece), but in reverse order.

Hu, no. 148, fol.137r: a2, in mensural notation; Strophe I, complete, with no provisions for further text; this transmission lacks the Benedicamus domino (BD) conclusion preserved in F. The subsequent work in Hu, Soli nitorem equori (J15/336) is also contiguous in F (the only other source to contain either piece), but in reverse order.

Text only: none.Music only:

In the final cauda, on “[ag]mina,” of Columbe simplicitas, the opening of the repeated gestures in both T and D that start this melisma recollects the initial phrase in the uniquely transmitted conductus Hac in die salutari (J45/151).

F, fasc. 7, no. 119, f. 363v: a2; Strophe I, complete.

Later portions of the same final cauda (L29-L47) are the same as the ending cum littera section of the conductus a3 Veris ad imperia (F11/373) at lines 5,2-10 of Strophe I: “melodia gratia previa ... intra nos”; in this concordance the setting of the first word corresponds only to the T of Columbe, while both T and D match for the remainder:

F, fasc. 6, no. 29, f. 228v: a3; Strophes I-II complete.

The same musical parallelism applies to the ending section (“amoureuse a la vi, a la vie ... entre nos”) of the Franco-Occitan balada A l’entrada del tens clar (Pillet-Carstons no. 461-12),¹ a contrafact of Veris ad imperia that corresponds generally to the T of the applicable sections of the two conductus:

Pbn. fr. 20050 (troubadour MS X, trouvère MS U, Chansonnier St. Germain), f. 82v (lxxix^v): a1 (=T), with some phrases transposed either 4 or 5 lower compared to the two conductus concordances in F; Strophes I-V of the chanson, complete.

The Benedicamus domino conclusion of Columbe simplicitas as preserved in F alone is equivalent to a clausula on “[Domi]Ne” from the gradual Sederunt principes. Adiuva me (M3), transmitted as follows:

WI, fasc. 5, no. 15, f. 50r (44r), system IV: a2; an independent setting of the clausula.

F, fasc. 4, no. 3, f. 101v, system II: a2; forms part of the MLO organum duplum setting of the M3 chant that begins on f. 101r.

The above clausula is likewise equivalent to the T and Mot of the strophic motet Qui servare puberem / [Domi]Ne (A6/285 – VdW 59/M3), appearing in the following sources. It seems possible that the inclusion in F of this otherwise independent composition attached to Columbe simplicitas may have been prompted by the opening words of Strophe II of the motet: “Sub columbe specie vulpes latuit” (“Under the guise of a dove a vixen lay hidden”).

WI, fasc. 9, no. 21, f. 115r (106r): a2 (Mot, Tr, only; T omitted); Strophes I-III complete, with II-III written in the left margin of f. 115v (106v), starting at the penultimate system of the piece. The opening initial of the Mot text (starting the fourth system) was never entered, and no guide letter is now visible, but small painted initials are given for Strophes II and III.

E-SAu 226 (Salamanca, Biblioteca Universitaria, Ms. 226), no. 4, f. 101r: a1 (Mot only), Strophes I-III, complete; appears 4 lower than in other sources, with occasional melodic elaborations.

F, fasc. 8, no. 3, f. 381v: a3, conductus motet; Strophe I only, with no provision for further text.

Ma, fasc. 6, no. 10, f. 128: a2 (Mot, Tr only); Strophe I only, with no provision for T or further text, and with the opening initial never entered in the space provided for it in the interior of the system.

MüA (D-B 55 MS 14 and D-Mbs Mus. ms. 4775 [gallo-rom. 42]; Berlin, Staatsbibliothek Preussischer Kulturbesitz, B 55 MS14; and Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Mus. ms. 4775 and Paris, Bibliothèque nationale, Vma 1446), complex A, no. 20, f. 6v: a1 (only Mot extant); fragmentary: faded portions of text with melody survive for lines 3,1 up through the penultimate syllable of 14,2 (the last word of Strophe I); non-contiguous remnants of the text of Strophe II survive despite trimming, as well as the top half of lines 29,1-31,1 that open Strophe III.

The text alone of Qui servare puberem is also found in:

¹Alfred Pillet and Henry Carstons, Bibliographie der Troubadours (Halle: M. Niemeyer, 1933; New York: Burt Franklin, 1968).

OxRawl (Oxford, Bodleian Library, Rawlinson C 510), no. 55, f. 247v (18v): text only of Strophes I-III, complete; rubric: “De eo qui lavat laterem” (“On one who washes a brick”).²

OxAdd (Oxford, Bodleian Library, MS Add. A. 44), no. 59, f. 79v: text only of Strophes I-III, complete, in the order I, III, II; rubric: “Contra corta et inconstantiam ac mutabilitatem eorum” (“Against harlots and their fickleness and changeability”).

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Avian images in lines 1-4: as both Anderson (NDRC, 5:xi, notes 4 and 6) and Everist (Discovering Medieval Song, 50-51) have related, the particular language associated with the images of the dove and turtledove in these opening lines comes directly from the De bestiis et aliis rebus, earlier ascribed to Hugh of Saint Victor, but now with its various portions allotted to Hugues de Foulois, Henri de Gand and Guillaume Perrault (so Everist). The specific references from the De bestiis that figure in the conductus text appear (under Hugh’s name) in PL, 177: cols. 17D³ and 23B,⁴ respectively. Other medieval bestiaries, or similar allegorical treatises on animals, such as the Latin version of the Physiologus and the so-called Aberdeen Bestiary (Aberdeen, University of Aberdeen Library, MS 24 [GB-A 24]),⁵ also offer treatments of the dove and turtledove that correlate with the images in the opening lines of Columbe simplicitas.⁶ For example, the ²From Terence, Phormio, line 186 [act I, scene 4, line 8]. The phrase “to wash a brick” (laterem lavare) means to perform a useless task. See its occurrence in the conductus a3 Cum animadverterem (I12/73), line 3.

³*PL*, 177: col. 17D: “Cap. IV. De columbae ad praelatum comparatione. ‘Si dormiatis inter medios cleros, pennae columbae deargentatae et posteriora dorsi ejus in pallore auri’ (Psal. lxxvii[14]). Columba deargentata est absque felle malitiae quaelibet adhuc vivens praelatorum persona, quae inter medios cleros dormit. Cleros Graece, latine sors” (“Chapter 4: On the comparison of a dove to a prelate. ‘If you sleep among the midst of lots [cleros – κληρος – i.e., a portion of land allotted for agricultural use or for tending livestock], you shall be as the wings of a dove covered with silver, and the hinder parts of her back with the paleness of gold’ [Psalm 67:14]. The silver-covered dove, without the gall of malice, is any member [persona] of the prelates still living who sleeps among the lots/clergy [cleros]. ‘Cleros’ in Greek is ‘lot’ in Latin.”). Hence, a play on words is likely in force here, whereby “cleros” conveys both its original biblical connotation (“allotment”) as well as its Latin meaning of “clergy.”

⁴*PL*, 177: cols. 23B: “Cap. XX. De turture et passere. Post columbae gemitum et accipitris questum, rogas charissime, ne diutius differam, sed planctum turturis et clamor passeris tibi velocius scribam. Nec tantum scribam, sed etiam pingam qualiter turtur eremi secretum diligit, et passer solitarius in tecto clamare non desinat, ut sub exemplo turturis teneas munditiam castitatis, et sub exemplo passeris ames custodiam cautae circumspectionis, ut et vivas caste et ambules caute” (“Chapter 20: On the turtledove and sparrow. After the sighing of the dove and the plaint of the hawk, you ask me, dearest ones, not to hold off any longer, but to write to you very quickly about the lament of the turtledove and the cry of the sparrow. Not only shall I write, but also will I depict how the turtledove delights in the remote parts of the wilderness, and the sparrow ceases not to cry alone from the rooftops, so that with the example of the turtledove you may understand the cleanliness of chastity, and with the example of the sparrow you may esteem the observance of cautious circumspection, so that you may live chastely and walk cautiously.”).

⁵The Aberdeen Bestiary is available online at <https://www.abdn.ac.uk/bestiary/>. All quotations and translations supplied here from this source derive from the University’s online resources for this MS. A number of passages in its sections about doves and turtledoves concord with the De bestiis.

⁶The Physiologus was an early Christian bestiary written in Greek between the second to fourth centuries, and translated into Latin around the start of the sixth. It was a source frequently drawn upon by later medieval bestiaries and their followers. Its section on turtledoves relates the common association of this bird with marital fidelity and chastity. See, for example, Francis James Carmody, ed., Physiologus latinus: Editions préliminaires, versio B, (Paris: E. Droz, 1939), 48-50: “Physiologus de turture dicit valde virum suum diligere, et caste cum illo vivere, et ipsi soli fidem servare. ... Audite itaque, omnes animae fidelium, quanta castitas in modica avicula invenitur; quicumque tamen personam turturis in vultu animae portatis, huius castitatem imitemini (“The Physiologus says of the turtledove that she loves her mate very much, lives chastely with him, and remains faithful to him alone. ... And so hearken, all you souls of the faithful, to what great chastity is found in this humble little bird. For whoever you are that bear the character [personam] of the turtledove in the image of your soul [vultu animae], should mimic her chastity”). Regarding the expressions in the last sentence, see Cicero, De oratore, 3,59,221: “... imago animi vultus ...” (“... the face is the image of the soul ...”). Similar descriptions of the Aberdeen Bestiary begins its section on birds with a general list of species in which the dove's guilelessness (simplicitas) is specifically affirmed.⁷ Then, on its following pages, the MS turns more precisely towards doves in an introductory passage notable for its repeated use of the words simplex and simplicitas.⁸ Subsequently, the absence of bitter gall or bile is also adduced as a special characteristic of doves.⁹ Later on, in its treatment of the propensity of turtledoves for chastity, the Aberdeen Bestiary echoes and often reproduces much of the same language that appears above in the passages cited from the De bestiis (see, e.g., f. 31v). It also offers a few further observations on the turtledove's chastity.¹⁰ Further textual notes: 1: Matthew, 10:16: "Ecce ego mitto vos sicut oves in medio luporum. Estote ergo prudentes sicut serpentes, et simplices sicut columbae" ("Behold I send you as sheep in the midst of wolves. Be you therefore wise as serpents and simple as doves."). 2: Acts, 8:23: "In felle enim amaritudinis, et obligatione iniquitatis, video te esse" ("For I see you are in the gall of bitterness, and in the bonds of iniquity."). 7: 3 Kings (1 Kings), 22:23: "Nunc igitur ecce dedit Dominus spiritum mendacii in ore omnium prophetarum tuorum, qui hic sunt, et Dominus locutus est contra te malum" ("Now therefore behold the Lord has given a lying spirit in the mouth of all your prophets that are here, and the Lord has spoken evil against you."). A nearly identical passage appears in 2 Chronicles, 18:22. 8-11: the image of virtues and vices battling each other recalls the plot of the Psychomachia by the late-antique Christian poet Prudentius (348-ca. 405), an allegorical poem of 915 lines written in classical iambic trimeter. I have not yet, though, uncovered any direct echoes between this poem and the conductus text. 8-9: see also Philip the Chancellor's conductus Vitia virtutibus (L4/388), especially Strophes I-II: "Vitia virtutibus / obvia cum omnibus / dimicant. / Implicant se varie. // Ictibus ac variis, / actibus contrariis, / vulnerant, / superant in acie" ("The conflicting vices contend with each of the virtues. They embroil themselves in all kinds of ways. // With faithfulness and chastity of these birds appear in even more ancient accounts, such as Pliny the Elder's description of the mating habits of doves in his Historia naturalis, book 10,52(34).

⁷*Aberdeen Bestiary*, f. 25r (italics mine): "Hic incipit de avibus. Unum autem nomen avium sed genus diversum. Nam sicut species sibi differunt, ita et nature diversitate. Nam alie simplices sunt ut columbe, ... alie in desertis secretam viam diligunt ut turtura." ("Here begins the account of the birds. Birds have a single name, avis, but a variety of species. For just as they differ in appearance, so they differ in nature. Some are guileless [simplices], like doves; ... others love the solitary life of the wilderness, like turtle-doves.").

⁸*Aberdeen Bestiary*, f. 25v-26r (italics mine): "De pennis deargentatis columbe. 'Columbam cuius penne sunt deargentate et posteriora dorsi eius in pallore auri' pingere et per picturam simplicium mentes edificare decrevi, ut quod simplicium animus intelligibili oculo capere vix poterat, saltem carnali discernat, et quod vix poterat auditus, percipiat visus. Nec tantum volui columbam formando pingere, sed etiam dictando describere, ut per scripturam, demonstrare picturam, vel cui non placuerit simplicitas picture, placeat saltem moralitas scripture" ("Of the silver-sheathed wings of the dove. It is my intention to paint a picture of the dove, 'whose wings are sheathed in silver and whose tail has the pale colour of gold' [Psalm 67:14]. In painting this picture I intend to improve the minds of ordinary people [simplicium], in such a way that their soul [simplicium animus] will at least perceive physically things which it has difficulty in grasping mentally; so that those that have difficulty comprehending with their ears, they will perceive with their eyes. I want not only to depict the dove by creating its likeness, but also to describe it in words, to reveal the picture through the text, so that the reader who is unimpressed with the simplicity [simplicitas] of the picture may at least take pleasure in the moral content of the text.").

⁹*Aberdeen Bestiary*, f. 29r-v: "Prima natura columbe est, quod pro cantu gemitum profert. Secunda, quod felle caret. ... Columba pro cantu, utitur gemitu, quia quod libens fecit, plangendo gemit. Caret felle, id est irascibilitatis amaritudine" ("The first property of the dove is that instead of song it brings forth a lament. The second, is that it lacks bile [felle]. ... The dove produces a lament instead of a song, because anything it does with pleasure, it then bewails aloud. It lacks bile, that is, the bitterness born of anger.).

¹⁰*Aberdeen Bestiary*, ff. 32r-v: "Ergo turturibus dominus hanc infudit gratiam vel affectum; hanc virtutem continentie dedit Turtur non uritur flore iuventutis non temptatur occasionis illecebra. Turtura nescit primam fidem irritam facere quia novit castimoniam servare, prima conubii sorte premissam" ("Therefore the Lord infused in the turtle doves this grace or capacity for affection; he gave them this virtue of continence The turtle dove is not inflamed by the flower of youth and is not affected by chance temptation. It cannot go back on its first pledge of love because it knows how to preserve the chastity which it plighted as the first duty of marriage.").

blows of different kinds, with opposing actions, they wound, they conquer on the line of battle.”¹¹

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 3,1: F: first syllable of “turturis” and preceding period originally om; the former has subsequently been entered beneath the first notes of the cauda following “[maliti]e” (line 2,3) in a similar hand, but using smaller letters and with a different colored ink with a slightly faded appearance. This does not seem to be the remnants of an erasure. The later placement of the syllable in the transcription at the start of the third T phrase at L12 in the cauda derives from Hu. MUSIC: Melodic sequence: the frequent use of melodic sequence in many of the cauda (not specifically marked here in the score) appears noteworthy; sequence also pervades the cum littera setting of lines 8-11. Perhaps significantly, sequence also features in the passage borrowed from the conductus Veris ad imperia and the chanson A l’entrada del tens clar near the end of the cauda prior to the closing BD clausula in F. Opening cauda: D: F: the rhythm accorded to the repeated 5si on d that launch this part is suggested by Hu. Line 4,1: D: Hu: f# sig (but with the shape actually enclosing the upper g staff line) in place of the b-flat sig in F over the first syllable of “fe[torem]”; f# sig in force up through the cauda following line 4. No other sigs appear anywhere in Hu for this piece; they are not included in the transcription. Cauda following line 4: TD: the apparently purposeful dissonance in this melisma following “fetorem luxurie,” as well as the appearance of accidentals (though significantly different) in the D of both F and Hu to start this line’s setting, might suggest attempts at word painting. T: F: the rhythm of the repeated 7si figures on a from L2-L5 of the cauda is prompted by Hu. Final cauda (precedes BD clausula in F): TD: Hu has helped determine some of the rhythmic gestures in the transcription of this melisma. One might also notice, in connection with the quotations from the conductus and the chanson that appear in the latter portion of this cauda, that – as reported above in the sources that transmit music alone – the opening of the repeated gestures in both T and D that start this melisma recollect the opening phrase from the conductus Hac in die salutari (J45/151), unique to F. T: F: the missing portion of the final cauda from L19-L20 has been completed from Hu.

¹¹The text and its music is preserved uniquely in LoB (GB-Lbl Egerton 274), ff. 37v-38v; see the discussion of this poem in Anne Walters Robertson, “The Seven Deadly Sins in Medieval Music,” Sin in Medieval and Early Modern Culture: The Tradition of the Seven Deadly Sins, Richard G. Newhauser and Susan J. Ridyard, eds., 191-122 (York: York Medieval Press, in association with Boydell & Brewer, 2012), especially pp. 199-201.

ALMA REDEMPTORIS MATER
Marian antiphon a2 (132/13)

F, f. 329r (7,69)

ma - nens et stel - la ma - ris

ma - nens et stel - la ma - ris

suc - [suc] - cur - re

(e) suc - [suc] - cur - re

ca - den - ti sur - [sur] - ge - re

ca - den - ti sur - [sur] - ge - re

qui cu - rat po - pu - lo. tu [tu] que

(e) qui cu - rat po - pu - lo. tu [tu] que

ge - nu - i - sti na - tu - ra mi - ran - te tu - um

ge - nu - i - sti na - tu - ra mi - ran - te tu - um san - ctum ge - ni - to - rem.

(f) (g) san - ctum ge - ni - to - rem.

vir - go
vir - go

Performance markings: i, h, h, [vir]

pri - us ac po - ste - ri - us. ga - bri - e - lis ab o - re
pri - us ac po - ste - ri - us. ga - bri - e - lis ab o - re

Performance markings: h, i, h, h, [vir]

su - mens il - lud a - ve pec - ca - to - rum
su - mens il - lud a - ve pec - ca - to - rum

Performance markings: h, i, h, h, [vir]

mi - se - mi - se -

Performance markings: h, i, h, h, [vir]

mi - se - mi - se -

Performance markings: h, i, h, h, [vir]

mi - se - mi - se -

Performance markings: h, i, h, h, [vir]

The image displays a musical score for the piece "Alma redemptoris mater" (Alma redemptoris mater [132/13] a2 (F)). The score is presented in two staves, both in treble clef. The top staff is the vocal line, and the bottom staff is the piano accompaniment. The vocal line begins with a rest for 8 measures, followed by a melodic phrase. The lyrics "- re -" are written below the vocal line, and "- re.]" is written at the end of the phrase. The piano accompaniment consists of a series of chords and rests, with a red slur over a note in the final measure. The score is marked with various musical notations, including slurs, ties, and dynamic markings.

ALMA REDEMPTORIS MATER

Marian antiphon a2 (I32/13)

F, f. 329r (7,69)

Alma redemptoris mater, que pervia celi porta manes, et stella maris, succurre cadenti surgere qui curat populo. Tu que genuisti, natura mirante, tuum sanctum genitorem,
 virgo prius ac posterius Gabrielis ab ore
 sumens illud “Ave,” peccatorum miserere.

Kind mother of the redeemer, you who remain the attainable door of heaven, and star of the sea, comfort a fallen people who seek to rise. You who bore, with nature in awe, your holy father,
 5 virgin before and after taking on that “Hail” from Gabriel's lips, have mercy on sinners.

SOURCES:

F, fascicle 7, no. 69, f. 329r: a2; lines 1-6, complete.

Ma, fascicle 4, no. 18, f. 99r: a2; lines 1-6, complete, with the opening initial never entered in the space provided for it at the beginning of the first system.¹

Text only: as a standard liturgical item, the text appears in innumerable sources.²

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: a metrum in dactylic hexameter,³ this poem occurs within the liturgy as one of the four major Marian antiphons,⁴ this one traditionally sung after Compline from Advent to Purification (2 February, i.e., Candlemas); the long-standing ascription of this poem to Hermannus Contractus (1013-54) no longer appears defensible.⁵ 6,1-3: see the Marian hymn Ave Maris stella, whose second stanza opens with this same

¹Some of the pages containing this piece in Ma have more than their usual allotment of eight ruled staves (typically comprising four two-voice systems, as does f. 99r). Folio 99v, logically, leaves its bottom staff of nine unnotated, while f. 100r has ten, disposed as five staff systems a2, all with notation except for the rightmost half of its bottom accolade. Additional ruled staves beyond the customary eight sometimes occur elsewhere in this MS in the vicinity of Alma redemptoris, such as on ff. 95r, 103v, and 104r (each with an unused ninth staff), and they arise more frequently in the later fascicles of Ma (see, for example, the nine staves throughout ff. 130v-135r). Outside of these examples, more than eight staves per page is rare for Ma, comprising only the tiny systems added to the bottom right portions of ff. 30r and 51r to accommodate overruns, and the 10-staff rulings on ff. 57v, 79r, and 137v.

²Other conductus texts in the major Parisian sources besides Alma redemptoris that take their lyrics without change or paraphrase from the liturgy include Pater noster qui es in celis (G2/265), and the Ave Maria II (the number as given in the CPI database, G7/29) – this does not include items that may appear in some contexts as sequences or hymns, ones later pressed into service as rubricated liturgical items, or ones that feature quotations, references to, or paraphrases of liturgical texts. For an inclusive list of the conductus in the four main sources with such characteristics, see the notes to the text of Puer nobis est natus (H25/276).

³Metrical conductus texts within the four main “Notre Dame” manuscripts (F, W1, W2, Ma) are Alma redemptoris (I23/13), Celorum porta (J19/55), Porta salutis ave (I2/269), and two textually related pieces uniquely transmitted in Ma: Salve sancta parens patrie (J58/317) and Salve sancta parens enixa (J57/316). In Ma, moreover, Salve sancta parens enixa is preceded by the conductus setting of Alma redemptoris. All these examples are in dactylic hexameter, except for Porta salutis, which offers a single elegaic couplet.

⁴The Marian antiphons inclusively: Alma redemptoris mater, Ave regina caelorum, Regina caeli latere, Salve regina.

⁵See Lawrence Gushee, “Hermannus Contractus,” Grove Music Online, 2001, <https://doi-org.proxy.wm.edu/10.1093/gmo/9781561592630.article.12864>.

expression.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 1,5: F: previa, which does make sense (“you who remain in front of the door of heaven”), but the reading adopted from Ma is the one favored by more numerous outside sources. 6,1: F: summens, an alternative spelling, the more regular form of which is adopted here from Ma. MUSIC: Opening cauda: noticeable is the rising chain of thirds (g'g,b,d) that begins the T of the opening cauda, and the similar music in line 1 starting at “redemptoris” (g,b,d,d,de). A comparable gesture, usually beginning on f with an intervening b or b-flat (fa,bc,c), is also seen at the opening of the Marian antiphon; see, for example, the transmission in the noted Parisian breviary F-Pn lat. 15181, f. 451r \(CCCCXXXIr\), transposed here to begin on the pitch c. Line 2,7: TD: Possible text painting on “cadenti,” although the end of a line is typical for a descending cascade of this type, despite the enjambment. Cauda on line 5,1: F: the rest strokes erased at L10 in the T and L11 in the D are supplied from Ma; conceivably the cauda may be sung without the erased values, if one assumes willful scribal emendation at these points. Final cauda (ends line 6): TD: notice the short canonic sequential treatment of 6 si at the upper second after 1L in the final cauda, beginning at L48 in the T (e,c,d,b,c,a).

EXULTEMUS SOCII

Conductus (J17/115)

F. f. 330r (7,70)

I

D
T

[Ex - ul - te - mus so - ci - i. no - vus an - nus o - ri - tur.

Ex - ul - te - mus so - ci - i. no - vus an - nus o - ri - tur.

co - mi - tes e - gre - gi - i. sol ex stel - la na - sci - tur. ad - est di - es

co - mi - tes e - gre - gi - i. sol ex stel - la na - sci - tur. ad - est di - es

gau - di - i. ve - nit lu - men gen - ti - um. sol - vat vo - ta mens de - vo - ta.

gau - di - i. ve - nit lu - men gen - ti - um. sol - vat vo - ta mens de - vo - ta.

cum le - ti - ti - a. or - tus re - gis im - plet le - gis ce - ri - mo - ni - a.

cum le - ti - ti - a. or - tus re - gis im - plet le - gis ce - ri - mo - ni - a.

II

D
T

An - ge - lus con - si - li - i no - bis mit - ti - tur. ut sur - ga - mus

An - ge - lus con - si - li - i no - bis mit - ti - tur. ut sur - ga - mus

o - ri - tur. mors con - te - ri - tur. vi - a la - psis pan - di - tur

o - ri - tur. mors con - te - ri - tur. vi - a la - psis pan - di - tur

ve - ni - e. ce - dit cul - pa gra - ti - e. pa - tet ve - ri - tas
 ve - ni - e. ce - dit cul - pa gra - ti - e. pa - tet ve - ri - tas fu - git ce - ci - tas. car - ne - am tra - be - am ve - stit de - it - as.

 fu - git ce - ci - tas. car - ne - am tra - be - am ve - stit de - it - as.

III D Yes - se vir - gu - la pro - mit flo - rem. sed pu - do - rem
 T Yes - se vir - gu - la pro - mit flo - rem. sed pu - do - rem

ac de - co - rem con - tra mo - rem ser - vat et vi - ro - rem. flos vi - te po - cu - la dat.
 ac de - co - rem con - tra mo - rem ser - vat et vi - ro - rem. flos vi - te po - cu - la dat.

mor - tis vin - cu - la ad - i - mit. qui re - di - mit se - cu - la.]
 mor - tis vin - cu - la ad - i - mit. qui re - di - mit se - cu - la]

EXULTEMUS SOCII

Conductus (J17/115)

F, f. 330r (7,70)

I Exultemus, socii. Novus annus oritur. Comites egregii, sol ex stella nascitur. Adest dies gaudii. Venit lumen gentium. Solvat vota mens devota. cum letitia. Ortus regis implet legis cerimonia.	Companions, let us rejoice. A new year arises. Excellent comrades, the sun is born from a star. 5 A day of rejoicing is at hand. The light of the Gentiles has come. Let the devout mind send out prayers with joy. The birth of a king fulfills the 10 sacred rites of the old law.
II Angelus consilii nobis mittitur. Ut surgamus oritur. Mors conteritur. Via lapsis panditur venie. Cedit culpa gratie, patet veritas, fugit cecitas. Carneam trabeam vestit deitas.	The angel of council is sent to us. He is born so we may rise. Death is crushed. 15 The path of forgiveness is opened to the fallen. Guilt gives way to grace, truth is revealed, blindness flees. 20 Godliness dons a cloak of flesh.
III Yesse virgula promit florem, sed pudorem, ac decorem, contra morem, servat et virorem. Flos vite pocula dat. Mortis vincula adimit, qui redimit secula	Jesse's little twig brings forth a flower, but, counter to custom, her modesty, dignity, and freshness she retains. 25 The flower confers the cup of life. The one who removes the chains of death is he 29 who redeems the world.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 70, f. 330r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with the start of II and III indicated by capitals; unique source of both text and music.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 2: this work is part of a number of conductus that invoke the new year, and might thus be appropriate for liturgical or seasonal use at Circumcision or for the so-called Feast of Fools on 1 January, as well as Christmastide in general. See, for some extra information on New Year pieces, the notes on the text for the conductus Ysyas cecinit (C4/188), lines 25, 27. 4: Jesus is the sun, Mary the star; these are common medieval symbols found throughout the conductus repertory; see, e.g., Philip the Chancellor’s conductus Sol oritur in sydere (K13/333), the anonymous Veri solis presentia (F6/370), the Marian hymn Ave maris stella; and the notes to the text of the conductus Veri vitis germine (H14/372), lines 3-4. 5: for the same expression, see Philip the Chancellor’s Marian rondellus Sol est in meridie [N17/332], lines 3-4 (“Fulget dies gratie et gaudii” – “a day of grace and joy shines forth”). 6: on Christ as light illuminating the Gentiles, see Isaiah, 49:6: “... dedi te in lucem gentium, ut sis salus mea usque ad extremum terrae” (“... I have given you to be the light of the Gentiles, that you may be my salvation even to the farthest part of the earth”). Isaiah’s text is recollected in Acts, 13:47. See also Luke, 2:32: “lumen ad revelationem gentium, et gloriam plebis tuae Israhel” (“A light for the revelation of the Gentiles, and the glory of your people Israel”); and the similar language in Isaiah, 42:6: “ego Dominus vocavi te in iustitia, et adprehendi manum tuam, et servavi; et dedi te in foedus populi in lucem gentium” (“I the Lord have called you in righteousness, and taken you by your hand, and protected you; and I have given you for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles”). 9-10: the common rhetorical trope of Jesus fulfilling the Messianic prophecies of the Old Testament. See Matthew, 5:17-18, where Jesus speaks.¹ For further examples in the conductus repertory of this idea, see, for example, Veri vitis germine (H14/37), lines 9-16 (Strophe II); Renovantur veterum (J5/305), lines 1-9 (Strophe I); Lex honus importabile (I19/197), lines 1-10 (Strophe I); and Philip the Chancellor’s Sol oritur in sydere (K13/333), Strophes I and III. 10: “cerimonia” is construed here in a collateral form as a second-declension neuter accusative plural, rather than a first-declension feminine ablative singular, or as an error for the anticipated accusative plural form “cerimonias.” 11-12: for the expression of Christ as the angel of (good or great) council, see the opening lines of the second stanza of the contrafact poem Notum fecit dominus in conspectu that attends the transmission of the conductus Si Deus est animus (H32/324) in WI and OxRawl. The same conceit also arises in the sequences Letabundus exultat fidelis chorus for Christmas (olim L129/-; Cantus ID 508017), line 7;² Caeli enarrant gloriam dei filii verbi (Cantus ID ah50267), lines 7-8 from Stanza 2b (as given in AH, 50:264, no. 267); the Annunciation antiphon Ecce virgo in utero concipiet (Cantus ID 002558); and the opening of the introit Puer natus est nobis (Cantus ID g00553) for the third Christmas Mass.³ 14: on the frequent conceit of death being overcome by Jesus’s sacrifice and resurrection, see Hebrews, 2:14-15, Romans, 6:9, 1 Corinthians, 15:26-27, 54-55, and Payne, Motets and Prosulas, p. 27 (note to lines 136-137). 15-16: the path of pardon (“via venie”) is typically an attribute of the Virgin Mary, see, e.g., the Tr voice of the Marian motet O maria virgo davitica / O Maria maris stella / Veritatem, (VdW 449/448/M37), line 3. 17-21: additional references to the turn from Mosaic law to the New Covenant with Christ’s incarnation. For line 18 see the similar expression of the truth of the New Covenant being revealed in Flos de spina procreatur ... misso rore (H29/127), line 6. 22-23,2: other common images within the conductus repertory: the twig is Mary and the flower is Christ, with the name of Jesse connoting Jesus’s royal lineage from him through King David. For the prophecy of the twig/rod/shoot (virga)

¹Matthew, 5:17-18: “Nolite putare quoniam veni solvere legem aut prophetas: non veni solvere, sed adimplere. Amen quippe dico vobis, donec transeat caelum et terra, jota unum aut unus apex non praeteribit a lege, donec omnia fiant” (“Do not think that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets. I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill. For amen I say unto you, till heaven and earth pass, not one jot, or one least bit shall pass of the law, till all be fulfilled.”).

²Anderson has L129 signaled for deletion in the hand-annotated version of his conductus catalog due to his reclassification of it as a sequence.

³“Puer natus est nobis, et filius datus est nobis, cujus imperium super humerum ejus, et vocabitur nomen ejus magni consilii angelus” (“A child is born to us and a son is given to us, whose government is upon his shoulder, and his name shall be called angel of great council.”). This introit text relies on a different recension of Isaiah, 9:6, which offer a few slightly different expressions. The Vulgate itself supplies: “Parvulus enim natus est nobis, et filius datus est nobis, et factus est principatus super humerum ejus: et vocabitur nomen ejus, Admirabilis, Consiliarius, Deus, Fortis, Pater futuri saeculi, Princeps pacis” (“For a child is born to us, and a son is given to us, and the government is upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called, Wonderful, Counsellor, God the Mighty, the Father of the world to come, the Prince of Peace.”).

sprouting from the stem/root (stirps/radix) of Jesse, see Isaiah, 11:1;⁴ and note as well the opening line of the triplum from the double motet Stirps Jesse progreditur / Virga cultus nescia / Flos filius eius (vdW 647/648/O16), as well as its host chant, the Marian responsory Styrps Yesse. Virgo dei genetrix (O16).⁵ 26-27,1: cf. Luke, 22:20 (and the similar expression in 1 Corinthians, 11:25): “Similiter et calicem, postquam coenavit, dicens: ‘Hic est calix novum testamentum in sanguine meo, qui pro vobis fundetur’ ” (“In like manner [Jesus took] the chalice also, after he had supped, saying: ‘This is the chalice, the new testament in my blood, which shall be shed for you.’ ”). For the “cup of life” elsewhere in the conductus and related repertoires, see the rondelli in F-11 Salve virgo virginum salve sancta parens (M47/318), line 17 (in Strophe II), and Vineam meam plantavi (M24/382), line 21 (in Strophe IV); the English cantilena Beata viscera Marie virginis que fructu (O47/-), line 3; the conductus O Iesu admirabilis (L159/-), lines 52-53 (in Strophe IX); and the comparable expression (“poculum vitale”) in Novus annus hodie (F5/227), lines 11-12. Contrast this with the “cup of death” in Rex et pater omnium (I17/307), line 15, and the commentary there. 27,2-28,1: cf. Psalm 106:14: “Et eduxit eos de tenebris et umbra mortis, et vincula eorum dirupit” (“And he brought them out of darkness, and the shadow of death; and broke their bonds asunder.”).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. Versification: There are competing ways to represent the poetic structure of this lyric, and the layout of the text here departs from that of Anderson’s edition (NDRC, 5:xii). Thanks to the irregular lengths of the strophes, the variety of line lengths, and the opportunities for frequent interlinear rhyme (indicated in the disposition of the above text by extra horizontal spacing within the applicable verses), a wide range of interpretations are available for the versification of this poem. In this case, each of Anderson’s 4p and one of his 3pp verses has been paired via internal rhyme with a neighbor to form single octo- or heptasyllabic units closer in length to the nonbreakable 5-, 6-, and 7-syllable lines that populate the majority of the poem. This leaves only the two lone instances of 3pp words that make up lines 16 and 29, which seem strategically placed to conclude the whole poem and to divide the second stanza exactly in half (and thereby nearly the complete poem). MUSIC: Style, form, and position within F-7: Exultemus socii looks a bit out of place stylistically in comparison to the other conductus that surround it, as its setting is mostly syllabic with occasional neumatic passages; it additionally offers only a very small closing cauda, about 5-6L in length. This piece, therefore, seems closest stylistically to two other prior works in F-7 Frater iam prospicias (I31/132) and Virtus moritur (J12/348); these, though, contrast with Exultemus by having no caudae whatsoever and less neumatic ornamentation. Also, outside of the classical metrical verse scheme of the previous work in F-7 (the setting of the text of the Marian antiphon Alma redemptoris mater [I32/13]), Exultemus socii calls attention to itself as being the first through-composed setting of an apparently multi-strophic text in F-7 since Ego reus confiteor (H20/106), seven pieces back at F-7,63, with this latter work ending a nearly unbroken series of musically strophic or ostensibly single-stanza pieces that began with A deserto veniens (J3/1, I29/1) at F-7,48.⁶ Internal repetition: the through-composed melody for this piece exhibits relatively frequent but irregular occurrences of a number of motives, some of which may be shorter than the phrase itself, ligated differently, or may begin at points other than the start of a poetic line; these have been indicated above the ⁴Isaiah, 11:1: “et egredietur virga de radice Iesse, et flos de radice eius ascendet” (“And a shoot shall come forth out of the root of Jesse, and a flower shall rise up out of his root.”).

⁵“Styrps Iesse virgam produxit virgaque florem et super hunc florem requiescit spiritus almus. Virgo dei genetrix virga est, flos filius ejus” (“The stem of Jesse produced a branch [virga], and the branch a flower; and on this flower rested the kind Spirit. The branch is the virgin mother of God, the flower is her son.”).

⁶Furthermore, Ego reus (F-7,63) is the first musically through-composed piece to occur in F-7 since Qui de Saba veniunt (I20/281) at F-7,47, itself the last in an uninterrupted succession of through-composed works cum caudis that launches the fascicle. The single, minor exception to these formal groupings is the strophic sequence form of Redit etas aurea (I8/298) at F-7,53. The through-composed, multi-strophic Deduc Syon uberrimas (G8/85) begins an apparently new division within F-7 seven pieces after Exultemus socii at f. 336r with its historiated initial and larger concordance base. For further details on all these points, see the source report on A deserto veniens (setting II, the F/W1 version).

staves, and, depending on one's assessment of the identities among the figures, additional relationships may obtain for some gestures that are not marked in this way. Line 13,3: D: F: concluding stroke very faint, none in T. 14,2: T: F: music for second syllable of “[con]te[ritur]” om, with possible faint trace of erased pitch a; adopted b is an editorial completion; cf. the D at “veritas,” line 18,2, for the same figure. 15,3: D: F: music for first two syllables of “pandi[tur]” om, with erasures evident in the higher portion of the staff; the editorial completion is prompted by this erasure. 27,3: T: F: music for third syllable of “[vincu]la” om, with possible, faint trace of erased pitch b, which has prompted the editorial completion.

PIA MATER GRATIE
Conductus (J18/268)

*F, f. 331 (7,71)

D
I
T [Pi-]
Pi-

[a] [b] [c] [c] [a] [d] [e] [d']

[Pi] - a ma - ter gra - ti - e. pi - a ve - na ve - ni - e.
[Pi] - a ma - ter gra - ti - e. pi - a ve - na ve - ni - e.

pi - a re - gis fi - li - a
pi - a re - gis fi - li - a

*Numerous short motives (including ones beyond those indicated above the staves) are repeated within and among caudae; others appear occasionally in cum littera passages.

First system of musical notation, consisting of two staves. The top staff contains a series of eighth and sixteenth notes with blue slurs. The bottom staff contains a similar melodic line with some rests.

Second system of musical notation, consisting of two staves. The top staff continues the melodic line with blue slurs. The bottom staff has a more rhythmic accompaniment with some rests.

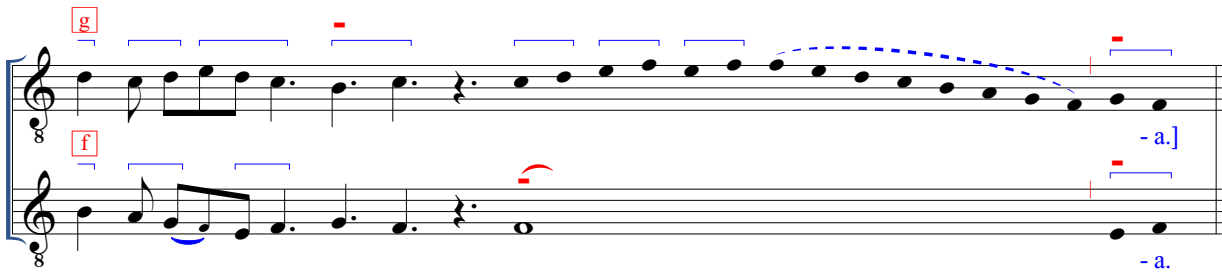

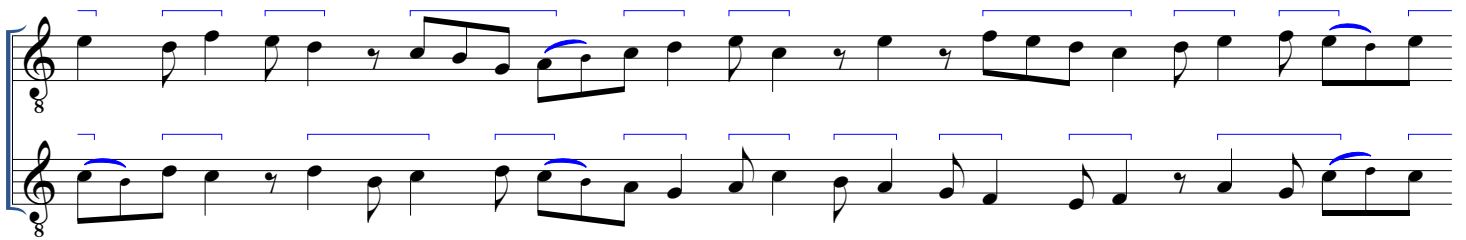

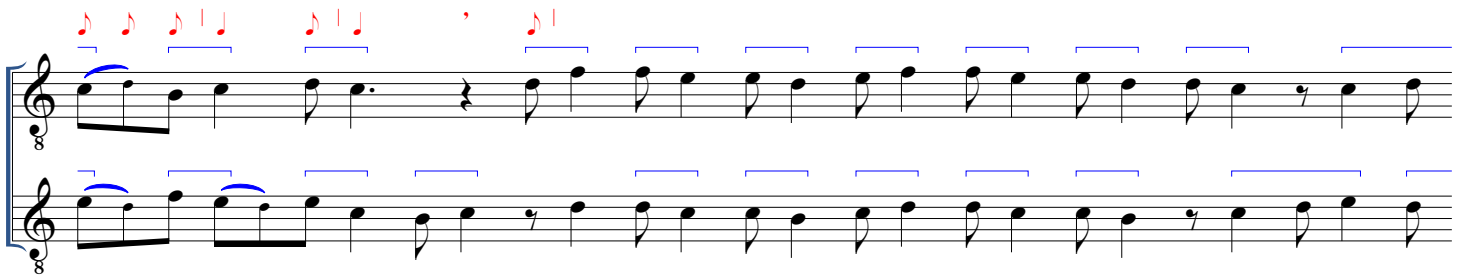

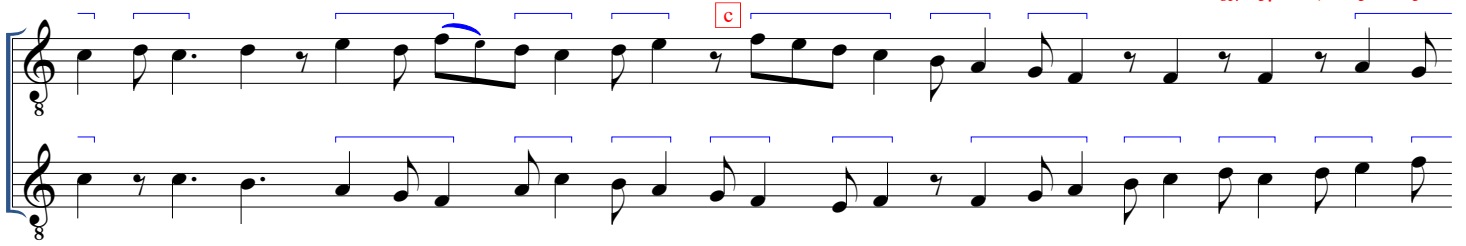

Third system of musical notation, consisting of two staves. The top staff continues the melodic line with blue slurs. The bottom staff continues the accompaniment.

Fourth system of musical notation, including lyrics. The top staff has the lyrics "o re - gi - [na] glo - ri - e" with phonetic annotations [re] above the first syllable and [e'] above the second. The bottom staff has the lyrics "o re - gi - [na] glo - ri - e" with phonetic annotations [f] above the first syllable and [d] above the second. Blue slurs are present above the notes.

Fifth system of musical notation, including lyrics. The top staff has the lyrics "ser - vos tu - os ho - di - e pi - e re - con - ci - li -" with phonetic annotations [i], [i'], [i], [h''], [e'] above the notes. The bottom staff has the lyrics "ser - vos tu - os ho - di - e pi - e re - con - ci - li -" with phonetic annotations [h], [h'], [h], [d] above the notes. Blue slurs are present above the notes.

Sixth system of musical notation, consisting of two staves. The top staff continues the melodic line with blue slurs. The bottom staff continues the accompaniment.

or:

PIA MATER GRATIE

Conductus (J18/268)

F, f. 331 (7,71)

I Pia mater gratie, pia vena venie, pia regis filia; O regina glorie, servos tuos hodie pie reconcilia.	Merciful mother of grace, merciful conduit of forgiveness, merciful daughter of the king; O queen of glory, 5 mercifully reconcile your servants on this day.
--	--

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 71, f. 331r: a2; Strophe I, complete; unique setting of text and music. The small hole in the leaf in the top staff of f. 331r, system V, over lines 5,2 (“tuos”) seems not to have resulted in the loss of any music. The following work in F-7, Celorum porta (J19/55), shares several characteristics with Pia mater gratie; see the separate discussion of this piece as well as the general remarks on the music below. This is the first work in F-7 not to begin at the left margin of the system. This type of placement happens with only 12 pieces within F-7.¹

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: This short poem presents a collection of standard Marian attributes that closes conventionally with an appeal for action on the part of the Virgin.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 4,2: F: regi, restored by conjecture; this reading in the unique source is retained in Anderson’s edition (NDRC, 5:xiii, 30) even though the rest of the poem is isosyllabic (7pp) and the musical setting provides for the inclusion of the additional syllable of “regina,” based on way the poetic lines are underlaid to the music of the cum littera segments elsewhere in the poem. Admittedly, the reading in F could be retained as it is, somewhat awkwardly, in Anderson’s translation, but all the previous reasons, plus the strictly Marian context of the earlier part of the poem suggest the reading adopted above is preferable.

MUSIC: General remarks: Pia mater gratie is one of only nine conductus within the main Parisian sources that has a final on f, whether with b-flat sigs or not; all but three of these, moreover, are Marian.² One of these pieces, Celorum porta (J19/55), also transmitted only in F, follows Pia mater in the MS. The two works additionally share ornate musical settings with extensive caudae, and both have relatively brief (but differently constructed) texts in comparison to the richness of their music. One should further consult the conductus Porta ¹All such instances include Pia mater gratie (J18/268 – at F-7,71), Superne lux gloria (J21/341– at F-7,76), Age penitentiam (H31/11 – 7,82), O crux ave (H4/230 – 7,86), Frater eniordanus (J36/131 – 7,109), Clavus pungens (J39/36 – 7,112), Gloria sit soli deo (J43/146 – 7,117), Ave nobilis venerabilis (J46/35 – 7,120) and Helysei manubrio (I35/153 – 7,121), which follow each other, Ave maris stella ave (J53/34 – 7,128), Circa mundi vesperam (J54/63 – 7,129), and Christi miles Christo (J55/58 – 7,130). The last three are also contiguous and close out the fascicle, followed by six otherwise empty leaves ruled for music.

²The nine conductus in F, W1, W2, and Ma with f finals are: Ave tuos benedic (J49,O22/38), Philip the Chancellor’s Ave virgo virginum verbi (F16, P46/39), Celorum porta (J19/55), O Maria stella maris lux (K71/238), Pia mater gratie (J18/268), Porta salutis ave (I2/269), Adiuva nos deus (J4/9), Fons (or Flos) preclusus (K72/129, perhaps by Peter of Blois), and Philip’s Si vis vera frui luce (K40/329). The final three pieces in this list are the non-Marian ones.

salutis ave (I2/269), at F-7,116, which also presents textual and musical characteristics common to Pia mater and Celorum porta. Motivic profusion: Like Celorum porta, the setting of Pia mater gratie features many short melodic motives repeated in and among its caudae; some of the more significant ones are signaled by boxed letters over the staves in the transcription, but many other such gestures could also be cataloged. It seems notable that the opening cauda ends with the same 4L phrases in both parts that appear earlier in the melisma at L5. Likewise, the cauda in the middle of the piece (following line 3) closes with the same music that ends the final cauda, just prior to the concluding punctus organi. There is, furthermore, a striking successive reiteration of musical figures within the cum littera setting of lines 5-6 (labeled in the score as “h,” “i,” and their variables), and short instances of canon appear in both the opening and final caudae (see the remarks on the music of these sections below). Also, most of the cadences within the cum littera sections show repeated figures (labeled as “d” and “e,” with variables), resulting in some very minor instances of syllabic/melismatic identity. Syllabic/melismatic identity: Among the numerous repeated motives that occur throughout this piece are two short, five-note (2li,2li,si) formulaic cadential gestures that are also seen in a host of other pieces, and which here occur in the two cum littera sections in this piece. These motives are marked above the staves in the score with a boxed “d” or “e,” along with any variables. The correspondences are very minor and scarcely worth mentioning, as the only real difference here between the “syllabic” and “melismatic” versions of the figures depends on whether they are set to three syllables (as in no. 1.) as opposed to two (as in nos. 1a.-1c.): 1. D of “gratie” (l. 1) – dc,cb,c = 1a. TD (transposed) of caud “[fi]lia” (l. 3) – gf,fe,f (T); ba,ag,f (D) = 1b. TD of “[glo]rie” (l. 4) – dc,cb,c (T); fe,ed,c (D) = 1c. TD of “[recon]cili[a]” (l. 6, last line of poem) – dc,cb,c (T); fe,ed,c (D). Opening cauda: TD: F: a short canon of 4L begins in the D at L36 (marked as “c” in the score), followed 4L later by the T. Final cauda: TD: F: note the brief canon of 4L (marked as “j” above the staff) that begins in the D at L7, followed 1L later by the T. T: F: strokes after both the si=c and si=b at L16-17 are obscured by the following notational figures, as if the strokes were entered in error; they are om here. D: F: conceivably, the phrase that begins at L27 could be shifted to begin 1L later, with its closing stroke interpreted as a breath mark; this alternative rendering appears above the D staff.

CELORUM PORTA

Conductus (J19/55)

*F, f. 331v (7,72)

D
I
T

[Ce -

[Ce -

[Ce - - lo - rum

[Ce - - lo - rum

por -

por -

[por] - ta mun - do

[por] - ta mun - do

*Numerous short motives (including ones beyond those indicated here above the staves) are repeated throughout this piece.

fe - li - ci - ter
fe - li - ci - ter

or - or -

or - or -

- ta;
- ta;

| TD: syllabic/melismatic identity with opening of following cum littera section "eruat"

E -
E -

(o') (o'') (n) n

| TD: syllabic/melismatic identity with opening of prior cauda

[e] - ru - at a por - [e] - ru - at a por -

m [l] [p]

| TD: syllabic/melismatic identity between these two phrases.

- tis tu - a nos cle - men - ti - a
- tis tu - a nos cle - men - ti - a

(p') r q q mor - mor - t (t) (t') v w s (s) (s') u w

x u v x v'

v'' z y (y)

The image shows a musical score for two staves. The top staff is in treble clef and the bottom staff is in bass clef. The music consists of a series of notes, some with stems and some without. There are several annotations: a red box containing the letter 'z' above the first note of the top staff; a red box containing the letter 'k' above a group of notes in the top staff; a red box containing the letter 'j' above a note in the bottom staff; and a red box containing the letter 'j' above a note in the top staff. Blue brackets are placed above the first two notes of the top staff and above a group of notes in the top staff. A blue dashed line with an arrow points from the end of the top staff to the end of the bottom staff. The text '- tis.]' is written in blue at the end of the top staff, and '- tis.' is written in blue at the end of the bottom staff.

CELORUM PORTA

Conductus (J19/55)

F, f. 331v (7,72)

I Celorum porta, mundo feliciter orta, eruat a portis tua nos clementia mortis.	Portal of the heavens, born happily to the world, may your mercy deliver us from the portals of death.
--	---

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 72, f. 331v: a2; a unique source for both music and text; the single complete stanza amounts to two lines of metrical verse (see the notes on the text), with the beginning of the second line signaled by an uppercase “E.” The small hole in the leaf in the top staff of f. 331v, system V, over L11-13 of the cauda that ends line 1 (“or[ta]”) seems not to have resulted in the loss of any music. The previous work in F-7, Pia mater gratie (J18/268), shares a number of characteristics with Celorum porta; see the separate discussion of this piece, which recalls some of the information given here, as well as the general remarks on the music below.

Text only: none.Music only: none.Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: This short poem, showing conventional Marian attributes of praise followed by a request for intervention by the Virgin, constitutes a single leonine couplet, a metrical scheme of two lines in dactylic hexameter with a two-syllable internal rhyme, most often (as here) placed at the caesura and at the end of each verse.¹ The subject of Celorum porta may be either Christ or the Virgin, although the attribute of “porta” suggests the Virgin is much more likely.² 1,5: depending on the addressee, the mention of birth here would make this conductus suitable for either Christmas or, preferably, the feast of the Virgin’s Nativity (8 September).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 2,1: F: no variants. MUSIC: General remarks: Pia mater gratie is one of only nine conductus within the four main Parisian sources that has a final on f, with or without b-flat sigs; all but three of these, moreover, are Marian in content.³ One of these pieces, Pia mater gratie (J18/268), also transmitted only in F, precedes Celorum porta in the MS. The two works additionally share ornate musical settings with extensive caudae, and both have relatively brief (but differently constructed) texts in comparison to the richness of their music. One should further consult the conductus Porta salutis ave (I2/269), at F-7, 116, ¹Metrical conductus texts within the four main “Parisian” manuscripts (F, W1, W2, Ma) are Alma redemptoris mater (I23/13), Celorum porta (J19/55), Porta salutis ave (I2/269), and two textually related pieces uniquely transmitted in Ma: Salve sancta parens patrie (J58/317) and Salve sancta parens enixa (J57/316). In Ma, moreover, Salve sancta parens enixa is preceded by the conductus setting of Alma redemptoris. All these examples are in dactylic hexameter, except for Porta salutis, which offers a single elegaic couplet.

²See, for example, lines 1-2,2 of the liturgical Marian antiphon Alma redemptoris mater (I32/13), which appears in a polyphonic musical setting as a two-part conductus three pieces earlier as F-7, 69: “Alma redemptoris mater, que pervia celi / porta manes ...” (“Kind mother of the redeemer, you who remain the attainable door of heaven ...”).

³The nine conductus in F, W1, W2, and Ma with f finals are: Ave tuos benedic (J49, O22/38), Philip the Chancellor’s Ave virgo virginum verbi (F16, P46/39), Celorum porta (J19/55), O Maria stella maris lux (K71/238), Pia mater gratie (J18/268), Porta salutis ave (I2/269), Adiuvans nos deus (J4/9), Fons (or Flos) preclusus (K72/129, perhaps by Peter of Blois), and Philip’s Si vis vera frui luce (K40/329). The final three pieces in this list are the non-Marian ones.

which also presents textual and musical characteristics common to Celorum porta and Pia mater. Motivic profusion: Like Pia mater and Porta salutis, the setting of Celorum porta features many repeated melodic motives of varying length throughout its course; many of the more significant figures are signaled by boxed letters over the staves in the transcription, but many other such gestures could also be cataloged. Especially noteworthy throughout this piece is the exploitation of repetition through melodic sequence. Such a technique, as well as other types of identity achieved through transposition, is signaled above the staff by additionally enclosing the identifying letter of the motive in parentheses on subsequent, transposed appearances. Also seemingly structurally significant are the closely related gestures that conclude each line of the poem. Although they recall elements of the most common type of punctus organi used in other conductus, they also differ from such figures in a number of details, particularly the formulas using multiple pitches in the tenor and the gestures that lead up to the scalar descent of conjuncturae before the final cadential figures.⁴ Organal passages that occur elsewhere in the piece also depart notably from the stereotypes seen most frequently elsewhere among the Parisian conductus. Syllabic/melismatic identity: Two different melodic figures from this piece appear in both cum and sine littera contexts: 1. the TD of the opening 4L of the cauda on “[e]ruat” (line 2,1), which begins the second line of the couplet and is then immediately repeated with the voices exchanged = 1a. the TD of the following cum littera segment on “[e]ruat” (line 2,1), corresponding to the first cauda phrase. 2. the TD of “tu nos clementia” (line 2,4-6), which occurs just after the caesura = 2a. the TD of the first phrase of the following cauda on “[clementi]a” (line 2,6). In both cases these musical relationships appear clearly intentional and structurally significant enough to consider that these texted portions might be sung to the same rhythms as the cauda; this is how they are presented in the transcription, with the identities noted above the staves. For an analogous situation, see the remarks below on the music of lines 1,3-4. Also compelling in view of the metrical structure of the verse: if the text phrases are executed using the rhythms suggested by the caudae, it would belie any sense that the metrical values in the scansion of the poetry should govern their musical performance. Lines 1,3-4: the transcription of this series of sequentially repeated pairs of 3li figures undergoing successive voice exchange has been rendered in the transcription with specific rhythms, since the short cauda that immediately follows continues the sequential descent completely in the T and partially in the D. These relationships are akin somewhat to the instances of syllabic/melismatic identity in this piece. See the above remarks on that subject. Cauda on line 2,6: T: F: the first 5 notes (L5-L8) of the second phrase are 3 lower (gfe.f); the editorial correction results in a descending sequence in all the parts.

⁴For a study of the formulaic closing figure of the punctus organi that includes a description of its specific components, see Mark Everist, “Tails of the Unexpected: The Punctus organi and the Conductus cum caudis,” Musik des Mittelalters und der Renaissance: Festschrift Klaus-Jürgen Sachs zum 80. Geburtstag, pp. 1-35, Rainer Kleinertz and Wolf Frobenius, eds., Veröffentlichungen des Staatlichen Instituts für Musikforschung Berlin (Hildesheim: Georg Olms, 2010); and idem, Discovering Medieval Song, 137-143.

HAC IN DIE REGE NATO
Conductus (130/150)

F, f. 332r (7,73)

D
I
T [Hac]
Hac

b
a

b'
a'

[Hac] in di - e re - ge [Hac] in di - e re - ge

na - to. frau-de ce - ca de - so - la - to; lux il - lux - it ho - mi - ni na - to. frau-de ce - ca de - so - la - to; lux il - lux - it ho - mi - ni

d
c a - bra - he et se - mi - ni.
a - bra - he et se - mi - ni.

W1: differing cauda, see at end*

Quod
Quod

[Quod] pro - mi - sit vox di - vi - na; pro - cre - a - tur flos de spi - na, [Quod] pro - mi - sit vox di - vi - na; pro - cre - a - tur flos de spi - na, ro - ro -

mode 2

[ro]-re ce - li com - plu - en - te au - stro ter - ris in - flu - en - te.

[ro]-re ce - li com - plu - en - te au - stro ter - ris in - flu - en - te.

mode 1

hec est di - es lu - mi - nis. qua be - a - te vir - gi - nis e - di -

hec est di - es lu - mi - nis. qua be - a - te vir - gi - nis e - di -

- de - runt vi - sce - ra. quem iam ve - tus lit - te - ra pre - si - gna - rat do - mi - num.

- de - runt vi - sce - ra. quem iam ve - tus lit - te - ra pre - si - gna - rat do - mi - num.

Gau - de vir - go vir - gi - num.

Gau - de vir - go vir - gi - num.

quam fe - cun - dat sa - cer fla - tus.

quam fe - cun - dat sa - cer fla - tus.

un - de pu - er no - bis na - tus

un - de pu - er no - bis na - tus

In ro - sa ver - nat li - li - um.

In ro - sa ver - nat li - li - um.

nec ro - se no - dum re - se - rat. de - us cre - a - tor

nec ro - se no - dum re - se - rat. de - us cre - a - tor

o - mni -

o - mni -

o - mni -

o - mni -

- um.

- um.

W1: different cauda, see at end*

Per -
Per -

[Per]-sol - vens
[Per]-sol - vens

quod pro - mi - se - rat in na - scen - do rex ex - ce - dit
quod pro - mi - se - rat in na - scen - do rex ex - ce - dit

quam na - tu - re le - gem de - dit.
quam na - tu - re le - gem de - dit.

†W1: different cauda, see at end

Musical notation for the first system, consisting of two staves with various notes and rests.

et ful - - get in pro - pa - tu - lo de na - tu -
et ful - - get in pro - pa - tu - lo de na - tu -

- re mi - ra - cu - lo
- re mi - ra - cu - lo

nec iam a - strin - git sin - - gu - lis na - tu - ras de - us re - gu - nec iam a - strin - git sin - - gu - lis na - tu - ras de - us re - gu -

Musical notation for the fifth system, consisting of two staves with various notes and rests.

Musical notation for the sixth system, consisting of two staves with various notes and rests.

WI: x g g c a WI: x d v u

x w

- lis.]
- lis.

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*WI, f. 175r (166r), II: differing cauda for line 5,1

D [Quod]
D Quod

WI, f. 176r (167r), I: different cauda in mode 2 for line 20,1

D Per
T Per(solvens)

(continued)

(Alternative readings, continued)

†W1, f. 176r (167r), II: different cauda following line 22,4 (the start of the T and D, which corresponds to the beginning of the cauda in F, shows apparent omission)

a. in mode 1 throughout (with upbeat phrase following opening gestures in T and D)

| T: F: 2li,si | T: W1: b-flat sig squeezed in here to show clef change, corrects transposition error

b. in mode 2 throughout (although the opening gestures in the T and D appear to show mode 1)

| T: F: 2li,si | T: W1: b-flat sig squeezed in here to show clef change, corrects transposition error

HAC IN DIE REGE NATO
Conductus (I30/150)

F, f. 332r (7,73)

- | | |
|---|--|
| I Hac in die, rege nato,
fraude ceca desolato,
lux illuxit homini,
Abrahe et semini. Quod promisit vox divina:
procreatur flos de spina,
rore celi compluente,
austro terris influente.
Hec est dies luminis, qua beate virginis ediderunt viscera quem iam vetus littera presignarat dominum. II Gaude, virgo virginum,
quam fecundat sacer flatus,
unde puer nobis natus. In rosa vernat lilium, nec rose nodum reserat.
deus creator omnium. Persolvens quod promiserat, in nascendo rex excedit
quam nature legem dedit, et fulget in propatulo de nature miraculo.
Nec iam astringit singulis
naturas deus regulis. | On this day, with the birth of a king,
A light shone forth for mankind and for the seed of Abraham, forsaken by a blind deception. 5 This is what the divine voice promised:
a flower is to be begotten from a thorn through the dew of heaven raining down, as the warm south wind flows over the lands.
This is a day of light,
10 on which the womb of the Blessed Virgin brought forth the one the old law already predesignates as the Lord. 15 Rejoice, virgin of virgins, whom the sacred breath made fertile,
and from which a child was born to us. Within the rose a lily blooms, and God, creator of all things, did not unseal that rose's bud. 20 Completing what he had promised, in being born this king oversteps
the law he conferred upon nature, and shines out openly because of a miracle of nature.
25 For indeed God does not oblige natural properties with rules of their own. |
|---|--|

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 73, f. 332r: a2; Strophes I-II, complete, with the structurally different II indicated by the same type of capitals that signal the other divisions in the poem at lines 5, 17, and 20; all these segments are shown above by extra spacing. In F, the caudae opening lines 5 and 20 and closing line 22 differ from the WI setting; and the piece's opening and closing sections bear no signatures, in contrast to WI where b-flat signatures appear almost completely throughout. Thanks to the placement of the final text syllable, there is a small, staff-ruled portion of the last system that remains unnotated. Hac in die rege nato is the first work to be transmitted in both WI and F since Consequens antecedente (H2/68) at F-7,66; for additional details on the transmission patterns of this section of F-7, see the source report on F for the conductus Soli nitorem equori (J15/336).

WI, fasc. 9, no. 89, f. 174v (165v): a2; Strophes I-II, complete, with the internal division of Strophe I at line 5 shown by a sizeable painted initial; and also with a letter "g" at the beginning of Strophe II that is the same size, but shaped differently than other forms of this letter when it heads a word (thus possibly suggesting a capital). Similarly, the start of line 17 leaves space for a possible initial that was never entered, even though the existing text gives “in rosa” with no missing letters; while a further, third painted initial points out the internal division of Strophe II at line 20 (“Persolvens”). The caudae opening lines 5 and 20 and closing line 22 differ from the F setting (and are supplied here in alternative transcriptions); and WI features b-flat signatures in both voices almost consistently throughout, whereas the music in F opens and closes with sections without such signs. Hac in die rege nato is the last specimen of the Parisian repertory to be transmitted in the ninth fascicle of WI. It is followed by an apparently complete setting a2 of the Agnus trope Deus deorum (see AH,47:384-385, no. 419) that concludes f. 176v (167v), the final extant leaf of the gathering. Fascicle 10 of WI begins with f. 185r (168r), after a gap of eight now-missing folios, with a fragmentary transmission of the music and text from the end of the first stanza (lines 5-14) of Philip the Chancellor’s tri-strophic monophonic conductus Quomodo cantabimus (K25/296).

Text only: no such sources in the typical sense, although see the notes on the text below for the use of cento technique throughout this poem.

Music only:

The music of the first line (excluding the initial cauda) quotes both voices from the opening of the two-part conductus Hac in die Gedeonis (H26/149), line 1, preserved in:

F: fasc. 7, no. 42, f. 311r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete.

WI: fasc. 9, no. 71, f. 155v (146v): a2; Strophes I-III, complete.

Ma: fasc. 4, no. 7, f. 78r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete.

CH-SG 383: (Sankt Gallen, Stiftsbibliothek, Cod. Sang. 383) collection 2, no. 2 (no. 6),¹ p. 162: a2; Strophes I-III, complete.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Cento technique: This poem is formed nearly completely from lines drawn from other conductus, usually their incipits. The special nature of its text was heralded by Anonymous 4: “Est et aliud volumen de duplicibus conductis habentibus caudas ut Ave Maria antiquum in duplo et Pater noster commiserans vel Hac in die reg[e] nato, in quo continentur nomina plurium conductorum, et similia” (“There is also another volume of two-part conductus with caudae, such as the old Ave Maria for two voices, and Pater noster commiserans or Hac in die rege nato, in which are contained the names of very many conductus, and similar things.”² The following list gives any known or conjectured text sources by line number; tentative identifications are marked by question marks, unidentified ones by asterisks; both types of these questionable citations are given in quotation marks, as opposed to the italic type of the more literal references:

1: Hac in die Gedeonis (H26/149): as noted, the music of the opening line from this conductus is also quoted in both parts here. A similar verbal incipit is found in the conductus Hac in die salutari (J45/151).

¹Pieces from this MS are cited here first by collection and number within the collection, according to their appearance within the two series of Notre Dame conductus that appear within CH-SG 383 from pp. 135-144 and 158-176 (4 and 10 pieces respectively). These two groups of pieces are separated by a collection of Sanctus and Agnus tropes, some of which are also in WI, fasc. 10. The following number in parentheses then gives the enumeration of the piece according to the total tally of Notre Dame conductus within this manuscript.

²Latin text from Fritz Reckow, ed., Der Musiktraktat des Anonymus 4, 2 vols., Beihefte zum Archiv für Musikwissenschaft, nos. 4-5 (Wiesbaden: Franz Steiner, 1967), 1:82.

- 2: Fraude ceca desolato (G4/133).
 3: Lux illuxit gratiosa (201/H27).
 *4: “Abrahe et semini” (R43/-) – conjectural: see line 40 (the second line of Strophe VI) of Magnificat ... qui iudicat (H10/203): “Abrahe sancto semini”; as well as line 5 of the motet Deo confitemini (A3/87 – vdW 131/M13): “ut Abrahe semini”; the opening of the motet Ex semine Abrahe divino (vdW 483/M38); and lines 33-34 of the motet Serena virginum / Manere (A1/323 – vdW 69/M5): “Seminis / Abrahe stirps inclita.” See also the remarks for line 20, where a conceivable reference to Magnificat ... qui iudicat is also proposed.
 5: Quod promisit ab eterno (G6/295), possibly also quoted in line 20.
 6: Flos de spina procreatur ... misso rore (H29/127).
 *7: “Rore celi compluente” (R44/-) – unidentified.
 8: Austro terris influente (G1/26), possibly also quoted in line 15.
 9: Hec est dies triumphalis (H12/152).
 10-11: Beate virginis fecundat viscera (H15/43): this citation could also include Perotin’s monophonic Beata viscera (K14/42), although all the other known references are to polyphonic conductus.
 12: Iam vetus littera (H24/167).
 *13: “Presignarat dominum” (R45/-) – unidentified.
 14: Gaude virgo virginum (G5/139).
 *15: “Quam fecundat sacer flatus” (R46/-) – unidentified, although see Austro terris influente (already cited in line 8), lines 3 and 5 (“Flato sacro succedente ... fervet ignis sed fecundans”).
 16: Puer nobis est natus (H2/276).
 17: In rosa vernat lilium (H9/184).
 18: Rose nodum reserat (I1/313).
 19: Deus creator omnium (H11/89).
 *20: “Persolvens quod promiserat” (-/-) – conjectural: see line 39 (opening Strophe VI) of the conductus Magnificat ... qui iudicat (H10/203): “Iam solvens quod promiserat,” also similar to the incipit of Quod promisit ab eterno (G6/295) already quoted in line 5; see also the remarks for line 4, where Magnificat ... qui iudicat is again proposed.
 *21: “In nascendo rex excedit” (R47/-) – unidentified.
 22: Legem dedit olim deus (I21/192).
 23: Fulget in propatulo (H17/134).
 24: De nature fracto iure (I18/80).
 *25: “Nec iam astringit singulis” (R48/-) – unidentified.
 26: Naturas deus regulis (C7/214).

Textual notes: most of the symbols and references delineated here are treated more fully in the textual notes for the conductus they were drawn from; see these commentaries for more information beyond the brief explanations offered here. 1-4: Christmas is indicated in the first line as the liturgical focus of the poem. The light shining on mankind in line 3 is a customary symbol of Christ, while Abraham and his progeny represent the old covenant of Mosaic law now overturned by Christ’s birth.³ The deception in line 2 is Adam and Eve’s failed resistance to the temptation offered by the serpent in Genesis, 3, that brought on original sin. 5-8: God’s divine voice is channeled through the Old Testament prophesies of the coming of Christ. The flower is Christ, the thorn is original sin (see the remarks below for lines 17-19 for further flower imagery). The dew is a symbol of God’s power, and is also closely connected with typological symbols of the virgin birth of Jesus and with Christ himself; see the notes on the text for the opening lines of the conductus Gedeonis area (F15/143). The north and ³For some biblical citations that echo the language of this line, see Romans, 4:13: “Non enim per legem promissio Abrahae, aut semini ejus ut haeres esset mundi: sed per justitiam fidei” (“For not through the law was the promise to Abraham, or to his seed, that he should be heir of the world; but through the justice of faith.”); and Luke, 1:55: “Sicut locutus est ad patres nostros, Abraham et semini ejus in saecula” (“As he spoke to our fathers, to Abraham and to his seed for ever.”). There are similar expressions in Genesis, 28:4, and 2 Chronicles, 20:7.

south winds, respectively, serve as figures for the Devil and the Holy Spirit. 9-13: the “day of light” associated with Christmas continues the trope of Christ as illumination in line 3, while his predesignation as the Lord existed from the beginning of time and thus was inherent already in the Old Law. Such an assertion arose from the doctrine that Christ exists consubstantiality with God the Father from eternity, before his conception and incarnation on earth. For additional information on this point, see the remarks on the text of the conductus Sine matre genitus (I27/330), lines 1-2, and the references to other conductus given there. 13-15: the sacred breath that infused the womb of the Virgin is the Holy Spirit. 16: this verse additionally evokes the Christological prophecy of Isaiah, 9:6, which, in its pre-Vulgate rendering (“Puer natus est nobis, et filius datus est nobis” – “A child is born to us, and a son is given to us”), opens the introit of the third Christmas Mass. 17-19: the rose is Mary, the lily Christ (see the remarks above for lines 5-8 for more flower imagery); and although God did not unfold the rose’s bud that represents Mary’s virginity, he nonetheless chastely entered her womb to bring forth Jesus.⁴ 20-26: this final segment of the poem emphasizes the principal topic of the conductus Naturas deus regulis (C7/214), whose incipit supplies the last line of the poem. It contemplates God’s unique power to overstep the laws of nature, laws that he himself enacted and controls, in bringing about his incarnation in human form.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. Versification: the claim that there are two principal stanzas for this poem is supported by the fact that such a division segments the text into two equal halves, each of 13 lines with a significant syntactic break between them, although they exhibit different poetic schemes. The use of capital letters to separate the stanzas into smaller, unequal segments in F has prompted the extra line breaks in the conductus poem above. WI, though, contrasts somewhat with the disposition shown in F; see the details given in the source reports above. MUSIC: The relatively frequent instances of paired repetition in many caudae in this piece and in some cum littera sections (each signaled by boxed letters above the staves) are notable for restating the music of both voices, rather than just the T. Syllabic/melismatic identity: 1. the TD of “Abrahe et semini” (line 4) = 1a. the clearly similar TD in the first phrase of the following cauda on “[semi]ni” (line 4,3). The location of these correspondences articulates the first major syntactic division of Strophe I, and the cauda is followed by a large initial or capital letter in both extant sources. Differing caudae: WI shows divergent caudae opening lines 5 and 20 and closing line 22; these are supplied as alternative readings at the end of the transcription. Signatures and accidentals: the two extant sources show a rather unusual discrepancy in their deployment of signatures, with WI implying the use of b-flat sigs almost completely throughout, and F beginning and finishing with segments largely devoid of accidentals. F opens with no signatures until the b-flat sig in the T alone before line 3,3 (“homini”), which is cancelled by a system change prior to line 4,2 (“et semini”). A second b-flat T sig arrives before line 5,1 (“Quod promisit”) and is supported by one much later in the D at L33 in the cauda following line 6,4 (“spina”). The D then adds an e-flat sig prior to line 8,3 (“influnte”), which is canceled by the system change before line 10,2 (“beate”), just before the addition of an e-flat sig in the T ahead of the second syllable of 10,3 (“virginis”). A second e-flat sig arrives in the D prior to line 11,2 (“iam vetus”), giving both voice parts two flats until the e-flat sig in the T disappears after a system change before the second syllable of line 20,3 (“promiserat”). All remaining flat sigs are then explicitly canceled in both parts by natural signs preceding the second phrase of the cauda after line 22,4 (“dedit”). The rest of this piece in F has only one brief instance of b-flat sigs, this time for the closing line 26, where the D places its sign before its initial word (“naturas”), while the T gives it afterwards. These are both nullified by explicit natural signs – the last such indications within the piece – that preface the closing cauda of the work. WI, contrastingly, offers b-flat sigs in both parts, all the way through the piece except for the b-natural sig in the T before line 23,2 (“fulget”) through the first syllable of 24,2 (“nature”), where the b-flat sig is reinstated at the system change and remains to the end. E-flat sigs, meanwhile, appear in WI in the D before 8,3 (“influnte”), disappearing at the system change before the next word at 9,1 (“hec est”). A second e-flat sig arises in the D before 10,3 (“virginis”), and is canceled by a system change after the short succeeding cauda. The T gets its first e-flat sig

⁴See, for example, the opening lines of the quoted conductus Rose nodum reserat (I1/313).

before 12,3 (“vetus”), canceled by the system change before the last syllable of 13,1 (“presignarat”). It then reappears before 14,2 (“virgo virginum”) and is canceled at the system change before the last phrase of the following cauda. The D in W1 shows an e-flat sig before line 22,1 (“quam nature”), canceled about 8L before the end of its differently configured cauda following 22,4 (“dedit”) – see the alternative reading of the melisma given at the end of the transcription. After this instance, there are no further e-flat sigs in W1. Opening cauda: D: F: at L25, stroke erased, supplied from W1, which nonetheless shows differing details of phrasing at this point; in the subsequent repetition of these phrases, for example, W1 omits the rest strokes in both parts after the first note; these rest strokes in the repeated portion in F prompted the inclusion in the corresponding earlier D location. D: W1: at L45-L46: si,3C=d, cba, prompts the adopted rhythm. Line 1,3: D: F: 3C,2li=cba, bc over “di[e]”; W1: 4li=abc gives the more consonant rendering used here. Similar readings to the F version of Hac in die rege nato appear in the corresponding passage opening Hac in die Gedeonis as given in Ma, while CH-SGs 383 corresponds more closely with W1 at this point. Final cauda (closing line 26): D: W1: at L43-L48 this MS shows a slightly different reading of the melisma: the P of the 2li=cb is om, and this is then followed by 2si,3(2li),si=gg, ca, dc, bc, d; the variant pitches are shown above the staff for comparison.

NULLI BENEFICIUM
 Conductus (H7/229)

F, f. 334r (7,74): Strophes Ia, IIa, IIIa; WI, f. 117v (108v) (9,33): Strophes Ib, IIb, IIIb*

The musical score is presented in two systems, each with two staves. The top staff is labeled 'I' and the bottom staff is labeled 'T'. The music is in a single system with a key signature of one flat (B-flat) and a common time signature (C). The lyrics are in Latin and are written below the notes. The score includes various musical notations such as notes, rests, beams, and slurs. There are also some performance markings like 'a' and 'b' in red boxes, and 'h' and 'b' in blue boxes. The lyrics are:
 I: a. [Nu-li be - ne - fi - ci - um iu - ste pe - ni - tu - di - nis am - pu - ta - tur. b. [Si con-fes-sus fu - e - ris o - re fit con-fes - si - o ad sa - lu - tem]
 T: a. Nul-li be - ne - fi - ci - um iu - ste pe - ni - tu - di - nis am - pu - ta - tur. b. [Si con-fes-sus fu - e - ris o - re fit con-fes - si - o ad sa - lu - tem]
 I: nul - li ma - ius vi - ti - um quam in - gra - ti - tu - din - is im - cor - de si con - te - re - ris a - ni - mi con - tri - ti - o dat
 T: nul - li ma - ius vi - ti - um quam in - gra - ti - tu - din - is im - cor - de si con - te - re - ris a - ni - mi con - tri - ti - o dat
 I: - pu - ta - tur. er - go pre - sul con - fi - tens e - sto ve - re pe - ni - tens. vir - tu - tem ut sa - lu - tem ha - be - as ut vir - tu - tem te - ne - as T: - pu - ta - tur. er - go pre - sul con - fi - tens e - sto ve - re pe - ni - tens. vir - tu - tem ut sa - lu - tem ha - be - as ut vir - tu - tem te - ne - as I: qui - a nil con - fes - si - o la - vat cui con - tri - ti - o de - ne - re - li - ctis pri - o - ri - bus tu - am or - na mo - ri - bus iu - ven - T: qui - a nil con - fes - si - o la - vat cui con - tri - ti - o de - ne - re - li - ctis pri - o - ri - bus tu - am or - na mo - ri - bus iu - ven -
 I: - ga - - tu -] - tur.] - tem.]
 T: - ga - - tu -] - tur.] - tem.]

* T: Fauv has melodically different closing lines and different, shorter cauda ending on g; see at end

*See the observations on the music for lines 1-6 for information on the way the b-flat signatures are deployed in the opening of this piece.

II

D
 a. [Vir -
 b. [Tu -

T
 a. Vir-
 b. [Tu -

- tu - te non
 - um sit con -

san - gui - ne de - cet ni - ti sub ho - no - rum cul - mi - ne. cor - de
 - temp - ne - re con - temp - nen - tes et fo - ve - re mu - ne - re nil ha -

san - gui - ne de - cet ni - ti sub ho - no - rum cul - mi - ne. cor - de
 - temp - ne - re con - temp - nen - tes et fo - ve - re mu - ne - re nil ha -

mi - ti fo - ve - as in - nox - i - um re - pri - me fla - gi - ti - um su - per - bi et
 - ben - tes re - le - va - ta de - bi - les et ex - al - tes hu - - mi - les in te sit hu -

mi - ti fo - ve - as in - nox - i - um re - pri - me fla - gi - ti - um su - per - bi et
 - ben - tes re - le - va - ta de - bi - les et ex - al - tes hu - - mi - les in te sit hu -

*see note below about strokes

im - pi - i. su - pre - mi iu - di - ti - i me - mor; iu - ste iu - di - ca.
 - mi - li - tas cui mix - ta sit gra - vi - tas ut le - ne cor - ri - pi - as

im - pi - i. su - pre - mi iu - di - ti - i me - mor; iu - ste iu - di - ca.
 - mi - li - tas cui mix - ta sit gra - vi - tas ut le - ne cor - ri - pi - as pre - di - cans non clau - di - et se - re - ne le - ni -

pre - di - cans non clau - di - et se - re - ne le - ni -

*In W1, Strophe IIa, a stroke appears only in the T after “iuditii,” and only in the D after “memor.” Each of these marks from W1 is adopted in the score above. There may be some logic to the inconsistent presence of these strokes in W1 at these places. It is conceivable that in performance one might articulate Strophe IIa with some type of pause after “memor,” but, in singing IIb, pause after “gravitas” (corresponding to “iuditii” earlier in IIa), since there is no syntactical break for IIb in the corresponding place in IIa; in fact, if the performance is done as before there would be a pause in the middle of the word “lene” in IIb.

(e'')

(d'')

- ca.]
- as.]

- ca.]
- as.]

III

D

a. [Cu - i ma - gis com - mit - ti - tur; ab e - o plus ex - i - gi - tur. quid do - mi - no
 b. [Cum sub - ie - ctis ne per - e - as ex - em - pla ma - la ca - ve - as in sub - ie - ctos

T

a. Cu - i ma - gis com - mit - ti - tur; ab e - o plus ex - i - gi - tur. quid do - mi - no
 b. [Cum sub - ie - ctis ne per - e - as ex - em - pla ma - la ca - ve - as in sub - ie - ctos

re - tri - bu - is pro tot que ti - bi tri - bu - it? quod lac et la - nam ex - u - is trans - fun - de - re nam quan - to gra - dus al - ti - or cum gra - vi - o - ri pon - de - re

re - tri - bu - is pro tot que ti - bi tri - bu - it? quod lac et la - nam ex - u - is trans - fun - de - re nam quan - to gra - dus al - ti - or cum gra - vi - o - ri pon - de - re gre - gis cu - i con - sti - tu - it te pa - sto da - rem. Sed ca - ve ne cum tan - to la - ben - ti gra - vi - or la - psus da - tur ne de - spe - res si

gre - gis cu - i con - sti - tu - it te pa - sto da - rem. Sed ca - ve ne cum tan - to la - ben - ti gra - vi - or la - psus da - tur ne de - spe - res si

[b] [g] [f] [h]

ve - ne - rit; te di - stri - cte tunc con - te - rat ut rap - cri - mi - nis in la - tens pre - ci - pi - ti - um pes la -

ve - ne - rit; te di - stri - cte tunc con - te - rat ut rap - cri - mi - nis in la - tens pre - ci - pi - ti - um pes la -

[f'] [f]

bc - to - rem di -
- ba - - tur nam

h (i) (i') (i'')

- to - rem di -
- ba - - tur nam

[di] - stri - ctus iu - dex a - de - rit; nunc sus - ti - nens con - si - de - rat pec - ca -
[nam] ius - te pe - ni - tu - di - nis [ne - mi - ni] be - ne - fi - ci - um am - pu -

[di] - stri - ctus iu - dex a - de - rit; nunc sus - ti - nens con - si - de - rat pec - ca -
[nam] ius - te pe - ni - tu - di - nis [ne - mi - ni] be - ne - fi - ci - um am - pu -

- to - rem.]
- ta - tur.]

- to - rem.
- ta - tur.]

ALTERNATIVE READING:

Fauv, f. 7v^a: differing closing lines and shorter cauda for Strophes Ia and Ib, with contrasting final on g (note the exceptional bisyllabic treatment of line 10,2 ["cui"] in Ia in Fauv)*

la - vat cu - i con - tri - ci - o de - ne - ga - - tur.
tu - am or - na mo - ri - bus iu - ven - tu - - tem.

NULLI BENEFICIUM

Conductus (H7/229)

F, f. 334r (7,74): Strophes Ia, IIa, IIIa; W1, f. 117v (108v) (9,33): Strophes Ib, IIb, IIIb

- | | |
|---|--|
| Ia Nulli beneficium iuste penitudinis amputatur. Nulli maius vitium quam ingratitude imputatur.
Ergo, presul, confitens esto vere penitens, quia nil confessio
lavat cui contritio
denegatur. | No one is refused the benefit of a just repentance.
No one is accused 5 of a greater vice than ingratitude.
Therefore, bishop, be truly penitent as a confessor, because a confession 10 from one to whom contrition is denied washes nothing away. |
| Ib [Si confessus fueris ore, fit confessio ad salutem,
Corde si contereris animi contritio
dat virtutem.
Ut salutem habeas,
ut virtutem teneas,
relictis prioribus,
tuam orna moribus
iuventutem.] | If you should confess orally, the confession is made for the sake of salvation.
15 If you become contrite in your heart, the contrition of your soul confers virtue.
For you to achieve salvation,
for you to attain virtue, 20 you need to grace your youthful years with good conduct, leaving behind what went before. |
| IIa Virtute non sanguine debet niti
sub honorum culmine.
Corde miti
foveas innoxium, reprime flagitium
superbi et impii.
Supremi iudicii
memor. Iuste iudica,
predicans, non claudica. | With respect to high honors,
it is fitting to rely on virtue, 25 not on one's parentage.
You should indulge a harmless matter with a gentle heart and repress the disgrace of the proud and wicked.
30 Be mindful of the Last Judgement. Judge justly, preacher, and don't stumble. |
| IIb [Tuum sit contempnere contempnentes, et fovere munere
nil habentes.
Relevata debiles et exaltes humiles.
In te sit humilitas, cui mixta sit gravitas,
ut lene corripias
et serene lenias.] | Let it be your concern to despise the despicable, 35 and to favor those who have nothing with a gift.
Raise up the downtrodden and lift up the humble.
Let the humility in you 40 be mixed with gravitas, so that you chide lightly and soothe calmly. |

IIIa Cui magis committitur, ab eo plus exigitur. Quid domino retribuisti pro tot que tibi tribuit? Quod lac et lanam exuis gregis cui constituit te pastorem.	45 More is expected from one to whom more is entrusted. How are you repaying the Lord for the very many things he conferred on you? You are making off with the very milk and wool of the flock to which he set you up as shepherd.
Sed cave, ne cum venerit, te districte tunc conterat, ut raptorem. Districtus iudex aderit, nunc, sustinens, considerat peccatorem.	50 But do beware, that when the Lord does come, he then doesn't crush you severely, like a plunderer. He will arrive as a severe judge, but now, waiting patiently, 55 he is eyeing the sinner.
IIIb [Cum subiectis ne pereas, exempla mala caveas in subiectos transfundere, nam quanto gradus altior cum graviori pondere, tanto labenti gravior lapsus datur. Ne desperes si criminis in latens precipitium pes labatur, nam iuste penitudinis [nemini] beneficium amputatur.]	60 So as not to be undone by your charges, beware of passing bad examples onto your subjects, for the higher the step and heavier the weight, the harder is the fall one encounters in slipping. Do not despair if your foot slips into a 65 hidden abyss of sin, for no one is refused the benefit of a just repentance.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 74, f. 334r: a2; the piece begins at the top of the leaf, though not at the start of a gathering; Strophes Ia, IIa, IIIa, only (i.e., only the first versicles of each pair), with the second and third's initials in black-ink capitals and an additional such indication opening line 50, shown by the extra line break in the text above. No space is provided for further stanzas. The transmission of Nulli beneficium stands out in this segment of F by virtue of its more extensive concordance base; the other pieces in its neighborhood in the MS (F-7,67-76) are either unique or appear in only one other source.¹

W1, fasc. 9, no. 33, f. 117v (108v): a2; Strophes Ia-IIIb, complete, with the text of Ib entered in the right margin after the first system on (the unnumbered) f. 118r (109r), IIb inscribed on the same leaf in four separate divisions aligned in the right margin with the text entries of the third through sixth systems, and with IIIb entered similarly in five segments written out in the left margin of the next page, f. 118v (109v). The initials for all the stanzas use the familiar alternating plain painted letters of red and blue in two different sizes, with those of Ia and IIIa being larger and placed in the margin to the left of the system's writing block. This particular layout of the secondary versicles IIb and IIIb contrasts with the entry of residual strophes in nearly ¹See, for further details, the discussion of F in the source report for the conductus Soli nitorem equori (J15/336).

every other piece in the MS.²

Ma, fasc. 3, no. 21, f. 63r: a2; Strophes Ia, IIa, IIIa, only, with no beginning initial entered in the space left for it, but (rather unusually) including large, filigreed painted initials, alternating red and blue, respectively, for the other transmitted stanzas; no accommodations, as usual, for further strophes.

Fauv (F-Pn fr. 146; Paris, Bibliothèque nationale, fonds français 146 [Roman de Fauvel]), no. 24, f. 7r^a (Strophes Ia-b, only), 7r^c (Strophes IIIa-b, only): a1 (T), in mensural notation; neither the music nor text for Strophes IIa-b appears in this source. Curiously, the two extant versicle pairs (for I and III) are separated from each other on the leaf. Strophe Ia appears midway through the leftmost of the three columns on the folio, providing the music and text for Strophe Ia followed by the remainder of the poetry of Ib, with its first four syllables – “Si confessus” – also underlaid to music. The work is then interrupted by the musical setting of only the first stanza of Philip the Chancellor’s tri-strophic, through-composed conductus Rex et sacerdos prefuit (K49/308). This latter piece starts near the bottom of the leftmost column and continues into the third, rightmost column, thus skipping over the central column that here transmits only the text of the Fauvel romance proper. Following directly after the entry of two other text stanzas for Rex et sacerdos (ones that occur uniquely in Fauv and seem to have been crafted specifically for it), the music and poetry of Strophe IIIa of Nulli beneficium is given, followed by the residual text of IIIb to conclude the material written on f. 7v. As a result, the contents of the two versicle pairs (Ia-b, IIIa-b) of Nulli beneficium are entered non-contiguously, with each member of the pair headed by a filigreed initial, as though each pair of versicles is a completely different piece. The music for the first strophic pair has the melody of its final lines changed significantly and its closing cauda heavily abridged. This portion is provided as an alternative reading at the end of the transcription.

Text only:

CB (D-Mbs Clm. 4660; Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, lat. 4660 [Carmina Burana]), no. 36, f. 6r: text alone of Strophes Ia, IIa, IIIa, only. A sizeable initial, painted in red with blue-green tracery, opens Ia, and smaller, plain red initials begin IIa and IIIa, as well as lines 7, 50, and 53. The rubric “Item” (in red-painted capital letters above the first lines of the conductus text) refers two leaves back to the heading at the top of f. 5r for the conductus Non te lusisse pudeat (K47/223), three poems earlier (and the last one to provide neumes): “De ammonitione prelatorum” (“On the admonishment of bishops”). As with the surrounding works in CB, there is space above the text lines that might accommodate musical notation, but none is given here or for any other poem afterwards until f. 13v, supplied for the conductus Quod spiritu David prececinuit (L77/-).

OxAdd (GB-Ob Add. A .44), no. 81 (with “lxxix” entered twice in the right margin in two different shades of ink), f. 127r: text alone of Strophes Ia, IIa, IIIa, only, with capitals to indicate the stanzas. Rubric: “Bonum consilium. ut episopus sit vere penitens” (“Good counsel, so that a bishop may be truly penitent”).

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: General remarks: This poem is a relatively mild admonition to a bishop to observe proper behavior, especially when offering confession and penance to his flock. For other Parisian conductus that ²I have found it only one other time elsewhere in W1, in the presentation of the residual stanzas for A deserto veniens (J3/1, I29/1 – setting II of this text), beginning on f. 174r (165r).

address bishops, see my article “Chancellor versus Bishop,” particularly pp. 279-281,³ with reference to the monophonic conductus Non te luisse pudeat (K47/223), which, like Nulli beneficium, not only offers advice to a bishop but is also attributed by modern scholars either to Philip the Chancellor or Peter of Blois.⁴

Attributions and conjectured dedicatees: Nulli beneficium, transmitted anonymously in all its extant sources, has generated some contention as to its conjectured authorship. The most recent discussion of it by David Traill (based on its linguistic content, manuscript transmission patterns, and connection to the musical repertory of Notre Dame) argues for Philip the Chancellor as its poet, in contrast to the ascription to Peter of Blois offered by Peter Dronke and Carsten Wollin.⁵ If Nulli beneficium were determined to be by Philip, though, it seems not to belong to the series of works that I argue was prompted by the extraordinary naming of William of Auvergne (reg. 1228-1249) to the see of Paris during the contentious Parisian bishop’s election of 1227-1228.⁶ Other conceivable candidates for the specific bishop in question – again assuming that Philip is the author – could be his uncle Peter of Nemours, who occupied the bishopric of Notre Dame from 1208-1219, or his second cousin, Philip of Nemours, dean of the Paris cathedral chapter since 1227, who became the bishop of Châlons the following year (reg. 1228-1237). On the latter possibility, see the final point in the notes to lines 12-22, which comprise Strophe Ib. Versification: Set in the form of a sequence with three pairs of dissimilarly constructed stanzas or versicles, the full complement of extant strophes for Nulli beneficium appears only in W1, without an expected confirmation in the concordant, text-only source of OxAdd. Fauv, interestingly, does show that at least the secondary stanzas Ib and IIIb were known in Parisian circles in the early fourteenth century, but the presentation of Nulli beneficium in this MS is somewhat curious, as it divides the poem into two seemingly independent units and interrupts them with the insertion of a different song (see the above source report on Fauv). Hence, it could possibly be argued that the secondary versicles of Nulli beneficium may not have been widely considered as a part of the original poem. One other factor that may be significant in this regard is that

³“Chancellor versus Bishop: the Conflict Between Philip the Chancellor and Guillaume d’Auvergne in Poetry and Music,” Philippe le Chancelier: prédicateur, théologien, et poète parisien du début du XIIIe siècle, Gilbert Dahan, Anne-Zoé Rillon-Marne, eds., 265-306, Bibliothèque d’histoire culturelle du Moyen Âge, no. 19 (Turnhout: Brepols, 2017).

⁴For Non te luisse pudeat: besides the modern ascriptions to Philip by Dreves, Ludwig, and Traill reported below, there is a tentative modern attribution to Peter of Blois (ca. 1135-ca. 1212) by Peter Dronke (“Peter of Blois,” 326 – full citation: Peter Dronke, “Peter of Blois and Poetry at the Court of Henry II,” Medieval Studies, 38 [1976]: 185-235; reprinted and revised in idem, The Medieval Poet and his World, Storia e Letteratura: Raccolta di Studi e Testi, no. 164 [Rome: Edizioni di Storia e Letteratura, 1984], 281-339), and a more confident assertion of his authorship by Carsten Wollin, ed., Petri Blesensis: Carmina, Corpus Christianorum, Continuatio Mediaevalis, no. 128 (Turnhout: Brepols, 1998), 94-95, 330-337. The poem is printed under Peter’s name in the edition of his letters given in PL, 207: cols. 58B-59B, with indications there that its annexation to Peter’s letter 15 occurs in the presentation of these items together in GB-Lbl Harl. 3672 (f. 19r). The lyric is further ascribed to Stephen Langton (d. 1228) by a rubric transmitted with the poem in GB-Ob Bodl. 57, on f. 66v: “Documenta clericorum Stephani de Lanketon.” The Langton attribution has not been generally embraced – see Anderson, NDRC, 6:137). The modern ascriptions of Non te luisse to Philip the Chancellor appear in Dreves (AH,20:32; and AH,21:140-141, no. 200), as well as in Ludwig (Repertorium, 1/1:267 – full citation: Friedrich Ludwig, Repertorium organorum recentioris et motetorum vetustissimi stili, vol. 1: Catalogue raisonné der Quellen, part 1: Handschriften in Quadrat-Notation, 2nd rev. ed., Luther Dittmer, ed., Musicological Studies, no. 7 [Brooklyn: Institute of Mediaeval Music; Hildesheim: Georg Olms Verlagsbuchhandlung, 1964]), who essentially reports Dreves’s assertions on this piece and supports them, and Traill, “Philip and F10,” 244-245, who also sides with Dreves for Philip as author, and says, in discounting Wollin’s assertions, that the connections of this poem to Peter’s letter – such as the one given in GB-Lbl Harl. 3672 – occur in recensions of his epistles made after his death (see Traill’s “Philip and F10,” 245 – full citation: David A. Traill, “Philip the Chancellor and F10: Expanding the Canon,” Filologia mediolatina, 10 (2003): 219-248). See also, Traill, “A Cluster of Poems by Philip the Chancellor in Carmina Burana 21-36,” Studi medievali, ser. 3, 47 (2006): 267-285, at 274-5, for further assertions of Philip’s authorship of Non te luisse pudeat.

⁵For Traill’s claims on the authorship of Nulli beneficium, see his “A Cluster of Poems,” 281-282; the poem is also signaled as Philip’s in Traill, ed. and transl., Carmina Burana, 2 vols., Dumbarton Oaks Medieval Library, nos. 48-49 (Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 2018), 1:486-487. The differing, earlier opinions are offered in Dronke, “Lyrical Compositions,” 224-225; and Wollin, ed., Petri Blesensis, 94-95.

⁶See Payne, “Chancellor versus Bishop.”

the word “cui,” which is treated poetically as a bisyllable twice in IIIa but as a monosyllable in Ia and IIb, might suggest a different author or authors for some of the versicles (see the observations and variants below for the text of lines 10,2, 40,1, 43,1, 48,3). I leave this question open, particularly in view of the disagreements about authorship related above. Text repetition: Nulli beneficium is one of several Parisian conductus that begin and end with identical (or in this case nearly so) opening and closing lines. The works with this feature comprise Verbum pater exhibuit (E5/368), Celum non animum (E1/56), Leniter ex merito (E2/195), Hac in anni ianua (E6/148), and – as here – Nulli beneficium (H7/229) with its slight verbal changes necessary to conform to the differing rhythmical structures of its first and last strophes. Perhaps also significant is the observation that the first three poems listed above are transmitted sequentially a3 in F-6 as nos. 19-21, respectively. As a further curiosity, the very next work to follow in F-6, Cum animadverterem (I12/73), does not offer the exact same type of linear repetition, but it does behave in an related fashion by opening and closing each strophe with the same words. There is, though, an added wrinkle here, since the author of this poem runs the one verb that appears in each of these otherwise identical two-word lines through a series of different conjugations. For further information, see the remarks on the texts of all these pieces and the references they contain. Textual notes: 1-3: as noted before, this opening statement reappears with a slight recasting as the final lines of the poem (in Strophe IIIb), 66-68. 4-6: from all appearances, it seems that the ingratitude referred to in line 5,1 is that of a sinner who does not take advantage of God’s offer of redemption through confession and penance. In a formulation that likely goes back at least to Seneca’s De Beneficiis, 1.10.4 (whose precepts arise again in the language of lines 35-36),⁷ ingratitude is sometimes portrayed as the worst among vices, and the one that prompts all others.⁸ Bernard of Clairvaux (1090-1153) was particularly vociferous against ingratitude, even authoring an entire sermon devoted to it (Contra pessimum vitium ingratitudeinis – “Against the most evil vice of ingratitude” – Sermones de diversis, no. 27).⁹ Elsewhere, Bernard rails further against the severity of ingratitude in memorable terms: “Nihil ita displicet Deo, presertim in filiis gratiae, in hominibus conversionis, quamadmodum ingratitude, vias enim obstruit gratiae, et ubi fuerit illa, jam gratia accessum non invenit” (“Nothing is so displeasing to God, especially in the children of grace and in men of conversion, than ingratitude, for it blocks the paths of grace, and, where it should exist, even grace can not gain access.”);¹⁰ and again in terms of its obstacles to achieving salvation: “ingratitude est ventus urens, exsiccans fontem pietatis, venas misericordiae, et fluenta gratiae” (“Ingratitude is a chafing wind, drying up the spring of piety, the streams of mercy, and the rivers of grace.”).¹¹ 7-8: for further information on the practice of confession and the development of the various public and private forms of the sacrament of penance, see the notes on the text for the conductus Ego reus confiteor (H20/106); the topic is also mentioned in Age penitentiam (H31/11). The responsibility of priests to administer confession in an effective way became more important with the promulgation of Canon 21 of the Fourth Lateran Council of 1215 (“Omnis utriusque sexus fidelis”). This rule ⁷For further echoes of Seneca’s De beneficiis within the Notre Dame repertory, see the remarks on the text for the conductus Debet se circumspicere (I10/83), Frater iam prospicias (I31/132), Premii dilatio (E3/270), and Fas et nefas ambulant (F7/119), line 27.

⁸Seneca, De Beneficiis, 1,10,4: “Erunt homicidae, tyranni, fures, adulteri, raptores, sacrilegi, proditores; infra omnia ista ingratus est, nisi quod omnia ista ab ingrato sunt, sine quo vix ullum magnum facinus adcrevit. Hoc tu cave tamquam maximum crimen ne admittas; ignosce tamquam levissime, si admissum est. (“There always will be homicides, tyrants, thieves, adulterers, ravishers, sacrilegious, traitors: worse than all these is the ungrateful man, except we consider that all these crimes flow from ingratitude, without which hardly any great wickedness has ever grown to full stature. Be sure that you guard against this as the greatest of crimes in yourself, but pardon it as the least of crimes in another.”). The translation quoted here is from Aubrey Stewart, trans., L. Annaeus Seneca: On Benefits: Addressed to Aebutius Liberalis, (London: George Bell and Sons, 1887), 14.

⁹Bernard’s work is available in, among other editions, PL, 183: cols. 612-616.

¹⁰From Bernard’s sermon no. 2 for the sixth Sunday after Pentecost, “De septem misericordiis,” para. 1. The text is quoted from the version in PL, 183, col. 339D.

¹¹From his sermons on the Song of Songs, no. 51, para. 6. The text is quoted from PL, 183: col. 1027D).

imposed the practice annually upon all faithful over the age of discretion. 9-11: penance sought through confession cannot be achieved without prior contrition (see the remarks for lines 12-22, below). The priest therefore must affirm at the outset that his subject is contrite so that the confessor may “act truly as a penitent” (another way to construe the meaning of line 8). 12-22 (Strophe Ib): see Romans, 10:10: “Corde enim creditur ad iustitiam: ore autem confessio fit ad salutem” (“For with the heart we believe unto justice, but with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.”). The language of this biblical reference and that of the conductus poem resonate in several remarks by Thomas Aquinas on penance that may help clarify some of the language in this stanza. Based on his treatment of penance in the Summa Theologica (III^a qq. 86-90),¹² Aquinas considers penance to be both a virtue and a sacrament. Penance achieved sacramentally leads to salvation through justification.¹³ To complete the sacrament of penance, one proceeds through the successive actions of 1) contrition of the heart, 2) confession by mouth, and 3) satisfaction in deed.¹⁴ At least the first two components are reflected directly in the conductus text, although they are stated in reverse order. The initial act of contrition applies to penance as a virtue, not a sacrament.¹⁵ The eventual forgiveness that results in justification and salvation is the effect of penance as a sacrament, which begins with the oral act of confession.¹⁶ Thus, forgiveness through sacramental penance is never achieved without the prior inculcation of penance as a virtue.¹⁷ As a result, the conductus poem connects contrition in the heart with the “virtuous” division of penance (lines 15-17), while the act of oral confession is described as the means that eventually leads to salvation through the sacrament of penance (lines 12-14). As for the third element of satisfaction, it is conceivable that the actions included in lines 20-22 may refer to it, especially if the speaker in the poem is construed as someone offering advice to a relatively younger bishop. In this case the expression “youthful years” (iuventutem) would refer to present circumstances, rather than those in the past; even so, this last point is particularly speculative. 23-25: note the discussion of the worth of virtue over the status of family pedigrees in ¹²The translations of Thomas’s work quoted below come from the complete English rendering of the Summa Theologica by the Fathers of the English Dominican Province (Allen, Texas: Christian Classics, 1948 [1911]). This version is available online at http://www.logicmuseum.com/wiki/Authors/Thomas_Aquinas/Summa_Theologiae.

¹³Penance as a virtue is taken up in Summa Theologica, III^a q. 85.

¹⁴*Summa Theologica*, III^a q. 90 a. 2 ad 4: “Et ideo, licet peccatum perficiatur in consensu cordis, ad perfectionem tamen poenitentiae requiritur et contritio cordis, et confessio oris, et satisfactio operis” (“And thus, although sin is completed in the consent of the heart, yet the perfection of Penance [i.e., signifying the sacrament when capitalized] requires contrition of the heart, together with confession in word and satisfaction in deed.” See also ibid., III^a q. 90 a. 2 co.: “Sic igitur requiritur ex parte poenitentis, primo quidem, voluntas recompensandi, quod fit per contritionem; secundo, quod se subiiciat arbitrio sacerdotis loco Dei, quod fit in confessione; tertio, quod recompenset secundum arbitrium ministri Dei, quod fit in satisfactione. Et ideo contritio, confessio et satisfactio ponuntur partes poenitentiae” (“Accordingly the first requisite on the part of the penitent is the will to atone, and this is done by contrition; the second is that he submit to the judgment of the priest standing in God’s place, and this is done in confession; and the third is that he atone according to the decision of God’s minister, and this is done in satisfaction: and so contrition, confession, and satisfaction are assigned as parts of Penance.”).

¹⁵*Ibid.*, from III^a q. 90 a. 2. arg. 1: “Contritio enim est in corde, et sic pertinet ad interiorem poenitentiam. Confessio autem est in ore, et satisfactio in opere, et sic duo ultima pertinent ad poenitentiam exteriorem. Poenitentia autem interior non est sacramentum, sed sola poenitentia exterior, quae sensui subiacet” (“For contrition is in the heart, and so belongs to interior penance; while confession consists of words, and satisfaction in deeds; so that the two latter belong to exterior penance. Now interior penance is not a sacrament, but only exterior penance which is perceptible by the senses.”).

¹⁶*Ibid.*, III^a q. 86 a. 6 arg. 3: “Sed poenitentia in quantum est sacramentum, operatur in virtute passionis Christi, sicut et cetera sacramenta, ut ex supra dictis patet. Ergo remissio culpae non est effectus poenitentiae in quantum est virtus, sed in quantum est sacramentum” (“Now Penance, as a sacrament, produces its effect through the power of Christ’s Passion, even as the other sacraments do, as was shown above (62,4,5). Therefore the forgiveness of sin is the effect of Penance, not as a virtue, but as a sacrament.”).

¹⁷*Ibid.*, III^a q. 86 a. 6 ad 1: “Unde remissio culpae non fit sine actu poenitentiae virtutis, licet sit effectus gratiae operantis” (“Consequently the forgiveness of sin does not take place without an act of the virtue of penance, although it is the effect of operating grace.”).

the notes to the text of the conductus Nobilitas animi (J8/220), lines 1-3,1, with its classical reference to Juvenal, Satires, 8,20. 28-29: for a biblical injunction against the proud and wicked in the same breath, see Job, 40:7: “Respice cunctos superbos, et confunde eos, et contere impios in loco suo” (“Look on all that are proud, and confound them, and crush the wicked in their place.”). 31,2-3: see Leviticus, 19:15: “Non facies quod iniquum est, nec injuste judicabis. Non consideres personam pauperis, nec honores vultum potentis. Juste judica proximo tuo” (“You shall not do that which is unjust [iniquum], nor judge unjustly. Respect not the person of the poor, nor honour the countenance of the mighty. But judge your neighbour according to justice [juste].”). 35-36: for other admonitory conductus that treat gift-giving, see the notes on the text of the conductus Debet se circumspicere (I10/83), passim, and the pieces in its orbit; these are listed in the references given in the above notes to lines 4-6. 37-38: on exalting the humble, see, from the Magnificat, Luke, 1:52: “Deposuit potentes de sede, et exaltavit humiles” (“He has put down the mighty from their seat, and has exalted the humble”); and the analogous expressions in Matthew, 23:12; Luke, 14:11, 18:14; James, 4:10; and Job, 5:11. 43-44: from Luke, 12:48: “... Omni autem cui multum datum est, multum quaeretur ab eo: et cui commendaverunt multum, plus petent ab eo” (“And unto whomsoever much is given, of him much shall be required: and to whom they have committed much, of him they will demand the more.”). 45-46: on repaying the Lord, see Psalm 115:3: “Quid retribuam Domino pro omnibus quae retribuit mihi?” (“What shall I render to the Lord, for all the things he has rendered unto me?”) 47-49: note Ezekiel, 34:3, on pastors that plunder: “Lac comedebatis, et lanis operiebamini, et quod crassum erat occidebatis: gregem autem meum non pascebatis” (“You ate the milk, and you clothed yourselves with the wool, and you killed that which was fat: but my flock you did not feed.”). 50-53: on God as a vengeful judge, see particularly: Psalm 93: 1: “Deus ultionum Dominus; Deus ultionum libere egit” (“The Lord is the God to whom revenge belongs: the God of revenge has acted freely”); and Deuteronomy, 32:35: “Mea est ultio, et ego retribuam in tempore, ut labatur pes eorum: juxta est dies perditionis, et adesse festinant tempora” (“Revenge is mine, and I will repay them in due time, that their foot may slide: the day of destruction is at hand, and the time makes haste to come.”). See also the following conductus and motets by Philip the Chancellor: Deduc Syon uberrimas (G8/85 – a modern attribution to the poet), lines 23-24, 31-35;¹⁸ Quomodo cantabimus (K25/296), lines 13-14: “Quam tremendus veniet Deus ultionum” (“How dreadful shall be the coming of the God of vengeance.”); In veritate comperi / Veritatem (vdW 451/M37), lines 38-39: “Hanc vide, videns omnia, Deus ultionum.” (“Look at this, God of vengeance, seer of all.”). 59-62: the expression in line 59 (“quanto gradus altior”), or a close variant of it, often occurs as the first element of a frequently encountered proverbial phrase, whose continuations essentially adhere to the caveat: “the higher the climb, the harder the fall.” See, for example, entries 23583 and 23589, among others, in Hans Walther, Proverbia sententiaeque latinitatis medii aevi: Lateinische Sprichwörter und Sentenzen des Mittelalters in alphabetischer Anordnung, Carmina medii aevi posterioris latina, no. 2 (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck and Ruprecht, 1963). See also the conductus Celum non animum (E1/56), lines 13-16, for the metaphor of the unsteady footfall. 63-65: for the conceit of one’s slipping foot leading to misfortune, see particularly Deuteronomy, 32:35, already presented above in the remarks on lines 50-53. Also pertinent is Psalm 114:8: “quia eripuit animam meam de morte, oculos meos a lacrimis, pedes meos a lapsu” (“For he [the Lord] has delivered my soul from death: my eyes from tears, my feet from falling.”) and the similar language in Psalm 55:13. 66-68: as noted above for lines 1-3, this segment is a slight paraphrase of the opening three lines of the poem. The differences are explained by the varied rhythmical structures of the two strophes.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: Since WI is the source for the secondary versicles, Ib, IIb, IIIb, all its variants are collated here. 1,2: F: beneficium. The departure in this case from my typical practice of respecting the orthography of F was prompted by the wide citation of this poem’s incipit throughout most of the literature with the spelling “beneficium.” The same decision applies to the reappearance of this word in line 67,2. For a similar decision, see the observations on the opening line of the conductus Seminavit Grecia (I23/322). 6: W1: amputatur, repeating line 3. 10,2: “cui” is treated monosyllabically here and in 40,1. The opposite is the case with the treatment of the same word in 43,1 and 48,3, as indicated by the poetic scheme and musical setting. This causes a slight problem in the reworking of the final lines of Strophes Ia and Ib in Fauv, as the redactor provided an extra note for a bisyllabic “cui” in Ia, but left the closing lines of Ib as they were, with one syllable short in comparison. See the alternative reading at the end of the transcription and the observations below on the music for lines 10-11. 37,1: W1: “relevato”; an editorial emendation, as the imperative form seems called for here. 40,1: “cui” is treated monosyllabically here and in 10,2, as indicated by the poetic scheme and musical setting. The opposite is the case in lines 43,1, and 48,3. 43,1: once again, as in line 48,3, “cui” receives bisyllabic treatment; see the contrasting case in lines 10,2 and 40,1, in Strophes Ia and IIb. 48,3: F: cuius; from W1, treated bisyllabically here as in lines 43,1, but not in 10,2 and 40,1. 52,2: F: the syllabic division of “raptorem” follows the MS. 56,4: W1: pareas for the adopted “pereas” from Fauv. 60, 2: W1: graviore for “graviori,” with possibly a small corrective “i” written over the “e”; reading adopted from Fauv. 64,2: “latens” is the regular neuter accusative participial ending; the word modifies 64,3 (“precipitium”). 67,1: W1: “nemini” omitted – possibly as a result of an expectation on the scribe’s part that the poem should end just as it began – supplied from Fauv. 67,2: F: beneficium; see the explanation for the adopted reading in the variants reported for line 1,2. MUSIC: Accidentals: For the opening lines 1-6, the placement of accidentals is maddeningly inconsistent among the music sources (F, W1, Ma, Fauv). All redactions a2 show a b-flat sig in the D before the penultimate syllable of line 1,2 (“[benefi]ci[um]”), but none in the T for the entire first line. W1 prefaces the T of line 2 with a b-flat sig, though there is nothing for this voice in other sources until the b-flat sigs before the penultimate syllable of line 3 (“[ampu]ta[tur]”) in Ma. Both F and Fauv, though, show no sigs at all for their T until the second syllable of line 7 (“[er]go”). For the repeated segment of the T in lines 4-6, all MSS show b-flats in their D and T, except the sig-less Ts in F and Fauv. The deployment of accidentals for lines 1-6 in the transcription thus attempts to take these discrepancies into account and relies primarily on the indications in F, but performers should feel free to explore different options in the choice of which inflections to sing for these phrases. Through the remainder of Strophe I, there are further discrepancies that arise, but generally this segment favors b-flats in both parts, where applicable, with a notable high e-flat sig in Fauv (T only) before line 9,1 (“quia”) – not implemented here due to the lower e in the D in other MSS. But there are exceptions to this use of b-flats in W1 and Fauv. W1 leaves off the sig in the T at a system change at 10,2 (“cui [contrito]”), and then gives the D a b-natural sig prior to line 11 (“denegatur”). Fauv, meanwhile, cancels the flat sig via a system change on the penultimate syllable of the strophe (“[dene]ga[tur]”) at the start of its varied, shortened cauda at line 11 that ends, surprisingly, on g (this alternative follows the main transcription – see also the above observations on the text for line 10,2). The other stanzas are similarly complicated, although there is a tendency to favor b-flats throughout Strophe II and b-naturals in III, yet each source but Ma shows exceptions for certain passages. The decisions employed in the transcription favor the indications in F, yet resort to the advice of the other MSS when it is deemed necessary. Line 3,1: TD: the three parallel sevenths over “[ampu]ta[tur]” that appear in all MSS but for the minor exception in the D of W1 (see later), are unusual, but they do occur in a penultimate position, which often admits higher levels of dissonance; T: Ma has an erasure evident at the place of the 3C figure in question, but the music entered over it corresponds after all with W1, Ma, Fauv; D: W1: 1 of 3li=e at this same point. 9,1: T: Fauv: an interesting e-flat sig (not incorporated here) precedes “quia,” (=d,e), valid through the second syllable of line 11,1 “dene[gatur].” 10-11 and cauda ending Strophe Ia: T: Fauv: these verses and the following melisma are configured differently in this MS; they appear as an alternative reading following the main transcription. The ending lines of the stanza are changed melodically in Fauv, with an additional note for line 10,2 (“cui”) that sets the word bisyllabically, rather than as one syllable as in all other music sources. This causes a discrepancy with the text of Ib, which has to accommodate the added note (see one possible solution in the alternative reading). The cauda here in Fauv, furthermore, has been drastically curtailed and its final sonority changed to end on g, rather than the a in the T of all other sources. Line 11,1: D: W1: b-natural sig precedes “denegatur,” valid through L4 of the cauda opening Strophe II. T: F: has an additional siP=Pa as the very last note of Strophe I (perhaps added as a result of the elongated final at this same point in the D); it is not seen in any of the other MSS and is discarded here.

¹⁸*Deduc Syon uberrimas* (G8/85), lines 23-24, 31-35: “Vide, deus ultionum; vide, videns omnia Sed, arrepto gladio, scelus hoc ulciscere. Veni, iudex gentium, cathedras vendentium columbas evertere. (“See, God of vengeance; see, seer of all Now, with sword unsheathed, avenge this wickedness. Come, judge of nations, upend the stools of the dove-sellers.”).

Lines 23-32 (Strophe IIa): rather a breathless stanza in terms of executing its cum littera sections: F, as indicated by the bracketed strokes in the transcription, has very few divisiones. W1 gives occasional and inconsistent strokes as reported below; it is the source for the ones in the transcription that do not appear in F. Ma shows absolutely no strokes throughout all of Strophe II (including the closing cauda), except for some divisiones syllabarum before and after the very last note of the cauda's D (neither in F nor in this transcription). Fauv: entire music and text of Strophes IIa-b never included; IIIa-b transmitted after the intervention of another piece (see the source report on Fauv, above). 27,1: TD: W1: strokes follow “foveas.” 27,1: D: F; erased stroke follows a of “[innoxi]um,” not employed here; W1: stroke present, not used here. 28,2: T: W1: stroke follows “flagitium”; F: stroke in TD. 30,2: W1: stroke follows “iuditii” in T only with none in the D and with no preceding P (although a P does occur in the D); this is adopted here. For possible explanation see the following remarks for line 31,1. 31,1: W1: stroke follows “memor” in the D only with none in the T, also adopted here. There may be some logic to the inconsistent presence of the strokes in W1 for these places in lines 30 and 31. It is conceivable that in performance one might articulate line 30 with some type of pause after “memor” in Strophe IIa, but, in singing IIb, pause after “gravitas” for line 40 (corresponding to “iuditii” in line 30,2, earlier in IIa), since there is no syntactical break for IIb in the corresponding place in IIa; in fact, if the performance is done as before there would be a pause in the middle of the word “lene” in IIb. Both inconsistent indications, therefore, are left here, following W1, to allow for this possibility of interpretation. 31,3: D: W1: stroke follows “iudica,” as in F. Cauda closing Strophe II (line 32,2): TD: W1: strokes follow syllable on “[clau]di[ca],” the first pitches of the cauda, employed in the transcription as bracketed breath marks; D: F: an erased stroke follows the 2li=df at L4-L5; om in transcription. Strophe III: unlike Strophe II, there is a bit more consistency among the sources where strokes are concerned. Here the presence or absence of strokes is noted when the usage differs from the transcription, which follows F. 43,3: D: W1, Ma, Fauv: stroke follows “committitur”; none in F. 44,4: T: F, Ma, Fauv: g over “[exi]gi[tur]”; adopted f from W1; T: Fauv, D: W1: stroke(s) after “exigitur.” 46,5: TD: Ma: no strokes follow “tribuit”; D: F: d, c for c, d over “[tri]buit”; corrected after W1, Ma. 48,3: T: Fauv: stroke follows “constituit.” Cauda on line 49,2 (“pastorem”): the later cauda at line 52,2 (“raptorem”) begins and ends with the same figures that make up the entire brief melisma here (marked in the score as “f,” “g,” “h”). Line 50,5: TD: W1: strokes follow “venerit”; D: F: erased stroke follows; none in Ma, Fauv. 51,2: D: F: 2 lower for “di[stricte]” =baP; adopted reading from W1, Ma; D not in Fauv. 51,4: TD: W1, Fauv: strokes after “conterat”; none in F, Ma; T: W1, Fauv: d for the a present in F, Ma over “[conte]rat.” 52,1: T: F: note a om over “ut [raptorem]”; supplied from W1, Ma, Fauv. Cauda on line 52,2 (“raptorem”): opens and closes with the same notational figures that make up the entire earlier cauda on line 49,2 (“pastorem”), q.v. Cauda on 53,1 (“di[strictus]”): D: F: at L4 the ficta suggestion comes from a b-flat sig in force at this point in W1, not in Ma, D absent in Fauv; at the very end of the this same melisma: the siP, 2li=fP, ga is om in F; taken from W1 (= Ma, but without the P); D not in Fauv. Line 53,3: TD: W1: strokes follow “aderit”; none in F, Ma, Fauv. 54,2: T: W1: stroke follows “sustinens”; none in F, Ma, Fauv. 55,1: TD: W1: strokes follow “considerat”; none in F, Ma, Fauv.

MANNA MENTIS DAT REFECTIONEM

Conductus (J20/204)

F, f. 335r (7,75)

I

D [Man -

T Man -

[Man] - na men - tis dat re - fe - cti - o - nem.

[Man] - na men - tis dat re - fe - cti - o - nem.

ta - bu - le le - gem. vir - ga cor - re - cti - o - nem.

ta - bu - le le - gem. vir - ga cor - re - cti - o - nem.

hec ar - cha cor - dis ge - ras. hec

hec ar - cha cor - dis ge - ras. hec

[d] [d']

[c] [c1]

(d')

(c2)

(c3)

[hec] o - re pro - fe - ras qui scri - ptu - ras

[hec] o - re pro - fe - ras qui scri - ptu - ras

re -

re -

Mode 1

Mode 2

Mode 1

- se -

- se - or: - ras.]

- ras.

MANNA MENTIS DAT REFECTIONEM

Conductus (J20/204)

F, f. 335r (7,75)

- | | |
|--|---|
| I Manna mentis dat refectionem,
tabule legem, virga correctionem.
Hec archa cordis geras;
hec ore proferas,
qui scripturas reseras. | The manna offers refreshment of the mind, the tables provide the law, the staff furnishes correction. 3 Hold these things in the ark of your heart and carry them out in your words, you who unlock the scriptures. |
|--|---|

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 75, f. 335r: a2; Strophe I (5 lines), complete, with no provisions for further text; unique text and musical setting.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1-3: This poem offers moralistic interpretations of the various materials preserved within the biblical Ark of the Covenant and proposes them as qualities a good scriptural exegete should cultivate. Thus, the poem itself presents an exegetical reading, since interpreting the scriptures moralistically was one component of the so-called “four senses” of scripture: literal/historical, allegorical/typological, moral/tropological, and spiritual/anagogical.¹ For biblical references to the contents of the Ark, which included the stone tables of the commandments,² Moses’ book of the law (i.e., the Pentateuch or Torah),³ Aaron’s flowering staff,⁴ and a golden jar with some of the holy manna given to the Israelites during their exodus from Egypt,⁵ see ¹The four senses were often condensed into a mnemonic couplet of rhyming dactylic pentameters: “littera gesta docet, quid credas allegoria / moralis quid agas, quo tendas anagogia” (“the literal [sense] teaches events, the allegorical what you believe, / the moral how you should act, the anagogic for what you should strive.”). This saying is often attributed to the later thirteenth-century exegete Augustine of Dacia (see his Rotulus pugillaris, Angelus Walz, ed. [Rome: Pont. Institutum. “Angelicum,” 1929], 259), but its roots reach back to Augustine of Hippo in his De Genesi ad litteram (I.1.1 – the text cited here comes from PL, 34: col. 417): “In Libris autem omnibus sanctis intueri oportet quae ibi aeterna intimentur, quae facta narrentur, quae futura praenuntientur, quae agenda praecipiantur vel moneantur” (“In all the holy Books, it is necessary to consider what are the eternal things they reveal, what deeds they relate, what future things they predict, and what things they direct or advise be done.”).

²Exodus, 24:12: “Dixit autem Dominus ad Moysen: Ascende ad me in montem, et esto ibi: daboque tibi tabulas lapideas, et legem, ac mandata quae scripsi: ut doceas eos” (“And the Lord said to Moses: Come up to me into the mount, and be there: and I will give you tables of stone, and the law, and the commandments which I have written: that you may teach them.”).

³See, in addition to Deuteronomy, 31:24-26, given below, Deuteronomy 31: 9-11: “Scripsit itaque Moyses legem hanc, et tradidit eam sacerdotibus filiis Levi, qui portabant arcam foederis Domini, et cunctis senioribus Israel. Praecipitque eis, dicens: Post septem annos, anno remissionis, in solemnitate tabernaculorum, convenientibus cunctis ex Israel, ut appareant in conspectu Domini Dei tui in loco quem elegerit Dominus, leges verba legis hujus coram omni Israel, audientibus eis” (“And Moses wrote this law, and delivered it to the priests the sons of Levi, who carried the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and to all the ancients of Israel. And he commanded them, saying: After seven years, in the year of remission, in the feast of tabernacles, when all Israel come together, to appear in the sight of the Lord thy God in the place which the Lord shall choose, thou shalt read the words of this law before all Israel, in their hearing.”).

⁴Numbers, 17:8: “Sequenti die regressus invenit germinasse virgam Aaron in domo Levi: et turgentibus gemmis eruperant flores, qui, foliis dilatatis, in amygdalas deformati sunt” (“He [Moses] returned on the following day, and found that the rod of Aaron for the house of Levi, was budded: and that the buds swelling it had bloomed blossoms, which spreading the leaves, were formed into

Deuteronomy, 31:24-26,⁶ along with Hebrews, 9:4.⁷ This inclusivity of the contents is countered, however, by 1 Kings, 8:9, which says that, at least by the time of the building of the temple of Solomon, the Ark contained only the stone tables of the commandments.⁸ Echoes of the moral qualities of the materials as shown in the conductus text also arise in a letter (dated 14 November 1210) of Pope Innocent III to Adolphus of Altena (c. 1157-15 April 1220), the former archbishop of Cologne (reg. 1193-July 19, 1205), in PL, vol. 216, col. 316B (italics mine): “Sacra quippe Scriptura docente, didicimus quod in arca foederis Domini cum tabulis legis virga continebatur et manna; quoniam in pectore summi pontificis, quod per arcam foederis designatur, cum scientia legis divinae debet virga correctionis et manna dulcedinis contineri ...” (“As you see from the teaching of holy scripture, we learned that in the Ark of the Covenant of our Lord, along with the tables of the law, was contained [Aaron’s] rod and manna; since in the breast of the supreme pontiff, which is represented by the Ark of the Covenant, there should be contained the rod of correction and the manna of sweetness along with the knowledge of divine law ...”). Adolphus went against the wishes of Innocent III when he crowned Philip, the Duke of Swabia, as king of Germany and of the Romans in Aachen on 6 January 1205. This event laid the foundation for Philip to be crowned Emperor. But Innocent was opposed to this outcome and excommunicated and deposed Adolphus on July 19 of that same year. The erstwhile bishop then capitulated to the pope and was allowed to serve as an auxiliary bishop in Cologne, but forfeited his earlier rank. These political issues are not necessarily directly relevant to Manna mentis, but they do seem applicable to a conductus by Philip the Chancellor that refers to further developments in the struggle (ca. 1209-1211?), see his Rex et sacerdos prefuit (K49/308).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. The rhythmic structure of this short poem is rather irregular (10p/12p/7p/6pp/7p), yet it seems not to be cast in metrical verse. MUSIC: General remarks: Rather striking for this piece with a g final, is the observation that, beginning with the cauda over line 4,1 (“hec [ore]”) up to the phrase that directly precedes the closing punctus organi, nearly every cadence within the two voices in each of the melismatic sections of Manna mentis concludes on a unison c, and there are no exceptions whatsoever to this convention for any phrases where T and D rest together. Given their prominence in the caudae, it thus seems curious that no c cadences appear in any of the other parts of the piece, either the opening cauda or any of the cum littera sections. Rhythmic modes: the ligatures in this unique setting recommend readings in the iambic rhythmic modes 3 and 2 throughout, except for the ninth and eleventh phrases in the final cauda, which suggest the first mode. Elsewhere, frequent repeated notes allow for the possibility of mode 1 readings for several phrases, but details of the ligation still suggest that an iambic interpretation is more probable overall.

almonds.”).

⁵See Exodus, 16, especially 16:33: “Dixitque Moyses ad Aaron: ‘Sume vas unum, et mitte ibi man, quantum potest capere gomor, et repone coram Domino ad servandum in generationes vestras’ ” (“And Moses said to Aaron: ‘Take a vessel, and put manna into it, as much as a gomor [i.e., ca. 2.3 liters] can hold: and lay it up before the Lord to keep unto your generations.’ ”).

⁶Deuteronomy, 31:24-26: “Postquam ergo scripsit Moyses verba legis hujus in volumine, atque complevit, praecepit Levitis, qui portabant arcam foederis Domini, dicens: ‘Tollite librum istum, et ponite eum in latere arcae foederis Domini Dei vestri: ut sit ibi contra te in testimonium’ ” (“Therefore after Moses had written the words of this law in a volume, and finished it: He commanded the Levites, who carried the ark of the covenant of the Lord, saying: ‘Take this book, and put it in the side of the ark of the covenant of the Lord your God: that it may be there for a testimony against you.’ ”).

⁷Hebrews, 9:4: “... et arcam testamenti circumtectam ex omni parte auro, in qua urna aurea habens manna, et virga Aaron, quae fronderat, et tabulae testamenti” (“... and the ark of the testament covered about on every part with gold, in which was a golden pot that had manna, and the rod of Aaron, that had blossomed, and the tables of the testament.”).

⁸1 Kings, 8:9: “In arca autem non erat aliud nisi duae tabulae lapideae quas posuerat in ea Moyses in Horeb, quando pepigit Dominus foedus cum filiis Israel, cum egrederentur de terra Aegypti” (“Now in the ark there was nothing else but the two tables of stone, which Moses put there at Horeb, when the Lord made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of the land of Egypt.”).

Line 2,4: T: the short passage separating the last two syllables of this word (“correctionem”) has been erased, with the possibility that the first obliterated pitch was a; editorial restoration. Line 4,1: D: a certain amount of material has been omitted from the first phrase of the cauda set to this word (“hec [ore]”), with no obvious indication in the unique MS that anything is missing; conjectural emendation. Final cauda: TD: F: note the extensive melodic sequence that occupies nearly the entire phrase in both parts.

SUPERNE LUX GLORIE
Conductus (J21/341)

F, f. 335v (7,76)*

The musical score is presented in a system of two staves: Soprano (S) and Tenor (T). The lyrics are in Latin and are written below the notes. The score includes various musical annotations such as brackets, slurs, and boxed letters (a, b, b', c, c', d, d', c, d', c, c'') indicating specific musical features or performance instructions. The lyrics are: [Su] - per - ne [Su] lux glo-ri - e cor-da fo - ve. men - tes mo - -ve tor - pi - das. sa - -na lan - -gui - -das. do - na fun - -de. flu-ant un - -de. gra - -ti - e ac ve - ni - e. -de gra - -ti - e ac ve - ni - e.

*Mode 3 or mixed modes 1 and 3 also possible for this cauda; see alternative readings at end. Other caudae here may also be rendered in mode 3.

re - nes mun - da cor fe - cun -

re - nes mun - da cor fe - cun -

re - nes mun - da cor fe - cun -

re - nes mun - da cor fe - cun -

- da.]

- da.

mode 3 or mixed modes 1 and 3 also possible for this phrase; see alternative readings at end

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*Opening cauda:

a. mode 3, both voices

Su

Su(perne)

b. mode 1 in T, mode 3 in D

Su

Su(perne)

Final cauda, L23 to end:

a. mode 3 in T, in D beginning at L30

(fecun) -

(fecun) -

- [da.]

- da.

(alternative readings, cont.)

b. mode 1 in T, mode 3 in D beginning at L30

S
8 (fecun) - - [da.]

T
8 (fecun) - - da.

SUPERNE LUX GLORIE

Conductus (J21/341)

F, f. 335v (7,76)

I	Superne lux glorie, corda fove. Mentis move torpidas, sana languidas. Dona funde. Fluant unde gratie ac venie. 5 Renes munda; cor fecunda.	Light of celestial glory, soothe our hearts. Bestir and heal our sluggish, feeble minds. Pour forth gifts. Let flow the streams of grace and favor. Cleanse our innermost thoughts; make fruitful our heart.
---	---	---

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 76, f. 335v: a2; Strophe I (6 lines), complete, with no provisions for further text, and with its opening blue filigreed initial beginning mid-system on the folio (rather than at the left margin), the second of only 12 times this happens in F-7.¹ This unique textual and musical setting fills up the remainder of the leaf (although not the end of a gathering). The following work, Deduc Syon uberrimas (G8/85), seems to mark a major break in the MS with a large historiated initial and a return to more widely transmitted pieces after a series of mostly unique works or ones with a fairly limited spread.²

Text only: none.Music only: none.Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 4,3-6: cf. Philip the Chancellor's organum prosula Associa tecum in patria / Sancte [Eligi] (K80/22 – vdW 706c/O27), lines 26-28: “Renes lustra; cor illustra unda gratie fecunda” (“Purify our innermost thoughts; illuminate the heart with the life-giving water of grace.”). 6: see Psalm 7:10: “Consumetur nequitia peccatorum, et diriges justum; scrutans corda et renes, Deus” (“The wickedness of sinners shall be brought to nought, and you shall direct the just; the searcher of hearts and reins [i.e., innermost thoughts, soul, or mind] is God.”); and the similar expression in Revelation, 2:23; cf. also Jeremiah, 11:20, Psalm 25:2, Psalm 72:21.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. Versification: There are various ways to interpret the line divisions of the text. In this case, in contrast to the presentations in Anderson, NDRC, 5:xiii, and on the CPI website, I have chosen to go with longer lines of seven and eight syllables with alternating proparoxytonic and paroxytonic accentual patterns. The result is a six-line stanza with the form 7pp/8p/8pp/8p/7pp/8p, where each even-numbered line is 8p and the structure of the first and last of the three couplets is the same. Except for line 1, whose indivisible 7pp length prompted me to choose longer dispositions for the other verses, all lines are separable through internal rhymes (4p+4p, 3pp+5pp, 3p+4pp); these are shown through additional horizontal spacing in the text above. MUSIC: Opening cauda: Although rendered here in mode 1, this section suggests the likelihood of an iambic mode-3 reading due to the 2li=ef figure that appears three times in the D (within L6, L10, and L14, the last with a plica). The second time this happens, the 2li is preceded by a si=a, and the resulting leap to the following e makes me question whether the 2li would have begun on the weak part of the

¹For a list, see the source report on F for Pia mater gratie (J18/268), at F-7,71, on f. 331r.

²See, for further details on transmission patterns in this portion of the MS, the discussion of F in the source report for the conductus Soli nitorem equori (J15/336).

beat, as in mode 1. Nonetheless, an iambic reading in both parts generates some uncomfortable dissonant seconds on b/c and then a/b, with the two 2li figures that appear in the T within L8 and L16, respectively. As a result, I have opted to present the entire opening cauda in mode 1 in the main transcription. This mode seems clearly to govern the rhythms of most of the rest of the conductus, beginning at the very least with the cauda of line 2,4, although any caudae that show regular series of si,3li ligature chains would be equally at home in iambic mode-3 readings. See the alternative versions of this cauda in mode 3 and in mixed modes 1 and 3 (which also avoids the dissonances resulting from a strictly mode-3 reading), presented at the end of the transcription for comparison, as well as the remarks on the final cauda, below. Organal passages: the relatively plentiful punctus organi segments in this work use motives and formulas also seen in sine littera contexts throughout the Parisian polyphonic repertory. Due to this, I have suggested some possible rhythmical realizations above the D voice that performers may consider – or ignore – in executing these passages (as well as others in the repertory at large). Lines 5-6,2: the T of this ornate cum littera passage suggests patterns of mixed L and DL values that sometimes recollect the ostinato rhythmic organization of a T melody in a clausula or motet; hence this entire portion, including the cum littera segment of line 5,3, has been rendered here in fixed rhythms. Final cauda: TD: F: the repeated-note passages that occur in the approximate center of the final cauda (at L14-L17: 4 b's in the T, 5 d's in the D), are by nature rhythmically ambiguous. Some slight possibility for clarification may be suggested by the reiterated notes in the D, which seem to show 3L,B,si in connection with the si,2B,si repeated-note series in the T. Hence, the choice of values used here continues the L,LBL,L pattern in the D – seen at both the start and end of this portion of the cauda at L11 and L19, respectively – throughout the entire phrase. It also assumes here that the T and D are rhythmically coincident. D: F: the si,2li figure=c,de near the end of the penultimate phrase in the T, beginning at L30 of the cauda, may indicate a switch to iambic modes 2 or 3 for the rest of the phrase, which would render the g/e sixth at L31 as a g/d fifth; however the b/c dissonance immediately prior and the f/d sixth that follow appear to be unavoidable no matter what the choice, so I have left this in mode 1 (see also the remarks above on the apparent dissonances that appear in the opening cauda if it is rendered in mode 3). Alternative versions of this particular passage – including a reading that mixes modes 1 and 3 – are presented at the end of the transcription for comparison. Final flourish: Anderson's edition (NFRC, 5:37) adds extra notes to the T (a,g) to undergird the closing figure in the D. This is, however, unnecessary, as this gesture is a cadential formula that occurs frequently, especially in organa and clausulae, where it is found both with and without T support for its final note (see, for just two examples of the latter case, the clausulae of F, fascicle 5, no. 64 [f. 153r, system V], Alleluia [unnumbered] [M10]; and no. 92 [f. 157r, system IV], In seculum 10 [M13]). Such a conclusion is perhaps especially fitting for a conductus setting like Superne lux glorie with its prominent organal passages in the cum littera settings of its opening three lines.

DEDUC SYON UBERRIMAS

Conductus (G8/85)

*F, f. 336r (7,77)

The score consists of six systems of two staves each, labeled 'D' (Tenor) and 'T' (Soprano). The music is in G-flat major (one flat) and 8/8 time. The lyrics are in Latin. Various musical notations are present, including blue brackets above notes, red boxes with letters (a, a', a'', c, d, cl, h, b) indicating specific notes or intervals, and blue dashed lines indicating slurs or phrasing. The lyrics are: a - bu - tun - tur re - gi - mi - ne pa - sto - ra - lis of - fi - ci - i.
 [De-] [a] [De-] [a'] [De-] [a''] [De] - duc sy - on u - ber - ri - mas. [c] [De] - duc sy - on u - ber - ri - mas. [d] ve - lut tor - ren - tem la - cri - mas. nam qui pro tu - is pa - tri - bus [c] ve - lut tor - ren - tem la - cri - mas. nam qui pro tu - is pa - tri - bus [d'] na - ti sunt ti - bi fi - li - i. quo - rum de - di - sti ma - ni - bus [h] na - ti sunt ti - bi fi - li - i. quo - rum de - di - sti ma - ni - bus [cl] tu - i sce - ptrum im - pe - ri - i. fu - res et fu - rum so - ci - i tur - ba - to re - rum or - di - ne [h] tu - i sce - ptrum im - pe - ri - i. fu - res et fu - rum so - ci - i tur - ba - to re - rum or - di - ne

*A reading in iambic mode 3 is equally possible for this cauda. See also the alternative readings at the end for the use of this music in the BD setting in StV.

a - bu - tun - tur re - gi - mi - ne pa - sto - ra - lis of - fi - ci - i.

II

Ad [g] [g'] W1, CaJ: [Ad] cor - pus in - fir - mi - tas

Ad [f] [f'] [c2] [Ad] cor - pus in - fir - mi - tas

ca - pi - tis de - scen - dit. sin - gu - los - que gra - vi - tas ar - ctus ap - pre - hen - dit. re - fri - ge - scit

ca - pi - tis de - scen - dit. sin - gu - los - que gra - vi - tas ar - ctus ap - pre - hen - dit. re - fri - ge - scit

ca - ri - tas nec iam se ex - ten - dit ad a - mo - rem prox - i - mi. nam vi - de - mus op - pri - mi

ca - ri - tas nec iam se ex - ten - dit ad a - mo - rem prox - i - mi. nam vi - de - mus op - pri - mi pu - pil - lum a po - ten - te. nec est qui sal - vum fa - ci - at.

pu - pil - lum a po - ten - te. nec est qui sal - vum fa - ci - at.

vel qui iustum eripiat ab impio

vel qui iustum eripiat ab impio

pre-mente.

pre-mente.

pre-mente.

pre-mente.

III Vi- Vi-

[Vi]-de [Vi]-de

deus ultionum videns omnia quod spelunca vispi-

deus ultionum videns omnia quod spelunca vispi-

-lonum facta est ecclesia quod in templum salomonis

-lonum facta est ecclesia quod in templum salomonis

ve - nit prin - ceps ba - bi - lo - nis. et ex - cel - sum si - bi thro - num po - su - it in

ve - nit prin - ceps ba - bi - lo - nis. et ex - cel - sum si - bi thro - num po - su - it in me - di - o. sed ar - re - pto gla - di - o sce - lus hoc ul - ci - sce - re.

me - di - o. sed ar - re - pto gla - di - o sce - lus hoc ul - ci - sce - re.

ve - ni iu - dex gen - ti - um ca - the - dras ven - den - ti - um co - lum - bas e - ver - te -

ve - ni iu - dex gen - ti - um ca - the - dras ven - den - ti - um co - lum - bas e - ver - te -

CaJ gives extended version of cauda, see at end*

j b j b

(n) m

- re.]

- [re.]

(alternative readings follow)

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*StrV, f. 280v (4,3): Benedicamus domino a3 (in modes 2 and 3; mode 1 also possible): TD of "Be-" = opening cauda of Deduc Syon repeated with voice exchange

| TDTr of "domino" = final cauda of O felix Bituria (E8/232)

(alternative readings, continued)

*CaJ, f. Fr (no. 14), II: expanded reading of final cauda

| remainder (up to punctus organi) added

DEDUC SYON UBERRIMAS

Conductus (G8/85)

F, f. 336r (7,77)

- | | |
|---|---|
| I Deduc, Syon, uberrimas, velut torrentem, lacrimas, nam qui pro tuis patribus
nati sunt tibi filii.
Quorum dedisti manibus tui sceptrum imperii.
Fures et furum socii, turbato rerum ordine, abutuntur regimine
pastoralis officii. | Zion, shed a surfeit of tears like a river, for those born to you as sons are acting as your fathers.
5 You have delivered into their hands the scepter of your authority.
Thieves and the partners of thieves, disturbing the rightful order of things, are abusing the leadership
10 of the pastoral office. |
| II Ad corpus infirmitas capitis descendit, singulosque gravitas
arctus apprehendit.
Refrigescit caritas nec iam se extendit ad amorem proximi, nam videmus opprimi
pupillum a potente, nec est qui salvum faciat vel qui iustum eripiat
ab impio premente. | The sickness of the head descends to the body, and a heaviness lays hold of each one of the limbs.
15 Charity grows cold and no longer extends itself to love of neighbor, for we see the orphan
crushed by the mighty, 20 and there is no one who may redeem or rescue a righteous man from a wicked oppressor. |
| III Vide, deus ultionum;
vide, videns omnia,
quod spelunca vispilonum
facta est ecclesia, quod in templum Salomonis
venit princeps Babilonis et excelsum sibi thronum posuit in medio.
Sed, arrepto gladio, scelus hoc ulciscere.
Veni, iudex gentium, cathedras vendentium
columbas evertere. | See, God of vengeance;
see, seer of all,
25 that the church has become a den of ghouls, that the prince of Babylon has come into the temple of Solomon and placed in its midst 30 a lofty throne for himself.
So, with sword in hand,
avenge this wickedness.
Come, judge of nations,
upend the stools
35 of the dove-sellers. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 77, f. 336r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with no provision or likelihood for further text, and with the beginnings of II and III indicated by the usual black-ink capitals. The large historiated illumination for Strophe I suggests a major division within the manuscript, as it is the first such decoration since Austro terris influente (G1/26) at F-7,31, and, like it, begins at the very top of a leaf that is not the start of a gathering. As with the previous decorated initial, such a division in the MS is supported by the transmission patterns of Deduc Syon, which return to a much wider set of concordances than those in the previous portion of F-7¹ and begin to exhibit more frequent multi-stanzaic, through-composed settings. Visually, the opening initial “D” of the poem is illustrated with a split-level scene, depicting at top a woman (presumably the grieving, personified Zion of the poem’s opening lines) sitting on a chair from which spring what appear to be curled branches of decorative vegetation on her either side. This image surmounts a scene in which a kneeling, tonsured, clean-shaven cleric is being fitted with what I suppose to be a bishop’s hat by a seated, mitred ecclesiastical dignitary with a beard. The kneeling cleric, additionally, seems to be holding or supporting a rather tall vase or bottle. Very thin curving red lines appear to be flowing or sprouting from both the top and neck of this bottle. What these red lines might signify is not altogether clear to me. The thin, horizontally aligned ascender of the letter “D” is composed of a winged dragon or griffin-like figure, whose head, connecting with the body of the decorated letter “D,” turns back from the left margin to face the woman in the upper portion of the initial. It appears to have a round object of some sort of in its jaws.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 75, f. 159v (150v): a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with alternating red and blue-green painted initials heading the stanzas.

Ma, fasc. 4, no. 10, f. 83r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, but with no initials entered in any of the spaces provided for them.

W2, fasc. 6, no. 2, f. 93r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, opening with a red initial decorated with blue tracery, and with the beginnings of II and III indicated either by a capital or an embellished letter.

CaJ (GB-CJc QB 1; Cambridge, Jesus College, MS QB 1), Fragment A, no. 14, ff. Dv-Fr (each leaf is reconstructed from various binding strips):² a2; Strophes I-III fragmentarily preserved, with a large red- and blue-painted initial for I decorated with tracery, while those of II and III are smaller, painted capital letters, colored respectively blue and red. The final cauda in this source, interestingly, is expanded by about 16L in comparison to the other musical sources, a feature not reported by Anderson’s NDRC, or other editions of the music;³ see the alternative version of the whole melisma after the main transcription. Due to the fragmentary nature of CaJ, various portions of music and text are lost throughout.⁴

¹See, for further information on this point, the discussion of F in the source report for the conductus Soli nitorem equori (J15/336).

²The individually foliated binding strips that originally constituted each folio show the following numbers, reading from left to right of the indicated leaf: f. Dv (strips 13r, 23v, 22v, with gaps – the first one relatively large – between each strip); f. Er (30v, 18v, 3v with small gaps between each strip); Ev (3rv [sic], 18r, 30r [sic]); f. Fr (33rv [sic], a short gap, 6v, 24v, 21v, 8v, 32v). For a catalog and correctly reconstituted images of this source, including the labeling system used here to refer to the fragments, see William J. Summers and Peter M. Lefferts, English Thirteenth-Century Polyphony: A Facsimile Edition, Early English Church Music, no. 57 (London: Stainer and Bell for the British Academy, 2016), pp. 14-15, plates 11-34.

³For example, in the editions of Ethel Thurston, ed., The Conductus Collections of the MS Wolfenbüttel 1099 (1206), 3 vols., Recent Researches in the Music of the Middle Ages and Early Renaissance, nos. 11-13 (Middleton, WI: A-R Editions, 1980); and Hans Tischler, ed., The Earliest Polyphonic Art Music: the 150 Two-part Conductus in the Notre-Dame Manuscripts, 2 vols., Collected Works, no. 24 (Ottawa, Canada: Institute of Mediaeval Music, 2005).

⁴The general musico-poetic contents of each individual leaf show that Dv includes the opening of the piece (starting at the top left of the folio) up through the first phrase of the cauda following line 10 that closes Strophe I (the remainder of the melisma is lost with the cutting away of the left margin of the following leaf); most of the first 18-19L and the text syllable of the initial cauda are also gone, although about half of the painted initial “D” is extant. Many other comparably sized portions of Strophe I are also missing due to the gaps in the assembled leaves, and similar lacunae in this source (not reported in detail here) plague the other folios that transmit this piece. The remnants of f. Er begin after a gap with the cauda and text syllable opening Strophe II at line 11,1; they end with line 21,3 (“[iu]stum,” missing its first letter and part of its second). Ev follows on immediately with line 21,4 (“eripiat”) and continues with omissions up through part of the first letter and music of line 31,1 (“s[ed]”), which is then cut off with the loss of the right

Text only:

CB: no. 34, f. 5v; text alone of Strophes I-III, complete. A sizeable initial painted in red with blue-green tracery opens I, and smaller, plain red initials begin II and III, just as in the surrounding works in this MS. The rubric “Item” (in red-painted capital letters above the first lines of the conductus text) refers back to the heading of the previous piece, the conductus Non te luisse pudeat (K47/223), at the top of f. 5r: “De ammonitione prelatorum” (“On the admonishment of bishops”). As with the surrounding works in CB, there is space above the text lines that might accommodate neumes, and the last two syllables of Strophe III are horizontally separated from those going before, as if to provide for a lengthy melisma. Neumes are entered for the prior Non te luisse, but neither for Deduc Syon or any other pieces afterwards until f. 13v, when they are supplied for the conductus Quod spiritu David prececinuit (L77/-).

F-Ps 184 (Paris, Bibliothèque de la Sorbonne, MS 184): f. 92v; text of Strophes I and III only, written out linearly, with each line headed by a capital letter. There is no indication that Strophe II is omitted. Pilcrowes (¶) in the left margin head the beginnings of the transmitted stanzas (lines 1 and 23) and also precede verses 27, 31, and 33 as rendered above. This source was originally unknown to Anderson and not collated in his edition, although its existence is recorded in the marginal handwritten notes to his personal copy of his conductus catalog. As a result, any variants from the text above are collated below.⁵

Music only:

StV: fasc. 4, no. 3, f. 280v: Benedicamus domino a3; after the initial, single-note intonation in all three parts, the first section of this organum, over the syllable “Be-” in the T and D of the StV setting, presents the same music as the opening cauda of Deduc Syon. This quoted portion is stated twice in the StV organum, with its lower two parts exchanged the second time and with an added Tr voice that is varied just slightly during the repeat. See also the closing cauda of the conductus a3 O felix Bituria (E8/232), which concords with the section over the word “domino” in this same StV BD setting. The StV organum is included among the alternative readings at the end of the transcription; see also the observations below on the music of the opening cauda of Deduc Syon for further possible associations among these various works.

Contrafacts: none, but see the music-only StV BD setting described just above.

Notes on the Text: Attribution and historical context: The poem Deduc Syon uberrimas was first attributed to Philip the Chancellor in Alfons Hilka, Otto Schumann, and Bernard Bischoff, eds., Carmina Burana, Heidelberg: Carl Winter, 1930-70, vol. 2/1, 53. Subsequently, this ascription has been affirmed by Dronke, “Lyrical Compositions,” 586; Anderson, NDRC, 3:vii; and David A. Traill, “A Cluster of Poems by Philip the Chancellor in Carmina Burana 21-36,” Studi medievali, ser. 3, 47 (2006): 267-286, on pp. 279-280; see also the presentation under Philip’s name in Traill, ed. and transl., Carmina Burana, 2 vols., Dumbarton Oaks Medieval Library, nos. 48-49 (Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 2018), 1:485. In light of recent investigations, it appears almost certain that this text was written as a response to the contested election of William of Auvergne as bishop of Paris in 1227-1228. For details on this contentious event, along with the citations therein, see Franco Morenzoni, “Le conflit pour l’élection de l’évêque de Paris en 1227-1228 d’après les margin. Folio Fr begins with the fourth letter of line 32,3 (“[ulc]iscere”) and includes (with various losses) the rest of Deduc Syon to the end, with a final cauda expanded by about 16L (see the alternative reading given after the transcription), whose added portion takes up approximately the right half of the third system on the leaf; the left part of that same third system begins a similarly fragmentary setting of the conductus Age penitentiam (H31/11).

⁵I would like to thank Gregorio Bevilacqua for helping me gain access to images of the relevant folios of F-Ps 184.

sermons de Philippe le Chancelier”;⁶ as well as my article from the same volume cited below. Allusions to William’s episcopal appointment connect Deduc Syon to a number of other conductus and motet texts that criticize bishops, all but one of which have previously been attributed in various quarters to Philip the Chancellor (and the single outlier is additionally a strong contender). These works, too, were likely prompted by the installation of William of Auvergne. The conductus are, in addition to Deduc Syon uberrimas (G8/85): Veritas equitas largitas (K62/375), Mundus a munditia (F17/212), and possibly Heu quo progreditur (J26/155); the motets: Error popularis / Dominus (vdW 44/M1 – not previously attributed to Philip but now likely his work, given its connection to the event), In veritate comperi / Veritatem (vdW 451/M37), and the triplum voice – at least – of the double motet Ypocrite / Velut stelle / Et gaudebit (vdW 316/315/M24). Since the text here and in the other pieces implies that the papal decree to install William had already been pronounced, most of the poems would likely have been composed no earlier than April 10, 1228. A study of all the proposed songs written in connection with the 1227-1228 Paris bishop’s election is in my article “Chancellor versus Bishop.”⁷ Further associations of Deduc Syon with the other “bishop election” poems occur in lines 11-14 and 23-26 (see the remarks below), and in the clear references to the imposition of William throughout Error popularis and in Veritas equitas, especially lines 66-69 (strophe 17) of the latter poem. Each work concords generally with the sentiments in the opening strophe of Deduc Syon, which describes the personified Zion of lines 1-2 weeping because sons are taking the place of their fathers by improperly seizing the scepter of authority that Zion herself (the Church) has proffered. In the first stanza’s final lines, these upstarts are specifically delineated as thieves and henchman who abuse the leadership of the pastoral offices. Textual notes: The following observations have benefitted immeasurably from the commentaries of Anderson (NDRC, 3:vii-viii) and Traill (Carmina Burana, 1:485), a number of whose points appear below. 1-2: see Lamentations, 2:18.⁸ Zion figures here as a symbol for the church; see Anderson’s remarks in his notes on the text of the conductus Virtutum thronus frangitur (J11/385) – in NDRC, 5:ix, note 2 – which quotes the Glossa ordinaria from the text given in PL, 113: col. 1057D, where the daughter or daughters of Zion, i.e., Jerusalem, symbolize the larger body of the faithful that is the church.⁹ See also the remarks for line 27. 3-4: from Psalm 44:17: “Pro patribus tuis nati sunt tibi filii; constitues eos principes super omnem terram” (“Instead of your fathers, sons are born to you: you shall make them princes over all the earth.”). 5-6: see Ezekiel, 19:14.¹⁰ 7: cf. Isaiah, 1:23.¹¹ 11-14: see the similar treatment of the head infecting the body in Philip’s related conductus Mundus a munditia, lines 9-10, 13-18;

⁶In Philippe le Chancelier: prédicateur, théologien, et poète parisien du début du XIII^e siècle, Gilbert Dahan, Anne-Zoé Rillon-Marne, eds., 41-60, Bibliothèque de l’histoire culturelle du Moyen Âge, no. 19 (Turnhout: Brepols, 2017).

⁷Also in Philippe le Chancelier: prédicateur, théologien, et poète parisien du début du XIII^e siècle, Gilbert Dahan, Anne-Zoé Rillon-Marne, eds., 265-306, Bibliothèque de l’histoire culturelle du Moyen Âge 19. Turnhout: Brepols, 2017.

⁸Lamentations, 2:18: “Clamavit cor eorum ad Dominum super muros filiae Sion: Deduc quasi torrentem lacrimas per diem et noctem; non des requiem tibi, neque taceat pupilla oculi tui” (“Their heart cried to the Lord upon the walls of the daughter of Sion: Let tears run down like a torrent day and night: give yourself no rest, and let not the apple of your eye [i.e., the eye’s pupil] cease.”)

⁹*PL*, 113:1057D, reportedly quoting Augustine, glossing Psalm 136:8, which refers to the daughter of Babylon: “Per successionem, facta est filia Babylonis civitas malorum, sicut Ecclesia: Jerusalem scilicet, civitas bonorum per successionem filia Sion” (“Through succession, the daughter of Babylon becomes the city of evil; just as the church – that is to say, Jerusalem – through succession the daughter of Zion becomes the city of good.”).

¹⁰Ezekiel, 19:14: “Et egressus est ignis de virga ramorum ejus, qui fructum ejus comedit: et non fuit in ea virga fortis, sceptrum dominantium. Planctus est, et erit in planctum” (“And a fire is gone out from a rod of her branches [i.e., those of the mother of the princes of Israel, depicted here as a vine], which has devoured her fruit: so that she now has no strong rod, to be a scepter of rulers. This is a lamentation, and it shall be for a lamentation.”).

¹¹Isaiah, 1:23: “Principes tui infideles, socii furum. Omnes diligunt munera, sequuntur retributiones. Pupillo non judicant, et causa viduae non ingreditur ad illos” (“Your princes are faithless, companions of thieves: they all love bribes, they run after rewards. They judge not for the fatherless: and the widow’s case comes not in to them.”).

Fontis in rivulum (K6/130), lines 1-8, 19-24; as well as his motet In veritate comperi, lines 8-9. 14,1: a variant spelling of “artus.” 15: recalls the opening of the widely transmitted conductus Frigescente caritatis (L23a/-), attributed to Walter of Châtillon by Karl Strecker (Die Lieder Walters von Châtillon in der Handschrift 351 von St. Omer [Berlin: Wiedmannsche Buchhandlung, 1925]). This ascription is supported in the edition of Walter’s works by David Traill (Walter of Châtillon: The Shorter Poems; Christmas Hymns, Love Lyrics, and Moral-Satirical Verse, [Oxford: Clarendon Press, 2013]). 16-17: the general principle of the Golden Rule (“do unto others as you would have them do unto you”) is a frequently encountered biblical sentiment. In various gospel texts Jesus specifically describes love of one’s neighbor as the second greatest of all commandments after love of God. Hence its loss as described in Deduc Syon is especially tragic. The more particular expression involving loving one’s neighbor (proximus) appears first in the Bible in Ecclesiasticus (Sirach), 27:18: “Dilige proximum, et conjungere fide cum illo” (“Love thy neighbour, and be joined to him with fidelity.”). Closely related wordings arise in Leviticus 19:18; Ecclesiasticus (Sirach), 25:2, and 6:1 (where it is rhetorically recast); and in Matthew, 5:43, 19:19, 22:39; Mark, 12:31, 12:33; Luke 10:27; Romans, 13:8, 13:9; Galatians, 5:14; and James, 2:8. 18-19: on the disdain shown to the malicious practice of oppressing and exploiting orphans, see Malachi, 3:5;¹² Isaiah, 10:1-2;¹³ and the like sentiments of Jeremiah, 22:3. Traill (Carmina Burana, 1:485) sees these two poetic lines – continuing their thought in the language of lines 20-22, and offering a possible nod to Juvenal’s *Satires*¹⁴ – as referring specifically to the situation of a ward or orphan placed under the guardianship of an unscrupulous elder who bilks his charge of his possessions and rights. Philip the Chancellor, the likely author of Deduc Syon, often paints himself as a helpless victim in his railings against William of Auvergne. His adoption of the persona of a poor, defenseless orphan would be completely consonant with similarly perceived affronts in some of his other songs that decry the bishop’s election, where those who are poor and more learned are passed over in favor of those less worthy, but who have better funding and more powerful connections. See, for example, his statements in Error popularis (lines 3-5, 14-16, 26-28, 33-35), Veritas equitas (58-65, 91-96, 103-106), Mundus a munditia (31-36, 43-46), Heu quo progreditur (39-40), and In veritate comperi (14-15), all discussed in Payne, “Chancellor versus Bishop.” 20: cf. Psalm 7:3: “Nequando rapiat ut leo animam meam, dum non est qui redimat, neque qui salvum faciat” (“Lest at any time he seize upon my soul like a lion, while there is no one to redeem me, nor to save.”). This line in Deduc Syon has a nearly direct correspondence with In veritate comperi, line 34: “Non est qui bonum faciat” (“There is no one who may do good”), which itself has biblical echoes (as in Psalms, 13:1, 13:3, 52:2, 52:4; Ecclesiastes, 7:21, and Romans, 3:12). 21-22: these lines conceivably recall Habacuc, 1:4.¹⁵ See also Psalm 16:13: “Exsurge, Domine: praeveni eum, et supplantata eum: eripe animam meam ab impio” (“Arise, O Lord, disappoint

¹²Malachi, 3:5: “Et accedam ad vos in iudicio, et ero testis velox maleficis, et adulteris, et perjuris, et qui calumniantur mercedem mercenarii, viduas et pupillos, et opprimunt peregrinum, nec timuerunt me, dicit Dominus exercituum” (“And I will come to you in judgment, and will be a speedy witness against sorcerers, and adulterers, and false swearers, and them that oppress the hireling in his wages; the widows, and the fatherless: and oppress the stranger, and have not feared me, saith the Lord of hosts.”)

¹³Isaiah, 10:1-2: “Vae qui condunt leges iniquas, et scribentes injustitiam scripserunt, ut opprimerent in iudicio pauperes, et vim facerent causae humilium populi mei; ut essent viduae praeda eorum, et pupillos diriperent” (“Woe to them that make wicked laws: and when they write, write injustice: To oppress the poor in judgment, and do violence to the cause of the humble of my people: that widows might be their prey, and that they might rob the fatherless.”)

¹⁴Juvenal, Satires, 1:45-48: “Quid referam quanta siccum iecur ardeat ira, / cum populum gregibus comitum premit hic spoliator / pupilli prostantis et hic damnatus inani / iudicio? Quid enim saluis infamia nummis?” (“Why tell how my heart burns hot with rage when I see the people hustled by a mob of retainers attending on one who has defrauded and debauched his ward, or on another who has been condemned by a futile verdict – for what matters infamy if the cash be kept?”). The text and translation comes from George Gilbert Ramsay, trans., Juvenal and Persius with an English Translation (London: Heinemann; New York: G.P. Putnam’s Sons: 1918), 6-7.

¹⁵Habacuc, 1:4: “Propter hoc lacerata est lex, et non pervenit usque ad finem iudicium; quia impius praevallet adversus justum, propterea egreditur iudicium perversum” (“Therefore the law is torn in pieces, and judgment comes not to the end: because the wicked prevails against the just, therefore wrong judgment goes forth.”).

him and supplant him; deliver my soul from the wicked one.”). 23-24: on God as a vengeful judge, see particularly Psalm 93:1: “Deus ultionum Dominus; Deus ultionum libere egit” (“The Lord is the God to whom revenge belongs: the God of revenge has acted freely”); and Deuteronomy, 32:35: “Mea est ultio, et ego retribuam in tempore, ut labatur pes eorum: juxta est dies perditionis, et adesse festinant tempora” (“Revenge is mine, and I will repay them in due time, that their foot may slide: the day of destruction is at hand, and the time makes haste to come.”). See also the following conductus ascribed to Philip the Chancellor: Nulli beneficium (H7/229 – a modern and slightly contentious attribution to the poet), lines 50-53; Fontis in rivulum (K6/130), lines 57-62, 69-80; Veritas veritatum (K19/375), lines 43-48; Quomodo cantabimus (K25/296), lines 13-14; O labilis sortis humane status (K30/234), lines 46-53; O mens cogita (K57/240), lines 51-52; and the close correspondences with Philip’s motet In veritate comperi, lines 38-39. 25-26: for the image of the den of ghouls or thieves, associated here with the biblical narrative hinted at in lines 34-35 of Deduc Syon, see Jeremiah, 7:11,¹⁶ and the equivalent phrase in Matthew, 21:13; Mark, 12:17; Luke, 19:46. The same expression occurs elsewhere, as in Philip’s motet In veritate comperi, line 36; also note the invocation of the den of thieves and God’s vengeance in the Chancellor’s conductus Quomodo cantabimus (K25/296), lines 11-12. 25,3: a variant spelling of “vispellionum.” 27: the Temple of Solomon, like the figure of Zion in line 1, stands for the Church, now despoiled by the imposition of the diabolical throne of line 29. 28: The prince of Babylon is the devil (cf. the same expression in the conductus Hac in die Gedeonis, lines 3-4). Babylon, though typically redolent of worldly sin, is often used as a metaphor for Rome in New Testament scriptures and especially in the book of Revelation. The Roman connection could be significant in referring to Philip’s upset at William being appointed Bishop of Paris by Pope Gregory IX. 29-30: a possible recollection of 2 Kings, 25:27-30, where Amel-Marduk (Evil-Merodach), king of Babylon and successor to Nebuchadnezzar, delivers the exiled Jehoiachin, king of Judah, from prison, lords over him, and supports him with an allowance the rest of his days – another conceivable nod to the bishop’s election. 33: on God as a judge of nations (or the Gentiles), see Psalm 9:20: “Exsurge, Domine; non confortetur homo: judicentur gentes in conspectu tuo” (“Arise, O Lord, let not man be strengthened: let the Gentiles be judged in thy sight.”); and the related language in Psalms, 9:6, 78:6; also cf. the remarks of lines 23-24 above. 34-35: evoking Christ’s ejection of the merchants from the Temple, as in Matthew, 21:12-13, and the relation of the same event in Mark, 11:15-17, and John, 2:14-15. See also the uniquely preserved conductus Non livoris ex rancore (F14/222), lines 1-5. Anderson (NDRC, 2:xvii) sees the selling of doves as representing improper offerings of matters associated with the Holy Spirit for worldly gain, in a reading drawn from Hugh of Saint Victor’s Allegoriae in Novum Testamentum (for the text, see PL, 175, cols. 754-755). 35,2: this word is construed here as a deponent imperative rather than an active infinitive.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: Variants from F-Ps 184 are collated here to complete Anderson’s edition; the MS gives the following dissimilar readings: 2,1: F-Ps 184: Velud (capitalized at the start of the line). 11-22 (Strophe II): F-Ps 184: omitted. 32: F-Ps 184: replaced by the following two lines, thus expanding Strophe III to 14 verses: Scelus hoc e medio / Protinus ulciscere (“immediately avenge this wickedness in our midst”). 35,2: F: the final syllable of the last word of the conductus (“[ever]te[re]”) was never entered at the end of the closing cauda; it is supplied from and placed there according to the testimony of all other musical sources (W1, Ma, W1, CaJ). MUSIC: Syllabic/melismatic identity: 1. the beginning of the T and the end of the D of “quod in templum salomo[nis]” (line 27, middle of Strophe III) = 1a. the beginning of the T and end of the D of “venit princeps babilo[nis]” (line 28, middle of Strophe III); and also = 1b. the T at the start of the last phrase (before the punctus organi) of the closing cauda on “[ever]te[re]” (line 35, the last line of poem). Opening cauda: TD: F: a reading in the iambic modes 2 and 3 is equally possible (see the BD from StV, supplied at the end, for such a rendering). The identity of this cauda’s music with the beginning of the Benedicamus domino ¹⁶Jeremiah, 7:11: “Numquid ergo spelunca latronum facta est domus ista, in qua invocatum est nomen meum in oculis vestris? Ego, ego sum: ego vidi, dicit Dominus” (“Is this house then, in which my name has been called upon, in your eyes become a den of robbers? I, I am he: I have seen it, says the Lord.”).

a3 preserved in StV (see the remarks on this source above) may be significant in light of a further possible association of its music with the 1227-1228 Paris bishop's election. As noted, the closing portion of the StV BD setting is identical to the final cauda of the conductus O felix Bituria, written in honor of Bishop William of Bourges (Guillaume Berruyer or Guillaume de Donjean – ca. 19 Oct. 1155-10 Jan. 1209). William was canonized in 1218, although Rebecca Baltzer notes that there is no trace of his feast in Parisian liturgical books until more than ten years later, which could bring the initial celebrations of William's festival close to the time of the election controversy.¹⁷ Similarly, the final cauda of O felix Bituria, which presents clear indications of the iambic rhythms of the second and third modes in contrast to the mode-1 disposition of the sine littera sections in the rest of the piece, could well have been written separately and added later to the conductus at any of the possible times suggested for its composition above (for this possibility, see my "Datable Notre Dame Conductus," 138-9).¹⁸ There may therefore be previously unforeseen reasons that led to the joining together of these two (presumably pre-existing) segments of music.¹⁹ One might even see a certain type of irony in combining a melisma pertaining to William's disputed election (redolent with accusations of bribery, corruption, and favoritism on Philip the Chancellor's part) with music associated at some point with a respected, canonized prelate, who furthermore was regarded as a patron saint of the University of Paris and renowned for his austerity and piety.²⁰ See the notes on the text in my edition of O felix Bituria in F-6 for further details on these circumstances. 4,1: T: F: apparently specifying a tritone over "na[ti]," an e-flat sig precedes, as it does in W1, Ma, W2 (missing in CaJ); cf. the cauda over line 21,1. Cauda over line 11,1 (opens Strophe II): D: F, Ma, W2: the 2li,3li=ab, cab of the second phrase may be rendered in iambic values; W1, CaJ show mode 1 (3li,2li=abc, ab), informing the reading here. Line 20,1: D: F, Ma, W2: the concluding g at the end of the short cauda on "nec [est]" om; supplied from W1, lost from CaJ. Cauda over 21,1: D: F, W2: for "vel," e-flat sig immediately prior, no sig in W1, Ma; unclear in CaJ, due to loss, but no sig precedes D phrase. Cauda over line 23,1 (opens Strophe III): T: cauda on "Vi[de]" (line 23,1, beginning Strophe III) = the opening four phrases of the T in the final cauda on "[ever]te[re]" (line 35,2, the last line of poem). T: F: thanks apparently to the omission of a clef change, the music for the whole cauda written 3 lower, corrected via all other musical sources; T: F, W1: e-flat sig precedes second and first phrases, respectively; none in Ma, W2, CaJ. Lines 27-28: see the above remarks on syllabic/melismatic identity. 29,3: T: F: d over "si[bi]" om; supplied from W1, Ma, W2, portion missing from CaJ. Closing cauda: The final cauda in CaJ is expanded by about 16L prior to the concluding punctus organi; this version is supplied as an alternative at the end of the transcription. See also the above remarks on syllabic/melismatic identity (here encompassing the tenth cauda phrase in the T from L28-L35) and on the repetition of music from the cauda at line 23,1. T: F, W1: e-flat sig specified in earlier repeat of cauda on line 23,1 missing from all musical sources; supplied editorially based on earlier identity.

¹⁷In "Performance Practice. The Notre-Dame Calendar and the Earliest Latin Liturgical Motets," p. 6, n. 7. This paper, delivered at a conference on Notre Dame music convened at Wolfenbüttel in 1985, was intended for a publication that never materialized. It is now thankfully available online (posted 2013): <http://www.musmed.fr/AdMMAe/Baltzer,%20Performance%20Practice.pdf>.

¹⁸ Thomas B. Payne "Datable Notre Dame Conductus: New Historical Observations on Style and Technique," Current Musicology, 64 (2001): 104-151.

¹⁹According to Robert Falck ("New Light on the Polyphonic Conductus Repertory in the St. Victor Manuscript." Journal of the American Musicological Society, 23 [1970]: 315-326, see pp. 317-324), the StV BD setting is more likely the original version. His claims, though, are challenged by the fact that he could not take Baltzer's later work into account, and his assumptions of priority based on assonance and the proclivities of other pieces that show analogous instances of borrowing (p. 323) does not effectively eliminate the equally likely possibility that the StV BD organum could still derive from the two conductus. Such a direction of musical appropriation from conductus to liturgical organum is argued in Payne, "Chancellor versus Bishop," 293-297, in connection with recently identified concordances between Philip's conductus Veritas equitas and Perotin's organum Alleluia. Posui adiutorium a3 (M51).

²⁰For some further imaginings of analogous ironical juxtapositions of William of Auvergne with liturgical celebrations of respected prelates, see my "Chancellor versus Bishop," 297-298.

MONSTRUOSIS FLUCTIBUS

Conductus (13/209)

F, f. 337r (7,78)

I

D
[Mon -

T
Mon -

[Mon] - stru - o - sis flu - cti - bus

[Mon] - stru - o - sis flu - cti - bus

ma - re ma - gnum e - stu - at.

ma - re ma - gnum e - stu - at.

a -

[a]

a -

[a']

[a]-qui - lo - nis fla - ti - bus cim-ba

[a]-qui - lo - nis fla - ti - bus cim-ba

pet-ri flu - ctu -

pet-ri flu - ctu -

- at qui - a dor - mit

- at qui - a dor - mit

ve - ri - tas so -

ve - ri - tas so -

b

[so] - la se - det ci - vi - tas quam scri - ba - rum ce - ci - tas

[so] - la se - det ci - vi - tas quam scri - ba - rum ce - ci - tas

c

ce - cis lo - cat du - ci -

ce - cis lo - cat du - ci -

c'

b'

MONSTRUOSIS FLUCTIBUS

Conductus (I3/209)

F, f. 337r (7,78)

I	Monstruosus fluctibus mare magnum estuat. Aquilonis flatibus cimba Petri fluctuat. Quia dormit veritas, sola sedet civitas, quam scribarum cecitas cecis locat ducibus.	The great sea churns with monstrous waves. Peter's boat is tossed about from the north wind's gusts. 5 Since truth is asleep, solitary sits the city that the blindness of the scribes populates with blind leaders.
---	--	---

SOURCES:F, fasc. 7, no. 78, f. 337r: a2; Strophe I, complete, with no provision for further text.W1, fasc. 9, no. 11, f. 106v (97v): a2; Strophe I, complete, with some unnotated space filled with staff lines at the end of the last system of this piece.Text only:

Printed in Matthias Flacius Illyricus, ed., Pia quaedam vetustissima Poemata, partim Anti-Christum, ejusque spirituales Filiolos insectantia, partim etiam Christum, ejusque beneficium mira spiritus alacritate celebrantia. Cum praefatione Matthiae Flacii Illyrici. (Magdeburg: Michael Lotter, 1552), no. 18, pp. 24-25. Here the text of Monstruosus fluctibus appears as the fourth and final strophe of a poem that begins Hi sunt sal quod evanuit foras (Q20/-). Although Stanza II of Hi sunt sal disagrees with the structure of I and III in the construction only of its third line (7pp instead of 8p), Strophe IV, the stanza that presents Monstruosus, is strikingly different from all others, with an isosyllabic arrangement of 8(7pp), rather than ten lines of various couplets of 8pp and 7p. It is therefore exceedingly likely that the association in this publication of Monstruosus with Hi sunt sal is, at the very least, questionable. For additional context, see the notes on the poetic structure of the conductus Lex honus importabile (I19/197).

Music only: none.Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: With the mention of Peter's boat in line 4, the images in the poem as a whole seem to indicate that some calamity may be affecting the papacy, or be caused by it. No particular event for its subject has yet been suggested, as its language is rather vague and inspecific as to what may have prompted it. There is some analogous naval imagery in the conductus a4 Mundus vergens in defectum (B2/213), lines 12-16. 3: the north wind is a symbol of the devil and similarly unfavorable qualities, as reported in Anderson, NDRC, 4:iii, note 1, quoting from the De universo of Rabanus Maurus (ca. 780-856) as given in PL, 111: col. 282C;¹ cf. also the conductus Austro terris influente (G1/26), where the north wind is named in line 2, and its negative connotations are treated in the remaining verses of its first stanza. 4: likely references to the Gospel accounts of Jesus calming the storm that threatened to swamp the boat that he and several of his disciples were traveling in: Matthew, 8:23-25; Mark, 4:35-41; Luke, 8:22-25. Also see Matthew, 14:24-33; Mark, 6:45-52; and John, 6:16-25, for the story of Jesus walking on the water and Peter’s partially successful attempt to do the same. Anderson’s quotations from Bede (PL, 92: col. 42) and the Glossa ordinaria (PL, 114: col. 136) – given in NDRC, 4:iii, note 2 – indicate that the storms in the gospel accounts are seen allegorically as reflections of general affliction or turmoil, just as in the conductus text. 6: Lamentations, 1:1: “Quomodo sedet sola civitas plena populo!” (“How does the city [i.e., Jerusalem] sit solitary that was full of people!”); the city is now forlorn, even though it is populated, since its leaders are blind, as depicted in line 8. It is not immediately obvious, but either Rome or Paris might conceivably be the subject here. 7,2: this negative image of the scribes occurs many times in the Gospels, usually in association with the Pharisees and elders hostile to Jesus (see, e.g., Luke, 19:47, 23:10, 20:46); cf. also Jeremiah, 8:8.² 8: for the image of blind leaders (also associated with scribes and Pharisees as in line 7), see Matthew, 15:14, 23:16, 23:24.³ Also note the expression in the Philip the Chancellor’s conductus Mundus a munditia (F17/212), lines 37-42: “Ceca fit provisio. Ceci sedent solio, ut cecorum regio – Francia – habitu privatio prestat in ecclesia” (“A blind provision is enacted. The blind sit on the throne, so that in the region of the blind – in France – deprivation excels by habit in the church”).

¹*PL*, 111: col. 282C: "Aquila dictus eo quod aquas stringat et nubes dissipet: gelidus est enim ventus et siccus. Significat autem vel diabolum vel homines infideles, ut iniquitatis abundantiam et defectum charitatis. Unde scriptum est in propheta: 'ab aquilone exardescunt mala super terram' (Isa. 14)" ("The north wind is so called because it freezes [stringat] the waters and scatters the clouds; for it is an icy and dry wind. And it signifies either the devil or faithless men, just as it does an abundance of iniquity and a defect of charity. Whence it is written in the prophet: 'from the north evil things break out over the earth.'"). The biblical reference that closes this passage probably refers to Jeremiah, 1:14, rather than anything in Isaiah, 14, as cited in PL, 111.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 4,1: F: cinba; the middle letter of the word is slightly obscured by the D figure of the staff below, but it seems clear; the spelling adopted here comes from WI. 7,2: F: scribarrum? The standard “-rum” abbreviation appears to be preceded by an additional “r.” MUSIC: Opening cauda): It is somewhat tempting to interpret the regularly recurring groups of falling 4C figures that pepper the D of this cauda as pictorializations of the “monstrous waves” in the opening words of the lyric. F: in the third phrase in this voice, for the pitch series 3liP,2li=edcbP,ab at L8-L10, WI has 4li,2li; this avoids the b/c dissonance at L9 in F if WI is rendered SSBL,BL. Cauda over line 3,1: T: F: om stroke at L4 of the melisma on “a[quilonis],” supplied from WI. Cauda on line 6, 1: D: F: gives b,a, 2 lower for the reading of the first a,g pitch series in the last phrase on “so[la]” (at L19-L20), taken from WI. As adopted, the opening gesture of this phrase (ded,ca) also occurs in the D in the approximate middle of the final cauda of the piece (at L36-L38). Final cauda: T: W1: for the si=g beginning phrase 8 at L41, an extra si=g’ precedes just before the change to a new system (II on f. 107r). Closing punctus organi: T: F: the last two notes in the piece, f,g, are entered outside the writing block, intruding into the right margin; this may account for the fact that they seem written 2 too low, and have been corrected after WI.

²For example, Luke, 19:47: “Et erat docens quotidie in templo. Principes autem sacerdotum, et scribae, et princeps plebis quaerebant illum perdere” (“And he [Jesus] was teaching daily in the temple. And the chief priests and the scribes and the rulers of the people sought to destroy him.”). Jeremiah, 8:8: “Quomodo dicitis: Sapientes nos sumus, et lex Domini nobiscum est? vere mendacium operatus est stylus mendax scribarum” (“How do you say: We are wise, and the law of the Lord is with us? Indeed the lying pen of the scribes has wrought falsehood.”).

³Matthew, 15:14: “Sinite illos: caeci sunt, et duces caecorum; caecus autem si caeco ducatum praestet, ambo in foveam cadunt” (“Let them [the scribes and Pharisees] alone: they are blind, and leaders of the blind. And if the blind lead the blind, both will fall into the pit.”). Matthew, 23:24: “Duces caeci, excolantes culicem camelum autem glutientes” (“Blind leaders, who strain out a gnat, but swallow a camel.”).

REGI REGUM OMNIUM
Conductus (J22/300)

F. f. 337v (7,79) a

I

D [Re - a' b c [Re] - gi

T Re - [Re] - gi

re-gum o - mni - um gra-tes a - go gra - ti - e. qui bi - tu - ri - cen - si - um

d c

re-gum o - mni - um gra-tes a - go gra - ti - e. qui bi - tu - ri - cen - si - um pro - vi - dit ec - cle - si - e.

d'

pro - vi - dit ec - cle - si - e.

pa - sto - rem e - gre - gi - um. qui pa - vit e - gre - gi - e

e' e

pa - sto - rem e - gre - gi - um. qui pa - vit e - gre - gi - e gre-gem ob - er - ran - ti - um a vi - a iu - sti - ti - e.

f' f

gre-gem ob - er - ran - ti - um a vi - a iu - sti - ti - e.

f'' a'' b mode 3 equally likely

II
D Pre - sul
T Pre - sul

ve - ne-ra-bi - lis et di - gnus me - mo - ri - a. pi - us. ca - stus. hu - mi - lis.
ve - ne-ra-bi - lis et di - gnus me - mo - ri - a. pi - us. ca - stus. hu - mi - lis.

dis - po - nens per o - mni - a se - qui chri - stum. mun - dum i - stum fu - git. et dis - po - nens per o - mni - a se - qui chri - stum. mun - dum i - stum fu - git. et ce - le - sti - a con - cu - pi - vit. et am - bi - vit so - bri - e mens so - bri - a.

ce - le - sti - a con - cu - pi - vit. et am - bi - vit so - bri - e mens so - bri - a.

mode 3 equally likely

III
D Vi - ta
T Vi - ta

[Vi] - ta
[Vi] - ta

iu - sti glo - ri - o - sa. ut mors es - set pre - ci - o - sa. a - pud de - um

iu - sti glo - ri - o - sa. ut mors es - set pre - ci - o - sa. a - pud de - um

me - ru - it. et qui si - bi vi - lu - it; a da - to - re gra - ti - a - rum

me - ru - it. et qui si - bi vi - lu - it; a da - to - re gra - ti - a - rum cum fi - ne mi - se - ri - a - rum glo - ri - am ob - ti - nu - it.

cum fi - ne mi - se - ri - a - rum glo - ri - am ob - ti - nu - it.

et de - co - rem in - du - it.]

et de - co - rem in - du - it.

mode 3 equally likely

j k (k) (k)

REGI REGUM OMNIUM

Conductus (J22/300)

F, f. 337v (7,79)

- | | |
|--|---|
| I Regi regum omnium.
grates ago gratie.
Qui Bituricensium
providit ecclesie
pastorem egregium, qui pavit egregie gregem oberrantium
a via iustitie. | To the king of all kings
I give thanks for his regard.
He provided an excellent pastor
5 for the church of Bourges, one who excellently shepherded a flock wandering
from the path of justice. |
| II Presul – venerabilis et dignus memoria, pius, castus, humilis, disponens per omnia sequi Christum – mundum istum fugit. Et celestia concupivit, et ambivit
sobrie mens sobria. | This bishop – venerable 10 and worthy of remembrance, pious, chaste, humble, setting aside everything to follow Christ – has fled this world. His soul both 15 hearkened to the heavenly and sought prudently the prudent. |
| III Vita iusti gloriosa ut mors esset pretiosa apud deum meruit.
Et qui sibi viluit,
a datore gratiarum,
cum fine miseriarum,
gloriam obtinuit
et decorem induit. | The glorious life of this just man warrants that his death be precious in God’s sight.
20 He who counted himself worthless has both acquired glory
from the giver of grace, and, with his afflictions at an end,
24 clothed himself in splendor. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 79, f. 337v: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, a unique textual-musical setting, with II and III indicated by capitals, and with no accommodation for further text.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Dedicattee: the poem celebrates Saint William (de Donjeon or Berruyer) Archbishop of Bourges (ca. 1140-10 January 1209, elected archbishop on 23 November 1200, serving until his death; canonized on 17 May 1218 by Pope Honorius III, with his feast celebrated on 10 January), who is additionally the subject of the conductus a3, O felix Bituria (E8/232), transmitted much earlier at F-6,8, f. 209r. For more information on William of Bourges, see the notes to the text of O felix.¹ Dating issues: the allusions to William in this poem have led some to propose that it was written soon after the bishop's death in 1209. This is quite possible, although William's canonization in 1218, or the time when his feast begins to appear in Parisian liturgical books some ten or so years later (ca. 1228-1230), could push the conceivable date of composition later.² Versification: the line divisions of the conductus poem are construed differently here from their presentation in Anderson's edition (NDRC, 5:xiv). In lines 13 and 15 above, two pairs of rhyming 4p lines as given in Anderson are each combined here into one 8p verse, with the internal rhymes signaled by extra horizontal space in the text above. Such a decision confines the two different line structures in Strophe II (7pp and 8p) to the same ones as in III; Strophe I, for its part, limits itself solely to 7pp verses. Notable also in this poem is the relatively high presence of the rhetorical technique of annominatio, punning wordplay where words with similar roots are used in different forms: grates/gratie (line 2), egregie/egregium/gregem (5-7), sobrie/sobria (16), for instance. Similarly, the notable amount of enjambment in Strophe II recalls the prevalence of the same technique in Strophe III of O felix Bituria. Yet unlike that work, the musical setting here tends to coordinate musical phrases with the line divisions rather than the syntactic sense of the poem. Notice its musical break between the grammatically connected lines 12-13 (“... per omnia / sequi Christum ...”) and 14-15 (“... celestia / concupivit ...”). Textual notes: 1: biblical references to Christ as king of kings appear, e.g., in 1 Timothy, 6:15, and in the similar expressions of Revelation, 17:14, and 19:16.³ 6-8: with Bourges as the primary archepiscopal seat in Aquitaine (see, e.g., the opening lines of O felix Bituria), William had responsibility for combatting heresy in the region. Among other duties involving the oversight and discipline of his charges, he reportedly was intending to mount a preaching campaign against the Cathars in response to Pope Innocent III's call for the Albigensian Crusade (1209-1229 – see the conductus Age penitentiam [H31/11], transmitted three pieces later at F-7,82). William, though, died before he could begin this work. 8: see Ecclesiasticus (Sirach), 36:19: “... et dirige nos in viam iustitiae, et sciant omnes qui habitant terram quia tu es Deus conspexeris saeculorum” (“... and direct us into the way of justice, and let all know that dwell upon the earth, that you are God the beholder of all ages.”). 11-13: William of Bourges was renowned for his austerity and piety; he reportedly wore a hair shirt unstintingly for much of his life and into his accession to the archbishopric of Bourges. The expression “setting aside everything to follow Christ” could refer to him forsaking his earlier prebends at Soissons and Paris to join the famously severe abbey of Grandmont. Due to dissidence within this abbey, William left, turning to the Cistercian order before he was called upon to be the archbishop of Bourges late in the year 1200 (for more details, see the notes to the text of O felix Bituria). 18: see Psalm 115:6: “Pretiosa in conspectu Domini mors sanctorum ejus” (“Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.”). 24: perhaps to be read as a contrast to William's penchant for austere clothing during his life; see the remarks for lines 11-13.

¹The information about William given here and in the notes to O Felix Bituria comes primarily from Thomas Merton (author) and Patrick Hart (ed.), In the Valley of Wormwood: Cistercian Blessed and Saints of the Golden Age, Cistercian Studies, no. 233 (Collegeville, Minnesota: Liturgical Press, 2013), 19-30. See also for additional details, Guillaume Gross, “L’organum, un art de cathédrale? Musiques autour de saint Guillaume,” Cahiers de Recherches Médiévales et Humanistes, 26 (2013): 35-55, at 36-39.

²See Rebecca Baltzer, “Performance Practice. The Notre-Dame Calendar and the Earliest Latin Liturgical Motets,” p. 6, n. 7. This paper, delivered at a conference on Notre Dame music convened at Wolfenbüttel in 1985, was intended for a publication that never materialized. It is now thankfully available online (posted 2013): <http://www.musmed.fr/AdMMAe/Baltzer,%20Performance%20Practice.pdf>.

³1 Timothy, 6:15: “quem suis temporibus ostendet beatus et solus potens, Rex regum, et Dominus dominantium” (“which in his times he shall show who is the Blessed and only Mighty, the King of kings, and Lord of lords.”). Revelation, 17:14: “Hi cum Agno pugnabunt, et Agnus vincet illos: quoniam Dominus dominorum est, et Rex regum, et qui cum illo sunt, vocati, electi, et fideles” (“These shall fight with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them, because he is Lord of lords, and King of kings, and they that are with him are called, and elect, and faithful.”). Revelation, 19:16: “quem suis temporibus ostendet beatus et solus potens, Rex regum, et Dominus dominantium” (“And he has on his garment, and on his thigh written: King of Kings, and Lord of Lords.”).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 1,1: F: an erasure appears at the end of this word, apparently correcting an improperly written “regis.” 20,4: F: uluit or uliut; emended editorially following Léopold Delisle;⁴ Dreves, AH, 21:172, no. 241 (which does not report the unique reading of F); and Anderson, NDRC, 5:xiv, 115 (which does). MUSIC: There is a fair amount of musical repetition and some motivic play in this piece. A number of these recurrences are signaled by the boxed letters above the staves and more may be posited. Syllabic/melismatic identity: in addition to the melodic identity described below, notice also the exact correspondence to the ligations of this passage in both its appearances. Such close agreement may offer suggestions either towards rhythmic mode (either modes 1 and 3 seem equally possible here, as they are for the subsequent caudae in this work) or may propose different alignments of ligature elements with syllables. Here, in the transcription of the cum littera passage as read in mode 1, the 2li figures of the T are arranged to suggest simultaneity between the syllable and the second element of the ligature, as implied by the earlier sine littera notation of the cauda passage. This level of correspondence could thus increase the likelihood of performing this line in the same rhythms as the cauda passage (an alternative given above the staff). 1. T of the second phrase (L9-L16) of the cauda on “Pre[sul]” (line 9, opens Strophe II) = 1a. T of “disponens per omnia” (line 12, halfway point of Stanza II). Though separated, there is a logic to the occurrences: the first opens Strophe II, while the second involves the line in this same strophe just before the first change to the first instance of a different line length (8p [4p+4p]), after the series of 7pp lines that has formed all of the poem so far. Line 2,3: D: F: music for last two syllables of “[gra]tie” om; supplied editorially. Cauda on 17,1 (opens Strophe III): T: F: erased stroke (omitted in transcription) precedes the si=b at L18 of the cauda. Line 17,3: D: F: note on last syllable of “[glorio]sa” om, with erased d still visible; e supplied editorially. 19,2: D: F: note on second syllable of “[de]um” om; supplied editorially. The scribe may have been confused by the 2si=c, d at the end of the D phrase, set melismatically over a 3li=fed in the T, and thought the right number of D notes was in fact supplied.

⁴“Discours de M. Léopold Delisle,” Annuaire-Bulletin de la Société de l’Histoire de France, 23 (1885): 82-139, at 117.

EX OLIVA REMENSIIUM
Conductus (H5/109)

F, f. 338v (7,80)

A b
I [Ex]
a
Ex

[Ex] o - li - va re - men-si - um
[Ex] o - li - va re - men-si - um

[fons] sa-cri ma-nat ol - e - i quod
[fons] sa-cri ma-nat ol - e - i quod

[fons] fons
[fons] fons

o - le - a-stro gen - ti-um red - o - le - a-stro gen - ti-um red -

A' a'
[red] - dit o - li - vam fi - de - [red] - dit o - li - vam fi - de -

b''
- i.
- i.

*expanded cauda in W1, see at end

II

D B d

Fons

T c

Fons

d'

[fons] a - li - as ex - a - ru - it.

[fons] a - li - as ex - a - ru - it.

sed a - qua vi - va pro - flu - it de

sed a - qua vi - va pro - flu - it de

B d

[de] fon - te ca - ri - ta -

c

[de] fon - te ca - ri - ta -

c

e

e

d'

- tis.

c

- tis.

III

D C g

So -

T f

So -

[So] - la re-men - sis ci - vi - tas im - plet quod do - cet
[So] - la re-men - sis ci - vi - tas im - plet quod do - cet

ca - ri - tas. et
ca - ri - tas. et

[et] tem - pus e - ge - sta -
[et] tem - pus e - ge - sta -

- tis.]
- tis.

ALTERNATIVE READING:

*W1, f. 114r (105r), V: cauda over line 5, 1 (opening Strophe II), with repeated section (only in W1) and exchange of voices in second half

D [Fons]
T Fons

| these 8L inserted only in W1

| for rest of cauda, voices exchanged with respect to those in F and Ma

EX OLIVA REMENSIIUM
Conductus (H5/109)

F, f. 338v (7,80)

I	Ex oliva Remensium fons sacri manat olei quod oleastro gentium reddit olivam fidei.		From the olive of Reims flows a spring of holy oil that restores the olive tree of the faith to the wild olive of the Gentiles.
II	Fons alias exaruit, sed aqua viva profluit de fonte caritatis.	5	At one time this spring dried up, but now living water flows forth from the spring of charity.
III	Sola Remensis civitas implet quod docet caritas. et tempus egestatis.	10	The city of Reims alone fulfils what charity teaches and the time of need.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 80, f. 338v: a2, Strophes I-III, complete, with II-III of this rather short poem indicated by capitals, and with no provision here or in its other sources for further stanzas. Strikingly, the text of the following work in F-7, the unique In ripa Ligeris (J23/183), is also devoted to a French city, that of Tours (“Martinopolis” in the poem).

W1, fasc. 9, no 24, f. 114r (105r): a2, Strophes I-III, complete; I has a blue marginal initial with red tracery, II shows a painted red initial atop a still visible guide letter; III, on the other hand, is introduced only by a capital letter. The cauda opening Strophe II in this source is expanded from the example in the other MSS. It appears after the main transcription as an alternative reading.

Ma, fasc. 4, no. 11, f. 85v: a2, Strophes I-III, complete, with space at the start of each stanza for a full-size, system-high initial that was never entered; the accommodation for the initial of II starts at the left margin, as though beginning a new piece.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Dating: thanks to its mention of Reims and its reference to one of this city’s most significant religious relics (the holy chrism or oil that was used in the liturgy for royal coronations held in the cathedral), this poem has a certain claim to be an occasional piece, written during the late twelfth to early thirteenth century for the crowning of a French king in Reims. The most likely of such candidates would include Philip II “Augustus” (crowned 1 November 1179), Louis VIII (crowned 6 August 1223), and Louis IX “the Saint” (crowned 29 November 1226, ruled to 25 August 1270). However, as noted below in the textual notes for lines 1-2, there seems to be no direct association in this poem with a coronation, and the figure of the Rémois oil itself seems to function primarily, if not solely, as an allegorical rather than a historical symbol. For a conductus that deals more directly with Reims and royal coronation, see the discussion of the text of Ver pacis aperit (J32/366). Versification: the brevity of each stanza as presented above could imply that this poem was initially considered to encompass only a single strophe, since on occasion the capital letters in F that typically indicate stanzaic divisions within conductus poems may also interrupt what are clearly single strophes. See, for just one example, Strophe I of the conductus Cortex occidit littere (I6/69), at F-7,49. Textual notes: 1-2: the cathedral of Reims was the traditional (though not exclusive) location for French royal coronations. Part of the coronation ceremony involved anointing the royal personages with a special chrism (holy oil) that, according to legend, had been miraculously furnished by the Holy Spirit to Saint Remigius (bishop of Reims from 459-533), and which he used to baptize Clovis I, the first king of the Franks and founder of the Merovingian dynasty, on Christmas Day, 496, upon his conversion to Christianity. There is no indication I know that the chrism of Reims had any association with either the olive tree or its fruit (the Latin words oliva and olea can stand for both), but the olive’s tree, fruit, and oil are recognized as symbols with various types of exegetical significance. For some likely associations that seem pertinent to the content of this conductus poem, see the following phrases among the commentaries collected in Jean-Baptiste Pitra, ed., Spicilegium solesmense, 4 vols. (Paris: F. Didot, 1852-1858), 2 (1855): 350: “Oliva, Christus vel Ecclesia,” (“Olive: Christ or the Church”) ... “Oleum, gratia Spiritus sancti” (“Oil: the grace of the Holy Spirit”) ... and (taken according to Pitra’s publication from Rabanus Maurus) “Oliva, ... Spiritus sanctus ... Populus Judaeorum” (“Olive: The Holy Spirit ... the Jewish People”). This assortment of meanings, along with the images of the fons (“spring”) representing Christ and the figures of the two different olive trees corresponding to Jews and Gentiles (see the remarks for lines 5-7 and 3-4, respectively), suggest that here the city of Reims – thanks to its association with the miraculous chrism – embodies in itself the events of the Incarnation: the birth of Jesus (the flowing spring) allowed God’s grace (the water or oil supplied by the spring) to flow to the Gentiles (the wild olive or oleaster). This gift of grace, emanating from Christ’s and God’s love for humankind (the “spring of charity”), both restores and replaces God’s earlier covenant with the Jews (the cultivated olive tree). As a result, there seems to be no direct evidence within the text of this poem to connect it with the event of a royal coronation. The likelihood of its dating to a specific year, therefore, seems debatable. 3-4: on the symbolism of the oleaster (the wild olive, signifying the Gentiles) in contrast to the cultivated olive (the new law represented by Christ, originally rooted in Mosaic Law), see Romans, 11:16-24, especially 11:24, where the apostle Paul looks towards the inclusion of the Jews in the new faith.¹ The Distinctiones monasticae, a topically organized lexicon of biblical allegory, typology, and symbolism, available as well in Pitra, ed., Spicilegium solesmense, 2 (1855), on p. 381, also makes it clear that the images of the various olive trees refer to Jews and Gentiles, thanks to its quotation of the opening two lines of Strophe II (7-8) of the conductus Excitatur caritas in Yericho (F30/111): “et quidam, in rhythmo de vocatione gentium, immo conversione ad fidem: ‘Novus cultor creditus est vinee / oleaster insitus est olee.’” (“and a certain person [says] in the rhythmic poem about the calling of the Gentiles, or rather about their conversion to the faith: ‘A new planter is entrusted to the vineyard. / The wild oleaster is grafted to the olive.’”). 5-7: note that line 5,1 (“alias”) functions adverbially here (“at one time”). For explanations of the figure of Christ as the aqueous fons, see Traill, “Biblical Exegesis,” p. 334, who draws on the Allegoriae of Rabanus Maurus.² 10: it is not clear whether “time of need” may refer to a specific historical instance or other period. Based solely on the deployment of the less temporally specific allegorical symbols encountered earlier in this poem, here the conductus text might communicate the state of mankind’s need for salvation prior to Christ’s incarnation, as indicated by the dried-up spring in Strophe II.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: F: no variants, although both sources outside of F (W1 and Ma) share the rejected but acceptable reading “deceit” (“... fulfils what charity befits and the time of need”) for line 9,3. MUSIC: Cauda deployment and musical repetition: the amount of wholesale musical restatement among the ¹Romans, 11:24: “Nam si tu ex naturali excisus es oleastro, et contra naturam insertus es in bonam olivam: quanto magis ei qui secundum naturam inserentur suae olivae?” (“For if you [the Gentiles] were cut out of the wild olive tree, which is natural to you; and, contrary to nature, were grafted into the good olive tree; how much more shall they that are the natural branches [the Jews], be grafted into their own olive tree?”).

²David A. Traill, “Biblical Exegesis and Medieval Latin Lyric: Interpretational Problems in Nutante mundi cardine, Relegendur ab area and Vite perditte,” The Journal of Medieval Latin, 17 (2007): 329-341.

cauda in this piece is startling, if not unique, in the Parisian conductus repertory. Each of the three stanzas as delineated above closes with a cauda that also recalls stretches of material in both voices from the one that opens it (signaled by boxed capital letters above the systems). Those of Strophe II, furthermore, correspond exactly (except in W1 – see below), while Strophe I shares just the first 8L or so of its opening cauda with the ending one, but with the parts exchanged. Strophe III, on the other hand closes with a repeat of the entire cauda from the stanza's start, and then adds an unrelated passage of about 20L to conclude the piece. Furthermore, each of these pairs of caudae shows some level of motivic recollection with the others. All begin, for example, with the five-note motivic series bc dcd in one of the parts, and the rhythms of the T in the caudae for I and II recall a common T pattern often seen in discant chant settings: $\downarrow \downarrow \downarrow \downarrow \downarrow$. Opening cauda: TD: F, W1 give regularly shaped si figures for the first note in each voice. The length of a DL for these notes here is suggested not only by the return of the cauda's music at the end of the stanza (where the voices are exchanged at the start and are followed by rest strokes in F), but also because Ma has rest strokes immediately following these first notes. Similarly, whenever a DL appears in the transcription of F and there is no graphic elongation of the figure (signaled by \blacksquare shapes above the staves), this indicates that some indication of lengthening (a broadened or repeated note shape, or a succeeding rest stroke) is indicated in at least one of the other sources. Cauda opening Strophe II (over line 5,1): T: F: the om 2li=cd in phrase 7 at L26-L27 is supplied from the repeat in the closing cauda for this stanza in F, and from the two places it appears in Ma. W1 also has this figure in both places, although the first instance is somewhat difficult to locate. This MS first expands its version of the cauda with an inserted repetition after L24 of L9-L16 of the melisma – something not seen in the other sources – and then follows this with the remainder of the cauda as it appears in F and Ma, but with the voices exchanged, a reading which seems to be questionable for inclusion, as the exchange does not arise elsewhere, nor does it occur in the cauda repeated at the close of the stanza. Nonetheless the W1 redaction remains serviceable as a possible substitute, even if it does sound a bit overly repetitious; it appears at the end of the transcription as an alternative reading. Final cauda (over line 10,3): T: F: the om 2si=g,f in phrase 12 at L29-30 is restored from W1, Ma.

IN RIPALIGERIS

Conductus (J23/183)

F, f. 339v (7,81)

I

D
[In ri - pa li - ge - ris e[s]t mar - ti - no - po - lis urbs or - bem ten - pe - rans.

T
[a] In ri - pa li - ge - ris e[s]t [b] mar - ti - no - po - lis [c] urbs [b] or - bem ten - pe - rans.

or:  or:

or:  or:

or - bis gem - ma. a - si - lum mi - se - ris pa - rem a - po - sto - lis or - bis gem - ma. a - si - lum mi - se - ris [d] pa - rem [d'] a - po - sto - lis pa - tro - num ve - ne - rans urbs su - pre - ma.

pa - tro - num ve - ne - rans urbs su - pre - ma.

II

D
Po - lis est ci - vi - tas. po - lis plu - ra - li - tas. po - lis ro - tun - di - tas.

T
[a'] Po - lis est ci - vi - tas. [e] po - lis plu - ra - li - tas. [e] po - lis ro - tun - di - tas.

[e] po - lis di - stra - cti - o. [e'] hec po - lis ci - vi - tas. [e] po - le - on de - i - tas.

[e] po - lis di - stra - cti - o. [e'] hec po - lis ci - vi - tas. [e] po - le - on de - i - tas.

cui - li - bet ve - ri - tas ma - gi - stra ra - ti - o.

[e] cui - li - bet ve - ri - tas [e''] ma - gi - stra ra - ti - o.

III

Mul - ti-plex lo - ci ti - tu - lus lau - dis cap - tat pre - co - ni - um.

Mul - ti-plex lo - ci ti - tu - lus lau - dis cap - tat pre - co - ni - um.

sed ti - tu - lo - rum cu - mu - lus vin - cit sti - li of - fi - ti - um.

sed ti - tu - lo - rum cu - mu - lus vin - cit sti - li of - fi - ti - um.

pa - tro - nus cle - rus po - pu - lus u - ber - tas tem - po - ra - li - um. ce - res

pa - tro - nus cle - rus po - pu - lus u - ber - tas tem - po - ra - li - um. ce - res

li - ber fons or - tu - lus am - nes pra - ta con - val - li - um.

li - ber fons or - tu - lus am - nes pra - ta con - val - li - um.

IV

A - [a] - e - ris cle - men - ti - a ce - li con - stel - la - ti - o.

A - [a] - e - ris cle - men - ti - a ce - li con - stel - la - ti - o.

so - [so] - lis re - dun - dan - ti - a mo - [mo] - rum com - po - si - ti - o.

so - [so] - lis re - dun - dan - ti - a mo - [mo] - rum com - po - si - ti - o.

lar - gi - tas et ho - nes - tas; tu - ro - nis ver - nan - ti - a

lar - gi - tas et ho - nes - tas; tu - ro - nis ver - nan - ti - a u - no qua - si gre - mi - o co - lunt do - mi - ci - li - a. ex - u - lat se - di - ti - o.

u - no qua - si gre - mi - o co - lunt do - mi - ci - li - a. ex - u - lat se - di - ti - o.

et guer - ra - rum tem - pe - stas.

et guer - ra - rum tem - pe - stas.

Er - go si - cut car - bun - cu - lus et flos - cu - lus tu - ro - nis mi - cat

Er - go si - cut car - bun - cu - lus et flos - cu - lus tu - ro - nis mi - cat

ur - bi - bus et se - di - bus fe - cun - de. gal - lus hi - spa - nus. a - pu - lus et

ur - bi - bus et se - di - bus fe - cun - de. gal - lus hi - spa - nus. a - pu - lus et gre - cu - lus in - vi - dent tu - ro - nen - si - bus cum vi - ri - bus pro - fun -

gre - cu - lus in - vi - dent tu - ro - nen - si - bus cum vi - ri - bus pro - fun -

- de.]

- de.

IN RIPA LIGERIS

Conductus (J23/183)

F, f. 339v (7,81)

- | | |
|--|--|
| I In ripa Ligeris
e[s]t Martinopolis, urbs orbem temperans,
orbis gemma,
asilum miseris,
parem apostolis,
patronum venerans
urbs suprema. | On the banks of the river Loire stands St. Martin's city, Tours, a city moderating the globe,
a jewel of the earth,
5 a refuge for the wretched,
a most exalted town, honoring a patron saint equal to the apostles. |
| II Polis est civitas.
Polis pluralitas.
Polis rotunditas.
Polis distractio.
Hec polis civitas, poleon deitas,
cuilibet: veritas,
magistra, ratio. | A city is its citizenry.
10 A city is diversity.
A city is its circumference.
A city is distraction.
This is a city's city;
it is a goddess of cities 15 for whatever you wish, be it truth, learning, or reason. |
| III Multiplex loci titulus
laudis captat preconium;
sed titulorum cumulus vincit stili offitium:
patronus, clerus, populus,
ubertas temporalium:
Ceres, Liber, fons, ortulus,
amnes, prata convallium, | The manifold renown of the place attracts the noise of praise;
but its accumulation of honors 20 surpasses the task of writing them down:
its patron saint, clergy, people,
its abundance of things on this earth:
its harvest, wine, streams, gardens,
its rivers, and its valleys' meadows, |
| IV aeris clementia, celi constellatio,
solis redundantia,
morum compositio,
largitas et honestas.
Turonis vernantia,
uno quasi gremio,
colunt domicilia.
Exulat seditio
et guerrarum tempestas. | 25 the mildness of its climate,
the stars above it,
its abundance of sun,
its disposition of morals, its generosity and honesty.
30 Its households,
as if in one bosom,
cultivate the verdure of Tours.
Let treachery and the storm of wars be gone. |
| V Ergo, sicut carbunculus et flosculus, Turonis micat urbibus et sedibus fecunde.
Gallus, Hispanus, Apulus, et Greculus
invidet Turonensibus | 35 So, like a bright red gem and ornament,
Tours shines abundantly, thanks to its towns and residences.
The Frenchman, the Spaniard, 40 Italian, and Greek profoundly |

cum viribus profunde.

44 envy the people of Tours, along with their strengths.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 81, f. 339v: a2; Strophes I-V complete, with the initials of II-V represented by capitals; yet with an erroneous blue-painted upper-case “R” initial, decorated with red tracery, curiously and mistakenly entered in a space left between the two syllables of “Ergo,” at line 35,1 (i.e., “ErRgo”), beginning Strophe V; F presents a unique setting of both text and music. It seems noteworthy that the poetry of the previous work in F-7, Ex oliva Remensium (H5/109), is also devoted to a French city, that of Reims.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Versification: Although the five strophes as presented above correspond to the way the text is divided in F, with capital letters signaling the start of each stanza, these five units additionally divide into equivalent halves in terms of number of lines, rhythmic structure, and rhyme scheme. Prior publications of this text all arrange the poem according to these smaller units (for these, see the section below on text variants). This manner of presentation, though, has been avoided here, since the repeated poetic half-stanzas do not show corresponding musical parallelisms. On another matter, the short 3p lines in Strophe V (lines 39 and 44) could also be combined with the preceding verses to form 7p lines with internal rhyme. Textual notes: 1-2: the French city of Tours was especially associated with St. Martin of Tours, one of the earliest bishops of the town (reg. 371-397). He is perhaps best known for cutting his cloak in half to share with a beggar he met while on horseback. His high renown (as exhibited in lines 7-8) made Tours a prominent pilgrimage site on the trek to Santiago de Compostela. His feast is celebrated on 11 November. 12: this line is a bit difficult to construe (as are the connotations of a number of other words in this stanza), since the Latin word “distractio” is typically associated with negative qualities (such as “pulling apart,” “division,” “separation”); here the English cognate has been retained in an attempt to correspond with the positive qualities of Tours that populate the remainder of the poem. 15,1: “cuilibet” is reckoned trisyllabically in both poem and musical setting. 23,1-2: these two items in the long list of positive attributes enjoyed by Tours are personified in the poem as Roman deities, corresponding to the harvest (Ceres, goddess of agriculture) and wine (Liber, an early associate of Ceres, and sometimes regarded as an equivalent to Dionysus and Bacchus). 24-25: the catalog of praiseworthy attributes of Tours begun in the previous stanza (III) with line 21 crosses over the boundaries of these strophes without a major syntactical break, a rather rare occurrence in this repertory. For an analogous situation, see the lack of division between the added strophes (V-VI) that appear in Fauv for the conductus Trine vocis tripudio – Trahunt in precipitia (E4/351) transmitted in F-6,5. 30,1: see the comments on line 37,1. 34: it is not clear whether a particular war or battle, either recent or ancient, may be referred to here; if so, a reference to a conflict from between ca. 1200-1240 that could be clearly established might help to date the poem and its musical setting. More widely cast, some conceivable possibilities for the mention could include the Battle of Tours (or Poitiers) of 732, where the victory over Muslim forces by Frankish and Aquitanian armies under Charles Martel (“the Hammer,” grandfather of Charlemagne, who ruled in Francia as duke, prince, and as Mayor of the Palace, 718-741) decisively counteracted the spread of Islam in the region and laid the foundation for the Frankish empire that would proliferate over the following century. This battle is possibly also alluded to in the text of the conductus De rupta rupecula (F25/82), see the notes to lines 25-27 of this poem. A further prospect could lie in the Albigensian Crusade (1209-1229), which is the subject of the conductus Anni favor iubilei (J25/16). 35-39: the carbuncle (the “bright red gem” in the translation) was so closely associated with brilliance that it was purportedly able to emit its own light.¹ 37,1: the form of this word (“Turonis”) is here construed as nominative, in order to supply a concrete subject for this sentence. The same form appears earlier in line 30,1, where it is parsed as genitive. More frequently encountered trisyllabic nominative forms of the many Latin names available for Tours include Turoni, Turones, and Toronus, which could be substituted, if so wished.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 2,1: F: et; corrected after Anderson (NDRC, 5:xiv-xv), Dreves (AH, 21:182, no. 255), and Delisle (“Discours,” 117-118),² although Dreves does not report the variant. 3,3: a retained variant spelling of “temperans,” the latter appearing in Anderson, Dreves, Delisle (all ibid.). 11,2: reading as in F and following Delisle, differing from Anderson (NDRC, 5:xv): iocunditas, and Dreves: jucunditas. 23,4: a retained variant spelling of “hortulus,” following Delisle, the latter in Anderson, Dreves. 24,1: F: “annes,” adopted reading from Deslisle, Dreves; Anderson gives “amnis,” likely due to the fact that only one major river is named earlier in the poem, but the courses of the rivers Cher, Indre, and Vienne also flow relatively near to Tours. The adopted plural form, “amnes,” hence, is closer in sound to the apparently faulty F reading and thus preferred here. 35,1: F: ErRgo, due to the imposition of an unnecessary decorated initial; see the above source report on F for details. 43,2: F: “viribus,” retained, as in Deslisle; Anderson and Dreves emend to “urbibus.” MUSIC: Line 44: the 2si over the second syllable of “[pro]fun[de]” that lead into the final cauda are not graphically el, as they are in the penultimate notes at the end of Strophe II. An extension of the penultimate syllable of line 39 (“[fe]cun[de]”), seems implied by the compound notes at that point in the MS; this last feature has prompted the editorial rhythmic extension here that serves to balance the end of the first half of the stanza with close of the second. Final cauda: T: F: an additional si=g precedes the el penultimate a of the piece; this note is omitted editorially here, as it seems unnecessary for the musical context, and there is some evidence of erasure at this point in F (the remaining scraps of red and blue color here possibly also suggesting the intention to add another unnecessary initial, as at the start of Strophe V, line 35,1). This could imply a possible degree of confusion over this closing gesture, or perhaps hint at a corrupted reading.

¹See, for example, the characterization of the carbuncle given by the Distinctiones monasticae in Jean-Baptiste Pitra, ed., Spicilegium solesmense, 4 vols. (Paris: F. Didot, 1852-1858), 2 (1855): 184: “Et tamen a carbone lapis, igneo fulgore rutilans, carbunculus nominatur” (“And yet a stone, shining with fiery brilliance, is named ‘carbuncle,’ from ‘coal.’”).

²“Discours de M. Léopold Delisle,” Annuaire-Bulletin de la Société de l’Histoire de France, 23 (1885): 82-139.

AGE PENITENTIAM
Conductus (H31/11)

F, f. 340v (7,82)

The musical score is presented in three systems, each with two vocal staves (D and T) and a basso continuo line. The lyrics are in Latin and are written in blue ink below the notes. The score includes various musical notations such as clefs, notes, rests, and performance markings.

System 1: The vocal parts begin with a rest, followed by the lyrics: - ge pe - ni - ten - ti - am me - mor un - de ce - ci - de - ris. The basso continuo line provides a rhythmic accompaniment.

System 2: The lyrics continue: de - i vi - am de - se - ris ve - ni - es ad ve - ni - am. The vocal parts feature a melodic line with a blue dashed line indicating a phrase. The basso continuo line continues with a similar rhythmic pattern.

System 3: The lyrics conclude with: fe - ce - ris et pe - ni - tens do - lu - e - ris in - no - cen - tis glo - ri - am. The vocal parts end with a final cadence, and the basso continuo line provides a concluding accompaniment.

Performance markings include red boxes containing letters (a, a', b, b'), blue brackets above notes, and red 'CaJ' markings above the vocal staves. The basso continuo line includes a red 'e' marking above a note.

qui - a mi - ser a mi - se - ris.
qui - a mi - ser a mi - se - ris.

quod - [quod] - que cum ma - num mi - se - ris
quod - [quod] - que cum ma - num mi - se - ris

ad a - ra - trum; ad ba - ra - trum re - spex - e - ad a - ra - trum; ad ba - ra - trum re - spex - e -

- ris.]
- ris.

AGE PENITENTIAM

Conductus (H31/11)

F, f. 340v (7,82)

I	Age penitentiam!		Do penance!
	Memor unde cecideris.		Remember from whence you fell.
	Qui, dei viam deseris,		You, who forsook God's path,
	venies ad veniam		will achieve forgiveness
	si primum opus feceris	5	if you have done the primary task et penitens dolueris;		and suffered as a penitent;
	innocentis gloriam		since, wretch, you lost
	quia, miser, amiseris;		the glory of an innocent;
	quodque, cum manum miseris		and because, when you put your hand
	ad aratrum, ad baratrum	10	to the plow, you looked back respexeris.		at the abyss.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 82, f. 340v: a2; Strophe I complete, with its opening red filigreed initial beginning mid-system on the folio, rather than at the left margin, something that happens with only 12 pieces within F-7.¹

W1, fasc. 9, no. 87, f. 173v (164v): a2; Strophe I complete, with a painted opening initial. An upper-case “S,” seen in no other source, begins line 5, which Anderson (NDRC, 3:xxxv) and others have construed as the start of a second strophe (see the remarks on versification below). The end of the final cauda and the closing punctus organi trails into the right margin of the last system to contain the piece.

Ma, fasc. 3, no. 22, f. , f. 65r: a2; Strophe I complete, with no opening initial in the space provided for it at the left margin (even though the two surrounding works bear painted, filigreed beginnings), and there is a lower-case “a” just before the music of the T staff starts, possibly to serve as a guide letter for an illuminator. Like W1, the end of the final cauda and closing punctus organi intrude into the right margin of the last system.

CaJ (GB-CJc QB 1; Cambridge, Jesus College, MS QB 1), Fragment A, no. 15, ff. Fr-v (the leaf is reconstructed from five extant binding strips out of an original six):² a2; the bulk of Strophe I is fragmentarily preserved, with the remains of only the left portion of a large red- and blue-painted initial decorated with tracery opening the stanza. Due to the fragmentary nature of CaJ, various portions of music and text are lost throughout.³ Curiously, approximately the second half of the final cauda is omitted here in comparison with the other sources, which makes it coincidentally interesting that the final cauda of the preceding work in CaJ (Deduc Syon uberrimas [G8/85]) has an expanded, although otherwise unrelated, final melisma. CaJ then continues with a setting of the conductus Anni favor iubilei (J25/16), generally complete except for a few omissions similar to those affecting Age penitentiam. The way Anni favor is entered on the leaf, though, with a smaller red-painted and undecorated upper-case initial “A,” gives every indication that the scribe and illuminator considered it to be a continuation of Age penitentiam. Besides appearing in CaJ, Anni favor is preserved only as F-7,87 (f. 347v), five pieces after Age penitentiam and as a completely separate work.

¹For a list, see the source report on F for Pia mater gratie (J18/268), at F-7,71, on f. 331r.

² The individually foliated binding strips that originally constituted each folio show the following numbers, reading from left to right of the indicated leaf: f. Fr (strips 33r, followed by a wide gap from the missing strip, 6v, 24v, 21v, 8v, 32v), f. Fv (32r, 8r, 21[r], 24[r], 6[r], followed by a gap from the missing strip, and 33v. For a catalog and correctly reconstituted images of this source, including the labeling system used here to refer to the fragments, see William J. Summers and Peter M. Lefferts, English Thirteenth-Century Polyphony: A Facsimile Edition, Early English Church Music, no. 57 (London: Stainer and Bell for the British Academy, 2016), pp. 14-15, plates 11-34.

³The general musico-poetic contents of each individual leaf show that f. Fr of CaJ has Age penitentiam opening at the left margin of the second system on the leaf and taking up the first half of this system, the rest of which is occupied by the continuing end of the expanded final cauda and punctus organi of the preceding work in CaJ, the conductus Deduc Syon uberrimas (G8/85), appearing earlier in F as 7,77. Most of the opening initial of Age penitentiam and the start of the piece is cut away with the loss of a binding strip. Similar lacunae in this source (not reported in detail here) plague the other systems that contain this piece. Folio Fr concludes with the music and text of the first syllable of line 5,2 (“pri[mum]”). The remnants of f. Fv begin immediately thereafter, with some

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Versification: Anderson (NDRC, 3:xxxv) and CPI (replicating it) present the text as two stanzas. This seems based solely on the presence of an upper-case letter opening line 5,1 (“Si”) that appears only in WI, and which seems to operate less as a stanzaic division than a lower-level syntactical break, since WI more regularly has recourse to larger, painted initials to show stanzaic divisions. The resulting brevity and irregularity of the proposed strophes prompts their presentation here as a mono-stanzaic poem. The structure of the final lines of verse allows for multiple interpretations. The last 12 syllables are here presented as an 8p line with an internal rhyme (4p+4p) not seen previously in the poem (“-atrum,” shown above by additional horizontal space), concluding with a separate, four-syllable unit that continues the rhyme first encountered in line 2 (“-eris”). Other presentations could opt for an equally defensible three lines of four syllables, or one of 12. Textual notes: 1-6: the language of line 1, urging the practice of the sacrament of penance, is a common biblical expression; for some directly corresponding passages, see Matthew, 3:2, 4:17; Acts, 2:38, 8:22; Revelation, 2:16, 3:3, 3:19.⁴ More extensive biblical echoes with the conductus poem arise within Revelation, 2:5: “Memor esto itaque unde excideris: et age poenitentiam, et prima opera fac: sin autem, venio tibi, et movebo candelabrum tuum de loco suo, nisi poenitentiam egeris.” (“Be mindful therefore from whence you are fallen: and do penance, and do the first works. Or else I come to you, and will move your candlestick out of its place, unless you do penance.”). For other treatments of penance and confession in the Parisian conductus repertory, see Ego reus confiteor (H20/106) and Nulli beneficium (H7/229). 7: the expression “glory of an innocent” might conceivably be a glance towards Pope Innocent III (1198-1216), who called together the Fourth Lateran Council in 1215, the body that was to instill the sacrament of penance more fully into the further losses occasioned by the missing binding strip. About one-third of the way through the third system on the leaf, the piece concludes with an abridged final cauda. Immediately following is a small painted initial “A,” beginning a nearly complete setting of the independent conductus Anni favor iubilei (J25/16); see the source report on CaJ, above, and the observations below on the music.

⁴Matthew, 3:2: “... et dicens: Poenitentiam agite: appropinquavit enim regnum caelorum” (“... and saying: Do penance: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.”). Matthew, 4:17: “Exinde coepit Jesus praedicare, et dicere: Poenitentiam agite: appropinquavit enim regnum caelorum” (“From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say: Do penance, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.”). Acts, 2:38: “Petrus vero ad illos: Poenitentiam, inquit, agite, et baptizetur unusquisque vestrum in nomine Jesu Christi in remissionem peccatorum vestrorum: et accipietis donum Spiritus Sancti” (“But Peter said to them: Do penance, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of your sins: and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.”). Acts, 8:22: “Poenitentiam itaque age ab hac nequitia tua: et roga Deum, si forte remittatur tibi haec cogitatio cordis tui” (“Do penance therefore for this your wickedness; and pray to God, that perhaps this thought of your heart may be forgiven you.”). Revelation, 2:16: “Similiter poenitentiam age: si quominus veniam tibi cito, et pugnabo cum illis in gladio oris mei” (“In like manner do penance: if not, I will come to you quickly, and will fight against them with the sword of my mouth.”). Revelation, 3:3: “In mente ergo habe qualiter acceperis, et audieris, et serva, et poenitentiam age. Si ergo non vigilaveris, veniam ad te tamquam fur et nescies qua hora veniam ad te” (“Have in mind therefore in what manner you have received and heard: and observe, and do penance. If then you shall not watch, I will come to you as a thief, and you shall not know at what hour I will come to you.”). Revelation, 3:19: “Ego quos amo, arguo, et castigo. Aemulare ergo, et poenitentiam age” (“Such as I love, I rebuke and chastise. Be zealous therefore, and do penance.”).

ceremonies of the church. See the notes on the text of the conductus Ego reus confiteor (H20/106) that pertain to private and public penance. 8-9: notice the annominatio among the word forms miser, amiseris, and miseris, with each word sharing similar sounds but construing different connotations from an assonant grammatical root. 9-11: redolent of Luke, 9:62: “Ait ad illum Jesus: Nemo mittens manum suam ad aratrum, et respiciens retro, aptus est regno Dei.” (“Jesus said to him: ‘No man putting his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.’”). The connotation from the gospel alludes to the fact that one creates straighter rows when plowing a field by looking ahead, rather than behind. Here the added image of the “abyss” or pit (baratrum) would seem to connote damnation as well as the recognition of one’s sinful behavior. 9,1: “quodque” is construed here as “quod” with the enclitic suffix “que,” not as a form of “quisque.”

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 4,1: F, Ma: veniens; adopted reading from W1, CaJ. 10,4: an alternative spelling of “barathrum.” MUSIC: Opening cauda: TD: beginning at L11, CaJ shows a slightly extended rhythmic reading up to the second syllable of line 1 (“[A]ge”); the alternative values for this segment appear above the staves (its last note in the T – not in F, Ma – is a repeated, el f). T: W1: flatted b at L12. Line 2,3: D: it is tempting to consider the fall of 7C in the punctus organi here as word painting for “cecideris.” 7,1: D: F: last 2 syllables of “[inno]centis” written 2 lower; adopted reading from W1, Ma; missing from CaJ. 3,1: D: F, Ma: om stroke preceding this short cauda; taken from W1, CaJ. 5,2-7,1: D: W1: the absence of any sigs for this passage, and the introduction in Ma of a b-natural sig in the D before line 6,3 (“dolueris”), indicates that any applicable b pitches might be sung as natural here. CaJ, furthermore, has no sig in the T as well, although a b-flat sig continues in the D. Final cauda: TD: Ma: the opening 12L or so of this final melisma are very slightly reconfigured. A resulting b/a dissonance at L6 suggests this different reading may reflect a scribal correction or accommodation of a problematic passage. TD: CaJ: as noted above in the source report on this MS, after L26 the remainder of the cauda is apparently purposefully omitted. The piece closes here, followed by the remains of the beginning of the conductus Anni favor iubilei, which opens with a minor, painted initial as if starting a new strophe for Age penitentiam. T: F: the om 3li=dcd at L46 that starts the phrase 15 comes from W1, Ma, lost from CaJ.

GLORIA IN EXCELSIS DEO REDEMPTORI
 Conductus (H1/145)

E f. 341r (7,83)*

D
I
T
[Glo -
Glo -

*CaJ: different setting of lines 1-2, see at end

[Glo] - ri - a in ex-cel-sis de - o re-dem-pto-ri me - o
 [Glo] - ri - a in ex-cel-sis de - o re-dem-pto-ri me - o

ga-li-le - o si - de-re - o bi-ne ma-ie-sta - tis. et in ter - ra pax
 ga-li-le - o si - de-re - o bi-ne ma-ie-sta - tis. et in ter - ra pax

CaJ: cauda extended, see at end

ho - mi-ni - bus. non ta-men o - mni - bus. er -
 ho - mi-ni - bus. non ta-men o - mni - bus. er -

[er] - go qui - bus fi - de-li - bus
 [er] - go qui - bus fi - de-li - bus

†CaJ: extended cauda, see end

bo-ne vo - lun-ta - tis. hinc a - mor in - de tre-mor. in-ter u-trum-que pre-mor.
 bo-ne vo - lun-ta - tis. hinc a - mor in - de tre-mor. in-ter u-trum-que pre-mor.

*For comparisons of related passages between Gloria in excelsis deo redemptori and Sursum corda elevate (G9/343), see the end of the Sursum transcription.

Musical notation for the first system, consisting of two staves. The upper staff begins with a treble clef and a common time signature. The lower staff begins with a bass clef and a common time signature. Both staves contain a series of notes and rests, with blue brackets above the notes indicating phrasing. A blue dashed line with an arrow points from the first staff to the second staff, indicating a melodic line.

Musical notation for the second system, consisting of two staves. The upper staff begins with a treble clef and a common time signature. The lower staff begins with a bass clef and a common time signature. Both staves contain a series of notes and rests, with blue brackets above the notes indicating phrasing. A blue dashed line with an arrow points from the first staff to the second staff, indicating a melodic line.

Musical notation for the third system, featuring two staves. The upper staff is labeled with a red 'II' and 'Al-' in blue. The lower staff is labeled with 'T' and 'Al-' in blue. Both staves contain a series of notes and rests, with blue brackets above the notes indicating phrasing. A red box containing the letter 'a' is placed above the first note of the lower staff.

Musical notation for the fourth system, featuring two staves. The upper staff contains the lyrics: [al] - le - lu - ya ex - po - si - tum lau - da - te in - vi - si - bi - lem. The lower staff contains the lyrics: [al] - le - lu - ya ex - po - si - tum lau - da - te in - vi - si - bi - lem. Both staves contain a series of notes and rests, with blue brackets above the notes indicating phrasing. A blue dashed line with an arrow points from the first staff to the second staff, indicating a melodic line.

Musical notation for the fifth system, featuring two staves. The upper staff contains the lyrics: pa - trem fi - li - um. spi - ri - tum ma - gnum ruf - fum et. The lower staff contains the lyrics: pa - trem fi - li - um. spi - ri - tum ma - gnum ruf - fum et. Both staves contain a series of notes and rests, with blue brackets above the notes indicating phrasing.

Musical notation for the sixth system, featuring two staves. The upper staff contains the lyrics: hu - mi - lem. chri - [chri] - ste. The lower staff contains the lyrics: hu - mi - lem. chri - [chri] - ste. Both staves contain a series of notes and rests, with blue brackets above the notes indicating phrasing. A blue dashed line with an arrow points from the first staff to the second staff, indicating a melodic line.

no - strum e - le - ctrum. tu li - re no - stre ple - ctrum

no - strum e - le - ctrum. tu li - re no - stre ple - ctrum

an - ge - li - cis ad - a - pta. for - mam si an - ge - li - cis ad - a - pta. for - mam

no - stram re - for - ma nos an - ge - lis

no - stram re - for - ma nos an - ge - lis

con - for - ma ca - pti - vi - ta - te ca - pta. a con - for - ma ca - pti - vi - ta - te ca - pta.

si,

Er - go sit glo - ri - a pa - tri et fi - li - o. b

Er - go sit glo - ri - a pa - tri et fi - li - o.

et sit laus ter - ci - a flam - mi - ni ter - ci - o. pa - tri po - ten - ti - a.

et sit laus ter - ci - a flam - mi - ni ter - ci - o. pa - tri po - ten - ti - a.

na - to sci - en - ti - a. fla - mi - ni bo - ni - tas. tri - na est gra - ti - a na - to sci - en - ti - a. fla - mi - ni bo - ni - tas. tri - na est gra - ti - a u - na es - sen - ti - a e - qua - lis de - i - tas.]

u - na es - sen - ti - a e - qua - lis de - i - tas.

(alternative readings follow)

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

CaJ*, f. Cr (no. 13), I: different setting of lines 1-2 (begins binding strip 27r, after a short gap of lost material)

D [Glo] - -ri - a in ex - cel - sis de - [o]

T
[Glo] - -ri - a in ex - cel - sis de - [o]

D
re - dem - pto - ri me - o]

T
re - dem - pto - ri me - o

CaJ*, f. Cr (no. 13), III: extended cauda over line 7,1 [er -

D

T
er -

|TD: CaJ: added material, not in F,WI,Ma ----->

<----- | CaJ: added material

D [er] - go]

T
[er] - go

†CaJ, f. Cr (no. 13), V: extended cauda over line 10,1

D
[pre - mor.]

T
pre - mor.

|TD: CaJ: added material, not in F,WI,Ma ----->

<----- | CaJ: added material

GLORIA IN EXCELSIS DEO REDEMPTORI

Conductus (H1/145)

F, f. 341r (7,83)

- | | |
|---|--|
| I Gloria in excelsis deo,
redemptori meo,
Galileo sidereo,
bine maiestatis.
Et in terra pax hominibus, non tamen omnibus.
Ergo quibus? Fidelibus
bone voluntatis. Hinc amor, inde tremor, inter utrumque premor. | Glory to God in the highest, to my redeemer, the heavenly Galilean of twofold majesty.
5 And on earth peace to mankind, but not for all.
To whom, then? To the faithful
of good will.
On one side is love, on the other, trembling,
10 and I am pressed between the two. |
| II Alleluya! Expositum laudate invisibilem patrem, filium, spiritum.
Magnum, ruffum, et humilem.
Christe, nostrum electrum, tu lire nostre plectrum.
Angelicis adapta,
formam nostram reforma,
nos angelis conforma,
captivitate capta. | Alleluya! Praise the unseen father, son, and spirit now revealed.
Great, ruddy, and humble,
15 O Christ, our amalgam of silver and gold, you are the plectrum of our lyre.
Attune us to the angelic, reform our form,
and conform us to the angels,
20 now that captivity is captured. |
| III Ergo sit gloria
patri et filio, et sit laus terciā
flammini terciō.
Patri potentia,
nato scientia,
flamini bonitas.
Trina est gratia
una essentia,
equalis deitas. | So Glory be to the Father and to the Son, and let a third praise arise for the third, the Holy Spirit.
25 Let there be power for the Father, knowledge for the Son, goodness for the Spirit.
Grace is a three-fold single essence,
30 a coexistent deity. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 83, f. 341r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with II and III indicated by capitals. This and the following conductus in this source, Sursum corda elevate (G9/343) – both with textual connections to items in the Mass liturgy – are in the same order in both F and Ma.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 8, f. 104v (95v): a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with I-III shown by plain painted initials. The piece occurs near the beginning of the fascicle in the midst of a series of four Benedicamus domino organa; it is succeeded by an Agnus trope a2 (Natus corde patris) before more conductus and several motets follow.

Ma, fasc. 4, no. 15, f. 92r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with no initial for I in the space provided for it at the beginning of the system. Room is provided for absent initials beginning II as well as line 7 (“[E]rgo quibus”), and III is also missing its opening letter, but leaves no space for it in the staves above. This and the following conductus in this source, Sursum corda elevate (G9/343) – both with textual connections to items in the Mass liturgy – are in the same order in both F and Ma.

CaJ (GB-CJc QB 1; Cambridge, Jesus College, MS QB 1), Fragment A, no. 13: f. Cr-Dr (each leaf is reconstructed from various extant binding strips):¹ a2; Strophes I-III, complete, but with various segments missing throughout,² with a large painted initial in red and blue, decorated with tracery, opening Stanza I, and with smaller red-painted initials beginning II and III. There are some significant variants from the other sources in the cum littera portions of lines 1-2, while the caudae that occur over line 7,1 (“Er[go quibus]”) and line 10,3 (“premor”) are extended with material not transmitted elsewhere. These alternatives are supplied at the end of the transcription.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: The literal quotations from the verbal portions of the Mass liturgy that pepper this poem (indicated by italics in the text above), as well as the musical imagery in Strophe II, lines 16-17, suggest viewing this work as a companion piece to the conductus Sursum corda elevate (G9/343), which follows it in both F and Ma (out of four existing sources for Gloria in excelsis and seven for Sursum corda) and also quotes from the Mass liturgy. In addition, the opening cum littera gestures in both pieces offer similarities (see the observations below on the music). Lines 1, 5, 8: cf. Luke, 2:14.³ In its pre-Vulgate form as used in the conductus, this Gospel passage corresponds with the opening of the Gloria of the Mass, known otherwise as the Greater Doxology. See lines 21,3-24 for a reference to the Lesser Doxology, or Gloria Patri. 3,1: though he was born in Bethlehem, Jesus’s parents settled in Nazareth, in the region of Galilee. 4: Christ is of two substances, human and divine, corresponding to the first two members of the Trinity, father and son. For an analogous take on this conceit, see Augustine’s Contra sermonem Arianorum, chapter 8.⁴ See also the motets Alpha bovi et leoni / Domino (vdW 764/BD VI), line 11 (“giganti gemineo” – “the two-fold giant”); Ecclesie

¹ The individually foliated binding strips that originally constituted each leaf show the following numbers, reading from left to right of the indicated leaf: f. Cr (strips 34r, 31r, 19r, followed by a slight gap, 27r, 12r), f. Cv (12v, 27v, slight gap, 19v, 31v, 34v), f. Dr (22r, slight gap, 23r, larger gap, 13v). Folio Dv begins at the top left of the leaf with a setting of the conductus Deduc Syon uberrimas (G8/85). For a catalog and correctly reconstituted images of this source, including the labeling system used here to refer to the fragments, see William J. Summers and Peter M. Lefferts, English Thirteenth-Century Polyphony: A Facsimile Edition, Early English Church Music, no. 57 (London: Stainer and Bell for the British Academy, 2016), pp. 14-15, plates 11-34.

²The overall contents of each leaf show that f. Cr begins the piece at the top left and concludes incompletely after about 18L-22L of the cauda following line 10,3 (“premor”), thanks to a missing strip that contained a small portion of the leaf’s right margin. Additional lacunae in this source (not reported in detail here) plague the other systems that contain this piece. Cv opens with the remainder of the previous cauda after a gap of about 3L-4L, and presses on with occasional losses up to the third syllable of line 18,3 (“refo[r]ma”). Folio Dr follows on immediately thereafter, with the piece concluding at the bottom of the leaf, but with more significant internal losses due to wider gaps between the surviving strips.

³Luke, 2:14: “Gloria in altissimis Deo, et in terra pax hominibus bonae voluntatis” (“Glory to God in the highest; and on earth peace to men of good will.”).

⁴Augustine’s Contra sermonem Arianorum, chapter 8: “Apparet tamen idem ipse Christus, geminae gigas substantiae, secundum quid obediens, secundum quid aequalis Deo; secundum quid Filius hominis, secundum quid Filius Dei” (“So it appears that this same Christ is a giant composed of a twin substance, with respect to what is obedient and what is equal to God, corresponding to what is the Son of Man and what is the Son of the Father”). The Latin text is provided by Sancti Aurelii Augustini, Hipponensis episcopi, Opera omnia (Paris: Gaume Bros., 1836), vol. 8, part 1: col. 968C.

princeps / [Et confiteor] (vdW 112b / M12), in Hu, f. 128r), lines 3-4: “substantie gigans et gemine potentie patrie patris eximie” (“[the Lord is a] giant of the twin substance and excellent power of the father of heaven”); as well as the conductus O crux ave spes unica (H4/230), line 15: “gigas fati gemini” (“that giant of twin destiny”). 9: presumably the two extremes here correspond with Christ (“love”) and God (“trembling”), suggesting that the faithful believers mentioned in the previous lines will suffer the wrath of God if they do not willingly accept the love of the son. 11,1: recalls the Alleluia of the Mass. It is noteworthy that this stanza features the rather unusual musical feature of a repeated cauda, as the T voice of both the initial and concluding melismas to Strophe II are essentially identical. Perhaps not coincidentally, this happens to mirror the ABA, respond-verse-respond structure of the performance of an Alleluia in the liturgical context of a Mass celebration. 11,2-13: cf. Hebrews 11:3: “Fide intelligimus aptata esse saecula verbo Dei: ut ex invisibilibus visibilia fierent.” (“By faith we understand that the world was framed by the word of God; that from invisible things visible things might be made.”). 12-14: Mark Everist, in his Discovering Medieval Song, 187,⁵ sees these lines as paraphrases of further portions of the Gloria of the Mass, recasting its middle and closing sections;⁶ these contrast with the more literal citations elsewhere in the poem, italicized in its presentation above. 14,2: possibly a reference to 1 Kings [1 Samuel], 16:12 and 17:42, describing David as a young man.⁷ David is often regarded as an allegorical type of Christ; see, e.g., the Catena aurea of Thomas Aquinas, on Matthew, chapter 1, lectio 5, which quotes the Glossa ordinaria: “Mystice autem David est Christus, qui Goliath, id est Diabolum, superavit” (“In a figurative sense, David is Christ, who conquered Goliath, i.e., the Devil.”). 15,3: possibly referring to the prophetic vision of God’s glory in Ezekiel, 1:4; 1:27; 8:2, where the word electrum is translated in the Douai-Rheims English rendering of the Bible as “amber.” The word’s alternative meaning of “alloy,” especially its connotation of the melding of gold and silver, which seems implied here, unites two precious yet separate commodities, representing in this case divine and mortal, Father and Son. Furthermore, the result of the gold/silver amalgamation relates back to the ruddy color of David/Christ invoked in line 14,2. 16-17: note the use of musical imagery here, a conceit that also appears in lines 5, 9-10, 18-19, and 22-23 of the related conductus Sursum corda elevate (G9/343), contiguously transmitted in both F and Ma. 18-19: see Romans, 12:2.⁸ 20: see Ephesians, 4:7-10,⁹ which paraphrases Psalm ⁵Mark Everist, Discovering Medieval Song: Latin Poetry and Music in the Conductus (Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2018).

⁶Specifically: “Laudamus te ... Deus pater omnipotens, Domine Fili ... cum Sancto Spiritu ...”

⁷1 Kings [1 Samuel], 16:12: “Misit ergo, et adduxit eum. Erat autem rufus, et pulcher aspectu, decoraque facie: et ait Dominus: Surge, unge eum: ipse est enim” (“He [Jesse] sent therefore and brought him [David]. Now he [David] was ruddy and beautiful to behold, and of a comely face. And the Lord said: Arise, and anoint him, for this is he.”). 1 Kings [1 Samuel], 17:42: “Cumque inspexisset Philisthaeus, et vidisset David, despexit eum. Erat enim adolescens, rufus, et pulcher aspectu” (“And when the Philistine [Goliath] looked, and beheld David, he despised him. For he was a young man, ruddy, and of a comely countenance.”).

⁸Romans, 12:2: “Et nolite conformari huic saeculo, sed reformamini in novitate sensus vestri: ut probetis quae sit voluntas Dei bona, et beneplacens, et perfecta” (“And be not conformed to this world; but be reformed in the newness of your mind, that you may prove what is the good, and the acceptable, and the perfect will of God.”).

⁹Ephesians, 4:7-10: “Unicuique autem nostrum data est gratia secundum mensuram donationis Christi. Propter quod dicit: ‘Ascendens in altum, captivam duxit captivitatem: dedit dona hominibus.’ Quod autem ascendit, quid est, nisi quia et descendit primum in inferiores partes terrae? Qui descendit, ipse est et qui ascendit super omnes caelos, ut impleret omnia.” (“But to every one of us is given grace, according to the measure of the giving of Christ. Wherefore he [the Psalmist] says: ‘Ascending on high, he led captivity captive; he gave gifts to men.’ The fact that he ascended, what does that mean, except that he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth? He that descended is the same also that ascended above all the heavens, that he might fill all things”).

67:19.¹⁰ The particular mention of captivity and captives here¹¹ is related to what is often referred to as Christ's Harrowing of Hell, a non-scriptural account where, after his crucifixion, Jesus "descended into the lower regions of the earth" (Ephesians, 4:9) and led to Heaven a number of souls "imprisoned" there who were considered righteous for salvation, including, for example, Adam, Eve, and King Solomon. For more on this captive imagery, see the remarks on the text for the conductus O qui fontem gratie (H28/243), line 2,1. 21,3-24: directly quotes the opening part of the Lesser Doxology that concludes many items in the liturgy; for a reference to the Greater Doxology, i.e. the Gloria of the Mass, see the above remarks for lines 1, 5, and 8.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. MUSIC: Connections with the conductus Sursum corda elevate: Notice the similarities in contour and pitch in all sources of this piece between the first three notes in the T over the cum littera setting of "Glo[ria]" and those over "Sur[sum]" and the musically repeated passage on "non [discordat]" in the conductus Sursum corda elevate (G9/343, lines 1,1 and 4,1, respectively). In the second instance in Sursum corda, it so happens that most of the D voice is also identical with "Gloria" of Gloria in excelsis. Similarly, the five T pitches over "[Glori]a in excelsis" in line 1 are identical to the setting of "habemus domi[no]" and the corresponding "et vitis pampi[no]" in Sursum corda (lines 3 and 6, respectively) in all sources but CaJ, which gives the contrasting reading supplied after the main transcription. These two conductus, furthermore, occur together and in the same order in both F and Ma. Such musical correspondences, as well as the rather prominent structural placement of the correlations as the opening gestures in both works suggest that they may have been conceived in coordination with each other. For transcriptions of these related passages in close succession, see the items following the alternative readings in the edition of Sursum corda elevate. Line 1,1: D: for the start of the cum littera setting of "Glo[ria]," F: 5C written 4C+1R; W1: 6C+siP=gfedcb+Pb; Ma, CaJ: 4C, si; the following 1 of 3li=g is partially worn or erased. 1,3: D: F: the c of "ex[cel]sis" is partially worn or erased. 3,1: D: F: g over last syllable of "galileo," corrected after W1, Ma, CaJ. Caudae on lines 7,1; 10,3: the extended versions of these cauda in CaJ are supplied at the end of the transcription. Caudae at lines 11,1; 20,2: for possible connections to the Alleluia of the Mass that are prompted by the repeated music in the T of these caudae (which respectively open and close the second stanza of this work), see the notes on the text for line 11,1. The latter instance of this cauda's music at line 20,2, with its different D melody, prompted the choice of the central TL rest in the former passage where both parts pause together. 15,1: T: F: the extended rhythmic values supplied for the 4C=cbag figure at "chri[ste]" are prompted by the DL shape that this figure opens with in Ma, as well as the extra DL=g that follows the 4C in W1.

¹⁰Psalms, 67:19: "Ascendisti in altum, cepisti captivitatem, accepisti dona in hominibus; etenim non credentes inhabitare Dominum Deum" ("You have ascended on high, you have led captivity captive; you have received gifts in men; and indeed for those also that do not believe, the dwelling of the Lord God").

¹¹The expression from the Epistle and the Psalm invite comparison to the frequent conceit of death itself being overcome by death (i.e., by Jesus's sacrifice and resurrection), as in such passages as Hebrews, 2:14-15; Romans, 6:9; 1 Corinthians, 15:26-27, 54-55; see also Payne, Motets and Prosulas, p. 27 (note to lines 136-137).

SURSUM CORDA ELEVATE
Conductus (G9/343)

F, f. 342v (7,84)*

Ia

Soprano: Sur - sum cor - da e - le - va - te.
 Tenor: Sur - sum cor - da e - le - va - te.

Ib

Soprano: dul - ci cor - da re - so - na - te.
 Tenor: dul - ci cor - da re - so - na - te.

Soprano: ha - be - mus do - mi - no.
 Tenor: ha - be - mus do - mi - no.

Soprano: non dis - cor - det vox a cor - de Tenor: non dis - cor - det vox a cor - de

Soprano: sed con - cor - det li - ra cor - de Tenor: sed con - cor - det li - ra cor - de

*For comparisons of related passages between Sursum corda elevate and Gloria in excelsis deo redemptori (H1/145), see the end of the Sursum transcription.

et vi - tis pa[m]-pi - no
et vi - tis pa[m]-pi - no

Ar - gu - men - tum si - ne in - stan - ci - a do - cu - men - tum si - ne Ar - gu - men - tum si - ne in - stan - ci - a do - cu - men - tum si - ne

fal - la - ti - a. can - tu pro - sa. in - stru - men - tis fal - la - ti - a. can - tu pro - sa. in - stru - men - tis di - gnis me - lo - di - a - le - te men - tis ex - po - nit gau - di - a vo - cis glo - di - gnis me - lo - di - a - le - te men - tis ex - po - nit gau - di - a vo - cis glo -

- sa.
- sa.

mode 3/2

IIa

D
San - [san]-ctus san - ctus san - ctus can - tus

T
San - [san]-ctus san - ctus san - ctus can - tus

est san - cto - rum an - ge - lo - rum tes - te y - sa - y - a.

est san - cto - rum an - ge - lo - rum tes - te y - sa - y - a.

mode 3/2

IIb

D
pa - [pa] - tet quan - tus

T
pa - [pa] - tet quan - tus

est rex tan - tus cui tan - to - rum be - a - to - rum ser - vit ar - mo - ni - a.

est rex tan - tus cui tan - to - rum be - a - to - rum ser - vit ar - mo - ni - a.

IIc

D ce - li sym - pho - ni - a. nos or - ta - tur ut ca - na - mus

T ce - li sym - pho - ni - a. nos or - ta - tur ut ca - na - mus

mode 1

et le - ta - tur dum can - ta - mus an - ge - lo - rum che - lis.

et le - ta - tur dum can - ta - mus an - ge - lo - rum che - lis.

mo-du-la-tur dum cla-ma-mus o-san-na

mo-du-la-tur dum cla-ma-mus o-san-na

in ce-lis. in ce-lis.

IIIa
Er- Er-
[E h] [h']

[er]-go a-gnus ve-ri
[i] [j]
[er]-go a-gnus ve-ri de-i ma-gne ma-gnus da-tor spe-i qui tol-lis pec-ca-ta.

[k] [il]
de-i ma-gne ma-gnus da-tor spe-i qui tol-lis pec-ca-ta.

IIIb
Qui Qui
[E h] [h']

[qui] pec - ca - ta mun - di
[i] [j]
[qui] pec - ca - ta mun - di

tol - lis le - ge la - ta pe - nas mol - lis. et e - men - das fa - ta.
[k] [i] tol - lis le - ge la - ta pe - nas mol - lis. et e - men - das fa - ta.

IIIc
D mi - se - re - re mi - se - ra - tor. ve - rus ve - re le - gis - la - tor.
T [F] [I] [l] [i] mi - se - re - re mi - se - ra - tor. ve - rus ve - re le - gis - la - tor.

le - va pa - cis fa - cem. mi - se - ra - tor mi - se - re - re [m2] [n]
le - va pa - cis fa - cem. mi - se - ra - tor mi - se - re - re

[n] le - gis - la - tor ve - rus ve - re do - na no - bis pa - [m3] le - gis - la - tor ve - rus ve - re do - na no - bis pa -

*WI has different closing cauda made up entirely of earlier material; Metz has a3 setting in mode 3 with unique Tr; for both, see at end

[h] [h']

First system of musical notation, two staves. Red boxes contain the letters 'i' and '(i1)', and '(i2)'. Blue brackets are placed above the notes.

Second system of musical notation, two staves. Red boxes contain the letters 'o' and 'o'. Blue brackets are placed above the notes.

Third system of musical notation, two staves. Red boxes contain the letters 'i' and 'i'. The text '- cem.]' and '- cem.' is written at the end of the staves. Blue brackets are placed above the notes.

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*W1, f. 173v (164v), III: alternative final cauda; reprises, in both parts, selected caudae from Strophes Ia, Ib, IIIa, and IIIb
|TD = closing cauda, Strophe Ia

First alternative reading, two staves. Red boxes contain the letters 'y', 'z', 'y', and 'z'. The text '(pa) -' is written at the beginning of the staves. Blue brackets are placed above the notes.

|TD = closing cauda, Strophe Ib

Second alternative reading, two staves. Red boxes contain the letters 'z', 'y', 'z', and 'y'. Blue brackets are placed above the notes.

|TD = opening cauda, Strophe IIIa

Third alternative reading, two staves. Red boxes contain the letters 'E h', 'h', and 'i'. Blue brackets are placed above the notes.

| TD = opening cauda, Strophe IIIb

Metz, f. 1r, l: a3 extant setting of final cauda in mode 3 with unique Tr

RELATED PASSAGES BETWEEN Sursum corda elevate AND Gloria in excelsis deo redemptori (H1/145)

1a. Gloria in excelsis deo redemptori (F), line 1,1 (compare Sursum corda: T of lines 1,1-2, TD of lines 4,1)

(continued)

(Sursum corda, Gloria in excelsis: related passages, continued)

1b. Sursum corda elevate (F), line 1,1-2 (compare Gloria in excelsis, T of line 1,1)

D
8 [Sur - sum cor - da]

T
8 Sur - sum cor - da

1c. Sursum corda elevate (F), line 4,1 (compare Gloria in excelsis, TD of line 1,1)

D
8 [non dis - cor - det]

T
8 non dis - cor - det

2a. Gloria in excelsis deo redemptori (F), line 1,2-3 (compare Sursum corda, T of lines 3 and 6)

D
8 (Glori)- [a in ex - cel - sis de - o]

T
8 (Glori)- a in ex - cel - sis de - o

2b. Sursum corda elevate (F), line 3 (compare Gloria in excelsis, T of line 1,1)

D
8 [ha - be - mus do - mi - no.]

T
8 ha - be - mus do - mi - no.

2c. Sursum corda elevate (F), line 6 (compare Gloria in excelsis, T of line 1,1)

D
8 [et vi - tis pa[m] - pi - no]

T
8 et vi - tis pa[m] - pi - no

SURSUM CORDA ELEVATE

Conductus (G9/343)

F, f. 342v (7,84)

Ia	Sursum corda Dulci corda, “habemus domino.”	elevate. resonate		Lift up your hearts. Upon a sweet-sounding string, sound forth “we lift them up for the Lord.”
Ib	Non discordet sed concordet et vitis pampino.	vox a corde, lira corde	5	Do not let voice discord with heart, but let lyre concord with harpstring and vine with tendril.
Ic	Argumentum documentum cantu prosa. Instrumentis lete mentis vocis glosa.	sine instancia, sine fallatia, dignis melodia, exponit gaudia	10	A subject without menace, a teaching without deceit, is this poem in song. With instruments befitting the melody, the explication of the voice expounds the joys of a cheerful mind.
IIa	Sanctus, sanctus, est sanctorum teste Ysaya.	sanctus cantus angelorum,	15	Holy, holy, holy is the song of the holy angels as recounted in Isaiah.
IIb	Patet quantus cui tantorum servit armonia.	est rex tantus, beatorum		It is plain just how great this great king is, when the harmony of so many blessed ones serves him.
IIc	Celi symphonia nos ortatur et letatur Angelorum chelis modulatur osanna in celis.	ut canamus, dum cantamus.	20	Heaven’s symphony urges us to sing, and is gladdened as we sing. It attunes us to the harps of the angels as we declare hosanna in the heavens.
IIIa	Ergo agnus magne magnus qui tollis peccata.	veri dei dator spei,	25	Therefore, lamb of the true God, great giver of great hope, you take away the sins.
IIIb	Qui peccata lege lata, et emendas fata.	mundi tollis, penas mollis	30	You who take the sins of the world away, with the Old Law gone, you soften our pains and revise our fate.
IIIc	Miserere, verus vere Leva pacis facem. Miserator, legislator dona nobis pacem.	miserator, legislator. miserere; verus, vere	35	Have mercy on us, merciful one, truly the true bringer of the law. Raise the torch of peace. Merciful one, have mercy; true lawbringer, truly grant us peace.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 84, f. 342v: a2; Strophes Ia-IIIc, complete; with capitals heading Strophes Ic, IIa, IIIa, IIIb, as indicated by the extra spacing in the text above.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 86, f. 172r (163r): a2; Strophes Ia-IIIc, complete; a painted initial opens the piece and a slightly smaller one begins IIa. Space is left for an initial to start IIIa that was never added, accompanied by a tiny guide letter “e.” W1 concludes this piece with a closing cauda differing from all other extant sources that draws all its material from both voices of prior caudae in Strophes Ia, Ib, IIIa, and IIIb. This melisma is supplied at the end of the transcription as an alternative reading.

Ma, fasc. 4, no. 16, f. 94r: a2; Strophes Ia-IIIc, complete, with system-high space at the beginnings of Strophes Ia, IIa, IIIa, IIIb for initials that were never executed.

W2, fasc. 6, no. 7, f. 107v: a2; Strophes Ia-IIIc, complete, with capital letters heading Strophes IIa, IIIa, IIIb.

US-NYcub N-66 (New York, Columbia University, Butler Library, N-66), f. Ar: a2; fragmentary. This repurposed double leaf (the visible side of which constitutes the two folios Zv and Ar) now serves as a protective endpaper to its host volume.¹ The contents of its obverse side are reportedly now completely obliterated.² Of the first visible elements, beginning on the upper right portion of the leaf (f. Ar), the complete text of line 1, though slightly mutilated, is discernable, as well as some of the filigree decoration applied to the otherwise concealed body of the opening initial for Strophe Ia. The music above the text of this system, though, is completely hidden from view. The three remaining systems visible on f. Ar give both the musical and verbal material of lines 2,1-5,3. The left half of the leaf (f. Zv) contains the heavily faded remnants of the final cauda of the conductus Porta salutis ave (I2/269), with the unique addition of a Tr voice. This latter piece appears in F at 7,116, on f. 361v.

Metz (Metz, Bibliothèque de la Ville, Réserve précieux, MS 732bis/20), no. 1, f. 1r: a3, with an added Tr voice not known from other sources;³ incomplete, with only the complete closing cauda and final text syllable extant and rendered in mode 3, all of which is supplied here as an alternative reading at the end of the transcription. Other works in this source show that simplex figures as well as rests are regularly distinguished as L and B in the cum littera portions of this work, and that a good number of the larger ligatures in these sections also show mensural modifications through the use of sine proprietate and sine perfectione shapes. The caudae on the other hand, here as elsewhere in Metz, appear to demonstrate modal notation throughout.

Hu, no. 155, f. 150v: a2; only the whole of Strophe IIIa-c (“Ergo agnus ...”) transmitted as an independent piece, with a major painted initial to open it and no further divisions elsewhere in the text. The notation is mensural throughout.

Text only:

WOc Add. 68: originally Oxford, Magdalen College, MS 100 (=GB-Om 100), f. d^v, this leaf was subsequently transferred to the collection of fragments that constitute Worcester, Cathedral Library, Additional 68 (=GB-¹For a treatment of this MS, upon which much of this description relies, see Eva M. Maschke, “Neue Conductus Fragmente aus dem ehemaligen Dominikanerkloster in Frankfurt am Main,” Studi Musicali: Nuova serie 1,2 (2010): 295-312, especially 298-306. As Maschke shows here, US-NYcub N-66 originally came from the same source as the Frankfurt conductus fragments (D-F Fragm. lat. VI.41). For the latter items, see Martin Staehelin, “Conductus-Fragmente aus einer Notre-Dame-Handschrift in Frankfurt a. M.,” Nachrichten der Akademie der Wissenschaften in Göttingen: Philologisch-Historische Klasse, Jahrgang 1987 (Göttingen, 1987), pp. 177-192 + plates.

²For this detail, as well as more on this source couched as part of an extensive treatment of the conductus Porta salutis ave (I2/269), see Eva M. Maschke, “Porta salutis ave: Manuscript Culture, Material Culture, and Music,” Musica Dsiciplina, 58 (2013), 167-229, ³The same feature of an added third voice is found again only in Metz also obtains for the conductus Ego reus confiteor (H20/106).

WOc Add. 68), as frag. xxxv, f. 4v (or page j) as part of an effort to reconstruct the so-called Worcester Fragments. This leaf is also included as part of another reconstructive effort: Oxford, Bodleian Library, Lat. lit. d. 20 (=GB-Ob 20), f. 32v (formerly GB-Ob Bodley 862, f. 29v). The setting here of Sursum corda appears as no. 24 in the content listing of GB-WOc Add. 68 provided by William Summers and Peter Lefferts in their facsimile volume English Thirteenth-Century Polyphony;⁴ it appears as no. 63 in Dittmer's edition of the Worcester Fragments.⁵ The piece is apparently a2 and assumed to be fragmentary, although what more it might have contained cannot at present be determined, due to the absence of the subsequent folio. The remains offer a musical setting distinct from the other sources, with only the opening portions of text and music extant for two separately notated, adjacently written parts; these appear on the bottom two systems of the leaf, each headed by a filigreed painted initial. The remnants of the first voice, apparently a D given its higher range, set the text of lines 1-2; the subsequent part, a T, with its vocal text inscribed in contrasting red ink (corresponding to the conventions of the presentation of the tenors in the surrounding pieces in frag. xxxv), presents only a musical setting of the text of line 1 before the leaf ends. Both voices open with a cauda of 15L.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: General remarks: Musical imagery abounds in this poem (see lines 5, 9-10, 18-19, and 22-23), as well as recognized references to musico-liturgical texts from the Mass.⁶ Strophes I, II, and III, respectively, cite non-contiguous segments of text (italicized above) from the Preface, Sanctus, and Agnus Dei of the Mass. With such content, the poem seems to function almost as a companion piece to the conductus Gloria in excelsis deo redemptori (H1/145), which precedes it in both F and Ma (out of four existing sources of the latter piece) and shows similar characteristics. In addition, the opening cum littera statements in both pieces invite points of comparison (see the observations below on the music). The use of word play throughout is akin to poems by Philip the Chancellor, although he has never been put forward as a probable author, nor do I press that issue here. Versification: Due to the frequent presence of internal rhyme in the text as given above, there are multiple ways to divide the poem into lines, and this presentation departs from those on both the CPI website and in Anderson's edition (NDRC, 3:ix). The adopted result was chosen for its compactness and the ensuing balance among the stanzas. As a result, it offers three 12-line strophes, with each one structurally divisible into both halves and quarters. Internal and contrasting rhymes are shown through extra horizontal spacing in the above text. The resulting poetic form of this work is thus rather complex and reflective as well of its musical setting. The Tenor voice of each of the three larger stanzas is set to an AAB musical form, wherein each repeated A section corresponds to the opening three lines of each stanza (designated in the text above as Ia and Ib for the first strophe and continuing similarly for the others), while the B sections (Ic, IIc, IIIc) comprise the six-line remainder. Further elements of musical repetition occur among the caudae; see the observations below. Each stanza, moreover, shares certain elements of its rhythmic organization and rhyme scheme with the others, but also departs from them in certain ways. The resulting relationships show, for example, that Strophes Ia, Ib, IIa, and IIb all have the same line length and accentual patterns (2(4p+4p)+6pp), while different correspondences obtain for each three-line half of Ic (2(4p+6pp)+4p). Furthermore, each three-line unit of ⁴William J. Summers and Peter M. Lefferts, English Thirteenth-Century Polyphony: A Facsimile Edition, Early English Church Music, no. 57 (London: Stainer and Bell for the British Academy, 2016), see pp. 37-38 and plate 287.

⁵Luther A. Dittmer, The Worcester Fragments: A Catalogue Raisonné and Transcription, Musicological Studies and Documents, no. 2. [Rome:] American Institute of Musicology, 1957.

⁶For recent discussion of the liturgical elements within the conductus Sursum corda, see Everist, Discovering Medieval Song, 189-192.

Strophe III displays the same linear pattern of 2(4p+4p)+6p throughout. Strophe IIc, on the other hand, is independent structurally from all other three- or six-line divisions in the stanzas: 6pp+2(4p+4p)+6p+(4p+4p)+6p. The rhyme schemes that accompany each stanza are also interrelated, but in ways that sometimes cross over the inner stanzaic divisions of the poem. For example, the “-ia” rhyme in lines 18 and 19 closes Strophe IIb and opens IIc, which thereby relates the two halves of this stanza together by rhyme in a manner not reflected elsewhere in the poem. Textual notes: 1-6: these lines exploit a running pun (annominatio) on the Latin homonyms for “hearts” and “string” (corda/c(h)orda). 1-3: quotes or paraphrases the central elements of the liturgical dialogue that precedes the text of the Preface of the Mass. The whole introductory dialogue to the Preface, begun by the priest (P) and answered by the congregation (C), is as follows, with the portions adapted by the conductus italicized: (P) “Per omnia saecula saeculorum.” (C) “Amen.” (P) “Dominus vobiscum.” (C) “Et cum spiritu tuo.” (P) “Sursum corda.” (C) “Habemus ad Dominum.” (P) “Gratias agamus Domino Deo nostro.” (C) “Dignum et iustum est.” Then the priest picks up the text of the Preface itself, which is proper to the feast at hand, but which usually begins with the words “Vere dignum et iustum est”⁷ The Preface is succeeded by the Sanctus, an Ordinary item of the Mass that is also quoted in this conductus in lines 13 and 24, which open and close Strophe II. Further allusions to liturgical items of the Mass (in this case the Agnus Dei) appear throughout Strophe III (lines 25-36). 4-6: an engaging series of associative images, wherein a greater object is asked to correspond in sentiment with one of its smaller components: the heart (as the seat of the entire body’s feeling or emotions) with one’s voice, the lyre with its string, the vine with its tendril. 13-15;24: the opening and closing lines of this stanza continue to invoke the ceremonial text of the Mass celebration with their nod to the beginning and end of the text of the Sanctus, the Mass Ordinary item that follows (or concludes) the Preface, which itself is invoked in the first three lines of the poem. As line 15 indicates, the text for the Sanctus derives initially from Isaiah (6:3; cf. also Revelation, 4:8); it is then completed with Matthew, 21:9. The pre-Vulgate renderings of these biblical passages, though, are what one usually encounters in liturgical sources: “Sanctus, Sanctus, Sanctus Dominus Deus Sabaoth. Pleni sunt caeli et terra gloria tua. Hosanna in excelsis. Benedictus qui venit in nomine Domini. Hosanna in excelsis.” (“Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of Hosts, the heavens and earth are full with your glory. Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord. Hosanna in the highest.”).⁸ 16-18: conceivably a nod to Psalm 67:18: “Currus dei decem millibus multiplex, millia laetantium; Dominus in eis in Sina, in sancto” (“The chariot of God is attended by tens of thousands, thousands of them rejoicing: the Lord is among them in Sinai, in the holy place.”). See the further remarks on this biblical passage in connection with the conductus Deus creator omnium (H11/89), lines 3-6. 19-24: the mention of the concords (symphoniae) of heaven here invokes the concept of musica mundana developed by Boethius in his De institutione musica (book 1, chapter 2) as well as that of angel song; see the conductus O qui fontem gratie (H28/243), lines 30-36, 44-57 (Strophe III) for a text that dwells heavily on these musical and cosmic images. 20,2: construed here as a form of “hortatur.” 25-36: throughout its course Strophe III relates segments corresponding to most of the liturgical text of the Agnus Dei, an additional instance in this poem of allusions drawn from the Mass ceremony (as seen earlier in lines 1-3, 13-15, and 24). The liturgical text of the Agnus Dei is drawn from the exclamations of John the Baptist in John, 1:29: “Altera die vidit Joannes Jesum venientem ad se, et ait: ‘Ecce agnus Dei, ecce qui tollit peccatum mundi.’ ” (“The next day, John [the Baptist] saw Jesus coming to him, and he said: ‘Behold the Lamb of God, behold him who takes away the sin of the world.’ ”). 29-36: in addition to its emphasis on the Agnus Dei, this part of the stanza invokes the widespread trope of the Lamb (the sacrificed Christ) as a new Moses that overturns the older Mosaic Law associated with the Old Testament, replacing it with the pact of the New Covenant, represented by the gift of grace by God through Christ. For a compilation of pieces within the Parisian conductus repertory that exploit this concept, see the notes on the text to the conductus Legem dedit olim deus (I21/192). 31-36: for this second half of Strophe IIIc, notice how the same words are reordered chiasmically within the first two verses of each three-line unit (lines 31-32 and 34-35).

⁷For the text of the dialogue and some Prefaces in medieval Parisian liturgical sources, see, for example, the noted missal F-Pn lat. 1112, f. 103r, as well as the series offered in F-Pn lat. 830, ff. 121r-122v. Translation: (P) “Forever and ever.” (C) “Amen.” (P) “The Lord be with you.” (C) “And with your spirit.” (P) “Lift up your hearts.” (C) “We lift them up to the Lord.” (P) “Let us give thanks to our Lord God.” (C) “It is worthy and just [to do so].” ... (P) “It is truly worthy and just”

⁸The Vulgate texts for these respective passages read, with nearly identical meaning throughout: Isaiah, 6:3: “... Sanctus, sanctus, sanctus Dominus, Deus exercituum; plena est omnis terra gloria ejus”; Matthew, 21:9: “... benedictus, qui venit in nomine Domini: hosanna in altissimis.” – (... “Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of hosts, all the earth is full with his glory”; “... Blessed is he that comes in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest.”).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: W2 has a notable tally of readings that are preferred here to those in F and other sources for this text. 3,2: F, W1, US-NYcub N-66: dominum; Ma: dominu (perhaps the result of an omitted horizontal abbreviation stroke over the final “u”). The adopted reading from W2 is not transmitted in Hu and WOc Add. 68. The emendation is prompted by the apparent necessity that lines 3 and 6 should rhyme. Elsewhere (F, W1, US-NYcub N-66) the scribe has preferred the accusative case of this word, perhaps since it regularly appears in the response to the Preface of the Mass: “habemus ad dominum.” 6,3: F: papino; Ma: panpino; adopted reading from W1, W2; absent or lost from all other sources. 8,1: F, W1, Ma: documentis; supplied from W2 to regularize the rhyme scheme; not transmitted in Hu and WOc Add. 68, lost from US-NYcub N-66. 29,2: F: latas; adopted reading from W1, Ma, W2, Hu which regularizes the rhyme scheme; absent from US-NYcub N-66 and WOc Add. 68. MUSIC: Connections with the conductus *Gloria in excelsis: Notice the similarities in contour and pitch in all sources of this piece between the opening notes in the T over the cum littera settings of “Sur[sum]” (line 1,1) – along with the corresponding musically repeated passage on “non [discordat]” (line 4,1) – with that of the setting of “Glo[ria]” (line 1,1) in the conductus Gloria in excelsis deo redemptori (H1/145). In the second instance in Sursum corda, it so happens that most of its D is also identical with that of “Gloria” in Gloria in excelsis. Similarly, the five T pitches over “habemus domi[no]” and the corresponding “et vitis pampi[no]” in Sursum corda (lines 3 and 6, respectively) are the same as the setting of “[Glori]a in excelsis” in line 1 of this conductus in all sources but CaJ. Such musical correspondences, as well as their rather prominent structural placement as the opening cum littera gestures in both works suggest that the two pieces may have been conceived in tandem with each other. For transcriptions of these related passages in close succession, see the passages that follow the alternative readings in the edition of Sursum corda. Repetition among caudae: In addition to the restatement of entire T melodies (including caudae) in the first half of each strophe (see the above remarks on versification in the notes on the text), the larger melisma that closes this piece in every applicable source but W1 at first recapitulates the T of the cauda that begins Strophe IIIa and is repeated in IIIb, then afterwards it expands the closing T phrase in each of these two segments. Yet W1, as noted above, gives a different closing melisma (supplied at the end of the transcription); this example, analogously, is not only made up wholly of material from earlier caudae taken from Strophes Ia and Ib, IIIa, and IIIb, but it also quotes both voices. As usual, recollected phrases and motives throughout the piece are signaled by boxed lower case letters above the staves, with the additional element of some shorter reiterated motives in the opening portions of the piece being marked by letters drawn from the end of the alphabet (“z, y”). Longer, more extensive repeated segments are shown by boxed capital letters in the T staff. Syllabic-melismatic identity: 1. TD of “[lira] corde” (end of line 5) presents a recurring short cadential flourish (4li,si), with motives from the D and/or T set to either one or two syllables at the ends of certain other passages in various voices (these are not marked in the score): a. D = T (with a similar D) of “[ele]vate” (line 1); b. TD = T (with D varied) of “[reso]nate” (end of line 2); c. T = D (transposed) of whole following short cauda on “[resona]te” (end of line 2); d. D = T (varied) of “[vox a] corde” (end of line 4); e. T = D (varied) of whole following short cauda on [lira cor]de” (end of line 5); f. T = similar T of “[instan]cia” (end of line 7, opening Strophe Ic); g. D (varied) = D of “[instru]mentis” (beginning of line 10); h. T = similar D(T) of “[melo]dia” (end of line 10); i. TD = comparable TD of “[o]sanna” (beg of line 24, closing Strophe IIc). 2. T of last phrase of cauda on “Er[go]” (line 25, opening of Str. IIIa): a. = sim T of “qui tollis peccata” (line 28); b. = T of last phrase of cauda on “qui [peccata]” (line 28, starts second half of Str. IIIa); c. = sim T of “et emendas fata” (line 30, closes Strophe IIIa). Line 16,1: D: F: siP, si=feP, d omitted over “[pa]tet”; taken from W1, which shows like F a DL=f in the T, not present in Ma, W2; lost from US-NYcub N-66, Metz; not in Hu. Cauda at 25,1 (opens Strophe IIIa): D: the irregularly notated opening rhythm of the second phrase (L9-L12) in this voice is clarified by Ma (=si,3li,3li+3C) and the mensural notation of Hu. Final cauda: Metz, W2, Hu show mode 3 throughout in contrast to the mode 1 of F, Ma; W1 is unrelated; it is lost from US-NYcub N-66. In the alternative reading from Metz, those Tr passages in the transcription of the cauda that are cut away or worn to the point of illegibility have been reconstructed editorially; worn material that is visible but especially difficult to see is indicated by a “?” above the staff. D: in the second phrase, from L7-L11, the repeated d pitches are written LBLLBBB in F, LBLLBBL in Metz, hence the different renderings between the two transcriptions. T: Metz: the om si=d and following stroke at L51-L52 worn away; confirmed by F, Ma, W2, Hu; W1 is unrelated; lost from US-NYcub N-66. T: Metz: om stroke for the last rest at L72 supplied from F, not in Ma, W2, Hu; W1 unrelated; lost from US-NYcub N-66.

DUM SIGILLUM SUMMI PATRIS

Conductus (J24/100)

Perotinus

F, f. 344r r (7,85)

D
I
T [Dum] a Dum

b' c'
b
c

[Dum] si - gil - lum sum - mi pa - - tris
[Dum] si - gil - lum sum - mi pa - - tris

e d' sig -
d e' sig -

- na - - tum di -
- na - - tum di -

- vi - ni - - tus;
- vi - ni - - tus;

in si-gil - lo sum - me ma - in si-gil - lo sum - me ma -

(g2) (g3) (h) (h)

- tris sig - na - tur

- tris sig - na - tur

hu - ma-ni - tus;

hu - ma-ni - tus;

nec si-gil-lum ca-sti-ta-tis in pu - el - la fran-gi-tur. nec si-gil-lum de - i - ta - tis de - tri-men - tum

nec si-gil-lum ca-sti-ta-tis in pu - el - la fran-gi-tur. nec si-gil-lum de - i - ta - tis de - tri-men - tum

pa - ti -

pa - ti - si si si si

i i i - tur. - tur.

Dum Dum

[Dum] hu - ma - nam o - scu-la - k [Dum] hu - ma - nam o - scu-la - k k k

- tur na - [na] - tu -
- tur na - [na] - tu -

- ram di - (l) (m) (l)
- ram di - (m) (m)

- vi - ni - tas; ex con - ta - ctu fe - cun - da - tur in - ta - cta vir - (n) (n) (n)
- vi - ni - tas; ex con - ta - ctu fe - cun - da - tur in - ta - cta vir -

- gi - ni - tas. mi - (n) (o) (o) (o')
- gi - ni - tas. mi - (n)

- ra vir -
- ra vir -

- tus o - scu - lan - - di,
- tus o - scu - lan - - di,

| mode 3 also possible

mi -
p mi -

[mi] - ran - - da sunt [mi] - ran - - da sunt

q

q'

| mode 3 also possible for remainder of cauda

os - - cu - os - - cu - r t (t) r s (s)

or: que dant vi - res fe - cun-dan - di si - ne
- la. que dant vi - res fe - cun-dan - di si - ne

or: que dant vi - res fe - cun-dan - di si - ne
- la. que dant vi - res fe - cun-dan - di si - ne

car-nis co - pu -
car-nis co - pu -

u'

v'

v' w

w' w x

The first system of the musical score consists of two staves. The upper staff begins with a treble clef and a common time signature. It contains a series of notes, including quarter and eighth notes, with several rests. Blue brackets are placed above the notes, and a blue dashed slur is positioned over a group of notes towards the end of the staff. A red 'x' is enclosed in a small box at the beginning of the lower staff. The lower staff starts with a bass clef and contains a sequence of notes, including quarter and eighth notes, with rests. Blue brackets are placed above the notes, and a blue dashed slur is positioned over a group of notes towards the end of the staff.

The second system of the musical score consists of two staves. The upper staff begins with a treble clef and a common time signature. It contains a series of notes, including quarter and eighth notes, with rests. Blue brackets are placed above the notes, and a blue dashed slur is positioned over a group of notes towards the end of the staff. A red accent mark is placed above a note. The lower staff starts with a bass clef and contains a sequence of notes, including quarter and eighth notes, with rests. Blue brackets are placed above the notes, and a red slur is positioned over a note towards the end of the staff. The system concludes with the text "- la.]" on the right side of the upper staff and "- la." on the right side of the lower staff.

DUM SIGILLUM SUMMI PATRIS

Conductus (J24/100)

F, f. 344r r (7,85)

I Dum sigillum summi patris, signatum divinitus, in sigillo summe matris signatur humanitus, nec sigillum castitatis in puella frangitur, nec sigillum deitatis detrimentum patitur.	5	When the divinely imprinted seal of the highest father is imprinted in human form on the seal of the highest mother, neither is chastity's seal on the girl broken, nor does the seal of the deity suffer detriment.
II Dum humanam osculatur naturam divinitas, ex contactu fecundatur intacta virginitas. Mira virtus osculandi! miranda sunt oscula que dant vires fecundandi sine carnis copula.	10 1 5	When divinity kisses human substance, untouched virginity conceives from the contact. How astonishing is the effect of kissing! Wondrous are the kisses that grant the powers of conception without joining of flesh.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 85, f. 344r: a2; Strophes I-II, complete, with II indicated by the customary black-ink capital.

Hu, no. 152, f. 143r, a2: music and text for Strophe I only, headed by a large painted initial; mensural notation throughout.

Text only:

GB-Lbl Royal 7.A.VI, f. 107v: text only of Strophes I-II; images from this folio of the source are presently unavailable to me.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Attributions of text and music: The poem has been attributed to Philip the Chancellor by Anderson, (NDRC, 5:xvi) based on image of the kiss in Strophe II, that he connects with Philip's conductus Centrum capit circulus (J38), in Strophe IIb, lines 23-24. In my view, this is less convincing a comparison than the conceit of the chaste kiss offered in the otherwise anonymous conductus Genitus divinitus (I25/144), lines 7-9. The music of Dum sigillum is attributed to Perotinus by Anonymous 4.¹ Textual notes: 1-4: the seal of ¹Fritz Reckow, ed., Der Musiktraktat des Anonymus 4, 2 vols., Beihefte zum Archiv für Musikwissenschaft, nos. 4-5 (Wiesbaden: Franz Steiner, 1967), 1:46: "Ipse vero magister Perotinus fecit quadrupla optima sicut Viderunt, Sederunt cum habundantia colorum armonicae artis; similiter et tripla plurima nobilissima sicut Alleluia Posui adiutorium, Nativitas et cetera. Fecit etiam triplices conductus ut Salvatoris hodie et duplices conductus sicut Dum sigillum summi patris ac etiam simplices conductus cum pluribus aliis sicut Beata viscera et cetera." ("This same Master Perotinus made the best four-part organa, such as Viderunt and Sederunt, with an artful abundance of melodic repetition; and likewise many very noble three-part organa, like Alleluia Posui adiutorium and [Alleluia] Nativitas, etc. He also composed three-part conductus, such as Salvatoris hodie and two-part conductus such as Dum sigillum summi

God the Father is his divinity, the seal of the Mother, the Virgin Mary, is apparently her chaste, “sealed” womb, which retains the seal of her virginity after Christ’s divine conception. 5-8: just as Mary retained her maidenhood after Christ was conceived, so was God’s divinity uncompromised when it assumed human form in Christ. 9-16: Christ’s conception, overstepping other natural laws, was not brought about by sexual means (carnis copula), but through the “chaste kiss” of Mary’s acceptance of Gabriel’s charge (see the story of the Annunciation in Luke, 1:26-38, and the above remarks on attributions).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: readings adopted below from GB-Lbl Royal 7.A.VI are drawn from Anderson’s critical notes on this piece (NDRC, 5:116), as the manuscript is presently unavailable to me. 2,1: F: syllable divided as in MS. 9,2: F: humanum; from GB-Lbl Royal 7.A.VI. 13,1: F: mura, although the last ascender of the “u” in the first syllable is faded, as if possibly erased; taken from GB-Lbl Royal 7.A.VI. 14,3: F: syllable divided as in MS. MUSIC: The setting is shot through with motivic recollection, and there are occasional passages of imitation and canon. Many correspondences are noted above the staff, but more might be included; for example, note the similarities between the closing organal figures in the D over lines 2,1 (“signatum”) and 4,2 (“[huma]ni[tus]”), along with the identical concluding D figures of the caudae over 14,2 (“sunt”) and 14,3 (“[oscu]la”). Also remaining unmarked are a number of sequential passages and possible antecedent-consequent relationships. Line 3,1-3: : T: music over “in sigillo summe” written 3 lower, likely due to failure to note a mid-staff clef change; reading taken from Hu. 5: D: Hu: sig quad on f for “nec sigil[lum],” cancelled by system change without sig immediately afterwards. 8,1: D: F: si=g over first phrase of “[pa]ti[tur]” om and following stroke erased; from Hu. D: Hu: sig quad on f, valid for first three phrases of the cauda on this word, cancelled by next system change at L15 of cauda. 12: TD: F: the rhythms provided here for the cum littera portions of this line (“intacta virginitas”) are justified by their similarity to the sine littera figures that precede and follow this verse. 13,1: D: F: the two 2li figures just after the stroke before the syllable “[mi]ra” are written close together, as if 4li, which could also be an intended reading. Cauda on line 14,3: D: F: the 4C figure in the penultimate phrase requires an unusual rhythmical reading here, possibly the result of a corrupt reading.

O CRUX AVE SPES UNICA
 Conductus (H4/230)

*F, f. 346r (7,86)

The musical score consists of two vocal parts, D (Soprano) and T (Tenor), and a keyboard accompaniment. The lyrics are in Latin and English. The lyrics are: [O] crux a - ve, spes u - ni - ca, si - gnum mi - ti - bus mi - te. In pa - ra - di - si cro - ni - ca te si - gnat ar - bor vi - te li - gna a - bra - ha - mi - te ia - cob ma - nus can - cel - lans.

*This cauda may also be rendered in mode 3 tha - u in li - mi - na - ri. ser - pens in pa - lo pa - ri.

tha - u in li - mi - na - ri. ser - pens in pa - lo pa - ri.

| the T of this cauda and the first 16 L of the D may also be rendered in mode 3

mo - y - ses o - ran - do bel -

mo - y - ses o - ran - do bel -

mo - y - ses o - ran - do bel -

mo - y - ses o - ran - do bel -

mo - y - ses o - ran - do bel -

mo - y - ses o - ran - do bel -

Ec - ce cru - cem

Ec - ce cru - cem

do - mi - ni. de - mon ce - dat nu - mi - ni. fu - ge pars ad - ver - sa per - ver - sa

do - mi - ni. de - mon ce - dat nu - mi - ni. fu - ge pars ad - ver - sa per - ver - sa

e - ver - sa. hoc si - gno gi - gas fa - ti
e - ver - sa. hoc si - gno gi - gas fa - ti

Performance markings: d2 (red box), blue slurs, and blue accents.

ge - mi - ni mi - li - ta - vit ho - mi - ni. col - le - git dis - per - ge - mi - ni mi - li - ta - vit ho - mi - ni. col - le - git dis - per -

Performance markings: e2 (red box), blue slurs, and blue accents.

- sa di - ver - sa con - ver - sa in lig -
- sa di - ver - sa con - ver - sa in lig -

Performance markings: e3 (red box), blue slurs, and blue accents.

Performance markings: f (red box), d3 (red box), f (red box), g (red box), blue slurs, and blue accents.

Performance markings: f (red box), f (red box), g (red box), h (red box), blue slurs, and blue accents.

- no.
- no.

Performance markings: h (red box), blue slurs, and blue accents. A blue dashed line indicates an extra phrase.

*CaJ has extra phrase inserted here, see at end

III
Er -
Er -

[Er] - go per si - gnum cru - cis per si - gnum
[Er] - go per si - gnum cru - cis per si - gnum

sum - mi du - cis per du - cem sum - me lu - cis li - be - ra sum - mi du - cis per du - cem sum - me lu - cis li - be - ra nos de - nos de -

(k2) (k3) (k4)

- us. Sit no-bis

- us. Sit no-bis

crux tu - ta - men. lo - ri - ca. pax. so - la - men. sit

crux tu - ta - men. lo - ri - ca. pax. so - la - men. sit

scu - tum si - ve ta - men an - nus iu - bi - le -

scu - tum si - ve ta - men an - nus iu - bi - le -

scu - tum si - ve ta - men an - nus iu - bi - le -

scu - tum si - ve ta - men an - nus iu - bi - le -

| T: e-flats throughout final caud optional, only in F

The main musical score consists of three systems of two staves each (Soprano and Tenor). The music is in 8/8 time and B-flat major. The first system includes red annotations: a box with 'b' above the soprano staff and a box with 'p' above the tenor staff. The second system includes a box with 'q' above the soprano staff and a box with 'm'' above the tenor staff. The third system includes a box with 'q'' above the soprano staff. A blue annotation reads: "CaJ gives slightly differing reading, see at end". The score concludes with a cauda phrase in the soprano staff, marked with a red dash and "- us.]", and a red dash in the tenor staff, marked with "- us."

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

*CaJ, f. Ar, IV: added cauda phrase inserted prior to punctus organi closing Strophe II (line 19)

This block shows an alternative reading for line 19. It consists of two staves: Soprano (S) and Tenor (T). The Soprano staff has the notation "[(lig)-no]" and the Tenor staff has "(lig)-[no]". Both staves are marked with an 8/8 time signature. The music is enclosed in a dashed box.

CaJ, f. Av, V: differing reading for the end of the final cauda closing Strophe III (line 27)

This block shows an alternative reading for line 27. It consists of two staves: Soprano (S) and Tenor (T). The Soprano staff has the notation "[(iubile) -" and the Tenor staff has "(iubile) -". Both staves are marked with an 8/8 time signature. The music is enclosed in a dashed box. The score concludes with a cauda phrase in the soprano staff, marked with a red dash and "- us.]", and a red dash in the tenor staff, marked with "- us."

O CRUX AVE SPES UNICA
Conductus (H4/230)

F, f. 346r (7,86)

- | | |
|--|--|
| I O crux, ave, spes unica, signum mitibus mite; in paradisi cronica
te signat arbor vite, ligna Abrahamite,
Iacob manus cancellans, thau in liminari,
serpens in palo pari,
Moyses orando bellans. | Hail, O Cross, our only hope,
a gentle sign for gentle folk;
you are the tree of life,
as Eden’s chronicle describes,
5 the kindling of Abraham’s sacrifice,
Jacob crossing his hands,
the letter Tau on the doorpost,
the serpent on the matching pole,
and Moses waging war by praying. |
| II Ecce, crucem domini.
demon cedat numini.
Fuge, pars adversa;
perversa, eversa.
Hoc signo gigas fati gemini militavit homini.
Collegit dispersa, diversa, conversa
in ligno. | 10 See how the demon yields the Cross to the might of the Lord.
Begone, you hateful, overthrown, overturned enemy.
Under this Cross’s sign 15 that giant of twin destiny fought for humanity.
On that hanging tree
he gathered together those scattered,
separated, and turned away. |
| III Ergo, per signum crucis, per signum summi ducis,
per ducem summe lucis,
libera nos, deus.
Sit nobis crux tutamen, lorica, pax, solamen;
sit scutum, sive tamen
annus iubileus. | 20 And so, through the sign of the Cross, through the sign of the highest leader,
through the leader of the highest light,
O God, free us.
Let the Cross be for us a safeguard, 25 a breastplate, peace, solace; let it be as a shield, or even a jubilee year. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 86, f. 346r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with II and III headed by capitals. The piece begins mid-system on the folio (rather than at the left margin), something that happens only 12 times in F-7.¹

W1, fasc. 9, no. 23, f. 112v (103v): a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with the beginnings of II as well as line 24 indicated by painted capitals, and with flourishing for the initials of I and III.

Ma, fasc. 4, no. 17, f. 97r: a2; Strophes I-III, complete; the initials beginning each strophe were never entered in the spaces provided for them.

CaJ (Cambridge, Jesus College, MS QB 1), Fragment A, no. 10, f. Ar (consisting of the reconstituted strips (from left to right) 11v, 25r, 9v, 28v): a2; fragmentary, the two sides of the reconstructed folio preserve the text and musical setting of the piece from “demon cedat numini” (line 11 in Strophe II) to the end with only occasional illegible or worn segments; a painted red initial heads Strophe III.²

¹For a list, see the source report on F for Pia mater gratie (J18/268), at F-7, 71, on f. 331r.

D-MÜu378 (Münster, Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek, 378),³ f. *2 (back flyleaf): a2; fragmentary, the two sides of the folio present the music and text of the piece from its beginning up through “summi lucis libera” (line 23,1 in Strophe III) with no significant omissions. The remains of a large, filigreed initial, two systems high, opens the piece, with smaller, upper-case blue/green painted initials for Stanzas II and III (the latter initial extremely faded).

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1: a quotation – hence italicized – from an internal stanza of later medieval redactions of the Latin hymn Vexilla regis prodeunt by Venantius Fortunatus (ca. 530-ca. 600-609), the renowned poet and bishop of Poitiers (from ca. 599-600 until his death). It was originally written ca. 569 on the occasion of the donation of a fragment of the Cross by the Byzantine emperor Justin II (reg. 565-574). The relic was transferred from Tours to the monastery of Saint-Croix in Poitiers (see Wright, Music and Ceremony, 57-58, for this and the following points).⁴ The move was occasioned at the behest of St. Radegunda (ca. 520-587), one of the six wives of Clothar I (ca. 497-561), king of the Merovingian Franks and one of the four sons of Clovis I (ca. 466-ca. 511). The hymn Vexilla regis is used in a number of different places within the liturgy, depending on the locale; these include Mass on Good Friday, Vespers each day from the Saturday before Passion Sunday up to Maundy Thursday, and at Vespers of the feast of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross (14 September), the feast of the Finding of the Holy Cross (3 May), and the Triumph of the Holy Cross (16 July); the cathedral of Note Dame in Paris also featured it unusually as part of its Good Friday ceremony for the Adoration of the Cross. For an example of the Vexilla regis hymn in the use of Paris, see the MS F-Pn lat. 15181, f. 260v (CCLv). In this version, the line used in the conductus opens the seventh strophe, on f. 261r (CCLIr), which was itself a later addition to Fortunatus’s original poem. Most other, more familiar versions of the hymn have it as the sixth strophe, but the Parisian version includes the original second strophe that is frequently omitted elsewhere (see Wright, ibid.). For other citations in the Parisian conductus repertory of Fortunatus’s poems, see the notes to the opening line of Pange melos lacrimosum (I15/258), and Ex creata non creatus (I14/108), line 34. 3-4: the tree of life, planted in the garden of Eden (Genesis, 2:9) is often understood in Christian theology as a prefiguration or typological symbol of the Cross of the crucifixion. The other examples that populate this strophe continue to exploit common associations with the Cross. 5: in the story of Abraham’s preempted sacrifice of Isaac (Genesis, 22:1-19; cf. also Hebrews, 11:17-19), the wood that Abraham collects for Isaac’s sacrificial pyre is figuratively connected here with the Cross. 6: According to Anderson (NDRC, 3:xii, note 3) the mention of Jacob’s hands in this line refers to the story presented in Genesis, 27:1-30, where Jacob, aided by his mother Rebecca, deceived his nearly blind father Isaac. Rebecca covered Jacob’s hands with the skins of ²For a catalog and correctly reconstituted images of this source, including the labeling system used here to refer to the fragments, see William J. Summers and Peter M. Lefferts, English Thirteenth-Century Polyphony: A Facsimile Edition, Early English Church Music, no. 57 (London: Stainer and Bell for the British Academy, 2016), pp. 14-15, plates 11-34.

³This source is an extant portion of a larger MS originally possessed by the Dominican library of Soest that originally included *GB-Css 117, D-MÜsa Mscr. VII, 6115, D-MÜu 382, and D-MÜu 378. For information on these items and their relationships, see Eva Maschke, “Notre Dame Manuscripts and their History: Case Studies on Reception and Reuse,” (Ph.D. dissertation, University of Southampton / Universität Hamburg, 2015), 87-131.

⁴Craig Wright, Music and Ceremony at Notre Dame of Paris: 500-1550 (Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 1989).

kids (Genesis, 27:16) so that he might more closely resemble his hairy elder brother Esau. Through this duplicity, Jacob was able to usurp the blessing that Isaac intended to bestow upon his brother. According to this interpretation, the power of the Cross may be seen as nullifying the fraud of Jacob's deception, and Anderson backs this up with a quotation from the Glossa ordinaria that sees the skins as symbols for the sins of both Jews and Gentiles that Christ had assumed. He argues the same for a closely related phrase in the conductus Novum sibi texuit (I22/225), lines 23-24 (see Anderson, NDRC, 4: xxvii, note 11). Yet there is perhaps a more telling connection, adopted here, that relates more specifically to the Cross. This occurs in Jacob's subsequent blessing of his grandchildren Ephraim and Manasseh, the sons of Joseph (see Genesis, 48:12-20). In this account, Jacob crossed his arms so that his right hand was placed on the head of Ephraim, the younger, who stood at Jacob's left, and his left hand on Manasseh, the elder, standing at his right. Thus the younger child of the two received the greater blessing, and this episode also invokes Jacob's earlier deception with his father Isaac. In this case, the word "cancellans" in the conductus does not connote striking something out, but rather signifies the action of Jacob laticing his hands, crossing them one over the other. As in Novum sibi texuit, the action in O crux ave recalls the figure of the Cross. 7: the mark of lamb's blood put on the doorposts of the Israelites that rendered them immune from the tenth and final plague of Egypt, the killing of the Egyptians' firstborn (see Exodus, 12:1-29; specific references to the mark appear at verses 7, 13, and 22-23). In the biblical passages, the shape of the marking on the door is not specified, but the use in the conductus text of the word "thau" to designate the specific marking – signifying the Greek (Τ) and Hebrew (ת) letters that correspond to the Latin "T" – additionally connects the passage in Exodus to events described in Ezekiel (see 9:4 and 6, and cf. Apocalypse, 7:3). In Ezekiel's narrative, the inhabitants of Jerusalem are fated to die unless they are marked with the sign of tau. Significantly, the letter tau is also associated with the Cross, as it originated as a marking similar to the Latin "x" before it developed into its later shapes. The tau character as a representation of the Cross is also associated with St. Anthony of Egypt (as in "St. Anthony's Cross"), and is connected particularly with St. Francis of Assisi (1181/1182-1226), who eventually adopted the tau sign as his signature. Furthermore, in Hebrew and other Semitic alphabets, tau is the final letter, and the Greek form of the character is regarded as symbolic of life or resurrection. 7,1: in the musical setting the word "thau" is construed as a bisyllable, resulting in a 7p line that corresponds to the last six lines (as well as the second) of this stanza; cf. the remarks for line 9,1, below. 8: Anderson's edition sees this verse as a reference to Exodus, 4:1-5 (and perhaps also Exodus, 7:8-12), where Moses' and Aaron's staves become serpents. There may be some association with these events, but more likely is the undeniable nod towards Numbers, 21:6-9, where, after praying to the Lord for aid, Moses sets up a bronze serpent upon a pole that cures the Israelites of deadly snake bites that had afflicted them after their war with the Canaanites. The bronze snake is frequently adduced as a figure for Christ (see John, 3:14), and the pole on which it was erected thus corresponds to the Cross by recalling its basic figuration. 9: Thanks to information supplied to me by Lena Wahlgren-Smith, the image in line 9 is also clearly associated with the Cross through its recollection of Exodus, 17:8-16. In this passage, Moses orders Joshua to assemble a force to fight against the Amalekites, who have attacked the Israelites at Rephidim. Moses indicates he will stand at the top of a nearby hill with his staff in his hands. During the battle, as long as Moses keeps his hands raised (one would suppose in cruciform fashion), the Israelites prevail in the conflict, whereas when he lets his hands slip down, the Amalekites gain the upper hand. When Moses begins to tire during the conflict, his brother Aaron and companion Hur provide a stone for him to sit on, while each of them assists Moses by holding up his arms, one on each side, until sunset. Joshua eventually achieves victory as a result, and the Lord commands Moses to take down the account of the battle on a scroll to deliver to Joshua, saying that God vows to destroy the whole tribe of the Amalekites. Moses also builds an altar that he calls "the Lord my exaltation" ("Dominus exaltatio mea" – see Exodus, 17:15 – more literally "the Lord, my raising up"). 9,1: "Moyses" is treated as a three-syllable word in the musical setting, but the poet apparently considered it as a bisyllabic component of a 7p line, as there are no 8p lines, either in this strophe or throughout the rest of this through-composed lyric; cf. the remarks above for 7,1. 10-11: through the crucifixion, the Cross is transformed from an instrument of death to one of resurrection and life. 15: Anderson's translation (NDRC, 3:xii) misconstrues this line. Its sentiment is revealed in a passage from Augustine's Contra sermonem

Arianorum, chapter 8: “Apparet tamen idem ipse Christus, geminae gigas substantiae, secundum quid obediens, secundum quid aequalis Deo; secundum quid Filius hominis, secundum quid Filius Dei” (“So it appears that this same Christ is a giant composed of a twin substance, the human and divine, corresponding to the first two members of the Trinity, the Son of Man and the Son of the Father.”).⁵ See also the conductus Gloria in excelsis deo redemptori (H1/145), line 4, and the motets Alpha bovi et leoni / Domino (vdW 764/BD VI), line 11 (“giganti gemineo” – “the two-fold giant”), and Ecclesie princeps / Et confitebor (vdW 112b/M12, in Hu, f. 128r), lines 3-4: “substancie gigans et gemine potentie patrie patris eximie” (“[the Lord is a] giant of the twin substance and excellent power of the father of heaven”). 26,1-2: cf. the Tr text of the motet Mors que stimulo, (Van der Werf, 254) lines 59-62 (in Payne, Motets and Prosulas, 130): “Vivam, ut in tuto me signaculo crucis munio, Cristi scuto” (“I shall endure, as long as I protect myself with the sign of the Cross, Christ’s shield.”). 27: Note that a jubilee year is again mentioned in the opening of the very next conductus in F-7: Anni favor iubilei (J25/16), which otherwise treats the Albigensian Crusade. In the biblical tradition, a jubilee year occurred every fifty years (see Leviticus, 25:10-17); slaves were freed, debts forgiven, the cultivation of crops and fruits was forbidden, and all property returned to its hereditary owners. In Christian contexts, the proclamation of a jubilee year promised the remission of all sins. The first clear record of such a practice is spelled out in the bull Antiquorum fida relatio, promulgated by Boniface VIII on Feb. 22, 1300. Yet there are indications of earlier possible celebrations, including the references in the conductus Adest annus iubileus (J56/8); Anni favor iubilei (J25/16), which, as mentioned, follows O crux ave in F-7; Condimentum nostre spei (H8/67), line 9; Sol de sole progrediens (Q03/-), lines 46-47; and Nunc angelorum gloria (L98/-), in the final lines of either Strophe II or IV, depending on the specific version of the text. In addition, the medieval chronicler Aubry des Trois-Fontaines refers to the year 1208 as a jubilee year: “[anno 1208...] dicitur quod annus iste quinquagesimus sive iubileus et remissionis in curia Romana sit celebratus” (“[in the year 1208...] it is said that this year was to be celebrated as a fiftieth or jubilee [year], and one of remission within the Roman curia”); see Chronica Albrici monachi Trium Fontium, Paul Scheffer-Boichorst, ed., in Monumenta Germaniae Historica: Scriptores, vol. 23 (Hannover: Hahn, 1874), p. 889.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 13,2: F: conversa; “perversa” supplied from W1, Ma, CaJ, D-MÜu378, the last of which gives “pe[r]versa” due to trimming of the leaf’s margin. MUSIC: rhythmicization of certain sine littera portions: The disposition of extended figures (DL and si,siP) and of ligatures of three or more notes over various portions of the cum littera segments of this piece allows for effective rhythmic performance of some texted sections, often in regular longs with occasional extensions to DL values for many syllables set to more than two notes; a number of such extensions, especially when they close phrases, are rendered rhythmically in this transcription. Syllabic/melismatic identity: 1: The T of the second phrase of the cauda on “Ec[ce]” (line 10,1, opening Strophe II) = 1a: T(D) of “[adver]sa perversa” (lines 12,3-13,1) = 1b: T(D) of the opening of the subsequent cauda on “hoc” (line 14,1) = 1c: the second phrase of the cauda on “lig[no]” (line 19,2, closing Strophe II). 2: the T of “annus iubile[us]” (line 27, final line of poem) = 2a: the similar T of the eighth phrase of the following, closing cauda on “[iubi]le[us].” In each case the occurrences are somewhat removed from each other and inexact, but striking nonetheless. Cauda ending line 1: this melisma, constructed nearly wholly of 2li, seems less likely to be rendered in mode 2 than the so-called “upbeat” form of mode 1 as presented here, due to the lack of a concluding 3li for the passage. Cauda, line 9 (closing Strophe I): T: F: the 2li,3li figures at L39-41 (also in W1) are read in mode 1 here, corresponding to the 3li,2li ligation (also shown above the staff) in Ma, MÜu 378; missing from CaJ. Since the entire T passage is ambiguous and may be read in mode 3 as well as mode 1, an iambic reading is equally possible for this portion. Line 5,2: D: F: g for the last note of the word; a supplied from W1, Ma, D-MÜu378; missing from CaJ. 14-16: MÜu378 exchanges the music of the T and D for these three lines, including the short following cauda. Cauda closing line 19 (end of Strophe II): prior to the punctus organi at the end of this melisma, W1 uniquely inserts an extra phrase, ⁵The Latin text is provided by Sancti Aurelii Augustini, Hipponensis episcopi, Opera omnia (Paris: Gaume Bros., 1836), vol. 8, part 1: col. 968C.

provided at the end of the transcription as an alternative. Cauda opening Strophe III (line 20): T: F: the e-flat sig prior to L10 in the melisma appears only in F, MÜu378. T: F: the om si=c at L21 appears in all other MSS; conceivably the unique additional stroke in F preceding this omitted note might suggest a reading as two TL rests and thus obviate the omission without including the missing c, but this is countered by the reading provided for the earlier double stroke in the T at the opening of this same cauda. Cauda, line 23,3: T: F: the 1 of the 4li=defd figure in the penultimate phrase at L63 is written as L (with a palpable tail). Final cauda (closing Strophe III, line 27): T: F: the appearance of e-flats, beginning at L21, then expressly cancelled at L29 and reinstated at L47 up through the end of the piece, is not confirmed by any other extant source; they may thus be viewed as optional for performance. In view of the motivic usage of the two siP (=feP) D figures beginning at L69 of the cauda and repeating at L79, it seems that any e-flats used in the T should cease with the phrase ending with L60; otherwise the same repeated siP figure would likely require e-flats for its first occurrence and e-naturals upon the second. TD: CaJ: beginning at L69 the remainder of the cauda, along with the closing punctus organi is rendered with a few rhythmic and pitch differences; this alternative is supplied at the end of the transcription.

ANNI FAVOR IUBILEI
Conductus (J25/16)

F, f. 347v (7,87)

D
I
T

[An-ni fa - vor iu - bi - le - i pe - na-rum
An-ni fa - vor iu - bi - le - i pe - na-rum

la - xat de - bi - tum. post pec - ca - to - rum
la - xat de - bi - tum. post pec - ca - to - rum

vo - mi - tum et ces - san - di pro - po - si - tum. cur - rant pas - sim o - mnes
vo - mi - tum et ces - san - di pro - po - si - tum. cur - rant pas - sim o - mnes

re - i. pro mer - ce - de re - gnum de - i le - vi
re - i. pro mer - ce - de re - gnum de - i le - vi

pa - tet ex - po - si - tum. a a' pa - tet ex - po - si - tum.

II

D
Stil - [Stil] - la mel - lis to - tum

T Stil - [Stil] - la mel - lis to - tum

e - ve dul-co - ra - vit ab - sin - ti-um. O

e - ve dul-co - ra - vit ab - sin - ti-um. O

[O] pe - na - rum com - pen-di-um. O

[O] pe - na - rum com - pen-di-um. O

[c] [O] dul-ce pur-ga - to - ri - um. tan - tas pe - nas tem - pus bre - ve

[O] dul-ce pur-ga - to - ri - um. tan - tas pe - nas tem - pus bre - ve et ex - tin - ctum lu - men le - ve re - for - mat

et ex - tin - ctum lu - men le - ve re - for - mat

| T: this and following phrase similar to D near opening of "Sed" in organum a3 Exiit sermo. Sed sic eum (M5)

e - mun-cto - ri -

e - mun-cto - ri -

Musical notation for the first system, featuring two staves. The upper staff has dynamic markings 'f' and 'p'. The lower staff has dynamic markings 'e', 'd', and 'e''.

Musical notation for the second system. The upper staff continues the vocal line. The lower staff has a dynamic marking '(p)'. Both staves end with the instruction '- [um.]'.

Musical notation for the third system, labeled 'III' and 'Ad'. The upper staff has a dynamic marking 'g'. The lower staff has a dynamic marking 'g'. Both staves end with the instruction '[Ad]'.

Musical notation for the fourth system with Latin lyrics: am - plex - us re - di chri - sti fi - li tam

Musical notation for the fifth system with Latin lyrics: di - u pro - di - ge. cru - cis vex - il - lum e - ri - ge. et al - bi - ge - os a - bi - ge. to -

Musical notation for the sixth system with Latin lyrics: [to] - tum u - no re de - mi - sti qui vix gra - num in - tu - li - sti mes - sem in gra - no col - li - qui vix gra - num in - tu - li - sti mes - sem in gra - no col - li -

i h i1 i1

i2 j j' (h1) (i2)

i3 (h2) k k'

i4 f l l

or: or: -ge.]
-ge.

ANNI FAVOR IUBILEI

Conductus (J25/16)

F, f. 347v (7,87)

- | | |
|--|---|
| I Anni favor iubilei penarum laxat debitum.
Post peccatorum vomitum et cessandi propositum, currant passim omnes rei.
Pro mercede regnum dei
levi patet expositum. | The benefit of a jubilee year eases the debt of one’s punishments.
After a purging of sins and the intention to stop, all the guilty 5 should hasten from every direction.
The kingdom of God is available for an easy price. |
| II Stilla mellis totum Eve dulcoravit absintium.
O penarum compendium!
O dulce purgatorium!
Tantas penas tempus breve, et extinctum lumen leve
reformat emunctori[um.] | A drop of honey has sweetened all of Eve’s bitterness.
10 O the sparing of the penalties!
O the sweet cleansing!
A short time reconciles punishments like this,
and a snuffer restores the delicate light that was extinguished. |
| III Ad amplexus redi Christi, fili, tam diu prodige.
Crucis vexillum erige.
et Albigeos abige.
Totum uno redemisti.
Qui, vix granum intulisti,
messem in grano collige. | 15 Son, return to Christ’s embrace,
you who were for so long wasteful.
Raise up the banner of the Cross and drive away the Albigensians.
You have brought the whole back into one.
20 You, who scarcely brought in grain before,
now gather together a bumper crop in grain. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 87, f. 347v: a2; Strophes I-III complete, with II and III indicated by capitals, and with smaller upper-case “O” letters heading lines 10 and 11 within Strophe II, not signaled by extra space in the above text. The following work in F-7, Artium dignitas (I4/20), seems to mark a major break in the fascicle, as it begins with a large historiated initial, offers settings without extended caudae (if present), and, beginning with the subsequent piece at F-7, 89 (Gratuletur populus [H6/147]), features mostly strophic musical settings.

CaJ (GB-CJc QB 1; Cambridge, Jesus College, MS QB 1), Fragment A, no. 16, ff. Fv-Hr: a2; fragmentary, although most of the complete piece is extant. The first leaf (Fr-v) is reconstructed from five extant binding strips out of an original six, the missing segment of which accounts for the greater part of the losses within the work. The other two folios consist of four strips each, with some very small gaps between each of them, making up ff. Gr-v; and nearly the entire writing block is extant for the remainder of the piece concluding on f. Hr.¹ The way Anni favor opens in CaJ, in mid-system and headed by a smaller red, upper-case painted initial “A” without additional decoration – and this in contrast to the much larger, filigreed initials that head the other works transmitted in this portion of the MS – gives every indication that the scribe of CaJ considered it to be a continuation of the preceding work, the conductus Age penitentiam (H31/11), a feature supported by no other source of either work, including F, where Age penitentiam appears five pieces earlier at F-7,82. Strophes II and III in CaJ are headed by the same style of initial as Strophe I. Anderson’s edition of Anni favor does not report anything beyond the material given on f. Fv in this source, suggesting he was unaware of the content on the other leaves. As a result, all variants from this source are collated below.

¹ The individually foliated binding strips that originally constituted each folio show the following numbers, reading from left to right of the indicated leaf: Fv 32r, 8r, 21[r], 24[r], 6[r], followed by a gap from the missing strip, and 33v. Gr: 17r, 29r, 10r, 20v. Gv: 20r, 10v, 29v, 17v. Hr: 4r, 7r, 26r, 5r. For a catalog and correctly reconstituted images of this source, including the labeling system used here to refer to the fragments, see William J. Summers and Peter M. Lefferts, English Thirteenth-Century Polyphony: A Facsimile Edition, Early English Church Music, no. 57 (London: Stainer and Bell for the British Academy, 2016), pp. 14-15, plates 11-34.

Text only: none.

Music only:

The T melody of the cauda over “[emuncto]rium” in the conductus (line 14,2, ending Strophe II) shares many elements with an extended passage in the organum a3 Exiit sermo. Sed sic eum (M5). In the organum, after the opening gesture of either 8L or 4L (depending on how the lengths of the rests are interpreted) that begins the verse section at “Sed,” its D embarks on an extensive presentation of four phrases comprising 2(8L+10L), with the first pair of phrases beginning on f, the second on b-flat, and with both supported by f in the T. Each of these passages correlates quite closely with the material in the D of the conductus cauda from L10-L25, which starts on c. Later on in the same conductus cauda, from L32-L39, a segment related to both the earlier conductus and organum passages can also be heard.² It may be worthwhile to note that the Exiit sermo a3 has been attributed to Perotin by Heinrich Husmann.³ The M5 organum triplum appears in:

F, fasc. 2, no. 3, f. 18r (verse beginning on f. 18v): a3.

W2, fasc. 2, no. 5, f. 14r (verse beginning on f. 14v): a3.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Historical references and dating the text: various implications in this poem, especially the mention of “raising the banners of the Cross” and “driving out the Albigensians” in lines 17-18 (see also the notes below for lines 1-2), suggest this poem likely originated as a call to the Albigensian (or Cathar) Crusade (1209-1229). However, determining when the poem may have originated during this decades-long conflict is somewhat complicated and remains unclear. Sanders (“Style and Technique,” p. 522, note 44),⁴ for example, offers 1208, which I followed in a subsequent study (Payne, “Datable Notre Dame Conductus”).⁵ More recently, in the Ph.D. thesis of Jacopo Mazzeo,⁶ an argument is made for the year 1209, based on information supplied to him by Lena Wahlgren-Smith. In this reckoning, the content of Strophe III comes into play, which ²For details, see the discussion of the cauda in Payne, “Datable Notre Dame Conductus,” pp. 136-137, and see note 63 for its relationship with the organum).

³Heinrich Husmann, ed., Die drei- und vierstimmigen Notre-Dame-Organa: Kritische Gesamtausgabe. Publikationen älterer Musik, no. 11 (Leipzig: Breitkopf und Härtel, 1940; repr. Hildesheim: Georg Olms, 1967), p. xxi-xxii.

⁴Ernest H. Sanders, “Style and Technique in Datable Notre Dame Conductus,” Gordon A Anderson (1929-1981): In Memoriam von seinen Studenten, Freunden und Kollegen, 2 vols., Musicological Studies, no. 39, ed. Luther Dittmer, 2:505-530 (Henryville, PA: Institute for Mediaeval Music, 1985).

⁵Thomas B. Payne “Datable Notre Dame Conductus: New Historical Observations on Style and Technique,” Current Musicology, 64 (2001): 104-151.

⁶Jacopo Mazzeo, “The Two-Part Conductus: Morphology, Dating, and Authorship” Ph.D. thesis, University of Southampton, Faculty of Humanities, Department of Music, 2015, pp. 193-194.

these scholars read as an allegory invoking Raymond VI, Count of Toulouse, as depicted through the biblical figure of the Prodigal Son. Such an association is supported by several historical circumstances. As early as April 1207, in the runup to the Albigensian Crusade, Raymond, who had hesitated in rooting out members of the heretical Cathar sect within his lands, was excommunicated and his capital city of Toulouse placed under interdict – thus forbidding the celebration of any of the holy sacraments in its environs. This condemnation was initially leveled by the papal legate Pierre de Castelnau and later confirmed by Pope Innocent III. Pierre’s eventual murder on 15 January 1208 (reputedly at Raymond’s bidding) is often signaled as the motivation for the official proclamation of the Albigensian Crusade. Some two years after his excommunication, on 18 June 1209, Raymond underwent public penance at Saint-Gilles and was reconciled to the church, only to suffer two further excommunications, due to actions by ecclesiastical councils convened at Avignon in September 1209, and at Arles in February 1211.⁷ Thus, although the year 1209 – the date of Raymond’s reconciliation – is favored by Mazzeo as the date for the writing of the poem, the language of Strophe III (and the chance of further allusions to the reconciliation in lines 3-4) is not specific enough to determine whether or not the reconciliation had – or had not – transpired, or which of Raymond’s several excommunications the poet may be raising. The reference to the jubilee year at the start of the poem, though, thanks to the report by Aubry des Trois-Fontaines (given in the notes to lines 1-2, below), suggests it should hail from no earlier than 1208. For further possible constraints as to the date, see the notes to line 12, which could place the possible time of composition no earlier than 1210. Textual notes: 1-2: Note that a jubilee year is also mentioned at the very end of the previous item in F-7, O crux ave spes unica (H4/230), which in the main treats the Cross of the Crucifixion. In the biblical tradition, a jubilee year occurred every fifty years (see Leviticus, 25:10-17): slaves were freed, debts forgiven, the cultivation of crops and fruits forbidden, and all property returned to its hereditary owners. In Christian contexts, as this poem spells out, the proclamation of a jubilee year promised remission of sins, and in the milieu of the Albigensian Crusade this was reflected in the Pope’s promise of a plenary indulgence for the crusaders in 1208 (see the notes to line 12). The first clear record of a so-called jubilee year is spelled out in the bull Antiquorum habet fida relatio, promulgated by Boniface VIII on Feb. 22, 1300, yet there are indications of earlier celebrations. The medieval chronicler Aubry des Trois-Fontaines (writing ca. 1230-1250), for instance, refers to the year 1208 as a jubilee year: “[anno 1208 ...] dicitur quod annus iste quinquagesimus sive iubilaeus et remissionis in curia Romana sit celebratus” (“[in the year 1208 ...] it is said that this year was to be celebrated as a fiftieth or jubilee [year], and one of remission within the Roman curia”).⁸ It is conceivable that this event may inform the date of composition of the text of Anni favor (see the introductory remarks above). For other references to a year of jubilee within the Parisian conductus repertory, see the notes to the text of O crux ave spes unica (H4/230), line 27, Condimentum nostre spei (H8/67), line 9, as well as these opening two lines of Anni favor iubilei (J25/16). Additional mention of jubilees within the larger conductus repertory appears in Adest annus iubilaeus (J56/8), line 1, Sol de sole progrediens (Q03/-), lines 46-47, and Nunc angelorum gloria (L98/-), in the final lines of either Strophe II or IV, depending on the specific version of the text. 3-4: if the above assertions are correct that Count Raymond VI of Toulouse is the specific addressee of this poem (see the opening remarks to these notes), these lines might further hint at this ruler’s reconciliation to the church in 1209, although, as noted above, whether such an event had occurred yet or not is unclear from the text. 6-7: it is conceivable that these lines could be sarcastic; a similar tone seems to creep out as well in the final lines of the poem. 8-14 (Strophe II): even with Anderson’s ingenious explanations in his ⁷For the preceding points, see, Mark Gregory Pegg, A Most Holy War, Pivotal Moments in World History (New York: Oxford University Press, 2008), pp. 53, 95, 97, 108. The second of these excommunications was in affirmation of the first. It resulted when Raymond failed to meet conditions that would have voided his earlier condemnation (Pegg, p. 108). Additionally, it seems that Raymond was himself expecting to go through another ritual of reconciliation during the summer of 1210, but this was quashed by a refusal to allow Raymond to absolve himself from his existing charges by an ecclesiastical council convened in August 1210 at Saint-Gilles (see Pegg, A Most Holy War, p. 103).

⁸*Chronica Albrici monachi Trium Fontium*, Paul Scheffer-Boichorst ed., in Monumenta Germaniae Historica: Scriptores, vol. 23 (Hannover: Hahn, 1874), p. 889.

edition of this piece (NDRC, 5:vxii), the meanings and interconnections of the various allegories displayed in this stanza are still rather difficult to sort out. Anderson rightly sees the distinction between honey and wormwood (“bitterness”) in lines 8-9 as juxtaposing the Virgin Mary and Eve, with Mary (invoked indirectly through the attribute mellis stilla – “drop of honey”)⁹ sweetening the bitterness of original sin brought on through Eve. This opposition continues through to the image of the snuffer (emunctorium, also translatable as forceps, wick trimmer, or douter) that appears at the end of the stanza. This same tool, interestingly, has two contradictory purposes, as it can both extinguish the light of a candle or lamp, as well as enable it to burn more efficiently by trimming the light’s wick.¹⁰ Thus, Eve and Mary respectively extinguished and rekindled the hope of salvation for mankind, represented by the “delicate, extinguished light” of line 13. With ammunition furnished by the Glossa ordinaria in its explications of Exodus, 37:23,¹¹ the snuffer is also identified allegorically with the Old and New Testaments, although the immediate identification of the implement with the two women is not directly specified in this or any of the other Glossa passages Anderson relates (nor could I find additional supporting evidence of such elsewhere in the same source); nonetheless, the leap is not a hard one to make. Hence, the image of the snuffer/trimmer implies the oppositional role that sweet forgiveness plays in thwarting bitter sin, and is buttressed by the contrary yet associated figures of the Old and New Testaments, allied as well with the earlier face-off in the poem between Mary and Eve. On a different issue, Anderson sees this second stanza as a possible interloper within the poem that departs from the emphasis on the Albigensian Crusade in the surrounding strophes. Yet a clear connection to the other stanzas arises in the stress here on the cleansing effects of the forgiveness of sin in lines 10-11, an emphasis provoked by the reference to the jubilee year that opens the poem and which remains a prime subject throughout its course. 12: in conjunction with the other information given here that may point to fixing a date for this text, the mention in this line that a “short time reconciles punishments” might conceivably recall the period of 40 days of service that was expected of crusaders in exchange for the plenary indulgence offered by the papacy as a reward for going on the Albigensian Crusade. Such an indulgence canceled the effects of the lingering temporal punishment that was still owed to sins whose eternal punishment was previously absolved through the sacrament of confession. Temporal punishment required spending time in purgatory in order to cleanse the earthly effects of a sin, which the offered indulgence revoked. As early as 1204 Pope Innocent III granted such indulgences to crusaders in the Holy Land, and in 1208 he extended this provision for those who would participate in the crusade against the Cathars in southern France. However, it was apparently not until 1210 that the condition for the indulgence was specified as a 40-day period of service (quadrigesima). Also this length of term, from the evidence of the documentary record, was not something the pope ever mandated himself, but was specified by the legates who represented his affairs.¹² Hence, if one accepts that the language in line 12 does indeed refer to this length of service, it would imply the poem’s composition in or after 1210. 15-16: references to Jesus’s parable of the Prodigal Son (Luke, 15:11-32). Here, in contrast to this fable’s more prevalent significance as an allegorical reflection of God the Father and Christ the Son, or as a typological manifestation of the Old versus the New Law, the addressee of the poem is urged to return to the fold by taking up the Cross and driving out Albigensian heretics (see the above remarks concerning the dating of the conductus poem). For further representations of ⁹This same phrase begins a widely transmitted motet text devoted to the Virgin: Mellis stilla maris stella rosa primula (vdW 808 / Domino II or Alleluya).

¹⁰The word appears most frequently in the plural (emunctoria). It is often portrayed as a scissors-like implement, with the pairing of the blades emphasizing further the dual, oppositional conceits of the images found throughout the strophe.

¹¹The text for the passage cited by Anderson comes from PL, vol. 113, col. 293B: “... emunctoriis. Quae in Isaia [6:6] forcipes appellantar, duo Testamenta, scilicet quibus peccata purgantur, quaeque intra se sancti Spiritus unione sociantur” (“... snuffers, which in Isaiah [6:6] are called ‘forceps,’ are the two Testaments, namely the things by which sins are purged, and which, in and of themselves, are associated with the union of the Holy Spirit” – translation slightly modified from Anderson’s).

¹²For this and the previous points in this discussion, see Rebecca Rist, “Salvation and the Albigensian Crusade: Pope Innocent III and the Plenary Indulgence,” Reading Medieval Studies, 36 (2010): 95-112; particularly 95-97, 102.

the Prodigal Son parable within the music associated with Notre Dame, see Anderson, “Symbolism in Texts of Thirteenth-Century Music – A Postscript,” Studies in Music, 5 (1971): 36-42; and Payne, Motets and Prosulas, 50. 17-18: see the opening remarks on the historical allusions in this poem. 19-21: the frequent use of grain as a figure for saved souls seems to apply here, prompted by the biblical images of the wheat and chaff from Matthew 3:12 and Luke, 3:17, and by Jesus’s parables of the sower (Matthew, 13:1-23, Mark, 4:1-20) and the wheat and the tares (Matthew, 13:24-30, explicated in Matthew, 13:36-43). Here the poem’s addressee is commanded to gather all souls together as one, as if grain at harvest time, and restore them to salvation by taking up the Cross in the Albigensian Crusade and rooting out the heresy that threatens their chances for eternal life. It also makes clear that previously he has been remiss in fulfilling these duties, implying a bit more of the sarcasm that was conjectured above for lines 6-7.

Observations and Variants: all variant readings in CaJ are collated here, since the only the first of the four extant pages to contain this piece in this source was considered by Anderson in his edition (see NDRC, 5:116). TEXT: 2,2: CaJ: only “pe[narum]” remains. 3,3-4,1: CaJ: last letter of “vomitus” and all of “et [cessandi]” cut away. 5,1: CaJ: “cura-” only extant; it is unclear whether this denotes a different verb (“curant”) or merely a different spelling of the adopted reading “currant.” 5,4: CaJ: first letter of “rei” cut away. 7,2: CaJ: only “[pa]tet” remains, with most of the first “t” gone. 7,3: F: no concluding period; CaJ: part of concluding period still visible. 8,1: CaJ: “Sti[l]l[a]” remains, with “a” partly visible. 8,4: CaJ: last letter of “eve” cut away. 9,2: CaJ: first two letters of “absintium” faded, with second “i” cut away (perhaps with a preceding “h” as well?). 10,1: CaJ: “o” (whole word) entered over si figure in T (=g) following cauda rather than at its start. 11,1: CaJ: “o” (whole word) cut away. 11,3: CaJ: only “purga[torium]” extant, with “a” partially cut away. 12,2: CaJ: the “n” of “penas” is partly excised. 13,2-3: CaJ: most of the first syllable of “extinctum” and nearly all of the last two letters of “lumen” are gone. 14,1: CaJ: “reforme[t]” is extant, showing a different mood from F in the form of this verb. 14,2: F: final syllable of “emunctorium” and period at end of stanza never entered. CaJ: penultimate letter of “emunctorium” partly cut away. 15,2: CaJ: last letter of “complexus” cut away. 15,3: CaJ: last syllable of “redi” missing. 16,2: CaJ: first letter of “tam” partially cut away. 17,1: CaJ: final vowel of “crucis” gone. 17,3-18,1: CaJ: “eri[ge]” only remains, with part of its “g” and part of the “t” of the following “et” also extant. 18,2: CaJ: abigeos, differing from F, but probably signifying an erroneous spelling, since it means, as it stands, “cattle thieves.” 18,3: CaJ: only “abi[ge]” remains. 19,3: CaJ: third syllable of “redemisti” faded. 20,2: CaJ: “vix” completely cut away. 20,4: CaJ: only “[int]ulisti” remains. 21,4: CaJ: “college,” differing from the “collige” preserved in F, but not in substance, as both these forms of the imperative exist collaterally. MUSIC: General remarks: As mentioned above in the observations on the verbal text, all variant readings from CaJ are included here. In addition to the el figures in F, indicated as usual above the staff, a number of the si figures in both voices are written with larger than usual tails, as if maybe to connote L rather than si (which figures also have their expected smaller tails here). These longer tails are not reported individually in the commentary here, but could conceivably imply some type of rhythmic significance for delivery of the sine littera sections. Line 1: TD: CaJ: no notes el. 2,1-2: D: CaJ: cut out, from note 5 of cauda (2li=ca) on “pe[narum]” (line 2,1) up to “laxat” (line 2,2); T: missing from note 6 of cauda (+2C=gf) up to “laxat.” 2,3: for “[debi]tum”: T: F: 4li; adopted 3li,si reading from CaJ; D: CaJ: 3li,2li. Cauda at line 3,1: at L2-L3,1: T: CaJ: 3liP=cdb faded; D: CaJ: 2liP=ac. Line 2,2: D: CaJ: stroke follows. 4,1: TD: CaJ: preceding stroke, and all of cauda missing. 4,2: TD: CaJ: music over “ces[sandi]” absent and apparently never present in CaJ (although the material immediately prior to this on the leaf is cut away), since Tt is complete, with text syllables shifted one notational figure to the right, and with an added si note in each voice (T – faded – likely=e, D=e) over syllable “[cessan]di” to make up for the earlier musical omission; both MSS are back in agreement with “propositum” (line 4,3). 5,1: for “[cur]rant”: T: CaJ: note cut away; D: part of note remains. 5,4: for “[re]i”: T: CaJ: note cut away; D: some of 3 of 3li=f remains. 6,3-4: T: CaJ: 3li over “reg[num]” faded; D: CaJ: 1 and some of 2 of 5C over “de[i]” cut away. 7,1: T: F: opens with 3li,2li,2li=def,ef,ga over “le[vi]” apparently missing some material compared with D; adopted reading from CaJ; TD: CaJ: stroke precedes “[le]vi.” 7,2: TD: CaJ: music extant only over “[pa]tet.” Cauda at 7,3 (closing Strophe I): CaJ: notes 4-6 of T, 3-6 of D cut away; D: no P throughout. D: CaJ: stroke at L9 and P at L11 om, stroke after L13 faded; T: CaJ: P at L10,2 om, f and stroke at L12 faded; CaJ: from L14-L17: D: 2li'3li=ca'dbg faded; T: CaJ: last 4 notes and strokes of Strophe I faded. Punctus organi closing Strophe I: D: CaJ: 3li for opening si, 2li=abc. Cauda opening Strophe II (at line 8,1): CaJ: D: 2-3 of 3li (=cb) at L2 cut away, T: 3 of 3li(=b) at L3 cut away; T: CaJ: 1 of 3li at L7=a. D: F: erroneous extra preceding stroke partly obscured by note before “[Stil]la,” as if to cover an error. Line 8,2: TD: CaJ: 2li over “mel[lis]” cut away; stroke following “mellis” om. 8,4: T: CaJ: si=f at “e[ve]”=DL?; TD: CaJ: all material for “[e]ve” cut away, following stroke remains. 9,2: TD: CaJ: all material for “ab[sintium]” faded; CaJ: over “[absin]ti[um]”: note cut away in T; 2 of 2li (=e) cut away in D. Cauda at line 10,1: CaJ: music over L9-L12 om in T; final 2li(=ag) over L11-L12 om in D. Line 10,2: CaJ: siP figure over “pe[narum]” in T; 3 for 3li over “[pe]na[rum]” in D. 10,3-11,1: T: CaJ: siP over “[com]pen[dium]” for 2li in F; TD: CaJ: material over “[compendi]um” and first 6L of following cauda faded; TD: CaJ: final figures at L9-L10 in cauda and over following syllable “O” of line 11,1 cut away. 11,2-3: D: CaJ: siP for si over “dul[ce]”; T: CaJ: si=f over “[dul]ce” faded. CaJ: music over “[purga]tori[um]” cut away in T; D missing only the first of its two notes. 12,2-3: T: CaJ: no stroke after “penas,” music over “[tem]pus” faded. 13,2-4: TD: CaJ: music over “ex[tinctum]” cut away; T: CaJ: 3li for 3C over “le[ve].” 14: over “re[format]” T: CaJ: 2*si*(=f,g); D: CaJ: 3li for 3C; the two si notes over “[re]format” (=f,g) el, the second exceptionally so; T: CaJ: siP for 2li over “[emun]cto[rium]”; TD: CaJ: 2li for 2*si* over “[emun]cto[ri]um.” Cauda closing Strophe II (at line 14,2): T: CaJ: 2li, 2li=ba,gc at L12,2-L14,1 cut away; D: CaJ: material from L13,2-L15,2 cut away, leaving remains of the last note of the 3li at L16; TD: CaJ: no stroke at L27; D: CaJ: no stroke at L28; T: F: erased stroke precedes 2li=ab at L29,2; T: CaJ: material from L29-L33,1 of cauda cut away; D: stroke and 3li,si=cab,c from L31-L34 of cauda cut away; T: CaJ: 3li for 3C at L 40-L41. Punctus organi closing Strophe II (at line 14,2): T: CaJ: penultimate note of Strophe II (=f) very elongated, with added prior stroke; TD: CaJ: strokes before last note of Strophe II cut away. Cauda opening Strophe III (at line 15,1): CaJ: T: 3li=bgb, D: 3C=dcb at L5-L6 smudged; T: CaJ: 2*si*=c,a at L10-L11 faded. Line 15: TD: CaJ: music over figures immediately following cauda cut away; TD: CaJ: music over “[am]plex[us]” worn; TD: CaJ: music over “re[di]” cut away. 17: T: CaJ: music over “[cru]cis” cut away; TD: CaJ: music over “[vex]illum” faded; D: CaJ: music over “[eri]ge” cut away. 18: T: CaJ: music over “et [albigeos]” cut away; D: CaJ: added stroke follows “albigeos”; TD: most of music over “[a]bi[ge]” cut away. Cauda opening line 19: D: CaJ: 3liP=fedcP opens; T: CaJ: 3li for 3C closes. Line 19,2-3: TD: CaJ: music over “u[no]” faded; CaJ: over “re[demisti]”: T: part of 5 and all of 6 of 7C cut away; D: 4 of 4li cut away; CaJ: over “[re]demisti”: T: si=f very el, next 3 notes very worn; D: most of 6 and all of 7 of 7C and following 2 notes very worn, with ending g slightly visible. 20,2-3: CaJ: cut away over “vix”: T: 2li=ed, D: 4li,si=efec,d; T: CaJ: very el note over “gra[num]” without P; D: extra 2li,siP=ba,Pa follows 7C at “[gra]num.” 20,4: D: F: note for “in[tulisti]” placed on top line of the T staff below; D staff implies (by extension) d, T staff e; CaJ: unfortunately cut away along with T. The adopted D reading (e) duplicates the lowest note the D has reached so far, and is preferred to extending the D’s range down an additional note by choosing d. TD: CaJ: all material over “in[tulisti]” cut away, no evidence of b-flat sig. 21,1: TD: CaJ: material over “mes[sem]” very worn, no b-natural sig visible; D: CaJ: no stroke after “messe[m].” Cauda closing Strophe III (over line 21,4): T: CaJ, no stroke follows at L11; D: CaJ: 3li=cba at L12-L13; D: CaJ: no stroke follows L15, L17; T: CaJ: phrase at L22-L25 om, D complete; TD: CaJ: no strokes follow L35; at L43: T: F: stroke entered in small space between surrounding figures, thus rather difficult to see, D: CaJ: stroke follows; D: CaJ: 3C for 3li at L55; T: CaJ: stroke follows d at L60; T: CaJ: 3li for 3C at L64; T: CaJ: 3li for 3C at L72-L73, no stroke follows; D: CaJ: no stroke follows L74; T: CaJ: gives 3*si*=a,f,g from L82 to end of piece, with first note not el and last 2 notes greatly el with no intervening strokes; D: CaJ: 3li+3C=abc+bag from L82-L85, with final note at L88 greatly el.

ARTIUM DIGNITAS
Conductus (14/20)

F, f. 349r (7,88)*

I

D [Ar - ti - um di - gni - tas que pri - mum vi - gu - it;

T [Ar - ti - um di - gni - tas que pri - mum vi - gu - it;

mo - der - ne vi - ti - o do - ctri - ne vi - lu - it.

que tot in - vo - lu - cris ver - bo - rum dif - flu - it. tot cir - cu - it

que tot in - vo - lu - cris ver - bo - rum dif - flu - it. tot cir - cu - it quod se de - sti - tu - it. et ni - chil cer - tum con - stru - it.

quod se de - sti - tu - it. et ni - chil cer - tum con - stru - it.

II

D Qui nunc in - fan - ti - um mo - re bal - bu - ci - unt. et vul - gi di - gi - to

T Qui nunc in - fan - ti - um mo - re bal - bu - ci - unt. et vul - gi di - gi - to

mon - stra - ri cu - pi - unt co - lan - tes cu - li - cem ca - me - lum

mon - stra - ri cu - pi - unt co - lan - tes cu - li - cem ca - me - lum

*W1 has b-flat signatures in both parts to start. They last through line 4 in the T and line 3 in the D, and may be used as an option for performing the F version.

glu - ti - unt. que ne - sci - unt vel que non ca - pi - unt
 glu - ti - unt. que ne - sci - unt vel que non ca - pi - unt

bla - spha - mant vel trans - i - li - unt.
 bla - spha - mant vel trans - i - li - unt.

III

D
 Ta - les con - ce - le - brat pre - co - num co - pi - a.
 T
 Ta - les con - ce - le - brat pre - co - num co - pi - a.

qui - bus in - ni - ti - tur do - ctri - ne glo - ri - a.
 qui - bus in - ni - ti - tur do - ctri - ne glo - ri - a.

nec e - nim pre - ci - um me - re - tur pro - pri - a sci - en - ti - a nec e - nim pre - ci - um me - re - tur pro - pri - a sci - en - ti - a ni - si ve - na - li - a men - di - cet per suf - fra - gi - a.] ni - si ve - na - li - a men - di - cet per suf - fra - gi - a.

ARTIUM DIGNITAS

Conductus (I4/20)

F, f. 349r (7,88)

- | | |
|---|---|
| I Artium dignitas, que primum viguit, moderne vitio doctrine viluit.
Que tot involucris verborum diffluit.
Tot circuit
quod se destituit,
et nichil certum construit. | The dignity of the liberal arts, which at first flourished, has grown worthless, thanks to the flaws of modern teaching. | | 5 | It wastes away from so much gibberish.
It talks in so many circles that it destroys itself,
and establishes nothing as certain. |
| II Qui nunc infantium more balbuciant, et vulgi digito monstrari cupiunt – colantes culicem,
camelum glutunt.
Que nesciunt
vel que non capiunt,
blasphemant vel transiliunt. | 10 Those now who babble in the manner of infants, and who crave to be pointed out by the crowd – in straining out a gnat, 15 they swallow a camel.
What they don't know or don't grasp,
they blaspheme or brush aside. |
| III Tales concelebrat preconum copia, quibus innititur doctrine gloria;
nec enim precium meretur propria scientia, nisi venalia
mendicet per suffragia. | 20 An army of hucksters celebrates this type, those on whom the fame of teaching has settled;
for their own knowledge doesn't 25 merit a prize, unless it should beg for it through purchased votes. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 88, f. 349v: a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with II and III headed by conventional capitals. This and the next 12 pieces in F-7 also appear without a break, but in a different order, in OxRawl. A major division at this point in the fascicle is indicated by the large, two-system-high historiated initial “A” that starts this piece. It depicts the Seven Liberal Arts (all conventionally rendered as female) as handed down from classical antiquity by the early fifth-century writer Martianus Cappella in his prosimetrum, the De nuptiis Philologiae et Mercurii (On the Marriage of Philology and Mercury). The members of the trivium (Grammar, Rhetoric, and Logic or Dialectic, from left to right) occupy the upper portion of a split-level scene bifurcated horizontally by the crossbar of the “A.” The quadrivium (Arithmetic, Music, Geometry, and Astronomy, again from left to right) appears in the area below.¹ The characters can be identified by the following means: Grammar sits on some sort of support, engrossed in a book sustained by a lectern. She holds a long, slightly curved implement in each hand, which could be either a pen and knife, a pair of knives ¹For a corresponding identification and description of the figures, see Rebecca A. Baltzer, “Thirteenth-Century Illuminated Miniatures and the Date of the Florence Manuscript,” Journal of the American Musicological Society, 25 (1972): 1-18, at pp. 7-8.

(to make corrections to a text), or possibly some other pair of tools, perhaps for holding down the pages of the codex she reads. Next, Rhetoric gestures with raised hands, apparently in conversation with Logic, whose own open right hand is slightly elevated, with the index finger pointing upward (perhaps to raise an objection?). Below, Arithmetic appears to be counting on the fingers of her hands as she engages Music, who shows no obvious attributes to aid in her identification, but who – like Logic above – slightly raises an open hand, this time with the palm facing her interlocutor. Lastly, Geometry and Astronomy also appear to confer, with the former measuring a green-colored globe with a compass, while the latter – looking back at Geometry over her shoulder – raises an orb of some kind, rendered with target-like concentric painted circles and bisected by a slightly crooked thin black line, shaped somewhat like a lightning bolt.

This is the fourth and last historiated initial to appear in F-7. The other examples are: Fraude ceca desolato (G4/133), at F-7,1 Austro terris influente (G1/26) at F-7,31, and Deduc Syon uberrimas (G8/85) at F-7,77. Like these prior illustrations, the one for Artium dignitas begins at the very top left of the leaf, though not at the start of a gathering (F-7,1 excepted). In the case of Artium dignitas, the divide in the MS here seems to imply more of a shift in style for the works that follow, rather than the switch to wider transmission patterns that was noticeable with the previous mid-fascicle illuminations. At this point in F-7, Artium dignitas signals a turn to settings that either have no caudae or very modest ones. Similarly, beginning with the very next piece – Gratuletur populus (H6/147) at F-7,89 – not only strophic poems but strophic musical settings are favored,² a preference that applies to nearly all subsequent pieces until Frater en Iordanus (J36/131) at F-7,109, a unique, single-stanza poem that never saw music entered on its staves. Subsequently, with Caput in caudam vertitur (J37/54) at F-7,110 – inaugurating a series of four works (F-7,110-113) that have been claimed as poems by Philip the Chancellor³ – pieces with more frequent and ambitious caudae return, and strophic poems drop out in favor of single-stanza and sequence-form texts.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 15, f. 108r (99r): a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with painted initials of the same size and type for all stanzas, entered to the immediate left of the writing block, as if beginning new pieces. The following work, the conductus Ut non ponam os in celum (I5/354), opening at the top of the next leaf (f. 109r [100r]), interestingly, lacks a starting initial.

Text only:

OxRawl (GB-Ob Rawl. poet. C510), no. 13, f. 237r (8r): text alone of Strophes I-III, complete, with slightly larger initials for II-III than the ones supplied for the start of the other lines; rubric: “De hiis qui usurpant arcium dignitatem” (“On those things that usurp the dignity of the arts”). This is the second piece to appear in OxRawl after the preceding now-lost folio 236 (7); it follows an incomplete version of the conductus Puer nobis est natus (H25/276), seen much earlier at F-7,4, f. 267v. Note that this and the next 12 pieces in F-7 appear together in OxRawl, although in a different order.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

²The exceptions are Non habes aditum (J29/209 – f. 353r, at F-7,100), Involutus in erroris (J30/187 – f. 353v, at F-7,101), Homo per potentiam (J33/161 – f. 355v, at F-7,106), and the unnotated Frater en Iordanus (J36/131 – f. 356r, at F-7,109) all of which survive only as single-stanza settings. Of these, all but the first are unique to F-7 (the only other extant source for Non habes aditum is OxRawl) and all, conceivably, at one time could have transmitted extra strophes.

³These are, in addition to Caput in caudam vertitur: Centrum capit circulus (J38/57), Clavus pungens acumine (J39/65), and Luget Rachel iterum (J40/199). The second of these is vouched for Philip by at least two medieval sources, the others are modern attributions.

Notes on the Text: General remarks: This diatribe on the weaknesses and corruption of modern teachers of the liberal arts recalls some of the tone of a number of works associated with Philip the Chancellor, although he has not been put forward as the poet of this poem, nor do I make a strong argument here for his authorship. For a sample of these relationships, see especially the conductus Veritas equitas largitas (K62/375), lines 58-63 (from Strophes 15-16), 103-108 (Strophe 26), 146-151 (Strophe 36); Mundus a munditia (F17/212), lines 43-46 (Strophe VIII); and the motet Error popularis / Domino (vdW 41/M1), lines 14-16, 26-28, all of which are quoted, and the points they make explored, in Payne, “Chancellor versus Bishop,” pp. 290-291, 299-300.⁴ 10-11: perhaps, as Anderson suggests (NDRC, 4:iv, note 2), this may be a nod to Wisdom, 12:24-25, speaking about those who incurred the Lord’s wrath by living foolishly and unjustly.⁵ 12-13: Anderson offers a possible evocation of Horace, Odes [Carmina], book 4, no. 3, lines 21-24, in addressing Melpomene, the muse of tragedy: “... / totum muneris hoc tui est, / quod monstror digito praetereuntium / Romanae fidicen lyrae: / quod spiro et placeo, si placeo, tuum est.” (“... / this bounty is entirely yours, / that of being pointed out by the finger of the passersby / as a harper on the Roman lyre. / If I am inspired and pleasing – if indeed I do please – it’s all due to you.”). 14-15: from Jesus’s castigation of the scribes and Pharisees who focus on minutiae, but miss the bigger picture: Matthew, 23:24: “Duces caeci, excolantes culicem camelum autem glutientes” (“Blind leaders, who strain out a gnat, but swallow a camel.”). 19-27 (Strophe III): in this stanza the criticism expands outward from the worthless teachers to include those supporters who grant them honors and prizes, ones that the teachers have amassed by resorting to bribery. For some further examples of this topic in the main Parisian sources, see, in addition to the pieces mentioned in the general remarks above, Deduc Syon uberrimas (G8/85), The proclamat clericorum (F19/357), Si mundus viveret (E10/327), Omni pene curie (I34/252), Non habes aditum (J29/221), Virtutum thronus frangitur (J11/385), and Consequens antecedente (H2/68).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 19,2: F,OxRawl: concelebrant; adopted reading from W1. MUSIC: General remarks: For some suggestions on performance, see the remarks on line 9, below. In addition to the musical repetitions at the level of the poetic line that are signaled by boxed letters over the staves, this piece is rich with further motivic interaction on a smaller scale. In particular is the falling, four-note scalar descent seen at first in the D (from d-a), then in the T (from c-g) within the opening line of the poem. This figure appears throughout the setting, beginning on the following pitches, from low to high: a, b-flat, c, d, e (at line 15,2 – over “glutiant”) and f. Furthermore, although each stanza is musically through-composed, every one presents, in at least one voice, some type of pedes plus cauda formation (AAB) in the manner of Dante’s description of typical song forms (cantio) from his De vulgari eloquentia (see Payne, “Datable Notre Dame Conductus,” pp. 119-121). This feature, along with the simplicity of the setting and the prevalence of 6pp verses throughout the strophic poem suggests a date prior to ca. 1200 (see idem, p. 121; and also Payne, “The Music and Texts of the Conductus,” in The Cambridge History of Medieval Music, 2:1061-1065).⁶ Accidentals: W1 has b-flat sigs in both parts to start the piece; these last through line 4 in the T and line 3 in the D, and may be used as an option for performing the F version. All other unbraced accidentals above the staff derive from W1. Line 9: TD: for the last four syllables in Strophe I, W1 features doubled or elongated figures for all but the 3C, and for the penultimate (the 2 of 2li) and final notes in this phrase: T: W1: 2si,el,1 of 2li el,si=aa,b,ag,g; D: W1: si,siP,3C,1 ⁴Thomas B. Payne, “Chancellor versus Bishop: the Conflict between Philip the Chancellor and Guillaume d’Auvergne in Poetry and Music,” Philippe le Chancelier: prédicateur, théologien, et poète parisien du début du XIIIe siècle, Gilbert Dahan, Anne-Zoé Rillon-Marne, eds., 265-306, Bibliothèque d’histoire culturelle du Moyen Âge, no. 19 (Turnhout: Brepols, 2017).

⁵Wisdom, 12:24-25: “Etenim in erroris via diutius erraverunt, deos aestimantes haec quae in animalibus sunt supervacua, infantium insensatorum more viventes. Propter hoc tamquam pueris insensatis iudicium in derisum dedisti.” (“For they went astray for a long time in the ways of error, holding those things for gods which are the most worthless among beasts, living after the manner of children without understanding. Therefore you have sent a judgment upon them as senseless children to mock them.”).

⁶Thomas B. Payne, “Latin Song II: The Music and Texts of the Conductus.” The Cambridge History of Medieval Music. 2 vols., Mark E. Everist and Thomas Forrest Kelly, eds., 2: 1048-1078 (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2018).

of 2li el, si=a, Pa, fed, ef, g. Performers may wish to extend these values in the same ways that they might lengthen the doubled plica (si, siP) and el shapes seen elsewhere in this version. For additional suggestions on performing a piece with this style and verse structure, see Janet Knapp, “Musical Declamation and Poetic Rhythm in an Early Layer of Notre Dame Conductus,” Journal of the American Musicological Society, 32 (1979): 383-407, especially the results of the discussion on pp. 399-400 and the specific remarks on Artium dignitas, p. 399, note 52. 24-25: T: F: the b-flat sig preceding this phrase is expressly canceled in W1 by a sig quad on b that heads the music set to line 25 (“scientia”). This indicator has prompted the reading of the remaining T b notes as natural to the end of the F version.

GRATULETUR POPULUS

Conductus (H6/147)

F, f. 349v (7,89): Strophe I; W1, (9,27) f. 115v (106v): Strophes II-IV*

[Gra - tu - le - tur po - pu - lus pro sa - lu - te po - pu - li. quam de - si - gnat
[Il - le - sa vir - gi - ni - tas fu - it ma - tris vir - gi - nis quam nul - la cu -
[Hic flos num - quam de - fi - cit fru - ctus in - de - fi - ti - ens pa - nis qui nos
[Chri - sti mors et pas - si - o quam pro no - bis pa - ti - tur mor - tis est de -

Gra - tu - le - tur po - pu - lus pro sa - lu - te po - pu - li. quam de - si - gnat
[Il - le - sa vir - gi - ni - tas fu - it ma - tris vir - gi - nis quam nul - la cu -
[Hic flos num - quam de - fi - cit fru - ctus in - de - fi - ti - ens pa - nis qui nos [Chri - sti mors et pas - si - o quam pro no - bis pa - ti - tur mor - tis est de -

ba - cu - lus no - ster si - gnans ba - cu - li a - a - ron mi - ste - ri - um.
- pi - di - tas e - lu - sit cu - pi - di - nis et ut a si - mi - li - bus re - fi - cit an - ge - los re - fi - ti - ens for - mam flos in vir - gi - ne
- stru - cti - o qua no - ster de - stru - i - tur for - tis ad - ver - sa - ri - us ba - cu - lus no - ster si - gnans ba - cu - li a - a - ron mi - ste - ri - um.

- pi - di - tas e - lu - sit cu - pi - di - nis et ut a si - mi - li - bus
re - fi - cit an - ge - los re - fi - ti - ens for - mam flos in vir - gi - ne
- stru - cti - o qua no - ster de - stru - i - tur for - tis ad - ver - sa - ri - us

nec ca - ret mi - ste - ri - o quod vir - ga tam a - ri - da per - pen - das si - mi - li - a flos pro - dit ex ar - bo - re clau - so clau - stro vir - gi - nis hu - ma - no pro ge - ne - re per hec ad - ver - san - ti - a mor - te vi - ta red - di - tur

nec ca - ret mi - ste - ri - o quod vir - ga tam a - ri - da
per - pen - das si - mi - li - a flos pro - dit ex ar - bo - re
clau - so clau - stro vir - gi - nis hu - ma - no pro ge - ne - re per hec ad - ver - san - ti - a mor - te vi - ta red - di - tur

et lo - co tam a - ri - do flo - rens fru - ctum si - ne dam - pno ar - bo - ris flos fru - ctus ef -
no - stri for - mam ge - ne - ris nos re - for - mans et nos lu - ci red - di - mur se - den - tes in

et lo - co tam a - ri - do flo - rens fru - ctum
si - ne dam - pno ar - bo - ris flos fru - ctus ef -
no - stri for - mam ge - ne - ris nos re - for - mans
et nos lu - ci red - di - mur se - den - tes in

W1*, unlike F and Ma (the latter with b-flat sigs throughout its transmission of the T alone), has no signatures in either part to start, although its D opens with an erased sig that could be either b-flat or b-natural, or perhaps both. With the last two syllables of "[miste]rio" (line 6,3), b-flat sigs appear in both voices to the end of the piece in W1. The lack of sigs may provide an alternative for performing the F version.

e - di - dit. Sic vir - go fit gra - vi - da.
- fi - ci - tur vir - - gi - nis ex cor - po - re in - du - it per um - quam su - o vul - ne - re te - ne - bris um - - bra mor - tis tol - li - tur sed non ven - tre gra - vi - do vir - gi - na - lis per - di - dit flo - ris si - ne dam - pno cor - po - ris sic ve - rus flos na - sci - tur chri - stus ci - ca - tri - cem vul - ne - ris an - ti - qui e - ri - pu - it mo - ri - a mor - te dum tol - li - mur pri - me cul - pe fu - ne - bris quam con - be - ne - fi - ci - um fru - ctus be - ne - fi - ci - o.

pro mor - ta - li - bus in - du - ens mor - ta - li - a.
- ens pro ho - mi - ne cul - pam tu - lit ho - mi - nis.]
- tra - xit pre - vi - us a - dam e - va pre - vi - a.]

GRATULETUR POPULUS

Conductus (H6/147)

F, f. 349v (7,89): Strophe I; WI, f. 115v (106v) (9,27): Strophes II-IV

- | | | |
|---|-------------------------------|--|
| I Gratuletur populus pro salute populi, quam designat baculus
noster, signans baculi Aaron misterium;
nec caret misterio
quod virga tam arida, et loco tam arido,
florens fructum edidit. Sic virgo fit gravida.
Sed non ventre gravido virginalis perdidit floris beneficium, fructus beneficio. | 5 10 | Let the people be glad for the people's salvation, which our staff represents, signifying the mystery of Aaron's staff;
and there is no shortage of mystery
as to how a stick so dry, and in a place so dry, came to flower and brought forth fruit. In just the same way, a virgin became pregnant.
But not even with a pregnant womb did the privilege of her virginal flower lapse, thanks to the privilege of its fruit. |
| II [Illesa virginitas
fuit matris virginis;
quam nulla cupiditas elusit cupidinis.
Et ut a similibus perpendas similia:
flos prodit ex arbore,
sine dampno arboris;
flos fructus efficitur
virginis ex corpore, sine dampno corporis
Sic verus flos nascitur, Christus, pro mortalibus
induens mortalia. | 15 20 25 | The virgin mother's virginity was spared;
no lustful longing deceived her.
And so that you may ponder like things with like:
a flower sprouts from a tree,
with no injury to the tree;
a flower becomes a fruit
from the body of a virgin, with no injury to her body.
That's how Christ – the true flower – is born, donning our mortal coil for mortals' sake. |
| III Hic flos numquam deficit –
fructus indefitiens, panis qui nos reficit, angelos refitiens –
formam flos in virgine, clauso claustro virginis, humano pro genere
nostri formam generis, nos reformans, induit.
Per quam suo vulnere, cicatricem vulneris
antiqui eripuit.
Moriens pro homine
culpam tulit hominis. | 30 35 40 | This flower never fails –
this unfailing fruit, this bread that feeds us and feeds angels –
this flower, within the virgin, enclosed in the virgin's enclosure, took on the form of our kind for the benefit of humankind, reforming us.
Whereby, through his own wound, he tore away the scar
of the ancient wound.
Dying for mankind, he carried off mankind's sin. |

IV Christi mors et passio, quam pro nobis patitur, mortis est destructio, qua noster destruitur fortis adversarius. Per hec adversantia, morte vita redditur, et nos luci reddimur, sedentes in tenebris. Umbra mortis tollitur, a morte dum tollimur prime culpe funebris, quam contraxit previus Adam, Eva previa.]	45 50 55	The death and suffering of Christ, which he suffered on our account, is the destruction of death, by which our strong adversary is destroyed. Through these adversities, life is restored by death, and we, sitting in darkness, are restored to light. The shadow of death is removed, as we are removed from the death of the first deadly sin, which our forefather Adam and foremother Eve incurred.
--	--	---

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 89, f. 349v: a2; Strophe I only, with a slightly larger, black-ink, upper-case “S” opening line 10, indicated by an extra space in the above text of Strophe I. No provision here for further text stanzas.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 27, f. 115v (106v): a2; Strophes I-IV, complete, with II-III written at the bottom of f. 115v (106v), and IV in the same place on the facing leaf, 116r (107r); these additional stanzas protrude into the lower margin of each leaf, below the writing block. The piece is headed by a large painted initial at the left margin of the first system, with the other stanzas given similar, but much smaller indications; the initial for II is mostly worn away.

Ma, fasc. 6, no. 5, f. 125v: a1 (T); Strophe I only, with the typical lack of provision for further stanzas in this source, with no initial in the staff-high space provided for it at the start of its first system, and with a similar space in the midst of this system following the setting of the first eight syllables of the piece. This latter break serves visually to separate the start of Gratuletur populus from the end of the previous work, whose final three syllables appear near the right margin of the writing block. A similar mid-system space occurs at the end of Gratuletur, providing an area for the absent opening initial of the following piece.¹ Similar to F, Ma provides a slightly larger upper-case letter to open line 10; and, like some other conductus transmitted in Ma-6, Gratuletur appears among motets (three of which are unique to this MS).² Yet, perhaps significantly, Gratuletur seems to be the only conductus in Ma-6 that was reduced to a single voice (a feature otherwise applied only to the motets in the first gathering of the fascicle).³

¹The works preceding and following Gratuletur populus in Ma-6 are the motets In Bethleem Herodes iratus / [In Bethleem] (vdW 98/M8) and Homo quo vigeas / [Et gaudebit] (vdW 313 / M24), respectively; each transmitted a1, their tenors are omitted from Ma. More information on the contents of Ma-6 appears in the following footnotes.

²The three unique motets, transmitted sequentially as Ma-6,26-28, include Yoyanne Yelisabet gravida visitatur / Iohanne (VdW 383a - olim 914/M29), Ovibus pastoris mens seduli / ? (VdW 915 / T unidentified), and Ave gloriosa plena gratie / ? (VdW 916/T unidentified). Each of these pieces is formatted in score as a motetus/triplum pair and followed by an unlabeled tenor.

³The first of the two quinion (5-bifolio) gatherings that make up Ma-6 (ff. 123-132, transmitting Ma-6,1-17) includes 10 motets, all lacking tenors. Seven of these motets, like Gratuletur populus, are transmitted a1, presenting only their Mot voices (Ma-6,3-4, 6-8, 14-15). The last of the pieces in this gathering, the double motet Ypocrite / O quam sancta / [Et gaudebit] (vdW 317/316/M24), offers both its Mot and Tr (Ma-6,16-17), while two of the earlier motets, Qui servare puberem / [Domine] (vdW 59/M3) and Formam hominis / [Gloria] (vdW 643/O2) appear successively in score as single-texted Mot/Tr pairs (comprising Ma-6,10-11). The remainder of the works within this gathering, except for the a1 version of Gratuletur populus, are conductus transmitted in two-part score. In

Text only:

OxRawl, no. 8, f. 6v (235v): this MS originally transmitted the text alone of Strophes I-IV, complete, but all of IV is now missing (lines 43-56), thanks to the present loss of f. 7 (236); rubric: “De illesa virginitate beate virginis parturientis” (“On the intact virginity of the childbearing Blessed Virgin”). The complete text was consulted, though, and its variants lodged, before the loss (see Anderson, NDRC, 3:203, and the edition in AH, 20:46-47, no. 14). The extant initials for II and III in OxRawl are rendered slightly larger as part of a layout that presents the opening letter of each couplet aligned in a separate column that precedes the rest of the verse lines. Lines 21-22 are also missing from this source with no apparent break, as the copyist appears to have inadvertently passed over to line 23 from line 21, which both start with the same word.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text:

Attribution: this poem is attributed to Philip the Chancellor in Guido Maria Dreves and Clemens Blume, eds., Ein Jahrtausend lateinischer Hymnendichtung: eine Blütenlese aus den Analecta hymnica mit literarhistorischen Erläuterungen, 2 vols. (Leipzig: O.R. Reisland, 1909), 2:25-26. It is not widely considered to be one of his works (it is not included in the listing of Dronke, “Lyrical Compositions,”⁴ for instance).

Versification: In addition to signaling the poet’s didactic tone and the use of punning (annominatio) and antithesis throughout, the above editors call attention to the artfully constructed stanzas of this conductus. They rightly describe it as “a combination of two four-line stanzas with crossed rhymes [i.e., abab cdcd], within the second of which [that is, after the sixth line of each strophe] a six-line stanza with the rhyme scheme abc abc is inserted.” But the construction is even more involved. Within each stanza, each pair of lines, with the exception of the ninth and twelfth verses, regularly terminate with closely related words. These may be different cases of the same noun or adjective, different forms of the same verb, or paired words with the same root. Also, the ninth and twelfth lines of each stanza, which are the only ones not to participate in the conceit, habitually rhyme with each other, but with no other lines in the strophe. Textual notes: 1-2: as the poem goes on to explain, the “people’s salvation” of line 2 is the birth of Christ (finally stated concretely in lines 26-27,1), as embodied in a number of floral, horticultural, and biblical images. The opening two stanzas focus primarily on the Virgin Mary’s role in this event, while the second half of the poem turns to Jesus himself. 3-4,1: in the conductus repertory, references to a rod or staff of office in the context of a liturgical feast are frequently tied to celebrations for the feast of the Circumcision on 1 January. On this day at Notre Dame of Paris, for example, the subdeacons temporarily assumed the offices and certain privileges of the higher clergy for the celebration of the liturgy. Here the cantor’s staff of authority was transferred to a new subdeacon (the “bacularius”) for use at the festivities.⁵ For further references to Circumcision and the closely associated Feast of Fools, see the notes for the conductus Ysyas cecinit (C4/188), lines 25 and 27. An explicit connection to Circumcision, rather than contrast, the second gathering of Ma-6 (ff. 133-142, containing Ma-6,18-30) opens with 11 consecutive motets a2, each one this time followed by a notated tenor part. Two conductus, the unique Salve sancta parens patrie (J58/317) and Novus miles sequitur (E11/228), both a2, then wrap up this last fascicle of Ma.

⁴Peter Dronke, “The Lyrical Compositions of Philip the Chancellor,” Studi medievali, 3rd series, 28 (1987): 563-592.

⁵For information on these practices, see Craig Wright, Music and Ceremony, 239-242; and Max Harris, “A Rough and Holy Liturgy: A Reassessment of the Feast of Fools,” in Risus Sacer – Sacrum Risibile: Interaktionsfelder von Sakralität und Gelächter im kulturellen und historischen Wandel, ed. Katja Gvozdeva and Werner Röcke, 77-100 (Bern: Peter Lang, 2009), 80-84; and idem, Sacred Folly: A New History of the Feast of Fools (Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 2011), 99-106.

to the Christmas season in general, does not seem to arise in Gratuletur populus, but the association of this poem with such a celebration would be entirely feasible. It also seems noteworthy that the poetic voice in these opening lines lays claim to the staff itself (baculus noster), thus implying that someone inhabiting the persona of the cantor or precentor (or possibly even the bishop) is delivering at least this opening stanza. 4,2-line 9: this portion is given over to the image of Aaron’s flowering staff (see Numbers, 17:1-8),⁶ a typological symbol widely interpreted as a reflection of the miraculous impregnation of the Virgin Mary (also foreseen by Isaiah, 11:1, supplied in the notes to lines 21-28, below), while the staff’s flowers and fruit – described as almonds in the biblical narrative – represent Christ; see, for example, the discussion of both these symbols in the textual notes for the conductus Ysayas cecinit (C4/188), line 5,2-3, and Quid tu vides Ieremia (D4/287), lines 1-2. 10-20: here the miracle of Christ’s birth by a virgin who retained her maidenhood after the event (the essence of the content of lines 10-14) is explored with further reflection on the arboreal and floral images raised previously in the first stanza of the poem. The language in line 10 expressly connects these allegories with that of the virgin birth, as do the expressions of lines 26-28. 21-28: having already arisen in the context of lines 4,2-9, the Marian symbol of the tree (or rod, shoot, stick, staff, branch, etc.) and the floral references to Christ are further contemplated. These associations are prompted particularly by Isaiah, 11:1: “et egredietur virga de radice Iesse, et flos de radice eius ascendet” (“And a shoot shall come forth out of the root of Jesse, and a flower shall rise up out of his root.”); note also the opening line of the triplum from the double motet Styrps Iesse progreditur / Virga cultus nescia / Flos filius eius (vdW 647/648/O16), as well as the text of its host chant, the Marian responsory Styrps Yesse. Virgo dei genetrix (O16).⁷ 27,2-28: Christ, in becoming incarnate and mortal, took on lowly human flesh, debasing his outward godliness but retaining his divinity undiminished, and exposed himself to mortal suffering and death;⁸ see, for just two further examples of this conceit in the Parisian conductus repertory, Sol sub nube latuit (I16/334), lines 17-20, and Parit preter morem (E12/261), lines 10-14. The image reappears in lines 35-37 of Gratuletur populus. 29-37: further treatment here of Christ as a flower taking on the sins of mankind through his incarnation (see the notes for lines 4,2-line 9 and 21-28), along with an additional symbolic identification of him with manna. On manna as a figure for Christ or his body (and thus offering an obvious nod towards the Eucharist), see the Distinctiones of Alain de Lille (in PL, 210, col. 849D, bottom), s.v. “manna”: “Manna ... Dicitur corpus Christi” (“Manna ... is said to be the body of Christ.”). References to manna in the Bible include: Exodus, 16:1-36; Numbers, 11:4-9; Joshua, 5:11-12; Psalms, 77: 23-25. Notably, in the last reference, and also in Wisdom, 16:20, manna is described as “angel food” or the “bread of angels.”⁹ 38-42: as lines 41-42 clarify, Christ’s own wound is the suffering that led to his death, or death

⁶Numbers, 17:8: “Sequenti die regressus invenit germinasse virgam Aaron in domo Levi: et turgentibus gemmis eruperant flores, qui, foliis dilatatis, in amygdalas deformati sunt” (“He [Moses] returned on the following day, and found that the rod of Aaron for the house of Levi, was budded: and that the buds swelling it had bloomed blossoms, which spreading the leaves, were formed into almonds.”).

⁷“Styrps Iesse virgam produxit virgaque florem et super hunc florem requiescit spiritus almus. Virgo dei genetrix virga est, flos filius ejus” (“The stem of Jesse produced a branch [virga], and the branch a flower; and on this flower rested the kind Spirit. The branch is the virgin mother of God, the flower is her son.”).

⁸See Philippians, 2:7-8: “... sed semet ipsum exinanivit, formam servi accipiens in similitudinem hominum factus, et habitu inventus ut homo. Humiliavit semet ipsum, factus oboediens usque ad mortem, mortem autem crucis” (“But he [Christ] emptied himself, taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men, and devised in appearance as a man. He humbled himself, becoming obedient unto death, even to the death of the cross.”).

⁹Psalms 77: 23-25: “Et mandavit nubibus desuper, et januas caeli aperuit. Et pluit illis manna ad manducandum, et panem caeli dedit eis. Panem angelorum manducavit homo; cibaria misit eis in abundantia” (“And he [God] had commanded the clouds from above, and had opened the doors of heaven. And had rained down manna upon them to eat, and had given them the bread of heaven. Man ate the bread of angels: he sent them provisions in abundance.”). Wisdom, 16:20: “Pro quibus angelorum esca nutritivi populum tuum, et paratum panem de caelo praestitisti illis sine labore, omne delectamentum in se habentem, et omnis saporis suavitatem” (“Instead of which things [i.e., calamities] you did feed your people with the food of angels, and gave them bread from heaven prepared without labour; having in it all that is delicious, and the sweetness of every taste.”).

itself. In taking on the sins of all by sacrificing himself, Christ effectively healed the “ancient wound” of original sin and replaced Mosaic law with a new covenant whereby people might achieve heavenly salvation through Christ’s gift of grace. 43-49: for the frequent conceit of death (or, as here, “our strong adversary,” implying the Devil) being overcome or destroyed by death (i.e., by Jesus’s sacrifice and resurrection), see Hebrews, 2:14-15; Romans, 6:9; 1 Corinthians, 15:26-27, 54-55; and Payne, Motets and Prosulas, p. 27 (note to lines 136-137). Hence, as line 49 of Gratuletur populus states: “life is restored by [Jesus’s] death.” 50-51: see Psalm 106:9-10.¹⁰ for more on Christ as a light illuminating earlier darkness, see Isaiah, 9:2: “populus qui ambulabat in tenebris vidit lucem magnam: habitantibus in regione umbrae mortis, lux orta est eis” (“The people who walked in darkness, have seen a great light: for those living in the region of the shadow of death, light is risen to them”). For the Lord giving light or sight to the blind, see Psalms, 145:8: “Dominus inluminat caecos. Dominus erigit adlisos. Dominus diligit iustos” (“The Lord gives light to the blind. The Lord lifts up the downcast. The Lord loves the just”); as well as Exodus, 4:11, and the various miracles of Jesus healing the blind (in Matthew, 20:29-34; Mark, 8:22-26 and 10:46-52; Luke, 18:35-43). 52-56: this figure invokes the deception of Adam and Eve by the serpent in Genesis, 3. This event brought original sin (the “first deadly sin” alluded to in line 54) upon mankind through the eating of the forbidden fruit from the tree of knowledge (see also Romans, 5:12-21; 1 Corinthians, 15:22). Mary’s giving birth to Jesus redeemed mankind and negated the effects of original sin, restoring humanity to its initial state before the Fall. Here, interestingly, the poet seems to hold both Adam and Eve equally culpable for their sin, whereas the typical ploy is to lay greater weight for the blame onto Eve for initially succumbing to the serpent’s temptation (Genesis, 3:1-6).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: Since W1 is used to establish the texts of Strophes II-IV, all verbal variants from this source are collated here. 3,1: F: quem; taken from W1, Ma, OxRawl. 4,2: F: signat; from W1, Ma, OxRawl. 5,1: the poetic scheme and musical setting show this word is here construed as a tri-syllable. 7,3: W1: tamen; from F, Ma, OxRawl. 13,2: F: beneficium; from W1, Ma, OxRawl. 20,1: OxRawl gives “perpendens,” which conceivably could suit, but the adopted reading seems to fit better with the “ut” clause that contains it. 20,2: W1: written as if spelled “similta”; proper reading confirmed by OxRawl. 23,3: W1: written effititur; spelling from OxRawl. 27,1: W1: the abbreviated name is written completely in Greek characters here, as also in OxRawl: “χρς.” 30,1: W1: prius; from OxRawl. 30,3: W1: non; from OxRawl. 36,2: W1: causa; from OxRawl. 40,1: curiously Hans Walther (“Die poetische Anthologie des cod. Oxford Rawl. C. 510,” Mittellateinisches Jahrbuch, 3 [1966], 218-227, at 218, note 2), reports (I think mistakenly) that OxRawl gives “antiquam.” 44,1: W1: qua; the adopted reading is from OxRawl via the edition in AH, 20:46-47, no. 14. The W1 reading could suffice, and arguably might be favored due to the use of the same word to open line 46, below, however the accusative rather than ablative seems preferable and smoother in this instance. MUSIC: Accidentals: W1, unlike F and Ma (the latter with b-flat sigs throughout its transmission of the T alone), has no signatures in either part to start, although its D opens with an erased sig that could be either b-flat, b-natural, or perhaps both. With the last two syllables of “[miste]rio” (line 6,3), b-flat sigs appear in both voices to the end of the piece in W1. The lack of sigs may provide an alternative for performing the F version. Line 1: T: Ma: both here and in line 3, the third syllables of the verses are written with the special form Ma uses for extended notes. Performers may wish to extend these values in the same ways that they might lengthen the syllables under doubled plica (si,siP), el , and 3li shapes seen elsewhere in this piece. 5,1: T: F: si,2li figure=g,ab over “aa[ron]” written 3li, possibly due to confusion over the syllabic underlay of this word (see the observations on the text for this line, above); taken from W1, Ma. 6,3: T: F, Ma: 3li=aga for “mi[sterio]”; reading adopted from W1 to avoid the use of the exact same figure in both parts. See also the above remarks on accidentals. 14,2: D: F: note that over the last two syllables in the piece, the same melismatic figure, written a fifth higher, concludes the previous line (on “[benefici]um”); this relationship has prompted the adopted rhythmic interpretation, and ¹⁰Psalm 106:9-10.: “Quia satiavit animam inanem, et animam esurientem satiavit bonis. Sedentes in tenebris et umbra mortis; vinctos in mendicitate et ferro” (“For he [the Lord] has satisfied the empty soul, and has filled the hungry soul with good things. Such as sat in darkness and in the shadow of death: bound in want and in iron”).

the more leisurely pace of the occasional sine littera segments elsewhere in this piece also suggests the slower interpretation of the ligatures adopted here.

UT NON PONAM OS IN CELUM

Conductus (15/354)

F, f. 350r (7,90): Strophes I-III; WI, f. 109r (100r) (9,11): Strophes IV-V

8

D

1. [Ut non po - nam os in ce - lum in in - cer - tum mit - to te - lum.
 2. [Mun - da ma - nus de - bet es - se. que mun - da - nis vult pre - es - se.
 3. [Qui sub - ie - ctis pre - si - de - tis non de - le - vi iu - di - ce - tis.
 4. [Qui - bus sce - ptrum est su - a - ve si - bi di - ci que - runt a - ve
 5. [Men - tam ta - men de - ci - ma - tis et di - vi - num pon - de - ra - tis

T

1. Ut non po - nam os in ce - lum in in - cer - tum mit - to te - lum.
 2. Mun - da ma - nus de - bet es - se. que mun - da - nis vult pre - es - se.
 3. Qui sub - ie - ctis pre - si - de - tis non de - le - vi iu - di - ce - tis.
 4. [Qui - bus sce - ptrum est su - a - ve si - bi di - ci que - runt a - ve
 5. [Men - tam ta - men de - ci - ma - tis et di - vi - num pon - de - ra - tis

8

D

1. qui pre - ten - dunt de - i ze - lum post ho - no - ris a - pi - cem
 2. vo - bis i - stud est ne - ces - se po - pu - lum qui re - gi - tis.
 3. nam pen - sa - re vos de - be - tis il - lis es - se si - mi - les
 4. al - li - gan - tes ho - nus gra - ve ho - mi - num in hu - me - ris
 5. dum mi - no - ra iu - di - ca - tis [re - le - qui - stis] gra - vi - a

T

1. qui pre - ten - dunt de - i ze - lum post ho - no - ris a - pi - cem
 2. vo - bis i - stud est ne - ces - se po - pu - lum qui re - gi - tis.
 3. nam pen - sa - re vos de - be - tis il - lis es - se si - mi - les
 4. al - li - gan - tes ho - nus gra - ve ho - mi - num in hu - me - ris
 5. dum mi - no - ra iu - di - ca - tis [re - le - qui - stis] gra - vi - a

8

D

1. le - gis ser - vant cor - ti - cem. et co - lan - tes cu - li - cem
 2. fa - ci - te que di - ci - tis si vo - bis et sub - di - tis
 3. cre - a - tu - ras fra - gi - les et ad la - psum fa - ci - les
 4. be - ne qui - dem e - ge - ris si que di - cunt fe - ce - ris
 5. fe - stu - cam in a - li - a non tra - bem in pro - pri - a

T

1. le - gis ser - vant cor - ti - cem. et co - lan - tes cu - li - cem
 2. fa - ci - te que di - ci - tis si vo - bis et sub - di - tis
 3. cre - a - tu - ras fra - gi - les et ad la - psum fa - ci - les
 4. be - ne qui - dem e - ge - ris si que di - cunt fe - ce - ris
 5. fe - stu - cam in a - li - a non tra - bem in pro - pri - a

*W1 has a different rhythmic realization for this cauda, see at end

1. glu - ti - unt ca - me - lum.]
 2. que - ri - tis pro - des - se.]
 3. li - cet mo - do ste - tis.]
 4. sed quod a - gant ca - ve.]
 5. pu - pil - la cu - ra - tis.]

1. glu - ti - unt ca - me - lum.
 2. que - ri - tis pro - des - se.
 3. li - cet mo - do ste - tis.
 4. sed quod a - gant ca - ve.]
 5. pu - pil - la cu - ra - tis.]

(x)

a

b'

ALTERNATIVE READING:

*W1, f. 109r (100r), III: transmuted version of final cauda; a reading in mode 3 is also possible

D

T

(camelum)

a

b

a

(x)

b'

UT NON PONAM OS IN CELUM

Conductus (I5/354)

F, f. 350r (7,90): Strophes I-III; WI, f. 109r (100r) (9,11): Strophes [IV]-[V] (entered in WI as II-III, with II entered as IV in WI – see the two leftmost columns in the presentation of the text, below)

F	WI
I	I	Ut non ponam os in celum, in incertum mitto telum. Qui pretendunt dei zelum post honoris apicem legis servant corticem, et, colantes culicem, glutiunt camelum.	In order not to set my mouth against the heavens, I loose a shaft into the unknown. Those who assert zeal for God as less important than the peak of honor observe only the shell of the law, and, straining out a gnat, they swallow a camel.
II	IV	Munda manus debet esse que mundanis vult preesse. Vobis istud est necesse populum qui regitis. Facite que dicitis, si vobis et subditis queritis prodesse.	The hand that wants command over worldly matters should be unstained. For those of you who rule the populace, this is indispensable. Do as you say, if you wish to be of use to yourselves and your subjects.
III	-	Qui subiectis presidetis, non de levi iudicetis, nam pensare vos debetis illis esse similes creaturas fragiles, et ad lapsum faciles, licet modo stetis.	15 You who preside over your subjects, should not judge them triflingly, for you should consider yourselves to be fragile creatures like them, 20 and prone to fall, even though you now stand tall.
[IV]	II	[Quibus sceptrum est suave sibi dici querunt ave, alligantes honus grave hominum in humeris. Bene quidem egeris si que dicunt feceris. Sed quod agant cave.	25 Those who find the scepter agreeable ask to be greeted with “Hail,” binding a heavy burden onto men’s shoulders. You will indeed have done well if you have done what they say. Just beware what they may do.

The following strophe appears solely in WI as the third of four stanzas, while others in this source are rearranged in comparison to F and OxRawl (as indicated by the stanzaic order in the second column in the presentation of the text here).

[V]	III	Mentam tamen decimatis et divinum ponderatis. Dum minora iudicatis [relequistis] gravia. Festucam in alia non trabem in propria pupilla curatis.]	30 You, though, levy tithes on a mint leaf and mull over the divine. Although you deliver judgment on minor things, you leave weighty matters behind. You worry about the speck in someone else’s eye, 35 not the beam in your own.
-----	-----	---	---

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 90, f. 350r: a2; Strophes I-III only, with II-III written in a prepared, empty area within the writing block at the end of the last system that holds the work;¹ the closing caudae of the version in F implies a quicker rhythmic mode than the one in W1.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 16, f. 109r (100r): a2; four strophes in the order I, [IV,] [V,] II, as shown in the text above, with the residual strophes entered in the empty space after the end of the last system and spilling out of the writing block into the right margin. The opening initial for this piece was never entered, although, since the previous and following initials of the other works are both executed in red paint, it appears the illuminator allowed for an alternating blue-green letter here that was inadvertently omitted.² The closing cauda (given as an alternative reading here) is written in augmented values in comparison to F.

Text only:

OxRawl (GB-Ob Rawl. poet. C510), no. 11, f. 236r (7r): the folio that contained the entirety of this work and several others is presently missing.³ For an edition based on this source prior to the loss, see AH, 21:136-137, no. 195.⁴ According to this publication, OxRawl transmitted just the text of Strophes I-[IV] only, presumably in that order; rubric: “Quales debent esse qui volunt preesse” (“How those who wish to rule should be”).

US-NHub Beinecke MS 712.59 (New Haven, Yale University Library, Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library, Beinecke MS 712.59),⁵ no. 4, verso (the shelfmark refers only to a single leaf): a single folio ruled for music a2 that was never included; only part of the text is extant, from line 1 (headed with a large blue initial with red filigree) through the first syllable of line 4,2 (“ho[noris]”). Variants collated here as Beinecke 712.59.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: General remarks: The strophes happen to share the same poetic structure as the conductus Veri floris sub figura (C1/369), at F-6,30. Many of the numerous Biblical allusions in this poem come from Jesus’s speech against the hypocrisy of scribes and Pharisees (Luke, 11:37-54; Matthew, 23:1-39; Mark, 12:35-40). These correspondences suggest the poetic conceit of adopting the voice of Christ in this general

¹ This is the first time additional stanzas have been included in F-7 for a strophic poem since the occasional attempts that began at F-7,48 with A deserto veniens (J3/1, I29/1), f. 316v; for this and further details on the inclusion of additional strophes in F-7, see the discussion in the source reports on the F versions of A deserto veniens; Roma gaudens iubila (I9/31), f. 318r (at F-7, 52); and Artium dignitas (I4/20), f. 349r (at F-7,88).

²The preceding work in W1 is the through-composed Artium dignitas (I4/20), which, unusually, supplies each of its strophes with the same type of large painted initial, as if each stanza begins a new piece. The subsequent work, the red-initialed Cortex occidit littere (I6/69), is followed by O quotiens [vos] volui (J1/244), unique to W1, which bears an initial with additional filigree decoration.

³Lost from OxRawl with f. 236 (7) are, in order of their appearance: Strophe IV of Gratuletur populus (H6/147), Debet se circumspicere (I10/83), Heu quo progreditur (J26/155)], Ut non ponam (I5/354) and lines 1-6 of Puer nobis est natus (H25/276)

⁴Some corrections/additions to the edition in AH are provided in Hans Walther, “Die poetische Anthologie des cod. Oxford Rawl. C. 510,” Mittellateinisches Jahrbuch, 3 (1966), 218-227, at 219.

⁵Images of this MS are available here: <https://collections.library.yale.edu/catalog/10543807>.

admonition to rulers, which, based on the evidence of lines 29-30, could also include leaders of the church and the clergy. Such a technique appears frequently in the poetry of Philip the Chancellor, although, besides the admonitory tone of the poem, there is no additional evidence that Philip authored it, nor has it been put forward as one of his works elsewhere in the literature. Strophic inclusion and order: No one source preserves all the extant strophes of this poem, and one may readily question both the ordering of the stanzas as presented here and whether the five-strophe version of the text as given above ever existed. Performers and readers should therefore feel free to determine which stanzas to include or consider, and to rearrange their sequence within the poem, if they see fit. Strophes I-III are given as above because they correspond to the sequence in F and to the reported order in OxRawl; [IV] and [V] then follow. The first of these is so ordered because, according to AH, it succeeds III in OxRawl – which has so far followed the order in F – and [V] is presented as a quasi-independent element, since it appears uniquely as the second strophe of the four transmitted in WI. I bracket the numerals of the last two stanzas here to indicate both their absence from F and their variability in ordering among the sources. The question of inclusion and order of the stanzas is further complicated by the shift to a singular second-person addressee in [IV]. See the remarks below for lines 26-28. Textual notes: 1-2: these two lines are drawn from biblical references (see the remarks on the individual verses below for the citations). Line 1 echoes a passage from the Psalms that condemns those who have risen to power on earth despite having committed evil and sacrilegious deeds; it sets them in contrast to the lowly and more virtuous. Line 2 draws on a narrative from the Old Testament that describes how King Ahab sustained a mortal injury during his war to recover Ramoth-Gilead. While marching out to battle, Ahab was struck by an arrow fired at random by a certain member of one of the forces. These contexts help to construe the opening of the text by suggesting that the poet, in order not to condone the sins committed by wicked and powerful men (e.g., blaspheming God in heaven and injuring those on earth with their speech), must therefore express views that may inadvertently wound them. A similar view may be seen in certain interpretations of the poem The Arrow and the Song, by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow: “I shot an arrow in the air; it fell to earth, I know not where” (lines 1-2). 1: see Psalm 72:9: “Posuerunt in caelo os suum et lingua eorum deambulavit in terra” (“They have set their mouth against heaven: and their tongue has passed through the earth.”). 2: 3 Kings (1 Kings), 22:34: “Unus autem quidam tetendit arcum, in incertum sagittam dirigens, et casu percussit regem Israhel inter pulmonem et stomachum.” (“And a certain man bent his bow, shooting at a venture [i.e., at random], and chanced to strike the king of Israel [Ahab] between the lungs and the stomach”). A similar account appears in 2 Paralipomenon (2 Chronicles), 18:33. 6-7: Matthew, 23:24: “Duces caeci, excolantes culicem camelum autem glutientes” (“Blind leaders, who strain out a gnat, but swallow a camel.”). 8-9: on the virtue implied by clean hands, see, e.g., James, 4:8;⁶ Job, 17:9; 2 Samuel (2 Kings), 22:21; Psalm 17:25. 12-14: cf. the related expressions in lines 26-28. 17-21: cf. Proverbs, 16:18: “Contritionem praecedit superbia, et ante ruinam exaltatur spiritus” (“Pride goes before destruction: and the spirit is lifted up before a fall.”). 22-23: possibly an evocation of the opening of the sequence Verbum bonum et suave (J59/367), a setting of which appears among the conductus collections in the main Parisian polyphonic manuscripts WI and W2: “Verbum bonum et suave / personemus illud ave / per quod Christi fit conclave / virgo mater filia” (“Let us sound forth the good and sweet word, that ‘Ave,’ through which a virgin, both mother and daughter of Christ, becomes his habitation.”). 24-25: Matthew, 23:4: “Alligant autem onera gravia et inportabilia, et inponunt in umeros hominum; digito autem suo nolunt ea movere” (“For they bind heavy and insupportable burdens, and lay them on men's shoulders; but with a finger of their own they will not move them.”). 26-28: the shift from plural to singular in the forms of the second-person verbs in these lines suggests that the poet could be changing the addressee of the poem in some way. Alternatively, one might conclude that this stanza was an independently executed supplement to the poem that did not maintain consistency in the verb forms. If a change of subject is ventured, exactly who might be implied by the switch is not readily apparent. Based on the expressions of lines 27-28, which derive from the Gospel (see below), it appears that the person addressed is not (at least not yet?) a ruler, and therefore could be a ruler's subject, or a potential leader themselves; one might even hypothesize the poet addressing himself here. The basic thrust behind these lines is therefore: “do what they say, not what they do.” For the Gospel citation, see Matthew, 23:3, which happens to use plural second-person forms, unlike the conductus stanza: “Omnia ergo quaecumque dixerint vobis, servate et facite, secundum opera vero eorum nolite facere; dicunt enim et non faciunt.” (“All things therefore whatsoever they shall say to you, observe and do: but according to their works do you not; for they say, and do not.”). 29-31: see Luke 11:42: “Sed vae vobis, Phariseis, quia decimatis mentam et rutam et omne holus, et praeteritis iudicium et caritatem Dei. Haec autem oportuit facere, et illa non omittere” (“But woe to you, Pharisees, because you tithe mint and rue and every herb, and pass over judgment and the charity of God. Now these things you ought to have done, and not to leave the other undone.”). A similar passage is cited from Matthew in line 32. 32: this line lacks three syllables in the unique source for this strophe (W1); it has been completed from Anderson, NDRC, 4:vi, with recourse to Matthew, 23:23: “Vae vobis scribae et Pharisei, hypocritae, quia decimatis mentam et anethum et cyminum et reliquistis quae graviora sunt legis: iudicium et misericordiam et fidem. Haec oportuit facere, et illa non omittere.” (“Woe to you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites; because you tithe mint, and anise, and cumin, and have left the weightier things of the law; judgment, and mercy, and faith. These things you ought to have done, and not to leave those undone.”). 33-35: see Matthew, 7:5: “Hypocrita, eice primum trabem de oculo tuo, et tunc videbis eicere festucam de oculo fratris tui” (“You hypocrite, cast out first the beam in your own eye, and then shall you see to cast out the mote [speck] out of your brother's eye.”). There are related passages in Luke, 6:41-42; and Matthew 7:3-4.

⁶James, 4:8: “Appropinquate Deo, et appropinquabit vobis. Emundate manus, peccatores: et purificate corda, duplices animo” (“Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners: and purify your hearts, ye double minded.”).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: All variant readings from both W1 and US-NHub Beinecke MS 712.59 are collated here (the latter as Beinecke 712.59) – the first because it is used to supply the additional strophes [IV]-[V] for this transcription, the second because it was unknown to Anderson and therefore not included in his catalog and edition (NDRC, 4:91). 1,1: W1: omitted initial. 3,4: Beinecke 712.59: delum; this is not a known Latin word, as far as I can find. Conceivably the scribe graphically misinterpreted the correct and similarly shaped opening letter “t.” 9,2: W1: mundandis. 10,2: W1: istud vobis (possibly written “nobis”). 12,2: W1: qui. 14,1: F: creditis, from W1. 29,1: W1: Mentem; a variant spelling with wider dissemination (“mentam”), has been adopted here on editorial initiative, so as not to confuse this word with the accusative case of the more frequently encountered “mens.” 32: W1: ob gravia; the text lacks three syllables here; completed via Anderson (see the notes on the text for line 32). MUSIC: No variants. Syllabic/Melismatic identity: in the T, the rising-fifth motive that opens the piece, as well as 12 successive pitches traversing the two phrases set to its initial couplet – “[ut non po]nam os in celum / in incerto mitto [telum]” – are equivalent, respectively, to the leaping fifth in the T that opens the first and third phrases in the closing cauda on “[came]lum,” and to the 12 consecutive pitches in the cauda’s third D phrase, beginning with its second note, g. The larger correspondence is indicated by “(x)” above the staff. Cauda: The closing cauda is presented in different rhythmic redactions in the two extant musical sources. The more expansive reading of W1 appears as an alternative at the end of the transcription. The apparent inconsistency that results in the interpretation of the series of 2li in the second and third phrases in the D seems to imply scribal initiative in rearranging the rhythms in W1; this might, therefore, argue for favoring the F version as primary.

HEU QUO PROGREDITUR – F and Fauv versions
Conductus (J26/155)F, f. 350v (7,91): Strophes I-II; OxAdd, f. 125v (no. 77): Strophes III-VII

1. [Heu quo pro - gre - di - tur pre - va - ri - ca - ti - o.
2. [In lo - cis pre - su - lum pi - la - tant con - su - les.
3. [In pon - ti - fi - ci - bus re - gnant car - ni - fi - ces.
4. [Cum cri - sti tu - ni - ca par - ti - ta scin - di - tur.
5. [Ec - ce sub - tra - hi - tur pel - lis ab ho - sti - a.
6. [Mel in fel ver - ti - tur. lac in ab - sin - thi - um.
7. [Pa - sto - res di - ci - te qui la - nas ven - di - tis

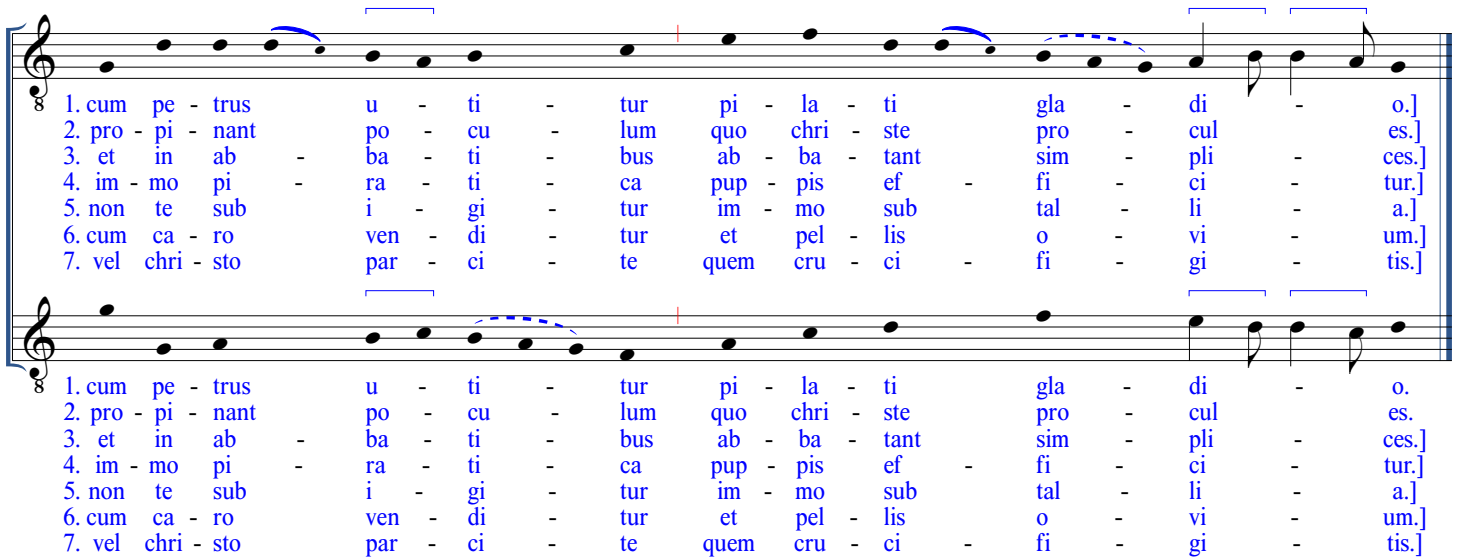

1. Heu quo pro - gre - di - tur pre - va - ri - ca - ti - o.
2. In lo - cis pre - su - lum pi - la - tant con - su - les.
3. [In pon - ti - fi - ci - bus re - gnant car - ni - fi - ces.
4. [Cum cri - sti tu - ni - ca par - ti - ta scin - di - tur.
5. [Ec - ce sub - tra - hi - tur pel - lis ab ho - sti - a.
6. [Mel in fel ver - ti - tur. lac in ab - sin - thi - um.
7. [Pa - sto - res di - ci - te qui la - nas ven - di - tis

1. vir - tus sub - tra - hi - tur a san - ctu - a - ri - o.
2. cum fa - cta con - su - lum u - sur - pant pre - su - les.
3. in car - ni - fi - ci - bus in - sunt pon - ti - fi - ces.
4. o - vis do - mi - ni - ca lu - pis ex - po - ni - tur.
5. et os con - strin - gi - tur cum in ec - cle - si - a
6. u - ter - que tra - di - tur lex in ob - pro - bri - um.
7. vel lac re - lin - qui - te qui vel - lus vel - li - tis.

1. vir - tus sub - tra - hi - tur a san - ctu - a - ri - o.
2. cum fa - cta con - su - lum u - sur - pant pre - su - les.
3. in car - ni - fi - ci - bus in - sunt pon - ti - fi - ces.
4. o - vis do - mi - ni - ca lu - pis ex - po - ni - tur.
5. et os con - strin - gi - tur cum in ec - cle - si - a
6. u - ter - que tra - di - tur lex in ob - pro - bri - um.
7. vel lac re - lin - qui - te qui vel - lus vel - li - tis.

1. iam no - vo tra - hi - tur cri - stus pre - to - ri - o
2. ad - o - rant vi - tu - lum. pro - scri - bunt ex - u - les.
3. cum sa - cer - do - ti - bus de - pi - lant ver - ti - ces.
4. et a - po - sto - li - ca na - vis sub - ver - ti - tur.
5. sa - cer - dos du - ci - tur ad sa - cri - fi - ci - a
6. mon - tes trans - gre - di - tur do - li - di - lu - vi - um
7. fon - tem at - ten - di - te de quo pro - ce - di - tis

1. iam no - vo tra - hi - tur cri - stus pre - to - ri - o
2. ad - o - rant vi - tu - lum. pro - scri - bunt ex - u - les.
3. cum sa - cer - do - ti - bus de - pi - lant ver - ti - ces.
4. et a - po - sto - li - ca na - vis sub - ver - ti - tur.
5. sa - cer - dos du - ci - tur ad sa - cri - fi - ci - a
6. mon - tes trans - gre - di - tur do - li - di - lu - vi - um
7. fon - tem at - ten - di - te de quo pro - ce - di - tis

1. cum pe - trus u - ti - tur pi - la - ti gla - di - o.]
2. pro - pi - nant po - cu - lum quo chri - ste pro - cul es.]
3. et in ab - ba - ti - bus ab - ba - tant sim - pli - ces.]
4. im - mo pi - ra - ti - ca pup - pis ef - fi - ci - tur.]
5. non te sub i - gi - tur im - mo sub tal - li - a.]
6. cum ca - ro ven - di - tur et pel - lis o - vi - um.]
7. vel chri - sto par - ci - te quem cru - ci - fi - gi - tis.]

Fauv, no. 6 f. 2r^c

2. T He - u quo pro - gre - di - tur pre - va - ri - ca - ti - o.
vir - tus sub - tra - hi - tur a san - ctu - a - ri - o. Iam no - vo tra - hi - tur chri - stus pre - to - ri - o Cum pe - trus u - ti - tur pi - la - ti gla - di - o.
Fre - tus con - si - li - o fal - vel - li le - di - tur su - per - na le - gi - o iu - ste con - que - ri - tur sup - pli - cat i - gi - tur pa - tri et fi - li - o quod de re - me - di - o in hoc me - di - o E ve - sti - gi - o pro - vi - de - at spi - ri - tus al - mus.

HEU QUO PROGREDITUR – F and Fauv versions
Conductus (J26/155)

F, f. 350v (7,91): Strophes I-II; OxAdd, f. 125v (no. 77): Strophes III-VII

I Heu, quo progreditur prevaricatio! Virtus subtrahitur a sanctuario. Iam novo trahitur Christus pretorio, cum Petrus utitur Pilati gladio.	5	Alas, how far transgression is advancing! Virtue is carried off from the sanctuary. Christ is now dragged away by a new Roman guard, when Peter uses Pilate's sword.
II In locis presulum, pilatant consules, cum facta consulum usurpant presules. Adorant vitulum. Proscribunt exules. Propinant poculum. Quo, Christe, procul es!	10 15	In the places of bishops, statesmen play Pilate, while bishops usurp the acts of statesmen. They worship the calf. They banish exiles. They proffer the cup. O Christ, how far away you are!
III [In pontificibus regnant carnifices. In carnificibus insunt pontifices. Cum sacerdotibus depilant vertices, et in abbatibus abbatant simplices.	20	Among pontiffs butchers reign. Among butchers reside pontiffs. In the company of priests, simpletons pluck the hair from the tops of their heads, and, mixing with abbots, they act the part of an abbot.
IV Cum Christi tunica partita scinditur, ovis dominica lupis exponitur et apostolica navis subvertitur – immo piratica puppis efficitur.	25 30	When Christ's tunic is divided and torn, the Lord's sheep is exposed to wolves and the apostles' boat is capsized – in fact, it becomes a pirate ship.
V Ecce, subtrahitur pellis ab hostia, et os constringitur cum in ecclesia sacerdos ducitur ad sacrificia. Non sub te, igitur, immo sub tallia.	35 40	Look – the skin is removed from the victim, and the mouth is constrained, when in church the priest is led to the sacrifices. Hence he is not subject to you, [Christ,] but rather to payment.
VI Mel in fel vertitur,		Honey is turned into gall,

lac in absinthium. Uterque traditur lex in obprobrium. Montes transgreditur doli diluvium, cum caro venditur et pellis ovium.	45	milk into wormwood. Each law is dragged down into disgrace. A deluge of fraud crosses the mountains, when the flesh and hide of the sheep is sold.
VII Pastores, dicite, qui lanas venditis; vel lac relinquite, qui vellus vellitis. Fontem attendite de quo proceditis, vel Christo parcite, quem crucifigitis.]	50 55	Shepherds – you who sell the wool, you who shear the fleece – speak out! Turn to the source from which you spring: either leave the milk behind, or spare Christ, whom you are crucifying.

[Additional text following directly on Strophe I in Fauv:]

Fretus consilio Falvelli leditur. Superna legio iuste conqueritur. Supplicat, igitur, patri et filio, quod de remedio in hoc medio E vestigio provideat spiritus almus.	10a 15a	The reliance on the counsel of Fauvel suffers injury. Rightly does the heavenly legion complain. Therefore, let it implore the Father and the Son that the favorable Spirit may instantly provide a remedy in the midst of this.
--	--------------------------------	---

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 91, f. 350v: a2; Strophes I-II only, with the text of II filling an empty portion prepared for it within the writing block at the end of the piece.

Fauv, no. 6, f. 2r^c: a1 (T): Strophe I, only, in mensural notation, with an additional concluding series of ten poetic lines, not found elsewhere (supplied above after Strophe VII of the F version as lines 9a-18a), that connects the poem to the Fauvel romance. New music accompanies the added poetry, and its final cauda gives almost the appearance of an appended motet tenor, with the closing text “... spiritus almus.” The music in this cauda portion does not appear to correlate with the passage on the same text in the verse of the well-known responsory Styrps Yesse. Virgo dei genetrix (O16), set in two- and three-part organum in the Magnus liber organi. The Fauv version appears as an alternative following the redaction of F.

Text only:

OxAdd (Oxford, Bodleian Library, MS Add. A. 44; GB-Ob Add. A. 44), no. 77, f. 125v: text only of Strophes I-VII complete, headed by a filigreed initial, and with II-VII indicated by uppercase capital letters; the rubric: “Contra pontifices pilatisantes” (“Against prelates acting like Pilates”), forms the last element at the bottom of f. 125v; the poem itself begins at the top of f. 126r with what appears to be an authorial attribution, “Eraclius,” in the right margin; see below in the notes on the text for more on possible ascriptions of this poem.

OxRawl (Oxford, Bodleian Library, Rawlinson C 510), no. 10, f. 236r (7r): Strophes I-IV, only; the folio 236 (7) that held this piece is now lost from the MS; readings supplied here derive from AH, 21:147, no 209, since the source was seen by the editor, Guido Maria Dreves, prior to its disappearance;¹ rubric: “De pontificibus officium suum usurpantibus” (“On prelates usurping their office”).

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Attributions and possible dating: In addition to the supposed attribution in OxAdd to the otherwise unknown Eraclius, a figure similarly signaled as the author of four other items in this MS,² this text is offered as a possible work of Philip the Chancellor by Peter Dronke (“Lyrical Compositions,” p. 591).³ For the potential connection of Heu quo progreditur to the contested election of William of Auvergne as bishop of Paris, see the notes to line 45, below, as well as the comments to lines 43-44. If the connection to the election is sound, it would mean that this poem could be dated sometime between late 1227-1236. Alternatively, C.L. Kingsford, along with his transcription of this poem in “Some Political Poems of the Twelfth Century,” The English Historical Review, 5 (1890):311-326, on pp. 322-323, conjectures that the poem could be English in origin and that it may “refer to the constant employment of bishops in secular offices during the reigns of Henry II and Richard I.” This hypothesis has not, to my knowledge, provoked further consideration in the literature. Textual notes: 1,1: “Heu” is considered a monosyllable according to the structure of the poem and the musical setting in F. The version in Fauv, presents it bi-syllabically, requiring an additional note (c) be set over the penultimate syllable in this phrase (“[progre]di[tur]”). 5-6: see Mark, 15:16: “milites autem duxerunt eum intro in atrium praetorii et convocant totam cohortem” (“the soldiers then led him [Jesus] into the atrium of the court of the palace and called together the whole regiment”); as well as the similar passage in Matthew, 27:27. 7-8: cf. Luke, 22:38: “at illi dixerunt: ‘Domine ecce gladii duo hic,’ at ille dixit eis, satis est” (“but they said: ‘Lord, behold, here are two swords,’ but he said to them, ‘it is enough.’”). The metaphor of the two swords, which represent the powers of the spiritual and temporal ruler, respectively, was a common medieval symbol, often invoked during the Investiture controversy. As exemplified by Saint Bernard (De consideratione, book 4, chap. 3, para. 7),⁴ Christ delivered both “swords” to the pope, who then handed the temporal power over to the sovereign for use as a privilege, not as a right. Philip the Chancellor himself speaks of the primacy of the Church in the control of the two swords: “Et nota quod non sine causa dictum ¹Some corrections/additions to the edition in AH are provided in Hans Walther, “Die poetische Anthologie des cod. Oxford Rawl. C. 510,” Mittellateinisches Jahrbuch, 3 (1966): 218-227, at 219.

²These are Omnis vere confitens (f. 54v), Ab humilitate in superbiam (f. 55v), Ecce quales entes quales (f. 56v), and In instructione rudium nepotum (f. 57r). For further consideration of the attribution, see A. G. Rigg, “Eraclius Archipoeta: Bekynton Anthology Nos. 14, 15, 20, 77,” Medium Aevum, 53 (1984): 1-9.

³Peter Dronke, “The Lyrical Compositions of Philip the Chancellor,” Studi medievali, 3rd series, 28 (1987): 563-592.

⁴From De consideratione, book 4, chap. 3, para. 7: “Uterque ergo ecclesie et spiritalis scilicet gladius et materialis; sed is quidem pro ecclesia, ille vero et ab ecclesia exerendens. Ille sacerdotis, is militis manu, sed sane ad nutum sacerdotis, et iussum imperatoris” (“Both swords belong to the Church, the spiritual and the material; the one is to be used to defend the Church, but the other must be banished from the Church; the one is wielded by the priest, the other by the soldier, but of course with your [the pope’s] consent, and at the command of the Emperor”). The Latin text used here (I have modernized the punctuation) comes from the incunabulum edition of Pieter van Os (Zwolle, 1486); the English rendering is from George Lewis, trans., Saint Bernard: On Consideration (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1908), 104.

fuit illud: ‘Ecce duo gladii hic,’ quorum licet unus dicatur pertinere ad sacerdotium et alter ad regnum, tamen uterque in veritate ecclesie est.” (“And note that not without reason was it said: ‘Behold, here are two swords’; and although it may be said that one of them pertains to the priesthood and the other to the kingdom, nevertheless each of them in truth are of the church.” [Wicki, ed., Summa de Bono, 2:1048, lines 258-260]).⁵ In the case of this poem, the various roles have been intermingled to disastrous effect. 13: for the worshiping of the golden calf, see Exodus, 32:1-35. Interestingly, at the end of this passage, the Levites, the eventual priestly class, are not associated with this exercise of idolatry; they sided with Moses and were commanded by him to kill their fellow Hebrews who refused to follow him. There may also, perhaps, be a figurative meaning here of lusting after gold; see lines 39-40. 15: in addition to the connotations of irresponsible drinking and officiating at mass, there may possibly be a nod here towards the bitter drink given to Christ during the Crucifixion: see Matthew, 27:48; Mark, 15:36; John, 19:28-30. 18-19: for another use of the word “carnifex” (here rendered as “butchers”) see the text of the triplum voice Ypocrite pseudopontifices (VdW 316/M24), line 2, also attributed to Philip the Chancellor, as well as the remarks below in line 45. 22: plucking the hair from the crown of one’s head would effectively create a tonsure, a mark of clerical status. 25-26: for the division of Jesus’s garments during the Crucifixion and its parallels beyond the Gospels, see Psalm 21:19; Matthew, 27:35; Luke, 23:34; and John, 19:23-24. This last reference is especially pertinent to the poem, since in the dividing up of Jesus’ clothes his seamless tunic was not torn but was gambled for by the soldiers (specified in John’s account) who had crucified him. The tearing of the tunic in the conductus indicates how much more severe and deplorable the present abuse has become. 27-28: among the numerous biblical examples of wolves as a metaphor for evil, see Ezekiel, 22:27; Matthew, 7:15, 10:16; Luke, 10:3; John, 10:12; and Acts, 20:29. 29-30: see Matthew, 8: 23-27; Luke 8:22-24; and Mark, 4:35-39, where Jesus stills the storm threatening to capsize the boat in which he and the apostles are traveling. In the case of the conductus, though, the vessel founders. 33-34: see Leviticus, 7:8, which specifies that the priest who offers a sacrifice is given the victim’s skin. 35-38: cf. Isaiah, 53:6-8; and especially verse 7: “oblatus est quia ipse voluit et non aperuit os suum: sicut ovis ad occisionem ducetur et quasi agnus coram tondente obmutescet et non aperiet os suum” (“He [the prophesied Christ] was offered up because he wished it, and he did not open his mouth: he shall be led as a sheep to the slaughter, and like a lamb before his shearer he shall be silent, and not open his mouth.”). 39-40: Anderson’s emendation (NDRC, 5:xix) is unnecessary, as the word “tallia” (“payment”) is vouched for by Charles du Fresne, sieur du Cange, et al., Glossarium mediæ et infimæ latinitatis, (Niort: L. Favre, 1883-1887), s.v. “tallia.” Possibly a pun is intended, as “tallia” (or “talea”) can also refer to cutting, such as the skinning or fleecing of a sacrificial victim and possibly cutting out the tongue of someone so they won’t speak (see lines 35-38). The “you” referred to in line 39,3 is likely Christ, based on the second-person exclamation in line 16. 41-42: the figure of the milk and honey that flowed throughout the promised land occurs dozens of times in the Bible (e.g., Exodus, 3:8, 3:17, and 33:3). Here the metaphors associated with salvation have become bitter and poisonous. Note also the recollection of the milk image in line 51. 43-44: as Anderson suggests (NDRC, 5:xix), the Old and New Testaments could be invoked here, but in view of the specific context of this poem, the invocation of the two laws here seems more likely to recall the figure of the two swords from lines 7-8. It is also just possible that there could be a reference to the lex vocalis et realis that appears in the motet text Error popularis / Dominus (44/M1), lines 45-49. If so, this could be another way in which Heu quo progreditur may tie into the series of poems that Philip the Chancellor wrote against Bishop William of Auvergne (for more on this, see the following remarks on line 45). 45: the image of fraud crossing the mountains could connect this poem to a number of other conductus and motet texts that criticize bishops, nearly all of which have been attributed to Philip the Chancellor. The conductus are: Deduc Syon uberrimas (G8/85), Mundus a mundicia (F17/212) and Veritas equitas largitas (K62/375); the motets: Error popularis / Dominus (44/M1, not previously attributed to Philip but now likely his work, given its connection to the event – see also the remarks for lines 43-44), In veritate comperi /

⁵Nikolaus Wicki, ed., Philippi Cancellarii Parisiensis: Summa de Bono, 2 vols., Corpus philosophorum medii aevi: Opera philosophica mediae aetatis selecta, no. 2 (Bern: Francke, 1985).

Veritatem (451/M37), and the triplum voice of the double motet Ypocrite / Velut stelle / Et gaudebit (316/315/M24) – for the latter, also see the above remarks for lines 17 and 19. All these poems deplore the papal appointment of William of Auvergne as bishop of Paris during the controversy that attended that city’s episcopal election in 1227-1228.⁶ In the case of Heu quo progreditur, the installation of William by papal provision could be seen as the “deluge of fraud” that traveled so far overland. 48,3: “sheep” here may also connote a fool. 49-50: as indicated by line 35, the priests are mum in the face of the abuse; the poet urges them to speak. 51-56: a bit difficult to construe, since the use of “vel” at the start of lines 51 and 55 suggests some choice is required. Apparently the poet urges the pastors either to serve Christ, or face leaving behind the milk that was referred to in line 42. This use of the milk figure, along with the image of honey in line 41, suggests the salvation of the promised land (see the remarks for lines 41 and 42, above). 15a,2-3: “provideat” often takes an object with “de”; see Charlton T. Lewis, and Charles Short, A Latin Dictionary..., (Oxford, Clarendon Press, 1879), s.v. “provideo,” I.B.2 17a: “instantly” is an idiomatic meaning for “e vestigio”; see <http://logeion.uchicago.edu/index.html>, s.v., “vestigium,” LewisShort, II.B.b; and the troped organum Beatis nos adhibe / Benedicamus domino (A7/44 – vdw 761/BDVI), line 20.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: Since the Fauv version is also supplied in transcription here, all of its variants are collated in addition to those from F and OxAdd: 2: Fauv: prevaricacio, from F. 3,2: Fauv: substractur, from F. 5,3: Fauv: traditur, from F. 7,2: Fauv: possibly written pertus, from F. 16,3-4: F: procules, the two words are run together. 34,3: OxAdd: ostia, an alternative spelling; the editorially adopted orthography used here is to avoid confusion with the word “ostia” meaning “door.” 39-40: Anderson’s emendation (NDRC, 5: xix) is unnecessary, see the Notes on the Text for these lines. 51,1; 55,1: Anderson’s reading (NDRC, 5: xix) of these same words as “ut” is in error; they clearly indicate the abbreviation for “vel,” a reading supported by C.L. Kingsford, see his “Some Political Poems of the Twelfth Century” (citation above), p. 323. MUSIC: F version: no variants. Fauv version: 15a: T: Fauv: the six syllables of this line are accorded five notational figures; to accommodate the extra syllable, the 3li over “quod de” has been broken into 2li,si in the transcription.

⁶See my study on the music and poetry prompted by this event: “Chancellor versus Bishop: the Conflict Between Philip the Chancellor and Guillaume d’Auvergne in Poetry and Music,” Philippe le Chancelier: prédicateur, théologien, et poète parisien du début du XIII^e siècle. Gilbert Dahan, Anne-Zoé Rillon-Marne, eds., 265-306, Bibliothèque d’histoire culturelle du Moyen Âge 19. (Turnhout: Brepols, 2017). For the possibility that Heu quo progreditur could be devoted to the bishop’s election, see p. 286, note 58.

IN OCCASU SYDERIS

Conductus (111/178)

F, f. 350v (7,92): Strophe I; W1, f. 117r (108r) (9,30): Strophes II-III

[In oc - ca - su sy - de - ris ca - dis in me - ro - rem an - gli - a
[No - vus he - res he - cto - ris pri - mus pro - bi - ta - te vir ma - tu -
[Co - mes co - mis nun - ti - at pa - rem ti - bi flo - re cu - i su -

In oc - ca - su sy - de - ris ca - dis in me - ro - rem an - gli - a
[No - vus he - res he - cto - ris pri - mus pro - bi - ta - te vir ma - tu -
[Co - mes co - mis nun - ti - at pa - rem ti - bi flo - re cu - i su -

pre ce - te - ris ge - mi - nans do - lo - rem. vi - du - a - ta prin - ci - pe
- ri pe - cto - ris iu - ve - nis e - ta - te ti - bi rex pro - mit - ti - tur
- os so - ci - at a - mor cum ti - mo - re ri - car - dus pi - cta - vi - e

pre ce - te - ris ge - mi - nans do - lo - rem. vi - du - a - ta prin - ci - pe
- ri pe - cto - ris iu - ve - nis e - ta - te ti - bi rex pro - mit - ti - tur
- os so - ci - at a - mor cum ti - mo - re ri - car - dus pi - cta - vi - e re - rum vi - ces su - sci - pe. tu - i fle - tus te - di - um ter - mi - net ia - ctu - ra re - mit - ti - tur spe sa - lu - bris gra - ti - e gau - de - as rex fu - tu - rus an - gli - e di - gnus est im - pe - ri - o plus ho - no -

re - rum vi - ces su - sci - pe. tu - i fle - tus te - di - um ter - mi - net ia - ctu - ra re - mit - ti - tur spe sa - lu - bris gra - ti - e gau - de - as rex fu - tu - rus an - gli - e di - gnus est im - pe - ri - o plus ho - no -

so - la - ti - um. me - ta sit do - lo - ri. post hanc ti - bi ve - spe - ram mi - li - ti - e flo - rem su - sce - ra - ra cu - ius ver - bi ve - ri - tas
- ris re - gi - o con - fe - rens ho - no - ri nul - la sit de ce - te - ro

so - la - ti - um. me - ta sit do - lo - ri. post hanc ti - bi ve - spe - ram mi - li - ti - e flo - rem su - sce - ra - ra cu - ius ver - bi ve - ri - tas
- ris re - gi - o con - fe - rens ho - no - ri nul - la sit de ce - te - ro

fa - to le - ti - o - ri da - bit di - em pro - spe - ram ca - su re - pen - ti - no men - te pro - di - tu - ra in - de - fes - sa lar - gi - tas ne - scit fa - ti - ga - ri na - ti - o ti - mo - ri ful - gur ha - bes ho - sti - bus her - cu - lem la - bo - ris

*F: different D for final three syllables, reading from W1; see at end no - vus sur - gens lu - ci - fer or - tu ma - tu - ti - no.

 sed cum mul - ta de - de - rit pau - ca pu - tat da - ri.]
 qui re - fre - nat re - pro - bos tur - bi - ne ti - mo - ris.]

ALTERNATIVE READING:

*F, f. 351r, III: line 15, with D of last three syllables departing from W1

[or - tu ma - tu - ti - no.]
 [pau - ca pu - tat da - ri.]
 [tur - bi - ne ti - mo - ris.]

IN OCCASU SYDERIS

Conductus (I11/178)

F, f. 350v (7,92): Strophe I; WI, f. 117r (108r) (9,30): Strophes II-III

- | | | |
|---|-------------------------|---|
| I In occasu syderis, cadis in merorem,
anglia, pre ceteris,
geminans dolorem.
Viduata principe,
rerum vices suscipe.
Tui fletus tedium terminet solatium.
Meta sit dolori.
Post hanc tibi vesperam, fato letiori,
dabit diem prosperam,
casu repentino,
novus surgens lucifer,
ortu matutino. | 5
10
15 | With the falling of a star, England, you descend into a grief beyond all others, doubling your sadness.
Widowed of your prince, accept the change in circumstances.
Let comfort put an end to the weariness of your tears.
Let there be a limit to sorrow.
After this eventide,
thanks to a happier fate,
a new morning star, rising out of this unexpected event, will grant you a favorable day with the morning sunrise |
| II [Novus heres Hectoris, primus probitate,
vir maturi pectoris,
iuvenis etate,
tibi rex promittitur.
Iactura remittitur
spe salubris gratie.
Gaudeas militie florem susceptura, cuius verbi veritas
mente proditura.
Indefessa largitas nescit fatigari,
sed cum multa dederit,
pauca putat dari. | 20 25
30 | A new heir of Hector, foremost in prowess,
a man of mature disposition,
but young in age,
is promised you as king.
The deficit is restored through the hope of saving grace.
You should rejoice that you will receive the flower of knighthood, the truth of whose words will issue from his soul.
Tireless generosity never sleeps,
but though he has given many things,
he considers little to be given. |
| III Comes comis nuntiat parem tibi flore.
Cui suos sociat
amor cum timore.
Ricardus Pictavie,
rex futurus anglie,
dignus est imperio,
plus honoris regio
conferens honori.
Nulla sit de cetero
natio timori;
fulgur habes, hostibus Herculem laboris,
qui refrenat reprobos | 35
40 | This considerate count indicates that he is your peer in distinction.
Love, along with fear,
unites his subjects to him.
Richard of Poitiers,
the future king of England,
is worthy of the kingdom, conferring even more honor on the royal honor.
From now on, no people should be fearful;
you possess a thunderbolt, a Hercules of hardship for your enemies,
one that curbs the wicked |

turbine timoris.] 45 with a whirlwind of fear.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 92, f. 350v: a2: Strophe I only, with no provision for further stanzas. The following piece in F-7, the conductus Pange melos lacrimosum (I15/258), is also a planctus on the death of a European royal personage; cf. the position of In occasu syderis in OxRawl.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 30, f. 117r (108r) (9,30): a2; Strophes I-III, complete, with II-III headed by smaller painted initials than the one starting the piece and entered in the lower right margin of the leaf, outside the writing block and aligned with the last two systems on the folio.

Text only:

OxRawl (GB-Ob Rawl. poet. C510), no. 17, f. 238r (9r): text alone of Strophes I-III, complete, with the first letters of each couplet and final tercet of II and III arrayed in a vertical column separating them slightly from the remainder of each verse (for I, this column is occupied by the opening initial); and with II and III headed by old-style pilcrows (¶) extending slightly into the left margin; rubric: “Item alia commendatio” (“Likewise, another commendation”). The previous piece in OxRawl, the conductus Redit etas aurea (I8/298), also commemorates King Richard I of England; cf. the position of In occasu syderis in F.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Attribution: David A. Traill has published an analysis of this text that has richly informed a number of the observations presented here.¹ In his study, Traill argues that Philip the Chancellor is the likely poet of In occasu syderis. This assertion is based on its placement in OxRawl after Redit etas aurea – another poem that Traill believes is by Philip – as well as similarities in verse structure and certain linguistic and topical echoes with other poems, several of which Traill also gives to Philip. At present this attribution has not seen wide acceptance. Subject and date: The poem mourns the death of a member of the English royal family and praises the future King Richard I (“Lionheart,” reg. 3 September 1189–6 April 1199) as the new heir to the throne. A number of other datable conductus in the Parisian repertory involve members of the English royal family; see, in addition to In occasu syderis (I11/178) and Redit etas aurea (I8/298), Eclipsim patitur (I7/105), Anglia planctus itera (K12/14), and the indirect nod given in Novus miles sequitur (E11/228). Note that all of these, except for Novus miles, are also given to Philip the Chancellor by Traill in his various publications. Primary considerations for determining the possible date of the poem hinge on identifying the individual mourned in its opening five lines. The identity of this departed figure has been under dispute. For example, notwithstanding the use of “principe” in line 5,2, both Anderson (NDRC, 4:xii, note 1) and Christopher Page (in his liner notes to the audio CD Music for the Lion-Hearted King)² propose King Henry II of England (reg. 5 March 1133–6 July 1189). The same individual is also implied by Sanders in his study of datable conductus

¹“Philip the Chancellor and Richard the Lionheart,” The Journal of Medieval Latin, 28 (2018): 1-13; see especially 3-6.

²Gothic Voices, directed by Christopher Page, Music for the Lion-Hearted King, audio compact disc (Hyperion CDA 66336: London, 1989); see pp. 15-16 of the accompanying booklet.

(“Style and Technique,” p. 521).³ A further candidate, though, is Richard’s older brother, Henry, known as the Young King (28 February 1155-11 June 1183).⁴ The younger Henry is noted for his participation in two rebellions against his father. The first of these, from 1173-1174, where he allied himself both with Richard and his younger brother Geoffery II, Duke of Brittany (1158-1186), is acknowledged in the conductus Novus miles sequitur (E11/228), lines 25-30. A second campaign, during which the younger Henry met his death, arose in 1183, where the two siblings were now pitted against their father and brother Richard. Henry the Young King is proposed as the one mourned in In occasu in my article “Datable ‘Notre Dame’ Conductus,” p. 106, and note 7;⁵ and later by Traill in “Philip the Chancellor and Richard the Lionheart,” p. 5. Traill’s claim rests on the description of Richard as “Hector’s new heir” in the opening line of Strophe II of In occasu, which he regards as being old news by the time of Henry II’s death in 1189. This set of circumstances thus suggests the composition of the poem in the year 1183, with the death of the young Henry as the motivation for writing the song. Yet Traill also notes (p. 5, note 12) that Richard’s succession was not necessarily affirmed until 10 March 1186 at the earliest, at a conference in Gisors between Henry II and Philip II Augustus of France (reg.1180-1223). This later year may be of consequence in furnishing a connotation for the expression in line 4, “geminans dolorem” (“doubling your grief”), which echoes the opening of Anglia planctus itera in suggesting that two recent dolorous events had occurred.⁶ If the same situation of a twofold death obtains for In occasu as with Anglia planctus, the date of 1186 might better satisfy the events. In this case, the second loss invoked here would be that of Geoffrey of Brittany, whose passing may also be recounted in the text of Eclipsim patitur as well as in Anglia planctus.⁷ A dear friend and close ally of Philip Augustus, Geoffrey died in Paris on 19 August 1186, reportedly as the result of an accident at a tournament, and was buried with full pomp in Notre Dame cathedral. Hence, the proposed time of composition of In occasu offers several possibilities: Geoffrey’s death (19 August 1186) – the second of the two – could apply as an early boundary that would accommodate both the younger Henry’s earlier death (11 June 1183) and the clarification of Richard’s status at the March 1186 meeting at Gisors. The poem, therefore, could date from shortly after Geoffrey’s passing. But even so, Henry II may still lay claim to the “fallen star” of In occasu, again inviting the date of 1189 for the poem’s composition. This is because, despite the evidence brought forward by Traill concerning the affirmation of Richard’s succession in 1186, tensions and doubts between Henry and Richard prevailed on this matter until just a few days before King Henry’s death. The ongoing resistance of his father to Richard’s claim at last crumbled on or about 4 July 1189, where Henry tangled with and lost to Richard and Philip Augustus at Ballan, near Tours, and where he was forced to consent, among other things, to recognize Richard indubitably as his successor. Very ill at the time, Henry repaired to Chinon after the concession and died just a few days later, on ³Ernest H. Sanders, “Style and Technique in Datable Notre Dame Conductus,” Gordon A Anderson (1929-1981): In Memoriam von seinen Studenten, Freunden und Kollegen, 2 vols., Musicological Studies, no. 39, ed. Luther Dittmer, 2:505-530 (Henryville, PA: Institute for Mediaeval Music, 1985). Anderson, Page, and Sanders seem to be following the lead offered by Léopold Delisle, “Discours de M. Léopold Delisle,” Annuaire-Bulletin de la Société de l’Histoire de France, 23 (1885): 82-139, at p. 119, note 1.

⁴Henry the Young King had been crowned on 14 June 1170 by his father prior to the latter’s demise, a practice earlier adopted by the Capetian monarchs of France to avoid disputes over royal succession.

⁵Thomas B. Payne “Datable ‘Notre Dame’ Conductus: New Historical Observations on Style and Technique,” Current Musicology, 64 (2001): 104-151.

⁶*Anglia planctus itera*, lines 1-4: “Anglia planctus itera / et ad luctum revertere. / Duplex dampnum considera, / duplici merso sydere” (“England, repeat your laments / and return to your grief; / look on the double injury, / engulfed by a duplicitous heaven.”). On this question, see Anderson’s edition of Anglia planctus in NDRC, 6:xx, note 2.

⁷See my notes on the text for Eclipsim patitur, where the matter is still somewhat in doubt, but where the general consensus at present seems to favor Geoffrey of Brittany, rather than the Henry the Young King as the subject.

6 July.⁸ As a result, all three dates, 1183, 1186, and 1189, have various degrees of legitimacy for prompting the writing of In occasu sideris, with the latter two perhaps slightly more preferable due to the speculation about the significance of line 4. Lastly, 1189 might ultimately work best of all, if the “doubled grief” of line 4 is considered to apply to two individuals of the same rank, since both Henrys had been officially crowned monarch at the time of their passing. Textual notes: 4-5: on the possible significance of this “doubled sadness,” and candidates for the “prince” that has left England a widow, see the above discussion on the possible subjects and dates allocated to this poem. 16: For details on just how “new” an heir Richard was to his father, see the above discussion on the subject of the poem. The reference here to Hector, the Trojan prince and warrior, may not be merely figural, nor may it necessarily denote King Henry II. According to Traill (Philip the Chancellor and Richard the Lionheart,” p. 5, note 11), the royal families of both England and France claimed to descend from the Trojans. Note also the mythological reference to Hercules in line 43. 19: depending on the various proposed dates for the writing of this poem, Richard, born 8 September 1157, would have been either 25 (11 June 1183), 28 (19 August 1186), or 31 (6 July 1189). 31-32: since the addressee of the poem throughout is a personified England, these lines indicate that Richard will be a ruler equal in renown to the kingdom itself. 35: at the time of his succession Richard was Count of Poitiers in addition to other titles, including Duke of Aquitaine; both of these honorifics he received from his mother, Eleanor of Aquitaine (1122-1204). 40-41: with these lines, which include the second of three references to fear that arise in this stanza (see also lines 34 and 45), the implication seems to be that none of the territories that Richard will control as king should be afraid. From 1188-1189 in particular, Richard’s pursuit of the succession had led to numerous military conflicts with his father, all of them conducted in English-held lands on French soil.⁹ 41,1: note that “fulgur” is neuter. 42-45: in addition to the reference to the hero Hector of classical antiquity in line 16, here the future king Richard is compared to the Roman demigod Hercules (with an indirect nod to the fabled series of twelve labors the champion accomplished – “Herculem laboris”) and the thunderbolt and whirlwind associated with Hercules’s father, Jupiter, god of the sky and air.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: Since W1 supplies the poetry for Strophes II-III here, all of its variants are collated in addition to any from F. 7,1: W1: cui; F reading also in OxRawl. 11,1: W1: facto; F reading in OxRawl. 42,2: W1: habens; reading from OxRawl. MUSIC: Line 45: D: F: 2si,2li,si=e, ↓a, bc, d for “[ma]tutino,” the final three syllables to be set; adopted reading from W1. The F reading appears as an alternative at the end of the score. It has been rejected in the main transcription due to the fact that this very last gesture expands the range of the D to low a, three notes beyond its previous nadir of c while also surpassing the bottom end of the T (the same c). The F reading may be substituted if wished, but it appears likely to be a compounded transposition error that the scribe attempted to correct.

⁸For information on these events, see Wilfred Lewis Warren, Henry II, (Berkeley and Los Angeles: University of California Press, 1973), pp. 620-626. This is the same work that Traill relies on for his discussion of the succession question.

⁹Again, see Warren, Henry II, pp. 620-626.

PANGE MELOS LACRIMOSUM – F and WI versions
 Conductus (115/258)

F, f. 351r (7,93): Strophes I-II; WI, f. 119r (110r) (9,35): Strophes III-IV

I.

D

T

c d

Pan - ge me - los la - cri - mo - sum la - cri - mans e - le - gi - a.
 [Rhe - ni si - dus in oc - ca - sus la - ti - um pre - ci - pi - tat.
 [O - mnis tel - lus ad - mi - re - tur tri - ste nu - bis pal - li - um
 [O quam pro bans ar - gu - men - tum que sit mun - di fal - si - tas

a b

Pan - ge me - los la - cri - mo - sum la - cri - mans e - le - gi - a.
 Rhe - ni si - dus in oc - ca - sus la - ti - um pre - ci - pi - tat.
 [O - mnis tel - lus ad - mi - re - tur tri - ste nu - bis pal - li - um
 [O quam pro bans ar - gu - men - tum que sit mun - di fal - si - tas

c' d'

tem - pus ve - nit plan - ctu - o - sum. tem - pus frau - dans gaud - i - a.
 stel - la ca - dit. stel - le ca - sus ter - ras [um - bra] li - mi - tat.
 sed sub no - cte la - men - t[e - tur] rhe - ni su - per - ci - li - um quid sit mun - dus per e - ven - tum si - lo - gi - zat ve - ri - tas

a b'

tem - pus ve - nit plan - ctu - o - sum. tem - pus frau - dans gaud - i - a.
 stel - la ca - dit. stel - le ca - sus ter - ras [um - bra] li - mi - tat.
 sed sub no - cte la - men - t[e - tur] rhe - ni su - per - ci - li - um quid sit mun - dus per e - ven - tum si - lo - gi - zat ve - ri - tas

e

ad e - cli - psim vox me - ro - ris ob - li - quat spe - cta - cu - la.
 la - tet ve - re re la - ti - a - lis pla - ga ti - mens o - cu - lum.
 o - mnis vir - tus fun - dat fle - tus pal - las plo - ret ne - sto - rem io - cu - la - tur in ia - ctu - ris con - stans in - con - stan - ti - a

e'

ad e - cli - psim vox me - ro - ris ob - li - quat spe - cta - cu - la.
 la - tet ve - re re la - ti - a - lis pla - ga ti - mens o - cu - lum.
 o - mnis vir - tus fun - dat fle - tus pal - las plo - ret ne - sto - rem
 io - cu - la - tur in ia - ctu - ris con - stans in - con - stan - ti - a

c''

re - gnet do - lor nam do - lo - ris cau - sa stat in spe - cu - nox est cul - pe so - ci - a - lis. [cri - men que - rit an - gu - va - tem plan - gat va - tum ce - tus lu - ge - at mars he - cto - mors tre - men - di prin - ceptus iu - ris re - gnat si - ne gra - ti -

a''

re - gnet do - lor nam do - lo - ris cau - sa stat in spe - cu - nox est cul - pe so - ci - a - lis. [cri - men que - rit an - gu - va - tem plan - gat va - tum ce - tus lu - ge - at mars he - cto - mors tre - men - di prin - ceptus iu - ris re - gnat si - ne gra - ti -

la.]
 - lum.
 - rem.]
 a.]

- la.
 - lum.
 - rem.]
 a.]

W1, f. 119r (110r) (9,35)

F: d c b-flat (= "c'" motive)

2.

D

T

[Pan - ge me - los la - cri - mo - sum la - cri - mans e - le - gi - a.
 [Rhe - ni si - dus in oc - ca - sus la - ti - um pre - ci - pi - tat.
 [O - mnis tel - lus ad - mi - re - tur tri - ste nu - bis pal - li - um
 [O quam pro bans ar - gu - men - tum que sit mun - di fal - si - tas

a] b]

Pan - ge me - los la - cri - mo - sum la - cri - mans e - le - gi - a.
 Rhe - ni si - dus in oc - ca - sus la - ti - um pre - ci - pi - tat.
 O - mnis tel - lus ad - mi - re - tur tri - ste nu - bis pal - li - um
 O quam pro bans ar - gu - men - tum que sit mun - di fal - si - tas

c']

tem - pus ve - nit plan - ctu - o - sum. tem - pus frau - dans gaud - i - a.
 stel - la ca - dit. stel - le ca - sus ter - ras [um - bra] li - mi - tat.
 sed sub no - cte la - men - t[e - tur] rhe - ni su - per - ci - li - um quid sit mun - dus per e - ven - tum si - lo - gi - zat ve - ri - tas

a] b']

tem - pus ve - nit plan - ctu - o - sum. tem - pus frau - dans gaud - i - a.
 stel - la ca - dit. stel - le ca - sus ter - ras [um - bra] li - mi - tat.
 sed sub no - cte la - men - t[e - tur] rhe - ni su - per - ci - li - um
 quid sit mun - dus per e - ven - tum si - lo - gi - zat ve - ri - tas

ad e - cli - psim vox me - ro - ris ob - li - quat spe - cta - cu - la.
 la - tet ve - re la - ti - a - lis pla - ga ti - mens o - cu - lum.
 o - mnis vir - tus fun - dat fle - tus pal - las plo - ret ne - sto - rem
 io - cu - la - tur in ia - ctu - ris con - stans in - con - stan - ti - a ad e - cli - psim vox me - ro - ris ob - li - quat spe - cta - cu - la.

 la - tet ve - re la - ti - a - lis pla - ga ti - mens o - cu - lum.
 o - mnis vir - tus fun - dat fle - tus pal - las plo - ret ne - sto - rem
 io - cu - la - tur in ia - ctu - ris con - stans in - con - stan - ti - a re - gnet do - lor nam do - lo - ris cau - sa stat in spe - cu - nox est cul - pe so - ci - a - lis. [cri - men que - rit an - gu - va - tem plan - gat va - tum ce - tus lu - ge - at mars he - cto - mors tre - men - di prin - cept iu - ris re - gnat si - ne gra - ti -

- la.]
- lum.]
- rem.]
a.]

- la.
- lum.
- rem.
- a

PANGE MELOS LACRIMOSUM – F and WI versions
Conductus (I15/258)

F, f. 351r (7,93): Strophes I-II; WI, f. 119r (110r) (9,35): Strophes III-IV

I Pange melos lacrimosum, lacrimans, elegia. Tempus venit planctuosum, tempus fraudans gaudia. Ad eclipsim vox meroris obliquat spectacula. Regnet dolor, nam doloris causa stat in specula.	5 A voice of mourning turns our sights to an eclipse. Let sorrow reign, for the cause of sorrow stands in plain view.	sing a tearful song, Elegy, as you weep. A lamentable time has come, a time stealing away joyful things.
II Rheni sidus in occasus Latium precipitat. Stella cadit, stelle casus terras umbra limitat. Latet vere Latialis plaga, timens oculum. Nox est culpe socialis, [crimen querit angulum.]	10 15	A shining light of the Rhine plunges Latium headlong into sunset. A star falls, and the star's fall wraps the lands in shadow. The Roman region lies completely hidden, fearing the eye of the sun. Night is allied to guilt, and crime seeks a place to hide.
III [Omnis tellus admiretur triste nubis pallium, sed sub nocte lament[etur] Rheni supercilium. Omnis virtus fundat fletus. Pallas ploret Nestorem. Vatem plangat vatium cetus. Lugeat Mars Hectorem.	20	Let the whole globe marvel at the cloud's sad shroud, but within the darkness let it lament this pinnacle of the Rhine. Let every virtue shed tears. Let Pallas mourn a Nestor. Let the crowd of visionaries lament a visionary. Let Mars bewail a Hector.
IV O quam probans argumentum que sit mundi falsitas! Quid sit mundus per eventum silogizat veritas. Ioculatur in iacturis, constans inconstantia. Mors, tremendi princeps iuris, regnat sine gratia.]	25 30	O, how convincing an argument that the falsity of the world prevails! With this event, truth demonstrates just what this world represents. Constant in inconstancy, it delights in deprivations. Death, the chief of that dreadful law, rules with no favor.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 93, f. 351r: a2; Strophes I-II only, with the text of II provided in an empty area within the writing block at the end of the last system to hold the work. The setting of both voice parts, but especially the D, departs on occasion from the musical setting in WI. Both versions are provided here for comparison. The previous piece in F-7, the conductus In occasu syderis (I11/178), is also a planctus on the death of a European royal personage.

WI, fasc. 9, no. 35, f. 119r (110r): a2; Strophes I-IV, complete, with II-IV entered separately, headed by smaller painted initials, and inscribed in the lower right margin of the leaf outside the writing block opposite the last two systems on the first leaf to contain the musical setting of Pange melos. The setting of both voice parts, but especially the D, departs on a number of occasions from the musical setting in F; both versions are given here. This and the previous work in W1 (9,34), the conductus Ex creata non creatus (I14/108), are adjacent and in the same order in OxRawl.

Text only:

OxRawl (GB-Ob Rawl. poet. C510), no. 20, f. 239r (10r): text only of Strophes I-IV, complete, with the first letters of each couplet (beginning with line 5) arrayed in a vertical column separating them slightly from the remainder of each verse (for lines 1-4, this column is occupied by the opening initial); and with II -IV headed by old-style pilcrow (¶) extending slightly into the left margin; rubric: “Planctus cuiusdam” (“someone’s lament”). This and the previous work in OxRawl, Ex creata non creatus (I14/108) are adjacent and in the same order in W1.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Subject and date: Léopold Delisle¹ has raised the possibility that this poem is a lament on the death of the Frederick I of the Hohenstaufens, nicknamed “Barbarossa” (December 1122-10 June 1190), crowned as Holy Roman Emperor on 18 June 1155 in Rome by Pope Adrian IV (reg. 1154-1159). Known especially for his military prowess and for his efforts to expand his territories into Italy and Germany, Frederick died while journeying to the Holy Land during the Third Crusade (1189-1192). He drowned in the river Saleph (now Göksu) near Silifke Castle in what is now Turkey. The various accounts of his death differ as to how he succumbed. Frederick’s demise ultimately doomed the enterprise of the Third Crusade, where the emperor was allied with Philip II Augustus of France, as well as Richard I (Lionheart) of England. The campaign itself was halted by the treaty of Jaffa on 2 September 1192, executed between Saladin and King Richard. Delisle’s proposal was likely prompted by the combined imagery connecting the Rhine river with Rome/Latium, as well as the invocation of deities and heroes from Greek, Roman, and Trojan history that are all closely associated with war and battle; see the discussion of specific details below. Textual notes: 1-2: the opening line, which appears to invoke a personified Elegy, recalls the hymn Pange lingua gloriosi proelium certaminis by the poet Venantius Fortunatus (ca. 530-ca. 600-609), also bishop of Poitiers (from ca. 599-600 until his death). Both poems share their verse structure in terms of syllable count and accent placement, although Fortunatus’s stanzaic structure is made up of unrhyming tercets. Pange lingua gloriosi proelium was associated liturgically with Passiontide, which may explain why it may have prompted a sorrowful association for the conductus poet. This poem was also the model for the later hymn, Pange lingua gloriosi corporis mysterium, by Thomas Aquinas (1225-1274), written for the feast of Corpus Christi. For other citations in the Parisian conductus repertory of Fortunatus’s poems, see the notes to the opening line of O crux ave spes unica (H4/230) and Ex creata non creatus (I14/108), line 34. 5-6: the image of an eclipse as a symbol of death or tragedy appears frequently in the Parisian conductus repertory; it figures prominently in the planctus that mourn the passing of royalty or other renowned individuals; see, for example, in addition to Pange melos (I15/258), the openings of Sol eclypsim patitur (K83/331 – on the death of Ferdinand III, king of León and Castile, 1252),² Eclypsim patitur (I7/105 – mourning either Geoffery of Brittany or Henry the Young King, two sons of Henry II of England), Eclipsim passus tociens (K33/104 – on the passing of the theologian Petrus Cantor, 1197), and the opening couplet of Strophe II (lines 10-11) of Anglia planctus itera (K12/14 – again proposed for either Geoffery or Henry the Younger, and possibly including their father as well). Further lamentable heavenly imagery appears in lines 9-12. 9-12: In addition to eclipses, the metaphor of the falling star also arises frequently in those conductus that mourn the deaths of great personages. For examples, see, in addition to the pieces cited in the notes to line 5-6, In occasu syderis (I11/178). 15-16: both the expressions in these two lines smack of the proverbial, but I have not been able to locate likely correspondences. 22; 24: the respective pairing of the figures in these two lines, the Greek deity Pallas Athena and the Roman god Mars with the Greek and Trojan warrior heroes Nestor and Hector, indicate the extent of respect for the fallen warrior celebrated in the conductus. In each case the mortal champion is so renowned that he is lamented by one of the gods. Furthermore, the Pallas/Nestor pair connotes wisdom, age, eloquence, and venerability in addition to skill in war. It may also be significant that it is Hector, rather than Achilles, who is invoked here, since his death produced such a great outpouring of mourning and sorrow in Homer's Iliad. Nestor, as well as his prominent role in the third book of Homer's Odyssey, also appears throughout the Iliad; see, for example, his first appearance in book 1, lines 247-284.

¹Léopold Delisle, “Discours de M. Léopold Delisle,” Annuaire-Bulletin de la Société de l’Histoire de France, 23 (1885): 82-139, on p. 119, n. 2.

²On this candidate, rather than the more frequently encountered Fernando II, who died in 1188, see Payne, “Datable ‘Notre Dame’ Conductus,” 110, note 18, 143; and David Catalunya, “Music, Space, and Ritual in Medieval Castile, 1221-1350” (Ph.D. dissertation, Universität Würzburg, 2016), 54-55. The earliest mention I know of the claim for Ferdinand III as the subject of Sol eclypsim patitur is in Janthia Yearley, “A Bibliography of Planctus in Latin, Provençal, French, German, English, Italian, Catalan, and Galician-

Observations and Variants: TEXT: Since W1 supplies the poetry for Strophes III-IV here, all its variants are collated in addition to any from F. Corrections to W1 derive from OxRawl and Dreves's edition in AH referred to below. 8,1: W1: "causa" written twice over an intervening page break, the first time abbreviated, then in full, and both times overlaid with the appropriate syllabic music. 8,3: W1: final syllable om at end of cauda. 10,1: W1: latum; from F, OxRawl. 12,2: W1: om; from F, OxRawl. 13,2-3: W1: vera satialis; from F; OxRawl: vere glacialis. 16: F: entire line om; W1: first word om and space left for it; reading from OxRawl. 19,4: W1: last two syllables om; from OxRawl. 22,2: W1, OxRawl: plorat; adopted reading from AH, 21:130, no.186; it seems necessary to retain the subjunctive mood here from the previous statements in this stanza. 23,2: W1, OxRawl: planget; reading again taken from AH, 21:130, no. 186, for same reason as line 22,2. 23,3: W1: possibly written "natum"; reading confirmed by OxRawl. 24,1: W1: luget; reading from OxRawl. 31,3-4: W1: principis verus; supplied from OxRawl. MUSIC: Line 1,1-2: D: W1: opening three syllables ("Pange me[los]") written 3 lower than F. Although acceptable as is and retained in the W1 transcription, the F reading could serve as an option, which would allow the D figures as well as the T phrases in lines 1 and 3 to correspond. 5,1-3: D: W1: written 3 lower for five syllables ("ad eclisim vox"); supplied from F, which avoids a harmonic sixth, although the reading as it stands could serve as an option. 6: D: F, W1: both readings, though slightly different, feature a harmonic seventh at different places over 6,2 ("spectacula") in this line atop the same T reading; one could propose corrections for either of the sources. Here they are given as they stand.

O VARIUM FORTUNE LUBRICUM – F and Fauv versions
Conductus (J27/247)F, f. 351v (7,94) (Strophe I); OxRawl, f. 241r (12r) (Strophes II-V)

I.

1. [O va - ri - um for - tu - ne lu - bri - cum. dans du - bi - um
2. [E - di - fi - cat for - tu - na di - ru - it nunc ab - di - cat
3. [Quid da - ri - o re - gnas - se pro - fu - it? pom - pe - y - o
4. [Sub - si - di - o for - tu - ne la - bi - lis cum pre - li - o
5. [Nil gra - ti - us for - tu - ne gra - ti - a. nil dul - ci - us

1. O va - ri - um for - tu - ne lu - bri - cum. dans du - bi - um
2. [E - di - fi - cat for - tu - na di - ru - it nunc ab - di - cat
3. [Quid da - ri - o re - gnas - se pro - fu - it? pom - pe - y - o
4. [Sub - si - di - o for - tu - ne la - bi - lis cum pre - li - o
5. [Nil gra - ti - us for - tu - ne gra - ti - a. nil dul - ci - us

1. tri - bu - nal iu - di - cum. non mo - di - cum pa - ras huic
2. quos pri - us co - lu - it quos no - lu - it i - te - rum
3. quid Ro - ma tri - bu - it? suc - cu - bu - it u - ter - que
4. troi - a tunc no - bi - lis nunc fle - bi - lis ru - it in -
5. in - ter [hec] dul - ci - a; quam glo - ri - a. si sta - ret

1. tri - bu - nal iu - di - cum. non mo - di - cum pa - ras huic
2. quos pri - us co - lu - it quos no - lu - it i - te - rum
3. quid Ro - ma tri - bu - it? suc - cu - bu - it u - ter - que
4. troi - a tunc no - bi - lis nunc fle - bi - lis ru - it in -
5. in - ter [hec] dul - ci - a; quam glo - ri - a. si sta - ret

1. pre - mi - um quem co - le - re tu - a vult gra - ti - a.
2. ven - di - cat. hec o - pe - ra si - bi con - tra - ri - a.
3. pre - li - o. e - li - ge - rem me - di - a tu - ti - us
4. - cen - di - o. quis san - gui - nis ro - ma - ni gra - ti - am?
5. lon - gi - us. sed la - bi - tur ut o - lus mar - ci - dum.

1. pre - mi - um quem co - le - re tu - a vult gra - ti - a.
2. ven - di - cat. hec o - pe - ra si - bi con - tra - ri - a.
3. pre - li - o. e - li - ge - rem me - di - a tu - ti - us
4. - cen - di - o. quis san - gui - nis ro - ma - ni gra - ti - am?
5. lon - gi - us. sed la - bi - tur ut o - lus mar - ci - dum.

8
1. et pe - te - re. ro - te sub - li - mi - a dans
2. dans mu - ne - ra ni - mis la - bi - li - a. mo -
3. nec pe - te - rem cel - sa sub - li - mi - us. ne
4. quis no - mi - nis gre - ci fa - cun - di - am? quis
5. et se - qui - tur a - grum nunc flo - ri - dum. quem

8
1. et pe - te - re. ro - te sub - li - mi - a dans
2. dans mu - ne - ra ni - mis la - bi - li - a. mo -
3. nec pe - te - rem cel - sa sub - li - mi - us. ne
4. quis no - mi - nis gre - ci fa - cun - di - am? quis
5. et se - qui - tur a - grum nunc flo - ri - dum. quem

8
1. pre - mi - a. ta - men pre - po - ste - re. de ster - co - re pau - pe - rem
2. - bi - li - a sunt sor - tis fe - de - ra. que de - bi - les di - tans no -
3. gra - vi - us a sum - mo ru - e - rem fit gra - vi - or lap - sus a
4. glo - ri - am fre - git car - ta - gi - nis? sors lu - bri - ca que de - dit;
5. a - ri - dum cras cer - nes. i - gi - tur im - pro - pri - um non e - do

8
1. pre - mi - a. ta - men pre - po - ste - re. de ster - co - re pau - pe - rem
2. - bi - li - a sunt sor - tis fe - de - ra. que de - bi - les di - tans no -
3. gra - vi - us a sum - mo ru - e - rem fit gra - vi - or lap - sus a
4. glo - ri - am fre - git car - ta - gi - nis? sors lu - bri - ca que de - dit;
5. a - ri - dum cras cer - nes. i - gi - tur im - pro - pri - um non e - do

8
1. e - ri - gens. de rhe - to - re con - su - lem e - li - gens.]
2. - bi - li - tat. et no - bi - les pre - mens de - bi - li - tat.]
3. su - pe - ris. et du - ri - or ab i - psis a - spe - ris.]
4. ab - stu - lit; hec u - ni - ca. que fo - vit per - cu - lit.]
5. can - ti - cum. o va - ri - um for - tu - ne lu - bri - cum.]

8
1. e - ri - gens. de rhe - to - re con - su - lem e - li - gens.]
2. - bi - li - tat. et no - bi - les pre - mens de - bi - li - tat.]
3. su - pe - ris. et du - ri - or ab i - psis a - spe - ris.]
4. ab - stu - lit; hec u - ni - ca. que fo - vit per - cu - lit.]
5. can - ti - cum. o va - ri - um for - tu - ne lu - bri - cum.]

Fauv, no. 10, f. 3v

2. T O va - ri - um for - tu - ne lu - bri - cum. dans du - bi - um tri - bu - nal iu - di - cum.

non mo-di - cum pa-ras huic pre-mi - um quem co-le - re tu - a vult gra-ti - a.

| Tt: Fauv: "dans premia" and preceding cauda found in F om here et pe - te - re. ro-te sub - li - mi - a ta - men pre-po - ste - re. de ster-co - re pau-pe -

| from here to end, Fauv setting differs from F in both text and music

-rem e - ri - gens. Et fau-vel - lum in al - tum e - ri - gens quo con-su - le fi-des est mor-tu - a ec - cle-si - a ducto - re vi - du - a.

O VARIUM FORTUNE LUBRICUM – F and Fauv versions
 Conductus (J27/247)

F, f. 351v (7,94) (Strophe I); OxRawl, f. 241r (12r) (Strophes II-V)

I	O varium dans dubium Non modicum quem colere et petere dans premia de stercore de rhetore	Fortune lubricum, tribunal iudicum. paras huic premium tua vult gratia, rote sublimia, tamen prepostere, pauperem erigens, consulem eligens.	O fickle, slippery Fortune, rendering a tribunal of judges uncertain. You provide no little reward to the one your favor wishes to cultivate 5 and to strive for the heights of the wheel, granting rewards, however irregularly, raising a poor man up from the dungheap, electing an orator as consul.
II	Edificat Nunc abdicat quos noluit Hec opera dans munera Mobilia sunt que debiles et nobiles	Fortuna, diruit. quos prius coluit, iterum vendicat. sibi contraria, nimis labilia. Sortis federa: ditans nobilitat, premens debilitat.	Fortune – she builds up, she demolishes. 10 At one time she rejects those she earlier cultivated, at another she reclaims those she wished ill. These efforts are contrary to each other, giving gifts that are far too slippery. Inconstant are the pacts of Destiny: 15 she ennobles, enriching the feeble, and enfeebles, oppressing the noble.
III	Quid Dario Pompeyo Succubuit Eligerem nec peterem ne gravius Fit gravior et durior	regnasse profuit? quid Roma tribuit? uterque prelio. media tutius, celsa sublimius, a summo ruerem. lapsus a superis ab ipsis asperis.	What did it avail Darius to have been king? What did Rome offer to Pompey? Each man fell in battle. 20 Had I chosen a safer middle ground and not sought heights so loftily, I might not have tumbled so heavily from the top. A fall from high places becomes heavier and harder than one from hardships alone.
IV	Subsidio cum prelio nunc flebilis, Quis sanguinis Quis nominis Quis gloriam Sors lubrica hec unica,	Fortune labilis, Troia, tunc nobilis, ruit incendio. Romani gratiam? Greci facundiam? fregit Cartaginis? que dedit, abstulit, que fovit, perculit.	25 With the assistance of slippery Fortune, Troy, once noble in battle, now lamentable, fell in flames. Who shattered the favor of the Roman race? Who crushed the eloquence of those of Greek name? 30 Who subdued the glory of Carthage? A slippery Destiny granted, then took these things away; what this singular lady supported, she overturned
V	Nil gratius nil dulcius quam gloria. Sed labitur et sequitur quem aridum improprium O varium	Fortune gratia. inter [hec] dulcia Si staret longius! ut olus marcidum; agrum nunc floridum. cras cernes. Igitur non edo canticum: Fortune lubricum.	Nothing is more agreeable than Fortune's favor, nothing is sweeter among such sweets 35 than glory. If only it lasted longer! But it decays like rotten produce; and it follows that the field you will see flowering now is withered tomorrow. Therefore I utter this not unsuitable song: 40 O fickle, slippery state of Fortune!

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 94, f. 351v: a2; Strophe I only, with no room for further text.

CB (D-Mbs Clm. 4660; Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, lat. 4660 [Carmina Burana]), no. 14, f. 47v: a1 (almost certainly the T), in unheightened neumes; Strophes I-IV only, in the order I, II, IV, III. The opening initial is illuminated with the face of a bearded man, possibly wearing a monk's cowl, while the smaller, simpler ones starting the remaining stanzas use the same red ink or paint.

Fauv (F-Pn fr. 146; Paris, Bibliothèque nationale, fonds français 146 [Roman de Fauvel]), no. 10, f. 3v^b: a1 (T), in mensural notation; Strophe I only, with musical and textual differences that connect the poem to the context of the Fauvel romance (see the separate transcription following the F version and the commentary below for further details).

Text only:

OxRawl (GB-Ob Rawl. poet. C 510), no. 29, f. 241r (12r): text only, Strophe I-V complete, with only a guide letter to begin Strophe II, and the other initials sometimes appearing within the interior of the writing block, since the text is inscribed successively with no other major breaks, as if it were prose; rubric: “de mutabilitate fortune” (“On Fortune’s fickleness”).

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Attribution: Philip the Chancellor has been suggested as the possible author of this text by David Traill,¹ which has not found larger acceptance in the literature so far. Versification: the poem has several notable structural features. First of all, O varium is presented here in eight-line, isosyllabic 10pp stanzas. Although, quite acceptably, it often appears in other editions as regularly alternating couplets of 4pp and 6pp verses, since the use of a regular caesura after the fourth syllable is a common feature of 10pp verse, and thus may argue for the splitting of the 10pp line. The impetus to divide the longer lines is no doubt also prompted by the regular placement of rhymes at both the caesura and end of each verse, as well as the coherent, interlocking scheme of these rhymes within each stanza (a,b / a,b / b,a / c,d / c,d / d,c / e,f / e,f – line breaks here signaled by “/”; the caesurae by “;”). In addition, in the fullest presentation of the text in OxRawl, the concluding line of the poem echoes its start, a feature noticeable in several other conductus, such as: a) Celum non animum (E1/56 – next to O varium in CB), b) Hac in anni ianua (E6/148), c) Leniter ex merito (E2/195), d) Nulli beneficium (H7/229), e) Si deus est animus (H32/324, discounting its companion contrafact Notum fecit dominus) – the piece that just happens to follow O varium in F-7 – and f) Verbum pater exhibuit (E5/368, where the last line of every strophe also recurs as the first line of the following one). The same feature of repeated lines at start and finish is also noticeable in the poem g) Magnus maior maximus (-/-), preserved in CB on f. 5v. Similar practices also occur to a related extent in h) Ad honores et honera (K78/7), i) Veni creator spiritus et in me robur (J41/360), and i) Cum animadverterem (I12/73). Some of these poems, moreover, occur in close proximity to each other in F, even if the manuscript does not transmit all the applicable strophes; see the discussion of the textual features of Verbum pater exhibuit and the works that follow it in F-6. Textual notes: 1: the female personification of Fortune, often with an accompanying wheel as an attribute (see line 5), occurs frequently in medieval literature. A depiction of these two figures appears, for example, on the opening folio of the Carmina Burana manuscript (CB) that later transmits O varium.² Other treatments of this topic within the conductus repertory can be found in: a) Gaudet Favellus nimium (L21/-), b) Homo cur degeneras (K68/157), c) Luxuriant animi (J31/202), d) O labilis sortis (K30/234), e) O virtutes perditas (Q32/-), and in the Fauv redaction of f) Philip the Chancellor’s Rex et sacerdos profuit (K49/308). 2: it is not completely clear whether “tribunal” (neuter) is the subject or object of this clause, or if “dubium” is a noun or an adjective; the line can therefore be construed in a number of ways. Given the way the stanza continues, however, it does appear most likely that the subject of “dans” is Fortune, as reflected in the translation. 5: on Fortune’s wheel, see the remarks for line 1. 7: expressions nearly identical with this line occur in Psalm 112:7: “et de stercore erigens pauperem”; and I Kings [I Samuel], 2:8: “et de stercore elevat pauperem.” 8: a possible sarcastic tone may be suggested here by the reference to Juvenal, Satires, 7,197-198: “si Fortuna uolet, fiet de rhetore consul; / si uolet haec eadem, fiet de consule rhetor” (“If Fortune wills it, you will be made a consul from an orator; if this same lady so wills, you will be made an orator from a consul.”). Conceivably, therefore, one might render “orator” here as something like “windbag.” 9: see Horace, Epistles, I, 1, 100: “diruit, aedificat, mutat quadrata rotundis” (“[My judgement] pulls down, it builds up, it changes squares to circles”); and cf. Jeremiah, 1:10: “ecce constitui te hodie super gentes et super regna, ut evellas, et destruas, et disperdas, et dissipes, et aedifices, et plantes” (“Behold, I have today set you up over nations and over kingdoms, that you may root up, and demolish, and lay waste, and scatter, and build, and plant.”). 10-11: the temporal comparison between these two clauses is signaled by “nunc ... iterum” used in the manner of “nunc ... nunc.” 15-16: see the related passages from Matthew, 23:12, and Luke, 14:11, cited below in the text variants given for lines 23-24. 17-32: Strophes III and IV, both especially prominent in their use of Greek, Roman, and other antique historical and literary references, are exchanged in CB and may be performed in this order, if wished. 17-18: two prominent warriors who met bitter ends: line 17 refers to Darius III, also known as Artashata or Codomannus (380-330 BCE, reg. from 336 BCE), the Persian ruler ignominiously defeated multiple times by Alexander the Great (356-323 BCE, reg. from 336), most notably at the battles of Issus (333 BCE) and Gaugamela (a.k.a. Arbela, 331 BCE). Darius met his death at the hands of conspirators in his own retinue. Line 18 cites as example Gnaeus Pompeius Magnus (“Pompey the Great,” 106-46 BCE), the Roman general and statesman. He was part of the first Roman triumvirate of 60 BCE with Julius Caesar and Marcus Licinius Crassus. Pompey’s competition with Caesar for the leadership of Rome eventually led to a falling out between them and plunged the region into civil war. Pompey died after fleeing to Egypt; for more, see the remarks for line 19. 19: actually the CB reading for 19,3 (“gladio” – “by the sword”) is more precise, since both Darius and Pompey were assassinated, rather than killed in battle. 20,2-3: cf. Ovid, Metamorphoses, 2,137: “... medio tutissimus ibis” (“you will go most safely by the middle course”), a quite fitting analogy for the language of the poem here, as it comes from the mouth of Apollo counseling his son Phaeton on the proper handling of the sun chariot he intends to drive, with eventual disastrous consequences. Ovid’s saying became so proverbial that its language was often paraphrased in ways that sometimes more closely approach the expression as found in this poem; see, for a later example, a marginal note by King James I in a letter sent to him by Francis Bacon on 28 April 1616, and included in published versions of Bacon’s correspondence: “I say with Apollo, ‘Media tutius itur,’ if it may stand with law.” 28-30: the single word “fregit” in line 30 supplies the verb for each of these three clauses. 36: cf. Psalms, 36:2: “quoniam tamquam foenum velociter arescent, et quemadmodum olera herbarum cito decident” (“for they [evildoers] shall quickly dry up like grass, and like green herbs shall soon die away.”).

¹See his “A Cluster of Poems by Philip the Chancellor in Carmina Burana 21-36,” Studi medievali, ser. 3, 47 (2006), 267-286, at p. 284.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: the various versions have a number of alternative readings, some of which could substitute, if so wished, for the text as presented above; hence, all textual variants are collated here. Anderson, NDRC, 5:xxi, and Analecta hymnica, 21:102-103, no. 152 (here AH21), have also been consulted – yet, as seen below, these reports sometimes conflict (see lines 21,1 and 34,4). 2,1: F: dan, with the “-n” partially erased so that it almost appears to be a “-t.” 2,4: Fauv: iudicium, a superfluous syllable. 3,2: huic is treated as a monosyllable in both the poem and musical setting. 3,3: CB: parans; Fauv: panis. 4,3-5: Fauv: vult tua gracia, the first two words are exchanged. 5:1: Fauv: quem. 5,4: OxRawl: similia. 6,1-2: Fauv: om, along with the music with no hint of absence. 6,2: OxRawl, CB: dubia. 6,3: CB: tandem. 7-8: Fauv: replaced with three lines in a different musical setting: “Et fauvellum in altum erigen / quo consule fides est mortua / ecclesia ductore vidua” (“And raising Fauvel on high, with him as consul, faith is dead with the church bereft of a leader”), see the Fauv transcription given after the one in F. 8,2: F: recthore, supplied from CB; OxRawl: rectore. 9,3: OxRawl: dirruit, from CB. 15-16: CB: these lines are exchanged, except for the first word of each. 18,1: CB: pompeio, rendered as a four-syllable word in the poem and musical setting. 18,4: OxRawl: “Roma” unusually capitalized. 19,3: CB: gladio. 20,1: CB: eligere. 21,1: OxRawl: et (so in Anderson, but not reported in AH21); CB: quam. 21,2-3: CB: petere rote. 22,1: CB: et. 22,4: OxRawl: sompno, from CB. 22,5: CB: ruere. OxRawl: some additional text follows here at the end of the page, apparently reading “no” or “vo,” and followed by some letters difficult to construe; there is also a marking before this addition that might indicate a strikeout or correction. The following line 23, beginning at the top of the verso overleaf, though, shows no connections or omissions. 23-24: CB: replaced by: omnis qui se exaltant hodie / humiliabitur cras misere (“Each one who exalts himself today will be wretchedly humbled tomorrow”); cf. Matthew, 23:12: “Qui autem se exaltaverit, humiliabitur: et qui se humiliaverit, exaltabitur” (“He who exalts himself will be humbled, and he who humbles himself shall be exalted”) and the similar passage in Luke, 14:11; this substitution, however, does not respect the otherwise coherent pattern of internal rhyme seen throughout the rest of the poem; it also overrides the expected caesura after the fourth syllable in line 24. 23,5: OxRawl: prosperis, from Anderson, NDRC, 5:xxi and AH21. 26,1: CB: cur. 26,3-5: CB: troiarum nobiles. 27,3: CB: om. 28,1: CB: qui. 28,3: for some reason AH21 and Anderson (NDRC, 5:xxi) give “Troiani” against all sources, thus removing Rome completely from consideration. 28,4: CB: gratia. 29,4: CB: facundia. 30,4: CB: kartaginis. 31,2: CB: originally entered as “lubrice,” corrected with a small “a” above the text line. 34,4: OxRawl: om, but not reported in AH21. 36,4: alternative orthography for “holus.” MUSIC: General remarks: The various short caudae or melismatic extensions throughout the F redaction of this piece suggest a performance of the cum littera portions in long values for each syllable with frequent extensions, especially on each line’s first, fourth, seventh and tenth syllables. See the discussion of this piece in Knapp, “Musical Declamation,” at pp. 397-399.³ The mensural rendition of O varium from Fauv has been supplied for comparison following the version from F. Syllabic/melismatic identity: a recurrence of a very short cadential motive at the end of several phrases or caesurae, sometimes transposed or varied as follows: 1) the T and D on “[lubri]cum” (line 1) – this consists of the final three-note T motive a,g,a, and the accompanying D motive edc,a (which is often varied upon its reappearance). These figures are equivalent or similar to: 1a) the T(D) of “dubium” (line 2), with the T down a second (gfg), the D down a third (cb,a,g); 1b) the T of “iudicum” (line 2), down a second (gfg), the D unrelated; 1c) the T(D) of “modicum” (line 3), with the T up a fifth (dcd), the D up a third (gf,e,d); and 1d) the D(T) of “gratia” (line 4), parts exchanged, with the T down a third (cb,a,g), the D down a second (gfg). Notes on the music: Line 3,5: D: F: flat sig preceding “premium” written 3 lower. 7,2: D: F: extra si=a over “[ster]co[re].” Cauda at end of line 5: the four syllables of line 5,4 (“sublimia”) have been rendered rhythmically so as to preserve the sequential motives that continue in the following cauda. The cauda is om in Fauv. Line 6,1-2: T: Fauv: om along with the verbal text and preceding short cauda on line 5,4, with no indication of absence. 8,4: D: F: the very last figure in this voice lacks an expected descending stroke on its left side (which does appear in the similar figure in the T), making it appear sine proprietate.

²See the source description of CB within the transcription of the conductus Fas et nefas ambulat (F7/119).

³Janet Knapp, “Musical Declamation and Poetic Rhythm in an Early Layer of Notre Dame Conductus,” Journal of the American Musicological Society, 32 (1979): 383-407.

SI DEUS EST ANIMUS – NOTUM FECIT DOMINUS

Conductus: (H32/324)

F f. 352r (7,95): Strophe I; WI, f. 114v (105v) (9,25): Strophes A, B, C, II

D

8 I Si de - us est a - ni - mus dii no - stri sint a - ni - mi.
 A [No - tum fe - cit do - mi - nus in con - spe - ctu gen - ti - um
 B [An - ge - lus con - si - li - i no - bis sit con - si - li - o
 C [O fe - lix com - mer - ti - um de - scen - dit ut plu - vi - a II [Ni - chil [est] in - cer - ti - us re - bus in am - bi - gu - is

T

8 I Si de - us est a - ni - mus dii no - stri sint a - ni - mi.
 A [No - tum fe - cit do - mi - nus in con - spe - ctu gen - ti - um
 B [An - ge - lus con - si - li - i no - bis sit con - si - li - o
 C [O fe - lix com - mer - ti - um de - scen - dit ut plu - vi - a
 II [Ni - chil [est] in - cer - ti - us re - bus in am - bi - gu - is

8 I men - te quod im - pri - mi - mus fa - ci - a - mus im - pri - mi
 A an - ge - lis pau - lo - mi - nus co - ro - na - vit so - ci - um
 B in - car - na - ti fi - li - i no - va in - car - na - ti - o
 C vir - gi - nis in gre - mi - um qui cre - a - vit o - mni - a II ho - ra mor - tis cer - ti - us ni - chil mo - ri a - stru - is

T

8 I men - te quod im - pri - mi - mus fa - ci - a - mus im - pri - mi
 A an - ge - lis pau - lo - mi - nus co - ro - na - vit so - ci - um
 B in - car - na - ti fi - li - i no - va in - car - na - ti - o
 C vir - gi - nis in gre - mi - um qui cre - a - vit o - mni - a II ho - ra mor - tis cer - ti - us ni - chil mo - ri a - stru - is

8 I di - vi - nis o - pe - ri - bus. sit in a - cti - bus
 A no - stre car - nis ho - mi - nem qui per vir - gi - nem
 B re - no - vans nos re - no - vet car - nis re - fo - vet
 C ex com - plu - to vel - le - re gra - to fe - de - re
 II er - go mo - ri co - gi - tes mor - tem du - bi - tes

T

8 I di - vi - nis o - pe - ri - bus. sit in a - cti - bus
 A no - stre car - nis ho - mi - nem qui per vir - gi - nem
 B re - no - vans nos re - no - vet car - nis re - fo - vet
 C ex com - plu - to vel - le - re gra - to fe - de - re
 II er - go mo - ri co - gi - tes mor - tem du - bi - tes

d

I quod mens con - ci - pit sic quod re - ci - pit fi - des pre - ci - pit.
 A [et in vir - gi - ne] et pro ho - mi - ne si - ne se - mi - ne.
 B ti - til - la - ti - o nos in vi - ti - o quos con - ce - pti - o
 C a - gnus na - sci - tur na - tus pa - ti - tur pas - sus mo - ri - tur
 II ne sit im - pi - a vi - ta vi - ti - a cri - sti gra - ti - a

c

I quod mens con - ci - pit sic quod re - ci - pit fi - des pre - ci - pit.
 A [et in vir - gi - ne] et pro ho - mi - ne si - ne se - mi - ne.
 B ti - til - la - ti - o nos in vi - ti - o quos con - ce - pti - o
 C a - gnus na - sci - tur na - tus pa - ti - tur pas - sus mo - ri - tur
 II ne sit im - pi - a vi - ta vi - ti - a cri - sti gra - ti - a

I nam ut lu - cis mu - ne - re ca - ret lam - pas va - cu - a;
 A no - -stram car - nem in - du - it ser - vi for - mam ca - pi - ens
 B sic ma - tris quod fi - li - e [su - o] par - tu fo - ve - at
 C mor - -te mor - tem des - tru - it di - e sur - gens ter - ti - a
 II ne sit vi - ta va - cu - a con - stans sis ut a - zi - mus

I nam ut lu - cis mu - ne - re ca - ret lam - pas va - cu - a;
 A no - -stram car - nem in - du - it ser - vi for - mam ca - pi - ens
 B sic ma - tris quod fi - li - e [su - o] par - tu fo - ve - at
 C mor - -te mor - tem des - tru - it di - e sur - gens ter - ti - a II ne sit vi - ta va - cu - a con - stans sis ut a - zi - mus

d

I sic et si - ne o - pe - re fi - des ia - cet mor - tu - a.]
 A quod e - rat non ex - u - it quod non e - rat ve - sti - ens.]
 B flo - re pu - di - ci - ti - e ca - ro no - stra flo - re - at.]
 C et go - li - as cor - ru - it su - a per - dens spo - li - a.]
 II fi - des non est mor - tu - a si de - us est a - ni - mus.]

c

I sic et si - ne o - pe - re fi - des ia - cet mor - tu - a.]
 A quod e - rat non ex - u - it quod non e - rat ve - sti - ens.]
 B flo - re pu - di - ci - ti - e ca - ro no - stra flo - re - at.]
 C et go - li - as cor - ru - it su - a per - dens spo - li - a.]
 II fi - des non est mor - tu - a si de - us est a - ni - mus.]

SI DEUS EST ANIMUS – NOTUM FECIT DOMINUS

Conductus (H32/324)

F f. 352r (7,95): Strophe I; WI, f. 114v (105v) (9,25): Strophes A, B, C, II

I	Si deus est animus, dii nostri sint animi. Menti quod imprimimus faciamus imprimi divinis operibus. Sit in actibus quod mens concipit, sic quod recipit fides precipit. Nam ut lucis munere caret lampas vacua, sic et sine opere fides iacet mortua.	10 5 10	If God is a spirit, Let our spirits be as gods. What we imprint on the mind we should cause to be imprinted by godly workings. Let what the mind conceives be in our actions, so that it receives what faith commands. For, just as an empty lamp lacks the gift of light, so also does faith lie dead without works.
---	---	---------------	---

As alternatives to the full presentation given here, the three strophes below designated A, B, and C, which appear to constitute an independent poem, may either be omitted, placed after Strophe II, or performed separately.

A	[Notum fecit dominus in conspectu gentium: angelis paulominus coronavit socium, nostre carnis hominem, qui per virginem, [et in virgine,] et pro homine, sine semine, nostram carnem induit, servi formam capiens Quod erat non exuit quod non erat vestiens.	15 20 25	The Lord made it known in the sight of the Gentiles: he crowned an ally, slightly lesser than the angels, a man made of our flesh, who through a virgin, and in a virgin, and for mankind, without seed, donned our flesh, taking on the form of a servant. He did not cast off what he was in putting on what he was not.
B	Angelus consilii nobis sit consilio. Incarnati filii nova incarnatio, renovans, nos renovet. Carnis refovet titillatio nos in vitio, quos conceptio sic matris quod filie [suo] partu foveat, flore pudicitie caro nostra floreat.	30 35	Let the angel of council be in council for us Let this new incarnation of the incarnate son, the renewer, renew us. The titillation of the flesh encourages us in vice, we whom the impregnation of this mother/daughter so encourages through her own birthing, that our flesh flourishes with the flower of chastity.

C	O felix comertium! Descendit ut pluvia virginis in gremium qui creavit omnia. Ex compluto vellere grato federe agnus nascitur. Natus patitur, passus, moritur. Morte mortem destruit, die surgens tertia, et Goliath corruit sua perdens spolia.	40	What a happy exchange! He who made everything descended like rain into the lap of a virgin. And out of a bedewed fleece, 45 through a joyful pact, a lamb is born. The son suffers, and, suffering, dies. He destroys death with his death, 50 rising on the third day, and Goliath collapses, losing his spoils.
II	Nichil [est] incertius rebus in ambiguis hora mortis; certius nichil mori astruis. Ergo mori cogites. Mortem dubites ne sit impia. Vita vitia Christi gratia, ne sit vita vacua. Constans sis ut azimus. Fides non est mortua si deus est animus.]	55	Nothing is more uncertain in uncertain matters than the hour of death, and you affirm that nothing is more certain than dying. Therefore, you should ponder dying. You should consider death, so it not be unrighteous. 60 Avoid vices through the grace of Christ, lest your life be worthless. Be constant as unleavened bread. Faith is not dead 65 if God is a spirit.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 95, f. 352r: a2; Strophe I only, with no space provided for further text. This and the following work, Ex creata non creatus (I14/108), are in the same order in OxRawl.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 25, f. 114v (105v): a2; all five stanzas transmitted in the order I, A, B, C, II, complete, with I set to music in the usual way, and the remaining strophes in the right margin outside the writing block, starting about halfway down the page and thus seemingly continuing directly from where the musical setting of Si deus leaves off. The final portion of Strophe II finishes up at the bottom of the leaf, written below the last system on the page and outside the writing block. As a result the residual strophes for Si deus lie opposite the following piece in W1, the motet Qui servare puberem / [Domine] (vdW 59/M3), presented here without its opening initial, and – as usual for W1 – absent its tenor. Painted initials head each stanza of Si deus, with a guide letter also visible for Strophe C.

W2, fasc. 7, no. 23, f. 143r: a2: Strophe I only, with a bit of remaining space covered by staff lines at the end of the final system, but with no indication that any further text was intended for inclusion.

Text only:

OxRawl (GB-Ob Rawl. poet. C 510), no. 18, f. 238v (9v): text alone of Strophes I, A, B, C, in that order, with the beginning of each strophe signaled by pilcrows in the left margin; rubric: “De incarnatione christi et integritate beate virginis” (“on Christ’s incarnation and the chastity of the Blessed Virgin”). This and the following work, Ex creata non creatus (I14/108), are in the same order in F.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: The commentary on this work has benefited enormously from the discussions and editions of this piece in Anderson, NDRC (3:xxxv-xxxvi), Thurston, Conductus Collections (1:36)¹ and Everist, Discovering Medieval Song (78-82);² these citations are referred to below by their authors’ names. The Question of Multiple Poems: As noted within the above text and translation and implied by the main heading to this piece, the five strophes that make up the most complete transmission of this lyric are often conjectured to be two different poems.³ One consists of Strophes I and II as presented here, which reflect on the importance of pursuing good works in preparing for one’s eventual end; the other – beginning Notum fecit dominus – comprises A, B, and C and treats Christ’s incarnation and birth by the Virgin Mary. These stanzaic designations correspond to the labels on the CPI website, and the order of the strophes here follows that of W1, the only source to contain them all. Interestingly, the rubric in OxRawl relates only to the “second” poem, even though its transmission includes Strophe I to start off. As a result, there are various opportunities for including or excluding certain stanzas from consideration or performance. The possibility of interlarded poems in the case of Si deus and Notum fecit is analogous to that seen in some other conductus lyrics. The case is perhaps most like that of Ysayas cecinit – Titire tu patule (C4/188), except the supposedly conjoined poems in the latter case are recorded sequentially after each other in the only source that provides all the stanzas (W1), not in a nested fashion as with the Si deus – Notum fecit pair. Also, the situation with Si deus – Notum fecit seems to contrast with those of Trine vocis tripudio – Trahunt in precipitia (E4/351) and Quid tu vides Ieremia (D4/287). For the former pair, the two proposed siblings are actually transmitted as separate items in one of their sources (OxRawl), while the latter duo suggests that, rather than two different poems, the two stanzas supplied after the first are intended as alternatives for each other. Even so, a few features tie together the Si deus – Notum fecit group, which may at least argue that they were conceived in tandem, or that one was fashioned with knowledge of the other. The structure of the stanza in terms of its sequence of line lengths and accentual patterns is unusual, if not unique, and the rhyme scheme is exactly the same for all five strophes. Also related is the fact that each stanza in each poem opens with a citation of some kind. For I-II, these come either from late-antique didactic or patristic works; for A-C they are liturgical/biblical. Furthermore, it seems interesting that W1, which alone presents the entire textual complex, nestles A-C between I and II, a strategy also implied, though incompletely, by OxRawl. As a result, the presentation in W1 offers another instance of a conductus that closes with a recall of its opening line, a feature also seen in the work immediately preceding this piece in F-7, O varium fortune lubricum (J27/247). See the remarks on this latter work’s versification for a list of other conductus that open and close with identical – or nearly so – lines. Textual notes: 1: derived from John, 4:24,⁴ this is a direct quotation of the opening words of the widely transmitted Distichs of Cato (Catonis Disticha), ¹Ethel Thurston, ed., The Conductus Collections of the MS Wolfenbüttel 1099 (1206), 3 vols., Recent Researches in the Music of the Middle Ages and Early Renaissance, nos. 11-13 (Middleton, WI: A-R Editions, 1980).

²Mark Everist, Discovering Medieval Song: Latin Poetry and Music in the Conductus (Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2018).

³As, for instance in the editions of Anderson and Thurston above, as well as that of Janet Knapp, ed., Thirty-Five Conductus for Two and Three Voices, Collegium musicum, no. 6, ([New Haven]: Yale University Department of Music Graduate School, 1965), see pp.144-145.

⁴John, 4:24: “Spiritus est Deus: et eos qui adorant eum, in spiritu et veritate oportet adorare.” (“God is a spirit; and they that adore him, must adore him in spirit and in truth.”).

book 1, distich 1: “Si deus est animus, nobis ut carmina dicunt, / Hic tibi praecipue sit pura mente colendus” (“If God is a spirit, as the songs tell us, / He is to be worshiped above all with a pure mind.”).⁵ For more on this work, see the textual notes to the two conductus Fas et nefas ambulat (F7/119), line 13, and Cum animadverterem (I12/73), line 1. For an excellent discussion of the use of the Distichs in the conductus repertory, with particular focus on Cum animadverterem, see Mary Channen Caldwell, “Singing Cato.”⁶ 10-11: a likely reference, as proposed by Anderson, to the parable of the wise and foolish virgins, from Matthew, 25:1-13. The empty lamp is associated with those who are unprepared for the coming of the Lord, as suggested by the last verse of the Gospel citation: “Vigilate itaque, quia nescitis diem, neque horam” (“Watch therefore, because you know not the day nor the hour.”). This conceit is picked up in lines 53-56 and permeates Strophe II. 12-13: see James, 2:17: “Sic et fides, si non habeat opera, mortua est in semetipsa” (“So faith also, if it have not works, is dead in itself.”). See also Bernard of Clairvaux, in PL, 183, col. 936C.⁷ 14-15: from Psalm 97:2: “Notum fecit Dominus salutare suum; in conspectu gentium revelavit iustitiam suam” (“The Lord has made known his salvation: he has revealed his justice in the sight of the Gentiles.”). As Thurston observes, the beginnings of Strophes A, B, and C all recall texts that serve as liturgical items, most prominently in feasts associated with Christmastide; one may search the texts of the Cantus Index for examples of similar incipits.⁸ In this case the most obvious representative is the verse to the Christmas/Circumcision gradual Viderunt omnes. Notum fecit dominus (M1, see the Cantus Index, ID no. g00554a); cf. also the remarks for lines 27 and 40-41. 16-18: see Psalm 8:6,⁹ referring to mankind, which is also cited in Hebrews, 2:7,¹⁰ and with slightly different language in 2:9,¹¹ referring to Jesus. On the adoption of the specific reading for line 18,1 (“nostram”) that emphasizes Christ’s humanity here, rather than his divinity, see the variant reading for that word reported below. 23-24: on Christ humbling himself through his incarnation, see Philippians, 2:7-8;¹² for some additional appearances of this image in the conductus repertory, see the remarks on the conductus Sol sub nube latuit, lines

⁵The text is cited from Wayland Johnson Chase, The Distichs Of Cato: A Famous Medieval Textbook, University of Wisconsin Studies in the Social Sciences and History, 7 (Madison: University of Wisconsin Press, 1922), 16. The translation is from Everist, p. 79, although one is provided by Chase in rhyming verse.

⁶Mary Channen Caldwell, “Singing Cato: Poetic Grammar and Moral Citation in Medieval Latin Song,” Music and Letters, 102 (2021): 191-233; see especially 10-18.

⁷*PL*, 183, col. 936C: “Sine fide enim impossibile est placere Deo (Hebr. xi,6); fortasse et displicere necesse erit. Denique omne quod non est ex fide, peccatum est (Rom. xiv,23). Erat fides, sed mortua. Quomodo enim non mortua sine operibus?” (“For without faith it is impossible to please God [Hebrews 11:6]; and perhaps it will be necessary to displease [him]. Finally, all that is not from faith is sin [Romans, 14:23]. There was faith, but it was dead. For how can it not be dead without works?”)

⁸<http://cantusindex.org/>.

⁹Psalm 8:6: “Minuisti eum paulo minus ab angelis: gloria et honore coronasti eum” (“You have made him a little less than the angels, you have crowned him with glory and honour.”).

¹⁰Hebrews, 2:6-7: “Quid est homo quod memor es ejus, aut filius hominis quoniam visitas eum? Minuisti eum paulo minus ab angelis: gloria et honore coronasti eum: et constituisti eum super opera manuum tuarum” (“What is man, that you are mindful of him: or the son of man, that you visit him? You have made him a little lower than the angels: you have crowned him with glory and honour, and have set him over the works of your hands.”).

¹¹Hebrews, 2:9: “Eum autem, qui modico quam angeli minoratus est, videmus Jesum propter passionem mortis, gloria et honore coronatum: ut, gratia Dei, pro omnibus gustaret mortem” (“But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels, for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honour: that, through the grace of God, he might taste death for all.”).

¹²Philippians, 2:7-8: “... sed semet ipsum exinanivit, formam servi accipiens in similitudinem hominum factus, et habitu inventus ut homo. Humiliavit semet ipsum, factus oboediens usque ad mortem, mortem autem crucis” (“But he [Christ] emptied himself, taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men, and devised in appearance as a man. He humbled himself, becoming obedient unto death, even to the death of the cross.”).

17-20. 25-26: a common conceit in the conductus repertory: God’s divinity was not compromised when he assumed human form as Christ. See the related expression in the conductus Relegentur ab area (C6/304), lines 13-14 (at the end of Strophe II): “assumensque mutabile / quod erat non mutavit” (“and [Christ] taking on the changeable [i.e., the form of a human] did not change what he was”); see also Parit preter morem (E12/261), lines 35-36. 27: for fuller citations of the expression of Christ as the angel of good (or great) council, see the notes to the text of lines 11-12 in the conductus Exultemus socii (J17/115). As with the beginnings of stanzas A and C, this is a phrase that appears in a number of liturgical items, including sequences and antiphons. Both Thurston and Anderson point out its presence, for example, within the Christmas sequence Letabundus exsultet fidelis chorus (olim L129/-,¹³ Cantus Index ID 508017), line 7. See also the remarks for lines 14-15 and 40-41. 28,3: the word “consilio” might otherwise be rendered here in the adverbial sense of “resolutely.” 35-37: a difficult passage to construe, but I believe the language pertaining to the mother and the daughter refers to Mary’s dual role in the conception of Christ as both daughter of the Father and mother of the Son, a common conceit that encouraged reflection in the conductus repertory and in medieval literature at large. Hence, those who may suffer from the temptations of the flesh are encouraged by the example of Mary’s chaste conception and delivery of Jesus to pursue chaste lives themselves. 40-41: another set of liturgical references, as pointed out by Thurston and Anderson, most notably to an antiphon for the octave of Christmas, O admirabile commercium (Cantus Index, ID no. 003985). See also the remarks for lines 14-15 and 27. In addition, line 41 appears as a refrain in the conductus Ave maris stella ave (J53/33), deriving either from Matthew, 7:24-27,¹⁴ which recounts the parable of the house built on rock and the one built on sand, or – more likely given the image of the fleece that follows soon after in line 44 – from Psalm 71:6.¹⁵ 44-46: the dew that collected on Gideon’s fleece, as recounted in Judges, 6:36-40, is symbolic of Christ, God’s power, and Christ’s grace; the fleece itself, soaked by the dew without ever lying open to it, is a figure of the Virgin Mary that represents her preserved chastity. See also the reference in Thurston to PL, 175, col. 678B, which comments on the meaning of the fleece in a manner similar to that given above. Christ is represented as a sacrificial lamb here, as prefigured in John the Baptist’s exclamation to Jesus in John, 1:29.¹⁶ 49: for the frequent conceit of death being overcome or destroyed by death (i.e., by Jesus’s sacrifice and resurrection), see Hebrews, 2:14-15; Romans, 6:9; 1 Corinthians, 15:26-27, 54-55; and Payne, Motets and Prosulas, p. 27 (note to lines 136-137). 51-52: as Thurston notes, Goliath is a figure for the devil, in opposition to David, a frequent type for Christ. See, e.g., the Catena aurea of Thomas Aquinas, on Matthew, chapter 1, lectio 5, which quotes the Glossa ordinaria: “Mystice autem David est Christus, qui Goliath, id est Diabolum, superavit” (“In a figurative sense, David is Christ, who conquered Goliath, i.e., the Devil.”). 53-55: Anderson notes the corresponding passage in the Meditations of Anselm of Canterbury; see PL, 158, col. 741A: “Nihil certius morte, nihil hora mortis incertius” (“Nothing is more certain than death, and nothing more uncertain than the hour of death.”). This saying went ¹³Anderson has L129 signaled for deletion in the hand-annotated version of his conductus catalog due to his reclassification of it as a sequence.

¹⁴Matthew, 7:24-27: “Omnis ergo qui audit verba mea hæc, et facit ea, assimilabitur viro sapienti, qui ædificavit domum suam supra petram,” et descendit pluvia, et venerunt flumina, et flaverunt venti, et irruerunt in domum illam, et non cecidit: fundata enim erat super petram. Et omnis qui audit verba mea hæc, et non facit ea, similis erit viro stulto, qui ædificavit domum suam super arenam: et descendit pluvia, et venerunt flumina, et flaverunt venti, et irruerunt in domum illam, et cecidit, et fuit ruina illius magna” (“Every one therefore that hears these my [Jesus’s] words, and does them, shall be likened to a wise man that built his house upon a rock; and the rain fell, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and they beat upon that house, and it fell not, for it was founded on a rock. And every one that hears these my words, and does them not, shall be like a foolish man that built his house upon the sand; and the rain fell, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and they beat upon that house, and it fell, and great was the fall thereof.”).

¹⁵Psalm, 71:6: “Descendet sicut pluvia in vellus, et sicut stillicidia stillantia super terram.” (“He [the king] shall come down like rain upon the fleece; and as showers falling gently upon the earth.”).

¹⁶John, 1:29: “Altera die vidit Joannes Jesum venientem ad se, et ait: ‘Ecce agnus Dei, ecce qui tollit peccatum mundi’ ” (“The next day, John saw Jesus coming to him, and he said: ‘Behold the Lamb of God, behold him who takes away the sin of the world’ ”).

on to become essentially proverbial, as it appears in multiple contexts. 63: see 1 Corinthians, 5:7-8,¹⁷ where the unleavened bread representing “sincerity and truth” is set in opposition to the leavened bread representing the sinful behavior associated with “malice and wickedness.” 64-65: see the remarks for lines 1 and 12-13.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: Any variants from Strophe I of W1 are also included here, as it is the main source for all but the first strophe. A number of the editorial emendations are taken from the edition in Anelecta hymnica, 20:49, no. 17 (listed here as AH). 2,1: F: the word “dii” is treated monosyllabically in both the poem and musical setting. 13,1: F: last letter of “fides” partially worn; confirmed by W1, OxRawl. 13,3: F: extra period after first syllable of “mortua,” perhaps because the remaining syllable continues on a lower system. 16,1: W1: angelus; from OxRawl. 18,1: OxRawl has “sue,” which is also acceptable. The adopted reading stresses Christ’s humanity (“a man of our flesh) over his divinity (“a man of his [i.e., God’s] flesh”). 20: W1: om; from OxRawl. 24,1: OxRawl has the curious “sue.” 31: W1: renovans non innovi; OxRawl: innovans nos removet; reading from AH. 34: W1: nos initio; adopted reading from OxRawl, following AH, ibid. 36,1: W1: sit; from OxRawl. 36,4: W1: filio; from OxRawl. 37,1: W1: om; from OxRawl. 49,3: W1: destruens; from OxRawl. 50,2: W1: surrexit; from OxRawl. 53,2: om; supplied editorially. 62,3: W1: vite; from AH. 63,3: W1: ut; from AH. 63,4: W1: apparently written twice, with the first instance partially erased. MUSIC: No variants. See the discussion of this piece in Everist. Discovering Medieval Song, 78-82, which demonstrates how the disposition of different musical textures (syllabic versus more and less neumatic text setting) is closely aligned with the changes in verse structure within the stanza. Hence, the opening group of five 7-syllable proparoxytonic lines shows a tendency towards a more ornate neumatic setting, the following series of four 5pp verses is strongly syllabic with regular flourishes of neumatic writing confined to their final syllables, while the closing four lines, reverting to a 7pp construction, open with the only appreciable cauda in the piece, and continue with a setting that is almost strictly syllabic outside the ending flourish on the penultimate syllable of the stanza. For an analogous display of varied correlations between musical style and poetic structure in the conductus repertory, see Dic Christi veritas (C3/94), along with the discussion of its features as given in Payne, “Music and Texts of the Conductus,” from The Cambridge History of Medieval Music, 2:1061-1062.¹⁸

¹⁷1 Corinthians, 5:7-8: “Expurgate vetus fermentum, ut sitis nova conspersio, sicut estis azymi. Etenim Pascha nostrum immolatus est Christus. Itaque epulemur: non in fermento veteri, neque in fermento malitiae et nequitiae: sed in azymis sinceritatis et veritatis” (“Purge out the old leaven, that you may be a new paste, as you are unleavened. For Christ our pasch is sacrificed. Therefore let us feast, not with the old leaven, nor with the leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.”).

¹⁸Thomas B. Payne, “Latin Song II: The Music and Texts of the Conductus.” The Cambridge History of Medieval Music. 2 vols., Mark E. Everist and Thomas Forrest Kelly, eds., 2: 1048-1078. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2018.

EX CREATA NON CREATUS
 Conductus (114/108)

F, f. 352r (7,96): Strophe I; WI, f. 118v (109v) (9,34): Strophes II-IV*

D

8

1. [Ex cre - a - ta non cre - a - tus na - sci no - bis est di - gna - tus.
 2. [Ut scri - ptu - ris ex - pli - ca - tur ver - bum pa - tris in - car - na - tur
 3. [No - vo vo - lens sa - lu - ta - ri de - so - la - tos con - so - la - ri
 4. [Na - tu - re ius ob - mu - te - scit iu - ris or - do de - cre - bre - scit

T

8

1. Ex cre - a - ta non cre - a - tus na - sci no - bis est di - gna - tus.
 2. [Ut scri - ptu - ris ex - pli - ca - tur ver - bum pa - tris in - car - na - tur
 3. [No - vo vo - lens sa - lu - ta - ri de - so - la - tos con - so - la - ri
 4. [Na - tu - re ius ob - mu - te - scit iu - ris or - do de - cre - bre - scit

8

1. qui pro no - bis hu - ma - na - tus; na - te tu - lit es - se na - tus
 2. nu - be car - nis pal - li - a - tur quem lex stu - pet ius m - ira - tur
 3. car - ne sump - ta se - cu - la - ri non ab - or - ret in - car - na - ri
 4. ma - tris mo - dum ma - ter ne - scit sed se ma - trem ex - pa - ve - scit

a

8

1. qui pro no - bis hu - ma - na - tus; na - te tu - lit es - se na - tus
 2. nu - be car - nis pal - li - a - tur quem lex stu - pet ius m - ira - tur
 3. car - ne sump - ta se - cu - la - ri non ab - or - ret in - car - na - ri
 4. ma - tris mo - dum ma - ter ne - scit sed se ma - trem ex - pa - ve - scit

a'

8

1. for - mam in - du - tus ho - mi - nis. sed sal - vo iu - re nu - mi - nis.
 2. ob - stu - pe - scit hu - ma - ni - tas o mi - ra re - i no - vi - tas
 3. vir - gi - nis clau - sus gre - mi - o qui da - vid se - det so - li - o
 4. vir - go fa - cta pu - er - pu - ra in su - a clau - dens vi - sce - ra

8

1. for - mam in - du - tus ho - mi - nis. sed sal - vo iu - re nu - mi - nis.
 2. ob - stu - pe - scit hu - ma - ni - tas o mi - ra re - i no - vi - tas
 3. vir - gi - nis clau - sus gre - mi - o qui da - vid se - det so - li - o
 4. vir - go fa - cta pu - er - pu - ra in su - a clau - dens vi - sce - ra

a'''

*W1 has b-flat signatures throughout both parts, allowing alternatives to the occasional b-natural readings here.

8

1. ut sic per par - tum vir - gi - nis ve - te - ris
 2. par ef - fe - cta dis - pa - ri - tas il - le - sa
 3. in quo na - tu - ra fi - li - o mi - ra - tur
 4. quem ter - ra pon - tus e - the - ra quem to - tus

8

1. pos - set cri - mi - nis di - lu - i re - a - tus.]
 2. ma - nens de - i - tas car - ni ma - ri - tat - ur.]
 3. pri - vi - le - gi - o so - li - to pri - va - ri.]
 4. te - ste li - te - ra or - bis non ca - pe - scit.]

EX CREATA NON CREATUS

Conductus (I14/108)

F, f. 352r (7,96): Strophe I; WI, f. 118v (109v) (9,34): Strophes II-IV

- | | |
|---|--|
| I Ex creata, non creatus
nasci nobis est dignatus..
Qui pro nobis humanatus, nate tulit esse natus,
formam indutus hominis,
sed salvo iure numinis.
ut sic per partum virginis veteris posset criminis diluī reatus. | From her who was created, the one who was not created deigned to be born for us.
The one made human for us bore being the son of his daughter, 5 taking on the form of a man, but through an unassailable authority of divine will, so that the guilt of the ancient offense could be swept away
by a virgin giving birth. |
| II [Ut scripturis explicatur,
verbum patris incarnatur.
Nube carnis palliatur quem lex stupet ius miratur.
Obstupescit humanitas.
O mira rei novitas!
Par effecta disparitas.
Illesa manens deitas
carni maritatur. | 10 As is set forth in scripture,
the Word of the Father is made flesh.
It is covered by a cloud of flesh that dumbfounds the law and makes judgment marvel.
Humanity is stupefied.
15 O the wondrous novelty of the event!
Inequality has become equal.
Godliness, remaining unimpaired,
is wed to flesh. |
| III Novo volens salutari desolatos consolari carne sumpta seculari, non aborret incarnari.
Virginis clausus gremio,
qui david sedet solio,
in quo natura filio miratur privilegio
solito privari. | 20 Wishing that the desolate be consoled through new salvation by taking on worldly flesh, he did not shrink from being incarnated.
Nestled in the lap of a virgin,
he sits on David's throne, 25 on which Nature wonders at the deprivation by the son of his customary privilege. |
| IV Nature ius obmutescit.
Iuris ordo decrebrescit.
matris modum mater nescit,
sed se matrem expavescit,
virgo facta puerpura, in sua claudens viscera
quem terra pontus ethera, quem totus, teste litera,
orbis non capescit.] | The law of nature is rendered speechless.
The proper workings of the law recede.
30 The mother knows not the ways of a mother, yet is greatly astounded at becoming a mother, since as a virgin she has born a child, enclosing in her womb the very one whom earth, sea, and sky, 35 indeed the whole world, as scripture witnesses, cannot contain. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 96, f. 352r: a2; Strophe I only, with no space for further text, and with the last several notational figures and final text syllable occupying the very end of the first system of the following piece, Veneris prosperis (J28/359). This and the previous work, Si deus est animus – Notum fecit dominus (H32/324), are in the same order in OxRawl.

WI, fasc. 9, no. 34, f. 118v (109v): a2; Strophes I-IV, complete, with II-IV headed by painted initials (a guide letter is visible for II and partially for III) and entered at the bottom of f. 118v (109v) under the first system of the piece; the first line of II begins in the left margin, with the remainder continuing underneath in five lines of extended writing, running from the left to right margins and inscribed outside the writing block. An upper case letter begins line 5.

Text only:

OxRawl (GB-Ob Rawl. poet. C 510), no. 19, f. 238v (9v): text only of Strophes I-IV, complete, with II-IV headed by pilcrows in the left margin; rubric: “De effectu et commodo incarnationis christi” (“On the outcome and benefit of the incarnation of Christ”). This and the previous work, Si deus est animus – Notum fecit dominus (H32/324), are in the same order in F.

US-NHub Beinecke MS 712.59 (New Haven, Yale University Library, Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library, Beinecke MS 712.59),¹ no. 3, verso (the shelfmark refers only to a single leaf): ruled for music a2 that was never entered; text only supplied for Strophes I-IV, complete, with the residual stanzas entered within the right margin after the final system of the piece and continuing into the end of the first system of the following work, Ut non ponam os in celum (I5/354). Insufficient space for the final lines sees them entered outside the writing block in the margin to the left of the staves of the second system of Ut non ponam.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1-2: central to the orthodox idea of the consubstantiality of Christ with God is that Christ (“the Word”) existed before his conception and incarnation on earth (see John, 1:1-3).² For further discussion of this and related points, see the notes to the text of the conductus Sine matre genitus (I27/330), lines 1-2, and the additional references there. Hence, Mary, who as a mortal was created in a normal fashion through her own birth, gave birth to Jesus, who was not created but in existence with God from the beginning. 4: the common conceit of Mary’s dual role as both daughter of God the Father and mother of his Son. 7-9: Mary’s giving birth to Jesus redeemed mankind and negated the effects of original sin (“the ancient offense” of line 8), prompted by Eve’s succumbing to the temptation of the diabolical serpent in Genesis, 3. 10-11: see John, 1:14.³ 13-14: the frequent trope of Christ’s birth overstepping the bounds of natural law; for discussion and references to other items in the conductus repertory, see the notes to the text of O felix Bituria (E8/232), lines 23-24. This conceit is explored further in the rest of the poem. 16: in Jesus, as lines 17-18 explain, the separate, unequal qualities of divinity and mortality are combined equally in a single entity who is also one with the other members of the Trinity, the Father and Holy Spirit. 17-18: God’s divinity was not compromised when he assumed human form as Christ, see, for example, the conductus Sol sub nube latuit (I16/334), Strophe I and passim, and Parit preter morem (E12/261), lines 9-14. 21-22: Christ willingly submitted to incarnation as a human, humbling himself

¹Images of this MS are available here: <https://collections.library.yale.edu/catalog/10543807>.

²John, 1:1-3: “In principio erat Verbum, et Verbum erat apud Deum, et Deus erat Verbum. Hoc erat in principio apud Deum. Omnia per ipsum facta sunt: et sine ipso factum est nihil, quod factum est” (“In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him: and without him was made nothing that was made.”).

³John, 1:14: “Et Verbum caro factum est, et habitavit in nobis: et vidimus gloriam ejus, gloriam quasi unigeniti a Patre plenum gratiae et veritatis” (“And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, and we saw his glory, the glory as it were of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth.”).

by doing so, though it meant his inevitable sacrifice for mankind that resulted in his crucifixion and death; see, for example, Philippians, 2:7-8.⁴ 24: See Luke, 1:32;⁵ in this context, the throne of David serves as a symbol of the Virgin Mary, who traced her ancestry back to him. 25-29: further contemplation of God’s power to bend natural law to his will, as in the comments to lines 13-14, above. In this case Nature is additionally astounded at Christ/God taking on human form and thus forgoing certain advantages of his divinity (see the remarks for lines 21-22). 30: Mary conceived Jesus without sexual intercourse, therefore she did not have full knowledge of the “way of a mother.” 31: the verb here – “expavescit” – normally implies fear and dread, which would be unusual qualities to describe Mary’s reaction to her role in the incarnation. I therefore lean towards Anderson’s connotation of awe (NDRC, 4:xv), rather than fear, but it is a difficult word to render properly in this context. 33-36: Anderson (NDRC, 4:xv, note 6) notes the use of comparable language in the text of the verse for the Marian gradual Benedicta et venerabilis. Virgo dei genetrix (M32) “Virgo dei genetrix quem totus non capit orbis in tua se clausit viscera factus homo” (“Virgin, mother of God, the whole world cannot hold him, the one made man who encloses himself in your womb.”). Similar expressions can be found in a number of other Marian liturgical items, see the Cantus Index (<http://cantusindex.org/>). 34: an apparent reference to the opening line of the Marian hymn Quem terra pontus aethera (or sidera), attributed to the poet Venantius Fortunatus (ca. 530-ca. 600-609), also bishop of Poitiers (from ca. 599-600 until his death). For other citations in the Parisian conductus repertory of Fortunatus’s poems in addition to Ex creata, see the notes to the opening lines of O crux ave spes unica (H4/230) and Pange melos lacrimosum (I15/258). 35-36: on the inability of the universe to contain God, see 1 Kings, 8:27: “Ergone putandum est quod vere Deus habitet super terram? si enim caelum, et caeli caelorum, te capere non possunt, quanto magis domus haec, quam aedificavi? ” (“Is it then to be thought that God should indeed dwell upon earth? for if heaven, and the heavens of heavens cannot contain thee, how much less this house which I [Solomon] have built?”)

Observations and Variants: TEXT: All variant readings from both W1 and US-NHub Beinecke MS 712.59 are reported here (the latter as “Beinecke”), the first because it is used to supply the additional strophes II-IV for this transcription, the second because it was unknown to Anderson and therefore not collated in his edition (NDRC, 4:94). 6,1: W1: set. 8,2: W1: possit. 13,4-5: Beinecke: partially effaced by wormholes. 22,2: Beinecke: abhorret, as in OxRawl. 25,2: W1, OxRawl, Beinecke: qua; the adopted reading, not supported by any of the other extant sources appears in Anderson, NDRC, 4:xv, and AH, 20, p. 50, no. 18, though it is not reported in the latter. 25,3: W1: nature, as is OxRawl; taken from Beinecke. 28,1: W1: verus; from OxRawl, Beinecke. 28,3: W1, Beinecke: decrebescit; from OxRawl. 36,1: Beinicke: mundus (“world”), an equally acceptable reading. MUSIC: W1 has b-flat signatures throughout both parts, allowing alternatives to the occasional b-natural readings here. Line 6,1: T: F: 3li=fec; adopted reading (3C, siP=fed, d) from W1 gives better consonance.

⁴Philippians, 2:7-8: “... sed semet ipsum exinanivit, formam servi accipiens in similitudinem hominum factus, et habitu inventus ut homo. Humiliavit semet ipsum, factus oboediens usque ad mortem, mortem autem crucis” (“But he [Christ] emptied himself, taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men, and devised in appearance as a man. He humbled himself, becoming obedient unto death, even to the death of the cross.”).

⁵Luke, 1:32 “Hic erit magnus, et Filius Altissimi vocabitur, et dabit illi Dominus Deus sedem David patris ejus: et regnabit in domo Jacob in aeternum” (“He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the most High; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of David his father; and he shall reign in the house of Jacob for ever.”).

VENERIS PROSPERIS
Conductus (J28/359)

F, f. 352v (7,97): Strophe I; OxRawl, f. 239r (10r) (no. 21): Strophes II-IV

D

[Ve - ne - ris pro - spe - ris u - sa suc - ces - si - bus
[So - li - tum de - bi - tum red - di - te ve - ne - ri
[Lu - pi - ter ar - bi - ter re - rum in - sti - tu - it
[Vi - ve - re te - ne - re sa - ta - gam i - gi - tur

T

Ve - ne - ris pro - spe - ris u - sa suc - ces - si - bus
[So - li - tum de - bi - tum red - di - te ve - ne - ri
[Lu - pi - ter ar - bi - ter re - rum in - sti - tu - it
[Vi - ve - re te - ne - re sa - ta - gam i - gi - tur

tur - ba na - scen - ti - bus flo - ri - bus te - ne - ris.
iu - ve - nes te - ne - ri lau - des et me - ri - tum ni - chil dum li - bu - it fi - e - ri tur - pi - ter qui io - vem se - qui tur non de - git te - me - re

a

a'

tur - ba na - scen - ti - bus flo - ri - bus te - ne - ris.
iu - ve - nes te - ne - ri lau - des et me - ri - tum
ni - chil dum li - bu - it fi - e - ri tur - pi - ter
qui io - vem se - qui tur non de - git te - me - re

ex - e - qua - ris pri - scum mo - rem. ad a - mo - rem is e - ner - vat iu - ven - tu - tis qui vir - tu - tis sic e - dix - it sic - que vo - tis u - sus to - tis vo - lun - ta - tis fix - us te - lo u - tar ve - lo

ex - e - qua - ris pri - scum mo - rem. ad a - mo - rem
is e - ner - vat iu - ven - tu - tis qui vir - tu - tis sic e - dix - it sic - que vo - tis u - sus to - tis
vo - lun - ta - tis fix - us te - lo u - tar ve - lo

ac - cin - ga - ris sce - le - ris pre - ter - mis - sis ce - te - ris.]
for - mam ser - vat li - bi - tum pu - e - ris est li - ci - tum.]
su - o vix - it iu - gi - ter e - di - cto con - for - mi - ter.]
vo - lun - ta - tis si - de - re na - vi - gans sub ve - ne - re.]

ac - cin - ga - ris sce - le - ris pre - ter - mis - sis ce - te - ris.
for - mam ser - vat li - bi - tum pu - e - ris est li - ci - tum.]
su - o vix - it iu - gi - ter e - di - cto con - for - mi - ter.]
vo - lun - ta - tis si - de - re na - vi - gans sub ve - ne - re.]

VENERIS PROSPERIS

Conductus (J28/359)

F, f. 352v (7,97): Strophe I; OxRawl, f. 239r (10r) (no. 21): Strophes II-IV

I Veneris prosperis usa successibus, turba, nascentibus floribus teneris, exequaris priscum morem. Ad amorem accingaris, sceleris pretermisissis ceteris.	Enjoying the favorable profits of Venus, when tender flowers 5 are being born, you, as a group, should pursue the ancient custom. May you be girded for love, 10 having left off other, wicked things.
II [Solitum debitum reddite Veneri, iuvenes teneri. Laudes et meritum is enervat iuventutis qui virtutis formam servat. Libitum pueris est licitum.	Render unto Venus the debt owed her, 15 tender youths. One weakens the honors and reward of youth who maintains an 20 appearance of virtue. For the young, pleasure is permitted.
III Iupiter, arbiter rerum, instituit nichil dum libuit feri turpiter. Sic edixit, sicque, votis usus totis, suo vixit iugiter edicto conformiter.	Jupiter, the arbiter 25 of things, established that nothing was shamefully done when it was pleasing. So he ordained, and so, availing himself 30 of his every wish, he lived perpetually in conformity with his edict.
IV Vivere tenere satagam, igitur. Qui Iovem sequitur non degit temere. Voluntatis fixus telo, utar velo voluntatis, sidere	Therefore, I will 35 aim to live sensually. One who follows Jove does not pass his time rashly. Struck through by 40 the arrow of desire I will make use of the sail of delight, steering under Venus,

navigans sub Venere.] the guiding star.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 97, f. 352v: a2; Strophe I only, with some empty space at the end of the last system, covered with staff lines, but with no indication any further text was intended for inclusion. This is the only extant setting of the music. This and the following three pieces in F are in the same order in OxRawl.¹

Text only:

OxRawl (GB-Ob Rawl. poet. C 510), no. 21, f. 239r (10r): text only of Strophes I-IV, complete, with II-IV headed by pilcrows in the left margin; rubric: “Prosa de lasciviis iuventutis” (“Prose on the licentiousness of youth”). Each stanza is written in three-line units comprising 4, 4, and 3 lines of each stanza as delineated above. Line 38 seems to have an initial letter larger than the ones beginning the other lines. This and the following three pieces in OxRawl are in the same order in F (see the footnote in the source report on that MS).

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: General remarks: The editions of Anderson, Dronke,² and AH, referred to below, have been exceedingly helpful in determining the text and in aiding translation. This is one of the few conductus preserved in F to treat the subject of earthly or erotic love; for a full list of such pieces as well as additional observations, see the remarks on the text of Flos in monte cernitur (F10/128, at F-6,28). Perhaps as a result, the images and personifications come from classical Roman mythology. Guido Maria Dreves, in his discussion of the piece in AH, 21:158, no. 252, hypothesizes that this poem is either a stylistic exercise, or that additional strophes were omitted from OxRawl, the only source to preserve any stanzas other than the first. He assumes that this missing portion would contain some warning or moral to offset the blatant encouragement towards erotic love that pervades the poem. This assumption, though, seems countered somewhat by the tone of Strophe IV, which reads like an effective summing-up of the ideas presented earlier in the lyric. Attribution: Peter Dronke has ascribed this poem to Peter of Blois, but the 1998 edition of Peter’s poetry by Carsten Wollin regards this as dubious.³ Versification: there are various ways to construe the structure of this complex stanzaic form. The format adopted here corresponds to two of the other editions I have consulted (Dronke, Medieval Latin; Anderson, NDRC, 5:xxii). There is an exception with AH, which offers an eight-line stanza that combines lines 1-2, 6-7, and 9-10, as given above. Any attempt to pair up the three- or four-syllable couplets into single lines featuring internal rhyme still leaves a stray trisyllable (line 10) or risks obscuring the chiasmic pairs of rhymes in lines 6-9. Textual notes: 4,2-5: this conductus poem has a springtime trope, a feature seen frequently in secular vernacular love poetry. 6: perhaps the reference to the “ancient custom” here is prompted by the Roman deities that inhabit the poem, the pagan venue here contrasting to the more ¹The four works found contiguously in F-7 (nos. 97-100) and OxRawl (nos. 21-24) are Veneris prosperis (J28/359), Regnum dei vim patitur (H33/302), Omni pene curie (I34/252), and Non habes aditum (J29/221); the middle two members are also in the same order in W2-7 (nos. 25-26) and US-NHub Beinecke MS 712.59.

²Peter Dronke, Medieval Latin and the Rise of the European Love-lyric, 2nd ed., (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1968), 393-394

³See Peter Dronke, “Peter of Blois and Poetry at the Court of Henry II,” Medieval Studies, 38 (1976): 185-235; reprinted and revised in idem, The Medieval Poet and his World, Storia e Letteratura: Raccolta di Studi e Testi, no. 164 (Rome: Edizioni di Storia e Letteratura, 1984), 281-339; and Carsten Wollin, ed., Petri Blesensis Carmina, Corpus Christianorum Continuatio Mediaevalis, no. 128, (Turnhout: Brepols, 1998), see poem number 4.10.

devotional and religious tone of the majority of the conductus in F. 36,1: this word is a contraction of “satis agam.”

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 35: OxRawl: temere; from Anderson, Dronke. 39-42: OxRawl: fixus telo / voluptatis / utar vero / voluptatis. This mars the rhyme scheme; rearrangement of the lines and emendation to the readings seem called for. AH does not report these discrepancies. While OxRawl gives the same word for lines 40 and 42 (retained in AH), Anderson and Dronke replace one instance with “voluntatis,” a word with similar connotations; this strategy has been implemented here for the first instance, as per Dronke. 41,2: OxRawl: vero; reading after both Anderson and Dronke; AH unaccountably gives “natis,” without comment, which disrupts the rhyme scheme. MUSIC: no variants.

REGNUM DEI VIM PATITUR
 Conductus (H33/302)

F, f. 352v (7,98): Strophe I; WI, f. 119v (110v): Strophes II-IV

D

[Re - gnum de - i vim pa - ti - tur. nec il - luc quis ad - mit - ti - tur
 [In - ter nos bel - lum ge - ri - tur quod vix aut num - quam vin - ci - tur
 [In spi - ri - tus ex - i - ti - um mun - dus ca - ro de - mo - ni - um
 [[S]i ar - ma - tu - ra for - ti - um su - per - bi fran - git gla - di - um

T

Re - gnum de - i vim pa - ti - tur. nec il - luc quis ad - mit - ti - tur
 [In - ter nos bel - lum ge - ri - tur quod vix aut num - quam vin - ci - tur
 [In spi - ri - tus ex - i - ti - um mun - dus ca - ro de - mo - ni - um
 [[S]i ar - ma - tu - ra for - ti - um su - per - bi fran - git gla - di - um

ni - si se i - psum vi - ce - rit. sed quem iu - dex
 dum ca - ro vi - res ex - e - rit si mens in id
 pa - ri con - spi - rant fe - de - re pa - ri - que cer - sum - pta car - nis ex o - pe - re [ut gres - su] men -

ni - si se i - psum vi - ce - rit. sed quem iu - dex
 dum ca - ro vi - res ex - e - rit si mens in id
 pa - ri con - spi - rant fe - de - re pa - ri - que cer - sum - pta car - nis ex o - pe - re [ut gres - su] men -

cum ve - ne - rit in - ve - ne - rit vi - cto - rem;
 quod sug - ge - rit con - sum - pse - rit sta - tim ca -
 - tant sce - le - re pe - rum - pe - re vir - tu - tis ad
 - tis li - be - re con - fu - ge - re pos - sit ad

cum ve - ne - rit in - ve - ne - rit vi - cto - rem;
 quod sug - ge - rit con - sum - pse - rit sta - tim ca -
 - tant sce - le - re pe - rum - pe - re vir - tu - tis ad
 - tis li - be - re con - fu - ge - re pos - sit ad

*see alternative readings of final cauda at end

co - ro - na - bi - tur.]
 - pti - va - tra - hi - tur.]
 ad - iu - to - ri - um.]
 al - ta - mon - ti - um.]

co - ro - na - bi - tur.
 - pti - va - tra - hi - tur.]
 ad - iu - to - ri - um.]
 al - ta - mon - ti - um.]

(alternative readings follow)

ALTERNATIVE READINGS OF FINAL CAUDA

a. Mode 2

Two staves of music, labeled 'D' (Dessus) and 'T' (Ténor). The key signature has one flat (B-flat) and the time signature is 8/8. The lyrics are: [co - ro - na - bi - tur.] for the D part and co - ro - na - bi - tur. for the T part. The D part features a melodic line with a dashed blue line indicating an alternative reading for the phrase 'na - bi - tur.'. There are red accents above the notes 'na' and 'bi' in the D part.

b. Mode 6

Two staves of music, labeled 'D' and 'T'. The key signature has one flat and the time signature is 8/8. The lyrics are: [co - ro - na - bi - tur.] for the D part and co - ro - na - bi - tur. for the T part. The D part features a melodic line with a dashed blue line indicating an alternative reading for the phrase 'na - bi - tur.'. There are red accents above the notes 'na' and 'bi' in the D part.

c. Mode 5 / Mode 1

Two staves of music, labeled 'D' and 'T'. The key signature has one flat and the time signature is 8/8. The lyrics are: [co - ro - na - bi - tur.] for the D part and co - ro - na - bi - tur. for the T part. The D part features a melodic line with a dashed blue line indicating an alternative reading for the phrase 'na - bi - tur.'. There are red accents above the notes 'na' and 'bi' in the D part.

REGNUM DEI VIM PATITUR

Conductus (H33/302)

F, f. 352v (7,98): Strophe I; W1, f. 119v (110v) (9,36): Strophes II-IV

- | | |
|---|---|
| I Regnum dei vim patitur, nec illuc quis admittitur nisi se ipsum vicerit;
sed quem iudex, cum venerit, invenerit
victorem, coronabitur. | The kingdom of God is suffering violence, and no one is admitted there unless he has gotten the better of himself; but the one whom the judge – when he comes – 5 has declared the victor,
he will be crowned. |
| II [Inter nos bellum geritur, quod vix aut numquam vincitur.
Dum caro vires exerit, si mens in id quod suggerit consumpserit,
statim captiva trahitur. | A war is being waged among us,
that scarcely or never is victorious.
As long as the flesh avails itself of violence, 10 if the mind has fed upon what the flesh advises,
it is immediately made captive. |
| III In spiritus exitium mundus, caro, demonium pari conspirant federe, parique certant scelere perumpere
virtutis adiutorium. | The world, the flesh, and the devil conspire in an equal alliance 15 towards the destruction of the spirit, and they vie with equal wickedness to overcome
the support of virtue. |
| IV [S]i armatura fortium superbi frangit gladium, sumpta carnis ex opere, [ut gressu] mentis libere, confugere
possit ad alta montium.] | If the armor of the valiant 20 breaks the sword of one who is proud, so can the spirit flee what has been exacted by the effort of the flesh, on the pathway of a free mind,
to the heights of the mountains. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 98, f. 352v: a2; Strophe I only, with no space left for additional stanzas. This work is one of a group of four pieces that are transmitted in the same order in OxRawl and F.¹ This and the following item, Omni pene curie (I34/252), also appear in the same sequence in F, W2, US-NHub Beinecke MS 712.59, and OxRawl.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 36, f. 119v (110v): a2; Strophes I-IV, complete; with Strophes II-IV added at the end of the last system and extending into the right margin; there are painted initials for I, II, and III, while the one for IV was never executed, although a small guide letter appears to the left of the text for this final stanza.

W2, fasc. 7, no. 25, f.144r: a2; Strophe I only; with the notes over the final syllable extensively elongated, scored through vertically, and entered flush with the right margin with a preceding area of empty staff lines to the left that follows the end of the closing cauda; no additional space was left for any further stanzas, if intended. This and the following work (whose music and staves were never entered in W2) are in the same order in F, W2, US-NHub Beinecke MS 712.59, and OxRawl – see the source report on F.

¹The four works found contiguously in F-7 (nos. 97-100) and Ox Rawl (21-24) are Veneris prosperis (J28/359), Regnum dei vim patitur (H33/302), Omni pene curie (I34/252), and Non habes aditum (J29/221).

Text only:

US-NHub Beinecke MS 712.59 (New Haven, Yale University Library, Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library, Beinecke MS 712.59),² no. 1, recto (the shelfmark refers only to a single leaf): Staves headed by a filigreed initial and ruled for music a2 that was never entered; text only of Strophes I-IV, complete, with the residual stanzas entered within the right margin after the final system of the piece, and with painted initials. This and the following work are in the same order in F, W2, US-NHub Beinecke MS 712.59, and OxRawl – see the source report on F.

OxRawl (Oxford, Bodleian Library, Rawlinson C 510), no. 22, f. 239v (10v); Strophes I-IV, complete, marked by pilcrow in the left margin; rubric: “De triplici inimico nos infestante” (“On the three-fold foe attacking us” – i.e., the world, flesh, and the devil). This work is one of a group of four pieces that are transmitted in the same order in OxRawl and F (see the source report on F, above). This and the following item also appear in the same sequence in F, W2, US-NHub Beinecke MS 712.59, and OxRawl – see the source report on F.

Music only:

The pitches of the T in the opening three phrases of the final cauda match the T of text lines 5-6,2 of the conductus Helysei manubrio (I35/153): “se prebuit que latuit / iam patuit,” thus showing an example of syllabic/melismatic identity that occurs across two different works; this piece survives in the following sources:

F, fasc. 7, no. 121, f. 364r: a2; Strophe I complete.

W2, fasc. 7, no. 2, f. 139v: a2; Strophe I complete.

In addition, the opening motive in the first phrase of the T appears at the beginning of a number of other conductus; so far identified are: Vanitas vanitatum (K18/355), Beatus qui non abiit (K20/45), Qui seminant in loculis (K22/248).

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Attribution: This poem is regarded as a possible work of Philip the Chancellor by Peter Dronke and Guido Maria Dreves.³ Textual notes: 1: See Matthew, 11:12: “A diebus autem Iohannis Baptistae usque nunc, regnum caelorum vim patitur, et violenti rapiunt illud.” (“And from the days of John the Baptist until now, the kingdom of heaven suffers violence, and the violent plunder it.”); see also the reference in line 21 below to Galatians, 5:19-21. 4-6: cf. James, 1:12 “Beatus vir qui suffert temptationem; quia cum probatus fuerit, accipiet coronam vitae quam repromisit Deus diligentibus se” (“Blessed is the man who endures temptation; for when he has been proven, he shall receive the crown of life that God promised to those that love him.”). 9,4: from “exsero.” 14: the main three enemies of the soul, a type of unholy trinity (referred to in the rubric of OxRawl); see Peter Abelard, Expositio orationis dominicae (Exposition of the Lord's Prayer),⁴ petition 6: “Tria autem sunt quae nos tentant, caro, mundus, diabolus” (“There are three things which tempt us, the flesh, the world, and the devil.”). The parable of the sower, delivered in Mark, 4:15-17, is often seen as the main biblical source for this association. 19, 2-3: note Song of Songs, 4:4: “Sicut turris David collum tuum, quae aedificata est cum propugnaculis: mille clypei pendent ex ea omnis armatura fortium.” (“Your neck is like the tower of David, which is built with bulwarks: a thousand bucklers hang upon it, all the armour of valiant men.”) 21: Cf. Galatians, 5:19-21: “Manifesta autem sunt opera carnis quae sunt fornicatio, immunditia, luxuria ... et his similia. Quae praedico vobis, sicut praedixi, quoniam qui talia agunt regnum Dei non consequentur” (“Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are fornication, uncleanness, immodesty, luxury ... and such like. Of these I foretell you, as I have foretold to you, that they who do such things shall not obtain the kingdom of God.”).

²Images of this MS are available here: <https://collections.library.yale.edu/catalog/10543807>.

³See Peter Dronke, “The Lyrical Compositions of Philip the Chancellor,” Studi medievali, 3rd series, 28 (1987): 563-592, at p. 591; and Guido Maria Dreves and Clemens Blume, eds., Ein Jahrtausend lateinischer Hymnendichtung: eine Blütenlese aus den Analecta hymnica mit literarhistorischen Erläuterungen. 2 vols. (Leipzig: O.R. Reisland, 1909), 2:426-427.

Observations and Variants: All variant readings from both W1 and US-NHub Beinecke MS 712.59 are reported here (the latter as “Beinecke”), the first because it is used to supply the additional strophes II-IV for this transcription, the second because it was unknown to Anderson and therefore not collated in his edition (NDRC, 3:230). TEXT: 4: Beinecke: set que iudex advenerit. 11: W1: consumpsit, with no indication of an “-er-” abbreviation; Beinecke: consenserit; from OxRawl 17: W1: prerumpere, from OxRawl. 19,1: W1: initial om; from OxRawl. 22,1-2: W1: om; from OxRawl, Beinecke. MUSIC: Line 1. D:F: the b-flat sig is found only in this source in this voice, and it disappears with the turning of the folio; it is quite possibly included in error. 1,2: T:F: following stroke om in all MSS, supplied editorially. 1,4: T: F: Pb; 2li= ba, from W1; W2: bPb; D: F, W2: following stroke om, from W1. 4,5: T: F, W2: stroke om; from W1. Final cauda: The sine littera notation of this segment is ambiguous in terms of rhythm. There are several ways that the ligatures may be read, a number of which (arranged in greater to lesser order of likelihood) are provided at the end of the transcription. The one supplied within the transcription itself assumes an “upbeat” mode 1 reading, the alternative rendering “a.” gives the cauda in mode 2, “b.” reads the ligatures in mode 1 in faster values, and “c.” – perhaps the least defensible reading given the particular shapes that open the D – applies a mode-5 or extended mode-1 interpretation. There are even further rhythmic refinements possible in each of these versions, including different ways one might execute the rests prior to the cauda.

⁴For the text, see Charles Burnett, ed., “Expositio orationis dominicae ‘Multorum legimus orationes,’ ” Révue Benedictine, 95 (1985): 60–72.

OMNI PENE CURIE
Conductus (I34/252)

F, f. 353r (7,99): Strophe I; Cccc 468, f. viiv: Strophes II-V

D

8

1. [O - mni pe - ne cu - ri - e pre - si - dent in - cu - ri - i.
2. [Se - dent in in - si - di - is pau - pe - rem ut ra - pi - ant.
3. [Ho - di - e ius e - mi - tur ma - gno qui - dem pre - ci - o.
4. [Fru - stra ge - mens vi - du - a pre - ces fun - dit ho - di - e.
5. [Re - di - mun - tur sce - le - ra me - di - an - te pre - ci - o.

T

8

1. O - mni pe - ne cu - ri - e pre - si - dent in - cu - ri - i.
2. [Se - dent in in - si - di - is pau - pe - rem ut ra - pi - ant.
3. [Ho - di - e ius e - mi - tur ma - gno qui - dem pre - ci - o.
4. [Fru - stra ge - mens vi - du - a pre - ces fun - dit ho - di - e.
5. [Re - di - mun - tur sce - le - ra me - di - an - te pre - ci - o.

8

1. pe - nes quos iu - sti - ti - e te - nor et iu - di - ti - i
2. a - cri - bus an - ga - ri - is se - mi - nu - dos spo - li - ant.
3. iu - di - ci tri - bu - i - tur. to - ti - que col - le - gi - o.
4. ni - si do - ni con - gru - a con - di - an - tur spe - ci - e.
5. cu - ius of - fert dex - te - ra mun - dus a - bit vi - ci - o.

8

1. pe - nes quos iu - sti - ti - e te - nor et iu - di - ti - i
2. a - cri - bus an - ga - ri - is se - mi - nu - dos spo - li - ant.
3. iu - di - ci tri - bu - i - tur. to - ti - que col - le - gi - o.
4. ni - si do - ni con - gru - a con - di - an - tur spe - ci - e.
5. cu - ius of - fert dex - te - ra mun - dus a - bit vi - ci - o.

c'

8

1. pi - os li - gant im - pi - e. sed sol - vun - tur im - pi - i.
2. sed re - fe - rti spo - li - is; pre - de - ma - gis in - hy - ant.
3. ta - men haut pro - fi - ci - tur ius si - ne dis - pen - di - o.
4. fe - rens nil ut fa - tu - a li - men in - trat cu - ri - e.
5. et e - va - dit a - spe - ra et ex - pi - rat ul - ci - o.

8

1. pi - os li - gant im - pi - e. sed sol - vun - tur im - pi - i.
2. sed re - fe - rti spo - li - is; pre - de - ma - gis in - hy - ant.
3. ta - men haut pro - fi - ci - tur ius si - ne dis - pen - di - o.
4. fe - rens nil ut fa - tu - a li - men in - trat cu - ri - e.
5. et e - va - dit a - spe - ra et ex - pi - rat ul - ci - o.

8

1. nec dant lo - cum ve - ni - e si - ne sor - te pre - mi - i.]
 2. y - dro - pes in me - di - is sit - im re - bus am - pli - ant.]
 3. ni - si rur - sus se - qui - tur mu - ner - is ob - la - ti - o.]
 4. ma - nus e - nim va - cu - a ni - chil ha - bet gra - ti - e.]
 5. sic ex - cu - sant mu - ne - ra quos a - cu - sat a - cti - o.]

8

1. nec dant lo - cum ve - ni - e si - ne sor - te pre - mi - i.]
 2. y - dro - pes in me - di - is sit - im re - bus am - pli - ant.]
 3. ni - si rur - sus se - qui - tur mu - ner - is ob - la - ti - o.]
 4. ma - nus e - nim va - cu - a ni - chil ha - bet gra - ti - e.]
 5. sic ex - cu - sant mu - ne - ra quos a - cu - sat a - cti - o.]

OMNI PENE CURIE

Conductus (I34/252)

F, f. 353r (7,99): Strophe I; Cccc 468, f. vii^v: Strophes II-V

I Omni pene curie president incurii. Penes quos iustitie tenor et iuditii. Pios ligant impie, sed solvuntur impii; nec dant locum venie sine sorte premii.	5	The uncaring preside over nearly every court. Through them runs the course of justice and of judgment. They restrain the just unjustly, but the unjust are set loose; and they grant no place to forgiveness without a share in the reward.
II [Sedent in insidiis pauperem ut rapiant. Acribus angariis seminudos spoliant; sed referti spoliis, prede magis inhyant: ydropes in mediis sitim rebus ampliant.	10 15	They lie in ambush to prey on the poor. With their cruel bailiffs they strip bare the half-naked; and yet, stuffed with plunder, they covet prey all the more: bouts of dropsy, as they progress, increase thirst.
III Hodie ius emitur magno quidem precio. Iudici tribuitur totique collegio. Tamen haut proficitur ius sine dispendio, nisi rursus sequitur muneris oblatio.	20	Indeed, the law is purchased today with a huge bribe, one offered to the judge and to the bench as a whole. In fact, the law isn't furthered at all without expense, and without offering an offering on top of that.
IV Frustra gemens vidua preces fundit hodie, nisi doni congrua condiantur specie. Ferens nil, ut fatua limen intrat curie. Manus enim vacua nichil habet gratie.	25 30	The grieving widow pours forth her prayers in vain, unless they be seasoned with a agreeable sort of gift. Bearing nothing, like a fool she crosses the court's doorstep, for an empty hand holds nothing of benefit.
V Redimuntur scelera mediante precio. Cuius offert dextera mundus abit vicio et evadit aspera – et expirat ulcio. Sic excusant munera quos acusat actio.]	35 40	Crimes are bought off when a bribe is the mediator. He whose right hand makes an offer goes away cleansed of fault and evades severities – even punishment evaporates. Thus do gifts excuse the ones the charge accuses.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 99, f. 352v: a2; Strophe I only, with no space left for additional stanzas. This work is one of a group of four pieces transmitted in the same order in OxRawl and F.¹ Furthermore, this and the previous item in this source are in the same order in F, W2, US-NHub Beinecke MS 712.59, and OxRawl.

Fauv (F-Pn fr. 146; Paris, Bibliothèque nationale, fonds français 146 [Roman de Fauvel]), no. 23, f. 7v^a: a1 (T); Strophe I only, with some space at the end of the final system covered by staff lines; in mensural notation.

Text only:

W2, fasc. 7, no. 26, f.144v: text only of Strophe I, headed by the usual filigreed initial and formatted like the other items in the fascicle, but with no music or even rulings for staves ever entered; no space allotted for additional stanzas, as is typical for the other pieces in this fascicle. This and the previous work in this source are in the same order in F, W2, US-NHub Beinecke MS 712.59, and OxRawl – see the source report on F.

US-NHub Beinecke MS 712.59 (New Haven, Yale University Library, Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library, Beinecke MS 712.59),² no. 2, recto (the shelfmark refers only to this single leaf): staves headed by a filigreed initial and ruled for music a2 that was never entered; text of Strophes I-III only, with the two residual stanzas entered within the right margin after the final system of the piece, headed by painted initials, and not continuing further (cf. the next piece in this MS, Ex creata non creatus [I14/108]). This and the previous work in this source are in the same order in F, W2, US-NHub Beinecke MS 712.59, and OxRawl. Collated here when necessary as “Beinecke” – see the source report on F.

OxRawl (Oxford, Bodleian Library, Rawlinson C 510), no. 23, f. 239v (10v); text alone of Strophes I-III only,³ written successively as if prose, and with stanzas marked by interlinear pilcrows and capitals. The final seven inscribed lines are set flush with the right margin, outlining a wedge steadily decreasing from left to right with jagged ink decoration; rubric: “De iniuriis a iudicibus modernis factis” (“On the injuries done by modern judges”). This work is one of a group of four pieces transmitted in the same order in OxRawl and F (see the source report on F, above). Furthermore, two works, this and the previous work in this source, are in the same order in F, W2, US-NHub Beinecke MS 712.59, and OxRawl – see the source report on F.

Cccc 468 (GB-Cccc 468; Cambridge, Corpus Christi College, 468), f. viii^r: text alone of Strophes I-V, complete; appears on the seventh line of this leaf without break or other indication of its independence after the previous poem in the MS, Captivata largitas, a work also ascribed to Walter of Chatillon (see below on attribution), but without a musical setting in any extant source. A similar situation occurs with the MSS Cul Hh VI 11 and F-Pn n.a.l. 1544 (q.v.). The start of each stanza is indicated by a double vertical stroke set to the left of the larger letters that begin each inscribed line of the text.⁴

F-Pn n.a.l. 1544 (Paris, Bibliothèque nationale, nouvelles acquisitions latines, 1544), f. 86v; text alone of Strophes I-V, complete (though omitting lines 7-8 and 37), with stanzas opened by capitals at the left margin. As with Cccc 468, this is appended to a poem also ascribed to Walter, here Frigescente caritatis (L22, olim

¹The four works found contiguously in F-7 (nos. 97-100) and Ox Rawl (21-24) are Veneris prosperis (J28/359), Regnum dei vim patitur (H33/302), Omni pene curie (I34/252), and Non habes aditum (J29/221).

²Images from this source are available here: <https://collections.library.yale.edu/catalog/10985758>

³The CPI website mistakenly reports all five stanzas.

⁴Images from this source are available here: <https://parker.stanford.edu/parker/catalog/sw561ph9670>.

L23a/-). The beginning of Frigescente here has the rubric: “Contra curiam romanam” (“Against the Roman curia”). Collated here when necessary as “Pn1544.”⁵

Cul Hh VI 11 (GB-Cul Hh VI 11; Cambridge, University Library, Hh VI 11), f. 68v: text alone of lines 1-26 only, fragmentarily preserved, as the bottom of the leaf is torn away. Like Cccc 468, Omni pene occurs without a break as an appendage to the independent poem Captivata largitas. This source is presently unavailable to me. The details included here derive from Anderson, NDRC, 4:105.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Attribution: This lyric is attributed to Walter of Châtillon by Karl Strecker,⁶ where it appears in his edition as the concluding stanzas of poem no. 10, Captivata largitas, as described above in the source reports for Cccc 468 and Cul Hh VI 11. Here the two lyrics are reckoned as independent works.⁷ This ascription is supported in the 2013 edition of Walter’s works by David A. Traill.⁸ Traill’s work has aided immensely the rendering of the text and has informed much of the commentary here. Textual notes: 1-3: Of the similar words “pene” and “penes” in these lines, the first is an adverb, the second a preposition; but an evocation of the homophone “poenae” (“punishment”) may also be suggested here. As well, the translation conceals a pun between “curie” (“court”) and “incurii” (“uncaring”). 9-10: see Psalm 9:29-30.⁹ 11: according to Traill, Walter of Châtillon, p. lxxviii, the mention of baillifs (angarii) suggests the poet’s subject is corruption in secular, rather than ecclesiastical, courts. 13-16: on the connections shared by dropsy (edema), greed, and thirst, see Traill, Walter of Châtillon, p. 92, note 313, offering a quotation from Alain de Lille and citations from Hans Walther, Proverbia.¹⁰ For an informative blog post that collects a number of Greek and Roman authorities on the same subjects, see Michael Gilliland, Laudator Temporis Acti, “Avarice and Dropsy,” posted 18 September 2004.¹¹ For two particularly apt examples noted by Gilliland, see Ovid, Fasti, 1.211-216,¹² and ⁵The image from this source may be found here: <https://gallica.bnf.fr/ark:/12148/btv1b10033677x/f92.item.r=NAL%201544>.

⁶Karl Strecker, ed., Moralisch-satirische Gedichte Walters von Châtillon, (Heidelberg: Carl Winter, 1929).

⁷For Strecker’s reasoning on combining the two, see p. 109; for the separation, see Traill, cited in the following footnote, p. lxxviii.

⁸David A. Traill, ed. and transl., Walter of Châtillon: The Shorter Poems; Christmas Hymns, Love Lyrics, and Moral-Satirical Verse, (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 2013).

⁹Psalm 9:29-30: “Sedet in insidiis cum divitibus in occultis, ut interficiat innocentem. Oculi ejus in pauperem respiciunt; insidiatur in abscondito, quasi leo in spelunca sua. Insidiatur ut rapiat pauperem; rapere pauperem dum attrahit eum.” (“He [the sinner] sits in ambush with the rich in private places, that he may kill the innocent. His eyes are upon the poor man: He lies in wait in secret like a lion in his den. He lies in ambush that he may catch the poor man: to catch the poor, whilst he draws him to him.”).

¹⁰Hans Walther, Proverbia sententiaeque latinitatis medii aevi: Lateinische Sprichwörter und Sentenzen des Mittelalters in alphabetischer Anordnung, Carmina medii aevi posterioris latina, no. 2 (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck and Ruprecht, 1963). For the specific items, see nos. 11319a-c.

¹¹<https://laudatortemporisacti.blogspot.com/2004/09/avarice-and-dropsy.html> (accessed August 14, 2022).

¹²Ovid, Fasti, 1.211-216: “... creverunt et opes et opum furiosa cupido, / et, cum possideant plurima, plura petunt. / quaerere ut absumant, absumpta requirere certant, / atque ipsae vitiis sunt alimentiva vices: / sic quibus intumuit suffusa venter ab unda, / quo plus sunt potae, plus sitiuntur aquae.” (“Riches have grown and with them the frantic lust for wealth, and they who have the most possessions still crave for more. They strive to gain that they may waste, and then to repair their wasted fortunes, and thus they feed their vices by ringing the changes on them. So he whose belly swells with dropsy, the more he drinks, the thirstier he grows.”). The translation is from Ovid, Fasti, James George Frazer, transl., Loeb Classical Library, 253 (Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press;

Horace, Odes, 2.2.9-16.¹³ 25-26: see Ecclesiasticus (Sirach): 35:17;¹⁴ and Isaiah, 1:23.¹⁵ 29-30: Anderson, NDRC, 4:xxxvii, considers this a reference to the parable of the Wise and Foolish Virgins, from Matthew, 25:1-13.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: F: no variants. 2,2: Cccc 468: in curii. 3,3: Cccc 468: iusticie. 16,3: Cccc 468: applicant; from Beinecke,Pn1544. 20,2: Cccc 468,Pn1544,Cul Hh VI 11: aut; from OxRawl. 22,1: Cccc468: iudici; from OxRawl,Beinecke,Pn1544,Cul Hh VI 11. MUSIC: no variants. Motivic sharing with other works: The opening T phrase presents a case of a musical gesture that appears multiple times throughout the conductus repertory, in both melismatic and syllabic contexts, as follows: a. Tr of opening phrase in opening cauda in Dic Christi veritas (C3/94) – a3 – F-6,3; b. a prominent motive found in various cauda of Ave Maris stella virgo (D1/34) – a3 – F-6,17; c. T in opening motive of penultimate phrase in final cauda of Ave presul gloriose (F20/36) – a3 – F-6,48; d. D of “Ista dies ce[lebrari]” (line 1,1-2) of Ista dies celebrari (H30/189) – a2 – F-7,10; e. T of opening phrase in final cauda of Nobilitas animi (J8/220) – a2 – F-7,50; f. opening phrase of T in Omni pene curie (I34/252) – a2 – F-7,99. Fauv version: the mensural rendition in this source suggests performance in successive longs for most syllables, with extension to DL values for 3li figures if read literally (=BBL); all of the latter are written cum proprietate et cum perfectione, while 2li appear as both cum/cum and cum/sine, which in this mode 3/mode 2 context leads to the same values in execution (=BL or BB with the second B altered).

London: William Heinemann Ltd., 1931). Although the word here translated as “dropsy” is unda (“water”), the context of the passage, with its description of unquenchable thirst, suggests the rendering here. Cf. the following example from Horace.

¹³Horace, Odes, 2.2.9-16: “Latus regnes avidum domando / spiritum, quam si Libyam remotis / Gadibus iungas, et uterque Poenus / serviat uni. / Crescit indulgens sibi dirus hydrops, / nec sitim pellit, nisi causa morbi / fugerit venis, et aquosus albo / corpore languor” (“You may possess a more extensive dominion by controlling a craving disposition, than if you could unite Libya to the distant Gades, and the natives of both the Carthages were subject to you alone. The direful dropsy increases by self-indulgence, nor extinguishes its thirst, unless the cause of the disorder has departed from the veins, and the watery languor from the pallid body.”). The translation is by Christopher Smart, accessible here: <https://www.gutenberg.org/files/14020/14020-h/14020-h.htm> (consulted July 13, 2023).

¹⁴Ecclesiasticus (Sirach): 35:17: “Non despiciet preces pupilli, nec viduam, si effundat loquelam gemitus” (“He will not despise the prayers of the fatherless; nor the widow, when she pours out her complaint”).

¹⁵Isaiah, 1:23: “Principes tui infideles, socii furum. Omnes diligunt munera, sequuntur retributiones. Pupillo non iudicant, et causa viduae non ingreditur ad illos” (“Your princes are faithless, companions of thieves: they all love bribes, they run after rewards. They judge not for the fatherless: and the widow’s case comes not in to them.”).

NON HABES ADITUM

Conductus (J29/221)

F. f. 353r (7,100)

D

I

T

[Non ha - bes a - di - tum in cu - ri - a per me - ri - tum. fac au - rum

Non ha - bes a - di - tum in cu - ri - a per me - ri - tum. fac au - rum

por - ri - gas. que mol - li - a sunt col - li - gas sub cu - bi - to ia - cen - tis

por - ri - gas. que mol - li - a sunt col - li - gas sub cu - bi - to ia - cen - tis

do - mi - ni. cu - i su - bi - to clau - dun - tur ter - mi - ni. sic a - gi - to.

do - mi - ni. cu - i su - bi - to clau - dun - tur ter - mi - ni. sic a - gi - to.

sed si - cut me - mi - ni sic ten - dis per i - tum pal - pans in - me - ri - tum.

sed si - cut me - mi - ni sic ten - dis per i - tum pal - pans in - me - ri - tum.

[Refrain?]

[Refr. ?]

Ad lo - cu - los o - cu - los di - ri - gunt. et ma - nus por - ri - gunt.

Ad lo - cu - los o - cu - los di - ri - gunt. et ma - nus por - ri - gunt.

ma - ni - pu - los par - vu - los ne - gli - gunt qui ge - stant a - nu - los.]

ma - ni - pu - los par - vu - los ne - gli - gunt qui ge - stant a - nu - los.

NON HABES ADITUM

Conductus (J29/221)

F, f. 353r (7,100)

I Non habes aditum in curia per meritum. Fac aurum porrigas, que mollia sunt colligas sub cubito iacentis domini, cui subito clauduntur termini. Sic agito, sed sicut memini, sic tendis per itum, palpans inmeritum.	You gain no admittance to the court based on merit. Make sure that you offer gold, that the things you may assemble lie soft 5 beneath the mattress of a recumbent lord, for whom the terms are quickly concluded. This I urge, but I am also mindful that this is how you proceed in your course, flattering one who is undeserving.
--	--

[Refr.?] Ad loculos oculos dirigunt et manus porrigunt. Manipulos parvulos negligunt qui gestant anulos.	10 They direct their eyes to purses and hold out their hands. Those who wear rings don't care for small packages.
--	--

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 100, f. 353r: a2; Strophe I (and refrain?), complete, with no space for further text. This is the only musical setting of the poem; a capital heads line 10, signaled by an extra space in the text above, as if to mark a refrain. Significantly, Non habes aditum concludes a string of 13 texts that appear without a break, but in a different sequence for the most part, in both F and OxRawl, a series that began with Artium dignitas (I4/20) at F-7,88. This cycle was headed in F with a large, historiated initial, and marked a turn to pieces in a simpler style, with fewer, less extensive caudae and with an emphasis on strophic, rather than through-composed musical settings. Additionally, Non habes aditum is the last of a group of four pieces that are transmitted in exactly the same order in OxRawl and F.¹

Text only:

OxRawl (Oxford, Bodleian Library, Rawlinson C 510), no. 24, f. 239v (10v); text alone of Strophe I, complete, with the conjectural refrain at line 10 signaled by a marginal pilcrow; rubric: “Quod des ut accipias” (“What you should give to get”). This work is one of a group of four pieces transmitted in the same order in both OxRawl and F, and the last of a cluster of 13 works that appear as a group in both sources; see the above source report on F.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Versification: Although all the ten-syllable lines in this poem as shown above may be split into smaller units (as in Anderson, NDRC, 5:xxiii), the presentation here elects to combine these components into decasyllables with internal rhyme (indicated by horizontal spacing). This layout thus follows the example of Léopold Delisle's presentation of the poem² and minimizes the number of different line lengths in the text as a whole. Refrain?: Since only one stanza is preserved in all the extant sources of this piece, it is not possible to determine whether the capital at line 10 in F, or the analogous pilcrow at this same point in OxRawl, was intended to signal a refrain. For information on other monostrophic conductus with possible refrains, see the notes on the text to the conductus Baculi sollempnia (J52/20) at F-7,127. Content: This is a somewhat inscrutable poem, perhaps intentionally so. As with the preceding item in both sources, Walter of Châtillon's Omni pene curie (I34/252), the subject appears to be corruption and bribery in judicial courts (whether ecclesiastical or secular is not immediately clear), but, as Bruce Holsinger has pointed out,³ there are undercurrents of sexually pointed language in this lyric. Specifically, the references to purses and packages (loculos, manipulos) may denote the male genitals, specifically the scrotum and testicles, while the mention of rings conjures up the anus, surrounding a phallic finger.⁴ Textual notes: 4-6: This is a very difficult passage to construe. There are several possible ways that certain portions of it might be rendered, and so the translation here is provisional. Assuming that what I have supplied is somewhat accurate, I take it to mean that the person who is bribing the official must make sure that the things he gives are comfortable enough for the recipient to hide them under his mattress while he sleeps (lines 4-5), and that the transaction, being ethically and morally suspect, is concluded as quickly and quietly as possible (line 6 is also translatable as "to whom the boundaries are immediately closed"). However, with the wealth of allusion elsewhere in the poem, other meanings involving sexual favors may be in play as well. On a different point, I have rendered the word "cubito" (line 5,2) here as "mattress," rather than "elbow" or "arm," but there is an interesting connection with some of the language of this passage in Jeremiah, 38:10-13.⁵ In these verses, the prophet Jeremiah, who has been cast into a dungeon or cistern, is raised out of it by ropes that have been passed under his arms ("sub cubito manuum tuarum"). The ropes, though, have been made more comfortable (softer?) by being padded with rags and old, soiled pieces of cloth. The connection may be only coincidental, but the parallels still seem compelling. If accepted, this reading might change the conception of line 5,2 to "arm," but with the following mention of the "recumbent lord" (iacentis domini) I do not see this passage necessarily expounding upon the image of Jeremiah in the cistern. Hence I have preferred here the interpretation as "bed." 6,1: "cui" here is treated as bisyllabic in the musical setting, but functions structurally as a monosyllable in the poem. See the observations on the music at this same place, below. 6,3: OxRawl has the future tense form, "claudentur," which could serve just as well. 12-13: As Anderson suggests (NDRC, 5:xxiii), the rings are likely a symbol of authority, but see ²Léopold Delisle, "Discours de M. Léopold Delisle," Annuaire-Bulletin de la Société de l'Histoire de France, 23 (1885): 82-139, on p. 120.

¹The four works found contiguously in F-7 (nos. 97-100) and Ox Rawl (21-24) are Veneris prosperis (J28/359), Regnum dei vim patitur (H33/302), Omni pene curie (I34/252), and Non habes aditum (J29/221).

³Bruce Holsinger, Music, Body, and Desire in Medieval Culture: Hildegard of Bingen to Chaucer (Stanford, CA: Stanford University Press, 2001); see chapter 4, "Polyphones and Sodomites: Musical and Sexual Dissidence from Leoninus to Chaucer's Pardoner," pp. 137-187, particularly pp. 155-156, which treat Non habes aditum.

⁴For these points, see Holsinger, Music, Body, and Desire, 143-146. Also cf. David Traill, ed. and transl., Walter of Châtillon: The Shorter Poems; Christmas Hymns, Love Lyrics, and Moral-Satirical Verse, (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 2013), lxxviii-lxxix; and 47, note 187.

⁵Jeremiah, 38:10-13: "Praecipit itaque rex Abdemelech Aethiopi, dicens: 'Tolle tecum hinc triginta viros, et leva Jeremiam prophetam de lacu, antequam moriatur.' Assumptis ergo Abdemelech secum viris, ingressus est domum regis, quae erat sub cellario, et tulit inde veteres pannos, et antiqua quae computruerant, et submisit ea ad Jeremiam in lacum per funiculos. Dixitque Abdemelech Aethiops ad Jeremiam: 'Pone veteres pannos, et haec scissa et putrida, sub cubito manuum tuarum, et super funes.' Fecit ergo Jeremias sic, et extraxerunt Jeremiam funibus, et eduxerunt eum de lacu: mansit autem Jeremias in vestibulo carceris." ("Then the king [Zedekiah] commanded Abdemelech the Ethiopian, saying: 'Take from here thirty men with you, and draw up Jeremias the prophet out of the dungeon, before he die.' So Abdemelech taking the men with him, went into the king's house that was under the storehouse: and he took from thence old rags, and old rotten things, and he let them down by cords to Jeremias into the dungeon. And Abdemelech the Ethiopian said to Jeremias: 'Put these old rags and these rent and rotten things under your arms, and upon the cords': and Jeremias did so. And they drew up Jeremias with the cords, and brought him forth out of the dungeon. And Jeremias remained in the entry of the prison").

Holsinger, Music, Body, and Desire, 143-149, for the ring's sexual overtones deriving from Ovid, and proposed as operative in the poetry of Leoninus.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: F: no variants. MUSIC: Line 6,1: cf. also the above notes on the text at this place. As a result, and since the pitches for the two syllables of “cui” are repeated in both parts in the musical setting, this word may be rendered alternatively as a monosyllable in performance, corresponding to lines 5,1-2 and 7,1-2. 6,2: D: F: following stroke om.

INVOLUTUS IN ERRORIS

Conductus (J30/187)

F, f. 353v (7,101)

I

[In - vo - lu - tus in er - ro - ris la - be rit - o de - vi - a;

In - vo - lu - tus in er - ro - ris la - be rit - o de - vi - a;

vi - am vi - te me - li - o - ris ra - ti - o - ne pre - vi - a ni - tor et le - tor

vi - am vi - te me - li - o - ris ra - ti - o - ne pre - vi - a ni - tor et le - tor

ag - gre - di. nec post e - sum re - gre - di mo - re ca - nis ad vo - mi - tum.

ag - gre - di. nec post e - sum re - gre - di mo - re ca - nis ad vo - mi - tum.

sed ad - ver - sus spi - ri - tum ca - ro re - lu - ctans of - fi - cit.

sed ad - ver - sus spi - ri - tum ca - ro re - lu - ctans of - fi - cit.

et be - ne pu - gnans ef - fi - cit u - ti be - ne pu - gnem.

et be - ne pu - gnans ef - fi - cit u - ti be - ne pu - gnem.

et im - pu - gnan - tem for - ti - ter a - cri - ter. im - pu - gnem.]

et im - pu - gnan - tem for - ti - ter a - cri - ter. im - pu - gnem.]

INVOLUTUS IN ERRORIS

Conductus (J30/187)

F, f. 353v (7,101)

I	Involutus in erroris labe, rito devia; viam vite melioris ratione previa, nitor et letor aggredi; nec post esum regredi more canis ad vomitum. Sed adversus spiritum, caro, reluctans, officit, et, bene pugnans, efficit uti bene pugnem, et impugnantem fortiter, acriter impugnem.		Enmeshed in the shame of sin, I frequent the side roads; I persevere and am happy to embark on a path to a better life, 5 with reason leading the way; and, after having eaten, not return to my vomit like a dog. But the flesh gets in the way, struggling against the spirit, 10 and, fighting well, causes it to pass that I, too, fight well, and that I forcefully and fiercely attack the attacker.
---	--	--	---

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 101, f. 353v: a2; Strophe I, complete, with no provision for further stanzas; unique source for both music and text.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 2,1-2: rather a conundrum, as the scribe has written these four syllables as a single word, “laberito,” which appears not to exist in Latin. The CPI website gives “laberinto” (labyrinth), assuming an omitted abbreviation stroke over the “i,” which if used, though, makes it difficult to accommodate “devia.” Anderson (NDRC, 5:xxiii) looks as though a space might be provided between the words as given above, but I do not see his translation of “rito” (“I stumble”) as viable. Recall that “erroris” is genitive, translated as “sin” here. For the meaning of “rito” as used here, see s.v. “ritare,” no. 2, of the DMLBS at <https://logeion.uchicago.edu/ritare>. Also, “devia,” if it is a substantive (because there is nothing else in this clause that it might agree with as an adjective), would appear most likely to be neuter plural, as construed here. Even so, I still find this reading and its translation less than satisfactory, and consider it provisional. Another conceivable rendering of line 2 might be: “I celebrate devious things.” 6-7: see Proverbs, 26:11;¹ 2 Peter, 2:22.² 8-9: see Galatians, ¹Proverbs, 26:11: “Sicut canis qui revertitur ad vomitum suum, sic imprudens qui iterat stultitiam suam” (“As a dog that returns to his vomit, so is the fool that repeats his folly.”).

²Peter, 2:22: “Contigit enim eis illud veri proverbii: Canis reversus ad suum vomitum: et, Sus lota in volutabro luti.” (“For, that of the true proverb has happened to them: The dog is returned to his vomit: and, The sow that was washed, to her wallowing in the mire.”).

5:17.³

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. MUSIC: Line 9,2: D: F: g over “[re]luc[tans]” erased, editorial emendation.

³Galatians, 5:17: “Caro enim concupiscit adversus spiritum, spiritus autem adversus carnem: haec enim sibi invicem adversantur, ut non quaecumque vultis, illa faciatis” (“For the flesh desires what is contrary to the Spirit, and the Spirit what is contrary to the flesh. They are in conflict with each other, so that you are not to do whatever you want.”) – the translation here is from the New International Version, for clarity.

LUXURIANT ANIMI
Conductus (J31/202)

F, f. 354r (7,102)

D

[Lux - u - ri - ant a - ni - mi re - bus se - pe pro - spe - ris
[Ex - hau - stis con - ci - pi - unt vi - les vi - rus vi - ri - bus.]

T

Lux - u - ri - ant a - ni - mi re - bus se - pe pro - spe - ris
Ex - hau - stis con - ci - pi - unt vi - les vi - rus vi - ri - bus.

a b

vi - le ia - cent in - fi - mi ca - si - bus in a - spe - ris.
quod vo - men - do pa - ri - unt se - cun - dis suc - ces - si - bus.

a b

vi - le ia - cent in - fi - mi ca - si - bus in a - spe - ris.
quod vo - men - do pa - ri - unt se - cun - dis suc - ces - si - bus.

c

in - gra - ti pro gra - ti - a gra - ti sub in - o - pi - a.
ex post fa - cto cla - ri - us pa - tet hoc et pla - ni - us

c

in - gra - ti pro gra - ti - a gra - ti sub in - o - pi - a.
ex post fa - cto cla - ri - us pa - tet hoc et pla - ni - us

c

in - o - pes sunt hu - mi - les pro - pter o - pes la - bi - les in - flan - tur ex - hau - sta pe - cu - ni - a mon - strat im - po - ten - ti - a quod [re] - vol -

c

in - o - pes sunt hu - mi - les pro - pter o - pes la - bi - les in - flan - tur
ex - hau - sta pe - cu - ni - a mon - strat im - po - ten - ti - a quod [re] - vol -

su - per - bi - a.]
- ve - re pri - us.]

su - per - bi - a.
- ve - re pri - us.

(alternative readings follow)

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

a. cauda at line 2, mode 1 (mode 3 also possible)

Musical notation for alternative reading a. It consists of two staves: a soprano staff (D) and a tenor staff (T). The soprano staff begins with a treble clef and a common time signature. The tenor staff begins with a bass clef and a common time signature. The lyrics "(prospe)ris" are written below the tenor staff. Blue brackets are placed above the notes in both staves to indicate phrasing. A blue box highlights a specific note in the soprano staff.

b. cauda at line 4, mode 1 (mode 3 also possible)

Musical notation for alternative reading b. It consists of two staves: a soprano staff (D) and a tenor staff (T). The soprano staff begins with a treble clef and a common time signature. The tenor staff begins with a bass clef and a common time signature. The lyrics "(aspe)ris" are written below the tenor staff. Blue brackets are placed above the notes in both staves to indicate phrasing. A blue box highlights a specific note in the soprano staff.

c. final cauda, closing flourish, mode 1
(mode 3 also possible)

Musical notation for alternative reading c. It consists of two staves: a soprano staff (D) and a tenor staff (T). The soprano staff begins with a treble clef and a common time signature. The tenor staff begins with a bass clef and a common time signature. The lyrics "(superbia.)" are written below the tenor staff. Blue brackets are placed above the notes in both staves to indicate phrasing. A blue box highlights a specific note in the soprano staff.

LUXURIANT ANIMI

Conductus (J31/202)

F, f. 354r (7,102)

- | | | |
|---|---|--|
| I Luxuriant animi
rebus sepe prosperis; vile iacent infimi
casibus in asperis.
Ingrati pro gratia;
grati sub inopia.
Inopes sunt humiles, propter opes labiles
inflantur superbia. | Spirits often flourish
when times are favorable; and, in a base manner, they lie at their lowest in troublesome circumstances. | 5 They are ingrates when prosperous, but grateful when subject to poverty.
When poor they are humble, yet they become bloated with pride
when fleeting riches are involved. |
| II Exhaustis concipiunt viles virus viribus, quod vomendo pariunt
secundis successibus.
Ex post facto, clarius patet hoc et planius, exhausta pecunia,
monstrat impotentia
quod [re]volvere prius. | When their resources are exhausted, the lowly ones conceive a poison that they bring forth by vomiting when outcomes are favorable.
From everything that has happened, it becomes even more clearly and patently obvious that, when money is gone, its lack indicates that something from before is circling back again. | 10 15 |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 102, f. 354r: a2; Strophes I-II, complete, with II entered within the writing block in a dedicated space for it at the end of the last system to contain the piece. This is the only transmission of either the music or text of this work.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Content: this is a rather difficult text to construe, in ways related to the three works that immediately precede it in F-7.¹ The poem is sometimes a challenge to translate, and the final line of Strophe II appears to be corrupt in some way, q.v. In proposing the emendation of this last line I am taking my cue from Anderson, NDRC, 5:xxiv, in imagining an indirect nod to the concept of Fortune’s wheel (see the remarks on the text of O varium Fortune lubricum [J27/247]). This seems supported by the sense that the poet is not treating two different groups of individuals, the poor and the wealthy, but rather includes all souls whose riches may suffer at the uncertainties of fate. Here, though, in contrast to O varium Fortune, money is the main object of concern, an emphasis notable in two of the three works (Omni pene curie and Non habes aditum) that precede Luxuriant animi in F-7, which treat bribery. 3,1: “vile” is construed here as an adverb, rather than the more familiar “viliter”; see the dictionary entry at <https://logeion.uchicago.edu/vile>. 10-13: perhaps these lines suggest that the evil of riches are at work even in their absence, as those who are poor store up venomous attitudes that they then unleash when they are solvent again. 18: see the observations and variants below for this line.

¹*Omni pene curie* (I34/252), Non habes aditum (J29/221), and Involutus in erroris (J30/187).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 18,2: F: volvere; the given reading is an editorial emendation and highly conjectural. It could be improved by replicating the proparoxytonic accent of line 9, so alternatives are welcome. It is interesting that Anderson (NDRC, 5:xxiv,58,118) does not appear to recognize the need for an extra syllable to correspond with the last line of Strophe I and the musical setting. MUSIC: Final cauda: T: F: at 8L,1 of 3li=bda written over partially erased stroke to obscure error. Final cadence: curiously, for a piece that appears throughout to indicate its final will be g, Luxuriant animi closes with a turn to e, itself a rare occurrence in the general repertory of conductus, and a unique instance in the four main sources F, W1, W2, Ma.²

²For these assertions, see Daniele Sabaino, “The Repertoire of Parisian Conductus as a Case-Study in the Tonal Organization of Gothic Polyphony,” Musica Disciplina, 58 (2013): 287-325, at pp. 292, 299.

F, f. 354v (7,103): Strophes I-II and refrain; OxAdd, no. 62, f. 80r: Strophes III-VII

1. [Sol sub nu - be la - tu - it sed e - cly - psis ne - sci - us.
2. [Qui so - lus e - ter - nus est et qui re - git o - mni - a.
3. [So - lis iu - bar tem - pe - rat nu - bes mo - lis ne - sci - a
4. [O do - mus e - gre - gi - a do - mus in - quam do - mi - ni
5. [Abs - que de - i nu - mi - ne sen - su nul - lo ca - pi - tur
6. [Ru - bus non com - bu - ri - tur in - ter flam - mas i - gni - um
7. [Ab hoc er - go me - di - o fu - gi - en - dum pri - mi - tus

a b

1. Sol sub nu - be la - tu - it sed e - cly - psis ne - sci - us.
2. Qui so - lus e - ter - nus est et qui re - git o - mni - a.
3. [So - lis iu - bar tem - pe - rat nu - bes mo - lis ne - sci - a
4. [O do - mus e - gre - gi - a do - mus in - quam do - mi - ni
5. [Abs - que de - i nu - mi - ne sen - su nul - lo ca - pi - tur
6. [Ru - bus non com - bu - ri - tur in - ter flam - mas i - gni - um
7. [Ab hoc er - go me - di - o fu - gi - en - dum pri - mi - tus

1. cum se car - ni mi - scu - it sum - mi pa - tris fi - li - us.
2. quod non e - rat fa - ctus est. nec ta - men res a - li - a.
3. ter - ra fru - ctum ge - ne - rat quo dul - ce - scunt o - mni - a
4. do - mus nul - li per - vi - a ni - si de - o ho - mi - ni
5. quod de ma - tre vir - gi - ne de - us ho - mo na - sci - tur
6. nec ma - ter trans - gre - di - tur ca - sti - ta - tis li - li - um
7. et ve - ro re - fu - gi - o ad - e - ren - dum pe - ni - tus

a b

1. cum se car - ni mi - scu - it sum - mi pa - tris fi - li - us.
2. quod non e - rat fa - ctus est. nec ta - men res a - li - a.
3. ter - ra fru - ctum ge - ne - rat quo dul - ce - scunt o - mni - a
4. do - mus nul - li per - vi - a ni - si de - o ho - mi - ni
5. quod de ma - tre vir - gi - ne de - us ho - mo na - sci - tur
6. nec ma - ter trans - gre - di - tur ca - sti - ta - tis li - li - um
7. et ve - ro re - fu - gi - o ad - e - ren - dum pe - ni - tus

1. ma - ri - ta - ri no - lu - it ver - bum pa - tris al - ti - us.
2. il - lum qui so - lu - tus est stri - cta li - gat fa - sci - a.
3. ce - lo ter - ras fe - de - rat no - va da - ta gra - ti - a
4. o mi - ra ma - te - ri - a par - tus da - ta ne - mi - ni.
5. qui men - tis a - cu - mi - ne qui lo - co non clau - di - tur
6. hoc non in - tel - li - gi - tur ab ul - lo mor - ta - li - um
7. ut in de - i fi - li - o no - ster fi - at ex - i - tus

c d

1. ma - ri - ta - ri no - lu - it ver - bum pa - tris al - ti - us.
2. il - lum qui so - lu - tus est stri - cta li - gat fa - sci - a.
3. ce - lo ter - ras fe - de - rat no - va da - ta gra - ti - a
4. o mi - ra ma - te - ri - a par - tus da - ta ne - mi - ni.
5. qui men - tis a - cu - mi - ne qui lo - co non clau - di - tur
6. hoc non in - tel - li - gi - tur ab ul - lo mor - ta - li - um
7. ut in de - i fi - li - o no - ster fi - at ex - i - tus

1. nu - be - re non po - tu - it ca - ro glo - ri - o - si - us.]
 2. ia - cet qui in - men - sus est in - ter a - ni - ma - li - a.]
 3. tol - le - re qui ve - ne - rat ca - pti - va - ntis spo - li - a.]
 4. nul - li qui - dem pro - pri - a ni - si ma - tri vir - gi - ni.]
 5. ens ta - men in ho - mi - ne ia - cet se - det gra - di - tur.]
 6. ni - si a quo fu - gi - tur ba - bi - lo - nis me - di - um.]
 7. ad quem nos cum gau - di - o per - du - cat pa - ra - cli - tus.]

1. nu - be - re non po - tu - it ca - ro glo - ri - o - si - us.
 2. ia - cet qui in - men - sus est in - ter a - ni - ma - li - a.
 3. tol - le - re qui ve - ne - rat ca - pti - va - ntis spo - li - a.]
 4. nul - li qui - dem pro - pri - a ni - si ma - tri vir - gi - ni.]
 5. ens ta - men in ho - mi - ne ia - cet se - det gra - di - tur.]
 6. ni - si a quo fu - gi - tur ba - bi - lo - nis me - di - um.]
 7. ad quem nos cum gau - di - o per - du - cat pa - ra - cli - tus.]

[Refrain]

D
 Refr. [Gau - de no - va nu - pta. fi - des est et ve - ri - tas quod a
 T Gau - de no - va nu - pta. fi - des est et ve - ri - tas quod a car - ne de - i - tas non fu - it cor - rup - car - ne de - i - tas non fu - it cor - rup -

- ta.]
 - ta.

SG383, p. 169 (2,4): Strophe I and refrain only

D
 2. [Sol sub nu - be la - tu - it sed e - cly - psis ne - sci - us.
 T
 Sol sub nu - be la - tu - it sed e - cly - psis ne - sci - us.

g h cum se car - ni mi - scu - it sum - mi pa - tris fi - li - us.

a b cum se car - ni mi - scu - it sum - mi pa - tris fi - li - us.

i j b

ma - ri - ta - ri no - lu - it ver - bum pa - tris al - ti - us.

c d

ma - ri - ta - ri no - lu - it ver - bum pa - tris al - ti - us.

i j' nu - be - re non po - tu - it ca - ro glo - ri - o - si - us.]

c' d'

nu - be - re non po - tu - it ca - ro glo - ri - o - si - us.

[Refrain]

D Refr. [Gau - de no - va nu - pta. fi - des est et ve - ri - tas quod a car - ne de - i - tas

T Gau - de no - va nu - pta. fi - des est et ve - ri - tas quod a car - ne de - i - tas

f' f''

non fu - it cor - rup - ta.]

e' e'

non fu - it cor - rup - ta.

SOL SUB NUBE LATUIT – F and SG383 settings
Conductus (I16/334)

F, f. 354v (7,103): Strophes I-II, refrain; OxAdd, no. 62, f. 80r: Strophes III-VII

I Sol sub nube latuit, sed eclipsis nescius cum se carni miscuit summi patris filius. Maritari noluit verbum patris altius; nubere non potuit caro gloriosius.	The sun lay hidden behind a cloud, yet knew no eclipse when the son of the highest Father united himself with flesh. 5 The word of the Father did not wish to be married more nobly, and the flesh could not wed more gloriously.
Refr. Gaude nova nupta! Fides est et veritas quod a carne deitas non fuit corrupta.	Rejoice, new bride! 10 It is the faith and the truth that deity was not corrupted by the flesh.
II Qui solus eternus est et qui regit omnia, quod non erat factus est, nec tamen res alia. Illum, qui solutus est, stricta ligat fascia. Iacet qui immensus est inter animalia.	He who alone is eternal and who rules everything, 15 became what he was not, and yet did not become something else. Tight swaddling clothes bind the one who is unbounded He who is immeasurable 20 lies among the animals.
Refr. Gaude nova nupta! Fides est et veritas quod a carne deitas non fuit corrupta.	Rejoice, new bride! It is the faith and the truth that deity was not corrupted by the flesh.
III [Solis iubar temperat nubes molis nescia, Terra fructum generat quo dulcescunt omnia. Celo terras federat nova data gratia tollere qui venerat captivantis spolia.	25 Without knowing, the gentle cloud tempers the radiance of the sun. The earth bears a fruit that sweetens everything. With grace newly given, 30 he who had come to carry off the spoils of the hunter allies the earth with heaven.
Refr. Gaude nova nupta! Fides est et veritas quod a carne deitas non fuit corrupta.	Rejoice, new bride! It is the faith and the truth 35 that deity was not corrupted by the flesh.
IV O domus egregia! Domus, inquam, domini! Domus nulli pervia nisi deo homini.	O illustrious home! The home, I say, of the Lord! A home accessible to no one 40 except to God as man.

O mira materia! Partus, data nemini – nulli quidem propria nisi matri virgini.	O what a wondrous matter! It is a birth, permitted to no one – indeed appropriate to none other than the virgin mother.
Refr. Gaude nova nupta! Fides est et veritas quod a carne deitas non fuit corrupta.	45 Rejoice, new bride! It is the faith and the truth that deity was not corrupted by the flesh.
V Absque dei numine, sensu nullo capitur quod, de matre virgine, deus homo nascitur, qui mentis acumine qui loco, non clauditur; ens tamen in homine, iacet, sedet, graditur.	50 Without the divine power of God, no mind can comprehend that God is born as a man from a virgin mother, one who by acuity of intellect, who by place, is unconstrained; 55 yet, as an entity within a man, he still sleeps, sits, walks.
Refr. Gaude nova nupta! Fides est et veritas quod a carne deitas non fuit corrupta.	60 Rejoice, new bride! It is the faith and the truth that deity was not corrupted by the flesh.
VI Rubus non comburitur inter flammas ignium, nec mater transgreditur castitatis lilium. Hoc non intelligitur ab ullo mortalium nisi a quo fugitur Babilonis medium.	The bush was not consumed within the fire's flames, nor did the mother compromise the lily of her chastity. 65 Such a thing is not understood by any mortal except one who flees from Babylon's midst.
Refr. Gaude nova nupta! Fides est et veritas quod a carne deitas non fuit corrupta.	70 Rejoice, new bride! It is the faith and the truth that deity was not corrupted by the flesh.
VII Ab hoc ergo medio fugiendum primitus et vero refugio aderendum penitus, ut in dei filio noster fiat exitus, ad quem nos cum gaudio perducat Paraclitus.]	75 Hence, one must first of all flee from this midst and cling wholeheartedly to the true refuge, so that our end may lie in the son of God, to whom the Holy Spirit 80 may deliver us in joy.
Refr. Gaude nova nupta! Fides est et veritas	Rejoice, new bride! It is the faith and the truth quod a carne deitas non fuit corrupta.	that deity was not 84 corrupted by the flesh.

---	--

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 103, f. 354v: a2; Strophes I-II only, with refrain indicated by a capital and Strophe II entered in a space provided for it within the writing block at the end of the last system of the piece; refrain for II cued by “Gaude.” This piece and the two that follow it in F show a wider pattern of transmission than the works that surround them.

WI, fasc. 9, no. 37, f. 119v (110v): a2; Strophes I-II, IV-V only, with the notated refrain after I indicated by a guide letter “g” for an initial that was never executed. The three residual stanzas appear in the right margin opposite the final system of the piece, beginning with painted initials and with the refrain cue “Gaude” appearing only after V.

SG383 (Sankt Gallen, Stiftsbibliothek, Cod. Sang. 383; CH-SGs 383), collection 2, no. 4 (8),¹ p. 169: a2, presenting a mostly different version of the D voice with the exception of the refrain, and a variant final cauda in both parts with the exception of its first phrase; Strophe I only, with refrain indicated by a painted initial comparable to the one beginning the piece. As is typical of this source, the ligation of ornate passages, particularly in the caudae, does not appear to encode rhythmic information as precisely as the manuscripts more closely associated with the Notre Dame repertory. This version is supplied as an alternative reading following the one from F.

Text only:

OxAdd (Oxford, Bodleian Library, MS Add. A.44), no 62, f. 80r: Strophes I-VII complete, with VI entered additionally after I as well as after V (cf. F-Pn lat. 4880, below), and with the full refrain that follows I headed by an upper-case “G.” Subsequent stanzas begin with capitals and subsequent refrains are cued by “Gaude,” except for the one after II that merely gives “G.”; rubric: “Aliud dulce et curiosum carmen de eadem” (“another sweet and thoughtful song about the same,” i.e., “de nativitate Christi ex virgine” – “on the birth of Christ from a virgin” – from the rubric of the previous piece Sol oritur in sidere [K13/333]).

Graz 409 (Graz, Universitätsbibliothek, MS 409; A-Gu 409),² no. 2, f. 1r (beginning about halfway down the page): Strophes I-II, IV only; a likely red painted initial at the opening is obscured by the tight binding, while red-flecked capitals head the residual stanzas; complete refrain follows only after IV, headed by a capital; no other indications of refrain elsewhere; rubric in right margin opposite opening lines: “Conductus.”

D-B Phill. Ms. 1996, (Berlin, Deutsche Staatsbibliothek Phill. MS 1969), f. 292v: text only, Strophes I-II, IV only, with refrain. Images of this source are presently unavailable to me; details here come from the CPI website.

¹Images of this source are available here: <http://www.e-codices.unifr.ch/en/csg/0383>. Pieces are cited here first by collection and number within the collection, according to their appearance within the two series of Notre Dame conductus that appear within CH-SGs 383 from pp. 135-144 and 158-176 (4 and 10 pieces respectively). These two groups of pieces are separated by a collection of Sanctus and Agnus tropes, some of which are also in WI, fasc. 10. The following number in parentheses then gives the enumeration of the piece according to the total tally of Notre Dame conductus within this manuscript.

²Images available here: <https://unipub.uni-graz.at/obvugrscript/content/pageview/7435920>.

D-LEu 225 (Leipzig, Universitätsbibliothek, MS 225),³ f. 178v: Strophes I-II, IV-V only, with a capital opening the refrain after I, and with no further indications of it for the other stanzas, which are headed by capitals except for II, which starts with a lower-case, abbreviated “qui.”

F-Pn lat. 4880, f. 83v^b (beginning near the bottom of the second column on the page):⁴ Strophes I-II, IV, VI, V, VII, in that order, with full refrain following I headed by a capital, and cued as “Gaude” after II and IV only. Curiously, after V, VI is indicated as occurring again with “Rubus et cetera” (cf. OxAdd, above); ends with “amen.”

SOM 351 (F-SOM 351; Saint-Omer, Bibliothèque Municipale, 351),⁵ no. 33, f. 20r: Strophes I, II, IV only, with succeeding stanzas headed by capitals just slightly larger than the regular ones that begin each poetic line. The full refrain after I shows a regular capital; subsequent appearances after II and IV give “Gaude” with larger capitals. This is the last regular item in this portion of the MS. Empty space remaining on the folio is otherwise taken up with apparent pentrials and a series of seven hexameters written at the bottom of the leaf beginning “Armis intenti celum rapiunt violenti”

GB-Lbl Royal 7.A.VI, f. 107v: Strophes I-II, IV-V only, with full refrain after I and cue “Gaude” for the others. Images of this source are unavailable to me; details here come from Anderson, NDRC, 4:95, and the CPI website.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts:

Chanter et renvoisier seuil (Linker no. 255-6, Raynaud/Spanke no. 1001),⁶ attributed (except where noted below) to Thibaut de Blason, preserved with music a1 (T) in the following MSS (no text-only sources reported):

F-Pa 5198, p. 125.

F-Pn fr. 24406, f. 81r; unattributed.

F-Pn fr. 845, f. 74r.

F-Pn fr. 846, f. 25v.

F-Pn fr. 847, f. 152v.

F-Pn NAF 1050, f. 87v.

Pour mon chief reconforter (Linker no. 72-16, Raynaud/Spanke no. 885) from the Miracles de Nostre Dame of Gautier de Coincy, preserved with music a1 (T) in the following MSS (no text-only sources reported):

F-Pn fr. 2163, f. 103r.

³Images of this source are available here: <https://digital.ub.uni-leipzig.de/mirador/index.php>.

⁴Images found here: <https://gallica.bnf.fr/ark:/12148/btv1b100346007/f69.item.r=latin%204880#>.

⁵Images available here: <https://bvmm.irht.cnrs.fr/iiif/18232/canvas/canvas-1518944/view>.

⁶These two references point to the following catalogs: Robert White Linker, A Bibliography of Old French Lyrics, Romance Monographs, no. 31 (University, Mississippi: Romance Monographs, Inc., 1979); and Hans Spanke, Gaston Raynauds Bibliographie des altfranzösischen Liedes, erster Teil: ergänzt mit einer Diskographie und einem Register der Lieder nach Anfangsbuchstaben hergestellt von A. Bahat (Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1980).

F-Pn fr. 2193, f. 145r.

Notes on the Text: Attribution: this poem is attributed to Walter of Châtillon by Karl Strecker,⁷ with the ascription supported in the edition of Walter’s works by David Traill.⁸ The very next work in F, Ver pacis aperit (J32/366), also sets a poem by Walter. Traill’s and Strecker’s treatments have aided immensely in rendering the text given here. Textual notes: 1: here and elsewhere in the poem (e.g. lines 25-26), the sun and cloud are presumptive figures for Christ and the virgin’s womb, respectively, although Traill, Walter of Châtillon, 75, note 265, cites Alain de Lille (from PL, 205, col. 876) who associates the cloud with Christ’s humanity. This same conceit is apparent in the conductus Ex creata non creatus (I14/108), line 12, and Parit preter morem (E12/261), line 16, both of which refer to the flesh that Christ assumed with his incarnation as a cloud. Yet with the emphasis on marriage in the first stanza of the poem, the reference to Mary as the bride in the refrain, and considering the content of Strophe VI, the cloud metaphor here seems applicable to the Virgin as well. For additional expressions in the conductus repertory of sun and cloud imagery denoting Christ and the Virgin, see Quod promisit ab eterno (G6/295), lines 5-6 and 11; Ex Ade vitio (L31/-), line 28, near the end of Strophe II; Exceptivam actionem (K67/110), by Alain de Lille, Strophe VII (lines 61-68); A solis ortus cardine processit (F22/5), Strophe I (lines 1-10); In rosa verna lilium (H9/184), Strophe II (lines 8-14); Sol de sole progrediens (Q3/-), lines 15-18; and cf. Deus misertus hominis (B1/92), lines 29-30, ending Strophe III. See also the final line of the motetus of the double motet Stirps Iesse progreditur / Virga cultus nescia / Flos filius E[ius] (vdW 647/648/O16): “sol levi nube latuit” (“the sun lay beneath a light cloud.”). 2-4: a common conceit: God’s divinity was not compromised when he assumed human form as Christ, a concept reiterated in the language of the refrain, lines 9-12, q.v. 5-8: God sought to be incarnated as a human rather than some more exalted form, and Mary, the specific bride he chose, was low in social rank, being a carpenter’s wife. In contrast, humankind could not conceive of a more illustrious union than with the godhead. For an analogous expression, see the conductus Condimentum nostre spei (H8/67), line 2. 9-12 (refrain): more on how God preserved his divinity in human form; cf. the conductus Ex creata non creatus (I14/108), lines 17-18 and passim. 15-16: the incarnation effected a new manifestation of God as a man, separate from the God the Father, but also equivalent to him as per the doctrine of the Trinity. See the related expression in the conductus Relegentur ab area (C6/304), lines 13-14 (at the end of Strophe II): “assumensque mutabile / quod erat non mutavit” (“and [Christ] taking on the changeable [i.e., the form of a human] did not change what he was”); see also Parit preter morem (E12/261), lines 34-36. 17-20: the image of the baby Jesus in swaddling (see Luke, 2:7, 2:12) reflects God’s humbling of himself when he adopted human form, as is the fact that the animals in the manger were the first to behold the child. For the former point, see Philippians, 2:7-8,⁹ and these conductus: Magnificat ... qui iudicat (H10/203), line 41, Parit preter morem (E12/261), lines 11-12, In terram Christus expuit (J7/185), line 3, Cortex occidit littere (I6/69), line 21, Purgator criminum (F2/277), lines 27-33. For the latter point, which does not appear in the Bible, see the text for O magnum misterium et admirabile sacramentum, one of the Matins responsories for Christmas (a medieval Parisian version is available in the noted breviary F-Pn lat. 15181 on f. 135v [145v]).¹⁰ 25-26: see also the remarks for line 1 above. Here the ⁷Karl Strecker, Die Lieder Walters von Châtillon in der Handschrift 351 von St. Omer (Berlin: Wiedmannsche Buchhandlung, 1925).

⁸David A. Traill, Walter of Châtillon: The Shorter Poems; Christmas Hymns, Love Lyrics, and Moral-Satirical Verse (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 2013).

⁹Philippians, 2:7-8: “... sed semet ipsum exinanivit, formam servi accipiens in similitudinem hominum factus, et habitu inventus ut homo. Humiliavit semet ipsum, factus oboediens usque ad mortem, mortem autem crucis” (“But he [Christ] emptied himself, taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men, and devised in appearance as a man. He humbled himself, becoming obedient unto death, even to the death of the cross.”).

¹⁰For an image, see <https://gallica.bnf.fr/ark:/12148/btv1b8447768b/f298.item.r=15181>.

cloud (Mary’s womb), without realizing it, serves to mitigate the blinding effect of the sun (Christ); a similar image and its effect appears in Strophe VII of the conductus Beata viscera marie virginis cuius (K14/42) by Philip the Chancellor with music by Perotin. 25,2: the gender of “iubar” is construed here as neuter. 27-28: the earth is the Virgin, the fruit, Christ; see Traill, Walter of Châtillon, 75, note 266, for a concurring citation from Alain de Lille (from PL, 205, col. 970). 31-32: the “hunter” here is either death or the devil, his spoils are souls; cf. 2 Timothy, 2:26.¹¹ Traill, Walter of Châtillon, 75, note 267, cites Rabanus Maurus (from PL, 107, col. 277B) to the same effect. Note also the related references to the snare of the hunter/fowler in Psalms, 123:7, and 90:3, as well as in the opening lines of Philip the Chancellor’s motet Laqueus conteritur et liberati sumus (vdW 95/M7). 49-54: God’s incarnation in human form by a virgin mother is impossible to conceive by any stretch of the imagination except through his power alone. Furthermore, Christ retains God’s full divinity and is therefore unencompassible. Even so, Christ is also human and behaves accordingly. 61-62: the burning bush in which God appeared to Moses (see Exodus, 3:2-4), a frequent symbol associated with Mary’s virginity. 63-64: the lily, here used as an image for the Virgin’s chastity, is a frequent personal attribute for both her and Christ; see the opening lines of the conductus In rosa vernat lilium (H9/184). 68: cf. Revelation, 18:2-5;¹² although often used as a metaphor for Rome in the New Testament scriptures and throughout the book of Revelation, here Babylon serves as a figure for the realm of the devil; see, e.g., the conductus Deduc Syon uberrimas (G8/85), lines 26-28, and Hac in die Gedeonis (H26/149), lines 3-4, where the devil is referred to as the “prince of Babylon.”

Observations and Variants: TEXT: Multiple sources are used to supply the main text and that of the alternative reading given here. Hence, any variants from the above poem in F, OxAdd, and SG383 are collated. The two instances of Strophe VI that appear in OxAdd are identical. 2,2: SG383: eclipsim. 3,1: SG383: dum. 6,3: SG383: alcius. 40,2: reading “dei,” as in Strecker and Traill, against Anderson. 41,3: OxAdd: maneria, from WI. MUSIC: Syllabic/melismatic identity: 1: T and D of “non fuit corru[pta]” (line 12, last line of refrain) = 1a: T and D in the first phrase of the closing cauda on [cor]ru[pta]” that follows immediately; the identity is the same in both the F and SG383 versions, despite the fact that the continuation of the SG383 cauda proceeds completely differently in both voices immediately thereafter, and that the D elsewhere in SG383 is different from F and WI, except for the refrain. Line 4,3: D: SG383: 3 higher on “filius” to end of phrase. 6,1: D: SG383: c on first syll of “verbum” faded. 8,2: T: SG383: the figures over “[glori]o[sius]” look like a plicated si conjoined to a 2li, as the dashed bracket over the first element attempts to show. Refrain: line 10,1: starting with the beginning of the refrain and continuing up through the first phrase of the final cauda, the SG383 version is essentially the same as that of F and WI in both voices; earlier the SG383 D was mostly independent from the other musical sources. 10,4: the b-flat on “et [veritas]” is in WI.

¹¹2 Timothy, 2:26: “et resipiscant a diaboli laqueis a quo capti tenentur ad ipsius voluntatem” (“and they may recover themselves from the snares of the devil, by whom they are held captive at his will.”).

¹²Revelation, 18:2-5: “Et exclamavit in fortitudine, dicens: Cecidit, cecidit Babylon magna: et facta est habitatio daemoniorum, et custodia omnis spiritus immundi, et custodia omnis volucris immundae, et odibilis: quia de vino irae fornicationis ejus biberunt omnes gentes: et reges terrae cum illa fornicati sunt: et mercatores terrae de virtute deliciarum ejus divites facti sunt. Et audivi aliam vocem de caelo, dicentem: Exite de illa populus meus: ut ne participes sitis delictorum ejus, et de plagis ejus non accipiatis. Quoniam pervenerunt peccata ejus usque ad caelum, et recordatus est Dominus iniquitatum ejus” (“And he [the angel] cried out with a strong voice, saying: ‘Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen; and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every unclean spirit, and the hold of every unclean and hateful bird: Because all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication; and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her; and the merchants of the earth have been made rich by the power of her delicacies.’ And I heard another voice from heaven, saying: ‘Go out from her, my people; that you be not partakers of her sins, and that you receive not of her plagues. For her sins have reached unto heaven, and the Lord has remembered her iniquities.’”).

F, f. 355r (7,104): Strophes I-II; OxAdd, f. 64v (no. XX): Strophes III-V

1. [Ver pa - cis ap - pe - rit tel - lu - ris gre - mi - um.
2. [Cu - i plus con - tu - lit na - tu - ra sa - pe - re.
3. [In u - num con - flu - it to - tus fons gra - ci - e.
4. [Pa - tet ad o - cu - lum fa - cta trans - la - ti - o.
5. [Flens in mi - se - ri - is urbs ce - no - nen - si - bus.

a b

1. Ver pa - cis ap - pe - rit tel - lu - ris gre - mi - um.
2. Cu - i plus con - tu - lit na - tu - ra sa - pe - re.
3. [In u - num con - flu - it to - tus fons gra - ci - e.
4. [Pa - tet ad o - cu - lum fa - cta trans - la - ti - o.
5. [Flens in mi - se - ri - is urbs ce - no - nen - si - bus.

1. sa - lu - tis re - pe - rit re - mis re - mi - gi - um.
2. quem plus ex - tu - le - rit ho - no - ris ho - ne - re.
3. cu - ius ros im - bu - it rus con - sci - en - ci - e
4. ut per a - vun - cu - lum; so - ro - ris fi - li - o
5. pa - te - bit im - pi - is per hoc di - vor - ci - um.

a b'

1. sa - lu - tis re - pe - rit re - mis re - mi - gi - um.
2. quem plus ex - tu - le - rit ho - no - ris ho - ne - re.
3. cu - ius ros im - bu - it rus con - sci - en - ci - e
4. ut per a - vun - cu - lum; so - ro - ris fi - li - o
5. pa - te - bit im - pi - is per hoc di - vor - ci - um.

1. iam pe - trus ex - e - rit u - trum - que gla - di - um
2. qui ma - gis no - ve - rit si - bi dis - po - ne - re.
3. ri - vum quem ge - nu - it ri - gor iu - sti - ci - e.
4. gra - ci - e cu - mu - lum pro - pi - net un - cti - o;
5. pa - tres cum fi - li - is ge - nus e - gre - gi - um.

1. iam pe - trus ex - e - rit u - trum - que gla - di - um
2. qui ma - gis no - ve - rit si - bi dis - po - ne - re.
3. ri - vum quem ge - nu - it ri - gor iu - sti - ci - e.
4. gra - ci - e cu - mu - lum pro - pi - net un - cti - o;
5. pa - tres cum fi - li - is ge - nus e - gre - gi - um.

1. quo pro - cul ab - e - rit in - cur - sus ho - sti - um.]
 2. que vox que po - te - rit lin - gua re - tex - e - re.]
 3. flu - men pre - ter - flu - it mi - se - ri - cor - di - e.]
 4. que per mi - ra - cu - lum da - tur re - mi - gi - o.]
 5. ce - dun - tur gla - di - is mo - re bi den - ti - um.]

SG383, p. 169 (2,7): Strophes I, III, II, transmitted in that order; I only offered below

2. [Ver pa - cis ap - pe - rit tel - lu - ris gre - mi - um.]
 Ver pa - cis ap - pe - rit tel - lu - ris gre - mi - um.]

sa - lu - tis re - pe - rit re - mis re - mi - gi - um.]
 sa - lu - tis re - pe - rit re - mis re - mi - gi - um.]

iam pe - trus ex - e - rit u - trum - que gla - di - um
 iam pe - trus ex - e - rit u - trum - que gla - di - um

quo pro - cul ab - e - rit in - cur - sus ho - sti - um.]
 quo pro - cul ab - e - rit in - cur - sus ho - sti - um.]

VER PACIS APERIT – F and SG383 settings
 Conductus (J32/366)

F, f. 355r (7,104): Strophes I-II; OxAdd, f. 64v (no. 33): Strophes III-V

I Ver pacis apperit telluris gremium. Salutis reperit Remis remigium. Iam Petrus exerit utrumque gladium, quo procul aberit incursus hostium.	5 Peter now draws forth each of the two swords that will keep the enemies' incursions at a distance.
II Cui plus contulit natura sapere? Quem plus extulerit honoris honere? Qui magis noverit sibi disponere. Que vox que poterit lingua retexere?	10 On whom has Nature conferred more wisdom? Whom might she exalt more with honor's burden? One who will know how to better regulate himself. 15 What could one's voice, what could one's tongue recount of it?
III [In unum confluit totus fons gracie. Cuius ros imbit rus consciencie. Rivum, quem genuit rigor iusticie, flumen preterfluit misericordie.	20 An entire fountain of grace has coalesced into one person. The refreshing dew of his moral sense has soaked the countryside. A river of mercy has overtopped the bank that the watercourse of justice has created.
IV Patet ad oculum facta translatio, ut, per avunculum sororis filio, gracie cumulum propinet unctio, que per miraculum datur Remigio.	25 It is plain to the eye that the transfer was done so that the holy chrism, given miraculously to Saint Remigius, 30 may bestow an increase in grace through the uncle upon the sister's son.
V Flens in miseriis urbs Cenonensibus. patebit impiis per hoc divorcium. Patres cum filiis, genus egregium, ceduntur gladiis more bidentium.	35 Weeping in misery, the city of Sens will be laid open to the wicked through this separation. Fathers with their sons, a distinguished lineage, are felled by swords in the 40 manner of sacrificial sheep.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 104, f. 355r: a2; Strophes I-II only, with Strophe II entered in an empty space provided for it within the writing block at the end of the last system of the piece. Ver pacis is the first of two pieces to begin on this leaf in F, which is the last one to have a contemporaneous folio number.

SG383 (Sankt Gallen, Stiftsbibliothek, Cod. Sang. 383; CH-SGs 383), collection 2, no. 7 (11),¹ p. 173: a2, presenting a D voice largely differing from the one in F after the first eight syllables; Strophes I, III, II only, in that order; III and II are entered into the remaining empty space within the writing block at the bottom of the page following upon the last system of the work. They begin with capitals tinged with a fleck of red paint for decoration, the same color used for the entirety of the painted initial opening the piece. The SG383 reading appears here as an alternative transcription following that of F.

Text only:

OxAdd (Oxford, Bodleian Library, MS Add. A.44), no. 33, f. 64r: Strophes I-V, complete, with subsequent stanzas headed by capitals; rubric: “Planctus de translatione episcopi cenonensi[um]” (“Lament concerning the transfer of the bishop of Sens”).

SOM 351 (Saint-Omer, Bibliothèque Municipale, 351; F-SOM 351), no. 30, f. 19v:² Strophes I-V, complete, with succeeding stanzas headed by capitals that are occasionally larger than the ones that begin each poetic line.

Vat.3324 (Rome, Città del Vaticano, Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana, Vat. lat. 3324; I-Rvat Vat. lat. 3324), f. 114v (CXIVv):³ Strophes I, III-V only, with an apparent lowercase letter opening I, and with capitals heading the remaining stanzas. Although the items that precede the conductus text, as well as the single musical entry that follows it in this part of the source, are fully written-out liturgical chants entered on staff lines, the conductus text is inscribed in an otherwise empty segment occupying perhaps the top quarter of this leaf, the last in the MS. The poem is then succeeded by a musical setting of the responsory Congregati sunt deus ad devorandum that breaks off just before its end, leaving further empty space on the page that is filled with marginalia, erasures, pentrials (verbal and musical), an ownership colophon, and other jottings.

Music only: none

Contrafacts:

Ma joie me semont (Linker no. 24-13, Raynaud/Spanke no. 1924) attributed to Blondel de Nesle, preserved with music a1 (T) in the following MSS (no text-only sources reported).

F-Pa 5198, p. 118.

F-Pn fr. 24406, f. 108v; unattributed.

F-Pn fr. 845, f. 44v.

¹Images of this source are available here: <http://www.e-codices.unifr.ch/en/csg/0383>. Pieces are cited here first by collection and number within the collection, according to their appearance within the two series of Notre Dame conductus that appear within CH-SGs 383 from pp. 135-144 and 158-176 (4 and 10 pieces respectively). These two groups of pieces are separated by a collection of Sanctus and Agnus tropes, some of which are also in WI, fasc. 10. The following number in parentheses then gives the enumeration of the piece according to the total tally of Notre Dame conductus within this manuscript.

²Images available here: <https://bvmm.irht.cnrs.fr/iiif/18232/canvas/canvas-1518944/view>.

³Images from this source available here: https://digi.vatlib.it/view/MSS_Vat.lat.3324.

F-Pn fr. 847, f. 44r.

F-Pn NAF 1050, f. 83r.

Notes on the Text: Authorship: this poem is attributed to Walter of Châtillon by Karl Strecker;⁴ and this modern ascription is supported in the 2013 edition of Walter’s works by David Traill.⁵ The previous work in F, Sol sub nube latuit (I16/334), also sets a poem by this poet. The rendering of the text and the commentary given here have benefitted enormously from Traill’s and Strecker’s editions, as well as from the article on political conductus by Leo Schrade.⁶ Dating and historical context: This work is frequently characterized as a topical conductus written to celebrate the coronation of the King Philip II “Augustus” of France (crowned 1 November 1179 in Reims cathedral).⁷ However, both Strecker’s and Traill’s considerations of the text have emphasized its focus on Walter’s patron, William of Champagne (William of the White Hands, William of Blois), earlier archbishop of Sens, and since 1176 installed by Philip’s father Louis VII as archbishop of Reims. Interestingly, a similar stress is notable in the rubric added to the poem in OxAdd. As a result, although this piece is usually assigned to the year 1179, the earlier year of 1176 might be more apropos, whereby the poem would serve primarily to celebrate William’s appointment to the archbishopric of Reims, not Philip’s coronation. Nevertheless, this need not completely discount Schrade’s demonstrations of textual and conceptual corollaries between Ver pacis and the coronation liturgy, as the transfer of William to the see would have made his future role in anointing and crowning Philip Augustus nearly decisive. Although the cathedral of Reims was the traditional (though not exclusive) location for French royal coronations, in 1179 Pope Alexander III confirmed the right of the archbishop of Reims to crown the French monarch.⁸ Further information on the historical circumstances of this poem appears below. Textual notes: 1-2: cf. the Latin rondellus (refrain song) beginning Iam ver aperit terre gremium (M42/166), transmitted uniquely in F on f. 469r (F-11,42). Further textual correlations, from a hymn this time, arise in lines 15-16 and 39-40, q.v. On the peace that William’s transfer will bring to Reims, see lines 7-8. 3-4: some wordplay is in force here: Saint Remigius (437-13 January 533) was bishop of Reims from 459 to his death. His name not only means “oarsman,” but it also is assonant with the name of the city of Reims (Remensis) with which he was so closely associated. Remigius reappears in line 32, q.v. 5-6: see Luke, 22:38: “at illi dixerunt: ‘Domine ecce gladii duo hic,’ at ille dixit eis, satis est” (“but they said: ‘Lord, behold, here are two swords,’ but he said to them, ‘it is enough.’”). The metaphor of the two swords, which represent the powers of the spiritual and temporal ruler, respectively, was a common medieval allegory, often invoked during the Investiture controversy. As exemplified by Saint Bernard (De consideratione, book 4, chap. 3, para. 7),⁹ Christ delivered both “swords” to the pope, who then handed the ⁴Karl Strecker, Die Lieder Walters von Châtillon in der Handschrift 351 von St. Omer, (Berlin: Wiedmannsche Buchhandlung, 1925).

⁵David Traill, Walter of Châtillon: The Shorter Poems; Christmas Hymns, Love Lyrics, and Moral-Satirical Verse (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 2013).

⁶Leo Schrade, “Political Compositions in French Music of the 12th and 13th Centuries: The Coronation of French King,” Annales musicologiques, 1 (1953): 9-63, especially 18-28.

⁷This act was accomplished prior to the death of Philip’s father, Louis VII (reg. 1137-1180), a practice earlier adopted by the Capetian monarchs of France to avoid disputes over royal succession. Louis VII had undergone the same procedure on 25 October 1131.

⁸For this point, see Traill, Walter of Châtillon, lxiii. Philip’s grandfather, Louis VI, for example (not his father Louis VII, as Traill asserts), was crowned in Orléans by Daimbert, archbishop of Sens, on 3 August 1108.

⁹From De consideratione, book 4, chap. 3, para. 7: “Uterque ergo ecclesie et spiritalis scilicet gladius et materialis; sed is quidem pro ecclesia, ille vero et ab ecclesia exerendens. Ille sacerdotis, is militis manu, sed sane ad nutum sacerdotis, et iussum imperatoris” (“Both swords belong to the Church, the spiritual and the material; the one is to be used to defend the Church, but the other must be banished from the Church; the one is wielded by the priest, the other by the soldier, but of course with your [the pope’s] consent, and temporal power over to the sovereign for use as a privilege, not as a right.¹⁰ Traill (Walter of Châtillon, lxiii-lxiv) suggests, convincingly, that the figure of Peter here refers not to the pope, but to William, his representative; and that the fact that Peter wields both swords in lines 5-6 is appropriate because the Rémois archbishop exercised temporal as well as spiritual power in the region – he owned extensive lands, for example, and held the title of duke, a privilege granted to William of Champagne by King Louis VII. For more evocations connected to the image of the two swords and their symbolism, see lines 7-8, below; as well as the conductus Rex et sacerdos profuit (308/K49), lines 1-7 (Strophe I); Heu quo progreditur (J26/155), lines 5-8; and Dum medium silentium tenerent (K15/99), line 7. 5,3: a form of the word more typically spelled “exerit.” 7-8: in terms of the language of conflict and war raised in these lines, as Traill demonstrates with reference to the metaphor of the two swords (Walter, lxiii), William’s weapons will avail him against temporal as well as spiritual enemies (see lines 5-6). There were significant tensions generated by William’s predecessor at Reims, Louis VII’s brother Henry of France (ca. 1121-13 November 1175), which resulted in revolts against him by the townspeople of Reims in 1166-1167 and disputes with the nobility of the region. William’s appointment will therefore usher in a period of peace, as implied in line 1; see also lines 13-14. Such struggles may elucidate the war that Schrade finds difficult to uncover for Reims in the time prior to William’s appointment.¹¹ 9-24 (Strophes II-III): Traill, reinstating many of the determinations of Strecker, sees these stanzas as praises directed towards William, as in the first strophe of the poem; such a view effectively challenges Schrade’s attempts to associate this part of the poem inexorably with the coronation liturgy. Given that the third stanza is given over completely to water imagery, this factor adds further support for seeing William as the subject of the accolades in this section, as he is earlier identified in line 4 as a new “oarsman” (remigijs) for Reims. 10,2: an infinitive used as a substantive; see the DMLBS, s.v. “sapere,” 6, available through <https://logeion.uchicago.edu/sapere>. 13-14: this expression could perhaps refer to the earlier turmoil under Henry of France as archbishop of Reims; see the remarks on lines 7-8, above. 13,1: Traill, Walter, p. 66, gives “quis” for “qui” here. This emendation ends up making each of the statements in this stanza a question, which is quite reasonable and attractive. I, though, have chosen not to implement this change since the adopted reading is consistent in all the applicable sources and in all other editions I have consulted. 15-16: a direct quotation from the text of the hymn Sanctorum meritis inclita gaudia, line 17 (opening Strophe V), typically used at Vespers within the Common of Several Martyrs. A further citation from this hymn appears in the final couplet of the conductus poem, lines 39-40, q.v. For additional connections of this hymn to the conductus repertory, see the report on the contrafacts that attend the conductus Procurans odium (E9/274) in my edition of F-6,24. 22,1: the imagery of this stanza (see lines 19-24) suggests the connotation adopted here of “(water)course” or “direction” for the word “rigor.” Nevertheless its wider connotation indicates that William’s mercy will temper and prevail over any harshness of the law. 25-32 (Strophe IV): Traill (Walter, lxiii) sees this reference to the 1179 anointing of Philip as pertaining to a future event. This seems to make more sense than placing the poem directly with the coronation, as the emphasis in the lyric on the praise of the archbishop so completely overshadows any attention to the new ruler. Schrade (p. 22) could not imagine the poem’s creation except in light of the coronation, where the imbalance of praise would be difficult to explain. If, on the other hand, the poem was fashioned in response to William’s appointment to succeed the late Henry of France in 1176 as at the command of the Emperor”). The Latin text used here (I have modernized the punctuation) comes from the incunabulum edition of Pieter van Os (Zwolle, 1486); the English rendering is from George Lewis, trans., Saint Bernard: On Consideration (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1908), 104.

¹⁰Telling in this regard is the following passage from the Summa de Bono of Philip the Chancellor: “Et nota quod non sine causa dictum fuit illud: ‘Ecce duo gladii hic,’ quorum licet unus dicatur pertinere ad sacerdotium et alter ad regnum, tamen uterque in veritate ecclesie est” (“And note that not without cause was it said: ‘Behold, here are two swords’ [Luke, 22:38]. Although one of them is said to pertain to the priesthood and the other to the kingdom, nonetheless both actually belong to the church” – Latin text from Wicki, ed., Summa de Bono, 2:1048, lines 258-260.).

¹¹See Schrade, “Political Compositions,” 21.

archbishop, the discrepancy is easier to accommodate. 27-28: William of the White Hands was the brother of King Louis VII's wife, Adela of Champagne,¹² he is thus the “uncle” who administers the unction to the “sister's son,” King Philip Augustus. The anointing of the new king will grant an ever greater share of grace to William's nephew. 29-32: the reference to “unctio” here is to one of Reim's most significant religious relics, the holy chrism or oil that figured in the liturgy for the royal coronations held in the cathedral. Part of the coronation ceremony involved anointing the royal personages with the chrism that, according to legend, had been miraculously furnished by the Holy Spirit to Saint Remigius (see notes to lines 3- 4), and which he used to baptize Clovis I, the first king of the Franks and founder of the Merovingian dynasty. The baptism occurred on Christmas Day, 496, upon Clovis's conversion to Christianity. For additional invocations of the chrism associated with Saint Remigius and Reims, see the conductus Ex oliva Remensium (H5/109), lines 1-2. 33-40 (Strophe V): this rather curious stanza has prompted several explanations. Strecker (p. 57) regarded it as a joking (scherzhaft) reference to the likely consequences of William's departure. Schrade took pains to justify it by illuminating a series of violent conflicts from 1146-1189 that erupted between the citizens of Sens and the clergy over a communal charter. Even so, he demurs that these events do not serve to explain the whole of the stanza, and ends up questioning whether this final strophe was originally part of the poem, suggesting that, if original, it may have been omitted if performed in the context of the coronation (pp. 26-28). Most recently Traill (p. lxxix) suggests an interpretation redolent of Strecker, proposing that this is an overblown expression of civic chauvinism on the part of the inhabitants of Reims, who now can claim the glory of snatching their archbishop away from Sens. As a result, Sens will now suffer only misfortune (perhaps in a manner similar to how Reims suffered under William's predecessor, Henry). 39-40: another direct quotation (see notes to lines 15-16) from the hymn Sanctorum meritis, here from earlier in the work at line 13 (beginning Strophe IV).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: As multiple sources are used to supply the main text and the alternative musical reading given here, any variants from the above poem in F, OxAdd, and SG383 are reported. 11,1: F,SOM 351: quam, from OxAdd, following Traill; SG383: iam; this stanza not included in Vat.3324. 12,2: OxAdd,SG383: onere. 19,3: SG383: inbuit. 39,1: against OxAdd and SOM 351, Vat.3324 has “cedentur,” the future tense, adopted by Traill (Walter, 66), which could also serve; no further sources transmit this stanza. MUSIC: No variants from the two versions presented in transcription. Lines 7,3-8: T: Schrade, “Political Compositions,” 40, makes a claim that this segment of the piece draws on borrowed liturgical chant, specifically the conclusion of the antiphon Unxerunt Salomonem over the text “vivat rex in eternum.” I find this assertion unconvincing, as well as the corollary (on. p. 41) that suggests this relationship proves that the composition of the Latin song preceded its French contrafact. SG383 version: the text of Strophe I alone is given in this transcription, rather than the three that appear in the MS. Strokes marking divisions appear as in the source; unusually, there are no final strokes to close the piece in either part, so the final barline is an editorial addition.

¹²Adela lived from ca. 1140-4 June 1206; she reigned as queen from 13 November 1160 to 18 September 1180, upon the accession of her son, Philip.

NOVE GENITURE — F and Moosburg settings
 Conductus (113/224)

F, f. 355r (7,105): Strophe I; Graz 409, f. 1v (no. 8): Strophes II-V

I.

S
 8 1. [No - ve ge - ni - tu - re ce - dit ius na - tu - re.
 2. [Au - di non au - di - tum. ser - va non at - tri - tum
 3. [Or - tus ve - ri de - i quo re - spi - rant re - i.
 4. [To - tum re - se - ra - tur. quid - quid te - ge - ba - tur.
 5. [Pa - tet qui de - scen - dens la - pis est a - scen - dens.

T
 8 1. No - ve ge - ni - tu - re ce - dit ius na - tu - re.
 2. Au - di non au - di - tum. ser - va non at - tri - tum
 3. Or - tus ve - ri de - i quo re - spi - rant re - i.
 4. To - tum re - se - ra - tur. quid - quid te - ge - ba - tur.
 5. Pa - tet qui de - scen - dens la - pis est a - scen - dens.

S
 8 1. con - tra car - nis iu - ra. pa - rit vir - go pu - ra
 2. vir - gi - ne - um flo - rem. ma - ter pre - ter mo - rem.
 3. mi - se - ros e - dux - it. gra - ti - a re - dux - it.
 4. clau - sum sub fi - gu - ra pro - de - unt ob - scu - ra.
 5. ful - get flos in - si - gnis ex - tra mi - cans i - gnis.

T
 8 1. con - tra car - nis iu - ra. pa - rit vir - go pu - ra
 2. vir - gi - ne - um flo - rem. ma - ter pre - ter mo - rem.
 3. mi - se - ros e - dux - it. gra - ti - a re - dux - it.
 4. clau - sum sub fi - gu - ra pro - de - unt ob - scu - ra.
 5. ful - get flos in - si - gnis ex - tra mi - cans i - gnis.

[Refrain]

S
 8 1. nov - o quo - dam iu - re pre - mi - tur na - tu - ra na - to chri - to.]
 2. ir - ri - tans - que ri - tum re - ti - net pu - do - rem. na - to chri - sto.]
 3. di - es no - stre spe - i. di - no es hec il - lux - it na - to chri - sto.]
 4. iam - que vi - du - a - tur li - te - re li - tu - ra na - to chri - sto.]
 5. in - ter ru - bum splen - dens non est o - pus si - gnis na - to chri - sto.]

T
 8 1. nov - o quo - dam iu - re pre - mi - tur na - tu - ra na - to chri - sto.
 2. ir - ri - tans - que ri - tum re - ti - net pu - do - rem. na - to chri - sto.]
 3. di - es no - stre spe - i. di - no es hec il - lux - it na - to chri - sto.]
 4. iam - que vi - du - a - tur li - te - re li - tu - ra na - to chri - sto.]
 5. in - ter ru - bum splen - dens non est o - pus si - gnis na - to chri - sto.]

(Moosburg reading follows)

Moosburg, f. 233r (ccxxxiii^r) (no. 7): Strophe I only offered below

2. T

No - ve ge - ni - tu - re ce - dit ius na - tu - re

con - tra car - nis iu - ra. pa - rit vir - go pu - ra nov - o quo - dam iu - re pre - mi - tur na - tu - ra. Na - to chri - sto.

[Refrain]

NOVE GENITURE

Conductus (I13/224)

F, f. 355r (7,105): Strophe I; Graz 409, f. 1v (no. 8): Strophes II-V

I Nove geniture cedit ius nature. Contra carnis iura. parit virgo pura. Novo quodam iure premitur natura, Refr. nato Christo.	The law of nature yields to a novel birth. Opposing the laws of the flesh, a chaste virgin gives birth. 5 Nature is overcome by a new kind of law when Christ is born.
II [Audi non auditum! Serva, non attritum virgineum florem, mater preter morem irritansque ritum, retinet pudorem Refr. nato Christo.	Hear the unheard-of! A handmaiden, with her virginal 10 flower unscathed, a mother, contrary to custom and invalidating established practice, retains her chastity when Christ is born.
III Ortus veri dei, quo respirant rei, miseros eduxit, gratia reduxit. Dies nostre spei, dies hec illuxit Refr. nato Christo.	15 The birth of the true God, through whom the guilty breathe again, has led away the wretched and led them back in grace. This is the day of our hope, 20 the day that dawned when Christ is born.
IV Totum reseratur. quidquid tegebatur, clausum sub figura. Prodeunt obscura, iamque viduatur litere litura Refr. nato Christo.	Now fully disclosed is whatever was concealed and hidden beneath a cipher. 25 What was obscure comes forth, and now the stain of the Old Law is left bereft when Christ is born.
V Patet qui descendens lapis est ascendens. Fulget flos insignis, extra micans ignis, inter rubum splendens, non est opus signis Refr. nato Christo.]	It is plain that he who is descending 30 is the precious stone ascending. An exceptional flower shines forth, a fire glittering on the outside, glowing within the bush. There is no need for symbols 35 when Christ is born.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no 105, f. 355r: a2; Strophe I only, occupying two full systems with no provisions for further text, as is the case with the next piece in the MS, the unique Homo per potentiam (J33/161). The refrain is not given any special treatment (not even a preceding period), other than being set off by prior and succeeding strokes in both voices, which call attention to it because it is the shortest phrase in the work. Nove geniture is the second of two pieces to begin on this leaf in F, which is the last one to have a contemporaneous folio number.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 32, f. 117 (108v): a2, with a D differing from F at the beginnings of several interior phrases; Strophes I-V, complete, with II-V entered in the bottom margin outside the writing block and placed underneath the second system of the following work in the MS, Nulli beneficium (H7/229). Each stanza is inscribed as a single long line, headed by a painted green or red initial, with the guide letters for II and V still visible. The initial for IV either was never painted or has worn nearly completely away. Like F the refrain for I is not highlighted in any way. The refrains for II-V are mostly written out, with the “christo” (otherwise spelled “χpisto”) of II and V abbreviated and largely swallowed up by the binding, although it seems a scribe has re-entered the final refrain word in V above “nato” with a signal for insertion. Only a Greek chi (χ), possibly with a superscript “o,” seems visible for the last refrain word in II.

Tort (Tortosa, Biblioteca de la Catedral, Cód. 97; E-TO Cód. 97), no. 2a, f. 81v (i.e., the front flyleaf of the third of three MSS bound together in this composite source): a2, with a D closer to F than W1; Strophe I only. Images of this source are presently unavailable to me; it is transcribed as well as collated in Anderson, NDRC, 4:24 and 94, which along with the CPI website furnishes the details given here. Although the MS is described in DIAMM, which indicates it is written in Aquitanian point notation with shapes resembling 14th-century semibreves on dry-point lines, Nove geniture is not included in the DIAMM inventory of this source.

Moosburg (Munich, Universitätsbibliothek, Cim 100 [olim 2° Cod. Ms. 156]; D-Mu Cim 100; The Moosburg Gradual), no. 7, f. 233r (ccxxxiii^r): a1 (T), with a melody slightly more independent from the other sources; that of Strophe I is given as an alternative reading here. Strophes I-V, complete, with the music of each stanza written out in full and all opening with painted initials; the ones heading II-V are slightly smaller than that of I. The refrain is also written out in full each time, preceded by the cue “℞.” and headed with a capital; rubric: “De Nativitate domini” (“On the Birth of the Lord”).

CtcR.9.11 (Cambridge, Trinity College, R.9.11; GB-Ctc R.9.11), f. 152v: a1 (T): Strophe I only, entered twice, the second time without music, missing the third and seventh lines of the poem, and occurring after the intervening text of the first strophe of the conductus Licet eger cum egrotis (L51/-), amidst a number of pentrials. This source is presently unavailable to me; it is collated in Anderson, NDRC, 4:94, which along with the CPI website furnishes the details given here.

Text only:

Graz 409 (Graz, Universitätsbibliothek, MS 409; A-Gu 409), no. 8, f. 1v: text alone of Strophes I-V, complete, although neumes are provided for the preceding work, the conductus Amor patris et filii (P30/-). II-V begin with capitals tinged with a fleck of red paint for decoration, the same color used for the painted initial opening the piece. The refrain is not highlighted in any special way and is written with the second word abbreviated in I-IV; that of V, however, is inscribed fully and spelled “χpicto,” using three Greek characters. A generous space before the start of the piece implies an expected rubric was either omitted or erased, although an existing erasure that does appear at this point looks like it belongs more to Amor patris et filii through its proximity to the end of that poem.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1-14 (Strophes I-II): These two stanzas are yet another demonstration in the conductus repertory of the wonder that attended the astounding event of the Virgin Mary’s bearing of Jesus; for a selection of some additional nods to this commonplace, see the notes to the conductus Lene spirat spiritus (H16/194), line 5. 22-28 (Strophe IV): another frequent trope, that of the birth of Christ signaling the New Covenant overturning the older Mosaic Law (which gets a brief first nod in lines 5-7). For additional information and a provisional list of pieces that relate to the Old Law/New Law topic, see the notes to the conductus Legem dedit olim deus (I21/192) and my article on the subject, “Vetus abit littera: From the Old to the New Law.”¹ 22-25: figures in the Old Testament conceal the truths of the New that are revealed through Jesus’s birth. 26-28: the New Covenant has completely superceded the Old Law; the language here calls forth the image of a wife who has been widowed. 29-30: here the figure that descends is most likely the godhead incarnated on earth in the form of the son, while that son, Jesus himself in the image of a stone (as in 1 Peter, 2:3-5, e.g.),² ascends to heaven after his sacrificial death in human form. Both figures are one and the same (equal, yet separate) thanks to the doctrine of the Trinity. For the many biblical references that figuratively cast Christ as a stone, see the notes for the conductus Lex honus importabile (I19/197), beginning with line 15. The subsequent references to the shining flower and the glowing fire prompted me to characterize the stone in line 30 as a precious one, but the same word (lapis) appears in biblical contexts symbolic of Christ whether the stone is a gem or not. 31: the figure of a flower is frequently associated with Christ; see Isaiah, 11:1,³ where the root refers to the Virgin Mary; the image often arises in conductus poetry. 32: Christ and the Holy Spirit are often portrayed as fire. In addition to the image of the burning bush alluded to in line 33, see, for some examples, the emanation of the Holy Spirit as fire at Pentecost (Acts, 2:1-4),⁴ in John the Baptist’s prediction of Jesus’s coming (Matthew 3:11) to baptize mankind in fire,⁵ Jesus’s appearance in fire in heaven (2 Thessalonians, 1:7-8),⁶ and the Lord portrayed as a jealous god of fire (Deuteronomy, 4:24).⁷ 33: the burning bush, not consumed by the fire in ¹Thomas B. Payne, “Vetus abit littera: From the Old to the New Law in the Parisian Conductus,” Ars Antiqua: Music and Culture in Europe c. 1150-1330, Gregorio Bevilacqua and Thomas B. Payne, eds., 163-204, Speculum Musicae, no. 40 (Turnhout: Brepols, 2020).

²1 Peter, 2:3-5: “si tamen gustastis quoniam dulcis est Dominus. Ad quem accedentes lapidem vivum, ab hominibus quidem reprobatum, a Deo autem electum, et honorificatum: et ipsi tamquam lapides vivi supraedificamini, domus spiritualis, sacerdotium sanctum, offerre spirituales hostias, acceptabiles Deo per Jesum Christum” (“If so be [i.e., if you are like newborns who want to taste the figurative milk that will lead you to salvation], you have tasted that the Lord is sweet. Unto whom coming, as to a living stone, rejected indeed by men, but chosen and made honourable by God: Be you also as living stones built up, a spiritual house, a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ.”).

³Isaiah, 11:1: “Et egredietur virga de radice Iesse, et flos de radice eius ascendet” (“And a shoot shall come forth out of the root of Jesse, and a flower shall rise up out of his root.”).

⁴Acts, 2:1-3: “Et cum complerentur dies Pentecostes, erant omnes pariter in eodem loco: et factus est repente de caelo sonus, tamquam advenientis spiritus vehementis, et replevit totam domum ubi erant sedentes. Et apparuerunt illis dispertitae linguae tamquam ignis, seditque supra singulos eorum: et repleti sunt omnes Spiritu Sancto, et coeperunt loqui variis linguis, prout Spiritus Sanctus dabat eloqui illis” (“And when the days of the Pentecost were accomplished, they were all together in one place: And suddenly there came a sound from heaven, as of a mighty wind coming, and it filled the whole house where they were sitting. And there appeared to them parted tongues as it were of fire, and it sat upon every one of them: And they were all filled with the Holy Spirit, and they began to speak with divers tongues, according as the Holy Spirit gave them to speak.”).

⁵Matthew 3:11: “Ego quidem baptizo vos in aqua in poenitentiam: qui autem post me venturus est, fortior me est, cujus non sum dignus calceamenta portare: ipse vos baptizabit in Spiritu Sancto, et igni” (“I indeed baptize you in the water unto penance, but he that shall come after me, is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear; he shall baptize you in the Holy Ghost and fire.”).

⁶2 Thessalonians, 1:7-8): “et vobis, qui tribulamini, requiem nobiscum in revelatione Domini Jesu de caelo cum angelis virtutis ejus, in flamma ignis dantis vindictam iis qui non noverunt Deum, et qui non obediunt Evangelio Domini nostri Jesu Christi” (“And to you who are troubled, rest with us when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven, with the angels of his power: In a flame of fire, giving vengeance to them who know not God, and who obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.”).

⁷Deuteronomy, 4:24: “... quia Dominus Deus tuus ignis consumens est, Deus aemulator” (“... Because the Lord your God is a consuming fire, a jealous God.”).

which God appeared to Moses (in Exodus, 3:2-4),⁸ is a common symbol associated with Mary’s virginity, just as the fire within it is associated with Christ. 34-35: with the overturning of the Old Law through Christ’s incarnation, its allegories, figures, and symbols no longer serve a purpose.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: Graz 409 is preferred here over W1 to supply the residual strophes for this work. Its readings are generally superior to the variants in W1, and in nearly every case they concur with Moosburg. 15,1-16,1: Graz 409: the first two of these four words are obscured by wormholes on the recto, the remainder by a fold in the parchment on the verso side of the leaf; from W1, Moosburg. 22,1: Graz 409: obscured by a fold in the parchment; from W1, Moosburg. 27,2: Graz 409: this word is hidden by a fold in the parchment; the adopted reading is an editorial conjecture after Anderson, NDRC, 4:xiv; W1: litera; Moosburg: lectura. 29,3: Graz 409: descendit; from W1, Moosburg. 32,3: Graz 409: all but the last letter obscured by a fold in the parchment; from W1, Moosburg. 34,4: Graz 409: ignis; from W1, Moosburg. MUSIC: F version: no variants. Notice the close audible correspondence of the opening of Nove geniture with the first phrase of the two-part conductus Ave maris stella ave (J53/33), even though each voice in both pieces has a different contour, together the two songs differ in sound only in the penultimate (in the D) and final syllables (T and D) of the phrase. Line 2,1: DT: F: the f/b tritone on the first syllable of “cedit” sounds a little off, but the reading is the same in W1; Tort, the only other polyphonic source, shows the third g/b. Moosburg version: the strokes of division that occur at the ends of phrases, and frequently within them as well, are very thin and inconsistently vary in length from exceeding the height of the staff to encompassing a staff space or two. In the transcription offered here, only the ones that close the phrases are included.

⁸Exodus, 3:2-4: “Apparuitque ei Dominus in flamma ignis de medio rubi: et videbat quod rubus arderet, et non combureretur. Dixit ergo Moyses: ‘Vadam, et videbo visionem hanc magnam, quare non comburatur rubus.’ Cernens autem Dominus quod pergeret ad videndum, vocavit eum de medio rubi, et ait: ‘Moyses, Moyses.’ Qui respondit: ‘Adsum’ ” (“And the Lord appeared to him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush: and he saw that the bush was on fire and was not burnt. And Moses said: ‘I will go and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt.’ And when the Lord saw that he went forward to see, he called to him out of the midst of the bush, and said: ‘Moses, Moses.’ And he answered: ‘Here I am.’ ”).

HOMO PER POTENTIAM

Conductus (J33/161)

F, f. 355v (7,106)

I

D
8 [Ho - [Ho]-mo per po - ten - ti - am

T
8 Ho - [Ho]-mo per po - ten - ti - am

a

a1

si - mi - lis ef - fi - ci - tur pa - tri. per pru - den - ti - am fi - li - um pro - se - qui - tur.

a2

a3

b

si - mi - lis ef - fi - ci - tur pa - tri. per pru - den - ti - am fi - li - um pro - se - qui - tur.

c

b

c

per be - ni - gnum spi - ri - tum se - qui - tur pa - ra - cli - tum. qui cum sit be - ni - gni - tas

c

b

c

per be - ni - gnum spi - ri - tum se - qui - tur pa - ra - cli - tum. qui cum sit be - ni - gni - tas

d

d'

d''

re - ctas do - cet se - mi - tas mo - rum dans dul - ce - di - nem. vi - te

d

d'

d''

re - ctas do - cet se - mi - tas mo - rum dans dul - ce - di - nem. vi - te

re - cti - tu - di - nem.]

re - cti - tu - di - nem.

HOMO PER POTENTIAM

Conductus (J33/161)

F, f. 355v (7,106)

I Homo, per potentiam, similis efficitur patri. Per prudentiam filium prosequitur. Per benignum spiritum sequitur paraclitum, qui, cum sit benignitas, rectas docet semitas, morum dans dulcedinem, vite rectitudinem.	Man, through might, is made like to the Father. Through prudence he follows after the Son. 5 Through a kind spirit he follows the Paraclete, who, since he is kindness, teaches the straight paths, granting sweetness of character 10 and rectitude to life.
---	--

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 106, f. 355v: a2; Strophe I, complete, with no provisions for further text; a unique transmission of text and music.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Here the various members of the Trinity contribute distinct, positive qualities to mankind: might, prudence, and kindness are respectively bestowed by the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit or Paraclete. For some other conductus poems in which the three members of the Trinity are prominent, see the opening lines of Condimentum nostre spei (H8/67) and Veri floris sub figura (C1/369), lines 22-28 (Strophe IV). 1-3,1: on God's might, see Ephesians, 6:10.¹ On man made in the image of God the Father, there are numerous references; for the first, see Genesis, 1:27.² 3,2-4: on the instilling of prudence in children through their parents' teaching, see Proverbs 4:1.³ 5-10: for the Paraclete see, e.g., John, 14:26.⁴ 7: on the benignity of God ¹Ephesians, 6:10: "De cetero, fratres, confortamini in Domino, et in potentia virtutis ejus" ("Finally, brethren, be strengthened in the Lord, and in the might of his power.").

²Genesis, 1:27: "Et creavit Deus hominem ad imaginem suam: ad imaginem Dei creavit illum, masculum et feminam creavit eos" ("And God created man to his own image: to the image of God he created him: male and female he created them.").

³Proverbs 4:1: "Audite, filii, disciplinam patris, et attendite ut sciatis prudentiam" ("Hear, ye children, the instruction of a father, and attend that you may know prudence.").

⁴John, 14:26: "Paraclitus autem Spiritus Sanctus, quem mittet Pater in nomine meo, ille vos docebit omnia, et suggeret vobis omnia quaecumque dixero vobis" ("But the Paraclete, the Holy Spirit, whom the Father will send in my name, he will teach you all things, and bring all things to your mind, whatsoever I shall have said to you.").

and the Holy Spirit, see Wisdom 1:6,⁵ and Titus, 3:4-5.⁶ 8: see Psalm 26:11,⁷ Isaiah 26:7,⁸ Isaiah, 40:3,⁹ and its quotation in Matthew, 3:3, Mark, 1:3, and Luke 3:4.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: F: no variants. MUSIC: The T voice features a significant amount of varied repetition; correspondences are marked above the staff. The first two D phrases are also strongly related by partial transposition. Notice the following syllabic/melismatic correlation. Syllabic/melismatic identity: 1: T of the opening caud on “[Ho]mo” (line 1,1, opening the piece) = 1a: the closely related T in lines 1, 2, and 3, of the opening three phrases in the piece, the first sine littera portion of the work. Line 3,1: the music does not respect the enjambment at the beginning of the line. It places a short melismatic extension before this word followed by a rest before the syntactic unit is completed.

⁵Wisdom 1:6: “Benignus est enim spiritus sapientiae, et non liberabit maledicum a labiis suis: quoniam renum illius testis est Deus, et cordis illius scrutator est verus, et linguae ejus auditor” (“For the spirit of wisdom is benevolent, and will not acquit the evil speaker from his lips: for God is witness of his inmost thoughts, and he is a true searcher of his heart, and a hearer of his tongue.”).

⁶Titus, 3:4-5: “Cum autem benignitas et humanitas apparuit Salvatoris nostri Dei, non ex operibus justitiae, quae fecimus nos, sed secundum suam misericordiam salvos nos fecit per lavacrum regenerationis et renovationis Spiritus Sancti ...” (“But when the goodness and kindness of God our Saviour appeared: Not by the works of justice, which we have done, but according to his mercy, he saved us, by the laver of regeneration, and renovation of the Holy Ghost ...”).

⁷Psalm 26:11: “Legem pone mihi, Domine, in via tua, et dirige me in semitam rectam, propter inimicos meos” (“Set me, O Lord, a law in thy way, and guide me in the right path, because of my enemies.”).

⁸Isaiah 26:7: “Semita justi recta est, rectus callis justi ad ambulandum” (“The way of the just is right, the path of the just is right to walk in.”).

⁹Isaiah, 40:3: “Vox clamantis in deserto: Parate viam Domini, rectas facite in solitudine semitas Dei nostri” (“The voice of one crying in the desert: Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the wilderness the paths of our God..”).

O LEVIS AURULA
(J34/235)

F, f. 355v (7,107)

D
[O
[Gens

le - vis au - ru - la cur cre - du - la vi - de - ba - ris
ni - mis a - spe - ra con - si - de - ra quod an - ne - ctor

T
O
Gens

le - vis au - ru - la cur cre - du - la vi - de - ba - ris
ni - mis a - spe - ra con - si - de - ra quod an - ne - ctor pri - mi - tus. quis vel qua - lis et cur e - rit ex - i - tus.

nex - i - bus. sic in ve - stris co - gor mo - ri ma - ni - bus.

pri - mi - tus. quis vel qua - lis et cur e - rit ex - i - tus.
nex - i - bus. sic in ve - stris co - gor mo - ri ma - ni - bus.

im - pri - mi se - du - la. cur vin - cu - la ve - lox fert in - te - ri - tus per te flo - ri - ge - ra sint pro - spe - ra pro ma - lo - rum men - ti - bus.

im - pri - mi se - du - la. cur vin - cu - la ve - lox fert in - te - ri - tus per te flo - ri - ge - ra sint pro - spe - ra pro ma - lo - rum men - ti - bus.

b mors ex - tre - ma qui - a mo - rtis an - he - li - om - ne ma - lum ma - lis ma - lo fru - en - ti -

a mors ex - tre - ma qui - a mo - rtis an - he - li - om - ne ma - lum ma - lis ma - lo fru - en - ti -

(b') (b'')
- tus.]
(a') (a'') - bus.]

- tus.
- bus.

O LEVIS AURULA

Conductus (J34/235)

F, f. 355v (7,107)

I O levis aurula, cur credula videbaris primitus? Quis vel qualis et cur erit exitus? Imprimi sedula cur vincula velox fert interitus mors extrema quia mortis anhelitus? II Gens, nimis aspera, considera quod annector nexibus. Sic in vestris cogor mori manibus. Per te, florigera, sint prospera pro malorum mentibus, omne malum malis malo fruentibus.	O light little breeze, why did you at first seem reliable? What will my passing be, of what type, and why? 5 Why does swift ruin bring chains eager to be pressed upon me, since my dying gasp will mean the end of death? O people, far too unkind, 10 consider how I am bound by my restraints. In this way I am compelled to die at your hands. Thanks to you, O lady who bore the flower, there may be circumstances favorable 15 towards the minds of evil men, but may every evil befall the evil ones who delight in evil.
---	--

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 107, f. 355v: a2; Strophes I-II complete, with II entered in a space provided for it within the writing block at the end of the last system of the piece. This is the last folio in the MS whose recto bears an original, painted foliation number; unique transmission of both text and music.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Attribution: this lyric has been posited for attribution to Philip the Chancellor by Anderson in NDRC, 5:xxvii, but without any supporting evidence for his decision. This same ascription has been championed with much greater conviction by David A. Traill (in “More Poems by Philip the Chancellor,” The Journal of Medieval Latin, 16 [2006]: 164-181; see particularly pp. 178-181). Especially significant in the proposal for Philip’s authorship is the conceit of Christ speaking directly in the first person¹ and the occurrence of the unusual word considera (line 10), which appears relatively frequently in Philip’s poetry, but is rarely encountered elsewhere, according to Traill. Poetic structure: although the strophes as emended (see below) are formally identical, the structure of the stanzas is rather unusual, as the various ways to divide the verses within them admit no regular patterning in terms of line length. As a result, both Anderson (who follows the disposition earlier adopted by Guido Maria Dreves in AH 21,² and Traill (“More Poems”) offer differing ways to format the lyric. The presentation of the text in the unique source F, in terms of its punctuation and division into musical phrases, suggests that longer lines may be considered as appropriate – at least for the opening verses – but the resulting lack of balance among the lines and the frequency of internal rhyme still raises questions as to whether this may be the best choice for presentation; it also admits lines that have no corresponding rhyme elsewhere in the stanza. As a result, I have adopted a course that divides lines at each identically recurring bi-syllabic rhyme. If a musical phrase ends with a word without a rhyming counterpart elsewhere in the strophe, it is considered part of a single poetic verse. This results in two eight-line stanzas, each with a rhyme scheme of 2(aabb), and a nearly regular series of 2(6, 4, 7, 11 / 6, 4, 7, and 12) syllables for the lines, all with proparoxytonic accents. It is conceivable that the final lines of each half-stanza may originally have been equal in syllable count, but the extant musical setting argues against this in its disposition of notes to syllables. Conceivably, this irregularity between the half-stanzas may have moved the scribe to intervene to equalize the poetry, as the transmission in F omits a syllable from the very last line of the poem. See the following remarks. Emendations: as the text stands in F, a syllable is missing somewhere in the final line of the second strophe. The completion of line 16 adopted here relies on the suggestions and arguments given by Traill in his edition (“More Poems,” pp. 179-180); it also accepts Traill’s and Anderson’s reading of “erit” for line 4,6 as initially proposed by Dreves in AH 21 (see the report on these lines in the observations below for further details). Translation: Traill’s translation of this text has exerted much weight on my own rendering, and although Christopher Page raises the possibility that the strophes offer a dialogue between the Jews and Christ, rather than an address by Jesus alone, this conceit has not stuck me as particularly convincing in the poem as it stands, and so has not been followed here.³ Textual notes: 1-3: Christ speaks throughout this poem of his impending death. The opening line may be also be understood as “O fickle [public] opinion.” Traill (“More Poems,” pp. 179-180) sees the breeze image in these lines primarily as a nautical metaphor (an earlier favorable wind has later proved unreliable), with the possible opportunity of reading it as a figure for the shifting of public opinion that Christ faced during his last days. He is reluctant, though, to view the expression in this sense without the presence of the adjective popularis (à la Cicero, Pro Cluentio, chapter 47, sentence 130; cf. also Philip the Chancellor’s conductus O labilis sortis humane status [K30/234], line 11 in Strophe Ia: “Quid igitur aura te popularis”). 5-7: as Traill notes (“More Poems,” p. 179, n. 44), “interitus,” here rendered as “ruin” and connoting death, has a similar connotation in Job, 18:14: “avellatur de tabernaculo suo fiducia eius et calcet super eum quasi rex interitus” (“Let him be pulled from the safety of his tent, and let death tread upon him like a king.”). 8: for the expression of Death being conquered by the death of Christ, cf. 1 Corinthians, 15:26; and 15:54-55.⁴ 9-10: Christ speaks both to his accusers and figuratively to all mankind. 11: for the binding of Christ during the Passion, see Matthew, 27:2; Mark, 15:1; and John, 18:12. 13: according to Traill (“More Poems,” p. 180), this is most likely a reference to the Virgin Mary; Christ is often represented by floral imagery, as in Isaiah, 11:1: “et egredietur virga de radice Iesse et flos de radice eius ascendet” (“and a rod shall spring forth from the root of Jesse and the flower shall rise up from his root”); see also the start of the verse text of the responsory Stirps Iesse. Virgo dei (O16): “Virgo dei genetrix virga, est flos filius eius” (“The virgin mother of God is the rod, the flower her son”). 16: cf. Proverbs, 2:14: “qui laetantur cum malefecerint et exultant in rebus pessimis” (“[Wisdom will protect you from wicked men] who are happy when they have done evil, and rejoice in the most wicked things”).

¹For a study of the voice of Christ speaking in the Latin song repertory, see Mary Channen Caldwell, “‘I Have Trodden the Winepress Alone’: The Voice of Christ and the Mystical Winepress in a Thirteenth-Century Latin Song,” Revue de musicologie, 108 (2022): 3-40.

²Guido Maria Dreves, ed., Lieder und Motetten des Mittelalters, pt. 2, Analecta hymnica medii aevi, vol. 21 (Leipzig: O. R. Reisland, 1895): p. 20, no. 13.

³See Page’s remarks on this piece, as well as his own translation, in the liner notes to the compact audio disc Jerusalem: Vision of Peace, performed under his direction by the ensemble Gothic Voices (London: Hyperion, 1998), CDA67039, pp. 8-9; the work appears on track 5 of the CD).

⁴1 Corinthians, 15:26: “Novissima autem inimica destruetur mors: omnia enim subiecit pedibus eius” (“And the enemy death shall be destroyed last: For he hath put all things under his feet.”). 1 Corinthians, 15:54-55: “Cum autem mortale hoc induerit immortalitatem, tunc fiet sermo, qui scriptus est: ‘Absorpta est mors in victoria.’ ‘Ubi est mors victoria tua? ubi est mors stimulus tuus?’” (“And when this mortal has put on immortality, then shall come to pass the saying that is written: ‘Death is swallowed up in victory.’ ‘O death, where is thy victory? O death, where is thy sting?’”).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 4,6: F: exit, emendation from Dreves and Traill. 8,5: F: hanelitus, the more typical orthography is used here to avoid possible confusion. 16: F: et omne malum malo fruentibus; the emendation comes from Traill, “More Poems,” p. 180, who regards Dreves’s adjustment of “omne” to “omine” as lacking sense and offers additional justifications for his reading. MUSIC: no variants. Syllabic/melismatic identity: 1. the T and the start of the D of “mors extre[ma]” (at the opening of line 8, the last line of the strophe) = 1a. the opening of the T and D for the first and second phrases in the closing cauda on “[anhe]li[tus]” (at the end of line 8, the last line of the strophe), transposed a second higher.

VITE PERDITE
Conductus (J35/387)

F, f. 356r (7,108): Strophe I; CB, f. 4r (no. 31): Strophes II-IX

8

D

1. [Vi - te per - di - te me le - gi sub - di - de - ram.
 2. [Re - rum ex - i - tus dum que - ro di - scu - te - re.
 3. [Non sum du - pl - ici per - plex - us i - ti - ne - re.
 4. [Fa - mem si - li - qua por - co - rum non ab - stu - lit.
 5. [Dum con - si - de - ro quid di - ne con - ti - ge - rit.
 6. [Pre - ter me - ri - tum me ne - ci non de - de - ro.
 7. [Vi - e ve - te - ris in - mu - to ve - sti - gi - a.
 8. [Be - li so - li - um. si - no - nis as - tu - ti - am.
 9. [Er - go ve - ni - am de - re - i mi - se - ri - a.

a b

T

8

1. Vi - te per - di - te me le - gi sub - di - de - ram.
 2. Re - rum ex - i - tus dum que - ro di - scu - te - re.
 3. Non sum du - pl - ici per - plex - us i - ti - ne - re.
 4. Fa - mem si - li - qua por - co - rum non ab - stu - lit.
 5. Dum con - si - de - ro quid di - ne con - ti - ge - rit.
 6. Pre - ter me - ri - tum me ne - ci non de - de - ro.
 7. Vi - e ve - te - ris in - mu - to ve - sti - gi - a.
 8. Be - li so - li - um. si - no - nis as - tu - ti - am.
 9. Er - go ve - ni - am de - re - i mi - se - ri - a.

8

D

1. mi - nus li - ci - te dum fre - gi quod vo - ve - ram.
 2. ve - rum pe - ni - tus a fal - so di - scer - ne - re.
 3. nec ad - di - di - ci re - flex - us a ve - ne - re.
 4. que ad lu - bri - ca er - ro - rum me con - tu - lit.
 5. fi - nem con - fe - ro ra - pi - ne quid lu - e - rit.
 6. si ad vo - mi - tum quem ie - ci re - di - e - ro.
 7. i - re ve - ne - ris re - fu - to per de - vi - a.
 8. con - fer tul - li - um ze - no - nis pru - den - ti - am.
 9. ut in - ve - ni - am de - i cle - men - ti - a.

a b

T

8

1. mi - nus li - ci - te dum fre - gi quod vo - ve - ram.
 2. ve - rum pe - ni - tus a fal - so di - scer - ne - re.
 3. nec ad - di - di - ci re - flex - us a ve - ne - re.
 4. que ad lu - bri - ca er - ro - rum me con - tu - lit.
 5. fi - nem con - fe - ro ra - pi - ne quid lu - e - rit.
 6. si ad vo - mi - tum quem ie - ci re - di - e - ro.
 7. i - re ve - ne - ris re - fu - to per de - vi - a.
 8. con - fer tul - li - um ze - no - nis pru - den - ti - am.
 9. ut in - ve - ni - am de - i cle - men - ti - a.

d e

1. sed ad vi - te ve - spe - ram cor - ri - gen - dum le - gi.
 2. fal - so fal - lor o - pe - re bra - vi - um si spe - ro.
 3. nec frau - da - vi te - me - re con - iu - gis am - plex - us.
 4. sed scri - ptu - ra con - su - lit vi - am in - trem mo - rum.
 5. sci - o. vix e - va - se - rit mens cor - ru - pta fi - ne.
 6. nec a ver - bo a - spe - ro li - be - rum me fe - ci.
 7. vi - a nam - que re - gi - a cur - ri - tur in tu - to.
 8. nil con - fer - re sen - ti - am hiis a - bu - tens bo - nis.
 9. hec et hiis si - mi - li - a que per - e - gi de - i

c c'

1. sed ad vi - te ve - spe - ram cor - ri - gen - dum le - gi.
 2. fal - so fal - lor o - pe - re bra - vi - um si spe - ro.
 3. nec frau - da - vi te - me - re con - iu - gis am - plex - us.
 4. sed scri - ptu - ra con - su - lit vi - am in - trem mo - rum.
 5. sci - o. vix e - va - se - rit mens cor - ru - pta fi - ne.
 6. nec a ver - bo a - spe - ro li - be - rum me fe - ci.
 7. vi - a nam - que re - gi - a cur - ri - tur in tu - to.
 8. nil con - fer - re sen - ti - am hiis a - bu - tens bo - nis.
 9. hec et hiis si - mi - li - a que per - e - gi de - i e' d'

1. quic - quid an - te per - pe - ram pu - e - ri - lis e - gi.]
 2. me vir - tu - tum me - te - re vi - ti - a dum se - ro.]
 3. da - li - dam per - se - que - re ne frau - de - tur sex - us.]
 4. que pre - lar - ga pro - tu - lit pa - bu - la do - no - rum.]
 5. di - u quam con - trax - e - rit ma - cu - lam sen - ti - ne.]
 6. ser - vus si ser - vi - e - ro vi - ti - o - rum fe - ci.]
 7. si quis ce - dit ab e - a sem - per est in lu - to.]
 8. ni fu - gan - do fu - gi - am da - li - dam sam - so - nis.]
 9. so - la par - cens gra - ti - a mi - se - re re me - i.]

c c''

1. quic - quid an - te per - pe - ram pu - e - ri - lis e - gi.
 2. me vir - tu - tum me - te - re vi - ti - a dum se - ro.]
 3. da - li - dam per - se - que - re ne frau - de - tur sex - us.]
 4. que pre - lar - ga pro - tu - lit pa - bu - la do - no - rum.]
 5. di - u quam con - trax - e - rit ma - cu - lam sen - ti - ne.]
 6. ser - vus si ser - vi - e - ro vi - ti - o - rum fe - ci.]
 7. si quis ce - dit ab e - a sem - per est in lu - to.]
 8. ni fu - gan - do fu - gi - am da - li - dam sam - so - nis.]
 9. so - la par - cens gra - ti - a mi - se - re re me - i.]

VITE PERDITE
 Conductus (J35/387)

F, f. 356r (7,108): Strophe I; CB, f. 4r (no. 31): Strophes II-IX

- | | | |
|---|---|--|
| I Vite perditē me legi subdideram
 – minus licite –
 dum fregi quod voveram.
 Sed ad vite vesperam, corrigendum legi,
 quicquid ante perperam
 puerilis egi. | 5 | I had subjected myself to the precepts of a dissolute life when I – not at all decently – broke what I had solemnly vowed.
 But in the eveningtide of my life
 I chose that whatever I did wrongfully before, when I was young, should be set right. | | II [Rerum exitus
 dum quero discutere, verum penitus
 a falso discernere, falso fallor opere bravium si spero me virtutum metere
 vitia dum sero. | 10

15 | When I seek to examine the outcomes of events, distinguishing thoroughly
 what is true from false,
 I am deceived by false actions if I expect to reap an honorable reward at the same time I am sowing vices. |
| III Non sum duplici
 perplexus itinere.
 Nec addidici reflexus a Venere, nec fraudavi temere
 coniugis amplexus.
 Dalidam persequare,
 ne fraudetur sexus. | 20 | I am not a man confused by a double path.
 I did not learn more by turning away from Venus, nor have I rashly taken advantage of a wife's embraces.
 Go after a Delilah, so as not to squander your manhood. |
| IV Famem siliqua
 porcorum non abstulit.
 que ad lubrica
 errorum me contulit, sed scriptura consulit
 viam intrem morum, que prelarga protulit
 pabula donorum. | 25

30 | The husks the pigs ate did not assuage the hunger that brought me to the slippery slopes of error, but scripture advises that I enter onto a path of moral conduct, one that has provided a copious diet of gifts | | V Dum considero quid Dine contigerit, finem confero rapine. Quid luerit scio. Vix evaserit mens corrupta fine
 diu quam contraxerit
 maculam sentine. | 35

40 | When I contemplate
 what happened to Dinah,
 I bring my debauchery to an end. I know what she endured. Barely did my corrupt conscience finally evade what was for a long time associated with the stain of filth. |
| VI Preter meritum | | Not undeservedly will I give |

me neci	non dedero,		myself over to destruction, si ad vomitum			if I should return to
quem ieci	rediero.		the vomit I spewed.
Nec a verbo aspero		45	Nor have I made myself
liberum me feci,			free from a harsh sentence,
servus si serviero			if I should serve the dregs
vitiorum feci.			of vice as a slave.
VII	Vie veteris		I am now changing the course
	inmuto	vestigia.	50 of my former path.
	Ire Veneris		I renounce traveling upon
	refuto	per devia,	the byways of Venus,
	via namque regia		for on the royal road
	curritur in tuto.		one rides in safety.
	Si quis cedit ab ea	55	Should anyone stray from it,
	semper est in luto.		they always land in the mud.
VIII	Beli solium,		Bring on the throne of Belus,
	Sinonis	astutiam,	the cunning of Sinon;
	confer Tullium,		give me Cicero and the
	Zenonis	prudenciam.	60 foresight of Zeno.
	Nil conferre sentiam,		I shall feel I am good for nothing,
	hiis abutens bonis,		that I am abusing these benefits,
	ni fugando fugiam		if I do not escape Samson's
	Dalidam Samsonis.		Delilah in my flight.
IX	Ergo veniam	65	And so, that I may de rei	miseria,	earn forgiveness
	ut inveniam		from a guilty man's misery,
	de dei	clementia,	through God's mercy,
	hec et hiis similia		from these and similar sins que peregi, dei	70	that I have committed, and with sola parcens gratia,		God's grace alone sparing me,
	miserere mei!]		have mercy on me!

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 108, f. 356r: a2; Strophe I only, with no provision for further text. Starting with this leaf, none of the succeeding leaves in F displays a contemporaneous folio number.

CB (D-Mbs Clm. 4660; Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, lat. 4660; Carmina Burana), no. 31, f. 4r, a1 (with what appears to be the T), in unheightened neumes; each stanza set to what seems to be the same music; Strophes I-IX, complete; the subsequent stanzas start with capital letters executed in the same style as the larger, decorated opening initial; rubric: "Item," referring to the heading "De Conversione hominum" ("On mankind's Conversion") located two pieces prior, atop the poem In lacu miserie (-/-) beginning on f. 3v.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts:

A l'entrant del tans salvage (Linker no. 113-1, Raynaud/Spanke no. 41);¹ attributed as below; preserved with music a1 (T) in the following MSS:

F-Pn fr. 12615, f. 43r (Huon de St. Quentin).

F-Pn fr. 844, f. 81v (Gilles de Viels-Maisons).

Per dan que d' amor m'aveigna (Pillet-Carstons no. 366-26),² attributed to Peirol; preserved with music a1 (T) in the following source:

I-Ma R 71 sup. (Milan, Biblioteca Ambrosiana, R 71 superiore), f. 46r.

Notes on the Text: Many of the following remarks on this text are beholden to the multiple editions and commentaries of Anderson, NDRC, 5:xxvii-xix, 60, 119; Dreves, AH, 21, pp. 113-114, no. 166;³ Hilka, Schumann, and Bischoff, Carmina Burana, 1/1:51-52;⁴ Vollmann, Carmina Burana, 72-77, 956-958;⁵ and the two treatments of this work by David Traill, in “Biblical Exegesis,” 335-341;⁶ and idem, ed., Carmina Burana, 1:88-95, 482-484.⁷ Traill’s translations have also assisted my own rendering. Versification: for this presentation, the musical phrases as delineated in F, signaled by strokes in both parts, have been used to determine the verse structure. These divisions are supported by the punctuation of CB, which in all but three instances (lines 36, 57, 70), gives periods only at the ends of the even-numbered lines of each stanza as shown above (reproduced in the verbal punctuation of the musical transcription). The result is a stanza with fewer lines than some other editions (although Vollmann’s has even less – six – per stanza). Interlinear rhymes are signaled by extra horizontal space in the above text. Orthography: as seen elsewhere in CB, the classical -ae diphthong inflection for first declension nouns is represented by a flourish under the final “e” of the applicable words in this poem (with an appearance similar to “ė”). These are not distinguished in my editions, here and elsewhere, but may be gleaned from the publications of Vollmann, and of Traill, Carmina Burana (but not his “Biblical Exegesis”). Attribution: Peter Dronke, based on linguistic and formal similarities with the poet’s ¹These two references point to the following catalogs: Robert White Linker, A Bibliography of Old French Lyrics, Romance Monographs, no. 31 (University, Mississippi: Romance Monographs, Inc., 1979); and Hans Spanke, Gaston Raynauds Bibliographie des altfranzösischen Liedes, erster Teil: ergänzt mit einer Diskographie und einem Register der Lieder nach Anfangsbuchstaben hergestellt von A. Bahat (Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1980).

²Alfred Pillet and Henry Carstons, Bibliographie der Troubadours (Halle: M. Niemeyer, 1933; New York: Burt Franklin, 1968).

³*Analecta hymnica medii aevi*, vol. 21: Lieder und Motetten des Mittelalters, pt. 2, Guido Maria Dreves, ed. (Leipzig: O. R. Reisland, 1895).

⁴Alfons Hilka, Otto Schumann, and Bernard Bischoff, eds., Carmina Burana, Heidelberg: Carl Winter, 1930-70, vol. 1, part 1: 51-52

⁵Benedikt K. Vollmann, ed. and trans., Carmina Burana: Texte und Übersetzungen, mit den Miniaturen aus der Handschrift, Bibliothek des Mittelalters, no. 13 (Frankfurt am Main: Deutscher Klassiker Verlag, 1987).

⁶David A. Traill, “Biblical Exegesis and Medieval Latin Lyric: Interpretational Problems in Nutante mundi cardine, Relegentur ab area, and Vite perditte,” The Journal of Medieval Latin, 17 (2007): 329-341, see especially pp. 332-335.

⁷David A. Traill, ed. and transl., Carmina Burana, 2 vols., Dumbarton Oaks Medieval Library, nos. 48-49 (Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 2018), 1:44-49, 475.

other works,⁸ regards this poem as a product of Peter of Blois, an attribution that the most recent editor of Peter’s poetic works, Carsten Wollin, sees as highly likely.⁹ David Traill, though, would favor Philip the Chancellor as its author, but admits that the question remains unclear.¹⁰ Content: This poem is rather unusual in the central conductus repertory for its secular focus, particularly in the emphasis on carnal lust, from which the poet here turns away at the end of his life. For a list of some other conductus poems that treat earthly love, see the notes on the text to Flos in monte cernitur (F10/128), at F-6,28. Vite perditte, in contrast, emphasizes repentance from vice in order to achieve the “honorable reward” (lines 14-15) of salvation. Textual notes: 4: Anderson suggests these promises could refer to priestly vows (NDRC, 5:xvii, note 1). Vollman (957) observes that swearing to renounce Satan, part of the baptism ritual, might apply. 15,1: the reward (bravium) here is salvation; see 1 Corinthians, 9:24,¹¹ and Phillippians, 3:14.¹² 17-24 (Strophe III): for the multiple interpretations of this stanza, see Traill “Exegesis,” 339-340. His own eminently convincing explanation deciphers the double path (“fork in the road” in Traill’s rendering) as the choice between virtue and vice, citing the well-known parable of Hercules at the crossroads, a story relayed via Greek, Latin, and patristic authors. “Turning away from Venus” implies the choice of a celibate life, as opposed to committing adultery with other men’s wives, both of which extreme practices the speaker finds disagreeable. The frequently puzzling final couplet of the stanza makes sense, according to Traill, in light of its likely evocation of a passage from one of Horace’s Satires, reportedly quoting Cato the Elder (Marcus Porcius Cato, 234-149 BCE), an individual renowned for his frugality and severity.¹³ In the conductus lyric – in order to satisfy rather than repress their naturally occurring inclinations – the protagonist urges young men to frequent prostitutes (collectively represented by the archetype of Delilah – see the remarks for lines 23 and 64), rather than seduce married women. In this way he follows a middle course and adheres as well to the directives of Cato. 23: Delilah is frequently depicted as a prostitute in Christian scriptural commentary (see Traill, “Biblical Exegesis,” 341)¹⁴ and serves in this poem as an emblem for sexual lust; note the analogous deprecation of Dinah in Strophe V. Delilah reappears in a similar vein along with Samson, the lover she betrayed, in line 64, q.v. 25-28: this image ⁸Vollmann also comments on correspondences with Peter’s works in his publication, see his Carmina Burana, 957-958.

⁹See Peter Dronke, “Peter of Blois and Poetry at the Court of Henry II,” Medieval Studies, 38 (1976): 185-235; reprinted and revised in idem, The Medieval Poet and his World, Storia e Letteratura: Raccolta di Studi e Testi, no. 164 (Rome: Edizioni di Storia e Letteratura, 1984), 281-339, at 317-318, 332-333; and Carsten Wollin, ed., Petri Blesensis Carmina, Corpus Christianorum Continuatio Mediaevalis, no. 128, (Turnhout: Brepols, 1998), see poem number 2.10.

¹⁰See David A. Traill, “A Cluster of Poems by Philip the Chancellor in Carmina Burana 21-36,” Studi medievali, ser. 3, 47 (2006): 267-286, at 277.

¹¹1 Corinthians, 9:24: “nescitis quod hii qui in stadio currunt omnes quidem currunt, sed unus accipit bravium? Sic currite ut comprehendatis” (“Don’t you know that, of those who run in a race, all certainly run, but only one gets the prize? Run so as to win it.”).

¹²Phillippians, 3:14: “ad destinatum persequor ad bravium supernae vocationis Dei in Christo Iesu” (“I press towards the goal, to the prize of the supernal calling of God in Christ Jesus”).

¹³Horace, Satires, book 1, no. 2, lines 31-35: “Quidam notus homo cum exiret fornice, ‘Macte / virtute esto,’ inquit sententia dia Catonis. / ‘Nam simul ac venas inflavit taetra libido, / huc iuvenes aequum est descendere, non alienas / permolere uxores.’ ” (“To a certain well-known man when he exited a brothel: ‘Well done,’ spoke the divine utterance of Cato, ‘for as soon as foul lust swells the veins, it’s a good thing for the young men to come down here, so as not to wear out the wives of others.’”).

¹⁴This association may have been prompted by Judges, 16:1 where Samson visits a prostitute in Gaza. Shortly thereafter, in 16:4, he is described as loving Delilah who lived in the valley of Sorek. It seems very likely these are different women, but their close juxtaposition could have urged the association. Judges, 16:1: “Abiit quoque in Gazam, et vidit ibi mulierem meretricem, ingressusque est ad eam” (“He [Samson] went also into Gaza, and saw there a woman a harlot, and went in unto her”); Judges, 16:4: “Post haec amavit mulierem, quae habitabat in valle Sorec, et vocabatur Dalila”; (“After this he loved a woman, who dwelt in the valley of Sorec, and she was called Dalila”).

stems from the parable of the Prodigal Son (see Luke, 15:15-16), who, being in want during a time of great famine, coveted the husks that were given as food to the pigs he tended, but were unavailable to him.¹⁵ The hunger that afflicted the speaker in the poem as the result of his earlier behavior is compensated by the feast promised by holy scripture, provided he mends his ways. 33-40 (Strophe V): the story of the rape of Jacob's only daughter Dinah by Shechem, the son of Hamor who ruled the area, appears in Genesis, 34. There was a subsequent retaliation enacted by Jacob's sons, Simeon and Levi, upon the eponymous Shechemites that resulted in them all being killed. As Traill notes ("Exegesis," 339), medieval scriptural commentaries often cast Dinah in an unfavorable light, one which the protagonist is also eager to avoid, and which, it seems, he only narrowly escaped. 43-44: for this biblical aphorism, see Proverbs, 26:11;¹⁶ and the reference to it in 2 Peter, 2:22.¹⁷ 45-46: see Psalm 90:3: "Quoniam ipse liberavit me de laqueo venantium, et a verbo aspero" ("For he [God] has delivered me from the snare of the hunters: and from the sharp word."). 49-56 (Strophe VII): an allusion to events in Numbers, 21:21-25, where the Israelites, escaping from Egypt, seek to pass through the lands ruled by Sihon, king of the Amorites. They pledge to adhere to the king's road ("via regia"), not departing from it for either food or water.¹⁸ Sihon refuses the request and sets an army upon the Israelites, whereupon he is defeated and slain. Traill ("Exegesis," 339) observes how the concept of the via regia becomes a proverbial expression to describe the road to salvation. 55-56: for the image of mud in the context of delivery from sinful behavior, see Psalms, 49:3, 68:15.¹⁹ 57,1: the CB reading of "Resi" for this word, retained in Vollmann's edition (see text variants below) seems less preferable than the adopted emendation favored by most other editors. Of the possible referents, if the CB reading denotes King Rhesus of Thrace, who figures briefly in the Iliad (10, 412-514), it seems rather curious, since Rhesus is not portrayed particularly favorably in the epic, being killed in his sleep by Diomedes without ever seeing battle, while Odysseus steals his famous stable of horses. Similarly, if Dreves's AH, 21, reading of "Croesi" is accepted, it seems strange to emphasize this monarch's throne rather than his proverbial wealth. In support of Belus – the reading adopted by this edition of the text – given that the other characters stem from Greco-Roman history or mythology, one preferred candidate might be King Belus of Tyre who was the father of Dido of Carthage (Aeneid, 1,729), rather than the Babylonian king/deity suggested by Anderson (NDRC, 5:xxix, note 13). The Virgilian Belus also appears apropos, since the speaker in the conductus poem seeks now to flee from love's clutches, much as Aeneas deserted Dido. On the other hand, if Belus the ruler and founder of Babylon is intended – despite the negative associations that Babylon typically implied in the conductus repertory – the reference to the throne might also be explained. For some additional possible connections to Belus in this poem, see the following remarks on ¹⁵Luke, 15:15-16 "Et abiit, et adhaesit uni civium regionis illius: et misit illum in villam suam ut pasceret porcos. Et cupiebat implere ventrem suum de siliquis, quas porci manducabant: et nemo illi dabat" ("And he [the prodigal son] went and cleaved to one of the citizens of that country. And he sent him into his farm to feed swine. And he would fain have filled his belly with the husks the swine did eat; and no man gave unto him.").

¹⁶Proverbs, 26:11: "Sicut canis qui revertitur ad vomitum suum, sic imprudens qui iterat stultitiam suam" ("As a dog that returns to his vomit, so is the fool that repeats his folly.").

¹⁷2 Peter, 2:22: "Contigit enim eis illud veri proverbii: Canis reversus ad suum vomitum: et, Sus lota in volutabro luti" ("For, that of the true proverb has happened to them: The dog is returned to his vomit; and the sow that was washed, to her wallowing in the mire.").

¹⁸Numbers, 21:22: "Obsecro ut transire mihi liceat per terram tuam: non declinabimus in agros et vineas; non bibemus aquas ex puteis: via regia gradiemur, donec transeamus terminos tuos" ("I [an Israelite messenger] beseech you that I may have leave to pass through your land: we will not go aside into the fields or the vineyards, we will not drink waters of the wells, we will go the king's highway, till we be past your borders.").

¹⁹Psalms 49:3: "Et exaudivit preces meas, et eduxit me de lacu miseriae et de luto faecis. Et statuit super petram pedes meos, et direxit gressus meos" ("And he [the Lord] heard my prayers, and brought me out of the pit of misery and the mire of dregs. And he set my feet upon a rock, and directed my steps."). Psalms 68:15: "Eripe me de luto, ut non infigar; libera me ab iis qui oderunt me, et de profundis aquarum" ("Draw me out of the mire, that I may not stick fast: deliver me from them that hate me, and out of the deep waters.").

Sinon in line 58. 58,1: Sinon was a Greek soldier during the Trojan War who figures in the episode of the Trojan Horse in the Aeneid (2,57-267); he is situated in the conductus poem as a symbol of craftiness. Falsely posing as a deserter from the Greek forces and claiming they had intended to sacrifice him to Apollo to allow them to depart from Troy, Sinon convinces the Trojans to accept him as an ally, whereupon he frees the soldiers hiding within the horse so that they can open the gates of the city to the whole Greek host. In the course of his attempts to convince the Trojans of his antipathy towards the Greeks, he relates the story of Palamedes (Aeneid, 2,81-87), an innocent friend of his who was killed as the result of a betrayal by Ulysses, thus earning Sinon's (and correspondingly the Trojans') hate. Interestingly, in the Aeneid (2,81-83) Sinon describes Palamedes as the son of Belus,²⁰ while references elsewhere to this individual relay that his father is King Nauplius of Euboea (as in Ovid, Metamorphoses, 13,39; 13,56). I have not been able to assemble a connection between this Belus and any of the others mentioned in the above notes to line 57,1. 59,2: Marcus Tullius Cicero (3 January 106-7 December 43 BCE), the renowned Roman orator, apparently so well-known that the poet need not delineate his rhetorical abilities. 60,1: As Anderson's notes imply (NDRC, 5:xxix, note 16), it is not obvious which of the many possibilities for Zeno is implied here. One likely candidate is Zeno of Citium (ca. 334-ca. 262 BCE), the founder of Stoic philosophy, which emphasized living according to principles of virtue; another is Zeno of Elea (c. 495-c. 430 BCE), who was noted for his paradoxes: mental conundrums that seem to border on sophistry, but which cause one to question more deeply one's basic assumptions. For an example, consult the paradox known as "Achilles and the Tortoise." Of the two proposed philosophers, the first one espouses the lifestyle the poet has chosen to practice at this later point in his life; the other shows the mental acuity and craftiness implied by persons named earlier in the stanza. 61-63: none of the benefits ("hiis ... bonis" – line 62) bestowed by the individuals earlier in the stanza will be worth anything if the speaker cannot escape from sexual debauchery, manifested by the figure of Delilah in line 64. 62,1: CB: "hiis" is treated as a monosyllable in both the poem and musical setting in each of its appearances; see the note below to line 69,3. 64: the famous story of Samson, the last judge of the ancient Israelites, and his lover Delilah, who manages to worm out of him the secret of his great strength: that by cutting his hair he will be rendered weak and able to be subdued by the Philistines, who have enlisted Delilah for that purpose. Delilah's treachery results in Samson's eventual capture, blinding, forced labor, and death at his own hand, taking many Philistines along with him. For the entire account, see Judges, 13-16. As noted above in the notes to line 23, Delilah, here and elsewhere in medieval exegesis, is equated with sexual lust and depravity; cf. also the treatment of Dinah in Strophe V. For other appearances by Samson in the conductus repertory, see, for instance, Dogmatum falsas species (K55/97), Samson dux fortissime (L42/-), and Flos preclusus sub torpore (L145/-), while Delilah surfaces very briefly in the motet Serena virginum / Manere (A1/323 – vdW 69/M5), line 41, preserved as F-6,40. 69,3: see the above note to line 62,1.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: As CB is used to supply the text for Strophes II-IX, any variants in it from Strophe I of F are also reported. 5,1: CB: et. 28,2: CB: non; reading after Anderson, NDRC, 5:xxviii. 30,2: CB: vestra; from Anderson and AH, 21. 34,2: CB: diane, one syllable too many. 36,2-3: CB: quis fuerit; adopted reading ("quid luerit") from both editions of Traill. 47,3: CB: servierit, which neglects the correct rhyme. 49;51: CB: these two lines are apparently exchanged; the adopted reading is in all other consulted editions but Vollmann (which offers no emendation) and AH, 21, which exchanges only the first words of lines 49 and 51 as given in CB. 57,1: CB: Resi, retained in Vollmann; adopted reading "Beli" from all other editions but AH, 21, and Traill, Carmina Burana, both of which give the alternative "Croesi." Traill earlier used "Beli" in "Exegesis"; see the discussion at this point above in the notes on the text. 58,1: CB: symonis; adopted reading "sinonis" from all editions but Traill, "Exegesis," and Vollman. 62,1: see the above notes on the text at this point. 63,2: CB: fugiendo, one syllable too many, although reading retained despite this discrepancy in AH, ²⁰Fando aliquod si forte tuas pervenit ad auris / Belidae nomen Palamedis et incluta fama / gloria ... ("Perchance the name of Palamedes, Belus' glorious son, has come by rumor to your listening ears ..."). The translation is from: Virgil, Eclogues, Georgics, Aeneid: Books 1-6, H.R. Fairclough, trans., revised by G. P. Goold, Loeb Classical Library, vol. 63 (Cambridge, MA.: Harvard University Press, 1916; revised edition, 1999), 320-323.

21, Vollmann, and in both of Traill's editions; adopted emendation in Anderson and Hilka, Schumann, Bischoff. 64,1: CB: the abbreviation stroke over the last letter of "dalida" is easy to miss, different from the same signal in line 23,1. 69,3: see at this point the above notes on the text. 70: often emended among the available editions, although this line seems to make sense as it stands. It is unaltered in AH, 21, and Vollmann. It appears as "quod peregi rei" in Anderson; Hilka, Schumann, Bischoff; and both editions of Traill. MUSIC: No variants. For the repetitive nature of the T melody, see the correspondences marked above the staff. The D as well shows a number of likenesses, also marked; more could be proposed.

FRATER EN IORDANUS
Conductus (J36/F131) – no extant music

F, f. 356r (7,109)

I Frater, en Iordanus, noster veteranus, quondam pub[li]canus, mundo doctor sanus. Monet, cum sit vanus splendor hic mundanus, ne sit parca manus.	Brother, here is Jordan, our old veteran, once a publican, a sound teacher for the world. 5 He cautions that, since this worldly splendor is hollow, one's hand ought not be stingy.
---	---

SOURCES:

Text only:

F, fasc. 7, no. 109, 356r: ruled for music a2 that was never entered; text alone of Strophe I, complete, with no provisions for the addition of further stanzas; unique transmission. The piece begins mid-system on the folio (rather than at the left margin), something that happens only 12 times in F-7.¹ Although the music is omitted, the compact inscription of the verbal text underneath the empty staves and the corresponding style of the majority of the works that immediately precede it in F suggest this piece is a work sine caudis. This is the last of a group of such conductus in this source, one that begins with the large historiated initial of Artium dignitas (I4/20) at F-7,88 on f. 349r. Thereupon, beginning with the very next conductus, Gratuletur populus (H6/147) at F-7,89, not only are strophic poems prominent, but strophic musical settings are favored, a preference that applies to all but four of the subsequent pieces in the fascicle up through Frater en Iordanus.² Immediately thereafter, and with no apparent discontinuity within F-7, comes the conductus Caput in caudam vertitur (J37/54) at F-7,110, inaugurating a series of four works (F-7,110-113) that have been claimed as poems by Philip the Chancellor.³ At this point, pieces with more frequent and ambitious caudae return, and strophic poems drop out in favor of single-stanza and sequence-form texts.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: General remarks: A poem that seems a bit unusual for inclusion in F, as it appears to concern an individual from a lower social class (rather than the royal or clerical figures that may appear in other conductus). A person named Jordan, perhaps once a soldier, and who enjoyed success in a prior profession, has now seen hard times (assuming that the character is not an emblem for paupers in general). He serves as a lesson that this misfortune could happen to anyone, and so the readers of the poem should be generous to him, ¹For a list, see the source report on F for Pia mater gratie (J18/268), at F-7,71, on f. 331r.

²The poetry of Artium dignitas is strophic in structure, but musically through-composed. The exceptions to strophic construction in the works in this group of sine caudis conductus are the contiguous Non habes aditum (J29/209 – f. 353r, at F-7,100) and Involutus in erroris (J30/187 – f. 353v, at F-7,101), then Homo per potentiam (J33/161 – f. 355v, at F-7,106) and Frater en Iordanus (F-7,109), all of which survive only as single-stanza settings. Of these four, all but the first are unique to F-7 and all conceivably could have had extra strophes at some point.

³These are, in addition to Caput in caudam vertitur: Centrum capit circulus (J38/57), Clavus pungens acumine (J39/65), and Luget Rachel iterum (J40/199). The second of these is vouched for Philip by at least two medieval sources, the others are modern attributions, q.v.

as it is implied that they may suffer similar circumstances one day. The overarching moral that results, though, is familiar from other hortatory conductus. As the subject of the poem is likely never to be identified, some of its language is ambiguous and a few alternatives to the translation are presented in these notes. The poem has had some further discussion in an 1885 address by Léopold Delisle, who rendered line 1,2 as “Enjordanus,” and hypothesized that the character in the poem (“frère Enjourdain”) might have been a musician who contributed this piece to F from a personal pecia that held his music.⁴ Most of Delisle’s observations were questioned and dismissed fourteen years later by Guido Maria Dreves in his brief mention of the poem in AH, 20, pp. 16-17, where he characterized it as a “goliardic begging song” (“Vaganten-Bettellied”).⁵ Nonetheless, the various connotations that are available for the word “publicanus” challenge a clear understanding of this poem’s subject; see the discussion of line 3,2 below. Textual Notes: 1: also conceivably construed as: “behold brother Jordan.” 3,2: the word publicanus can convey a host of different meanings with widely varying significance. It might, for example, denote a tavern owner or innkeeper. In ancient and biblical contexts, it may refer to a tax collector (as in Luke, 18:9-14, and Matthew, 11:19, e.g.). More curiously, though, the term was also used to refer to various types of heretics, particularly Manicheans,⁶ which explains Delisle’s statement: “This brother Enjourdain, formerly a publican, that is to say, to all appearances, affiliated with an Albigensian sect.”⁷ As a result, the English cognate has been chosen for this translation.

Observations and Variants: The only punctuation in F in this piece is a semicolon closing line 6 and the expected period at the end of the poem. These details are reported here since there is no musical setting to communicate them as there is for the editions of the other pieces. TEXT: 3,2: F: publicanus; the faulty reading is unrecorded in Anderson, NDRC, 5:120. MUSIC: none was ever entered in this unique source.

⁴Léopold Delisle, “Discours de M. Léopold Delisle,” Annuaire-Bulletin de la Société de l’Histoire de France, 23 (1885): 82-139, at 105-106.

⁵*Analecta hymnica medii aevi*, vol. 20: Cantiones et Muteti: Lieder und Motetten des Mittelalters, pt. 1: Cantiones Natalitiae, Partheniae, Guido Maria Dreves, ed. (Leipzig: O. R. Reisland, 1895).

⁶ See the entry s.v. “populicani” in Glossarium mediae et infimae latinitatis, Charles du Fresne, sieur du Cange, ed., (Niort: L. Favre, et al., 1883-1887); available online: <http://ducange.enc.sorbonne.fr>. and at <https://logeion.uchicago.edu/populicani>.

⁷“Ce frère Enjourdain, jadis publicain, c'est-à-dire, selon toute apparence, affilié à une secte albigeoise” Léopold Delisle, “Discours,” 106.

CAPUT IN CAUDAM VERTITUR

(J37/54)

F, f. 356v (7, 110)

I

D [Ca-

T Ca-

[Ca] - put

[Ca] - put

| mode I

in cau - dam ver - ti - tur,

in cau - dam ver - ti - tur,

dum

a

a'

dum

[dum] a - gar sub - li - ma - tur, et li - be - ra re - i - ci - tur, et ser - ve

[dum] a - gar sub - li - ma - tur, et li - be - ra re - i - ci - tur, et ser - ve

sub - iu - ga - - tur. da - gon trun - cus e - ri - gi - tur,

sub - iu - ga - - tur. da - gon trun - cus e - ri - gi - tur,

et ar-cha cap - ti - va - tur, cum da-go - ni - tis da - tur a - pex re - rum et et ar-cha cap - ti - va - tur, cum da-go - ni - tis da - tur a - pex re - rum et di - gni-tas, et di - gni-tas, et

[et] ex - tre - ma cap -
[et] ex - tre - ma cap -

[c] [b] [b] [b] [b] [b] [b]

[b] [c'] [b] [cap] ti - [b] [b] [cap] ti -

mode 1
- vi - tas sy - on re - din - te - gra -
- vi - tas sy - on re - din - te - gra -

First system of musical notation, consisting of two staves. The upper staff has a treble clef and a flat key signature. The lower staff has a bass clef. Red boxes containing the letters 'e' and 'd' are placed above the notes in the upper staff, and 'd' and 'd'' are placed above the notes in the lower staff. Blue brackets connect notes across both staves. A red bar line is present in the middle of the system.

Second system of musical notation, consisting of two staves. Red boxes containing the letters '[h]' and '[h]' are placed above the notes in the upper staff, and '[f]' is placed above the notes in the lower staff. Blue brackets connect notes across both staves.

Third system of musical notation, consisting of two staves. Red boxes containing the letters 'g' and '[h]' are placed above the notes in the upper staff, and 'f'' is placed above the notes in the lower staff. Blue brackets connect notes across both staves.

Fourth system of musical notation, consisting of two staves. Blue brackets connect notes across both staves.

Fifth system of musical notation, consisting of two staves. Red boxes containing the letters 'g'' and 'f''' are placed above the notes in the upper staff, and 'd''' is placed above the notes in the lower staff. Blue brackets connect notes across both staves.

Sixth system of musical notation, consisting of two staves. Blue brackets connect notes across both staves. The system concludes with a double bar line. The text '- tur.]' is written in blue at the end of the upper staff, and '- tur.' is written in blue at the end of the lower staff.

CAPUT IN CAUDAM VERTITUR
Conductus (J37/54)

F, f. 356v (7, 110)

I Caput in caudam vertitur dum Agar sublimatur, et libera reicitur et serve subiugatur. Dagon truncus erigitur, et archa captivatur, cum Dagonitis datur apex rerum et dignitas, et extrema captivitas Syon redintegatur.	5	A head is turned into a tail when Hagar is elevated, and a freewoman despised and made subject to a slave girl. Dagon's torso is raised up and the Ark of the Covenant is captured, while the height of advantages and dignity is given to the Dagonites, and the latest captivity of 10 of Zion is renewed.
--	----------	---

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 110, f. 356v: a2; unique transmission of music and text. Caput in caudam vertitur begins a series of nine consecutive, elaborate conductus cum caudis in F-7, after a run of typically strophic works, all with shorter caudae or no melismatic sections at all. This earlier stretch of simpler works extends from F-7,88 (signaled by the historiated initial that heads Artium dignitas [I4/20]) through F-7,109 (Frater en Iordanus [J36/131]), which lacks music, but whose text layout suggests a modest setting). The subsequent series of more musically ambitious works continues through F-7,118 (Deus pacis et dilectionis [J44/93]).

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Attribution: The piece appears in F (its sole source) before a group of three likely conductus by Philip the Chancellor: 1) the medieval attribution Centrum capit circulus (J38/57), whose authorship is attested by Praha, the Cronica of Salimbene de Adam, and implied by Pa 526; 2) the modern attributions Clavus pungens acumine (J39/65), ascribed to Philip by Friedrich Ludwig (Repertorium, I/1, 266)¹ and Peter Dronke, (“Lyrical Compositions,” 592);² and 3) Luget Rachel iterum (J40/199), also ascribed by Dronke (ibid.). Perhaps as a result, Caput in caudam has also been suggested as Philip’s work (again by Dronke, “Lyrical Compositions,” p. 591). The overall thrust of the poem, wherein the original senses of some of the biblical images it contains are turned on their heads (for details see the following notes), is familiar in Philip’s work. Textual notes: The rhythmical and rhyme schemes of this poem happen to be identical to the conductus Lex honus importabile (I19/197), at F-7,26. 1: see Deuteronomy, 28:13,44,³ Isaiah, 9:15.⁴ In addition to the inverted presentation of the biblical references in the conductus poem, the contexts of the Old Testament citations imply extremely negative connotations for what was originally the tail, thus making the inversion especially troubling to the poet. 2-4: see Genesis, 16 and 21. Hagar was the handmaiden of Abraham's initially childless wife, Sarah. Sarah gave Hagar to Abraham so that he might produce children, whereupon Hagar eventually became pregnant with Ishmael and began to despise Sarah. In the course of events, Sarah eventually gave birth to Isaac, and Hagar and Ishmael were compelled to leave Abraham's household. The allusion here in the poem seems concerned only with Sarah's initial fall from dignity, not with her regaining her earlier status with Isaac's birth. Christian biblical commentaries generally associate Hagar with the Old Law and the Jews, and Sarah with the New Covenant and the Gentiles; for this, see Galatians, 4:22-31;⁵ Augustine, City of God, 15, 2-3; and the references from the Glossa ordinaria given in Anderson, NDRC, 5:xxx, note 2 (citing PL, 113: col. 122). 5-6: See I Kings (I Samuel), 4-5. The Ark of the Covenant was taken from the Israelites following their defeat in a war with the Philistines. The Philistines placed the Ark in a temple devoted to the god Dagon in the city of Ashdod. The next morning the image of Dagon had fallen face down before the Ark, and, when restored to its place, it was found toppled again upon the following morning with its head and hands severed at the points where they crossed the threshold of the temple. In the conductus poem the image of Dagon is raised up, but apparently suffers no collapse. See also the observations below on the music for lines 6-7. 7-8: in opposition to the text in the conductus, where the Dagonites are favored and dignified, the Bible citations given for lines 5-6 describe how various plagues of mice and hemorrhoids visited the people of Ashdod while the Ark remained in their city, as well as the inhabitants of other places after the Ark was removed from the temple and taken to different locales. After seven months, the Ark was returned to the Israelites along with additional offerings made up of golden images of the plagues that had afflicted the Philistines. 9-10: a reference either to the various subjugations of the Israelites in Egypt or Babylon as presented in scripture, and possibly also alluding to the fall of Jerusalem to Islamic forces in 1187 that prompted several crusades during the late twelfth and early thirteenth centuries. In other words, like the inversion of the biblical events earlier in the poem, a deplorable situation.

¹Friedrich Ludwig, Repertorium organorum recentioris et motetorum vetustissimi stili, vol. 1: Catalogue raisonné der Quellen, part 1: Handschriften in Quadrat-Notation, 2nd rev. ed., Luther Dittmer, ed., Musicological Studies, no. 7 (Brooklyn: Institute of Mediaeval Music; Hildesheim: Georg Olms Verlagsbuchhandlung, 1964).

²Peter Dronke, “The Lyrical Compositions of Philip the Chancellor,” Studi medievali, 3rd series, 28 (1987): 563-592.

³Deuteronomy, 28:13: “Constituēt te Dominus in caput, et non in caudam: et eris semper supra, et non subter: si tamen audieris mandata Domini Dei tui quae ego praecipio tibi hodie, et custodieris et feceris” (“And the Lord shall make you the head and not the tail: and you shall be always above, and not beneath: yet so if you will hear the commandments of the Lord thy God which I command

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. MUSIC: Cauda ending line 1,4: T: F: from L2-L4, Anderson has a'b,ba (i.e., 3 higher), with no omissions for the editorial addition of a,a=L,B in L5; he also presents a different alignment from this edition by interpreting the si'=d at L1 of the cauda as L,L-rest. Cauda at 4,1: T: F: the first three pitches, *bcb, might possibly be emended to bdc, which would be more consonant. Lines 6-7: TD: F: the b/f simultaneity that begins this passage argues for the ficta b-flats here in both parts, an editorial strategy also suggested by the presence of the e-flat sig in the D before the second syllable of “dagonitis” (line 7,2). Interestingly, though, this e-flat in the D coincides with an a-natural pitch in the T, perhaps hinting at a possible attempt at word painting in representing the Philistine idol. It is therefore at least conceivable that one might perform this entire passage with b-naturals and increase the harshness of the you this day, and keep and do them.”).

⁴Isaiah, 9:15: “Longaevus et honorabilis, ipse est caput; et propheta docens mendacium, ipse est cauda.” (“The aged and honourable, he is the head: and the prophet that teaches lies, he is the tail.”).

⁵Galatians, 4:22-24,28,31: “Scriptum est enim: Quoniam Abraham duos filios habuit: unum de ancilla, et unum de libera. Sed qui de ancilla, secundum carnem natus est: qui autem de libera, per repromissionem: quae sunt per allegoriam dicta. Haec enim sunt duo testamenta. Unum quidem in monte Sina, in servitutem generans, quae est Agar. ... Nos autem, fratres, secundum Isaac promissionis filii sumus. ... Itaque, fratres, non sumus ancillae filii, sed liberae: qua libertate Christus nos liberavit” (“For it is written that Abraham had two sons, one [Ishmael] by a slave [Hagar] and one [Isaac] by a free woman [Sarah]. But the son of the slave was born according to the flesh, the son of the free woman through promise. Now this is an allegory: these women are two covenants. One is from Mount Sinai, bearing children for slavery; she is Hagar. ... Now we, brethren, like Isaac, are children of promise. ... So, brethren, we are not children of the slave but of the free woman: for freedom Christ has set us free.”). Due to the archaic language of the Douai-Rheims version of these passages, the translations offered for these specific quotations come from the Revised Standard Version, Catholic Edition.

conjectural word painting. Flat sigs, though, do eventually appear prior to the final syllable of line 7,3 (“datur”), with the turn to a new leaf. Cauda at 9,1: T: F: the b-natural sig before the penultimate note (at L15) of this cauda appears to affect only to the single b 2L later at the repeated syllable “[et],” since the next b, before “[extre]ma” in line 9,2, seems to require b-flat with the simultaneous D f; the remaining b’s throughout the following cauda at 9,3 also seem to need ficta flats. Similarly, there are no b pitches at all in the D for quite a stretch, despite the b-natural sig in that voice before line 9,2, while the first one to arrive (at L29 in the cauda at line 9,3) implies b-flat would be more appropriate (due to its coincident f in the D); as before this seems appropriate both here and to the end of the cauda. Flat sigs are then specified in both parts before the third syllable of 9,3 where a new system also begins. Unnecessary sigs also seem to occur in the final cauda. Final cauda (at line 10,2): D: F: the b-flat sig prior to L31 seems unnecessary for the entire time it is in force up to its cancellation by a b-natural sig before L47; similar tendencies are noticeable in the use of accidentals among the various caudae in line 9. One might suppose that, despite there being no indication, the use of the b-flat in the closing melisma could be extended to the T voice, but the prominent b-c-d motive that begins at L13 in the T, and which is prefaced by a sig quad on b, does not recommend such intervention. This same motive (or a close variant) reappears in the T at L29, L31, and L33, in the same vicinity as the questionable sig rot in the D; it then resurfaces once again, now in the D and once more prefaced by a sig quad, at L47. F: TD: within the antepenultimate T phase (L83-L84) and the penultimate D phrase (L89-L90), the apparently missing material is supplied editorially.

CENTRUM CAPIT CIRCULUS
Conductus (J38/57)

F, f. 357r (7,111): Strophes Ia, IIa; Praha, f. 38v (no. 22): Strophes Ib, IIb

I

D

a. [Cen -
b. [La -

T

a. Cen -
b. [La -

[Cen]-trum ca-pit cir - cu-lus quod est ma-ius cir-cu-lo.
[La] - te - ra tri-an - gu-li per - so - na-rum tri-ni-tas

[Cen]-trum ca-pit cir - cu-lus quod est ma-ius cir-cu-lo.
[La] - te - ra tri-an - gu-li per - so - na-rum tri-ni-tas in tres [in]cen-tro tri - an - gu-lus o-mni re-ctus an-gu-lo [tres] e-qua-les an - gu-li tri-um est e - qua-li-tas.

in tres [in]cen-tro tri - an - gu-lus o-mni re-ctus an-gu-lo [tres] e-qua-les an - gu-li tri-um est e - qua-li-tas.

set [set] fit mi - nor an - gu-lus na - [na]-ti no - bis par - vu-li set [set] fit mi - nor fi - gu-lus na - [na]-ti no - bis ra - vu-li a u-nus de tri - an-gu-lo dum [dum] se mun-di fi - gu-lus pro-cu-rat hu - ma-ni-tas vir - [vir] - tu - te mi-ra - cu - li b u-nus de tri - an-gu-lo dum [dum] se mun-di fi - gu-lus pro-cu-rat hu - ma-ni-tas vir - [vir] - tu - te mi-ra - cu - li in - clu - sit in va - scu - quod im - par sit pa - ri -

- lo.
- tas

D
II
T
a. Con - [Con] - cor - dem dis - cor - di - am
b. Fra - [Fra] - ctus a - qua ba - cu - lus re - rum pa - rit no - vi - tas. ve - stem tex - it va - ri - am fe - cun - da vir - gi - ni - tas.

car - nis pa - tet o - cu - lo re - cte men - tis o - cu - lus iu - di - cat de ba - cu - lo

| mode 3
c

ma - trem vo - cat fi - li - am fa - cta ca - ro de - i - tas. os - dis - pu - tat in - cre - du - lus fra - cto de si - gna - cu - lo gra -

ma - trem vo - cat fi - li - am fa - cta ca - ro de - i - tas. os - dis - pu - tat in - cre - du - lus fra - cto de si - gna - cu - lo gra -

| mode 1

[os] - cu - la - tur so - ci - am va - ni - ta - tem ve - ri -
[gra] - ti - e di - sci - pu - lus a - scri - bit mi - ra - cu -

[os] - cu - la - tur so - ci - am va - ni - ta - tem ve - ri - [gra] - ti - e di - sci - pu - lus a - scri - bit mi - ra - cu -

si si

- [tas.]
- lo]

- [tas.]
- lo]

si

CENTRUM CAPIT CIRCULUS

Conductus (J38/57)

F, f. 357r (7,111): Strophes Ia, IIa; Praha, f. 38v^b (no. 22): Strophes Ib, IIb

Ia Centrum capit circulus quod est maius circulo; in centro triangulus, omni rectus angulo; set fit minor angulus unus de triangulo dum se mundi figulus inclusit in vasculo.	5	A circle encloses a center that is greater than the circle; in the center is a triangle, correct in every angle; but one angle of the triangle becomes smaller when the shaper of the world confined himself in a vessel.
Ib [Latera trianguli personarum trinitas; tres equales anguli trium est equalitas. Nati nobis parvuli procurat humanitas, virtute miraculi quod impar sit paritas.]	10 15	The sides of the triangle are a threesome of personages; the three equal angles denote the equality of the three. The humanity of a little child protects us, by virtue of a miracle whereby inequality signifies equality.
IIa Concordem discordiam rerum parit novitas; vestem textit variam fecunda virginitas; matrem vocat filiam facta caro deitas; osculatur sociam vanitatem veri[atas.]	20	The strangeness of these things produces harmonious discord; fertile virginity weaves a variegated garment; deity made flesh calls a daughter mother; Truth kisses its colleague Falsity.
IIb [Fractus aqua baculus carnis patet oculo; recte mentis oculus iudicat de baculo. Disputat incredulus fracto de signaculo; gratie discipulus ascribit miraculo.]	25 30	To the human eye a stick appears to be broken by water; the mind's eye correctly evaluates the stick. The unbeliever contests the broken appearance; the disciple attributes a miracle to grace.

SOURCES:F, fasc. 7, no. 111, f. 357r: a2, Strophes Ia, IIa only, with no provision for further stanzas.Text only:Praha*, no. 22, f. 38v^b: text only, Strophes Ia-IIb complete, with the subsequent stanzas headed by upper case letters and with an upper-case opening guide letter (or initial?) in the gutter between the columns; rubric in the right-hand margin: "conductus."

Pa 526 (Paris, Bibliothèque de l’Arsenal, MS 526), f. 183v: text only, Strophes Ia-IIb, complete. Images of this manuscript are not presently available to me; details are furnished from Anderson, NDRC, 5:120, the CPI website, and from the online catalog description through the Bibliothèque nationale, Paris.¹ At the bottom of the folio the following text is entered: “Dicitur quod quidam cantor ecclesie Beate Marie Parisiensis fecit illas quatuor copulas et multa alia dictamina et cantus pulcherrimos de beata virgine; et tamen dicitur quod fuit dampnatus ex quodam vitio, forte superbie” (“It is said that a certain singer of the church of Blessed Mary of Paris made these four stanzas and many other poems and very beautiful songs about the Blessed Virgin; and yet it is said that he was damned because of a certain sin, possibly arrogance.”).

GB-Occ 144 (Oxford, Corpus Christi College, MS 144), no. 4, ff. 29v, 22r (in that order): preserves portions of the text of Strophes Ia and Ib in an otherwise musically unrelated fourteenth-century English cantilena setting a3 in mensural notation.² In the fifteenth century the music and text was erased and written over with portions of the Liber metricus de nova poetria of Geoffrey of Vinsauf. See the report on this source in DIAMM.³

I-Rvat Vat. Lat. 7260 (Rome, Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana, vat. lat. 7260),⁴ f. 286r: text only of the first line of the conductus poem, from the unique MS of the Cronica of Salimbene de Adam. The citation occurs in the midst of Salimbene’s account of Henry of Pisa and the various musical settings he made, many of them to texts of Philip the Chancellor.⁵ The portion before the incipit is cited, headed by a red pilcrow, reads: “Item in illa alia littera, que est cancellarii similiter. [Henricus Pisanus] cantum fecit. scilicet Crux de te volo conqueri. et virgo tibi Respondeo. et centrum capit circulus. et quisquis cordis et oculi” (“And upon that other text, which is likewise by the Chancellor, [Henry of Pisa] made a song, that is, Crux de te volo conqueri [K59/71], and Virgo tibi respondeo [a subsequent part of the previous poem], and Centrum capit circulus [J38/57], and Quisquis cordis et oculi [K52/291].”)⁶

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Attribution: The poem is attributed directly to Philip the Chancellor in both Praha and the ¹<https://archivesetmanuscripts.bnf.fr/ark:/12148/cc79724p>. To locate the description, click on “Index,” “Sujets” “Chanson latine,” and choose the result.

²The identification of the poetry was made by Peter Lefferts in a personal communication to me from 19 February 2021. I am most appreciative of Professor Lefferts informing me about his discovery.

³<https://www.diamm.ac.uk/sources/554/#/inventory>.

⁴Images of this source are available at: https://digi.vatlib.it/view/MSS_Vat.lat.7260; see image no. 187. The foliation used here is at the top right recto of the leaf in mixed Roman and Arabic numbers as follows” “cc86” an alternative pencil foliation just below this gives “85.”

⁵Henry of Pisa was Salimbene’s custos (“protector,” “superior”) in Siena, where Salimbene lived from 1241-1243. For a recent assessment of Salimbene’s account of Henry of Pisa as a composer of conductus, see Jacopo Mazzeo, “The Two-Part Conductus: Morphology, Dating and Authorship,” (PhD diss., University of Southampton, 2015), 52-63. In terms of Henry’s possible status as the composer of any extant musical settings preserved in the main Parisian conductus sources, as Mark Everist avers, the “exact relationship between Salimbene, Henry, Philip the Chancellor and the notated sources of these three conducti remains inexact.” (Everist, Discovering Medieval Song: Latin Poetry and Music in the Conductus [Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2018], 30.)

⁶ Although Salimbene refers to the text that was set by Henry in the singular, it seems that all the poems that follow were understood to be Philip’s work, and all have corroborating ascriptions to him in other sources.

thirteenth-century Cronica of Salimbene de Adam (see the source reports above). Philip's authorship is also strongly implied by the description of the poem given in Pa 526 (see above). This piece is part of a series of four contiguous works in the seventh fascicle of F that has been ascribed to the Chancellor; see the remarks on attribution for the conductus Caput in caudam vertitur (J37/54), which immediately precedes this piece in F.

Textual notes: 1-8 (Strophe Ia): cf. the monophonic conductus Exceptivam actionem (K67/110) by Alanus ab Insulis (Alain de Lille), Strophe V, which treats geometry. In Alanus's poem, the circle (Christ) is enclosed by a square (the womb of the Virgin). Note also the saying "God is an infinite sphere whose center is everywhere and circumference is nowhere" from The Book of 24 Philosophers ascribed to Hermes Trismegistus; as well as Alanus's similar, probably derivative, remark "God is an intelligible sphere, whose center is everywhere, and whose circumference is nowhere."⁷ For a treatment of these and similar concepts, see Peter Dronke, "The Fable of the Four Spheres," in Fabula: Explorations into the Uses of Myth in Medieval Platonism, Mittellateinische Studien und Texte, no. 9 (Leiden: Brill, 1985), 143-153. 5-8: as suggested in lines 15-16, although the triangle has, in fact, three equal angles representing the equality of the Trinity's three personages, as explained in Strophe Ib, its outward appearance implies that one of the angles is lesser than the others, since it represents God humbling himself by taking on human form. On this conceit, see Philippians, 2:7-8;⁸ and for some additional appearances of this image in the conductus repertory, see the remarks on Sol sub nube latuit (I16/334), lines 17-20. The paradox that results between apparent and actual form is then explored and justified further in the last two strophes of the poem. See especially Strophe Iib (lines 25-32) where the outward appearance of an apparently broken stick, refracted by water in a glass, creates an illusion that is satisfied by the logic of the mind's eye, which correctly interprets the miracle of the virgin birth, since it regards the image as something that is considered true from the perspective of faith, rather than an unbeliever's reliance on reason alone. 7-8: The translation reflects the mixture of present and past tenses demonstrated in the poem. For the image of the potter enclosed in his own pot, see the organum prosula Vide prophecie (A9 – vdW 2/M1), lines 37-38 (in Payne, Motets and Prosulas, 8-9);⁹ and the various conductus Fontis in rivulum (K6/130), Strophe I; In hoc ortus occidente (K5/174), lines 11-12 (all ascribed to Philip the Chancellor); and Relegentur ab area (C6/304), lines 8-9 (quite possibly also his work). 17-18: discordia concors, also known as enantiosis ("opposition") – the juxtaposition of unlike things so as to imply a certain sense of agreement between them, whereby the positive is affirmed by its negative – is a rhetorical figure with a long heritage stemming from antiquity. Samuel Johnson famously defined it as "a combination of dissimilar images or discovery of occult resemblances in things apparently unlike."¹⁰ In the conductus poem this is demonstrated through the three antithetical couplings that follow in Stanza IIa: "fertile virginity," "daughter/mother," truth/falsity. 19-20: the variegated garment is the body of Christ, created from both divine and human essence. 23-24: see the image of the kiss as presented in Perotin's Dum sigillum summi patris (J24/100), Strophe II (lines 9-16).¹¹ This ⁷"Deus est sphaera intelligibilis, cuius centrum ubique, circumferentia nusquam." The text comes from his Sermo de sphaera intelligibilis, available in Marie-Thérèse d'Alverny, ed., Alain de Lille: textes inédits (Paris: J. Vrin, 1965), 295-306.

⁸Philippians, 2:7-8: "... sed semet ipsum exinanivit, formam servi accipiens in similitudinem hominum factus, et habitu inventus ut homo. Humiliavit semet ipsum, factus oboediens usque ad mortem, mortem autem crucis" ("But he [Christ] emptied himself, taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men, and devised in appearance as a man. He humbled himself, becoming obedient unto death, even to the death of the cross.").

⁹Thomas B. Payne, ed., Philip the Chancellor: Motets and Prosulas, Recent Researches in the Music of the Middle Ages and Early Renaissance, no. 41 (Middleton, Wisconsin: A-R Editions, 2011).

¹⁰See his Lives of the Poets (1779-1781) under his treatment of Abraham Cowley.

¹¹*Dum sigillum summi patris*, lines 9-16: "Dum humanam osculatur / naturam divinitas, / ex contactu fecundatur / intacta virginitas. / Mira virtus osculandi! / miranda sunt oscula / que dant vires fecundandi / sine carnis copula" ("When divinity kisses human substance, untouched virginity conceives from the contact. How astonishing is the effect of kissing! Wondrous are the kisses that grant the powers of conception without joining of flesh.").

relationship has led Anderson to ascribe the text of Dum sigillum to Philip the Chancellor (NDRC, 5:xvi), yet the treatment of the kiss in Centrum capit seems less convincing a comparison to the one in Dum sigillum than the conceit of the chaste kiss offered, for example, in the anonymous Genitus divinitus (I25/144), lines 7-9.¹² 25-32 (Strophe II b): see the discussion in the notes to the text of lines 5-8, above.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 24,2: F: final syllable omitted, supplied from Praha. 23,1: F: syllables divided as in MS. MUSIC: Opening cauda: D: F: the 2li'3li figures of L15-L19 written as if 5li, with the stroke lying underneath 1 of 3li. Lines 4 and 6: TD: F: the cum littera portions of these two verses exchange voices upon repetition, as marked above the staves. Cauda after line 20,2: T:F: the 2li'3li of the second phrase at L5-L7 written close together, as if 5li. The same occurs at L17-L19 upon the musical repeat.

¹²*Genitus divinitus*, lines 7-9: “Nec, a desiderio / defraudata, sobrio / recreatur basio” (“And unbeguiled by desire, he [Christ, the Son] is created anew from a chaste kiss.”).

CLAVUS PUNGENS ACUMINE – F and Fauv versions

Conductus: (J39/65)

F, f. 358r (7,112): Strophes Ia, IIa, III; Fauv, f. 5r^a: Strophes Ib, IIb

1. I

D
a. [Cla-
b. [In

T
a. Cla-
b. [In

[Cla] - vos pun - gens a - cu - mi - ne dum car - nem chri - sti per - fo - rat;
[In] i - stis fo - ra - mi - ni - bus ut co - lum - ba ni - di - fi - ca

[Cla] - vos pun - gens a - cu - mi - ne dum car - nem chri - sti per - fo - rat;
[In] i - stis fo - ra - mi - ni - bus ut co - lum - ba ni - di - fi - ca

ex vul - ne - rum fo - ra - mi - ne pas - si - o - nem com - me - mo - rat.
ti - bi do - mum e - di - fi - ca quam in - tres i - stis fo - ri - bus

ex vul - ne - rum fo - ra - mi - ne pas - si - o - nem com - me - mo - rat.
ti - bi do - mum e - di - fi - ca quam in - tres i - stis fo - ri - bus

cu - ius dum ma - det san - gui - ne nos per fun - dens dul - ce - di - ne
no - va cu - ran - di fi - si - ca sa - lu - tem de li - vo - ri - bus chri - sto cru - cis y - ma - gi - ne con - for - ma - tos in - cor - po - rat.

me - de - lam de vul - ne - ri - bus de - mor - te vi - tam ven - di - ca.]

[h] [i] [j] [k]

[l] [m] [k] [l] [m]

D a. O b. [Cla -

II

T a. O b. [Cla -

[n] [o] [p] [o] [n] [p'']

[o] [p] [o] [p'] [o'] [n]

[O] ma - nu - um con - fix - i - o. [o] pe - dum per - fo - ra - ti - o
[Cla] - vi quid est a - mis - si - o ni - si quod chri - sti pas - si - o

[O] ma - nu - um con - fix - i - o. [o] pe - dum per - fo - ra - ti - o
[Cla] - vi quid est a - mis - si - o ni - si quod chri - sti pas - si - o qui - bus chri - stus con - fo - di - tur. cu - ius dum ca - ro scin - di - tur.

ex - ci - dit a me - mo - ri - a cla - vis quid est con - fix - i - o qui - bus chri - stus con - fo - di - tur. cu - ius dum ca - ro scin - di - tur.

ex - ci - dit a me - mo - ri - a cla - vis quid est con - fix - i - o et cla - vo - rum mi - ste - ri - o re - gnum ce - lo - rum pan - di - tur que cla - vo fit con - tra - ri - o ni - si cul - pe ma - li - ci - a

et cla - vo - rum mi - ste - ri - o re - gnum ce - lo - rum pan - di - tur que cla - vo fit con - tra - ri - o ni - si cul - pe ma - li - ci - a ce - le - stis fa - bri stu - di - o. cla - vus in cla - vem ver - ti - ci - aut bo - ni si - mu - la - ci - o clau - di - cans in iu - sti - ci -

ce - le - stis fa - bri stu - di - o. cla - vus in cla - vem ver - ti - ci -
aut bo - ni si - mu - la - ci - o clau - di - cans in iu - sti - ci -

First system of musical notation, featuring two staves. Phonetic markers 'k'' and 'u' are present above the notes.

Second system of musical notation, featuring two staves. Phonetic markers 't' and 't'' are present above the notes.

Third system of musical notation, featuring two staves. The system concludes with the text "- tur. - a.]" and "- tur. - a."

Fourth system of musical notation, featuring two staves. Phonetic markers 'w' and 'v' are present above the notes.

Fifth system of musical notation, featuring two staves. Phonetic markers 'v'' and 'x' are present above the notes.

Sixth system of musical notation, featuring two staves. Phonetic markers 'y' and 'x'' are present above the notes.

[Vo] - - bis lo - quor pa - sto - ri - bus

[Vo] - - bis lo - quor pa - sto - ri - bus

vo - bis qui cla - ves ge - ri - tis. vo - bis qui vi - te lux - i - bus cla - ves chri - sti re - i - ci - tis.

vo - bis qui cla - ves ge - ri - tis. vo - bis qui vi - te lux - i - bus cla - ves chri - sti re - i - ci - tis.

Vos

Vos

[Vos] lu - pi fa - cti gre - gi - bus men - bra chri - sti con - fi - gi - tis.

[Vos] lu - pi fa - cti gre - gi - bus men - bra chri - sti con - fi - gi - tis.

et a - bu - ten - tes cla - vi - bus;

et a - bu - ten - tes cla - vi - bus;

cla - ves in cla - vos ver - ti - tis.

cla - ves in cla - vos ver - ti - tis.

Fauv, f. 5r^a

2. I T

a. Cla-
b. In

[Cla] - vus pun - gens a - cu - mi - ne dum car - nem chri - sti per - fo - rat;
 [In] i - stis fo - ra - mi - ni - bus ut co - lum - ba ni - di - fi - ca

ex vul - ne - rum fo - ra - mi - ne pas si - o nem com - me - mo - rat.
 ti - bi do - mum e - di - fi - ca quam in - tres i - stis fo - ri - bus

cu - ius dum ma - det san - gui - ne nos per - fun - dens dul - ce - di - ne
 no - va cu - ran - di fi - si - ca sa - lu - tem de li - vo - ri - bus chri - sto de - cru cis y - ma - gi - ne con - for - ma - tos in - cor - po - rat.

 me - de - lam de vul - ne - ri - bus de mor - te vi - tam ven - di - ca.

II T
 a. O
 b. Cla -

ma - nu - um con - fix - i - o. [o] pe - dum per - fo - ra - ti - o vi quid est a - mis - si - o ni - si quod chri - sti pas - si - o

qui - bus chri - stus con - fo - di - tur. cu - ius dum ca - ro scin - di - tur.
 ex - ci - dit a me - mo - ri - a cla - vis quid est con - fix - i - o

et cla - vo - rum mi - ste - ri - o re - gnum ce - lo - rum pan - di - tur que cla - vo fit con - tra - ri - o ni - si cul - pe ma - li - ci - a ce - le - stis fa - bri stu - di - o. cla - vus in cla - vem ver - ti - ci - aut bo - ni si - mu - la - ci - o clau - di - cans in iu - sti - ci -

- [tur.]
 - a.

- [tur.]
 - a.

III T
 Vo -

[Vo] - bis lo - - quor pa - - sto - ri - - bus vo - bis qui cla - ves ge - ri - tis

[Vo] - bis lo - - quor pa - - sto - ri - - bus vo - bis qui cla - ves ge - ri - tis

8 vo - bis qui vi - te lux - i - bus cla - ves chri - sti re - i - ci - tis.

8 [V]os

8 [V]os lu - pi fa - cti gre - gi - bus mem - bra chri - sti con - fi - gi - tis.

8 et a - bu - ten - tes cla - vi - bus

8 cla - - ves in cla - vos ver - ti - tis.

CLAVUS PUNGENS ACUMINE – F and Fauv versions
Conductus (J39/65)

F, f. 358r (7,112): Strophes Ia, IIa, III; Fauv, f. 5r^a: Strophes Ib, IIb

- | | |
|---|---|
| Ia Clavus pungens acumine, dum carnem Christi perforat,
ex vulnerum foramine,
Passionem commemorat.
Cuius dum madet sanguine,
nos perfundens dulcedine, Christo crucis ymagine
conformatos incorporat. | When the piercing Nail punctures Christ's flesh with its point, it calls to mind the Passion from out of the holes of the wounds.
5 When it drips with his blood, showering us with sweetness, it makes one in Christ those fashioned in the image of the Cross. |
| Ib [In istis foraminibus, ut columba nidifica,
tibi domum edifica,
quam intres istis foribus.
Nova curandi fisica, salutem de livoribus,
medelam de vulneribus,
de morte vitam vendica.] | 10 Like a dove making a nest, build yourself a home within these wounds, one that you may enter through these doors.
With a new science of healing,
rescue salvation from envy, 15 extract a remedy from the wounds, and demand life from death. |
| IIa O manuum confixio,
[O] pedum perforatio, quibus Christus confoditur cuius dum caro scinditur.
Et clavorum misterio, regnum celorum panditur;
celestis fabri studio,
clavus in clavem vertitur. | 20 O, the fastening of the hands,
O, the piercing of the feet,
by these is Christ transfixed
when his flesh is torn.
And by the secret power of the nails,
the kingdom of heaven is thrown open;
thanks to the efforts of the heavenly smith,
the nail is turned into a key. |
| IIb [Clavi quid est amissio, nisi quod Christi passio excidit a memoria?
Clavis quid est confixio que clavo fit contrario nisi culpe malicia
aut boni simulacio,
claudicans iniusticia?] | 25 What means the loss of the Nail, save that Christ's Passion has been forgotten?
What means this fashioning of the key,
which is formed from the contrary Nail, 30 unless there is wickedness of guilt or the pretense of good,
a crippling injustice? |
| III Vobis loquor, pastoribus, vobis qui claves geritis,
vobis, qui vite luxibus,
claves Christi reicitis. Vos lupi facti gregibus.
Membra Christi configitis;
et abutentes clavibus,
claves in clavos vertitis. | 35 I speak to you, shepherds,
to you who bear the keys,
to you, who in the debauchery of your life,
cast away Christ's keys. You have become wolves among the flocks.
You have nailed Christ's limbs;
and, abusing the keys,
40 you turn the keys back into nails. |

SOURCES:

F: fasc. 7, no. 112, f. 358: a2; Strophes Ia, IIa, III, only. The piece begins mid-system on the folio (rather than at the left margin), something that happens only 12 times in F-7.¹ Unusually, each stanza given here leads with a fully decorated illuminated initial, suggesting the appearance of three separate musical works; see the comparable disposition of this piece in Fauv, below, and the similarly appointed conductus De rupta Rupecula (F25/82 – at F-6,53, f. 245r) in its presentation in Ch (F-CECad 3.J.250). For Clavus pungens in F, a large capital heads line 37, indicated by the extra space in the text above.

Fauv: no. 15, f. 5r^a: a1 (T), in mensural notation; Strophes Ia-III, complete; the disposition of the strophic pairs resembles that of F, with each primary stanza (Ia, IIa, III) headed by an illuminated initial. The secondary stanzas (Ib, IIb) conventionally follow each of their associates, written as regular text with no provision for music; Ib, though, is headed by a capital letter, while IIb leads with an illuminated initial. A number of the caudae in the earlier part of this version are abridged or rewritten. The Fauv redaction appears as an alternative reading following the rendering of F.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text:

Date and Authorship: Clavus pungens acumine was almost certainly written in light of a specific historical event: the loss and miraculous recovery of the Holy Nail of St Denis, a relic from the Crucifixion especially prized by the royal abbey, which was lost on Sunday, 27 February 1233 (the second Sunday of Lent), and found again on 1 April, Good Friday of the same year. An extended contemporaneous prose account of this incident was published in 1906 by Pierre Aubry, edited from the manuscripts F-Pn n.a. lat. 1509 and F-Pa 1030.² According to this narrative, the nail fell from its reliquary during a crowded, ongoing exhibition of the abbey's treasures, which was rendered as part of a commemoration during the octave of the the feast of the Dedication of the Church at Saint Denis (February 24). Rescued by a poor woman who initially thought it might be made of precious metal, it was eventually taken to the Cistercian abbey of Val, where its authenticity was confirmed and the relic restored to Saint Denis. Clavus pungens has been regarded for some time as a likely work from Philip the Chancellor. Both Friedrich Ludwig (Repertorium, 1/1, 266),³ and Peter Dronke, ("Lyrical Compositions," 592),⁴ as well as myself, have proposed him as its author. In addition, the piece occurs in F-7

¹For a list, see the source report on F for Pia mater gratie (J18/268), at F-7,71, on f. 331r.

²Pierre Aubry, "Comment fut perdu et retrouvé le saint clou de Saint-Denis (1233)," Revue Mabillon, 2 (1906): 185-192, 286-300; 3 (1907): 43-50, 147-182. See also the earlier, related article: Pierre Aubry, "Un Chant historique latin du XIII^e siècle: le saint Clou de Saint-Denis (1233)," Le Mercure Musical, 1 (1905): 423-434. This work summarizes much of the Latin account that is presented in Aubry's later article. The full shelfmarks of the MSS containing the report of the event, respectively, are Paris, Bibliothèque nationale, nouvelles acquisitions latines, 1509; and Paris, Bibliothèque de l'Arsenal, 1030.

³Friedrich Ludwig, Repertorium organorum recentioris et motetorum vetustissimi stili, vol. 1: Catalogue raisonné der Quellen, part 1: Handschriften in Quadrat-Notation, 2nd rev. ed., Luther Dittmer, ed., Musicological Studies, no. 7 (Brooklyn: Institute of Mediaeval Music; Hildesheim: Georg Olms Verlagsbuchhandlung, 1964).

⁴Peter Dronke, "The Lyrical Compositions of Philip the Chancellor," Studi medievali, 3rd series, 28 (1987): 563-592.

as part of a group of four conductus that all have claims to Philip’s authorship.⁵ Both of these qualities – modern attribution and transmission within F among other works by Philip – also hold true for the monophonic conductus Clavus clavo retunditur (K51/64), a work surviving uniquely in F-10, no. 51, on f. 437v, and the only other work on the loss of the Holy Nail to appear in the main Parisian conductus sources. As a further correlative, the medieval chronicler Aubry (or Alberic) des Trois-Fontaines⁶ relates that Philip wrote a so-called narratio on the loss and recovery of the Nail.⁷ Although claims have surfaced that the two conductus may themselves be the narratio mentioned by Aubry des Trois-Fontaines,⁸ it is much more likely that the chronicler was referring to a prose account. Similarly, although one might suppose that Philip may have penned the extant report of the miracles, Pierre Aubry has strongly argued against this idea, noting that the long narrative is antithetical to Philip’s style and much more likely a work by a monk of Saint Denis (see “Comment fut perdu,” 287-288). As a result, Philip’s narratio on the Holy Nail is now considered lost, nor has anything surfaced in Philip’s voluminous body of homilies that might correspond to the item. Textual notes: In addition to the discussion of the two Holy Nail conductus offered in my dissertation (“Poetry Politics, and Polyphony,” 128-143), there is a compelling treatment of these two works by Anne-Zoé Rillon-Marne (“Entre conduits et sermons”).⁹ Rillon-Marne’s article presents some useful and necessary correctives to some of my earlier observations, and has aided greatly in informing the following commentary. 7-8: cf. Romans, 12: 5;¹⁰ Galatians, 3:28.¹¹ 9-10: cf. Jeremiah, 48:28.¹² Rillon-Marne (“Entre conduits,” 106) has identified a passage from Philip’s Distinctiones super Psalterium that expounds upon this biblical citation (with some borrowing from Bernard of Clairvaux); a number of phrases appear that are evocative of expressions found in this conductus. 13,3-4: the doors are the wounds caused by the nails. 14-16: the verb “vendica” covers all three of the objects in this passage; the translation has been rendered differently for each pair of items. 20-24: see also ⁵See the remarks on the text for the first piece in this group, Caput in caudam vertitur (J37/54), at F-7,110, f. 356v, for further details. The four works include: Caput in caudam vertitur (J37/54), Centrum capit circulus (J38/57), Clavus pungens acumine (J39/65), and Luget Rachel iterum (J40/199).

⁶Aubry des Trois-Fontaines, Chronica Albrici Monachi Trium Fontium, Paul Scheffer-Boichorst ed., Monumenta Germaniae Historica: Scriptores, vol. 23 (Hannover: Hahn, 1874).

⁷Aubry des Trois-Fontaines, Chronica Albrici, 931: “Anno 1233 ... De sancto clavo apud Sanctum Dyonysium perduto et iterum reinvento mirabiliter et de miraculis et contingentibus circa hanc inventionem gestis scripsit optimam narrationem Magister Philippus Cancellarius Parisiensis” (“In the year 1233 ... Master Philip the Chancellor of Paris wrote an excellent narrative about the loss of the Holy Nail of Saint Denis and its recovery again in a miraculous manner, as well as the miracles and other pertinent matters surrounding the discovery.”).

⁸Ludwig, Repertorium, 1/1, 266.

⁹Anne-Zoé Rillon-Marne, “Entre conduits et sermons, variation autour de l’image du christi clavus chez Philippe le Chancelier,” Revue Mabillon, 19 (2008): 99-122.

¹⁰Romans, 12: 5: “... ita multi unum corpus sumus in Christo, singuli autem alter alterius membra” (“... so we being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another.”).

¹¹Galatians, 3:28: “Non est Judaeus, neque Graecus: non est servus, neque liber: non est masculus, neque femina. Omnes enim vos unum estis in Christo Jesu” (“There is neither Jew nor Greek: there is neither bond nor free: there is neither male nor female. For you are all one in Christ Jesus.”).

¹²Jeremiah 48:28: “Relinquitte civitates, et habitate in petra, habitatores Moab: et estote quasi columba nidificans in summo ore foraminis” (“Leave the cities, and dwell in the rock, you that dwell in Moab: and be you like the dove that makes her nest in the mouth of the hole in the highest place.”).

Philip's sequence Si vis vera frui luce (K40/329), stanza Ib (lines 4-6).¹³ 24: Rillon-Marne ("Entre conduits," 101, note 9) sees in the phrase "clavus in clavem vertitur" (along with the nearly identical expression in line 40) a variant of the proverbial expression "clavo clavum eicere" ("to drive out one nail with another"). A further variant of this same proverb, "clavus clavo retunditur" ("a nail is blunted by a nail"), begins the other Holy Nail conductus mentioned above. The adage itself likely goes back at least as far as Cicero's Tusculan Disputations (book 4, chap. 35, § 75).¹⁴ See Rillon-Marne for further information and citations, including the occurrence of the phrase "clavus clavo retunditur" within Philip's Distinctiones super Psalterium. 25: although brief, singular, and buried well within the poem, this is almost certainly a reference to the loss of the Holy Nail of St. Denis in 1233. This correspondence is supported by similar language in the other Nail piece that also takes the form of a question that asks about the significance of the loss, see Clavus clavo retunditur, lines 17-19.¹⁵ 28,4: construed here as equivalent in sound and sense to "confictio." The typical meaning of the word as spelled here ("fastening," "piercing") does relate to the crucifixion, but seems less satisfactory a rendering in this place, where the key to heaven is put in opposition to the Nail, out of which it was originally created, and which is associated only with the most negative qualities. Hence the means to enter heaven was only able to be formed through the suffering of the Crucifixion. As we see in the final stanza, the key ultimately is refashioned back into a nail. Compare also Philip's remarks in his Summa de bono (ed. Wicki, 2:848, lines 73-74):¹⁶ "Sed est ex comparatione pene Christi, a qua claves habent virtutem" ("But it is from the comparison to the pain of Christ by which the keys have power."). 32,2: possibly intended as two words "in iusticia," ("wavering in justice"). 33-34: the shepherds are the clergy, through whom the faithful may seek salvation. St. Peter, who symbolizes the papacy, the head of all priests, bears a key as one of his most typical attributes. See also Matthew, 16:19,¹⁷ and the various chants that begin with Tu es pastor ovium (see e.g., the Cantus index, no. 001167).¹⁸ 37: cf. Matthew, 7:15¹⁹ and the conductus Dogmatum falsas species (K55/97), possibly by Philip the Chancellor, lines 13-14.²⁰ 40: see the remarks for line 24. Rillon-Marne ("Entre conduits," 105-106) notes that the chain of images that occur through the course of this poem – from nail to wounds, wounds to doors, doors to keys, and ¹³*Si vis vera frui luce*, lines 4-6: "... ut de passionis clavis / fabricetur tibi clavis / qua celum introeas" ("... so that from the nails of the Passion a key may be forged for you, by which you may enter heaven."). Other mentions of the Nail, without the corollary of the key to heaven, appear in some of Philip's other writings (See Rillon-Marne, "Entre conduits," 104).

¹⁴"... etiam novo quidam amore veterem amorem tamquam clavo clavum eiciendum putant ..." ("... [also] some people think an old love may be driven out by a new one, as one nail drives out another ..." the translation is by C.D. Yonge, Cicero's Tusculan Disputations (New York: Harper and Brothers, 1877), 159.

¹⁵*Clavus clavo retunditur*, lines 17-19: Quid est, quod diu latuit, / et latentem exhibuit / Christus die Paraceves? ("What is this that lay so long concealed, / the secret Christ revealed / upon Good Friday?")

¹⁶Nikolaus Wicki, ed., Philippi Cancellarii Parisiensis: Summa de Bono, 2 vols., Corpus philosophorum medii aevi: Opera philosophica mediae aetatis selecta, no. 2 (Bern: Francke, 1985).

¹⁷Matthew, 16:19: "Et tibi dabo claves regni caelorum. Et quodcumque ligaveris super terram, erit ligatum et in caelis: et quodcumque solveris super terram, erit solutum et in caelis" ("And I [Jesus] will give to you [Peter] the keys of the kingdom of heaven. And whatsoever you shall bind upon earth, it shall be bound also in heaven: and whatsoever you shall loose upon earth, it shall be loosed also in heaven.").

¹⁸*Cantus Index*, no. 001167: "Tu es pastor ovium, princeps apostolorum; tibi tradidit deus claves regni caelorum" ("You [Peter] are the shepherd of the sheep, the prince of apostles; to you God has handed over the keys of the kingdom of the heavens").

¹⁹Matthew, 7:15: "Attendite a falsis prophetis, qui veniunt ad vos in vestimentis ovium, intrinsecus autem sunt lupi rapaces" ("Beware of false prophets, who come to you in the clothing of sheep, but inwardly they are ravaging wolves.").

²⁰*Dogmatum falsas species*, lines 13-14: "Sub vestimentis ovium / latent lupi rapaces" ("Beneath sheep's clothing lie ravaging wolves."). On Philip's possible authorship of this piece, see David A. Traill, "Philip the Chancellor and the Heresy Inquisition in Northern France, 1235-1236," Viator, 37 (2006): 241-254.

key turning back into a nail – is analogous to the way that images prompted by concordant biblical citations are coordinated in the construction of contemporaneous sermons.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 8,2: Fauv: The stanza ends not with a period, but with a squiggle that fills out the distance to the end of the system; period supplied editorially. 16,4: Fauv: vendicat; the necessity for the rhyme prompts the editorial emendation. 18,1: F,Fauv: a likely om syll, since the same place in Strophe IIb (line 26), extant in Fauv, has an eight-syll line, as do all other lines in the poem. 19,2: Fauv: χ pisto. 22,3: Fauv: ponditur. 24,3: F,Fauv: clavum. 24,4: Fauv: last syll “-tur” om. 32: Fauv: no concluding punctuation; added editorially. 37,1: F: begins with a capital letter, as though beginning a new strophe or versicle. Fauv: initial missing; as in F this would have likely have been a capital letter or possibly an illuminated initial, as if beginning a new strophe or versicle. 38,1: Fauv: membra. MUSIC: General remarks: The polyphonic setting in F is particularly elegant and strongly implies that the music of the T and D was conceived in tandem. Extensive repetitions of diverse elements, from the level of small motivic cells to restatements of larger phrases, in addition to systematic voice exchange, canonic writing, and the use of both trochaic mode 1 and iambic mode 2, surface throughout. Many of the melodic correspondences are labeled with letters above the staff, although many more such identities could be posited. See, for an example of a more searching analysis that takes only the opening cauda and first stanza into account, Rillon-Marne, “Entre conduits,” 110-115, cited above. Variant readings from Fauv are not included unless they exhibit a particularly curious point of comparison; they may be otherwise assessed by comparing the F and Fauv versions, both of which are included here. Fauv, interestingly, shows signs of having a number of its caudae excised, shortened, or replaced (indicated in the commentary below). Particularly curious in this regard is the fact that the differences between the caudae in the two sources lasts only up to the internal cauda in Strophe III at line 37,1, after which the remaining two melismas are essentially presented complete. Elements of the mensural notation in the Fauv reading that differ from F have not been considered thoroughly here. Opening cauda (at line 1): D: F: at L5,2, possibly e, but see the similar motive in the D, at L21, which suggested the adopted reading. T: Fauv: beginning with L23 (L29 in F), the remainder of the F cauda is replaced by a short 4L concluding passage in Fauv. D: F: at L37,1, the 2 of the 2li here=e. The editorial emendation to f maintains the pattern of the ongoing melodic sequence and also avoids a dissonance. Line 2,4: T: Fauv: erased ' follows this word, as though the scribe expected a rest to follow, as at the end of line 1, not realizing that the upbeat d for the first syllable of 3,1 was to occupy that B unit. Cauda closing Strophe I (line 8,2): T: Fauv: entire cauda omitted. Cauda opening Strophe II (at line 9): T: Fauv: replaced by a much shorter, unrelated cauda; see the alternative reading given after the one in F. D: F: at L1 of the cauda, possibly not a plica (as rendered here) but a stroke of division; the plica was decided upon due to their frequency throughout the rest of the cauda. T: F: at L10,2, possibly f, but the adopted reading forms an antecedent-consequent gesture for each half of the phrase. T: F: L11-L12 om; a conjectural editorial emendation; see L3 of the T and L1 of the D for the material used to supply the reading. TD: F: beginning with L17-L18 the rest of this melisma could be construed in rhythmic mode 2, but mode 1 yields better consonances at the start of each L. Line 17,3: T: Fauv: the 3L closing melismatic flourish to this line replaced by L=a. 18,1: TD: F,Fauv: optional; a conjectured missing text syll in both sources occasions this editorial addition (see the observations on the verbal text at 18,1 just above, and note the additional syll provided here by Fauv for Strophe IIb, line 26). Both F and Fauv, though, have the same readings here for IIa, so the emendation remains hypothetical. 18,3: T: Fauv: the short melisma concluding this line uses a 4li cum proprietate et cum perfectione, hence the reading L,BB,L. If desired it may be read as L,LB,L to conform to the rhythms that conclude line 19. The same may be done for the cum ... cum ligature ending line 20, in order to conform with line 21. 19,2: T: F: preceding ' om. 20,4: see the above remarks on the music for line 18,3. 21,2: T: F: preceding ' om. Cauda closing Strophe II (line 16,4): T: Fauv: beginning with L17,2 (in both sources), the remainder of this cauda is replaced by a shorter concluding phrase of 5L, while F continues for another 25 L and concludes the strophe with a punctus organi; cf. the alternative reading. Cauda opening Strophe III (line 33): T: Fauv: the portion of the cauda from L27-L41 in F (starting at L23 in Fauv) is replaced by two shorter phrases very similar to the T of L31-L34 and L39-L42, but ending respectively on d and e; the concluding phrase of the cauda from L43-L50 in F then follows at L31-L36 in Fauv, omitting the antepenultimate f pitch in F at L47 (the same place where F omits a note in the D, as follows); cf. the alternative reading from Fauv. D: F: at L47, missing pitch, editorial emendation. Line 33,2: T: F: following ' om, added editorially. T: Fauv: this word (“loquor”) written 3 lower than F; retained here in Fauv transcription. 35,2: T: Fauv: “christi” = agf,d against age,c in F; retained in Fauv transcription. Cauda at line 37,1: T: Fauv: this is the first cauda that is not abbreviated or omitted in comparison to F; the other melismas that follow from this point are essentially presented whole. Line 38,3: T: F: following ' om, added editorially. 40,1: T F: ' preceding second syll om, added editorially. Cauda after line 39,3: T: Fauv: first 2 notes of melisma = cf ' (retained in Fauv version), against df in F. Closing cauda (after line 40): D F: repeated si=c at L3,1 written as L. T F: repeated si=f at L18,1 written as L. D: F: repeated si=f at L26,1 written as L. T: Fauv: at L11-L13, 4li=abca written cum proprietate et cum perfectione with a dot of division/perfection following. This seems to imply an unlikely short shift to modes 3 and 2 for 8L. This passage in Fauv has been rendered as in F.

LUGET RACHEL ITERUM

Conductus (J40/199)

F, f. 359v (7,113)

I

Lu - get ra - chel i - te - rum.

Lu - get ra - chel i - te - rum.

cu - ius dam - pnat u - te - rum fi - li - o - rum or - bi - tas.

cu - ius dam - pnat u - te - rum fi - li - o - rum or - bi - tas.

la - pso ta - ber - na - cu - lo

la - pso ta - ber - na - cu - lo

quon - dam ple - na po - pu - lo so - la se - det ci - vi - tas.

quon - dam ple - na po - pu - lo so - la se - det ci - vi - tas.

Lan -

Lan -

[Lan] - guent sy - on fi - li - e co - ti - di - e af - fli - gen - tes a - ni - mam.

[Lan] - guent sy - on fi - li - e co - ti - di - e af - fli - gen - tes a - ni - mam.

cum non sit qui fa - ci - at nec ve - ni - at cum non sit qui fa - ci - at nec ve - ni - at ad pa - scha - lem vi -

ad pa - scha - lem vi -

[f']

[f]

- cti - - mam.]

- cti - - mam.

LUGET RACHEL ITERUM

Conductus (J40/199)

F, f. 359v (7,113)

I Luget Rachel iterum; cuius dampnat uterum filiorum orbitas. Lapso tabernaculo, quondam plena populo sola sedet civitas. Languent Syon filie cotidie, affligentes animam, cum non sit qui faciat, nec veniat ad paschalem victimam.	Rachel mourns once more; the loss of her sons condemns her womb. With the collapse of the temple, 5 the city, once full of people, lies forsaken. 10 The daughters of Zion grieve day by day, distressing the soul, since no one does anything, nor does anyone come to the paschal victim.
--	---

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 113, f. 359v: a2; Strophe I, with a capital letter heading line 7, represented by vertical space in the text above. There are no provisions for additional stanzas. This is a unique musical and poetic transmission.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Mark Everist (Discovering Medieval Song: Latin Poetry and Music in the Conductus [Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2018], 173-180), has an extensive discussion of the poetry and music of this piece, which includes his observations on the numerical proportions within the poem and the musical setting, and the relationships that a conductus like this shares with the mixed form of the prosimetrum, which combines quantitative metrical poetry and prose. His treatment has supplemented some of the commentary here. Authorship: Peter Dronke (“Lyrical Compositions,” 592) has proposed Philip the Chancellor as the author of this text;¹ for some additional support, see the notes to lines 1-3 and 11-12. Textual notes 1-3: see Jeremiah, 31:15,² and its further citation in Matthew, 2:18.³ As Everist notes (173), the weeping Rachel is employed here as a symbol for the Holy Land in the wake of the capture of Jerusalem by Islamic forces in 1187. The musical style, though, suggests a later date for this relatively elaborate composition. To this end, Everist (173-4) points out correlations between the text of Luget Rachel and a general letter to the ¹Peter Dronke, “The Lyrical Compositions of Philip the Chancellor,” Studi medievali, 3rd series, 28 (1987): 563-592.

²Jeremiah, 31:15: “Haec dicit Dominus: Vox in excelso audita est lamentationis: luctus, et fletus Rachel plorantis filios suos, et nolentis consolari super eis, quia non sunt” (“Thus says the Lord: A voice was heard on high of lamentation, of mourning, and weeping, of Rachel weeping for her children, and refusing to be comforted for them, because they are not [i.e., no more].”).

³Matthew 2:18: “Vox in Rama audita est ploratus, et ululatus multus: Rachel plorans filios suos, et noluit consolari, quia non sunt” (“A voice in Rama was heard, lamentation and great mourning; Rachel bewailing her children, and would not be comforted, because they are not.”).

people of France from Pope Gregory IX, dated 17 November 1234. For some additional conductus that treat – or may treat – the loss of Jerusalem, see Venit Jhesus in propria (K42/365), Quomodo cantabimus (K25/296), Homo cur properas (K69/158), Sede Syon de pulvere (K8/321), and the conductus prosula Crucifigat omnes (D3/70). All of these texts are proposed as works by Philip the Chancellor, with the first two ascribed to him by the medieval MS Da, the others by modern scholars.⁴ In terms of the surface meaning of these opening lines in the conductus poem, the renewed mourning by Jacob’s/Israel’s wife is due to the conquering of Jerusalem in 1187. This event causes Rachel to grieve anew for the loss of her children, as she did before in the book of Lamentations and in the Gospel of Matthew. The reference to the condemnation of Rachel’s womb in lines 2-3 may reflect that Joseph and Benjamin, the last two of Jacob’s 12 sons and the only ones born by Rachel, were conceived after a long period of infertility on her part, during which time Jacob had children with his first wife, Leah, as well as with both Rachel’s and Leah’s servants, Bilhah and Zilpah respectively (see Genesis, 29-30). The birth of Rachel’s children is described in the Bible as a gift from God,⁵ and thus their separation from their mother would be a serious failing that would draw condemnation from the Lord. 5-6: taken from Lamentations, 1:1;⁶ like the conductus poem, the biblical book is given over to mourning the fall of Jerusalem. 7-12: Everist (174-175) sees this stanza as paraphrasing the events of Luke, 23:27-29, a scene from the Passion where a group of people, including women, follow mournfully after Jesus on the way to his crucifixion.⁷ There is, though, as Everist admits, no direct verbal correspondence between the conductus poem and the gospel text. 7-8: similar to the opening figure of Rachel, the daughters of Zion are a metaphor here for the grieving city of Jerusalem. For biblical appearances of this figure in anguished situations, see, e.g., Lamentations, 2:10,⁸ and 2:18.⁹ 11-12: see Lamentations, 1:4;¹⁰ also note the correspondences to the above-mentioned conductus Venit

⁴*Da* = Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek Darmstadt, 2777 (D-DS 2777). The ascription of Sede Syon to Philip is proposed only by David A. Traill in his widely encompassing attribution of much of fascicle 10 of F to Philip; see his “Philip the Chancellor and F10: Expanding the Canon,” Filologia mediolatina, 10 (2003): 219-248, at 247, note 66.

⁵See Genesis, 30: 22-24: “Recordatus quoque Dominus Rachelis, exaudivit eam, et aperuit vulvam ejus. Quae concepit, et peperit filium, dicens: Abstulit Deus opprobrium meum. Et vocavit nomen ejus Joseph, dicens: Addat mihi Dominus filium alterum” (“The Lord also remembering Rachel, heard her, and opened her womb. And she conceived, and bore a son, saying: God hath taken away my reproach. And she called his name Joseph, saying: The Lord give me also another son.”).

⁶Lamentations, 1:1: “Quomodo sedet sola civitas plena populo! Facta est quasi vidua domina gentium; princeps provinciarum facta est sub tributo” (“How does the city sit solitary that was full of people! how is the mistress of the Gentiles become as a widow: the princes of provinces made tributary!”).

⁷Luke, 23:27-29: “Sequebatur autem illum multa turba populi et mulierum, quae plangebant et lamentabantur eum. Conversus autem ad illas Jesus, dixit: Filiae Jerusalem, nolite flere super me, sed super vos ipsas flete et super filios vestros. Quoniam ecce venient dies in quibus dicent: Beatae steriles, et ventres qui non genuerunt, et ubera quae non lactaverunt” (“And there followed him [Jesus] a great multitude of people, and of women, who bewailed and lamented him. But Jesus turning to them, said: Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not over me; but weep for yourselves, and for your children. For behold, the days shall come, wherein they will say: Blessed are the barren, and the wombs that have not borne, and the paps that have not given suck.”).

⁸Lamentations, 2:10: “Sederunt in terra, conticuerunt senes filiae Sion; consperserunt cinere capita sua, accincti sunt ciliciis: abjecerunt in terram capita sua virgines Jerusalem” (“The ancients of the daughter of Sion sit upon the ground, they have held their peace: they have sprinkled their heads with dust, they are girded with haircloth, the virgins of Jerusalem hang down their heads to the ground.”).

⁹Lamentations, 2:18: “Clamavit cor eorum ad Dominum super muros filiae Sion: Deduc quasi torrentem lacrimas per diem et noctem; non des requiem tibi, neque taceat pupilla oculi tui” (“Their heart cried to the Lord upon the walls of the daughter of Sion: Let tears run down like a torrent day and night: give yourself no rest, and let not the apple of your eye cease”).

¹⁰Lamentations, 1:4: “Viae Sion lugent, eo quod non sint qui veniant ad solemnitatem: omnes portae ejus destructae, sacerdotes ejus gementes; virgines ejus squalidae, et ipsa oppressa amaritudine” (“The ways of Sion mourn, because there are none that come to the solemn feast: all her gates are broken down: her priests sigh: her virgins are in affliction, and she is oppressed with bitterness.”).

Jhesus in propria, lines 11-13.¹¹ 12,2-3: the paschal victim (Easter or Passover sacrificial offering) is Christ, whose suffering is equated here with the fall of Jerusalem.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. MUSIC: Lines 1-6: with occasional variations, the entirety of the T in lines 1-3, including the opening cauda, is repeated in lines 4-6 (as indicated by the boxed letters above the staff). In addition, the D melody of line 3 is also closely comparable to its appearance in line 6, and other portions of D passages here show somewhat looser identities with their corresponding partners in the T. Additional agreements might well be proposed. Note also the canonic writing near the end of the final cauda. Final cauda: T: F: the restored notes at L16 and L19-L20 of this melisma are editorial emendations; they are similar to the modifications in Anderson, NDRC, 5:72, measures 59-63, except that, due to my different transcription of the D at L11-L12, the om si=c at L16 in the T is here placed after the 3li=fac at L14-L15, rather than before, as in Anderson. As a result, there is no need to suppress the si=c in the D at L16, as Anderson does, and no break in the canon occurs between the two parts from L14-L20,1 – a factor that led to Anderson’s decision to omit the D note. T: F: the entire last phrase in this voice, from L 24 to the end of the piece, written 3 lower.

¹¹*Venit Jhesus in propria* (K42/365), lines 11-13: “Eius amici fugiunt, / nec alieni veniunt / ad sepulchri sollempnia” (“Her [Judea’s] friends desert her / and come not to / the festivals of the foreign tomb.”).

VENI CREATOR SPIRITUS ET IN ME ROBUR INSERE
 Conductus (J41/360)

F, f. 360r (7,114): Strophes I, VII; Pn 18751: Strophes II-VI; D-Mbs Clm. 11333 (via Anderson, NDRC, 5:xxxv, 121):
 Strophe Va*

I-VI

1. [Ve -
 2. [Qui
 3. [Tu
 4. [Ac -
 5. [Ho -
 6. [Per

1. Ve -
 2. [Qui
 3. [Tu
 4. [Ac -
 5. [Ho -
 6. [Per
 5a. [Da

1. [Ve] - ni cre - a - tor spi - ri - tus
 2. [Qui] pa - ra - cli - tus di - ce - ris
 3. [Tu] sep - ti - for - mis mu - ne - re
 4. [Ac] - cen - de lu - men sen - si - bus
 5. [Ho] - stem re - pel - las lon - gi - us
 6. [Per] te sci - am in - ge - ni - tum

1. [Ve] - ni cre - a - tor spi - ri - tus
 2. [Qui] pa - ra - cli - tus di - ce - ris
 3. [Tu] sep - ti - for - mis mu - ne - re
 4. [Ac] - cen - de lu - men sen - si - bus
 5. [Ho] - stem re - pel - las lon - gi - us
 6. [Per] te sci - am in - ge - ni - tum
 5a. [Da] gau - di - o - rum pre - mi - a

1. et in me ro - bur in - se - re. ro - bur quo pos - sim pe - ni - tus
 2. qui pi - e - ta - te so - li - ta con - fers sa - lu - tem mi - se - ris
 3. dex-tre de - i tu di - gi - tus tu qui nun-quam de - se - re - re
 4. me - is mi - se - ri - cor - di - ter et pec - ca - to - rum sor - di - bus
 5. pro - pa - ga - tor - em sce - le - ris ho - stem qui pi - is im - pi - us
 6. pa - trem. cum na - to co - le - re et u - tri - us - que spi - ri - tum

1. et in me ro - bur in - se - re. ro - bur quo pos - sim pe - ni - tus
 2. qui pi - e - ta - te so - li - ta con - fers sa - lu - tem mi - se - ris
 3. dex-tre de - i tu di - gi - tus tu qui nun-quam de - se - re - re
 4. me - is mi - se - ri - cor - di - ter et pec - ca - to - rum sor - di - bus
 5. pro - pa - ga - tor - em sce - le - ris ho - stem qui pi - is im - pi - us
 6. pa - trem. cum na - to co - le - re et u - tri - us - que spi - ri - tum
 5a. me - ren - do mi suc - cur - re - re ut post vi - vam in pa - tr - ia

*The optional stanza Va, unique to its source, is underlaid to the T voice only, so that it can be assessed and implemented if desired.

e

1. ma - la que ges - si lu - e - re et a - mo - do sic vi - ve - re
 2. et iu - stis red - dis pre - mi - a fac de me ti - bi pla - ci - ta
 3. ser - vos tu - os es so - li - tus e - sto de me sol - li - ci - tus
 4. im - mun - dum mun - da ta - li - ter ut a - ni - ma per - hen - ni - ter
 5. tor - que - bi - tur cum mi - se - ris ho - stem hu - ma - ni ge - ne - ris
 6. per te dis - cam di - li - ge - re per te pos - sim ac - qui - re - re

d'

1. ma - la que ges - si lu - e - re et a - mo - do sic vi - ve - re
 2. et iu - stis red - dis pre - mi - a fac de me ti - bi pla - ci - ta
 3. ser - vos tu - os es so - li - tus e - sto de me sol - li - ci - tus
 4. im - mun - dum mun - da ta - li - ter ut a - ni - ma per - hen - ni - ter
 5. tor - que - bi - tur cum mi - se - ris ho - stem hu - ma - ni ge - ne - ris
 6. per te dis - cam di - li - ge - re per te pos - sim ac - qui - re - re

5a. hec pos - sim com - pre - hen - de - re da mi - hi cul - pas plan - ge - re

1. ne sim pec - ca - to per - di - tus. pec - ca - vi qua - si li - ci - tus
 2. per - e - o ni sub - ve - ne - ris me per - dit lu - dus ve - ne - ris
 3. in - ten - de mi - chi pro - pe - re no - li me de - re - lin - que - re
 4. ser - ve - tur a no - cen - ti - bus a ma - lis im - mi - nen - ti - bus
 5. quem stra - vit de - i fi - li - us ho - stem qui sem - per nox - i - us
 6. re - gni ce - le - stis a - di - tum te spi - ri - tum pa - ra - cli - tum

1. ne sim pec - ca - to per - di - tus. pec - ca - vi qua - si li - ci - tus
 2. per - e - o ni sub - ve - ne - ris me per - dit lu - dus ve - ne - ris
 3. in - ten - de mi - chi pro - pe - re no - li me de - re - lin - que - re
 4. ser - ve - tur a no - cen - ti - bus a ma - lis im - mi - nen - ti - bus
 5. quem stra - vit de - i fi - li - us ho - stem qui sem - per nox - i - us
 6. re - gni ce - le - stis a - di - tum te spi - ri - tum pa - ra - cli - tum

5a. ut gau - de - am in glo - ri - a ap - pa - rens in iu - sti - ti - a

1. et di - u vix - i te - me - re. me ser - vum tu - um vi - se - re.
 2. me co - git ad il - li - ci - ta me pro - te - ge me vi - si - ta
 3. sed re - fo - ve me ce - li - tus dex - tre de - i tu di - gi - tus
 4. a mor - te spi - ri - ta - li - ter et ut vi - vam fi - de - li - ter
 5. gau - det no - ce - re mi - se - ris ho - stem se - vum pre - ce - te - ris
 6. na - tum que vo - lo cre - de - re es - se si - mul et vi - ve - re

1. et di - u vix - i te - me - re. me ser - vum tu - um vi - se - re.
 2. me co - git ad il - li - ci - ta me pro - te - ge me vi - si - ta
 3. sed re - fo - ve me ce - li - tus dex - tre de - i tu di - gi - tus
 4. a mor - te spi - ri - ta - li - ter et ut vi - vam fi - de - li - ter
 5. gau - det no - ce - re mi - se - ris ho - stem se - vum pre - ce - te - ris
 6. na - tum que vo - lo cre - de - re es - se si - mul et vi - ve - re

5a. fac nos - tre ma - tris li - be - re ci - vem me tu - o mu - ne - re

8

1. ve - ni cre - a - tor spi - ri -
2. qui pa - ra - cli - tus di - ce -
3. Tu sep - ti - for - mis mu - ne -
4. ac - cen - de lu - men sen - si -
5. ho - stem re - pel - las long - i -
6. per te sci - am in - ge - ni -

8

1. ve - ni cre - a - tor spi - ri -
2. qui pa - ra - cli - tus di - ce -
3. Tu sep - ti - for - mis mu - ne -
4. ac - cen - de lu - men sen - si -
5. ho - stem re - pel - las long - i -
6. per te sci - am in - ge - ni -

5a. da gau - di - o - rum pre - mi -

g

f

g

f'

1. - tus.]
2. - ris.]
3. - re.]
4. - bus.]
5. - us.]
6. - tum.]

1. - tus.]
2. - ris.]
3. - re.]
4. - bus.]
5. - us.]
6. - tum.]

5a. - a.]

VII

[Sit] [Sit]

[Sit] laus pa - tri cum fi - li - o sit ho - nor san - cti flam - mi - ni.

[Sit] laus pa - tri cum fi - li - o sit ho - nor san - cti flam - mi - ni.

tri - ni - ta - ti con - fes - si - o fir - mam spem fir - met ho - mi - ni.

tri - ni - ta - ti con - fes - si - o fir - mam spem fir - met ho - mi - ni.

[h] u -

[h] u -

[u] - ni tri - no - que no - mi - ni

[u] - ni tri - no - que no - mi - ni

sit sem - per do - mi - na - ti - o sa - lus et be - ne - di - cti - o per - hen - ni de - cus

sit sem - per do - mi - na - ti - o sa - lus et be - ne - di - cti - o per - hen - ni de - cus

a - gmi - ni. sit ho - nor san - cto flam - mi - ni sit laus pa - tri cum fi - li - o.

a - gmi - ni. sit ho - nor san - cto flam - mi - ni sit laus pa - tri cum fi - li - o.

For the possibility that a Benedicamus domino conclusion was intended for this piece and suggestions for one to include, see the discussion in the commentary and also in the notes on the text for the following piece in F-7, Brevi carne deitas (J42/51).

VENI CREATOR SPIRITUS ET IN ME ROBUR INSERE

Conductus (J41/360)

F, f. 360r (7,114): Strophes I, VII; Pn 18751: Strophes II-VI; D-Mbs Clm. 11333 (via Anderson, NDRC, 5:xxxv, 121): Strophe Va

- I Veni, creator spiritus, et in me robur insere, robur quo possim penitus mala que gessi luere, et amodo sic vivere
 ne sim peccato perditus.
 Peccavi quasi licitus, et diu vixi temere.
 Me servum tuum visere.
Veni, creator spiritus.
- 5 10
- Come, Creator Spirit,*
 and implant strength in me, strength whereby I may be able to atone fully for the evils I have borne, and henceforth live in such a way that I not be lost to sin.
 I have sinned as though it were licit,
 and for a long time I have lived rashly.
 Look on me as your servant.
Come, Creator Spirit.
- II [Qui paraclitus diceris, qui, pietate solita, confers salutem miseris et iustis reddis premia, fac de me tibi placita.
 Pereo ni subveneris.
 Me perdit ludus veneris.
 Me cogit ad illicita.
 Me protege, me visita,
 qui paraclitus diceris.
- 15
 20
- You who are called the Paraclete,*
 who, with your customary mercy, bestow salvation on the wretched and restore rewards to the just,
 bring about pleasing things from me to you.
 If you won't help me, I perish.
 The game of love destroys me.
 It drives me to illicit things.
 Protect me, call upon me,
you who are called the Paraclete.
- III Tu, septiformis munere,
dextre dei, tu, digitus,
 tu, qui nunquam deserere servos tuos es solitus, esto de me sollicitus;
 intende michi propere.
 Noli me derelinquere, sed refove me celitus,
dextre dei, tu, digitus
Tu, septiformis munere.
- 25
 30
- You, sevenfold in gifts,*
you, the finger of God's right hand, you, who are never inclined to desert your servants, be attentive to me;
 take heed of me soon.
 Do not leave me behind,
 but restore me again from above,
you, the finger of God's right hand,
you, sevenfold in gifts,
- IV Accende lumen sensibus
 meis misericorditer, et peccatorum sordibus immundum munda, taliter ut anima perhenniter servetur a nocentibus,
 a malis imminentibus,
 a morte spiritaliter;
 et, ut vivam fideliter,
accende lumen sensibus.
- 35
 40
- Mercifully kindle a* light in my senses, and cleanse an unclean one from the filth of their sins, in such a way that their soul might be forever saved from harmful things, from threatening evils,
 from the death of the spirit;
 and, so that I may live faithfully, kindle a light in my senses.
- V Hostem repellas longius,
- Drive the enemy far way,*

propagatorem sceleris; hostem qui, piis impius, torquetur cum miseris; hostem humani generis quem stravit dei filius; hostem qui, semper noxius, gaudet nocere miseris; hostem, sevum pre ceteris. Hostem repellas longius.	that propagator of sin; that enemy who, pitiless to the faithful, will be tormented with miseries; 45 that enemy of humankind whom the son of God cast down; that enemy who, ever noxious, rejoices in harming those who suffer; that enemy, savage beyond the rest. 50 Drive the enemy far way.
VI Per te sciam ingenitum patrem, cum nato, colere, et utriusque spiritum. Per te discam diligere. Per te possim acquirere regni celestis aditum. Te, spiritum paraclitum natumque, volo credere esse simul et vivere. Per te sciam ingenitum.]	Through you will I know to honor the unbegotten Father with his Son, and the Spirit in you both. Through you I may learn to love. 55 Through you I may gain entrance to the heavenly kingdom. I want to believe that you, the Paraclete Spirit, and the Son, exist and live as one. 60 Through you will I know the unbegotten one.
VII Sit laus patri cum filio. Sit honor sancti flammini. Trinitati confessio firmam spem firmet homini. Uni trinoque nomini, sit semper dominatio, salus, et benedictio, perhenni decus agmini. Sit honor sancto flammini. Sit laus patri cum filio.	Praise be to the Father, along with the Son. Honor be to the Holy Spirit. Let this confession to the Trinity confirm a stout hope for mankind. 65 To the one and to the three in name, let there forever be dominion, salvation, and blessing, the splendor of the eternal throng. Honor be to the Holy Spirit. 70 Praise be to the Father, along with the Son.

The following stanza appears uniquely in D-Mbs Clm. 11333, following Strophe V.

Va [Da gaudiorum premia, merendo mi, succurrere, ut post vivam in patria. Hec possim comprehendere: Da mihi culpas plangere, ut gaudeam in gloria, apparens in iustitia. Fac nostre matris libere civem me tuo munere. Da gaudiorum premia.]	Grant joys' rewards to aid me, a deserving one, that I may afterwards live in heaven. Let me be able to understand these things: 75 Allow me to mourn my faults, so that I may rejoice in glory, appearing in justice. Make me fully a citizen of our mother through your gift. 80 Grant joys' rewards.
--	---

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 114, f. 360v: a2; two separate, different settings of Strophes 1 and VII, only, with no provision for other stanzas, and with VII headed by a capital. This may be the only extant musical setting of this text (but see the end of the list of sources, below). Some suggestions as to how the other strophes might be rendered in performance are considered further on in the discussion of the music.

Text only:

Graz 409 (Graz, Universitätsbibliothek, MS 409; A-Gu 409), no. 1, f. 1r: text of Strophes I-VII, only; a likely opening initial and first two syllables of the poem are obscured, both by the binding and a fold in the parchment at the top left of the folio's recto, while the first six words of the poem are hard to decipher; red-flecked capitals (with the flecking sometimes difficult to see) head the first letters of the residual stanzas; details in the left margin of this leaf are sometimes difficult to make out; rubric, near the top right margin of the leaf, above the text: "ymnus de spiritu sancto" ("hymn about the Holy Spirit"). Images of this source are available at <https://unipub.uni-graz.at/obvugrscript/content/pageview/7435920>.

D-Mbs Clm. 11333 (Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Clm. 11333), f. 1r: Strophes I-V, an additional stanza seen in no other source (here labeled Va), and Strophe VI, only, all in that order. Images of this source are presently unavailable to me. Details come from Anderson's edition and the CPI website. This item seems to be the same listed as Clm. 11325 in AH, 30, p. 190, no. 183, based on the shared variants each one reports.¹

F-ROU A 408 (Rouen, Bibliothèque municipale, A 408), f. 171v: Strophes I-VII, only. Images of this source are presently unavailable to me. Details come from Anderson's edition and the CPI website.

Note: The following sources are presently absent from Anderson's edition and the CPI website:

Pn 18751 (Paris, Bibliothèque nationale de France, latin 18571; F-Pn lat 18571), no. 4, f. 34r: Strophes I-VII, only, written linearly with all lines headed by a capital and the opening line of each subsidiary stanza back-indented into the left margin. Two lines are left blank above this text for an apparent rubric that was never entered, as such descriptions are present for the preceding and some following items. Images of this source are available at <https://gallica.bnf.fr/ark:/12148/btv1b10721250c/f40.item.r=18571>.

Beinecke 831 (New Haven, Yale University Library, Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library, Beinecke MS 831; US-NHub Beinecke MS 831), no. 18, f. 35v: Strophes I-VII, only, with II-VII headed by upper case letters decorated with a single vertical stroke of red paint, similar to the flecked initials of Graz 409; this same type of decoration is used for the second letter of Strophe I, which opens with a large elaborated red initial; rubric: "alia oratio [de sancto spiritu]" ("another prayer [about the Holy Spirit]"). The MS under description was compiled in 1518 in Eastern Germany and is bound together with a printed book of hours from 1513. Images of the complete item are available at <https://collections.library.yale.edu/catalog/10985758>.

I have not been able to consult the following source, also not reported by Anderson's edition or the CPI website:

CZ-Pak A 57.1 (Praha, Archiv Pražského hradu, Knihovna Metropolitní kapituly u sv. Víta., Ms. A LVII/1); known familiarly as the Codex Ostroviensis; reportedly the conductus text begins on f. 1r, and appears to transmit the text of Strophes I-VII, and possibly at least part of a musical setting a1.² This MS continues on

¹*Analecta hymnica medii aevi*, vol. 30, part 3, Pia dictamina: Reimsgebete und Leselieder des Mittelalters: dritten Folge: Stunden- und Glossen-Lieder, Guido Maria Dreves, ed. (Leipzig: O. R. Reisland, 1898).

²See Adolf Patera and Antonín Podlaha, Soupis rukopisu Knihovny Metropolitní Kapitoly Pražské: A-E. C. 1 [Manuscript inventory of the Library of the Metropolitan Capitol of Prague: A-E. no. 1] (Prague: Ceska Akademie Císare Františka Josefa pro Vedy, Slovesnost a Umení, 1910 [Emperor Francis Joseph's Czech Academy of Sciences, Letters, and Arts, 1910]), p. 48, no. 86.

directly with the conductus Ave nobilis venerabilis Maria (J45/35), which appears six pieces later at F-7, 120, on f. 363v.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Note: this piece is not to be confused with the conductus Veni creator spiritus spiritus recreator (E13/361), Veni sancte spiritus et in me robur auge (L156/-), or the possible conductus setting beginning Veni creator spiritus (R5/-) which survives only as a text incipit in GB-Lbl Harl. 978, on f. 10v.

Notes on the Text: General remarks: This conductus poem, which celebrates the Trinity and especially its third member, the Holy Spirit, derives the first and last lines of each stanza, and the first and last two lines of Strophes III and VII (each reversed upon repeat), from the successive openings of Strophes I-VI of the Pentecost hymn Veni creator spiritus mentes tuorum visita (see, for an example from a Parisian liturgical manuscript, [F-Pn lat. 15181, f. 346v \[CCCXXXIIIv\]](#)). This same conceit applies to the uniquely transmitted Strophe Va, which, at its beginning and end, quotes the first line of a stanza seen in some other transmissions of the hymn. A comparable approach, based on the same liturgical item, appears in the text of the conductus Veni creator spiritus spiritus recreator (E13/361), found much earlier at F-6,7, f. 207v. References to the hymn in the poem are given in italics in the Latin text, English translation, and musical setting. The question of a Benedicamus conclusion: Anderson, in his critical notes for this piece (NDRC, 5:121), hypothesizes, with good reason, that a BD setting may have originally been intended to conclude Veni creator ... robur insere. As a conjecture, he appends the BD setting that concludes the following piece in F-7, Brevi carne deitas (J42/51), onto Veni creator ... robur insere. For a discussion of the issues involved in this decision, see the treatment in the textual notes to Brevi carne. The upshot is that the available evidence suggests that it would be highly appropriate to include a BD at the end of Veni creator ... robur insere, and that any other setting a2 would suffice just as well as the one taken from Brevi carne. Of course, the piece may also be performed as it stands in F without the termination, but note that the disposition of this piece in the MS raises additional questions as to how to execute the various stanzas with the available music. For the multiple possibilities open for performance, see the remarks below on the music. Textual notes: 11,2: “Paraclete”: i.e., “protector” or “advocate”; an attribute of the Holy Spirit, as described in John, 14:26³ and other places in that gospel (14:16, 15:26, 16:7). 21: the seven gifts of the Holy Spirit, as enumerated by Isaiah, 11:1-3;⁴ these comprise (based on the translation below) wisdom, understanding, counsel, fortitude, knowledge, godliness, and fear of the Lord. Also, the spirit of God is repeatedly described as “sevenfold” in Revelations (1:4, 3:1, 4:5, 5:6). For some information on other sevenfold qualities that occur in the Bible and in Christian literature, see the notes to the text of the conductus Veni creator spiritus ... recreator, lines 17-20. 46: on the fall of Satan, who inhabits this entire stanza, see Luke 10:18.⁵ 51-52,2: God the Father, since he existed from eternity, is therefore “unborn,”

³John, 14:26: “Paracletus autem Spiritus Sanctus, quem mittet Pater in nomine meo, ille vos docebit omnia, et suggeret vobis omnia quaecumque dixero vobis” (“But the Paraclete, the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he will teach you all things, and bring all things to your mind, whatsoever I shall have said to you.”).

⁴Isaiah, 11:1-3: “Et egredietur virga de radice Jesse, et flos de radice ejus ascendet. Et requiescet super eum spiritus Domini: spiritus sapientiae et intellectus, spiritus consilii et fortitudinis, spiritus scientiae et pietatis; et replebit eum spiritus timoris Domini ...” (“And there shall come forth a rod out of the root of Jesse, and a flower shall rise up out of his root. And the spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him [the flower]: the spirit of wisdom, and of understanding, the spirit of counsel, and of fortitude, the spirit of knowledge, and of godliness. And he shall be filled with the spirit of the fear of the Lord ...”).

⁵Luke, 10:17-18: “Reversi sunt autem septuaginta duo cum gaudio, dicentes: Domine, etiam daemonia subjiciuntur nobis in nomine tuo. Et ait illis: Videbam Satanam sicut fulgor de caelo cadentem” (“And the seventy-two [disciples] returned with joy, saying: Lord [i.e., Jesus], the devils also are subject to us in thy name. And he said to them: I saw Satan like lightning falling from heaven.”).

or “unbegotten.” In contrast, Christ, who as a member of the Trinity, existed along with God prior to his conception and incarnation on earth (see John, 1:1-2),⁶ is described as “begotten, not made” (as related in the Nicene Creed). For further discussion of the latter point and additional occurrences of it in the conductus repertory, see the textual notes to Sine matre genitus (I27/330), lines 1-2. 78-79: as Anderson observes (NDRC, 5:xxxv, note 5), the mother referred to here is likely the church.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: General remarks: Since the sources Pn 18751 and Beinecke 831 were unknown to Anderson, their variants are cataloged here when they depart from the text above. Variants from D-Mbs Clm. 11333, which supplies the unique Strophe Va, are not included, since I am following AH, 30, p. 189, no. 83, for the text of this stanza, and both it and Anderson’s conductus edition (NDRC, 5:xxxv, 121) record its differing readings. The occasional conjectural emendations made by Anderson against the AH edition I consider unnecessary, as they translate suitably without modification. As an esthetic choice in terms of presenting the text derived from Pn 18751, the letters in this source that begin each stanza retain their upper-case forms, but the same-size capitals that also open each line in Pn 18751 are rendered in the musical transcription as lower-case letters; this is in contrast to my typical practice of reproducing punctuation and capitalization of text sources in the score. Textual notes: 5,2: Pn 18751: a modo (as 2 words). 11,2: Beinecke 831: paracletus. 13,1: Beinecke 831: here and in line 63,2 an unusually shaped form of the letter “c” is used when letter “o” follows; it has somewhat the shape of an “r,” but nonetheless is different from the distinct, hooked form of “r” used by this scribe. 16: Beinecke 831: contains the text of line 19; 19 appears also in its proper place. 17-18: Pn 18751: these lines exchanged, with the letters “b” and “a” written within the column inscribed to the left of each line to indicate their proper order. 17,2: Beinecke 831: prodit. 18,2: Beinecke 831: pellicit. 21,2;30,2: Pn 18751: septiformi; the adopted reading occurs in all consulted sources and regularly in the liturgical hymn. 22,1;29,1: Beinecke 831: dextere. 26,3: Beinecke 831: prospere; reading of Pn 18751 retained here, as it seems to make slightly better sense, although only D-Mbs Clm. 11333 agrees with it. 28,3: Pn 18751: “me” originally omitted and inserted as third, rather than second, word here. 30: Pn 18751: period om at end of this line, but does appear at end of following line that starts next stanza. 33-34: Beinecke 831: lines om. 35, 3: Pn 18751: fideliter; adopted reading, from all other consulted sources, seems to fit context better. 39,4: all other consulted sources have “feliciter”; the adopted reading makes equally good sense. 42,1: Pn 18751: propugnatorum, against all other sources; the adopted reading makes better sense. 43,3: for “piis,” thus in Pn 18751, Beinecke 831, and F-ROU A 408, against “pios” in Graz 409 and “quem pius” in D-Mbs Clm. 11333 for 43,2-3. 44: all consulted sources disagree: Pn 18751: torquebitur cum miseris; Beinecke 831: torquebit cum miseris (one syllable short); Graz 409, torquebit quos permiseris; F-ROU A 408: torquebit quos commiseris; D-Mbs Clm. 11333: torquebit quem non deseris. The adopted reading from Pn 18751 (supported by the nearly identical one in Beinecke 831) seems to work best without incurring further emendation. 47,4: Beinecke 831: “noxius” om. 50, 1: Beinecke 831: “hostem” om. 53,1: Pn 18751, Beinecke 831: “te,” against the other consulted sources, which supply the adopted reading. 57,3: Beinecke 831: paracletum. 58,1: Beinecke 831: et natum. 60: Beinecke 831: atque patrem ingenitum. 62,4: Pn 18751: flamini. 63,1: Pn 18751: for “trinitati,” all other consulted sources give “trinitatis,” which works equally well. 66,1-2: Pn 18751: words exchanged. 68,2: Pn 18751: possibly defur (?). 69,4: Pn 18751: flamini. 70,2: Pn 18751: lux. An added, following line concludes the poem with the text “amen,” showing additional thinly drawn letters of smaller size in an apparently different hand, either next to or above and below each letter of “amen,” as follows: da, a/m/g (top to bottom), le, na. It is not clear, but possible this might be a hidden way to communicate the name “magdalena,” with the first two syllables exchanged. The significance of this is not immediately apparent. MUSIC: Performance possibilities: As F gives two different musical settings for two different stanzas of the total eight, theoretically any alignment of stanza versus music could serve for performance. Similarly, the inclusion or exclusion of Strophe Va is possible if multiple stanzas are to be executed. The present disposition ⁶John, 1:1-2: “In principio erat Verbum, et Verbum erat apud Deum, et Deus erat Verbum. Hoc erat in principio apud Deum” (“In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God.”).

in the musical transcription gives Strophes I-VI in sequence, with the option of including Va, sung to the first setting, then the concluding Strophe VII with the second setting as its support. This should not be taken as definitive, though. Even the decision as to what the order of the two musical settings should be, if both are to be performed, is available. And, in addition to all this, there is the implication that a Benedicamus Domino setting of some type would be appropriate to append as a coda to Strophe VII, as discussed earlier. Opening cauda: T: F: L7-L10 om; conjectured completion follows Anderson, NDRC, 5:73, bars 4-5, which takes its material from the D: L12-L15. D: F: curiously, the 3si=c,d,f at L17-L18 must be read as if they are 3li (LBL) in order to fit; Anderson's edition (bars 8-9) presents the same solution. Line 1,2: D: F: for “[crea]tor” erased f; g confirmed on repeat at line 3,3 “[pos]sim.” Cauda at line 10: D: F: 2li=fg at L7,2-L8,1 om, conjectured completion follows Anderson, NDRC, 5:74, bars 54-55, which apparently presumes a failure to record another instance of the same 2li figure that follows. Line 61,2-3: T: F: stroke erased after “laus”; D: F: stroke erased after “patri.” 62,4: T: c4 cl om at beginning of system before “flammini,” with apparent erasure; conceivably a c5 cl was originally entered, then erased, and the correction never completed.

BREVI CARNE DEITAS
Conductus: (J42/51)

F, f. 361r (7,115)

I [Bre -
T Bre -

or:
or:

[Bre] - vi car - ne de - i - tas la - tet in - cli - na - ta nec san - cta vir - gi - ni - tas lu - get de - flo - ra - [Bre] - vi car - ne de - i - tas la - tet in - cli - na - ta nec san - cta vir - gi - ni - tas lu - get de - flo - ra -

or:
or:

- ta.
- ta.

Sum - mi re - gis de - li - ti - as ven - ter e - du - cit vir - gi - nis. ut pri - mi sce - lus ho - mi - nis.
Sum - mi re - gis de - li - ti - as ven - ter e - du - cit vir - gi - nis. ut pri - mi sce - lus ho - mi - nis.

et gra - ves ne - gle - gen - ti - as ex - clu - dat vir - tus nu - mi -
et gra - ves ne - gle - gen - ti - as ex - clu - dat vir - tus nu - mi -

Two staves of musical notation. The top staff contains a series of eighth and sixteenth notes. The bottom staff contains a similar rhythmic pattern. A red box labeled 'a' is positioned above the second staff.

Two staves of musical notation. The top staff ends with the text '- nis.'. A red box labeled 'a'' is positioned above the first staff.

Two staves of musical notation with vocal parts. The top staff is labeled 'D' and 'BD', and the bottom staff is labeled 'T'. The lyrics 'Be - ne - di - ca - mus do -' are written below the staves. Red boxes labeled 'b' and 'b'' are positioned above the top staff. Red text 'or: ♪ 7' is placed above the top staff.

Two staves of musical notation. A red box labeled 'b' is positioned above the top staff.

Two staves of musical notation. A red box labeled 'b'' is positioned above the top staff.

Two staves of musical notation. Red text 'or: ♪ 7' is placed above the top staff.

The first system of music consists of two staves. The upper staff is in treble clef and contains a sequence of notes with various rests and blue brackets above it. The lower staff is also in treble clef and contains a sequence of notes with blue brackets above it. A blue dashed line connects a note in the lower staff to a note in the upper staff.

The second system of music consists of two staves. The upper staff is in treble clef and contains a sequence of notes with blue brackets above it. The lower staff is in treble clef and contains a sequence of notes with blue brackets above it. A blue dashed line connects a note in the lower staff to a note in the upper staff. The lyrics '- mi -' and '- no.]' are written below the upper staff, and '- mi -' and '- no.' are written below the lower staff.

BREVI CARNE DEITAS

Conductus (J42/51)

F, f. 361r (7,115)

I	Brevi carne deitas latet, inclinata; nec sancta virginitas luget deflorata.		Divinity, humbled, lies concealed within a small body; and holy virginity does not weep at being deflowered.
	Summi regis delicias venter educit virginis. Ut primi scelus hominis et graves neglegentias excludat virtus numinis:	5	The womb of a virgin brings forth the darling of the highest king. So that the strength of divine power may erase the wickedness and grave carelessness of the first man:
BD	Benedicamus domino.	10	Let us bless the Lord.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 115, f. 361r: a2; unique transmission of text and music; Strophe I, complete, with a capital letter heading line 5, and one also signaling the Benedicamus domino of the last line, both indicated by extra space in the text above; no provisions for any further stanzas. The piece begins mid-system on the folio (rather than at the left margin), something that happens only 12 times in F-7.¹

Text only: none.Music only: none.Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: the Benedicamus domino conclusion: this meditation on the incarnation of God as man through the birth of Christ by a virgin, and the abolishment of original sin, concludes in its last line with the liturgical formulation Benedicamus domino. Unlike the majority of the conductus in the four main “Notre Dame” sources that also feature this appendage,² the BD portion in Brevi carne seems even more tacked on than usual: it follows a sizable cauda at the end of the poem proper at line 9,3 and there is no identical rhyme in a prior line to prefigure it; it does, however, correspond with the syllable count and end-of-line accent pattern in the second half of the conductus poem. Even so, the closing verses of the text may be still be read in a manner that allows the BD to follow, as is shown in the translation above. Alternatively, omitting the Benedicamus versicle would cause no violation of syntax, but would merely extend the sentence that had begun in line 5. Anderson’s edition, furthermore, appropriates this same BD ending from Brevi carne for use as a conjectural addition to the previous work in F: Veni creator spiritus et in me robur insere (J41/360, see NDRC, 5:75-76). Anderson’s reasoning for the grafting (explained in NDRC, 5:121) is that, although the formula appears to be erroneously attached to Brevi carne (even though he includes it in his edition of that piece), it conforms admirably to the rhyme and rhythmic scheme of the concluding line of the seventh (and last) strophe of Veni creator ... robur insere as preserved in F (“sit laus patri et filio”), and thus better introduces the Benedicamus

¹For a list, see the source report on F for Pia mater gratie (J18/268), at F-7,71, on f. 331r.

²Conductus within the four main sources that provide BD conclusions are enumerated in the notes to Christi miles Christo (J55/58), at F-7,130.

text.³ Moreover, Veni creator ... robur insere has no closing cauda at the end of Strophe VII to balance the sometimes lengthy ones that otherwise pepper its setting, and the Benedicamus section thus serves an apparently necessary function. Even though Anderson's transfer results in a closing section that ends in g when Veni creator ... et in me is otherwise in d, a similar situation obtains in Leniter ex merito (E2/195) – which features a BD conclusion with a d final, while the rest of the piece is in a g mode (see more on this piece in the note below) – and for the last work in F's seventh fascicle, Christi miles Christo quo militat (J55/58). This latter conductus finishes its main portion with a final on g, but appends a BD section that ultimately concludes with a closing organal flourish on a after spending most of its course anchored on g. This BD, also, does not coordinate with the rhyme or poetic scheme of Christi miles. Hence, although a Benedicamus conclusion does seem called for in Veni creator ... robur insere, and one might conceivably supply one from another conductus or from an independent BD setting in two parts, the fact that Brevi carne does not overtly imply a Benedicamus conclusion does not militate against its presence; nor does it suggest that there is a mistake in its appearance in F. There are several other conductus in the Notre Dame repertory that have closing BD versicles that seem unprompted by the conductus poem.⁴ Textual notes: 1-2: the “humbled” nature of the deity in this passage (from inclinata, i.e., “bent down,” “declined,” “fallen,”) refers to God's taking on human form in the person of Christ. It does not, though, connote any diminishment of his power; see, e.g., the conductus Parit preter morem (E12/261), lines 10-14. 3-4: Although at first glance the content of these lines may seem odd, since one might infer from them that the Virgin has been deflowered, the actual sense is that Mary, who retained her virginity in bearing Christ, therefore has no cause to weep at its loss. 7-9: the transgressions and sin of the first man refer, of course, to the inculcation of original sin through Adam's and Eve's disobedience of God's commands (see Genesis, 3). 5,3: “delitias” (rendered here as “darling”) typically appears in a plural form when it may denote a singular object.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: F: no variants. MUSIC: General remarks: the caudae in this piece are notable for their frequent use of phrase overlap and the nearly breathless course of their utterances, which typically require or imply B rests throughout. In most of the places where I have placed TL rests, thinking they might be especially appropriate, alternative rest values are given above the staves. The closing cauda (on Benedicamus domino, see also above in the Notes on the Text) makes particular use of a prominent motive beginning bcd,dd=LBLBL; this opens many of the D phrases, starting with L7 of the cauda over the first syllable of “domino” and recurring several times within the first half or so of the entire final melisma. There is a similar, though briefer, bit of motivic recollection in the earlier cauda over line 9,3 that precedes the BD section. This begins in the T at L21 with the gac,c,c figure that is also heard at L28. I have marked these repetitions above the staves. Opening cauda (over line 1,1): T: F: the four notes c,bag that begin the final phrase of the melisma contain an error, possibly of faulty ligation. They are written as si,3li, although they require an additional TL value to fit with the D. Also, a stroke (omitted in the transcription) after the si c is obscured somewhat by the following 3li=bag; this is a typical practice employed by the scribe of F to cancel an erroneous tractus, and thus may point to some problem here in the exemplar used for this piece that caused the error. Line 4,2: TD: F: the first of the two notes over the penultimate syllable of “deflorata” (just before the cauda begins) are not obviously el, but the rhythmic extension offered in the transcription seems likely, given the si,siP figures used in the corresponding places at the ends of lines 1 and 2. Cauda over line 4,2: T: F: the last two notes in the penultimate phrase of the melisma (at L19-L20 – f,g) are written as 2si. Assuming no loss of material, they either need to be rendered as if they were ligated, or the penultimate a pitch of the D phrase needs to be extended. The latter possibility is employed in the transcription, prompted by the elongation of the f in the T; the former is given as an alternative above the staff. Line 9,2: D: F: note over the first syllable of “virtus” om; it is supplied editorially. Closing flourish: D: F: the fifth note (e) looks more like a d in F, but e seems more likely, given the space constraints for writing the 4li that contains it and because the figure as given in the transcription is a widely traveled cadential formula, seen prominently in organa and clausula.

³The transmission of the Veni creator ... robur insere piece in F, however, presents two different musical settings of the texts of Strophes I and VII, and it is not completely clear how the remaining strophes II-VI and Va (extant in other sources) are to be accommodated to the music.

⁴These include Leniter ex merito (E2/195) as transmitted in one of its two otherwise similar redactions in WI – which, interestingly, happens to feature a Benedicamus ending otherwise associated with the conductus Naturas deus regulis (C7/214); O lilium convallium (F18/236) in its states outside the primary Notre Dame sources in I-CFm Cod. LVI (Cividale del Friuli, Museo Archeologico Nazionale) and Stutt; Columbe simplicitas (J16/66); and Christi miles, mentioned above.

PORTA SALUTIS AVE
Conductus (12/269)

F, f. 361v (7,116)

[Por -

Por -

[a]

[b]

[b]

[a']

[b']

or:

or:

[mode 3 also possible]

[c]

[Por] - ta sa - lu - tis a -

[Por] - ta sa - lu - tis a -

[c1]

[c2]

[c1]

[c3]

[c4]

[c5]

mode 3

- [ve]

- [ve]

*mode 3 (W1: mode 1, varied; see alternative reading at end)

per te pa - tet ex -

per te pa - tet ex -

mode 1

- i - tus a

- i - tus a

vhe.

vhe.

e'

f1

g g2

g2 g3 Ve- - nit

f2 h' f3 ab h ab

W1: 2li=cb e - va vhe i1 i

i j'' i3 k i2 k''

The first system consists of two staves of musical notation. The upper staff begins with a treble clef and contains a series of notes, some grouped with blue brackets. The lower staff begins with a bass clef and contains a series of notes, also with some blue brackets. There are several rests throughout the system.

The second system consists of two staves. The upper staff has the lyrics "vhe qui - a tol - lis a -" written below it. The lower staff has the lyrics "vhe qui - a tol - lis a -" written below it. There are phonetic annotations in red boxes: "l" above the first staff, "i4" above the second staff, "m" above the third staff, and "t" above the fourth staff. There are also blue brackets and a blue dashed line connecting notes across staves.

The third system consists of two staves. There are phonetic annotations in red boxes: "m'" above the first staff, "n" above the second staff, "l'" above the third staff, "l'" above the fourth staff, and "n'" above the fifth staff. There are blue brackets and a blue dashed line connecting notes across staves.

The fourth system consists of two staves. There are phonetic annotations in red boxes: "l'" above the first staff, "o" above the second staff, "n'" above the third staff, and "o'" above the fourth staff. There are blue brackets and a blue dashed line connecting notes across staves.

The fifth system consists of two staves. There are phonetic annotations in red boxes: "p" above the first staff, "o'" above the second staff, and "(p)" above the third staff. There are blue brackets and a blue dashed line connecting notes across staves.

The sixth system consists of two staves. There are phonetic annotations in red boxes: "r" above the first staff, "q'" above the second staff, "q" above the third staff, "r'" above the fourth staff, and "r'" above the fifth staff. A blue note says "see the alternative readings at end" above the sixth staff. There are blue brackets and a blue dashed line connecting notes across staves.

- ve.]
- ve.

ALTERNATIVE READINGS:

W1*, f. 70r (63r), III; slightly varied and in mode 1

D [per te pa-tet]
T per te pa-tet

F*, f. 362v, I (end), as it stands in the MS

| T: si=f not in W1

D (a[ve.])
T (a[ve.])

W1*, f. 71r (64r), I (halfway through), as it stands in the MS

D (a[ve.])
T (a[ve.])

PORTA SALUTIS AVE

Conductus (I2/269)

F, f. 361v (7,116)

Porta salutis, a[ve]. Per te patet exitus a vhe. Portal of salvation, Hail. Through you lies open an escape from woe.
Venit ab eva vhe. Vhe quia tollis, ave. The woe came from Eve. Because you eliminate woe, Hail.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 116, f. 361v: a2; complete text, consisting of a single elegiac couplet (see the notes on the text below), with a possible capital opening line 2. No provision for additional text.

WI, fasc. 8, no.1, f. 70r (63r): a2, complete text, with possible capital heading line 2 and no provision for additional poetry. Piece is ruled for three parts, but Tr was never entered (see the report on US-NYcub N-66, below). This redaction shows fewer errors and omissions than the version in F.

US-NYcub N-66 (New York, Columbia University, Butler Library, N-66), f. Zv: a3; fragmentary. This repurposed double leaf (the visible side of which constitutes the two folios Zv and Ar) now serves as a protective endpaper to its host volume.¹ The content of its originally pasted-down obverse side is reportedly now completely obliterated.² The left half of the leaf (f. Zv), with much of its content extremely difficult to read, due to fading and the presence of occasional small holes, shows four staves containing portions of two systems of the final cauda of Porta salutis, with the second system revealing the traces of a Tr voice known from no other source, but the existence of which is implied by the blank staves that remain for this piece in WI.³ Of the verbal text, only parts of a very smudged final syllable remain. I have not yet succeeded in reconstructing the remains of the Tr as an alternative reading, due to the difficulties posed not only by the legibility of the voice in this source, but also because of the uncertainties that arise with regard to the alignment of the parts, which are compounded by an overlapping phrase design. For a partial attempt, embracing the very end of the piece, see Mashcke, “Porta salutis,” 194.

Text only:

As Maschke’s article demonstrates (“Porta salutis,” 201-202), a very wide variety of sources transmits the text of this conductus, often with minor variations. It appears, for example, as the motto of several surviving corporate seals from two different abbeys in the United Kingdom. In addition to its presence as a brief quotation within the course of various types of works, manuscript sources that contain the couplet include collections of poetry, short verses, or proverbs; it also serves as a colophon for theological treatises and miscellanies, and was several times taken as a jumping-off point for lengthier poems and poetic centos. The possibility that many further instances of the text lie waiting to be unearthed is very likely. As a result, only two text-only sources are listed below, since these collections of poetry are elsewhere associated with the Parisian conductus repertory. For the entire range of sources so far identified, see the listings in Maschke, “Porta salutis,” 225-229, and the inventory on the CPI website (<http://catalogue.conductus.ac.uk>).

¹For a treatment of US-NYcub N-66, upon which much of this description relies, see Eva M. Maschke, “Neue Conductus Fragmente aus dem ehemaligen Dominikanerkloster in Frankfurt am Main,” Studi Musicali: Nuova serie 1,2 (2010): 295-312, especially 298-306. As Maschke shows here, US-NYcub N-66 originally came from the same source as the Frankfurt conductus fragments (D-F Fragm. lat. VI.41). For the latter items, see Martin Staehelin, “Conductus-Fragmente aus einer Notre-Dame-Handschrift in Frankfurt a. M.,” Nachrichten der Akademie der Wissenschaften in Göttingen: Philologisch-Historische Klasse, Jahrgang 1987 (Göttingen, 1987), pp. 177-192 + plates.

²For this detail, as well as more on this source, couched as part of an extensive treatment of Porta salutis ave, see Eva M. Maschke, “Porta salutis ave: Manuscript Culture, Material Culture, and Music,” Musica Dsiciplina, 58 (2013): 167-229, at p. 169, note 11.

³The apparent remains are as follows: the first extant staff presents the T from approximately L11-L57 of the cauda. The remaining three lines constitute a single system of three voices, containing what appears to be the remainder of the piece. The staves of the second system begin with the T at L58, and the D at L63 – thus significantly misaligned.

OxRawl (GB-Ob Rawl. poet. C510), no. 14, f. 237r (8r): text only; rubric: “Versus de beata virgine” (“Verses on the Blessed Virgin”); the couplet is written in the bottom two lines of the leaf.

F-Pn n.a.l. 1544 (Paris, Bibliothèque nationale, nouvelles acquisitions latines, 1544), f. 75v; text only, slightly varied; appears as the final couplet of the cento poem Vale sole clarior; rubric: “Salutationes beate virginis” (“Greetings of the Blessed Virgin”).⁴

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

This piece is not to be confused with the conductus Porta salutis Maria (O25 in Anderson’s conductus edition, revised from O23 in his published catalog of the repertory/-).

Notes on the Text: The poem is a single leonine elegiac distich, a metrical scheme with a first line in classical dactylic hexameter, followed by one in dactylic pentameter; the term “leonine” refers to the fact that each line here has a two-syllable internal rhyme, occurring at the caesura and at the end.⁵ Throughout the couplet the poet has played with a common medieval conceit: a frequently encountered play on words, contrasting the woe (“vae / vhe”) of Eve (“Eva”) that was counteracted by Mary’s response to Gabriel’s greeting (“ave”) at the Annunciation; see Luke, 1:28.⁶ For some similar treatments within the main Parisian sources, see the conductus Stella serena (F29/339), and O lilium convallium (F18/236).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 1,3: F: second syllable of “ave” omitted. 2,8: F: the final syllable is placed at the beginning of the penultimate phrase of cauda, 13L prior to the start of the punctus organi; the placement adopted here follows W1. MUSIC: Although the US-NYcub N-66 is not considered in the critical report of Anderson’s edition (NDRC, 4:89-90), because its content is so degraded, I have not supplied the variants here, as there would be too many uncertainties in terms of detail. One minor observation, though, is that US-NYcub N-66 agrees with W1 against F in the problematic passage reported below in the final cauda. General remarks: Porta salutis is one of only nine conductus within the main Parisian sources that has a final on f, whether with b-flat sigs or not; all but three of these, moreover, are Marian.⁷ Of these, one should particularly notice Celorum porta, at F-7,72, which, in common with Pia mater that happens to precede it in F, ⁴An image of the leaf may be found here: <https://gallica.bnf.fr/ark:/12148/btv1b10033677x/f81.item.r=NAL%201544>.

⁵Metrical conductus texts (all in dactylic hexameter, except where noted) within the four main “Notre Dame” manuscripts (F, W1, W2, Ma) are Alma redemptoris mater (I23/13), Celorum porta (J19/55 – a leonine hexameter couplet), the elegiac couplet Porta salutis ave (I2/269), and two textually related pieces uniquely transmitted in Ma: Salve sancta parens patrie (J58/317) and Salve sancta parens enixa (J57/316). In Ma, moreover, Salve sancta parens enixa is preceded by the conductus setting of Alma redemptoris.

⁶Luke, 1:28: “Et ingressus angelus ad eam, dixit: ‘Ave, gratia plena, Dominus tecum: benedicta tu in mulieribus’ ” (“And the angel, entering, said to her: ‘Hail, full of grace, the Lord is with you: blessed are you among women’ ”).

⁷The nine conductus in F, W1, W2, and Ma with f finals are: Ave tuos benedic (J49,O22/38), Philip the Chancellor’s Ave virgo virginum verbi (F16, P46/39), Celorum porta (J19/55), O Maria stella maris lux (K71/238), Pia mater gratie (J18/268), Porta salutis ave (I2/269), Adiuvans nos deus (J4/9), Fons (or Flos) preclusus (K72/129, perhaps by Peter of Blois), and Philip’s Si vis vera frui luce (K40/329). The final three pieces in this list are the non-Marian ones.

shares some additional notable textual and musical characteristics with Porta salutis. Motivic profusion: Porta salutis, notable for its profusion of caudae in proportion to its cum littera sections, features many repeated melodic motives of varying length throughout its course; many of the more significant figures are signaled by boxed letters over the staves in the transcription, but numerous other such gestures could also be cataloged, as smaller units are sometimes recombined with others in different arrangements or with slight variations. The exploitation of melodic sequence is also seen here to a notable degree; such a technique, as well as other types of identity achieved through motivic transposition, is signaled above the staff by additionally enclosing the identifying letter of the motive in parentheses. Opening cauda: T; F: L2: most of the other rest strokes in the cauda imply B. Apparently, it was thought important to indicate the TL rest here by a double stroke (as signaled by the mark above the staff); W1 shows here only a single stroke. T; F: L18,2-L19,1: 2li=de partially covers an apparently unwanted stroke, om in the transcription. T; F: L32: 3 of 3li=b of dcb smudged – not a P, as it might seem. Cauda on line 1,3: D; F: L10: stroke om, from W1. D; F: L40: two notes (ga) om from what in W1 is written as 3li=gag. D; F, W1: L54: c for d, although W1 could have a low-lying d. Line 1,4: T; F: evidence of erasure precedes the word “per” at the beginning of a sys; c3cl entered here (possibly as a correction). Cauda on line 1,8: D; F: L15-L16: 2si=c,d om; taken from W1. Cauda after line 1,9: T; F: L8: the f slightly obscures an unwanted stroke as if an error, om in transcription. Cauda on line 2,4: TD; F: L1: rhythmic interpretations of the 4C figures found throughout this cauda are prompted by W1, where they are notated as 2li+2C. Final cauda: T; F: at the point 8L prior to the punctus organi and following the si=g, the introduction of an extraneous si=f in this MS likely caused the scribe to erroneously ligate the following pitches efgf as 2li,2li which are rendered as 4si in W1. The rhythmic implication of W1 is followed in the transcription, as it avoids a dissonance occurring in the F reading. The readings of both F and W1 for this passage appear as alternative versions at the end of the transcription.

GLORIA SIT SOLI DEO

Conductus (J43/146)

F, f. 362v (7,117)

D
I [Glo -

[Glo] - ri - a sit so - li de - o laus ho -

- nor u - ni - ge - ni - to. Qui [Qui] do -

- net no - bis o - mni - bus

pro N[O - MEN]

pre - ci - bus.

*The name of the recipient being celebrated is apparently intended to be inserted at this point; any further required syllables may be distributed at the places marked: " _ " and sung with whatever rhythms the performers may choose.

ut cun - cti mor-tis ter-mi - no be - ne - di - ca-mus
ut cun - cti mor-tis ter-mi - no be - ne - di - ca-mus

do -
do -

D:F: remainder omitted, editorial completion

- mi - - no.]
- mi - - no.

GLORIA SIT SOLI DEO

Conductus (J43/146)

F, f. 362v (7,117)

I Gloria sit soli deo; laus, honor unigenito. Qui donet nobis omnibus, pro N[OMEN] precibus, ut cuncti, mortis termino, benedicamus domino.	Glory be to God alone; praise and honor to the only-begotten one. May he grant to us all, through prayers on behalf of (insert name), 5 that we all, on the brink of death, may praise the Lord.
---	---

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 117, f. 362v: a2; Strophe I, complete, with no apparent provisions for additional text, and with nothing distinguishing the opening letter of the BD conclusion; a unique musical setting of this text; the end of the D is incomplete (see the observations and variants, below). The piece begins mid-system on the folio (rather than at the left margin), something that happens only 12 times in F-7.¹

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: General remarks: This poem contains elements of a doxological formula, although the Holy Spirit is never directly invoked along with the other members of the Trinity. Also, given the content of lines 4 and 5, in addition to the provision for the insertion of a variable name signaled by line 4,2 (see below), it seems that this piece might well have served as an item in a Requiem service or some other memorial celebration that invokes death or the Last Judgment. Line 2, e.g., has been identified in at least one other poem in a similar context (q.v.). Textual notes: 2: this expression occurs as part of a doxology within the final strophe of a Versus de die iudicii et adventu filii dei found in an eleventh-century MS (no. 189) held (at least during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries) in a library in Clermont. The text of this versus is edited in Anatole Boucherie, “Mélanges latins et bas-latins,” Revue des langues romanes, 7(1875): 28-31, see p. 31. The same item is also reported by Karl Strecker, ed., in Poetae Latini aevi Carolini, vol. 4, part 2, p. 523, Monumenta Germaniae historica: Antiquitates (Berlin: Weidmann, 1923). 4,2: see the remarks on this word under the observations and variants section below.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 4,2: for this word, F, the unique source, supplies only an ornamental capital “N” (presumably standing for “nomen”), written in a horizontally elongated fashion. Most likely this feature was intended to signal the insertion of the name of the recipient of the celebration. A similar contingency is sometimes employed in liturgical books for those ceremonial texts and chants of the Common of Saints that must serve for multiple individuals. As a result, I have chosen to enter N[OMEN] in the edition of the text above and in the music transcription, while “(insert name)” appears in the corresponding place in the translation. Disregarding the “N,” four syllables thus seem wanting for this line in comparison with the remainder of the poem, but the likelihood that this segment of the piece would have a variable text prompts me not to supply anything beyond what F actually presents. For a different treatment that fills out the line with a four-syllable editorial insertion not based on any name, see Anderson, NDRC, 5:xxxvi,79, as well as his explanation and provisions for alternative renderings on p. 121. There thus appears to be no justification for ¹For a list, see the source report on F for Pia mater gratie (J18/268), at F-7,71, on f. 331r.

Anderson’s characterization of line 4 as corrupt. For further information, see also the remarks below on the music for line 4,2. 5: Anderson’s translation of this line (NDRC, 5:xxxvi) faultily applies “cuncti” as a modifier for “mortis,” despite the fact that the forms of the words used here differ in gender. 6: on the Benedicamus conclusion to this poem, see the remarks on the music for this passage below. MUSIC: Opening cauda (over line 1,1): D: F: a note appears to be missing in the fifth phrase of this voice part, at L19; a pre-cadential c has been supplied editorially. Line 4,2: based only on the way the single capital “N” is underlaid to the music at this point (cf. the remarks on the text for line 4,2), it is not immediately clear how many contingent syllables may be provided for in the musical setting. It seems quite possible that insertion of the variable name could begin over the si=f in the T that appears just to the left of the “N” as it is entered in F. Such a placement (adopted here) would coincide with the 2li=ef in the D, which (in my opinion) suggests a principium ante principium formula as is often seen in Parisian organa (and it is so treated in this transcription) that would serve to call attention to the named individual. Indeed, the notational figures at this juncture do not appear to me to make much sense unless treated in this fashion, due especially to the conclusive cadence on g-d (the final of the piece as a whole) that precedes this segment as well as the strokes on either side of the purported principium figure. If this is actually the intention of this passage, the available ligatures in the T and D thus seem to allow for the possibility of as many as five syllables for an inserted name. These figures also are set above the extended “N” in the text to suggest it should incorporate them, if needed. In the transcription, required syllables may be distributed at any of the places marked with an underscore sign (i.e.,), and any remaining untexted music may either be rendered sine littera, or conceivably might support further language that could be added to accord with the incorporation of the name (e.g., “O,” “nostra,” “O pie,” “O sancte,” “O beata,” etc.). Benedicamus conclusion (line 6): the text of the BD cauda that closes this piece conforms to the poetic structure (8pp) and rhyme sound “-ino” of the verse that precedes it; it also furnishes a necessary syntactical conclusion to the text as a whole. Furthermore, both the BD and the earlier portions of this piece are oriented on g, suggesting an overall agreement between the two sections. Despite the lost material at the end of the D, the T makes it clear that a finish on g is intended. Plus, the cadence on f-c just before start of the g-oriented BD section makes its conclusive role especially satisfying. The incomplete D voice: TD: F: the final portions of the D of this unique piece were never entered, and much of the staves in its final system were also erased. The eradication of the staves begins immediately after the first D phrase on that last system. Following this first gesture, four more ordines are then supplied for the D on the mostly expunged staff before the music for this voice part breaks off completely at approximately one-third of the way into the system; the T, however, continues to the end of the system and seems complete, with no erasure of its staff lines. The remnants of this D staff also show that no notes have been erased along with the staff; what is visible at this point in the MS is bleedthrough from the other side of the leaf. As the loss is not extensive, I have endeavored to supply my own conclusion for the D, differing from the very successful alternative attempt at reconstruction provided by Anderson (in NDRC, 5: 80). Due to the content of the final cadence in the T, I am assuming that a punctus organi formula would be appropriate here, and so have offered one.

DEUS PACIS ET DILECTIONIS

Conductus, Prayer, Grace (J44/93)

F, f. 363r (7,118)

D [De -

I [De -

T De -

[De] - us pa - cis et di - le - cti - o - nis

[De] - us pa - cis et di - le - cti - o - nis

ma - ne - at sem - per no -

ma - ne - at sem - per no -

- bis - cum. tu au - tem do - mi - ne

- bis - cum. tu au - tem do - mi - ne

no - stri mi - se - re -

no - stri mi - se - re -

Annotations: [b], (b'), [a], (a'), [d], [c], [f], [h], [e], [g]

The first system of music consists of two staves. The upper staff begins with a treble clef and a common time signature. It contains a series of notes with blue slurs and red vowel markings: 'e' above the first note, 'g' above the second, and 'j' above the third. The lower staff begins with a bass clef and contains notes with blue slurs and red vowel markings: 'f' above the first, 'h' above the second, and 'i' above the third. The music continues with various note values and rests.

The second system of music consists of two staves. The upper staff begins with a treble clef and a common time signature. It contains notes with blue slurs and red vowel markings: 'j' above the first, 'd' above the second, and a series of red notes with stems. The lower staff begins with a bass clef and contains notes with blue slurs and red vowel markings: 'i' above the first, and 'c' above the second. The system concludes with a red note on the upper staff and a red note on the lower staff.

The third system of music consists of two staves. The upper staff begins with a treble clef and a common time signature. It contains notes with blue slurs and red vowel markings: a series of red notes with stems, and '- re.' at the end. The lower staff begins with a bass clef and contains notes with blue slurs and red vowel markings: a red note with a stem, and '- [re.]' at the end. The system concludes with a red note on the upper staff and a red note on the lower staff.

DEUS PACIS ET DILECTIONIS

Conductus, Prayer, Grace (J44/93)

F, f. 363r (7,118)

Deus pacis et dilectionis maneat semper nobiscum; May the god of peace and love remain with us always;
tu autem, domine, nostri misere[re.] and you, O lord, have mercy on us.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 118, f. 363r: a2; unique musical setting of a commonly occurring prayer (see the Notes on the Text); no provisions for further text. Deus pacis lies at the end of an array of nine relatively elaborate conductus cum caudis from F-7, 110-118, a series that began with Caput in caudam vertitur (J37/54). The next three pieces in F form a short group of simpler, syllabic works.

Text only: see the Notes on the Text.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: The text is in prose, rather than verse, derived from 2 Corinthians, 13:11: “... et Deus dilectionis et pacis erit vobiscum,” and Psalm 40:11: “tu autem Domine miserere mei” The conductus lyric is often found, with occasional variants in its concluding phrases (such as “vobiscum” for “nobiscum” and the words “nostri miserere” exchanged), as a prayer in documents from the twelfth century to the present day. It occurs, for example, at the very end of Epistola CXXIX of Saint Bernard of Clairvaux,¹ dated 1133, and throughout the British Isles as a postprandial benediction in the acts of a number of ecclesiastical institutions (as in Salisbury and York) and university colleges, such as those of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge; New College, Oxford; and Jesus College, Cambridge, where to this day it is still prescribed as the College Grace to be given after feasts. Given the particular association of the prayer with the grace said after meals, it is conceivable the conductus may have served a similar purpose.² The use of prose texts is relatively rare in the Parisian conductus repertory. Similarly, all the prose conductus settings in F, W1, W2, and Ma: Pater noster qui es (G2/265), Ave Maria gratia plena II (G7/29 – given as no. I in Anderson’s enumerations), Adiuva nos deus (J4/49 – unique to W1), and Deus pacis et dilectionis (J44/93), are biblically derived; they may either function in liturgical roles in other contexts, or they serve a demonstrable ceremonial function, as in the implementation of Deus pacis as a mealtime grace.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: final word: F: last syllable omitted. MUSIC: frequent thirds and motivic recall, along with the voice exchange in the final cauda, may point to Insular features consistent with the common appearance of the text as a prayer in British ecclesiastical and university circles. Opening cauda: D: F: at the end of the last phrase of the cauda, from L15,1-L16, several notes prior have been erased and never re-entered; the editorial completion is based on the D phrase in the final cauda just before the organal close, where both voices imply a repeat of the earlier material. Final cauda: D: F: for the last two notes of the sixth phrase, at L23,3-L24,1, the 2li=ga is smudged or blotted, yet still legible.

¹See PL, 182, col. 285B .

²On the environment of the public reading (lectio publica) in religious houses that regularly accompanied meals as a possible venue for performing conductus, see Mark Everist, Discovering Medieval Song: Latin Poetry and Music in the Conductus (Cambridge, England: Cambridge University Press, 2018), 57-62.

HAC IN DIE SALUTARI

Conductus (J45/151)

F, f. 363v (7,119)

D
I
T

[Hac in di - e sa - lu - ta - ri mo - net plau-su re - no - va - ri no - vus an - nus
a a']

Hac in di - e sa - lu - ta - ri mo - net plau-su re - no - va - ri no - vus an - nus cir - cu - la - ri du - ctu re - no - va - tus. mov - et an - nus su - sci - ta - ri gau - di - um re - cir - cu - la - ri du - ctu re - no - va - tus. mov - et an - nus su - sci - ta - ri gau - di - um re -

[Refrain?]

-na - tus. hoc in an - hoc in an - hoc in an - hoc in hoc in hoc in an - no
-na - tus. hoc in an - hoc in an - hoc in an - hoc in hoc in hoc in an - no

[Refrain?]

Vox so - no - ra sol - vat o - ra si - ne mo - ra hoc in an - hoc in an - Vox so - no - ra sol - vat o - ra si - ne mo - ra hoc in an - hoc in an - hoc in hoc in hoc in an - hoc in hoc in hoc in an - hoc in hoc in hoc in an - no.]

hoc in hoc in hoc in an - hoc in hoc in hoc in an - hoc in hoc in hoc in an - no.

HAC IN DIE SALUTARI
Conductus (J45/151)

F, f. 363v (7,119)

I Hac in die salutari, monet plausu renovari novus annus circulari ductu renovatus. Movet annus suscitari gaudium, renatus. [Refr.?] Hoc in an-, hoc in an-, hoc in an-, hoc in, hoc in, hoc in anno. Vox sonora solvat ora sine mora. [Refr.?] Hoc in an-, hoc in an-, hoc in, hoc in, hoc in an-, hoc in, hoc in, hoc in an-, hoc in, hoc in, hoc in anno.	5 10 15	On this day of salvation, the new year, being renewed, announces its renewal by the striking up of a ring dance. The year, reborn, causes joy to be rekindled. In this ye-, in this ye-, in this ye-, in this, in this, in this year. Let a resounding voice loosen our lips without delay. In this ye-, in this ye-, in this, in this, in this ye-, in this, in this, in this ye-, in this, in this, in this year
--	---------------------------------	---

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 119, f. 363v: a2; Strophe I, complete, with a capital heading line 11, indicated by the extra vertical space in the poem above, and with no provisions for additional text; a unique musical and textual setting. This and the next two pieces form a short group of simpler, syllabic works, following the previous array of nine more elaborate conductus cum caudis from F-7, 110-118, a series that began with Caput in caudam vertitur (J37/54).

Text only: none.

Music only:

The opening notes in both voices of Hac in die salutari recollect the first phrase of the final cauda of the conductus Columbe simplicitas (J16/66), found in the following sources:

F, fasc. 7, no. 68, f. 328v: a2; Strophe I, complete, with BD at end.

Hu, no. 148, fol.137r: a2, in mensural notation; Strophe I complete; no BD conclusion.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Versification: As this piece has a number of characteristics that intimate it could contain one or more refrains as well as one or more stanzas, there is some ambiguity as to how to interpret its verse structure. For example, it could be multi-stanzaic, with two differently constructed strophes (lines 1-10, 11-18) set to through-composed music, or it might present a single stanza, as conjectured above. Furthermore, it could contain a single refrain, beginning either at line 7, or even 11 or 14; or, alternatively, two multiple but closely related refrains, from lines 7-10 and 14-18, might be the intended construct. Unfortunately, these questions are likely to remain unanswered unless further textual and musical sources surface.¹ 1-4: This work is one of a number of conductus that invoke the new year, and might thus be appropriate for liturgical or festive use at Circumcision or for the so-called Feast of Fools on 1 January, as well as Christmastide in general. Also conceivable is the celebration of the new year at a different time of the year, such as Easter, Christmas, or the feast of the Annunciation (March 25). For an analogous situation in another conductus that also praises renewal (this time of spring) and communicates elements of the dance, see the notes on the text to the conductus Veris ad imperia (F11/373). For more information on pieces that invoke the new year, see the notes to the text to Hac in anni janua (E6/148) and those of Ysyas cecinit (C4/188), lines 25 and 27. The invocation of the ring dance in lines 3-4 may be metaphorical, as the turn to a new year has similar connotations of circularity and return. Donna La Rue, for example, has shown that certain terms associated with dance may be less indicative of actual dancing in the context of a liturgical celebration, and may rather connote festivity without actually involving dance.² For other conductus with possible references to dancing, see, in addition to Hac in die salutari (J45/151), Nicholai presulis (F27/217), Trine vocis tripudio (E4/351), Baculi solempnia (J52/20), Genitus divinitus (I25/144); and notice also the troped organum Beatis nos adhibe / Benedicamus domino (A7/44 – vdW 761/BD VI), especially lines 15-17.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. MUSIC: 10,4: D: F: f for g; emended editorially, due to the fact that, if left alone, this would be the only interval of a second in the entire piece, which is otherwise heavily consonant.

¹Discussion along similar lines of the unusual characteristics of Hac in die salutari can be found in Mary Channen Caldwell, “Singing, Dancing, and Rejoicing in the Round: Latin Sacred Songs with Refrains, circa 1000-1582” (Ph.D. dissertation, The University of Chicago, 2013), 674-676.

²See Donna La Rue, “Tripudium: Its Use in Sources from 200 BCE to 1600 CE,” ARTS (The Arts in Religious and Theological Studies), vol. 7, no. 3 – separately paginated – (1995): 25–29.

AVE NOBILIS VENERABILIS MARIA – F, LG2, and Pa3517 settings
 Conductus, Sequence (J46/35)

F, f. 363v (7,120): Strophe I; LG2: Strophes II-V; FB: Strophes IVa, Va; DO882: Strophe IVb (incomplete)

1. [A - ve no - bi - lis ve - ne - ra - bi - lis ma - ri - a.
 2. [Tu post do - mi - num ce - li ag - mi - num ma - gi - stra
 3. [Pul - chra fa - ci - e ce - li glo - ri - e re - gi - na
 4. [Vir - go pro - pe - ra nos re - fe - de - ra su - per - bis
 5. [Ma - ter re - gi - e re - gis glo - ri - e so - li - o
 4a. [Ma - ter as - su - mus et te que - ri - mus de - vo - te.
 5a. [For - tis an - cho - ra no - stra tem - po - ra dis - po - ne
 4b. [E - ter - na - li - um por - tas ci - vi - um re - se - ra,

1. A - ve no - bi - lis ve - ne - ra - bi - lis ma - ri - a.
 2. [Tu post do - mi - num ce - li ag - mi - num ma - gi - stra
 3. [Pul - chra fa - ci - e ce - li glo - ri - e re - gi - na
 4. [Vir - go pro - pe - ra nos re - fe - de - ra su - per - bis
 5. [Ma - ter re - gi - e re - gis glo - ri - e so - li - o
 4a. [Ma - ter as - su - mus et te que - ri - mus de - vo - te.
 5a. [For - tis an - cho - ra no - stra tem - po - ra dis - po - ne
 4b. [E - ter - na - li - um por - tas ci - vi - um re - se - ra,

1. a - mi - ca - bi - lis co - mes u - ti - lis in vi - a.
 2. vir - go vir - gi - num lu - cis lu - mi - num mi - ni - stra
 3. no - bis ho - di - e po - tum gra - ti - e pro - pi - na
 4. ca - ptos li - be - ra da - que pro - spe - ra mi - se - ris
 5. tu - os li - be - ra pro no - bis im - pe - ra fi - li - o
 4a. i - re vo - lu - mus sed non pos - su - mus si - ne te
 5a. no - stra pe - cto - ra no - stra cor - po - ra com - po - ne
 4b. O con - sor - ti - um nos ce - le - sti - um mu - ne - ra;

1. a - mi - ca - bi - lis co - mes u - ti - lis in vi - a.
 2. vir - go vir - gi - num lu - cis lu - mi - num mi - ni - stra
 3. no - bis ho - di - e po - tum gra - ti - e pro - pi - na
 4. ca - ptos li - be - ra da - que pro - spe - ra mi - se - ris
 5. tu - os li - be - ra pro no - bis im - pe - ra fi - li - o
 4a. i - re vo - lu - mus sed non pos - su - mus si - ne te
 5a. no - stra pe - cto - ra no - stra cor - po - ra com - po - ne
 4b. O con - sor - ti - um nos ce - le - sti - um mu - ne - ra;

1. men - tes e - ri - ge cur - sum di - ri - ge per hec in - vi - a.
 2. cor - il - lu - mi - nans et de - li - mi - nans que - que ve - ter - a
 3. po - tens o - mni - um in - fi - de - li - um vim ex - ter - mi - na
 4. ca - ra ca - sti - tas ca - sta ca - ri - tas tu - is a - pe - ri
 5. ut e - ter - na sor - te su - pe - ra - ta mor - te si - ne ter - mi - no
 4a. so - la suf - fi - cis nos re - spi - cis in hoc tra - mi - te.
 5a. no - stra o - mni - a sint so - la - ti - a in te vir - gi - ne.
 4b. flos con - val - li - um, ro - sa ni - mi - um o - do - ri - fe - ra,] ...

1. men - tes e - ri - ge cur - sum di - ri - ge per hec in - vi - a.
 2. cor - il - lu - mi - nans et de - li - mi - nans que - que ve - ter - a
 3. po - tens o - mni - um in - fi - de - li - um vim ex - ter - mi - na
 4. ca - ra ca - sti - tas ca - sta ca - ri - tas tu - is a - pe - ri
 5. ut e - ter - na sor - te su - pe - ra - ta mor - te si - ne ter - mi - no
 4a. so - la suf - fi - cis nos re - spi - cis in hoc tra - mi - te.
 5a. no - stra o - mni - a sint so - la - ti - a in te vir - gi - ne.
 4b. flos con - val - li - um, ro - sa ni - mi - um o - do - ri - fe - ra,] ...

1. mo - res cor - ri - ge. tu - o re - mi - ge. lux su - per - na
 2. fons in - e - bri - ans stel - la ra - di - ans su - per a - stra
 3. chri - sto cre - du - lum mun - da po - pu - lum mun - do cla - ra
 4. ce - li se - mi - tas num - quam di - mit - tas men - tes fes - sas
 5. te - cum gau - de - a - mus et be - ne - di - ca - mus ce - le - sti - um
 4a. no - bis cle - ri - cis no - stris la - i - cis nunc ad - e - sto
 5a. ple - na gra - ti - a de - le vi - ti - a sis tu - ta - men
 4b.

1. mo - res cor - ri - ge. tu - o re - mi - ge. lux su - per - na
 2. fons in - e - bri - ans stel - la ra - di - ans su - per a - stra
 3. chri - sto cre - du - lum mun - da po - pu - lum mun - do cla - ra
 4. ce - li se - mi - tas num - quam di - mit - tas men - tes fes - sas
 5. te - cum gau - de - a - mus et be - ne - di - ca - mus ce - le - sti - um
 4a. no - bis cle - ri - cis no - stris la - i - cis nunc ad - e - sto
 5a. ple - na gra - ti - a de - le vi - ti - a sis tu - ta - men
 4b.

1. nos gu - ber - na per hec ma - ri - a.
 2. ce - li ca - stra no - bis re - se - ra.]
 3. mun - do ca - ra mun - di do - mi - na.]
 4. et op - pres - sas mo - le pon - de - ri.]
 5. ter - re - stri - um [sum - mo] do - mi - no.]
 4a. cu - stos e - sto ple - bis sub - di - te.]
 5a. no - bis a - men in dis - cri - mi - ne.]
 4b.

1. nos gu - ber - na per hec ma - ri - a.
 2. ce - li ca - stra no - bis re - se - ra.]
 3. mun - do ca - ra mun - di do - mi - na.]
 4. et op - pres - sas mo - le pon - de - ri.]
 5. ter - re - stri - um [sum - mo] do - mi - no.]
 4a. cu - stos e - sto ple - bis sub - di - te.]
 5a. no - bis a - men in dis - cri - mi - ne.]
 4b.

LG2, f. 282v: Strophe I only of Strophes I-V, final on f

2. T A - ve no - bi - lis ve - ne - ra - bi - lis ma - ri - a.

a - mi - ca - bi - lis co - mes u - ti - lis in vi - a.

men - tes e - ri - ge cur - sum di - ri - ge per hec in - vi - a.

8 mo - res cor - ri - ge. tu - o re - mi - ge. lux su - per - na nos gu - ber - na per hec ma - ri - a.

Pa3517, f. 13v: Strophe I only of Strophes I-III, final on c

3. T

8 A - ve no - bi - lis ve - ne - ra - bi - lis ma - ri - a.

8 a - mi - ca - bi - lis co - mes u - ti - lis in vi - a.

8 men - tes e - ri - ge cur - sum di - ri - ge per hec in - vi - a.

8 mo - res cor - ri - ge. tu - o re - mi - ge. lux su - per - na nos gu - ber - na per hec ma - ri - a.

AVE NOBILIS VENERABILIS MARIA – F, LG2, and Pa3517 settings

Conductus, Sequence (J46/35)

F, f. 363v (7,120): Strophe I; LG2: Strophes II-V; FB: Strophes IVa, Va; DO882: Strophe IVb (incomplete)

I	Ave, nobilis, venerabilis Maria, amicabilis comes, utilis in via. Mentes erige; cursum dirige per hec invia. Mores corrige tuo remige, lux superna, nos gubernata per hec maria.		Hail, noble, venerable Mary, friendly 5 companion, helpful on the journey. Lift our spirits; direct our course through these impassable tracks. 10 Set our conduct aright with your rudder; heavenly light, steer us through these seas
II	[Tu, post dominum, celi agminum magistra. Virgo virginum, lucis luminum ministra, cor illuminans et deliminans queque vetera, fons inebrians, stella radians super astra, celi castra nobis resera.	15	You, after the Lord, are the mistress of heaven's armies. Virgin of virgins, minister of the 20 light of lights, illuminating the heart and driving away each and every sin of old, intoxicating spring, 25 star shining above the heavenly bodies, unlock for us the fortifications of heaven.
III	Pulchra facie, celi glorie regina, nobis hodie potum gratie propina. Potens, omnium infidelium vim extermina. Christo credulum munda populum, mundo clara, mundo cara, mundi domina.]	30	Lovely of countenance, queen of heaven's glory, serve to us today the drink of grace. 35 Powerful one, eliminate the might of all the unfaithful. Cleanse the people trusting in Christ, 40 lady shining for the world, lady precious to the world, the mistress of the world.

The following two stanzas, transmitted only in LG2, appear after Strophe III.

IV	[Virgo, propera. Nos refedera. Superbis captos libera daque prospera miseris. Cara castitas, casta caritas, tuis aperi celi semitas. Numquam dimittas mentes fessas et oppressas mole ponderi.		Virgin, hurry. Reunite us in alliance. Free those captured by the proud and grant good outcomes to the wretched. Esteemed chastity, chaste esteem, open up to your own the paths of heaven. May you never abandon minds weary and oppressed by the weight of the millstone.
		45
		50
		55
V	Mater regie regis glorie solio, tuos libera. Pro nobis impera filio, ut, eterna sorte, superata morte, sine termino tecum gaudeamus et benedicamus celestium terrestrium [summo] domino.]		Mother of regal glory on the throne of a king, free your adherents. Command your son on our behalf, so that, during our everlasting destiny, having conquered death, we may rejoice with you without end, and may bless the [highest] lord of the celestial and terrestrial.
		60
		65
		70

The following two stanzas, transmitted only in FB, appear after Strophe III.

IVa	[Mater, assumus et te querimus devote. Ire volumus sed non possumus sine te. Sola sufficis, si nos respicis in hoc tramite. Nobis clericis, nostris laicis, nunc adesto. Custos esto plebis subdite.		Mother, we are at hand and seek you devotedly. We wish to proceed, but without you we cannot. You alone suffice, as long as you watch us on this track. For us clerics, for our laity, be now present. Be the guardian of a subject people.
		75
		80
Va	Fortis anchora,	85	Sturdy anchor,

nostra tempora dispone; nostra pectora, nostra corpora, compone.	90	arrange our daily lives; set our hearts, our bodies, in order.
Nostra omnia sint solatia in te, virgine plena gratia. Dele vitia; sis tutamen nobis – amen – in discrimine.]	95	Let all our consolations be in you, virgin full of grace. Expunge vices; be a safeguard for us – amen – in a crisis.

The following incomplete stanza is transmitted only in DO882, following Strophe III.

IVb [Eternalium portas civium resera. O consortium nos celestium munera. Flos convallium, rosa nimium odifera,] ...	100	Unbar the gates of the eternal citizens. O celestial company, reward us. Flower of the valley, rose exceedingly fragrant, ...
--	-----	--

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 120, f. 363v: a2, with final on g and no sigs throughout; setting of Strophe I only, with no provision for more stanzas. The piece begins mid-system on the folio (rather than at the left margin), something that happens only 12 times in F-7,¹ and which also obtains for the following piece, Helysei manubrio (I35/I53). The music in F is centered on g, a tone higher than LG2 and DO882, and a fourth lower than Pa3517. The opening stanzas of the first and last of these alternative transpositions are supplied here after the version of F for comparison.

LG2 (Limoges, Bibliothèque Municipale, 2 (17); F-LG 2 (17); “Fontevraud Gradual”),² f. 282v: a1 (T), with final on f (like DO882) and with b-flat sigs entered when needed; Strophes I-V, each fully supplied with music and headed with an illuminated initial; rubric: “Sequentia de sancta maria” (“Sequence about Saint Mary”). The first strophe of this rendering is given for comparison following the version from F.

Pa3517 (Paris, Bibliothèque de l’Arsenal, 3517; F-Pa 3517; ArsB),³ f. 13v: a1 (T), with final on c and no sigs throughout; Strophes I-III, with II-III written separately after the musical setting of I and indicated by painted

¹For a list, see the source report on F for Pia mater gratie (J18/268), at F-7,71, on f. 331r.

²Images of this source available at: <https://bnl-bfm.limoges.fr/s/bibliotheque-virtuelle/item/75>.

³Images available here: <https://gallica.bnf.fr/ark:/12148/btv1b55006913x/f1.image>.

initials. The first strophe of this rendering is given for comparison following the versions from F and LG2. This MS is one of the sources of the Miracles de Nostre Dame of Gautier de Coincy.

FB (Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Clm. 4660a; D-Mbs Clm. 4660a; “Fragmenta Burana”), f. IVr (3r): a1 (likely the T), in unheightened neumes written over every stanza; Strophes I-III, IVa, Va, each indicated by capitals; the unique stanzas presented in this source cast this work as a Benedicamus domino acclamation. This transmission is in a more cursive text hand, contrasting with those of the other two poems entered above and below Ave nobilis on this leaf, each of these also entered by different scribes.

DO882 (Donaueschingen, Fürstlich Fürstenbergische Hofbibliothek, 882; D-DO 882), f. 175v: a1 (T) with final on f (like LG2) and occasional b-flat sigs; Strophes I-III, followed by the uniquely transmitted, incomplete Strophe IVb; music entered for all stanzas. Images of this source are presently unavailable to me, and the MS is presently lost; details derive from the edition in Anderson, NDRC, and the CPI website.

Text only:

D-HR Cod. Il Lat. 2, 8°, 13 (Harburg, Fürstlich Oettingen-Wallerstein'sche Bibliothek und Kunstsammlungen [now in the University Library, Augsburg], Cod. Il Lat. 2, 8°, 13), f. 132v: text only of Strophes I-III. Images of this source are presently unavailable to me; information derives from Anderson, NDRC, and the CPI website.

D-TR 1878; Trier, Stadtbibliothek, 1878, f. 154v: text only of Strophes I-III. Images of this source are presently unavailable to me; information drawn from Anderson, NDRC, and the CPI website.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Versification: There are a wide variety of ways to construe the verse structure of this poem in praise of the Virgin Mary. Here, a route that favors shorter lines has been taken. This results in a pair of tercets of 2(5pp)+3p, followed by 5(5pp) lines, concluding with a 2(4p)+5pp – or possibly 5p – tercet, with various strategies available for considering these units as parts of larger constructs. Strophe V, however, presents five lines (61,63,64,66,67) with an extra syllable (6p for 5pp) in comparison to the other stanzas (see below in the observations and variants of the verbal text),⁴ and the succession of rhyme sounds varies in each stanza, except for the identity between I and what remains of IVb. Stanzaic disposition: All sources but F transmit at least Strophes I-III, which group appears to constitute the core set of stanzas for this poem. The variety of additional or alternative strophes found in other MSS (5 stanzas in 3 sources – with these added ones all following upon I-III) is notable. The use of rhyming vowels other than “-i-a” in the third and sixth lines of IV, V, IVa, Va, and IVb also sets apart these seemingly ancillary units. In terms of the inclusion and performance of the stanzas beyond III, if V is used, it perhaps had best bring the presentation of the entire text to a close, no matter what other strophes may be called upon to precede it, since V functions essentially as a BD acclamation. Textual notes: 1-14 (Strophe I): although not directly stated, this opening stanza is primarily given over to images that recall the Virgin Mary's frequent designation as stella maris, star of the sea, a figurative guiding light for mariners. This address occurs in a number of other conductus in F, notably in the setting of the metrical liturgical text Alma redemptoris mater (I32/13). David A. Traill, Carmina Burana, ⁴The six-syllable content of these lines is not indicated in the verse analysis provided by the CPI website.

2:728,⁵ suggests that the additional references to journeying in lines 77-82 (occurring in a stanza found only in FB) may imply a pilgrimage, based on the inclusion of both clergy and laity among the travelers. 19-20: the “light of lights” is Christ, suggested by John, 8:12,⁶ and implied by the phrase lumen de lumine from the Nicene Creed. 23: the interpretation of “vetera” as “old sins” is prompted by 2 Corinthians, 5:17,⁷ which recalls Isaiah, 26:3.⁸ 21: see Ecclesiasticus (Sirach), 2:10, where the illuminator of hearts is the Lord.⁹ 56: millstones, due to their great weight and the degree of labor involved in their use, represent life’s hardships and death. 57-59: a frequent epithet of Mary is “throne of Solomon,” see, e.g., the remarks on line 15 of Philip the Chancellor’s conductus O Maria virginis (E14/239), and line 67-68 of Ave gloriosa virginum regina (K75/28) by the same poet. 106-107: for the symbol of the rose as it pertains to the Virgin, see the notes to the text of the conductus Flos de spina procreatur (H29/127), lines 1-2.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: General remarks: Since multiple sources (F, LG2, DO882) are used to supply the stanzas not transmitted in F, and since Pa3517 as well as LG2 is drawn on here to furnish an alternative to the musical setting in F, all textual variants within these sources are collated. For DO882, unavailable to me, the variants reported here come from Anderson, NRDC, 5:122. Throughout LG2 there is very little to no apparent punctuation. Final periods may be present for Strophes I-II, but none are visible for III-V; those in the music transcription are added editorially. Extra syllables and notes: The fifth stanza of LG2 differs in versification from the others in giving several lines with supernumerary syllables. Lines 61,2 (“nobis”), 63,3 (“sorte”), 64,1 (“superata”), 66,1 (“tecum”), and 67,2 (“benedicamus”) all add an extra syllable to their verses, along with an added note to accommodate them. Interestingly, this anomaly is particular only to this uniquely transmitted stanza; it appears in no other strophes in LG2 or in any other stanzas in any other MSS that contain this poem. It also makes one question whether the fifth stanza was crafted in conjunction with the others or whether it was conceived independently and tacked on to the larger poem to allow it to serve as a Benedicamus domino acclamation. The extraneous material (with the extra notes bracketed and in a smaller size) has been incorporated into the musical transcription of the F version to allow performance, if desired. Textual variants: 4-5: LG2: lines exchanged. 4: DO882: O micabilis. 9,3: LG2: devia. 16,2: Pa3517: omnium. 19,1: Pa3517: luxque. 21,1: DO882: nos. 22-24: DO882: om. 22,2: FB, Pa3517: eliminans. 33,1: LG2: portum; adopted reading from all other applicable sources. 38,2: Pa3517: fidelem. 39,1: LG2: mundi; adopted reading from all other applicable sources, except D-TR 1878: salva. 40,1: DO882: munda. 41: Pa3517, DO882: munda caro. 42,1: FB: munda, although Anderson, NRDC, 5:122, following Meyer, Fragmenta Burana, 30,¹⁰ indicates there is a mark for correction in the form of a small “i” placed over the final letter of this word. This, however, could be an errant penstroke. 60: LG2: tuo libere; editorial emendation after Anderson, NRDC, 5:xxxviii. 78,1-2: FB: sinnos; corrected after Anderson, NRDC, 5:122, following Meyer, ⁵David A. Traill, ed. and transl., Carmina Burana, 2 vols., Dumbarton Oaks Medieval Library, nos. 48-49 (Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 2018).

⁶John, 8:12: “Iterum ergo locutus est eis Jesus, dicens: Ego sum lux mundi: qui sequitur me, non ambulat in tenebris, sed habebit lumen vitae” (“Again therefore, Jesus spoke to them, saying: I am the light of the world: he that follows me, walks not in darkness, but shall have the light of life.”).

⁷2 Corinthians, 5:17: “Si qua ergo in Christo nova creatura, vetera transierunt: ecce facta sunt omnia nova” (“If then any be in Christ a new creature, the old things are passed away, behold all things are made new.”).

⁸Isaiah, 26:3: “Vetus error abiit: servabis pacem; pacem, quia in te speravimus” (“The old error is passed away: thou wilt keep peace: peace, because we have hoped in thee.”).

⁹Ecclesiasticus (Sirach), 2:10: “Qui timetis Dominum, diligite illum, et illuminabuntur corda vestra” (“You that fear the Lord, love him, and your hearts shall be enlightened.”).

¹⁰Wilhelm Meyer, ed., Fragmenta Burana (Berlin: Wiedmannsche Buchhandlung, 1901).

Fragmenta Burana, 30. 58,1: LG2: regi; editorial emendation after Anderson, NDRC, 5:xxxviii. 70,1: LG2: om, with notes provided for the two syllables; editorial completion, after Anderson, NDRC, 5:xxxviii. 99: Anderson, NDRC, 5:ixl: externalium; I assume this is printed erroneously for “eternalium.” 100,1: porta. MUSIC: See the above observations on the text concerning the appearance of extra syllables and notes in Strophe V. Line 2: D: F: 3 of 3li=e faded as if erased; retained by comparison with D of line 5. 14,1: LG2: the unusual, rather unexpected c for this syllable does sound as though it might be an error for b-flat, as the other sources might suggest. However, this reading occurs in each of the fully written-out strophes in this source, so it has been retained.

HELyseI MANUBRIO
 Conductus (I35/I53)

F, f. 364r (7,121)

[He - ly - se - i ma - nu - bri - o se - cu - ris ad - a - pta - ti - o
 He - ly - se - i ma - nu - bri - o se - cu - ris ad - a - pta - ti - o
 no - vel - lo fit con - nu - bi - o. e - mer - si - o de flu - vi - o
 no - vel - lo fit con - nu - bi - o. e - mer - si - o de flu - vi - o se pre - bu - it que la - tu - it. iam pa - tu - it et af - fu - it se pre - bu - it que la - tu - it. iam pa - tu - it et af - fu - it re - dem - pti - o con - si - li - o pa - ren - tis. fit re - stau - ra - ti - o re - dem - pti - o con - si - li - o pa - ren - tis. fit re - stau - ra - ti - o chri - sti com - mer - ti - o na - scen - tis.]
 chri - sti com - mer - ti - o na - scen - tis.]

Alternative ending in W2 on c/g (scribal error?)

[na - scen - tis.]
 na - scen - tis.]

HELYSEI MANUBRIO

Conductus (I35/153)

F, f. 364r (7,121)

I	Helysei manubrio		The fitting of the axe head
	securis adaptatio		to Elisha's handle
	novello fit connubio.		makes way for a novel type of union.
	Emersio	de fluvio	Its raising from the river
	se prebuit	que latuit.	5 revealed what lay hidden.
	Iam patuit	et affuit	Already visible and close at hand redemptio	consilio	was redemption according to parentis.		the father's plan.
	Fit restauratio		Restoration is achieved
	Christi commertio	10	through the transaction of the nascentis.		birthing of Christ.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 121, f. 364r: a2; Strophe I, complete; there is a bit of space available at the right margin of the last system, but this is occupied with empty staff lines after the end of the piece, so it appears there was no intention to include additional strophes, assuming any ever existed. The piece begins mid-system on the folio (rather than at the left margin), something that happens only 12 times in F-7,¹ and which also obtains for the preceding piece, Ave nobilis venerabilis (J46/35). This work ends a brief series of three pieces in F, all sine caudis and presented there as single-stanzas, although the middle work (Ave nobilis venerabilis Maria [J46/35]) has verifiable additional strophes.

W2, fasc. 7, no. 19, f. 139v: a2; Strophe I, complete; like F, a small amount of space is left to the right of the final system, occupied by empty staff lines, so it seems extremely unlikely any additional stanzas, if available, were ever destined for entry. The last line of the music, possibly due to an error of transposition in the T down a third by the scribe, ends on an unusual c/g sonority (given as an alternative following the version in F), rather than on a unison g as in F.

Text only: none.

Music only:

The music of the T in lines 5-6,² is the same as the T in the opening three phrases of the final cauda of the conductus Regnum dei vim patitur (H33/302), thus showing an example of syllabic/melismatic identity that occurs across two different works; this piece is transmitted with music in the following briefly noted sources:

F, fasc. 7, no. 98, f. 352v: a2.

W1, fasc. 9, no. 31, f. 119v (110v): a2.

W2, fasc. 7, no. 25, f.144r: a2.

In addition, the text alone of Regnum dei appears in the following briefly noted MSS:

¹For a list, see the source report on F for Pia mater gratie (J18/268), at F-7,71, on f. 331r.

OxRawl (Oxford, Bodleian Library, Rawlinson C 510; GB-Ob Rawl. poet. C510), no. 22, f. 239v (10v).

US-NHub Beinecke MS 712.59 (New Haven, Yale University Library, Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library, Beinecke MS 712.59), no. 1, recto (the shelfmark refers only to a single leaf); ruled for music a2 that was never entered.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: 1-3: a story from 4 Kings (2 Kings), 6:1-7, relates how the prophet Elisha was called by his followers to journey to Jordan to cut timber in order to make themselves larger living quarters there, their present dwellings being too constricted. Elisha accompanied them to Jordan, and when one of the party lost the head of a borrowed axe in the river while felling a tree, Elisha cut a wooden stick and threw it upon the water where the iron had sunk. The axe-head miraculously “swam” to the surface to meet the stick, and allowed the man to recover it. In this poem, the stick has been joined with the head to become the handle of the axe, and the combination of these two unlike materials, marvelously united, is rendered into a meditation on the incarnation of God as a human. 4-5: the miracle of the swimming axe is here interpreted typologically, representing a “hidden” allegory from the Old Testament that prefigures an event in the New, in this case the union of human and divine achieved by the birth of Jesus. 6-11: Much use is made here of the language of commerce with the words “redemptio” and “commertio.” In effect, the human race achieves a restoration (“restauratio”) to its former sinless state thanks to the sacrifice of Christ, as God the Father offers his Son in exchange for mankind’s sins (implied here by “commertium/commercium,” i.e., “transaction/exchange/business dealing”). This results in the redemption (“a buying back”) of humanity. 7-8: cf. Psalm 48:8: “Frater non redimit, redimet homo: non dabit Deo placationem suam ...” (“No brother can redeem, nor shall man redeem: he shall not give to God his ransom ...”). 10-11: cf. the opening texts of the antiphons “O admirabile commercium,” and “O felix commercium,”² as well as line 42 of the conductus Dum medium silentium tenerent (K15/99), and the opening of Strophe C (line 40) of the conductus Notum fecit dominus (a contrafact of Si Deus est animus [H32, 324], q.v.).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: F: no variants. 2,1: construed here as genitive singular. 2,2: for the connotation adopted here, note the entry on this word in Du Cange, Glossarum,³ where it is equated with accommodatio and applicatio. 4-7: rather than splitting these 8pp lines into equal 4pp members wherever there is an internal rhyme within the verse (as in Anderson, NDRC, 4:xli), I have rendered each of these rhyming pairs here as a single unit, with the internal rhyme indicated by additional horizontal spacing. 4,1: a word rare in the standard dictionaries, though clearly the opposite of “immersio,” from “emergo”; see <https://logeion.uchicago.edu/emersio>. MUSIC: There is a frequent si,3C figure outlining a descending melodic fourth (c-g, once g-d) throughout nearly every line of the D voice and appearing once in the tenor, represented in the transcription by the letter “x” placed above the staff. Line 11: In W2, the music ends on an unusual c/g sonority rather than on a unison g as in F. This is likely the result of a combination of a scribal transposition error in the T and attempted correction in the D, which corresponds generally to the F reading throughout. The final cadence in W2 is supplied as an alternative after the F version.

²*Cantus Index*, nos. 003985 and 205632, respectively

³*Glossarium mediae et infimae latinitatis*, Charles du Fresne, sieur du Cange, ed., (Niort: L. Favre, et al., 1883-1887); available online: <http://ducange.enc.sorbonne.fr>. and at <https://logeion.uchicago.edu/adaptatio>.

REGIS DECUS ET REGINA
 Conductus: (J47/301)

F, f. 364v (7,122): Strophes Ia, IIa; Praha, f. 38v (no. 23): Strophe Ib; Ch, f. 5r (no. 5): Strophe IIb

I

D
 a. [Re-
 b. [Le-

T
 a. Re-
 b. [Le-

[Re] - gis de - cus et re - gi - ne sa - ga pel - les et cor - ti - ne
 [Le] - ctum or - nat co - lor flo - rum men - tem pa - scit o - dor mo - rum

[Re] - gis de - cus et re - gi - ne sa - ga pel - les et cor - ti - ne
 [Le] - ctum or - nat co - lor flo - rum men - tem pa - scit o - dor mo - rum

vi - o - le ro - se li - li - a. sa - ga
 tri - plex in tri - bus gra - ti - a con - fi -

vi - o - le ro - se li - li - a. sa - ga
 tri - plex in tri - bus gra - ti - a con - fi -

si - gnant con - fi - ten - tes. - tes.
 - ten - tes in li - vo - re

si - gnant con - fi - ten - tes. - tes.
 - ten - tes in li - vo - re

or:

pel - pa - [pel] - les ru - bre pa - ti - en - [pa] - ti - en - tes in ru - bo -

pel - pa - [pel] - les ru - bre pa - ti - en - [pa] - ti - en - tes in ru - bo -

- tes. cor - ti - ne con - ti - nen - ti -
- re in can - do - re mun - di - ti -

- a.
- a.
- a.
- a.

II

a. Man - [Man]-da - to - rum de - na - ri - us
b. [lam] sa - go - rum ci - li - ci - a

a. Man - [Man]-da - to - rum de - na - ri - us
b. [lam] sa - go - rum ci - li - ci - a

cor - ti - na - rum plu - ra - li - tas. vir - tu - tum qua - ter - na - ri - us est co - lo - rum di - ver - si - tas.
ver - tun - tur in de - li - ci - as cor - ti - na - rum mun - di - ti - a in sor - des et spur - ci - ti - as

cor - ti - na - rum plu - ra - li - tas. vir - tu - tum qua - ter - na - ri - us est co - lo - rum di - ver - si - tas.
ver - tun - tur in de - li - ci - as cor - ti - na - rum mun - di - ti - a in sor - des et spur - ci - ti - as cum pel -

cum pel -

[cum] ia - cin - cto pru - den - ti - e. bis - si re - tor - te ca - sti - tas. cum pur - pu - [pel] - li - um pa - ti - en - ti - a in ce - lo - rum dis - cor - di - as ce - dit in

-ra iu - sti - ti - e coc - ci bis - tin - cti ca - ri - que - stum gra - ti - a ho - nor in con - tu - me - li -

- tas.]
- as.]

- tas.
- as.]

REGIS DECUS ET REGINE

Conductus (J47/301)

F, f. 364v (7,122): Strophes Ia, IIa; Praha, f. 38v^b (no. 23): Strophe Ib; Ch, f. 5r (no. 5): Strophe IIb

Ia Regis decus et regine: saga, pelles, et cortine, viole, rose, lilia. saga signant confitentes, pelles rubre patientes, cortine continentia.	They are the glory of a king and queen, the coverings, skins, and curtains, the violets, roses, and lilies. The coverings signify those who confess, 5 the red skins those who suffer, while the curtains denote chastity.
Ib [Lectum ornat color florum. Mentem pascit odor morum. Triplex in tribus gratia: confitentes in livore, patientes in rubore, in candore, munditia.]	The color of flowers adorns this collection. Their fragrance refreshes a mind of good character. In these three is a triple grace: 10 in violet-blue, those who confess, in rose-red, those who suffer, in lily-white, purity.
IIa Mandatorum denarius cortinarum pluralitas; virtutum quaternarius est colorum diversitas, cum iacincto Prudentie, bissi retorte Castitas, cum purpura Iustitie, cocci bistincti Caritas.	The number of the curtains denotes the Ten Commandments; 15 the variety of their colors equals four of the Virtues, with the blue of Prudence, and the Chastity of fine twined white linen, with the purple of Justice, 20 and the Charity of double-dyed scarlet.
IIb [Iam sagorum cilicia vertuntur in delicias, cortinarum munditia in sordes et spurcitas, pellium patientia in celorum discordias; cedit in questum gratia honor in contumelias.]	But now the haircloths of the coverings are transformed into enticements, the purity of the curtains into baseness and filth, 25 the suffering of the skins into discords of the heavens; grace gives way to gain, honor to reproach.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 122, f. 364v: a2; Strophes Ia, IIa only, with IIa signaled by a capital and with no space allotted for further text. This piece begins a series of more complex works cum caudis up through F-7,126 (Librum clausum et signatum [J51/198]) after the preceding group of three simpler items. Additionally, from here to the end of the fascicle, F is the only one of the four main Parisian conductus sources to transmit these pieces.

*Ch (F-CECad 3.J.250; Châlons-en-Champagne, Archives départementales de la Marne, 3.J.250),*¹ no. 5, f. 5r: a2; music and text survive only for the final 10L of the concluding cauda through the punctus organi, the last syllable of IIa, and a separate transmission of the poetry of Strophe IIb written in a dedicated space within the writing block following the final system. This is the only extant source for Ib. A single empty staff, surmounting the music of the T and D on the two staves below it, appears at the top of this leaf, which is the first page of the single extant bifolium that constitutes this particular fascicle of the MS. If not due to scribal error, the empty staff could suggest the possibility that a unique setting a3 might have been intended but not completed for Ch, a hypothesis also prompted by the fact that the text of Strophe Ib occupies the entire vertical space allotted to this conjectured three-staff system.² Regis decus is then succeeded on ff. 5r and 5v by single motetus voices from three different pieces, each lacking tenors. The second and last leaf of the fascicle, ff. 6r-6v, is non-contiguous with the first and shows a fragmentary single-texted redaction a3, with tenor, of the widely transmitted motet O quam sancta quam benigna / Et gaudebit (vdW 317/M24).

¹For a recent study devoted to the Châlons fragments, see Ilana L. Schroeder, “A Codicological and Contextual Analysis of Châlons-en-Champagne, Archives départementales de la Marne, 3.J.250,” Ph.D. dissertation (University of Wisconsin-Madison, 2018).

Text only:

Praha, no. 23, f. 38^v: text only, Strophes Ia-IIa (but omitting line 20), with an upper-case opening guide letter (or initial?) in the gutter between the columns and the beginnings of the subsequent stanzas signaled by upper-case letters. This is the only extant source for Ib, and, since the penultimate line of IIa (line 19) fills up the folio and concludes this extant series of Notre Dame texts, it is difficult to assess here whether the last line of Strophe IIa and all of Strophe Ib were lost with subsequent pages or never entered (although the latter seems most likely, since according to Anderson, NDRC, 5:123, the following folio (39r) begins with a new item); nonetheless it is at least conceivable that further texts may have followed Regis decus. A marginal rubric, typical for the poems in this source, is omitted for this specific piece, although the label “conductus” for the previous entry (Centrum capit circulus [J38/57]) may have been intended to apply to this item as well.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: General remarks: The poem is attributed to Philip the Chancellor in Praha. Dronke, (“Lyrical Compositions,” 583)³ raises doubt about the attribution, although I disagree with him (see “Poetry, Politics, and Polyphony,” 14, note 35, and 284-286).⁴ The entire text is an allegorical treatment of the materials and colors of the curtains and coverings used in the construction of the Tabernacle that housed the Ark of the Covenant; see Exodus, 26 and 36; cf. also the nod to this theme in Philip’s organum prosula Adesse festina (A12/- – vdW58/M2), lines 20-25. Also, very much in Philip’s mold, the positive qualities assigned to the decorations are flipped on their heads in the final stanza and have now become reprehensible; see the notes on the text for lines 21-22, below.⁵ For further treatment of Regis decus and a collection of patristic references concerning the symbols used here (drawn primarily from Bede’s De tabernaculo and In Pentateuchum), see Anderson’s notes to this text in NDRC, 5:xl-xli; Anderson’s treatment has been invaluable for the commentary here. Textual notes: 1: the mention of royalty in this line is somewhat obscure, but may possibly refer to ²Schroeder, “A Codicological and Contextual Analysis,” 22-23, suggests that the empty staff is the result of an error on the text scribe, who entered the poetry of Ib at the end of the system prior to the music being inscribed, and who assumed that the piece was to have three voices. She also posits here a possible confusion on the part of the scribe who drew the staves, who might have been unfamiliar with the number of voices needed for the pieces that were to be entered.

³Peter Dronke, “The Lyrical Compositions of Philip the Chancellor,” Studi medievali, 3rd series, 28 (1987): 563-592.

⁴Thomas B. Payne, “Poetry, Politics, and Polyphony: Philip the Chancellor’s Contribution to the Music of the Notre Dame School,” 5 volumes, Ph.D. dissertation (The University of Chicago, 1991).

⁵For an analogous inversion of biblical material, see Philip’s Caput in caudam vertitur (J37/54), preserved 12 pieces earlier in F.

Christ and the Virgin. 2-6: see Exodus, 26:1,7,14,⁶ and the nearly identical respective passages in Exodus, 36:8,14,19. The ten linen curtains (cortinae) displaying the four different colors (white, violet-blue or hyacinth, purple, and scarlet) formed the outline of the tabernacle proper, over which were first laid layered coverings (saga) of goat-skins (cilicia or cilicina), and then rams' hides (pelles arietum) over these, dyed red and violet respectively. The connections of the tabernacle materials with the three differently colored flowers mentioned in line 3 and the virtuous qualities associated with those colors is further explored in the following stanza. 7-12 (Strophe Ib): the colors of the flowers treated here, and referred to earlier in line 3, also correspond to the essential hues (blue/purple, red, and white) used for the Tabernacle. Hence the poet imbues them with the same allegorical qualities. In addition to the explanations given by Anderson for this passage, note the even more closely corresponding explanation of the floral symbolism given by Peter Riga and Egidius Parisiensis in the Aurora.⁷ 7,1: none of the most typical meanings for “lectum” seems to be especially satisfactory. Neither “chosen one” or “bed” seems suitable in view of the rest of the poem. As a result I have provisionally leaned towards the sense of this word as denoting an object made up of various items collected and brought together. For this meaning see the DMLBS, s.v. “lectus,” 1.2. There may also be a connection with another definition of this word as “bed hangings,” since the Tabernacle’s own hangings and coverings might conceivably extend to such an association. For this sense, see the DMLBS, s.v. “lectus,” 2.3.⁸ 15-20: within this stanza, the ten curtains of the tabernacle, equated logically with the 10 Commandments in lines 13-14, have their colors likened to three of the four cardinal virtues (Prudence, Justice, and Chastity or Temperance – Fortitude is left out of the picture) and one of the three theological virtues (Charity, omitting Faith and Hope). The tetrad of the cardinal virtues arises in various places. They are depicted in the Bible (Wisdom, 8:7)⁹ and described, amidst other authors, by Cicero (De officiis, I,ii,5), Ambrose (De officiis ministrorum, I,xxiv-xxv; Expositio evangelii secundum Lucam, 5,62-67), and Augustine (De moribus ecclesiae, chap. 15). The theological virtues, arising from the act of grace bestowed by God, are mentioned in Thessalonians, 1:3 and 5:8,¹⁰ as well as 1 Corinthians, ⁷Petrus Riga and Egidius Parisiensis, Aurora, (on Genesis, lines 196-198), as quoted in Jean-Baptiste Pitra, ed., Spicilegium solesmense, 4 vols. (Paris, F. Didot, 1852-1858), 2 (1855): 123: “Illi quos varius virtutum splendor honorat, / Sunt violae, sunt et lilia, suntque rosae. / Sunt violae qui sunt humiles; sunt lilia casto / Corpore degentes; sunt patiendo rosae” (“Those [flowers] that the manifold splendor of the virtues honors: / they are violets, and they are lilies, and they are roses. / Those are violets who are humble; those dwelling in a chaste / body are lilies; roses are for one suffering.”).

⁶Exodus, 26:1: “Tabernaculum vero ita facies: decem cortinas de bysso retorta, et hyacintho, ac purpura, coccoque bis tincto, variatas opere plumario facies” (“And you shall make the tabernacle in this manner: You shall make ten curtains of fine twisted linen, and violet and purple, and scarlet twice dyed, diversified with embroidery.”). Exodus, 26:7: “Facies et saga cilicina undecim, ad operiendum tectum tabernaculi” (“You shall make also eleven curtains of goats' hair, to cover the top of the tabernacle.”). Exodus, 26:14: “Facies et operimentum aliud tecto de pellibus arietum rubricatis: et super hoc rursum aliud operimentum de janthinis pellibus” (“You shall make also another cover to the roof, of rams' skins dyed red; and over that again another cover of violet coloured skins.”).

⁸Both definitions available through: <https://logeion.uchicago.edu/lectus>.

⁹Wisdom, 8:7: “Et si iustitiam quis diligit, labores hujus magnas habent virtutes: sobrietatem enim et prudentiam docet, et iustitiam, et virtutem, quibus utilius nihil est in vita hominibus.” (“And if a man love justice: her labors have great virtues; for she teaches temperance, and prudence, and justice, and fortitude, which are such things as men can have nothing more profitable in life”).

¹⁰Thessalonians, 1:3: “Memores operis fidei vestrae, et laboris, et caritatis, et sustinentiae spei Domini nostri Jesu Christi, ante Deum et Patrem nostrum” (“Being mindful of the work of your faith, and labour, and charity, and of the enduring of the hope of our Lord Jesus Christ before God and our Father.”). Thessalonians, 5:8: “Nos autem, qui diei sumus, sobrii simus, induti lorice fidei et caritatis, et galeam spem salutis” (“But let us, who are of the day, be sober, having on the breastplate of faith and charity, and for a helmet the hope of salvation.”).

13.¹¹ For references drawn from Bede,¹² who connects these colors to several of the virtues mentioned in the conductus poem, see Anderson, NDRC, 5:xli, notes 4 and 5. 21-2: the goat-skin coverings (cilicia) of the Tabernacle are here equated with the hairshirts or sackcloth (also called cilicia) worn by penitents (see, for just two biblical citations, Ezekiel, 7:18, and Jeremiah, 4:8),¹³ which in an inversion typical of Philip have been transformed into representations of their opposites; the same sort of degradation applies to the curtains and hides in lines 23-26.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: Since all sources are drawn on to supply the text, all verbal variants are recorded here. 1,2: Praha: decor. 3,3: Praha: lylia. 10,1: due to the ambiguity of the abbreviation used in Praha, Anderson (NDRC, 5:xl) supplies “confidentes”; either reading is conceivable, with the alternative choice adopted here assuming direct parallelism between Strophes Ia and Ib. 18,1: Praha: byssi. 21,3: Ch: cicilia. 20-28: Praha: never entered or lost. MUSIC: Cauda on line 4.3: D: F: the rhythm of the 4li occupying L8-L10 is rendered somewhat unusually here as if it were two 2li figures; an erased 2li=ab follows; an alternative, more regular rhythm for this passage appears above the staff, which would render the passage just a shade less consonant. Cauda on line 13,1: T: F: at L9, an atypical reading of 3li as BBB seems necessitated by the D figure above.

¹¹1 Corinthians, 13:13: “Nunc autem manent fides, spes, caritas, tria haec: major autem horum est caritas” (“And now there remain faith, hope, and charity, these three: but the greatest of these is charity.”).

¹²Anderson cites PL, 91, cols. 324 (from In Pentateuchum) and 426 (from De tabernaculo).

¹³Ezekiel, 7:18: “Et accingent se ciliciis, et operiet eos formido: et in omni facie confusio, et in universis capitibus eorum calvitium” (“And they shall gird themselves with haircloth, and fear shall cover them, and shame shall be upon every face, and baldness upon all their heads.”). Jeremiah, 4:8: “Super hoc accingite vos ciliciis; plangite, et ululate: quia non est aversa ira furoris Domini a nobis” (“For this gird yourselves with haircloth, lament and howl: for the fierce anger of the Lord is not turned away from us.”).

BEATUS SERVUS SAPIENS

Conductus (J48/46)

F, f. 365r (7,123)

I

Soprano: [Be - a - tus]

Tenor: Be - [Be] - a - tus

Soprano: ser - vus sa - pi - ens cus - to - di - ens vi - gi - li - as. sic sa - pi - as et vi - gi - les.

Tenor: ser - vus sa - pi - ens cus - to - di - ens vi - gi - li - as. sic sa - pi - as et vi - gi - les.

Soprano: ut fer - ti - les fru - ctus re - fe - ras. ne dif - fe - ras. sed

Tenor: ut fer - ti - les fru - ctus re - fe - ras. ne dif - fe - ras. sed

Soprano: [sed] fi - at pro - ti - nus ut do - mi - nus ad - ve - ni - ens in - ve - ni - ens te vi - gi - lem et

Tenor: [sed] fi - at pro - ti - nus ut do - mi - nus ad - ve - ni - ens in - ve - ni - ens te vi - gi - lem et

Soprano: sta - bi - lem re - mu - ne - ret. et pro - spe - ret i - ter tu - um con - ti - nu - um ad

Tenor: sta - bi - lem re - mu - ne - ret. et pro - spe - ret i - ter tu - um con - ti - nu - um ad

Soprano: gau - di - a ce - le - sti - a. ti - bi spem me - ri - ti do - mi - nus

Tenor: gau - di - a ce - le - sti - a. ti - bi spem me - ri - ti do - mi - nus splen - di - de co - ro - nam ca - pi - ti de la - pi - de pre - ti - o -

splen - di - de co - ro - nam ca - pi - ti de la - pi - de pre - ti - o -

First system of piano accompaniment with red labels c and c' above the treble staff and b and b' below the bass staff.

Second system of piano accompaniment with red labels d and d' below the bass staff.

Third system of piano accompaniment with red labels e and e' below the bass staff.

Fourth system of piano accompaniment with red labels g above the treble staff and e' and f below the bass staff.

Fifth system of piano accompaniment with red labels g' above the treble staff and f' below the bass staff. The system concludes with a red fermata and the text - so.] and - so. at the end of the staves.

BEATUS SERVUS SAPIENS

Conductus (J48/46)

F, f. 365r (7,123)

I	Beatus servus sapiens, custodiens vigilias. Sic sapias et vigiles, ut fertiles fructus referas. Ne differas, sed fiat protinus, ut dominus, adveniens, inveniens te vigilem et stabilem, remuneret et prosperet iter tuum continuum ad gaudia celestia. Tibi spem meriti dominus splendide, coronam capiti de lapide pretioso.		Blessed and wise is the servant keeping the nightly vigils. You should be observant in 5 the same way, and keep watch so that you may yield fertile fruit. Do not delay, but let this be done forthwith, 10 so that the Lord, arriving and finding you wakeful and steadfast, 15 may reward and make prosperous your unbroken journey towards heavenly 20 joys. May the Lord splendidly bestow on you the hope of worthiness: a crown of 25 precious stones for your head.
---	---	--	---

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 123, f. 365r: a2; Strophe I, complete, with no provisions for additional text; a unique source for both text and music.

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Versification: Unlike a number of other conductus with irregular rhythmical verse structures, this poem does not provide any obvious evidence of a quantitative metrical scheme. Likewise, this text also challenges attempts to impose further regularity by combining various verses into larger units with internal rhyme. Attempting to use the phrase structure of the music is also not very helpful in determining a poetic scheme, due to the extended, breathless phrase that occupies lines 9-16. As a result I have divided this text into its smallest recurring rhyming components, differing in a few ways from Anderson's edition. I have separated Anderson's line 22 into lines 22 and 23 here, because 23 corresponds with the earlier "-inus" rhymes of lines 9-10; and I have kept the MS reading of "splendide" for line 23 ("splendido" appears in Anderson,

NDRC, 5:xlii), since it makes sense as is and rhymes with “lapide” two lines later. The most frequent component of the verses throughout is the 4pp line, typically disposed into couplets; but the opening is an indivisible 8pp verse, while 5pp and 6pp units then interrupt as the poem progresses, prior to the close that adds 3pp lines to the mix and finishes with an unrhymed unit of 4p (the accentuation of which may also apply to line 17 [“iter tuum”], unless the latter was read irregularly to conform to the surrounding 4pp verses). In this regard the text is somewhat like that of Parit preter morem (E12/261) or Frater iam prospicias (I31/132) in its almost playful concatenation of short, jangling lines. The result is also comparable to much motet poetry, or to Philip the Chancellor’s organum or conductus prosulas, although I would not press for his authorship of this poem. Beatus servus sapiens even has the feature of an “orphaned,” unrhymed line at its end, akin to the close of a motet that might quote its tenor text outside of the rest of the rhyme scheme of the poem (a feature that is also noticeable, for example in the conductus prosula Minor natu filius [K82/208] – see my Motets and Prosulas, 50).¹ Biblical content: Anderson’s fruitful combing of this poem (NDRC, 5:xlii, much of which is incorporated below) reveals that its brief lines are packed with biblical references, perhaps not a surprising occurrence for a text that is concerned with remaining vigilant to the coming of the Lord’s judgement. The result is analogous to the bevy of scriptural recollections seen in Philip’s motet In omni fratre tuo (vdW 197/M13 – in Motets and Prosulas, 66-67). In addition to the specific biblical echoes presented below, Jesus’s two parables of the faithful servant (Matthew, 24:42-51; Mark, 13:34-37; and Luke, 12:35-48) and the wise and foolish handmaidens (Matthew 25:1-13, following directly upon the former) are relevant throughout to this poem, since they both focus on the need to keep watch for the unexpected coming of the Lord. Textual notes: 1: see Matthew, 24:46: “Beatus ille servus quem cum venerit dominus eius invenerit sic facientem” (“Blessed is that servant whose master finds him doing so [i.e., his duties] when he returns”), and the similar language in Luke, 12:37 and 12:43. Also see Luke, 12:38: “Et si venerit in secunda vigilia et si in tertia vigilia venerit et ita invenerit, beati sunt servi illi” (“And if he should come in the second watch, or come in the third watch, and find them so, blessed are those servants”); and Revelation, 16:15: “Ecce, venio sicut fur. Beatus qui vigilat et custodit vestimenta sua ne nudus ambulet et videant turpitudinem eius” (“Look, I come like a thief. Blessed is the one who stays awake and guards his clothes, so as not to walk about naked, and people see his shame.”), along with some similar language in 2 Peter, 3:10. 2-3: the same expression is in Luke, 2:8: “Et pastores erant in regione eadem vigilantes et custodientes vigilias noctis supra gregem suum” (“And there were shepherds in the same region, keeping watch over their flocks at night.”). 4: see Romans, 14:6: “Qui sapit diem domino sapit” (“He who observes the day observes it for the Lord.”). 6-7: see Matthew, 7:17: “Sic omnis arbor bona fructus bonos facit mala autem arbor fructus malos facit” (“Thus every good tree brings forth good fruit, and an evil tree brings forth evil fruit”); and cf. Luke, 8:14: “Quod autem in spinis cecidit hii sunt qui ... non referunt fructum” (“And that which fell among thorns are the ones who ... yield no fruit.”). 10-11: see the remarks for line 1. 13: cf. Mark 13:33: “Videte, vigilate, et orate; nescitis enim quando tempus sit” (“Take heed, watch, and pray; for you know not when the time may be.”). 14: cf. 1 Corinthians, 15:58: “Itaque, fratres mei dilecti, stabiles estote et immobiles” (“Therefore, my beloved brethren, be steadfast and unmoveable”); plus the similar expression in Colossians, 1:23. 15: cf. Hebrews 11:6: “... credere enim oportet accedentem ad Deum quia est et inquiringibus se remunerator fit” (“... for it is necessary that one who comes to God believe that he exists and is a rewarder to those seeking him.”). 17: see Deuteronomy, 2:7: “Dominus Deus tuus ... novit iter tuum ...” (“The Lord your God ... has known your journey ...”); the term is also in Nehemiah, 2:6. 21-23: see Ecclesiasticus [Sirach], 16:15: “Omnis misericordia faciet locum unicuique secundum meritum operum suorum, et secundum intellectum peregrinationis ipsius” (“All mercy shall make a place for every man according to the worthiness of his works, and according to the knowledge of his journeying.”). 22: in the translation at this point, I have assumed that the verb of line 15 (“remuneret”) is meant to apply here as well. 24-26: Psalm 20:4: “Quoniam praevenisti eum in benedictionibus dulcedinis; posuisti in capite eius coronam de lapide pretioso” (“For you [the Lord] have come before him with blessings of sweetness; you have placed on his head a crown of precious stones.”).

¹Thomas B. Payne, ed., Philip the Chancellor: Motets and Prosulas, Recent Researches in the Music of the Middle Ages and Early Renaissance, no. 41 (Middleton, Wisconsin: A-R Editions, 2011).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. MUSIC: Opening cauda (over line 1,1): although possible, the use of mode 2 for the latter portion of this melisma (beginning after the breath marks in the transcription) is unlikely, given the lack of a concluding 3li for this section. Such a ligation would be expected in an mode-2 setting, and its absence gives considerably more weight to the “upbeat” mode-1 reading employed here. As a result, all of the caudae in this piece are interpreted as conforming to the first mode (see also the remarks on the closing cauda of the work). Closing cauda (over line 26):, given the emphasis solely on the use of mode 1 earlier in this piece (see the remarks on the opening cauda), this striking closing melisma in mode 6 presents the final notes in each of its phrases and their subsequent rests according to the paradigm of mode 1 (i.e., each phrase closes with an L followed by a B rest). Although Anderson (NDRC, 5:123) allows for an alternative reading of this cauda in an iambic mode 3 (and, given the rhythmical evidence of the rest of the melismas in this piece, trochaic mode 3 would be an additional – if not more likely – alternative for performance), the consistent use by the scribe of 4li figures at the opening of each phrase – whenever such ligation is possible – suggests that the mode-6 reading is what is most clearly represented and called for in this piece. The melisma itself holds a special attraction in that the T (and in one case the D) often presents closely related pairs of phrases or phrase groups where the second member fills in holes left by rests or longer notes in the first statement, while the D accompanies with gestures that frequently emphasize melodic sequence. Similarities among the longer phrases are marked above the staves in the score.

AVE TUOS BENEDIC – F and Owe versions
Conductus (J49,O22/124)

F, f. 366r (7,124)

1. I

[A-
A-

[A] - ve tu - os be - ne - dic
[A] - ve tu - os be - ne - dic

vir - go sin - gu - la - ris ma - ter in de - li - ci - is sal - ve stel - la ma - ris.
vir - go sin - gu - la - ris ma - ter in de - li - ci - is sal - ve stel - la ma - ris.

pul -

si si pul - pul -

[pul] - cri - or quam ra - di - us lu - ne vel so - la - ris.
[pul] - cri - or quam ra - di - us lu - ne vel so - la - ris.

The image displays a musical score for a vocal piece with piano accompaniment. The score is written in F major and consists of seven systems of two staves each. The vocal line is on the upper staff, and the piano accompaniment is on the lower staff. The lyrics are: "i - ram na - ti mi - ti - ga ma - ter sa - lu - ta -" and "- ris.]. - ris." The score includes various musical notations such as notes, rests, and phrasing slurs. There are blue annotations: brackets under the lyrics, a dashed blue line above the vocal line in the first system, and a red dot on the piano staff in the seventh system. The piece concludes with a double bar line.

GB-Owc MS 213* f. 1v (no. 2)

Musical score for three parts: Tr (Tenor), 2. I D (Second Voice), and T (Tenor). The score includes various musical notations such as notes, rests, and dynamic markings like 'V' and '[A-]'.

Musical score with lyrics: [A] - ve tu - os, si, si. The score includes various musical notations such as notes, rests, and dynamic markings like 'V' and '[A-]'.

Musical score with lyrics: be - nedic vir - go sin - gu - la - ris ma - ter in de - li - ci - is sal - ve stel - la ma - ris. The score includes various musical notations such as notes, rests, and dynamic markings like 'V' and '[A-]'.

Musical score for three parts. The score includes various musical notations such as notes, rests, and dynamic markings like 'V' and '[A-]'.

The first system of the musical score consists of three staves. The top staff is in treble clef, the middle in alto clef, and the bottom in bass clef. The music is written in a common time signature. The notation includes various rhythmic values such as eighth and sixteenth notes, often beamed together. Blue annotations, including brackets and dashed lines, are placed above the notes to indicate phrasing or articulation. There are also some red annotations, including a red bracket and a red dash, above the top staff.

The second system of the musical score features three staves with Latin lyrics. The lyrics are: "pul - cri - or quam ra - di - us". The lyrics are written in blue text below the notes. The musical notation continues with similar rhythmic patterns and blue annotations as seen in the first system.

The third system of the musical score features three staves with Latin lyrics. The lyrics are: "lu - ne vel so - la - ris. i - ram na - ti mi - ti - ga ma - ter sa - lu - ta -". The lyrics are written in blue text below the notes. The musical notation continues with similar rhythmic patterns and blue annotations.

The fourth system of the musical score consists of three staves, continuing the musical notation from the previous systems. It features the same three-staff layout (treble, alto, and bass clefs) and includes various rhythmic values and blue annotations for phrasing.

System 1 of the musical score, consisting of three staves. The top staff features a melodic line with eighth and sixteenth notes, including a dotted quarter note. The middle and bottom staves provide harmonic accompaniment with similar rhythmic patterns. Blue brackets are placed above the notes in all three staves to indicate phrasing. A blue dashed slur is present above the first few notes of the middle staff.

System 2 of the musical score, consisting of three staves. The notation continues with similar rhythmic and melodic patterns. Blue brackets and a blue dashed slur are used for phrasing throughout the system.

System 3 of the musical score, consisting of three staves. The notation continues with similar rhythmic and melodic patterns. Blue brackets and a blue dashed slur are used for phrasing throughout the system.

System 4 of the musical score, consisting of three staves. This system includes vocal lyrics. The middle staff has the lyrics "si si" in red. The top staff has a red melodic line with a blue dashed slur. The bottom staff has a red melodic line with a blue dashed slur. Blue brackets are used for phrasing. The system concludes with the text "- ris.]" on the middle staff and "- ris." on the bottom staff.

AVE TUOS BENEDIC – F and Owc versions
Conductus (J49,O22/124)

F, f. 366r (7,124)

I Ave! Tuos benedic, virgo, singularis mater in deliciis. Salve, stella maris, pulcrrior quam radius lune vel solaris. Iram nati mitiga. mater salutaris.	Hail! Bless your very own, O virgin, mother matchless in delights. Greetings, star of the sea, 5 more lovely than beam of moon or sun. Appease the wrath of your son, mother of salvation.
--	---

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 124, f. 366r: a2, Strophe I, complete. The piece ends in the middle of the third system of f. 366v, with nothing more entered on the leaf outside of the remaining empty staves. A gap of four empty folios (367-370), also ruled with empty staves, follows this item before the next piece, Floret ortus virginalis (J50/126), begins on the second system of f. 371r, with the first system on the page displaying empty staves.

Owc (Oxford, Worcester College, MS 213*; GB-Owc MS 213*), no. 2, f. 1v: a3, Strophe I, complete, with cum littera portions written in English mensural notation. The entire piece is essentially preserved, despite the two leaves of this MS having once served as flyleaves (now removed) in the host volume, MS 3.16 (A)*.¹ Ave tuos benedic is the second of the four extant conductus that appear in this source, all of which begin with the word “Ave.”

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: Content: The poem is a rather routine Marian work, opening with acclamations of praise and closing with a request for the Virgin’s merciful intervention between the speaker and Jesus. In addition to the commonplace attribute stella maris in line 4, the comparative images in line 5 of the rays of the moon and the sun are noteworthy, because these symbols are usually applied to the Virgin and Christ, respectively. Issues with Anderson’s catalog: In Anderson’s published catalog,² the “J-series” reference number for this piece (J49) indicates that it was preserved as a two-voice work unique to a central source, in this case F. As such it was published in vol. 5 of his edition (NDRC, 5: 2pt Conductus, Unica in the Central Sources, 88-90). Since that time, the Oxford, Worcester College source became available, which is in three parts. This discrepancy necessitated an additional catalog entry for the work, now located within Anderson’s “O series” and with both versions edited in vol. 9 of NDRC (3pt Conductus in Related Sources, pp. 52-55 [Owc] and pp. 56-58 [F]). As a result, both Anderson’s reference numbers J49 and O22 may be considered valid for this verbal text, and each applies as appropriate to the two closely related musical settings of this poem in Anderson’s unpublished ¹It still appears under this siglum on the CPI website. Images of this source are available on DIAMM and may be viewed via this link: <https://www.diamm.ac.uk/sources/580/#/>.

²Gordon A. Anderson, “Notre Dame and Related Conductus: A Catalogue Raisonné,” Miscellanea musicologica: Adelaide Studies in Musicology, 6 (1972): 152-229; 7 (1973): 1-81.

annotated personal copy of his catalog. Due to the revision in numbering undertaken by Anderson within his annotated catalog, the reference numbers of pieces in his edition sometimes diverge from those in the catalog's original published version.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: There are no variants between the transmissions of the poem in F and Owc, except for the likelihood of the alternative spelling “delitiis” for line 3,3 in the latter MS. Even the punctuation is identical, except that the period after line 6,3 in F cannot be verified absolutely for Owc, due to the encroachment at this point of what looks like an adhesive bordering strip that has been attached to the binding edge of the leaf. 7,2: Owc: middle two letters of “nati” illegible due to wear. MUSIC: General remarks: Ave tuos benedic is one of only nine conductus among the four main Parisian sources (F, W1, W2, Ma) that has a final on f;³ all but three of these, moreover, are Marian, and several of them have features and circumstances that suggest an Insular original may be appropriate. Both of these attributes apply to Ave tuos benedic. Disregarding the additional Tr voice, the version of the conductus in Owc is quite readily comparable to the F redaction. The occasional differences include the extension of the closing punctus organi (see below) in F, the opening with an organum-like principium ante principium in the D of Owc, and its occasional re-ligation of a few phrases, usually without causing major changes, in comparison to F. The notation of Owc: In addition to its specification of mode-1 rhythms (with frequent TL extensions) for the cum littera sections of this piece, achieved by alternating longs and English (rhomboid-shaped) breves, independent groups of conjuncturae (those not connected to a previous square-note ligature) are generally written in a form common to Insular sources; this consists wholly of rhomboid shapes, with a short diagonal stroke descending from the left of the first element of the C group. Also, although the caudae are generally written with modal, as opposed to mensural ligatures, a number of descending 2li figures are written sine proprietate. Typically this occurs on the first element of a 2li when it precedes a major cadence and is sometimes combined with a written elongation of this initial note (as in the T of the second phrase of the opening cauda of the piece, at L7-L8. Otherwise, the sp 2li ligature may appear when it repeats the same note that immediately precedes it. Such a figure is used, for example, in all parts simultaneously in the cadence over line 4,3 (“maris”), and non-synchronously in all three parts in the approach to the cadence at the end of the cauda on line 5,1 (“pulcrrior”). Opening cauda (over line 1,1 – “Ave”): T: Owc: the stroke before the fourth T phrase after the initial intonation (at L8,2) is nearly obscured by the following 3li=bag; its presence is confirmed by F. Line 1,3: Tr: Owc: the g over the second syllable of “benedic” is obscured by wear, but visible. Cauda over line 4,3 (“maris”): D: F: the rhythmic reading of the penultimate ligature (3li=agf) before the punctus organi is based on comparison with Owc. Cauda over line 5,1 (“pulcrrior”): D: F: the penultimate note of the cauda, a si=f, is om; it has been supplied from comparison to Owc. The erasure of a g at this point in F suggests that originally a 2li=fg was entered, similar to what occurs at this point in Owc. However, slight differences in the T (apparent by comparing the two versions) necessitated changing the D in F to conform. Also the existing antepenultimate note in F (si=f, the one before the omitted f) has a possible plica stroke, similar to what is seen in the varying reading of Owc here as well; alternatively, this could be an indication by the scribe that the note is to be performed as an L. Line 7,2 (“nati”): TD: Owc: pitches missing due to wear, supplied from F. Final cauda (over line 8,2 – “salutaris”): Tr: Owc: in the middle of the fifth Tr phrase of the final cauda (at L37-L39. where the phrase overlap starts), the first of the 2*si=ff* is worn, but still slightly visible. D: F: the c in the middle of the second D phrase, 15L prior to the punctus organi, has been erased and is restored from the evidence of Owc; it is preceded by a si=b in F, instead of the expected 2li=bc as in Owc. T: F: an expected rest stroke before the punctus organi is om, supplied from Owc. Closing punctus organi: D; F: unlike the previous organal flourish over line 5,1 (“pulcrrior”), the final close in F is significantly expanded in comparison to Owc.

³These nine conductus are: Ave tuos benedic (J49,O22/38), Philip the Chancellor's Ave virgo virginum verbi (F16, P46/39), Celorum porta (J19/55), O Maria stella maris lux (K71/238), Pia mater gratie (J18/268), Porta salutis ave (I2/269), Adiuvā nos deus (J4/9), Fons (or Flos) preclusus (K72/129, perhaps by Peter of Blois), and Philip's Si vis vera frui luce (K40/329). The final three pieces in this list are the non-Marian ones.

FLORET ORTUS VIRGINALIS
Conductus (J50/126)

F, f. 371r (7,125)

I

D
T Flo -
Flo -

[Flo] - ret or - tus vir - gi - na - lis.
[Flo] - ret or - tus vir - gi - na - lis.

pro - dit
pro - dit

fru - ctus e - ter - na - lis.
fru - ctus e - ter - na - lis.

man -

man -

- na plu - it gra - ti -

- na plu - it gra - ti -

a b c

a

a b

- e.]

- e.

FLORET ORTUS VIRGINALIS

Conductus (J50/126)

F, f. 371r (7,125)

I	Floret ortus virginalis. prodit fructus eternalis. manna pluit gratie.		The virginal garden blooms. 2 Eternal fruit comes forth. The manna of grace rains down.
---	--	--	---

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 125, f. 371r: a2; Strophe I, complete, with some empty space occupied by staff lines at the end of the last system of the piece, but no evidence of intent to include additional stanzas. A unique transmission of both text and music, the piece begins on the second of the six two-staff systems on this page; the preceding four folios, 367 to 370, present blank staves, as does the first system of f. 371r.

Text only: none.Music only: none.Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: each of the three lines in this short poem is given over to a symbol of the Virgin, Christ, and the incarnation, respectively. 3,1: on manna as a figure for Christ or his body (and thus evoking the Eucharist), see the Distinctiones of Alain de Lille (in PL, 210, col. 849D, bottom), s.v. “manna”: “Manna ... Dicitur corpus Christi” (“Manna ... is said to be the body of Christ.”). Hence, manna raining down from heaven suggests God’s gift of grace through Christ’s incarnation. References to manna in the Bible include: Exodus, 16:1-36; Numbers, 11:4-9; Joshuah, 5:11-12; Psalms, 77: 23-25.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 1,2: alternative spelling of “hortus.” MUSIC: opening cauda: D: F: the first c of the opening phrase at L2 appears to be written as d, due to lack of space. Line 3,2-3: T: F: music for the first four syllables not entered, editorial completion.

LIBRUM CLAUSUM ET SIGNATUM
Conductus (J51/198)

F, f. 371v (7,126)

I T [Li-]
S [Li-]

a a'

[Li] - brum cla[u] - sum et si - gna-tum bre-ve ver - bum ex - pla - na -
[Li] - brum cla[u] - sum et si - gna-tum bre-ve ver - bum ex - pla - na -

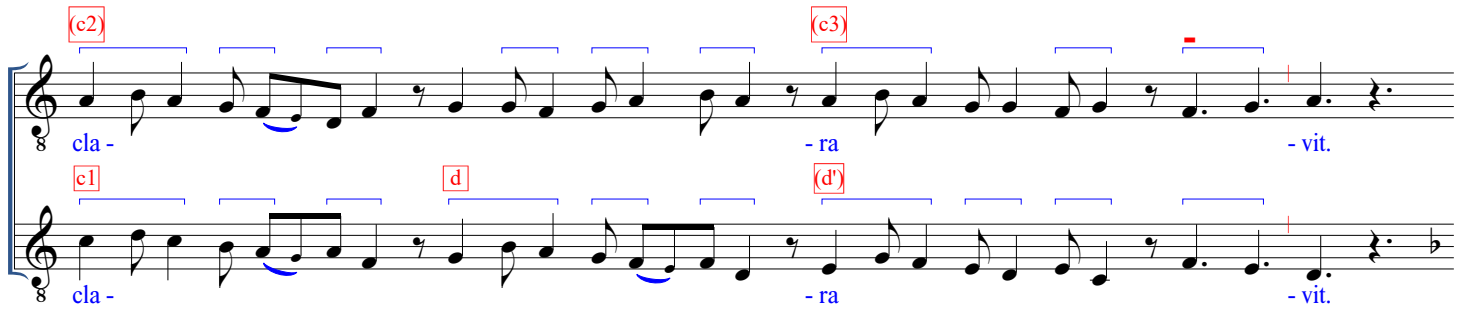

[A reading in mode 3 or 6 is also possible

b b'

- vit. tex-tum
- vit. tex-tum

c

ty - pis ob - um - bra - tum ver - bi glo - sa de - ty - pis ob - um - bra - tum ver - bi glo - sa de -

cla - ra - vit.
cla - ra - vit.

(c2) (c3) (c1) (d) (d')

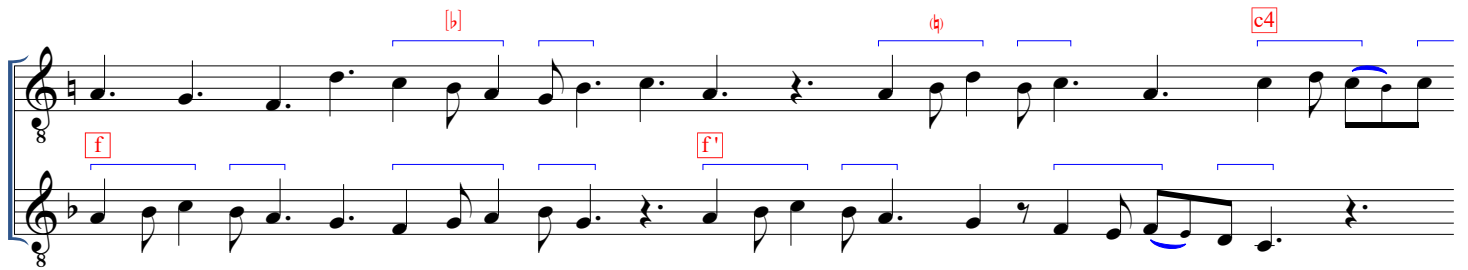

ut es - set ver - bi glo - su - la
ut es - set ver - bi glo - su - la or: (e') (e) (e'') in car - nis no - stre ce - du - la ver - bum pa - ter fi - gu - ra - in car - nis no - stre ce - du - la ver - bum pa - ter fi - gu - ra -

(b) (b) (c4) (f) (f')

(f'')

(f'')

First system of musical notation, featuring a soprano and alto part. The soprano part begins with a red box containing the letter 'c4'. Both parts end with the lyrics "- vit." in blue.

Second system of musical notation, featuring a tenor (T) and bass (B) part. Both parts begin with the lyrics "Ru -" in blue.

Third system of musical notation, featuring a soprano and alto part.

Fourth system of musical notation, featuring a soprano and alto part. The lyrics are "[Ru] - dis qui vult e - ru - di -" in blue.

Fifth system of musical notation, featuring a soprano and alto part. The lyrics are "- re. tan -" in blue. A note reading instruction above the soprano part reads "| reading in mode 3 or 6 also possible".

Sixth system of musical notation, featuring a soprano and alto part. The lyrics are "[tan]-quam ia - ctis fun-da-men - tis vi -" in blue. Red boxes containing the letters 'g' and 'h' are placed above the soprano part.

Two staves of musical notation in a common time signature. The top staff has a treble clef and the bottom staff has a bass clef. Both staves contain a vocal line with various note values and rests. Red boxes containing phonetic labels are placed above specific notes: 'i' above the first note, 'h'' above the second note, and 'g'' above the eighth note. Blue brackets are drawn under the notes. The text '- am' appears at the end of both staves.

Two staves of musical notation with Latin lyrics. The top staff has a treble clef and the bottom staff has a bass clef. The lyrics are: so-let a-pe-ri-re al-pha-be-ti ru-di-men-. Red boxes containing phonetic labels 'h' and 'k' are placed above notes. Blue brackets are drawn under the notes. The text '- am' is present at the end of the bottom staff.

Two staves of musical notation with Latin lyrics. The top staff has a treble clef and the bottom staff has a bass clef. The lyrics are: -tis. ut sit le-gen-di for-mu-la. Red boxes containing phonetic labels 'k' and 'j' are placed above notes. Blue brackets are drawn under the notes.

Two staves of musical notation with Latin lyrics. The top staff has a treble clef and the bottom staff has a bass clef. The lyrics are: car-tam af-fi[n]-git ta-bu-la fi-gu-ra-tam e-le-men-. Red boxes containing phonetic labels 'k'' and 'j'' are placed above notes. Blue brackets are drawn under the notes.

Two staves of musical notation with Latin lyrics. The top staff has a treble clef and the bottom staff has a bass clef. The lyrics are: car-tam af-fi[n]-git ta-bu-la fi-gu-ra-tam e-le-men-. Red boxes containing phonetic labels 'm', 'b', 'l', and 'l'' are placed above notes. Blue brackets are drawn under the notes.

Two staves of musical notation with Latin lyrics. The top staff has a treble clef and the bottom staff has a bass clef. The lyrics are: car-tam af-fi[n]-git ta-bu-la fi-gu-ra-tam e-le-men-. Red boxes containing phonetic labels 'o' and 'n' are placed above notes. Blue brackets are drawn under the notes.

The image shows a musical score for two staves. The top staff is in treble clef and the bottom staff is in bass clef. Both staves have a key signature of one flat (F major/D minor). The music consists of eighth and sixteenth notes with various phrasing marks. The top staff ends with a blue bracketed phrase "- tis.]" and the bottom staff ends with "- tis.".

LIBRUM CLAUSUM ET SIGNATUM

Conductus (J51/198)

F, f. 371v (7,126)

- | | |
|--|--|
| I Librum cla[u]sum et signatum
breve verbum explanavit.
Textum, typis obumbratum, verbi glosa declaravit.
Ut esset verbi glosula,
in carnis nostre cedula
verbum pater figuravit. | A brief word has made plain a book closed and sealed.
A gloss of a word has clarified
a text obscured by figures.
5 The Father imprinted the word upon the page of our flesh for it to be a little gloss of the word. |
| II Rudis qui vult erudire tanquam iactis fundamentis viam solet aperire alphabeti rudimentis, ut sit legendi formula, cartam affi[n]git tabula figuratam elementis. | Just as an uneducated person who wants to learn is accustomed to open a path 10 with established foundations through the rudiments of the alphabet, in order that there be a basis for reading, so does the table [of the law] fashion a map inscribed with the first principles. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 126, f. 371v: a2, Strophes I-II complete, with no provision for further stanzas and with II indicated by the usual capital; a unique instance of both text and music.

Text only: none, but see the observations and variants for the text of lines 4,3 and 8,4 below.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: For a study of this work, and in particular an investigation as to how the implementation of its caudae may act as figurative “glosses” that can convey textual symbolism and contribute to the apprehension of the poem’s and the composition’s structure, see Gregorio Bevilacqua, “Making Sense of Medieval Latin Song: Conductus cum caudis and Biblical Exegesis,” paper presented at a musicology colloquium at the University of Florida, Gainesville, 31 March 2017. I am grateful to Dr. Bevilacqua for making his work available to me prior to publication. Textual notes: 1-4: in the manner of an exegetical gloss, the single short word “ave” – Gabriel’s greeting to Mary at the Annunciation (Luke, 1:28) – explains the meaning behind the writings of the Old Testament as a prefiguration of the birth of Christ. 1: for the image elsewhere in the conductus repertory of the sealed book as a figure of the Old Law unlocked by a word, see the conductus Magnificat ... qui iudicat (H10/203), lines 41- 45. 4-7: in the poem the word “verbum” suggests various, simultaneous connotations: as the “Ave” of Gabriel (as above, lines 1-4); as the “Word” that is God himself (John, 1:1),¹ impressed in human form as Christ through the miracle of the incarnation; and (as also above) the writings of the Old Testament that are now explained and revealed with the action of Gabriel’s salutation. Hence, with the incarnation of Christ through the word “ave,” God imprinted the Word on human flesh, with the result that the secrets hidden in the words of the Old Law are revealed. 6: cf. 2 Corinthians, 3:2-3;² and the analogous expressions in Proverbs, 3:3; Proverbs, 7:3; and Jeremiah, 17:1. 8-14 (Strophe II): the Old Testament contains prefigurations of the covenant revealed in the New Testament and serves as a precursor to it, as in the remarks for lines 1-4, above.

¹John, 1:1: “In principio erat Verbum, et Verbum erat apud Deum, et Deus erat Verbum” (“In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.”).

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 1,2: F: clausum; editorial emendation. 4,3: F: sevit, thus apparently wanting two syllables. The emended reading adopted here (“declaravit”), likely stemming from a now-lost medieval source, comes from the version of Librum clausum published in the Pia quaedam vetustissima Poemata of Matthias Flacius Illyricus of 1552.³ It is deemed preferable because it is essentially synonymous with meaning of the word in F, and its implementation unifies the syllable count, rhyme, and accentual patterns of lines 2,4, and 7 – results that suggest the word in F is erroneous. Significantly, with this change and the ones proposed for line 8, both stanzas are now uniform in poetic structure and rhyme scheme, making this a through-composed setting of a strophically formulated text. Fortunately, there is room in the cauda to contain the additional syllables. For a similar situation, see below, for line 8. 6,4: F: alternative form of “schedula” (“page”). 7,3-8,1: F: the final syllable of Strophe I and the opening syllable of II are rather wildly misaligned with the music. They sit together below an otherwise empty portion of the staff, situated between the second and third musical figures of the T of Strophe II, thus placed much later than needed. Furthermore, the left arm of the capital letter “V” that begins Strophe II extends into the T staff at a point where 6-7 Longs worth of material is missing in the T (see below in the remarks on the music of the cauda opening line 8,1). 8: F: Vides qui vult credere (“You see he who wants to believe ...”), which does not appear to make much sense. As with line 4,3, the adopted reading comes from the redaction in Flacius’s Pia quaedam vetustissima Poemata (although Flacius curiously gives the plural “rudes” for the singular “rudis” that appears in this edition). This reading makes much better sense in the context of the strophe and – like line 4,3 – equalizes the syllable count and accentual qualities of lines 8 and 10, which suggest F may be corrupt. As a result, with both emendations the two stanzas are now formally identical. And as with line 4 the additional syllable in line 8 from the Flacius reading can be accommodated to the musical setting without interference. 9,2: F: apparently “lactis”; the top of the first letter, though, has a slight flourish that differs somewhat from the typical lower-case form of the letter “L,” but this may be just a slight slip of the pen. 13,2: F: affigit; the adopted change is an editorial emendation that seems to make a bit more sense in the context of the poem than the MS reading (“affixes” in English). MUSIC: Several caudae can be performed either in mode 3 or 6; some caudae allow various interpretations of non-coincident rests as short or long with equally acceptable results; alternatives are signaled above the staves. The piece is also tightly constructed with repetition and recollection of a good number of motives, some clearly interrelated. Many such relationships are signaled above the staff with boxed letters, and certainly many more could be posited. Opening cauda: T:F: the stroke preceding the 2li=ef at L24,2-L25,1 is partly obscured by the notational figure, suggesting it is unwanted; om from the transcription. T: F: the second phrase from the end, at L37-L44, is written 3 lower. Cauda, line 5,1: D: F: following L6, an erased b-flat sig. Line 1,2: T: F: letter “-u-” om, supplied editorially. Cauda closing line 7 (Strophe I): D: F: the first 3si of the melisma are written 3 higher (as c, b, a) and are preceded with a curious sig quad on d (placed on the staff for b in the transcription), thanks to a c3cl just before it. Due to the prevailing b-flat sig in the T, which continues into the subsequent system, along with the dissonance and cross relations that result if these three D notes and the b pitches in both voices are read as indicated, I have emended these opening notes, moving them 3 lower (as a,g,f), justifying it by supposing the clef is a later addition and misplaced (possibly originally intended to follow the three-note group, but could not due to space), and the sig quad was intended to show that the following note, though apparently c, was supposed to be a. Even so, this logic is a bit strained; it does not fully account for the sig quad situation, and it also results in a rather uncharacteristic leap of a sixth to the fourth figure of the phrase; alternatives could be preferable, including favoring b-naturals over b-flats for this passage. T: F: 4L into the penultimate T phrase of the cauda, at L49, there is a faint but visible stroke arising from the first element of the 3li=gac at this point, making the figure look as though it is cum opposita proprietate. This appears to be another instance of trying to obscure an erroneous stroke by trying to hide it with the following figure, so the mark is not considered in the transcription. D: F: 6L-7L before the cauda's conclusion, the D suggests some material is missing or corrupt: after the 2li+3C=ac+bag group, an erased si=a is still visible with what looks like a fairly long tail, followed by a stroke that also appears partially effaced. The next phrase opens with a 2li=gf, and coordinating this gesture with the T along with omitting the erased material not only indicates that something is missing, but introduces a dissonance that is uncharacteristic of this piece as a whole. The reading here has thus been emended, using the extant figures as much as possible, but avoiding the dissonance. Note that there are discrepancies here also in the verbal text at lines 7,3-8,1. Cauda opening line 8,1 (Strophe II): T: F: missing material from L3,2-L9, supplied editorially. This is also the place where there are discrepancies in the underlay of the verbal text with the music, see the discussion of this above in the observations on the text, lines 7,3-8,1. Line 11,2: T: F: just before the penultimate syllable of “rudimentis,” there is a page turn with neither an expected, necessary c4cl and b-flat sig to begin the first T staff on f. 372v. Line 12,1: T: F: the opening note of this phrase is omitted; supplied editorially.

² 2 Corinthians, 3:2-3: “Epistula nostra vos estis, scripta in cordibus nostris, quae scitur et legitur ab omnibus hominibus: manifestati, quoniam epistula estis Christi ministrata a nobis et scripta non atramento sed spiritu dei vivi; non in tabulis lapideis sed in tabulis cordis carnalibus (“You [readers] are our epistle, written in our hearts, which is known and read by all men: being manifested, that you are the epistle of Christ, ministered by us, and written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God; not in tables of stone, but in the fleshly tables of the heart”).

³ Pia quaedam vetustissima Poemata, partim Anti-Christum, ejusque spirituales Filiolos insectantia, partim etiam Christum, ejusque beneficium mira spiritus alacritate celebrantia. Cum praefatione Matthiae Flacii Illyrici. (Magdeburg: Michael Lotter, 1552): nos. xci-xcii. The book is available online here.

BACULI SOLLEMPNIA

Conductus (J52/20)

F, f. 372v (7,127)

I

I f f

[Ba - cu - li sol - lem - pni - a, pa - tri na - to glo - ri - a, Ba - cu - li sol - lem - pni - a, pa - tri na - to glo - ri - a,

a A

g h

in - ci - tant ad gau - di - a nos in cri - sti no - mi - ne. in - ci - tant ad gau - di - a nos in cri - sti no - mi - ne.

a b

g h

pa - tri, na - to glo - ri - a sit cum san - cto fla - mi - ne. pa - tri, na - to glo - ri - a sit cum san - cto fla - mi - ne.

A b

[Refrain?]

[Refr.?] c d

Gau - di - o ni - mi - o re - so - net hec con - ti - o, Gau - di - o ni - mi - o re - so - net hec con - ti - o,

c d

c' e

gau - di - a tri - pu - di - a de - cent hec sol - lem - pni - a.] gau - di - a tri - pu - di - a de - cent hec sol - lem - pni - a.]

c' e

BACULI SOLLEMPNIA

Conductus (J52/20)

F, f. 372v (7,127)

I Baculi sollempnia – Patri, nato gloria! – incitant ad gaudia nos in Christi nomine. Patri, nato gloria sit cum sancto flamine.	The solemn feasts of the staff – Glory to the father and son! – arouse us to delights in the name of Christ. 5 Glory be to the father and son along with the Holy Spirit.
---	--

Refr.? Gaudio nimio resonet hec contio; gaudia, tripudia, decent hec sollempnia.	Let this company resound with exceeding joy; delights, celebrations, 10 are apt for these solemnities.
--	---

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 127, f. 372v: a2; Strophe I and likely refrain, complete, with no provisions for additional text and with supposed refrain beginning with a capital. This piece initiates a series of three more modest works, F-7,127-129, with less extensive or – as in this case – no caudae; this series is then followed by the more ornate Christi miles (J55/58), to close the fascicle. This is a unique transmission of both music and text.

Text only: none.Music only: none.Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: The apparent refrain: The survival of this piece in a single source poses problems in assessing whether it actually does have a refrain and whether it may have possessed more strophes. There are five other conductus within the main Parisian sources with likely refrains that survive only as single stanzas, all but one of which are unique to F.¹ In Baculi sollempnia, the exhaustive musical repetition in the T that occurs within the six-line “stanzaic” portion of the piece (aAabAb) readily invokes features of many of the Latin rondelli preserved in the eleventh fascicle of F, which in itself suggests more strophes once were extant. As a result of the stanza’s melodic coherence, the change in both musical and textual design that follows in the concluding four lines (cdc’e) sets this portion of the poem in such relief that its consideration as anything other than a refrain seems misplaced, but a feature of this type is not normally associated with rondeau-like works such as the pieces in F-11.² Textual notes: 1: poetic references to the rod and staff in the context of a liturgical feast are frequently connected with the celebrations of the feast of the Circumcision on 1 January; see, for example, in addition to Baculi sollempnia, the conductus Gregis pastor Tityrus (L90/-), stanzas III and IV of Ysayas cecinit – (Titire tu patule) (C4/188), and Novus annus hodie (I) (F5/227), the latter of which is designated as “Conductus ad bacularium” in the Sens Circumcision office (F-SEm 46). On this day at Notre ¹These are Legis in volumine (F13/193), Hac in die salutari (J45/151), O Maria stella maris lux (K71/238), and Stella maris lux ignaris (K79/338). The fifth work, Non habes aditum (J29/221), occurs only once in the central complex of Notre Dame manuscripts (again in F), but survives additionally in a textual transmission in OxRawl.

²Further discussion of the special properties of Baculi sollempnia appears in Mary Channen Caldwell’s dissertation, “Singing, Dancing, and Rejoicing in the Round: Latin Sacred Songs with Refrains, circa 1000-1582” (Ph.D. dissertation, The University of Chicago, 2013), 670-674.

Dame of Paris, for example, the subdeacons temporarily assumed the offices and certain privileges and of the higher clergy for the celebration of the liturgy. Here the cantor's staff of authority was transferred to a new subdeacon (the "bacularius") for use at the festivities.³ 9,2: on the term tripudium (often rendered as "dance") and its various connotations, see Donna La Rue, "Tripudium," 25–29.⁴ In this case I have translated the term as "celebration" due to the lack of additional circumstances that might point more clearly to dance. For other conductus that may mention dancing, see, in addition to Baculi sollempnia, Nicholai presulis (F27/217), Trine vocis tripudio (E4/351), Hac in die salutari (J45/151), Genitus divinitus (I25/144); and notice also the troped organum Beatis nos adhibe / Benedicamus domino (A7/44 – vdW 761/BD VI), especially lines 15-17.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. MUSIC: no variants.

³For information on these practices, see Craig Wright, Music and Ceremony, 239-242, which offers a brief consideration of Baculi sollempnia on pp. 241-242 that notes its appropriateness for the Circumcision festivities; and Max Harris, "A Rough and Holy Liturgy: A Reassessment of the Feast of Fools," in Risus Sacer – Sacrum Risibile: Interaktionsfelder von Sakralität und Gelächter im kulturellen und historischen Wandel, ed. Katja Gvozdeva and Werner Röcke, 77-100 (Bern: Peter Lang, 2009), 80-84; and idem, Sacred Folly: A New History of the Feast of Fools (Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 2011), 99-106.

⁴Donna La Rue, "Tripudium: Its Use in Sources from 200 BCE to 1600 CE," ARTS (The Arts in Religious and Theological Studies), vol. 7, no. 3 – separately paginated – (1995): 25–29.

AVE MARIS STELLA AVE
Conductus (J53/33)

F, f. 373r (7,128): Strophe I; Vat602, f. 9v: Strophes II-VII

D

8

1. [A - ve ma - ris stel-la a - ve sin - gu - la - ris. ver - bi de - i cel - la.
2. [Su - mens il - lud a - ve quod ha - be - tur is - ti. mun - do tam su - a - ve.
3. [Sol - ve vin - cla re - is. et ab e - o pe - te. ve - ni - am pro e - is
4. [Mon - stra te sic es - se. ma - trem Vir - go pi - a. quod quan - do ne - ces - se.
5. [Vir - go sin - gu - la - ris. san - cta de - i pa - rens. ma - ter ex - pers ma - ris.
6. [Vi - tam pre - sta pu - ram. i - ter pa - ra tu - tum. ad vi - tam fu - tu - ram.
7. [Sit laus de - o pa - tri. qui fi - li - um mi - sit. qui ca - pti - vos a - tri.

T

8

1. A - ve ma - ris stel-la a - ve sin - gu - la - ris. ver - bi de - i cel - la.
2. [Su - mens il - lud a - ve quod ha - be - tur is - ti. mun - do tam su - a - ve.
3. [Sol - ve vin - cla re - is. et ab e - o pe - te. ve - ni - am pro e - is
4. [Mon - stra te sic es - se. ma - trem Vir - go pi - a. quod quan - do ne - ces - se.
5. [Vir - go sin - gu - la - ris. san - cta de - i pa - rens. ma - ter ex - pers ma - ris.
6. [Vi - tam pre - sta pu - ram. i - ter pa - ra tu - tum. ad vi - tam fu - tu - ram.
7. [Sit laus de - o pa - tri. qui fi - li - um mi - sit. qui ca - pti - vos a - tri.

8

1. pa - rens ex - pers ma - ris. in - te - gra pu - el - la. que non vi - o - la - ris.
2. de - um con - ce - pi - sti. si - ne vi - ri cla - ve. et cum pe - pe - ri - sti.
3. qui na - tus est de te. na - tus cum e - bre - is. per quem ve - nit le - te.
4. o dul - cis ma - ri - a. ve - ne - rit ex - pres - se. iu - di - ce mes - si - a.
5. et pec - ca - to ca - rens tu be - ne - di - ca - ris. in qua vir - tus cla - rens.
6. e - sto no - bis scu - tum. con - tra mor - tem du - ram. et in - fer - ni lu - ctum.
7. car - ce - ris e - mi - sit. quan - do de - o fra - tri. po - pu - lus ar - ri - sit

8

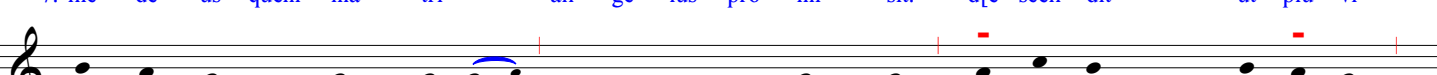

1. pa - rens ex - pers ma - ris. in - te - gra pu - el - la. que non vi - o - la - ris.
2. de - um con - ce - pi - sti. si - ne vi - ri cla - ve. et cum pe - pe - ri - sti.
3. qui na - tus est de te. na - tus cum e - bre - is. per quem ve - nit le - te.
4. o dul - cis ma - ri - a. ve - ne - rit ex - pres - se. iu - di - ce mes - si - a.
5. et pec - ca - to ca - rens tu be - ne - di - ca - ris. in qua vir - tus cla - rens.
6. e - sto no - bis scu - tum. con - tra mor - tem du - ram. et in - fer - ni lu - ctum.
7. car - ce - ris e - mi - sit. quan - do de - o fra - tri. po - pu - lus ar - ri - sit

[Refrain]

8

1. in qua lux no - vel - la ra - di - us so - la - ris de - scen - dit ut plu - vi -
2. non tu - li - sti gra - ve. vir - tus in te chri - sti. de - scen - dit [ut plu - vi -
3. sal - us ex iu - de - is. per il - lum pro - phe - te d[e - scen - dit ut plu - vi -
4. va - le - as pro - des - se. in qua vi - te vi - a. d[e - scen - dit ut plu - vi -
5. no - stri sa - lu - ta - ris ge - nti - bus ap - pa - rens. [de - scen - dit ut plu - vi -
6. ha - be no - stri cu - ram. in qua rex vir - tu - tum. [de - scen - dit ut plu - vi -
7. hic de - us quem ma - tri an - ge - lus pro - mi - sit. d[e - scen - dit ut plu - vi -

8

1. in qua lux no - vel - la ra - di - us so - la - ris de - scen - dit ut plu - vi -
2. non tu - li - sti gra - ve. vir - tus in te chri - sti. de - scen - dit [ut plu - vi -
3. sal - us ex iu - de - is. per il - lum pro - phe - te d[e - scen - dit ut plu - vi -
4. va - le - as pro - des - se. in qua vi - te vi - a. d[e - scen - dit ut plu - vi -
5. no - stri sa - lu - ta - ris ge - nti - bus ap - pa - rens. [de - scen - dit ut plu - vi -
6. ha - be no - stri cu - ram. in qua rex vir - tu - tum. [de - scen - dit ut plu - vi -
7. hic de - us quem ma - tri an - ge - lus pro - mi - sit. d[e - scen - dit ut plu - vi -

The image displays a musical score for the piece "Ave maris stella ave [J53/33] a2 (F)". The score is presented in two systems, each with a treble clef and a common time signature (C). The first system consists of two staves. The upper staff contains a melodic line with various note values, including quarter and eighth notes, and rests. A blue dashed slur is placed over a group of notes. The lower staff contains a bass line with similar note values and rests. Red boxes labeled 'a' and 'b' are placed above the lower staff. The second system also consists of two staves. The upper staff continues the melodic line, ending with a blue dashed slur and a red vertical line. The lower staff continues the bass line, ending with a red vertical line. Red boxes labeled 'c' and 'a' are placed above the lower staff. The score concludes with a double bar line and the text "- a." and "- a.]]" on the right side.

AVE MARIS STELLA AVE
Conductus (J53/33)

F, f. 373r (7,128): Strophe I; Vat602, f. 9v: Strophes II-VII

I Ave, maris stella. Ave, singularis verbi dei cella, parens expers maris, integra puella, que non violaris, in qua lux novella, radius solaris, Refr. descendit ut pluvia.	Hail, star of the sea. Hail, special chamber of God's word, mother uncorrupted, 5 intact maiden, you who are inviolate, upon whom a new light, a ray of the sun, fell like the rain.
II [Sumens illud ave quod habetur isti mundo tam suave, deum concepisti sine viri clave; et cum peperisti non tulisti grave. Virtus in te Christi. Refr. descendit [ut pluvia].	10 Taking on that "hail," which is considered so sweet to this world, you conceived God without a man's key; 15 and when you gave birth you did not bear it grievously. The strength of Christ fell upon you like the rain.
III Solve vincla reis et ab eo pete veniam pro eis qui natus est de te, natus cum Ebreis, per quem venit lete salus ex Iudeis. Per illum prophete Refr. d[escendit ut pluvia].	Cast the chains from off the guilty 20 and seek pardon for them from the one who was born to you and born among the Hebrews, the one through whom salvation 25 came joyfully from the Jews. Through that saying of the prophet, he fell like the rain.
IV Monstra te sic esse. matrem, Virgo pia, quod quando necesse, O dulcis Maria, venerit expresse. iudice Messia, valeas prodesse, in qua vite via. Refr. d[escendit ut pluvia].	30 So show yourself to be a mother, kind virgin, so that when there is need, O sweet Mary, and the Messiah shall clearly have arrived as judge, you may have the power to aid, 35 you on whom the way of life fell like the rain.
V Virgo singularis, sancta dei parens, mater expers maris et peccato carens, tu benedicaris. in qua virtus clarens	Most special virgin, holy bearer of God, mother uncorrupted 40 and free from sin, you are blessed, you on whom the shining virtue

	nostri salutaris, gentibus apparens, Refr. [descendit ut pluvia.]	45	of our salvation, appearing to the Gentiles, fell like the rain.
VI	Vitam presta puram. Iter para tutum ad vitam futuram. Esto nobis scutum contra mortem duram et inferni luctum. Habe nostri curam, in qua rex virtutum. Refr. [descendit ut pluvia.]	50	Provide a pure life. Prepare a safe journey towards the life to come. Be a shield for us against harsh death and the affliction of hell. Take care of us, you on whom the king of virtues fell like the rain.
VII	Sit laus deo patri, qui filium misit, qui captivos atri carceris emisit, quando deo fratri populus arrisit. Hic deus quem matri angelus promisit; Refr. d[escendit ut pluvia].]	55 60	Praise be to God the Father, who sent his son, who released the captives of the dark prison, because the people smiled on God as a brother. This is the God that the angel promised to the mother; he fell like the rain.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 128, f. 373r: a2; Strophe I and refrain only, with no provision for further text. This piece, and the two that follow it to close the fascicle, begins mid-system on the folio (rather than at the left margin), something that happens only 12 times in F-7.¹

Vat602 (I-Rvat Urb. lat. 602; Rome, Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana, Urb. lat. 602),² f. 9v: a1 (T); Strophes I–VII, complete, in Beneventan script, with the beginning of the stanzas shown by capitals bearing flecks of the same red paint used for the opening initial, while the irregularly placed capital “V” that starts line 29,2 also attracted this decoration. The refrain is signaled by the same means, both in its first presentation and in the irregular cues that close the residual strophes (as indicated in the text above), with the exception of the whole-word refrain cue in II (“descendit”) having no such flecking. Curiously, what looks like a relatively large, erroneously placed red initial “C,” filled in with blue and yellow paint, appears in the left margin just before the fourth syllable of line 43,2 on f. 10r; an anomaly seen also on folio 11r. Periods or small ticks punctuate nearly every line. The melody transmitted by this source (generally concordant with that of F) uses heightened Beneventan neumes, but is incomplete, ceasing with the second word of the refrain in line 9 when the scribe begins the next page, upon which the remaining text is entered with no provision for any music nor space for the cauda that occurs in F.

Text only:

¹For a list, see the source report on F for Pia mater gratie (J18/268), at F-7,71, on f. 331r.

²Images of this source are available at: https://digi.vatlib.it/view/MSS_Urb.lat.602

GB-Cu Ff. VI. 14 (Cambridge, University Library, Ff. VI. 14); f. 26v: text only of Strophes I-VII, complete, with the opening lines following Vat 602, rather than F (see the variants on the text given below for lines 1-2); images of this source are presently unavailable to me; details come from Anderson, NDRC, 5:124, and the CPI website.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: This poem begins every stanza with the opening line (and in Strophe VI the opening two lines) of each respective strophe of the Marian hymn Ave maris stella (Cantus Index, no. 008272), a chant associated most closely with the feast of the Annunciation; these quotations are italicized in the above text, translation, and transcription. See also in this regard the conductus Ave salus hominum (F26/37) and Ave maris stella virgo (D1/34), which also incorporate the opening line of the same hymn, and Veni creator spiritus et in me robur insere (J41/360), along with Veni creator spiritus et in me robur insere (J41/360), which derive several of their lines from various stanzas of the Pentecost hymn Veni creator spiritus mentes tuorum visita. Furthermore, the refrain (seen first in line 9) contains a biblical reference. 4: My rendering of this line, as well as Anderson’s translation as “mother without touch of man” (NDRC, 5:xliv), are attempts to give the right connotation, but they require explanation, as the phrase literally means “mother devoid of the sea.” In a completely different context, the idiom “expers maris” is one applied to wine that has not been mixed with sea water. The expression appears in Horace, Satires, book 2, no. 8, line 15,³ in connection with wine from the Greek island of Chios.⁴ Hence, Mary, untouched by man, has preserved her chastity in the same way that an undiluted wine maintains its original strength and flavor. The choice of this particular expression was likely prompted by Mary’s designation as stella maris. The same idiom reappears in line 39. 7: numerous biblical passages refer to Christ as light, see, e.g., John, 8:12,⁵ 9:5, 12:46; this image arises frequently in the conductus repertory. 8: the sunbeam is a common symbol for Christ; see, for example the textual notes to the conductus A solis ortus cardine processit (F22,Q23/5), lines 1-4. 9 (refrain): on divinity appearing as rain, see the notes below for lines 26-27. This same verse also appears as line 41 of the conductus Si deus est animus – Notum fecit dominus (H32/324), preserved earlier in F (7,95), deriving either from Matthew, 7:24-27,⁶ which recounts the parable of the house built on rock and the one built on sand, or – more likely given the Marian focus at this point in both poems – from Psalm, 71:6.⁷ Additionally a nearly equivalent line appears in A solis ortus cardine processit (see also above), line 19: “descendit sicut pluvia.” 10-12: perhaps a nod to the text of the sequence ³Horace Satires, 2,8,13-15: “... ut Attica virgo / cum sacris Cereris procedit fuscus Hydaspes / Caecuba vina ferens, Alcon Chium maris expers.” (“... like an Attic maid bearing Ceres’ sacred emblems, there came forward dusky Hydaspes with Caecuban wine, and Alcon with Chian, unmixed with brine.”). The translation is from Horace: Satires, Epistles, and Ars Poetica, H, Rushton Fairclough, transl. (Cambridge, Mass.: William Heinemann, 1942), p. 239.

⁴According to a number of commentators on the Horace passage, the poet apparently also intended to convey cynically through this expression that the wine had not crossed the sea, as Chian wine would have, but was a domestic product, served up deceitfully by the host of the party as a more impressive import. See William Drummond, transl., The Satires of Persius translated with Notes (London: J. Ginger, 1803), p. 184.

⁵John, 8:12: “Iterum ergo locutus est eis Jesus, dicens: Ego sum lux mundi: qui sequitur me, non ambulat in tenebris, sed habebit lumen vitae” (“Again therefore, Jesus spoke to them, saying: I am the light of the world: he that follows me, walks not in darkness, but shall have the light of life.”).

⁶For the quotation of the entire passage from Matthew, 7:24-27, see the notes to the text of Si deus est animus – Notum fecit dominus, at line 41.

⁷Psalm, 71:6: “Descendet sicut pluvia in vellus, et sicut stillicidia stillantia super terram.” (“He [the king] shall come down like rain upon the fleece; and as showers falling gently upon the earth.”).

Verbum bonum et suave (Cantus Index no. ah54218),⁸ which begins “verbum bonum et suave personemus illud ave” (“let us sound forth that ‘hail,’ a word good and sweet”). 10: Gabriel’s greeting of Mary at the Annunciation and her agreeing to bear Jesus, see Luke, 1:28, 1:38;⁹ note also the reference in lines 61-62. 14: with its use of the figure of a key, this is a rather unusual expression that I have not noticed before in reference to Mary’s bearing of Jesus without the need of a man. I have also not found an analogous connotation for the key in the dictionaries I have consulted. It is also at least conceivable that the word “clave” here may be an unusual but verifiable form of “clavus” (“nail”), another object with phallic connotations.¹⁰ 16: for this sense of the word “grave,” see the DMLBS, available at <https://logeion.uchicago.edu/grave>. 26-27: on rain as a type for the incarnation of Christ in the writings of the Old Testament prophets, see Hosea, 6:3,¹¹ and Isaiah, 45:8.¹² 35: see John, 14:6,¹³ and Psalm 15:11¹⁴ (along with its citation in Acts, 2:28). 39: see the remarks for line 4. 59-60: although it is not a direct correlation in terms of this poem, for biblical passages referring to Jesus as a brother, see Mark, 3:34–35,¹⁵ Hebrews, 2:11-12,¹⁶ and Romans, 8:29.¹⁷ 61-62: another reference to the Annunciation, as in line 10. The whole scene is given in Luke, 1:26-38.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 1: Vat602: Ave mari stella. 2: Vat602: ave stella maris. 3,2: F: first letter of “dei” mangled, looks somewhat like “b.” 4: Vat602: virgo singularis (note line 37). 16,2: Vat602: erroneous period follows. 20,4: Vat602: looks more like “peto” or “peta”; reading from GB-Cu Ff. VI. 14, and from need ⁸Available at: <https://cantusindex.org/search?t=&cid=ah54218&genre=All>.

⁹Luke, 1:28: “Et ingressus angelus ad eam, dixit: ‘Ave, gratia plena, Dominus tecum: benedicta tu in mulieribus’ ” (“And the angel, entering, said to her: ‘Hail, full of grace, the Lord is with you: blessed are you among women’ ”). Luke, 1:38: “Dixit autem Maria: Ecce ancilla Domini: fiat mihi secundum verbum tuum. Et discessit ab illa angelus” (“And Mary said: Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it done to me according to thy word. And the angel departed from her.”).

¹⁰For this form, see <https://logeion.uchicago.edu/clavus>, under the DMLBS heading, at 3.

¹¹Hosea, 6:3: “... Sciemus, sequemurque ut cognoscamus Dominum: quasi diluculum praeparatus est egressus ejus, et veniet quasi imber nobis temporaneus et serotinus terrae” (“... We shall know, and we shall follow on, that we may know the Lord. His going forth is prepared as the morning light, and he will come to us as the early and the latter rain to the earth.”)

¹²Isaiah, 45:8: “Rorate caeli desuper, et nubes pluant iustum; aperiatur terra, et germinet salvatorem, et iustitia oriatur simul: ego dominus creavi eum” (“Heavens, drop down dew from on high, and let the clouds rain down what is just; let the earth be opened, and bud forth a savior; and let justice spring up at the same time: I the Lord have created him.”).

¹³John, 14:6: “Dicit ei Jesus: Ego sum via, et veritas, et vita. Nemo venit ad Patrem, nisi per me” (“Jesus said to him [Thomas]: ‘I am the way, and the truth, and the life. No man comes to the Father, but by me.’ ”).

¹⁴Psalm 15:11 “Notas mihi fecisti vias vitae; adimplebis me laetitia cum vultu tuo: delectationes in dextera tua usque in finem.” (“You [the Lord] have made known to me the ways of life, you shall fill me with joy with your countenance: at your right hand are delights even to the end.”).

¹⁵Mark, 3:34-35: “Et circumspiciens eos, qui in circuitu ejus sedebant, ait: Ecce mater mea et fratres mei Qui enim fecerit voluntatem Dei, hic frater meus, et soror mea, et mater est.” (“And looking round about on them who sat about him, he [Jesus] said: ‘Behold my mother and my brethren. For whosoever shall do the will of God, he is my brother, and my sister, and mother.’ ”).

¹⁶Hebrews, 2:11-12: “Qui enim sanctificat, et qui sanctificantur, ex uno omnes. Propter quam causam non confunditur fratres eos vocare, dicens: Nuntiabo nomen tuum fratribus meis: in medio ecclesiae laudabo te” (“For both he that sanctifieth, and they who are sanctified, are all of one. For which cause he [Jesus] is not ashamed to call them brethren, saying: ‘I will declare thy name to my brethren; in the midst of the church will I praise thee.’ ”).

¹⁷Romans, 8:29: “Nam quos praescivit, et praedestinavit conformes fieri imaginis Filii sui, ut sit ipse primogenitus in multis fratribus” (“For whom he [the Father] foreknew, he also predestinated to be made conformable to the image of his Son; that he might be the firstborn amongst many brethren.”).

to supply rhyme. 26,3: Vat602: prophetam; reading from GB-Cu Ff. VI. 14, and need for rhyme. 31,2: Vat602: written as if “dulcrs”; from GB-Cu Ff. VI. 14. 61,4: Vat602: matris; from GB-Cu Ff. VI. 14, and need for rhyme. MUSIC: no variants. Notice the close audible correspondence of the first phrase of Ave maris stella ave with the opening of the two-part conductus Nove geniture (I13/224). Even though each voice in both pieces has a different contour, together the two songs differ in sound only in the penultimate (only in the D) and final syllables (both T and D) of the phrase.

CRICA MUNDI VESPERAM
Conductus (J54/63)

F, f. 373r (7,129)

I

[Cir - ca mun - di ve - spe-ram sal-vans si - bi dex - te - ram le - gis lit - te - ram]

Cir - ca mun - di ve - spe-ram sal-vans si - bi dex - te - ram le - gis lit - te - ram

spi - ri - tu com-pla - nat vul - ne - ra - tum sa - nat vir sa - ma - ri - ta - nus.

spi - ri - tu com-pla - nat vul - ne - ra - tum sa - nat vir sa - ma - ri - ta - nus.

II

Car - nis ful - gens tra - be - a vi - sus in y - du - me - a. sed a vi - ne - a

Car - nis ful - gens tra - be - a vi - sus in y - du - me - a. sed a vi - ne - a cu - stos re - pel - li - tur. e - ger pro - se - qui - tur me - di - cum in - sa -

cu - stos re - pel - li - tur. e - ger pro - se - qui - tur me - di - cum in - sa - *alternative readings in modes 3 or 1 also possible, see at end

- nus.]

- nus.]

(alternative readings follow)

ALTERNATIVE READINGS OF FINAL CAUDA:

a. Mode 3:

Musical score for Mode 3. It consists of two systems. The first system has two staves: Soprano (S) and Tenor (T). The Soprano staff begins with the lyrics "[in - sa -" and the Tenor staff with "in - sa -". Both parts feature a melodic line with various note values and rests, with blue brackets above the notes indicating phrasing. The second system continues the melodic lines, with the Soprano part ending in a blue dashed line and the Tenor part ending in a red dashed line. The Soprano part concludes with the text "- nus.]" and the Tenor part with "- nus."

b. Mode 1:

Musical score for Mode 1. It consists of two systems. The first system has two staves: Soprano (S) and Tenor (T). The Soprano staff begins with the lyrics "[in - sa -" and the Tenor staff with "in - sa -". Both parts feature a melodic line with various note values and rests, with blue brackets above the notes indicating phrasing. The second system continues the melodic lines, with the Soprano part ending in a blue dashed line and the Tenor part ending in a red dashed line. The Soprano part concludes with the text "- nus.]" and the Tenor part with "- nus."

CIRCA MUNDI VESPERAM

Conductus (J54/63)

F, f. 373r (7,129)

- | | |
|---|---|
| I Circa mundi vesperam, salvans sibi dexteram, legis litteram
spiritu complanat;
vulneratum sanat
vir Samaritanus. | Around the world’s evening tide, reserving the right hand for himself, he makes plain the letter of the law through the spirit; 5 the Samaritan man
heals the wounded one. |
| II Carnis fulgens trabea, visus in Ydumea,
sed a vinea
custos repellitur;
eger persecutur
medicum insanus. | Shining in a red-stained robe of flesh,
he was seen in Edom,
but the caretaker is driven 10 away from the vineyard;
the sick man, unwell,
persecutes the physician. |

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 129, f. 373r: a2: Strophes I-II, complete, with II headed by a capital; unique source for text and music, with a strophically repeating Tenor under a through-composed Duplum. The piece (as do the ones that precede and follow it) begins mid-system on the folio (rather than at the left margin), something that happens only 12 times in F-7.¹

Text only: none.

Music only: none.

Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: This poem presents yet another treatment of the passing of the Mosaic covenant to the new covenant offered by Christ, with occasional nods towards the events of the Last Judgment. 1: as indicated by Anderson (NDRC, 5:xlvi, note 1) with reference to Augustine (Sermones, 81, paragraph 8), the coming of Christ during the “old age of the world” (figured in Augustine’s text by the birth of Isaac to Abraham during his old age) signified the end of the covenant of the Old Testament.² Cf. also the third strophe of the hymn Conditor alme siderum (Cantus Index no. 008284): “Vergente mundi vespere, uti sponsus de thalamo, egressus honestissima virginis matris clausula.” (“With the evening tide of the world approaching, like a bridegroom from his bedchamber, he [Jesus] came forth from the enclosure of the most distinguished virgin mother”). In addition, this expression bears echoes of the Last Judgment that will occur at the end of time, as suggested by the content of line 2. 2: most likely this line refers to Jesus’s simile of the separation of the sheep and goats from Matthew, 25:31-46. Here the blessed (the sheep, appearing at God’s right hand) are separated from the condemned (the goats, at his left) during the Last Judgment, just as a shepherd will separate the different

¹For a list, see the source report on F for Pia mater gratie (J18/268), at F-7,71, on f. 331r.

²Augustine’s text may be consulted in PL, 38, col. 504; here the number of the paragraph in the sermon is 8, not 7 as given in Anderson: “... quia in senectute mundi misit tibi Christum Ideo seni Abrahae natus est filius, quia erat utique Christus in ipsius mundi senectute uenturus” (“... because he sent Christ to you in the old age of the world Therefore a son was born to the aged Abraham, because assuredly Christ was to come in the old age of this world”).

animals in his flock. For some language quite close to this line of the conductus text, cf. Psalm 91:1.³ 3-4: the “he” who makes the letter plain is God through Christ’s incarnation. On the letter versus the spirit of the law, see 2 Corinthians, 3:5-6,⁴ and the similar expressions in Romans, 7:6; and 2:29; the biblical citation also prompts the opening couplet of the conductus Cortex occidit littere (I6/69). The parable of the Good Samaritan, evoked in lines 5-6 (q.v.) also refers indirectly to distinction between the letter and spirit of the Old Testament law. 4: see the closing lines (21-22, from Strophe III) of the conductus Relegentur ab area (C6/304): “novelle vetus pagina / spiritu complanatur” (“the ancient page [of the law] is newly smoothed [or “made plain”] by the Spirit.”). 5-6: a reference to the parable of the good Samaritan: Luke, 10:29-37, where the Samaritan is often taken as a figure of Christ (as in the reference given by Anderson in NDRC, 5:xlvi, note 3, from Isidore of Seville,⁵ which is also consonant with the interpretations of Origen and Augustine). Furthermore, the relation of this parable by Jesus is prompted by a question from a person “expert in the law” (“legis peritus”); and its point is to show the difference in behavior expected from the practitioners of the old law (represented by the Priest and the Levite who pass by the wounded man) versus the new (the Samaritan); see Anderson, ibid., drawn from the Glossa ordinaria.⁶ For other references to the story of the Samaritan, see the conductus Dic Christi veritas (C3/94), lines 21-24, and the possible indirect evocation in line 1 of Excitatur caritas in Yericho (F30/111). 7-8: the man appearing in Edom in the red-stained robe (trabea – specifically a toga of purple cloth or of white cloth with purple stripes)⁷ is a figure of Christ, who at the Last Judgment will glorify those who have accepted the new covenant and condemn the ones who have refused it. The main biblical reference is to Isaiah, 63:1.⁸ See also Revelation, 19:13-15;⁹ and the discussion of related imagery in the notes on the text for Strophe II (lines 11-17) of the conductus Virga Yesse regio (I24/383). 9-10: see the parable of the wicked vinekeepers in Luke, 20:9-19; Mark, 12:1-12; and Matthew, 21:33-46. In the story, a landowner (a figure for God) plants a vineyard (God’s people or his covenant with them) and leases it out to ³Psalm 91:1: “... Salvavit sibi dextera eius, et brachium sanctum eius” (“... His [the Lord’s] right hand has wrought salvation for himself, and his arm is holy.”).

⁴2 Corinthians, 3:5-6: “... sed sufficientia nostra ex Deo est, qui et idoneos nos fecit ministros Novi Testamenti, non litterae sed spiritus. Littera enim occidit, spiritus autem vivificat” (“but our sufficiency is from God, who also has made us suitable ministers of the New Testament, not of the letter, but of the spirit. For the letter kills, but the spirit gives life”).

⁵From Isidore’s Allegoriae, taken from PL, 83, cols. 123-124: “Samaritanus descendens, qui vulnera eius curavit, Christus est custos noster, qui de caelo descendit, et genus humanum a vulneribus peccatorum curavit” (“The traveling Samaritan who cured his wounds is Christ our protector, who came down from heaven, and cured the human race from the wounds of its sins”).

⁶The text is cited from PL, 114, cols. 286D-287A, taken from Augustine.

⁷For this definition, see <https://logeion.uchicago.edu/trabea>.

⁸Isaiah, 63:1: “quis est iste qui venit de Edom tinctis vestibibus de Bosra, iste formosus in stola sua, gradiens in multitudine fortitudinis suae? ‘Ego, qui loquor iustitiam, et propugnator sum ad salvandum’” (“Who is this that comes from Edom, with dyed garments from Bosra, this beautiful one in his robe, walking in the greatness of his strength? ‘It is I, who speak justice, and who am a defender for salvation’”).

⁹Revelation, 19:13-15: “Et vestitus erat vestem aspersam sanguine, et vocatur nomen eius Verbum Dei.” Et exercitus qui sunt in caelo, sequebantur eum in equis albis, vestiti byssino albo et mundo. Et de ore ejus procedit gladius ex utraque parte acutus, ut in ipso percutiat gentes. Et ipse reget eas in virga ferrea: et ipse calcet torcular vini furoris irae Dei omnipotentis (“And he was clothed with a garment sprinkled with blood, and his name is called the Word of God.” And the armies that are in heaven followed him on white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean. And out of his mouth proceeds a sharp two-edged sword; that with it he may strike the nations. And he shall rule them with a rod of iron; and he treads the winepress of the fierceness of the wrath of God the Almighty.). For a investigation of the multiple contexts of the winepress image in a study centered around the Latin rondellus Vineam meam plantavi, transmitted in the eleventh fascicle of F, f. 466v, see the article by Mary Channen Caldwell, “‘I Have Trodden the Winepress Alone’: The Voice of Christ and the Mystic Winepress in a Thirteenth-Century Conductus.” Revue de musicologie, 108 (2022): 3-40.

caretakers (false priests, prophets, and lawgivers, as well others who do not participate in Christ’s new covenant). The tenants mistreat and even kill the servants of the landowner (true prophets) who come to collect the fruits of the vineyard. When the owner ultimately sends his son (Christ), the vinekeepers slay him as well (an allegory of the Crucifixion). Jesus concludes by saying that the evil caretakers will be slain by the wrathful owner and the vineyard will be turned over to others who will properly return its fruits to him. The Gospel parable is directed against the priests and Pharisees who follow the old law; it thus continues the distinctions of the old versus the new covenant seen throughout this poem. This parable and its imagery also arises in Strophe II (lines 11-17) of the conductus Virga Yesse regio. 11-12: the followers of the old law seek to harm Christ, who brings the new; see Matthew, 9:12;¹⁰ as well as the related expressions in Mark, 2:17, and Luke 5:31. Cf. also the indirect correspondence of this passage with Luke, 4:23.¹¹

Observations and Variants: TEXT: no variants. MUSIC: Structure: this piece is somewhat unusual in that the T voice essentially offers two nearly identical written-out strophes, while the setting of the D differs in each stanza. Another factor involved in the workings of the T is that the poetic scheme of the couplets in lines 4-5 and 10-11 is slightly different. Both have rhyming lines of six syllables, but the members of Strophe I are accented p, while those of II are pp. One might suppose an unusual accentuation for one of the two groups in order that they might be brought into line with the other in performance; but the slightly different underlay of text to music in each of the two stanzas at these points suggests that the composer or scribe of the melody sought to distinguish and accommodate the different accentuations. Line 9,2: T: F: the ficta b-flat is prompted by the use of this pitch at the corresponding place in Strophe I (the second syllable of line 3,1). Final cauda (on line 12,2): as indicated in the note in the above score, there are different possible ways to read the rhythms of this cauda. Although mode 6 is clearly preferable as the default interpretation, being signaled by the 4li figures that occur both at the start of the cauda, as well as on the penultimate syllable of the poem that immediately precedes it, the si,3li successions of ligatures that appear throughout the rest of this melisma’s course also suggest the conceivability of reading it in an extended iambic or trochaic mode. These alternatives are given at the end of the transcription. T: F: at L22,2, this first note of the 3li just before the closing punctus organi may possibly be g, which would harmonize better with the D at this point, but the first note of the ligature is not extended enough into the space above to cause me to make this change.

¹⁰Matthew, 9:12: “At Iesus audiens, ait: ‘Non est opus valentibus medico sed male habentibus’” (“But Jesus, hearing this, said: ‘There is no need for a physician for those who are healthy, but for those who are ill.’”).

¹¹ Luke, 4:23: “Et ait illis: ‘Utique dicetis mihi hanc similitudinem: medice cura te ipsum ...’” (“And he [Jesus] said to them [the Nazarenes]: ‘Doubtless you will say to me this similitude [i.e., proverb]: ‘Physician, heal thyself ...’”).

CHRISTI MILES CHRISTO

Conductus (J55/58)

F, f. 373v (7,130)

I

D [Chri -

T Chri -

[Chri] - sti mi-les chri-sto com - mi - li - tat chri - stum se-quens chri - sto co - ha - bi - tat.

[Chri] - sti mi-les chri-sto com - mi - li - tat chri - stum se-quens chri - sto co - ha - bi - tat.

II

D chri -

T chri -

[chri] - stus
[chri] - stus

cru-cis est su - e ba - iu-lus cru - ci - fix-i cru - cem fert fa - mu - lus.
cru-cis est su - e ba - iu-lus cru - ci - fix-i cru - cem fert fa - mu - lus.

III
Pas - Pas -
or: ♩ ♩ ♩

[Pas] - sum tho - mas com - pas-sus se - qui-tur. pas-su fir - mo co - ro-na ca - pi -
[Pas] - sum tho - mas com - pas-sus se - qui-tur. pas-su fir - mo co - ro-na ca - pi -

- tur.

Er -

[Er] - go for - tis at - tol - lat de - bi - les.

sol - vat vin - ctos. so - le - tur fle - bi - [T: D: c; an equally valid alternative emendation could retain the MS reading and change the T pitch to c.

The musical score is presented in three systems, each with two staves. The key signature is one sharp (F major) and the time signature is 2/4. The notation includes various note values, rests, and articulation marks. Blue brackets and slurs are used to group notes across staves. In the first system, three red boxes labeled (b'), c, and (c') are placed above the lower staff. In the second system, a blue dashed slur is placed over the upper staff. In the third system, blue lyrics '- mi -' and '- no.]' are placed under the upper staff, and red lyrics '- mi -' and '- no.' are placed under the lower staff.

THIS WORK IS THE FINAL ITEM IN THE SEVENTH FASCICLE OF F; IT IS FOLLOWED BY A SERIES OF SIX LEAVES (375r-380v), RULED FOR MUSIC WITH THE SAME SYSTEM LAYOUT, BUT WITH EMPTY STAVES.

CHRISTI MILES CHRISTO

Conductus (J55/58)

F, f. 373v (7,130)

I	Christi miles Christo commilitat; Christum sequens, Christo cohabitāt.	A soldier of Christ fights in company with Christ; following Christ, he dwells together with Christ.
[II]	Christus crucis est sue baiulus; crucifixi crucem fert famulus.	Christ is the bearer of his cross; the servant bears the cross of the crucified.
III	Passum Thomas compassus sequitur; passu firmo corona capitur.	5 Suffering together with Christ, Thomas follows the path; with a firm stride the crown is gained.
IV	Ergo, fortis attollat debiles, solvat vinctos, soletur flebiles.	So let the strong lift up the weak, set free the conquered, and let the woeful be consoled.
BD	Benedicamus domino.	9 Let us bless the Lord.

SOURCES:

F, fasc. 7, no. 130, f. 373v: a2; Strophes I-IV and BD, complete, with III and IV indicated by capitals, but not [II], as signaled in the vertical spacing of the above text; a unique setting of text and music; the BD is signaled by a smallish painted, filigreed initial. Christi miles and the previous two pieces begin mid-system on the folio (rather than at the left margin), something that happens only 12 times in F-7.¹ This work is the final item in F's seventh fascicle; it is followed by a series of six leaves (375r-380v), ruled for music with the same system layout, but with empty staves.

Text only: none.Music only: none.Contrafacts: none.

Notes on the Text: General remarks: in line 5 it becomes clear that this piece celebrates St. Thomas of Canterbury, born Thomas Becket (21 Dec. 1118 or 1120), Lord Chancellor of England (1155-1162) and afterwards archbishop of Canterbury (1162-1170) under his one-time close friend King Henry II (reg. 1154-1189). Becket was infamously murdered on 29 Dec. 1170 by four of the king's knights while at prayer in Canterbury cathedral. He also spent the years 1164-1170 in exile in France as the guest of King Louis VII (reg. 1137-1180) during his ongoing conflicts with Henry. Becket was canonized as early as 21 Feb. 1173 and immediately venerated as a martyr throughout Europe, while Henry was compelled to do public penance for the crime at Canterbury (12 July 1174). Although it is not without ambiguity, the poem's content suggests the text was written after Thomas's martyrdom, given the language alluding to the archbishop's suffering and the suggestions he is following the same course as Christ in being martyred. The musical setting is quite ornate and sophisticated; it also implies a date of composition well after the event alluded to in the poem. Clément Morin ("Christi miles: conduit à la gloire de S. Thomas Becket," Quadrivium, 12 [1971]: 57-63, on pp. 62-63) has suggested several possibilities for a rough dating of this conductus setting. Of these, the most realistic (though unsubstantiated) is the year 1220, the fiftieth, jubilee anniversary of Thomas's martyrdom, when his remains were translated from their original resting place in the crypt beneath the floor of Canterbury cathedral to a shrine located above it in the Trinity Chapel (constructed 1180-1184). An additional, circular chapel that led off from the Trinity Chapel held further relics, and became known as the “Corona” or “Becket’s Crown” (see also the remarks for line 6,3). The shrine had its treasures confiscated by Henry VIII in 1538. Benedicamus domino conclusion: this conductus is one of several in the main “Notre Dame” sources to close with a BD versicle. As with a number of other works with this feature, the Benedicamus is not obviously prompted by the content of the main portion of the text.² Even though the BD acclamation follows smoothly from lines 7-8, which prepare it with their switch to the subjunctive mood and which describe actions that one might easily attribute to the Lord as well as Thomas, it remains independent in terms of rhyme and syllable count. It thus appears tacked on, and may possibly be optional for inclusion. Particularly striking in this regard is that Christi miles concludes its Benedicamus section with a short organal flourish on a after spending the course of the entire composition anchored on g (even though it passes through four different sets of signatures along the way – see below in the observations on the music). This is the only case of a conductus closing on a within the four main “Parisian” manuscripts (F, W1, W2, and Ma). Poetic/Strophic construction: discounting its ancillary Benedicamus conclusion, Christi miles is one of only five examples within the “Notre Dame” conductus repertory to consist solely of ten-syllable lines with a regular proparoxytonic accent (10pp).³ Besides the three-part Ortus summi, which in addition to its luxuriant musical cum littera sections presents a relatively modest closing melisma, and the exceptionally ornate, extended caudae of Christi miles, all the other examples of the use of the isosyllabic 10pp poetic scheme offer unpretentious musical settings, with sections devoted to caudae notably absent. In my article “Datable Notre Dame Conductus: New Historical Observations on Style and Technique,” Current Musicology, 64 (2001): 104-151, on p. 115, I propose that the majority of these isosyllabic 10pp works may stem from an earlier chronological layer of the Parisian conductus repertory written before ca. 1200, with Christi miles being the notable exception. As is typical for poetic lines with a 10pp scheme, Christi miles has a regular caesura after the fourth syllable of each line, and – except for its editorially emended opening line and the one that immediately follows – it also features a regular division in the latter half of each verse into 3+3 syllables (for the emendation, see the variant reported for line 1,4). The strophic disposition of the poem, on the other hand, is much more ambiguous. Capital letters begin lines 5 and 7, thus suggesting major divisions at these portions of the text, but there is no corresponding expected demarcation – not even strokes to suggest a pause – to start line 3 (reflected in the text’s presentation above by the lack of a space after this verse). I provisionally follow Anderson (NDRC, 5:xlvi) and Dreves (AH, 21:90, no. 138) in presenting the poem as four identically fashioned strophes, but it is just as valid to consider it as forming a single stanza (lines 1-8), or divisible into two equal (1-4, 5-8) or three unequal units (1-4, 5-6, 7-8). Textual notes: 1-2: for a biblical reference to the common appellation “soldier of Christ,” see 2 Timothy, 2:3-4.⁴ A comparable expression is used in reference to St. Thomas in the opening lines of the conductus Novus miles sequitur (E11/228, datable to 1173), as well as at the start of its third strophe (lines 21-22). 1,4: see the discussion of the emendation of this word below under the observations and variants. 3-4: according to Denis Stevens (“Music in Honor of Saint Thomas of Canterbury,” The Musical Quarterly, 56 [1970]: 311-348, on p. 341), these lines ²These “non-conforming” Benedicamus include, in addition to Christi miles (J55/58): Brevi carne deitas (J42/51); Leniter ex merito (E2/195) in the first of the two versions of this piece as transmitted in W1 – which, interestingly, happens to feature a Benedicamus ending otherwise associated with the conductus Naturas deus regulis (C7/214); O lilium convallium (F18/236), but only in its state outside the Notre Dame sources in I-CFm Cod. LVI (Civiale del Friuli, Museo Archeologico Nazionale); and Columbe simplicitas (J16/66). The other conductus that feature a BD conclusion in the four main sources are: Naturas deus regulis (C7/214), Deus creator omnium (H11/89), Ista dies celebrari (H30/189), Relegata vetustate (H23/303), Gaude virgo virginum (A) (G5/139), and Gloria sit soli deo (J43/146). In addition, Veni creator spiritus et in me robur (J41/360), is not provided with a BD tag, but strongly implies that one should be appended. See the discussion in the notes to that piece.

¹For a list, see the source report on F for Pia mater gratie (J18/268), at F-7, 71, on f. 331r.

³The others are: Pater sancte dictus Lotarius (K61/267, by Philip the Chancellor, text datable to 1198), Homo vide que pro te patior (K53/164, also by Philip), O varium fortune lubricum (J27/247), and Ortus summi peracto gaudio (F4/257).

⁴2 Timothy, 2:3-4: “Labora sicut bonus miles Christi Iesu. Nemo militans implicat se negotiis saecularibus; ut ei placeat cui se probavit” (“Labor as a good soldier of Christ Jesus. No man, being a soldier to God, entangles himself with secular businesses; that he may please him to whom he has engaged himself.”).

illustrate Christ and St. Thomas bearing each other's crosses "... since an archbishop was not permitted to carry his own insignia of office, but could and did figuratively bear Christ's cross through his martyrdom." 5: for the identification of Thomas, see the general remarks above. Alternatively, the line could read "... Thomas follows the sufferer" ("passum," i.e., Christ), but the reference to the "firm stride" in line 6 prompts the adopted interpretation. 6,3: in addition to its significance as an emblem of heavenly reward bestowed at the Last Judgment (see 1 Peter, 5:1-4;⁵ James, 1:12;⁶ Revelation, 2:10⁷), the mention of a crown in this context would conceivably evoke the "Corona" or "Becket's Crown": this term was used to designate part of the special chapel construction in Canterbury Cathedral that held the martyr's remains (see the above general remarks), so-called because it contained the crown of the archbishop's head, which, reportedly, was completely cut away when Becket was murdered.

Observations and Variants: TEXT: 1,4: F: quo militat. I have rather reluctantly chosen to use the proposed emendation "commilitat," preferred by Anderson (NDRC, 5:xlvi, 124), which goes back to Dreves, AH, 21:90, no. 138, where the substituted reading, surprisingly, is not recorded. Despite the wide latitude of translations made possible by retaining the original MS reading of "quo," in my opinion the various results are still rather awkward for use in the context of this poem. This alteration of "quo militat" to "commilitat" is supported by the use of "commilito" ("fellow soldier") – a noun with military connotations analogous to the expressions in line 1,1-2 – in biblical passages from Philippians, 2: 25,⁸ and Philemon, 1:2.⁹ It also corresponds by assonance with "cohabitāt" in line 2,4. 8,4: there is no period after this conclusory word in F; one has been added editorially. Conceivably the punctuation could be hidden by the subsequent illuminated initial "B" of the closing Benedicamus versicle of line 9. MUSIC: Signatures: Outside of the curiosity of the last gesture of the BD closing on a, it is also quite notable, even curious, how the stanzas and the BD that are headed by special letters in the musical setting run through four different sets of signatures (none for I-[II], one flat in both parts for III, an additional e-flat sig in the T at the opening of IV, and one sharp for the BD, respectively). This feature could pull some weight in how one chooses to evaluate the stanzaic structure of this text. For a discussion of the poetic ambiguities, see the remarks in the notes on the text concerning stanzaic construction. Caudae: the melismas in this piece frequently exploit phrase overlap, and regularly require or imply B rests throughout their nearly breathless course. In the few places where I have placed TL rests, thinking they might be especially appropriate, alternative shorter rest values – equally valid – are often given above the staves. In Strophe I the caudae close several phrases with the same formula in both voices (marked with a boxed "x" and "y" above the respective staves); in the cauda that closes the strophe, the elements of this formula are exchanged between the T and D. Further motivic interaction and repetitive gambits arise throughout these impressive melismas. Opening cauda (over line 1,1): T: F: the closing note of the melisma is written as f, clearly a mistake; the original rationale may have been to supply a f, f=LL penultimate sonority prior to the ⁵1 Peter, 5:4: "Et cum apparuerit princeps pastorum, percipietis immarcescibilem gloriæ coronam" ("And when the prince of pastors shall appear, you shall receive a never fading crown of glory.").

⁶James, 1:12: "Beatus vir qui suffert tentationem: quoniam cum probatus fuerit, accipiet coronam vitæ, quam repromisit Deus diligentibus se" ("Blessed is the man that endures temptation; for when he has been proved, he shall receive the crown of life, which God has promised to them that love him.").

⁷Revelation, 2:10: "... Esto fidelis usque ad mortem, et dabo tibi coronam vitæ" ("... Be you faithful until death: and I will give you the crown of life.").

⁸Philippians 2:25: "Necessarium autem existimavi Epaphroditum fratrem, et cooperatorem, et commilitonem meum, vestrum autem apostolum, et ministrum necessitatis meae, mittere ad vos" ("But I have thought it necessary to send to you Epaphroditus, my brother and fellow labourer, and fellow soldier, but your apostle, and he that has ministered to my wants.").

⁹Philemon 2:2: "et Appiae sorori carissimae, et Archippo commilitoni nostro, et ecclesiae, quae in domo tua est" ("And to Appia, our dearest sister, and to Archippus, our fellow soldier, and to the church which is in your house.").

(omitted) cadence on g, but there is no supporting indication in the D at this point. The failure to enter the cadential g in the T may have been a result of confusion prompted by the beginning of the subsequent cum littera segment in the T that opens with the same needed g. Cauda opening Strophe [II] (at line 3,1): D: F: an extra, unnecessary 2li=ag appears as the penultimate figure of the third cauda phrase in this voice (after L14,1); omitted in the transcription. 3,5: D: F: an erased stroke, omitted in the transcription, follows the b over the third syllable of “baiulus.” Since the supposed intent of the erasure was to forestall a break between lines 3 and 4, none has been supplied here. Closing Benedicamus versicle: Line 9,2: T: F: for the unusually angular melodic gesture of the 3li=dgc at the start of the fourth T phrase over “do[mino]” at L14 of the melisma, b or a may originally have been intended for the middle pitch of the ligature, due to the constraints of space for entering this figure; I leave it as a g, reflecting the MS. TD: F: in the seventh T phrase over “do[mino],” upon the appearance of the 2si=d,b in the T at L30-L31, there is a dissonance between the si d and the simultaneous c in the D voice. As discords throughout all the caudae in this piece are minimal, one may well suppose a mistake of a melodic second in either the T or D voices. Changing the T at this point to c, or the D to d are both feasible. Furthermore, even though the T phrase at this point is engaging in a rhythmically varied repetition of the melodic content from its previous two phrases (5 and 6, from L17-L21 and L22-L26), a comparison of these related portions does not argue forcefully for the preference of one emendation over the other. In this case, I have provisionally decided to alter the D pitch to d, and indicated the opportunity for the alternative emendation of the T to c above the staff. This latter possibility is the one that appears in Anderson’s edition (NDRC, 5: 102), although it goes unreported in his commentary (p. 124). Final punctus organi phrase: on this striking ending on a, see the above remarks on the Benedicamus conclusion in the textual notes.